Anybody want to buy a stop light?

PLYMOUTH—There may soon be a for sale sign attached to the traffic light at Hartsough and Sheldon.

That's if school superintendent John Hoben's hunch is correct in assuming that the district cannot legally purchase the light for which they allocated funds at last month's board meeting.

"We're quite possibly going to have to renege on the payment of that light," Hoben said. "We're awaiting a legal opinion on it now."

The board voted to pick up the $1,450 cost of the light after Plymouth Township declined to pay for a portion of the cost.

The money for the light was taken from the saftey millage which was passed this summer for such items as traffic lights, training of crossing guards and the building of overpasses.

In related action the school board Monday concurred with the safety committee and gave the go-ahead for the construction of a $79,000 overpass at Sheldon and Ann Arbor Trail for the students at Bird Elementary and West Middle School.

The $79,000 price will exhaust all but $7,000 of the millage allocated for overpasses.

The board also agreed to the appointment of Robert DeCorte as a citizen-at-large member of the safety committee.

According to trustee Carl Berry, DeCorte is a traffic safety engineer whom the committee has consulted on safety issues.

Residents speak out on new schools

PLYMOUTH—It appears school officials aren't the ones fretting about the building of three new sister elementary schools in the district.

Residents of Windsor Park subdivision met the school board Monday night with a barrage of complaints and concerns about one of the schools which is proposed between Morton Taylor and Lilley, south of Joy and north of Warren.

While the board was approving design and development drawings, it was forced to accept revised plans calling for one less classroom in each school.

Since the start of the project, architects Tarapata, McMahon and Paulsen estimated that inflation has moved the price of building from $34 to $38 per square foot, forcing the reductions in classrooms.

OBJECTION OF the citizens centered on lack of access to the road and objection to the open classroom concept. The three elementaries are being designed with movable walls and open space classrooms.

Robert McNamara objected to the use of Fleet Road as the only access to the school.

"Our first concern is that Fleet is the only access point," McNamara said. "You're talking aobut a year and a half of construction, and Fleet just wasn't built for that kind of traffic.

"The construction will bring a lot of dirt, mud and heavy equipment into the area. In my opinion construction truck drivers are prone to excessive speeding.

"We've had enough of this when the development was being built.

"At the completion of the construction, some children will have to walk a mile or more to school. This is going to cause a daily traffic problem with the parents who will be driving their children and even more of a problem during bad weather.

"Fleet is a narrow two-lane road and now because of the snow it's only one lane."

But according to Supt. John Hoben, the plan is financially impossible at present.

"At that site, there's 650 feet to the creek and another 650 feet to the school. The bridge over the creek would run between $100,000 to $150,000 and it would cost $200,000 to build a road bed.

"We just don't have the money, but we'll be looking at Canton Twonship to see if they're interested in spending some of their revenues."

Another resident contended that the open classroom concept is not desirable, claiming Miller School has problems with open classrooms.

"I think people are having second thoughts about open classrooms," the resident said. "The seven foot modular bookcases at Miller have resulted in bedlam. You can't educate a child in an atmosphere of noise and confusion.

"I would think you'd read some of the signs now and avoid a later hassle."

HOBEN OBJECTED to the citizen's labeling the school as having open classrooms.

"We want a school of flexible classrooms," Hoben said. "We've already made three changes in the original plans to close off some of the open spaces within the school. We will have a school in which the flexibiltiy will vary from classroom to classroom.

Board secretary Marcia Borowski agreed.

"We're not closed; we're not open or anything in between," Mrs. Borowski said.

"We want a building which could be used in a number of ways to accomodate different styles of learning and teaching.

"We're projecting a life expectancy of at least 50 years for this building and we don't want to be stuck with something which doesn't fit our needs."

To speed water billing

Township buys a computer

PLYMOUTH—The Plymouth Township Water and Sewer Department soon will prepare residents' bills with the help of a Burroughs L-6500 minicomputer.

The Township Board of Trustees voted to accept a low bid of $14,691.90 submitted by Burroughs Corp. for a magnetic ledger card system to speed up its billing procedures.

A competing bid was submitted by the Phillips Business Machine Co., whose representative claimed that his company's computer could outperform the Burroughs machine.

He contended that the Phillips P-354 would be a better investment for the township because it is simpler to operate, faster, more productive, and more adaptable to a growing population.

Both machines have a life expectancy of five years, although the Phillips bid was $700 higher than Burroughs'.

THE BOARD denied a request by Stuart Frankel Associates to rezone 6.65 acres on the northwest corner of Beck and North Territorial to permit construction of a high rise building, and about 8.85 acres in the same location, for a shopping center.

James Williams, representing Frankel, stated that the area is unsuitable for anything but the type of development proposed by Frankel.

The planning commission had recommended denial, following a public hearing at which residents of the area expressed fears of traffic congestion and loss of rural atmosphere.

Trustee Richard Gornick said that he could see no reason for such a development, particularly a high rise, arguing that the township has plenty of land without resorting to what he described as "high density" building.

When Williams claimed that he expected the township to have several of what he termed "small, neighborhood shopping centers" in five to 10 years, a resident of the area replied that "the City of Plymouth is our shopping center."

Despite Williams' presentation on behalf of Frankel, the board voted to deny the rezoning.

DEANE BAKER, new owner of the former Thunderbird Hilton Hotel, submitted a request to the board for a Class B SDM liquor license which would permit liquor to be served in both the hotel and the restaurant, when construction of the building is completed.

"There's nothing we can do until we hear from the state Liquor Control Commission," trustee Russell Ash stated.

Township clerk Helen Richardson, indicated that though approval of the license depends upon action by the commission, the board of trustees could at least express its favor of such a license to appease investors in the hotel.

The previous owner of the Thunderbird has refused to transfer his license to the new ownership.

Township supervisor J. D. McLaren stated. "Anybody who can get the Thunderbird back on its feet deserves a liquor license."

The board voted to support Baker's request for the license, but final approval still rests with the Michigan Liquor Control Commission.

THE BOARD voted to support an attempt by residents of Bradbury Parkhomes to obtain a noise abatement barrier on I-275.

The federal government would finance 90 per cent of the project, and the Department of State Highways the rest, according to Rep. John Bennett (R-39th District), who is a resident of Bradbury Parkhomes.

The board announced that township

We're moving Monday

There's an early Christmas present being delivered Monday for readers of the Plymouth and Canton Observer & Eccentric editions.

It's one they have been awaiting...the opening of the new Plymouth and Canton editorial office in downtown Plymouth.

Co-publishers Philip H. Power and Henry Hogan promised to open the office in October, and that promise will be fulfilled when the doors to the editorial office at 461 S. Main St. open for the first time.

It will be the first staffed Plymouth office since the Observer Newspapers Inc. moved from the old Plymouth Mail building on S. Main to the then new building at the intersection of Schoolcraft and Levan Roads in Livonia.

"We opened an editorial office in Plymouth to take care of the ever increasing needs due to the tremendous expansion of Canton Township and Plymouth Township and the demands of Plymouth readers for their own bureau," said the co-publishers.

Richard T. Thompson, executive editor of the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, and Plymouth-Canton Editor Michael Arnholt will head up the new operation.

Drop in and meet them and the other members of the staff next Monday and daily thereafter.

The new office will give all organizations and readers in the three communities—City of Plymouth, Canton Township and Plymouth Township—an opportunity to drop off their news items. If you have something interesting, drop into the office and tell us about it.

Remember the address is 461 S. Main and the phone number is 459-2700. We'll welcome your calls and visits.

Goodfellows ready to hit the streets this Saturday

PLYMOUTH—"Old newsboys" will be out in full force Saturday hustling Goodfellow newspapers in their annual fund-raising drive.

December's worst weather won't stop these stalwarts in their efforts to assure every area child a special Christmas. For many residents, a happy holiday depends on profits from these paper sales.

Although the "boys" are out there braving the icy blasts, behind the scenes the Goodfellows get a big assist from their good ladies. These women contribute many hours of time on just about every phase of the project.

And when it comes to the packing of the Christmas boxes, that final pert bow on a package requires a feminine touch.

Collecting a nice fat bundle of bills for your favorite charity is heartwarming work, but it can also mean frostbitten fingers and nose. When the old newsboys return to the Plymouth Fire Station after serving their sales hitches, they can always count on a steaming bowl of Mrs. Bruce Burow's chili.

SHARON BUROW has been associated with the Goodfellows organization for as long as she can remember.

Her father, Lt. Paul Sanders, has been a member of the Plymouth fire department and the Goodfellows for 20 years.

It was Sandy Sanders who decided a bowl of hot chili would taste mighty good after a stint of selling newspapers on a cold December day.

Sharon got into the act in her early teens when she helped her father prepare the big batch of chili. Since then she has cooked many a pot of Goodfellow chili. Six years ago she took over the task of doing it by herself.

WHAT IS her recipe?

"Recipe? Oh dear, I don't really have a recipe," Mrs. Burow said. "I use eight to 10 pounds of ground beef, six huge cans of kidney beans, a couple of very big onions, chopped, and five or six quarts of tomatoes."

The tomatoes she will use were those she canned last summer.

The seasoning is to taste.

2 more hours for Post Office

PLYMOUTH—Counter service at the Plymouth Post Office will be extended two additional hours on Dec. 7 and Dec. 14 to assist residents with holiday mail.

From Dec. 2 through Dec. 24, during weekdays the counter will be open until 5 p.m. and all customers in the lobby by that time will be served.

Pursell to open transit meeting at Schoolcraft

A group of top level transportation men as well as the general public will be heard next week in an open discussion of the 1990 transportation plan proposed to the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

The meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 17, at 8 p.m. on the Schoolcraft College campus, 18600 Haggerty, Livonia. Room has been changed to the little theater of the Liberal Arts Building at the south end of the campus.

Opening the session will be State Sen. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), who set up the talks after northwestern Wayne County leaders complained that the SEMCOG plan failed to provide a rapid transit (rail) line for the Schoolcraft Road corridor.

THE BROAD outline of SEMCOG'S plan will be presented by Michael Glusac, executive director of the six-county voluntary association of governments. Glusac is a former mayor of Highland Park and Detroit corporation counsel.

How the 1990 plan affects western Wayne County will be detailed by Gary Krause, SEMCOG's planning director and top staff man in this field.

The needs of industry and commerce — their employes and customers will be described in a report from Livonia Mayor Edward McNamara and his industrial coordinator, Dan Gilmartin.

Discussing the financial side will be James Kellogg, director of public transportation for the State Highway Commission, the agency with overall responsibility for transportation coordination. Like his ultimate chief, Gov. Milliken, Kellogg is a strong advocate of public transportation and of state-local efforts to achieve it.

OFFICIALS FROM Northville, Livonia, Redford Township, Plymouth, Canton Township, Westland, Garden City and Dearborn Heights were sent notices this week by Pursell's office.

Also notified were officials of Schoolcraft College, Northville State Hospital, League of Women Voters, Jaycees and other organizations who at one time or another have publicly expressed an interest in public transportation.

Acting as a "resource man" for questions will be Jerry Raymond, Livonia city councilman and member of the SEMCOG executive committee. While a champion of SEMCOG's general efforts, Raymond has been one of the critics of the lack of rapid transit for this area in the 1990 plan.

Moderator will be Tim Richard, Wayne County editor of Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

Persons who wish to speak will be asked to limit their oral presentations to three or four minutes so that as many as possible may be heard. The moderator suggested that detailed comments be put in writing and submitted for SEMCOG's study.

While the meeting will not have the legal status of a public hearing, it will be conducted in that fashion. A SEMCOG stenographer will be present.

LOCAL CRITICS of the 1990 plan have been arguing that the first criterion for getting a rapid transit line is wrong — the existence of congested freeways.

Since the I-96 Jeffries freeway in the Schoolcraft-Haggerty corridor is still under construction, they say, it's impossible for northwestern Wayne County to qualify under this guideline.

Instead, they contend that the economic needs of the tens of thousands of persons working in the mile strip between Schoolcraft and Plymouth roads in Redford, Livonia and Plymouth justify rapid transit much sooner than the year 2000 or 2010.

Rapid bus might be reality for large cities in 2 years

A modern city bus whisking commuters to and from jobs at speeds averaging 45 mph during rush hour may be in the near future for metropolitan areas in Michigan.

This is one vision of metropolitan commuting the State Highway Commission hopes will be a reality within two years through a demonstration of Bus Rapid Transit (BRT) techniques.

THE COMMISSION, acting on a recommendation from the Public Transportation Council, has approved a contract with the transportation systems division of General Motors Corp. to select a corridor for a BRT demonstration.

It will be the first phase of a five-step process which could eventually establish the nation's most advanced express bus operation in a major Michigan city.

"Bus Rapid Transit appears to be among the most attractive solutions to traffic congestion," says E. V. Erickson, commission chairman. "It can be put into operation quickly and with a relatively moderate capital investment.

"The commission believes BRT will retain the best features of bus transit — specifically its flexible operation and low cost— while approaching shortened travel times, ride comfort and efficiency of sophisticated rail rapid transit systems which would require a significantly higher investment."

THE FIRST PHASE of the BRT study will cost the state about $74,000.

It will result in a choice of a point-to-point demonstration corridor our of possibly a dozen candidates in Detroit, Flint and Grand Rapids. The corridor could involve a combination of freeways, surface streets and freeway service drives.

A further study phase using the selected corridor will determine how to achieve rapid bus movement in mixed traffic. The corridor could involve a combination of priority lanes (used predominantly but not exclusively by buses) or buses traveling opposite to traffic lane's normal flow at peak periods. An exclusive lane or bus street, a grade-separated bus lane in a tunnel, or an elevated roadway or depressed roadbed are also being studied.

The commission reports a BRT, using the industry's best state-of-the-art rubber-tired vehicle, could be carrying up to 10,000 passengers per hour by late 1976 or early 1977.

"Bus Rapid Transit isn't intended to compete with high-capacity rapid rail such as San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit system, in serving extremely dense commuter corridors, nor can it supplant the automobile for short trips and in lightly-traveled corridors. BRT does hold great potential as an intermediate step between bumper-to-bumper traffic and a massive investment in fixed-rail facilities."

THE BRT demonstration epvisioned by the state will differ from freeway express-bus operations in Washington, DC, New Jersey and Los Angeles in the existence of intermediate stops.

The demonstration would employ several passenger boarding points supported by parking lots, Dial-A-Ride bus feeder facilities, and other passenger attractions.

The plan calls for a corridor for the BRT demonstration to be selected as representative of most urban commuter routes. Bus-lane design modifications will be made at minimum disruption of other traffic.

Board to hire teachers to avoid fund cuts

By MARILYN FITCHETT

PLYMOUTH—Faced with the prospect of losing $138,000 in federal funds, the Plymouth board of Education Monday approved hiring ub to $1\frac{1}{2}$ teachers at Isbister to bring the elementary school in line in spending with sister target schools Starkweather and Central.

The board also approved a motion seeking collection of delinquent taxes by the county, approved a resolution commending the high school band, approved the purchase of property for an elementary school and changed its auto shop policy.

But the issue which took most of the board's attention was the Title I funding of the three elementaries. Title I schools are defined as schools in which 48 per cent of the students are from low income homes.

AFTER DEBATING for an hour, in which several motions and amendments failed, the board voted to reject Supt. John Hoben's recommendation of hiring one teacher and transferring the Starkweather principal to Isbister for two afternoons a week as a consultant.

According to Hoben, the district must be within 95 per cent of comparable funding for target schools to receive federal Title I funding. The district is spending $800 per pupil at Starkweather, $562 at Central and $543 at Isbister.

After making paper transfers of $36,000 Hoben found himself short of the requirements by $10,500.

LEADING THE MOVE against the Hoben roposal was secretary Marcia Borowski, who was willing to hire an extra teacher for Isbister but unwilling to lose the Starkweather principal to Isbister.

"Since Starkweather is a Title I school, it should have the additional funding and programs that Titlel I guidelines demand," Mrs. Borowski said. "The principal of Starkweather will be of no benefit to anybody at Isbister."

"Once again the board finds itself in the undesirable position of choosing the lesser of two evils," he said.

Trustee George Lawton's motion to hire the extra teachers was backed by Mrs. Borowski, Marda Benson, Mirto and Carl Berry.

LAWTON ESTIMATED the cost of his plan at $12,000 to $13,000.

In other actions the board unaminously approved a move by Yack to request the Wayne County Bozrd of Commissioners to establish a delinquent tax revolving fund.

Under Yack's plan, the schools would receive their taxes directly from Wayne County, leaving the county to collect delinquent taxes and impose a penalty.

Under present guidelines, school districts receive taxes as they are paid.

According to Hoben only three counties operate under such a plan, including Washtenaw County. Hoben added that Wayne County had previously rejected such a plan.

Yack's concern is based on a report from business superintendent Ray Hoedel that the district still had to collect $906,000 in delinquent taxes as of June 30 of this year.

The board approved the purchase of 15 acres of land on Proctor Road as a possible site of an elementary school at a cost of $82,000. The district is preparing to sell 10 acres of land on Ridge Road to the state for $60,500 for the I-696 expressway. The district purchased the land in 1958 for $20,000.

IN PASSING a resolution lauding the Plymouth Centennial Band, the board praised the band for its "high degree of musicianship" and for its dedication and devotion "in striving for perfection."

"Perfection has become a way of life," the resolution continued.

The band was cited as receiving national acclaim for its two forthcoming scheduled appearances at Disney World and its appearnace at the Orange Bowl Parade New Year's Eve.

A CHANGE in the evaluation of the Hillcrest Club apartment complex in Plymouth Township has caused the board to approve a tax refund of $6,079.

The board also cancelled plans to study the possiblity of converting the swimming pool from an L-shape to a rectangle in the Canton High School addition plan.

According to Lawton, the change in the pool design would necessitate drastic changes in the structure including heating and plumbing alterations.

The study was originally undertaken in hope that elimination of the diving area of the pool would lead to more space for intramural sports.

The board agreed to allow high school students to work on cars other than their own in the school mechanics class. The board authorized the purchase of $170 rider on the district insurance policy to cover the change.

Students clear the air

During a recess the students presented board president E.J. McClendon with "No Smoking" signs which specify that smoking is not allowed anywhere in the building.

Following the recess, Trustee Thomas Yack announced the no smoking policy forcing members of the board and audience to put out their cigarettes.

"If we can't smoke in here, why should they?" one student said.

CEP hosts debate tournament

CANTON—It's not often that you get 350 people involved in a debate, but it happenned at Centennial Educational Park last weekend.

Traveling from Albion, Flint, Grosse Ile and Ann Arbor, as well as a few places closer to Plymouth, 35 schools participated in the first Centennial Educational Park invitational debate tournament.

Organized by Plymouth Salem speech teacher Pat Barry and his Plymouth Canton counterpart Lane Serouin, the more than 200 students kept busy from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the question: "Resolved that the United States should significantly change the method of selection of presidential and vice presidential candidates."

Canton and Salemn teams, were entered in the novice division and managed fourth and tenth places out of 11 schools in the division. Canton's team included sophomore Saad Asim and senior Janet Dobry on the affirmative side of the question, while freshman Don Dhans and junior Jeff Parrott argued the negative.

For Salem, affirmative team members included junior Steve Cabadas and sophomore John Moote. The negative side was handled by sophomores Steve Thoburn and Chuck Lowe.

The tournament was a first for the Plymouth area, and Barry said he would like to see it as an annual event. The former Howell High School debate coach said he organized tournaments in Howell and he was there and would like to continue with a tournament in Plymouth.

Not only does it give debates an opportunity to test their skills but, Barry notes, "It gives people from other school districts an opportunity to see our schools."

Winners in the tournament included Belleville High in the novice division, Ann Arbor Huron High in the junior varsity division and Royal Oak Kimball in the varsity division.

This Grinch won't steal Christmas

PLYMOUTH—Youngsters three to eight-years-old will have an opportunity to purchase Christmas gifts for their parents on Saturday, Dec. 14 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the "Grinch's Hideaway" in Plymouth.

The Christmas shopping spree, for the pint-sized set only, is being sponsored by the Plymouth Jaycees Auxiliary in the Salvation Army building, 290 Fairground.

The Christmas Grinch, with a little help from the Jaycettes, has socked away a variety of gifts tageed for moms and dads, and welcomes youngsters to invade his hideaway to make their gift selections.

Gifts include ashtrays, pencil holders, yarn flowers, plaques made of dried flowers, fruits and nuts, flower arrangements under glass and many other interesting yule presents.

Prices will range from 25 cents to $1.25 with a limit of two gifts per child. After making a gift purchase youngsters can have the present wrapped at no charge.

While the children are shopping parents will be served coffee in the upstairs lounge.

The Jaycettes, under chairman Pat Conley, have been working on the hideaway project since September The members are busy putting up Christmas decorations getting the Grinch's place ready for the young shoppers.

"The hideaway will give children a chance to buy their parents a gift at prices young pockets can afford," says Mrs. Conley. "It also will help to keep their Christmas package a secret from mom and dad."

Proceeds from the Grinch's hide-away will be used for future Jaycettes community service projects.

Prof suggests bargaining for racial conflict

"Methods which have brought success to labor unions—challenge, confrontation, and collective bargaining—may help solve the nation's racial problems, former University of Michigan researcher W. Ellison Chalmers suggests.

His new book titled "Radial Negotiations: Potentials and Limitations," published by the Institute of Labor and Industrial Relations of the U-M and Wayne State University, centers on the study of 16 cases involving racial confrontations and subsequent negotiations.

THE CASES occurred in different parts of the country between 1968 and 1970 and involved six sectors: public employment, universities (Michigan, Duke, and San Francisco State College), school systems, welfare agencies, the construction industry, and nonprofit organizations. Details of conflict issues, leadership, strategies, and final results are included.

The author, whose research was supported by the Ford Foundation, concludes that racial conflict, both in real and perceptual terms, continues to exist in America, and that blacks must take the initiative in forcing changes in white-controlled institutions.

Chalmers says his data support the hypothesis that a negotiating process can be used by white and black sides under some circumstances to resolve basic conflicts.

He adds, however, that only minimal progress has thus far been achieved in such negotiations.

CHALMERS NOTES that "many of the most immediate and pervasive experiences of black Americans come from their client or participant relationships to specific establishments.

"In a society whose functions and decisions are decentralized, these establishments are the units where service decisions are made and where power is focused."

Such establishments, the author says, "tend to justify their policies and actions by insisting that they are designed to provide equal treatment for all citizens. Conflicts of interest are admitted, but these are described in economic and social terms as conflicts between the 'haves' and the 'have nots,' and the machinery for the adjustment of conflict is based on that description.

"For black protest leaders, however, these conflicts mirror racist views of white establishments toward a depressed black minority; they are have nots primarily because they are black. Indeed, many blacks perceive the attempts by whites to define conflict in non-racial terms as merely another form of racism and as a device used by whites to conceal their racism from themselves.

"We are dealing, then, with conflicts that are racial and functional. The differing perceptions of white executives and black protesters provide their own reality and their own truth.

"Black perceptions lead to the objectives of the redress of black grievances, black recognition, black dignity and black control...For black protesters recognition includes acknowledgement of the moral rightness of their grievances by whites, the correction of wrongs, and the recognition of their right to designate their own spokesmen and to set up some of the rules by which negotiations will occur. These, in effect, become the nonnegotiable demands that are frequently mentioned."

DESPITE THE depth and intensity of racial conflict, Chalmers suggests negotiations could be a way to achieve step-by-step changes in establishment practices toward black equality.

"The case data indicate two sets of variables that are fundamental in determining the degree to which the negotiating process will be used: (1) the degree to which white executives of specific establishments recognize the racist characteristics of their functioning and seek ways to realign their policies toward equal performance for blacks, and (2) the degree of readiness of black leaders and their potential constituencies to take their destiny in their own hands and use specific black complaints and generalized black anger as a basis for requiring establishment change."

In support of his contention that little progress has been made in negotiations, the author writes:

"No great movement exists among whites to reform the institutions for which they are responsible. Perhaps the clearest indication of the weakness of reformist pressures is the inability of so many whites to even identify their racist characteristics.

"Blacks feel disenchantment and frustration as black pressures succeed in making establishments change just enough to bolster their claims of nondiscrimination, of a kind of tokenism, but not enough to really change their relationships with black citizens.

"We are also placing the burden of reforming America on blacks, who have been held in second-class status for 300 years."

JCs to monitor stores for sales tax

Shoppers in Livonia and Plymouth won't pay the repealed state sales tax on food starting Jan. 1 if the Livonia Jaycees and Michigan Citizens' Lobby have anything to do with it.

The two groups will coordinate efforts to monitor 20 selected stores in Livonia and others in Plymouth and Northville to make sure stores don't illegally charge the tax, repealed by voters Nov. 5.

The repeal of the four per cent tax starts Jan. 1 and the Jaycees said it will continue the monitoring through next month.

The Jaycees are hoping to get other volunteers to help in the monitoring program, said Chairmen Bill Joyner and Rod Kryzwicki.

The Jaycees got into the program after hearing Doug Ross, Michigan Citizens' lobby chairman.

"By combining Jaycee forces with other interested people, we are hoping to raise levels of community consciousness as it relates to consumer issues," he added.

Interested volunteers may contact Joyner or Kryzwicki, both Livonia residents.

"Once the voters approved this measure (the sales tax repeal on food) there are those of us who feel some effort should be made to see that the stores don't pass on the four per cent through a markup in groceries," Joyner said.

"We are but one small link in a state-wide network that hopes to work with the stores to see that that doesn't happen."

The hearing will take place at 7 p.m., Dec. 18 in the Churchill High School Auditorium, 8900 Newburgh, Livonia and a tentative construction schedule will be presented by the Board of Wayne County Road Commissioners, Divison of Parks and Parkways.

The proposed bikeway will extend through the Middle Rouge, beginning at Northville, to Ford in Dearborn Heights.

Satellite center expands

By DENNY COFFMAN

GARDEN CITY—One school in Garden City is expanding its enrollment, hiring more teachers, adding new classroom facilities and not suffering from financial problems.

It's Schoolcraft College's Center at Garden City, which occupies the former Florence Elementary School building, Middle Belt near Cherry Hill.

The center began operations in July 1973, and its enrollment has increased 60 per cent in a little more than a year, from an initial 450 students to its present 760.

ITS CURRICULUM has increased to 50 evening classes, from an original 35, and the trend is toward more daytime classes.

The school's director, Clay Fechter, claims that long evening classes have helped boost enrollment.

Many classes run from 7 to 10 p.m. or from 9 p.m. until midnight.

"A busy housewife or a working man can attend classes more conveniently," says Fechter, " because they sacrifice only one night a week rather than several.

"For a woman, it's easier to get a babysitter that way, and perhaps that's why half of our students are women."

"THE VAST majority of our students come from Garden City; many simply walk to school from homes in the surrounding neighborhood," says Fechter.

The school also serves residents of Plymouth, Livonia, Westland, and other neighboring communities.

Residents of these areas pay $11 a credit, while non-residents pay $22.

FECHTER SAYS additional daytime classes will be offered "as we determine what the needs of the community are."

About one third of the $100,000 will be used to expand the library, which will become a "learning resources area" complete with audio-visual learning materials and 12,000-14,000 books.

Part of the funds have already been spent, to pave the parking lot and increase its 18-car capacity to 65 cars.

The rest of the money will be used to outfit a biology lab with microscopes, buy typewriters for typing classes and hire a part-time librarian and a full time security guard.

FECHTER emphasizes the importance of interaction with the community and meeting diverse needs.

"We think that we offer a different kind of concept in education," he says.

A student can make progress toward a college degree with such courses as biology, psychology, government, English, and history.

But there is a practical side to the curriculum, with such courses as shorthand, typing, accounting, real estate, child care, and income tax preparation.

Fechter is uncertain about exactly what effect, if any, the recession is going to have on enrollment.

"It could work two ways," he says. Persons laid off may not want to spend the money to go to school. But, on the other hand, they might want to attend school to fill up their time."

Fechter hopes that some arrangement might be made to accomodate some of the seniors currently not attending school because of the Garden City teachers' strike.

But if Fechter's plans are realized, what was once abandoned is on its way to becoming a modern community college with an enrollment of 1,000 students within a year.

Faust bill would help consumers

WESTLAND—Michigan consumers will soon be protected from unscrupulous tactics of collection agencies and their representatives.

Senate Bill 439, sponsored by Sen. William B. Faust (D-Westland), whose distct includes Garden City and Canton Township, won final approval in the Senate Dec. 5.

The bill requires licensing and state regulation of all collection firms.

FAUST'S BILL prohibits several common practices used by collection agencies to harass consumers and cause them undue anxiety and embarrassment.

The prohibitions include use of misleading "legal-looking" letterheads in communications with debtors, threatening to reveal a person's indebtedness to an employer, hiring unlicensed representatives to collect claims, using "scare tactics" or threats to collect or using oppressive or profane language.

Under the bill, collection agencies will be responsible to the Michigan Department of Licensing and Regulation in the areas of rules of conduct, disciplinary procedures, investigations and settlement of claims.

"COLLECTION AGENCIES have been operating with no effective rules or regulations in dealing with consumers," says Faust.

"They have been allowed to intimidate, harass and threaten — to misrepresent themselves as legal agencies — in short, to strong-arm the public with deceptive practices with no fear of of recriminative action.

NEAL K. FENKELL

Fenkell to take ad helm

Plymouth resident Neal K. (Doc) Fenkell, former director of television and radio operations for the Detroit Tigers, has been named advertising manager of Motor News magazine at Automobile Club of Michigan.

He succeeds Arthur J. Ward, who will retire Dec. 31.

Fenkell, 52, comes to Motor News after nearly 30 years of work in advertising sales, sales administration and public relations in the Detroit area. He will handle all advertising sales for Motor News.

For the past 10 years, Fenkell was responsible for the complete operation of the Detroit Tiger Television Network, including sales, production and administration. He negotiated all Tiger television network contracts, including the new five-year part with WWJ-TV, and administered Tiger radio contracts.

Fenkell joined the Tigers in 1954 as assistant director of public relations and was named public relations director the same year. In 1960, he was appointed director of special events and manager of the speakers bureau.

A native of Detroit, Fenkell graduated from Detroit's Cass Technical High School and Hillsdale College, and did post-graduate study at the University of Arizona. He served in the 7th Infantry Division during World War II.

Before joining the Tigers, Fenkell held public, community and industrial relations posts with Ford Motor Co. and Packard Motor Co. He also was an account executive with Young and Rubicam, Inc. in Detroit.

Fenkell is a member of the Adcraft Club, the Detroit Advertising Association and the Washtenaw Country Club. He and his wife, Juanita, have two daughters.

New tax forms now on presses

About 81 million 1040 and 1040A individual income tax form packages will be printed this year according to the Internal Revenue Service.

For the first time more than 2¼ million of these packages for farmers and fishermen will be printed on recycled paper as an experiment, says R. L. Plate, IRS district director for Michigan.

He said the IRS eventually hopes to print all tax forms on recycled paper for environmental and economical reasons.

THE 1974 FORMS also include the addition of a "no" box for the 1976 Presidential Election Campaign Fund check-off.

This will allow taxpayers to check "yes" or "no" in answer to the question of whether they want to designate $1, or $2 on joint returns, to the fund.

The 1974 forms will continue to make it clear a check-off designation doesn't decrease any refund nor increase the tax liability for taxpayers.

Plate says the new forms are much like last year's and that taxpayers will be able to use their 1973 forms as a guide in preparing their 1974 returns.

He said the main difference between the forms is the reintroduction of Schedule B for reporting dividend and interest income. On 1973 returns, taxpayers listed the total for all dividend and interest income. On the 1974 forms, taxpayers who have more than $400 of dividend income or $400 of interest income must file Schedule B.

A SECTION headed "Highlights" on the front page of the forms package draws the taxpayer's attention to the IRS toll-free telephone service, the new rule on the interest and dividend ceiling, and the fact IRS supervisors occasionally monitor phone calls to improve the quality of telephone taxpayer assistance.

Plate stressed that such action is taken solely to spot-check on the quality of this service. He further emphasized that no phone calls are recorded and that no record is made of the taxpayer's name or address unless, at the request of the taxpayer, a follow-up phone call is necessary.

Griffin firm in opposition to consumer unit

By ROBERT KIPPER

U.S. Sen. Robert Griffin's opposition to legislation that would create a federal consumer protection agency won't likely change despite a campaign launched last week by the Michigan Citizens Lobby (MCL) to change the senator's mind.

Arguing that in this time of inflation the federal consumer agency is needed more than ever, MCL spokesmen urged voters to call Sen. Griffin's local office urging that he reconsider his position.

However, Griffin aides in Detroit and Washington D.C. gave no indication that a change in Griffin's position should be expected.

According to one Griffin aide in Detroit, the local office started receiving calls the same day that MCL launched its campaign.

"They (MCL) are getting a fairly decent response," the aide said. "But we haven't received a whole lot of calls."

Barbara Grossman, MCL deputy director, said only one vote is needed to end the filibuster that is preventing the consumer agency bill from being considered by the Senate this year. If the filibuster holds until senators convene for Christmas in the next several days, the bill dies and will have to be re-introduced in the new Congress.

THE OBJECTIVE OF the MCL effort, which continues through Friday, is to pressure Griffin into providing that crucial one vote.

If the filibuster ended, it is generally conceded that the bill would easily pass.

The bill would create an independent, nonregulatory consumer protection agency in Washingon, D.C. Besides receiving consumer compliants, the agency would have the authority to represent consumer interests before federal agencies and courts.

Changing Griffin's mind, however, appears to be unlikely.

Speaking against the bill on the Senate floor in July, Griffin complained, among other things, that enough consumer-oriented legislation had already been approved.

"State legislatures and city councils across the nation have adopted a wide variety of measures and have established a multitude of agencies to protect the consumer," Griffin said at that time.

"Indeed, unless we pause soon to take stock and catch our breath in what has become a frantic political race to legislate more and more bureaucracies in the name of 'consumerism,' the consumer will be rightfulfy demanding a different kind of agency to help him: A taxpayers protection agency.

"It does not make sense at this point to create still another agency when so many new programs adopted in the name of consumerism are in their infancy—too young and underdeveloped to be judged in terms of their effectiveness."

Sen. Griffin couldn't be reached for comment last week on the MCL campaign.

The MCL argument is:

"We want Michigan taxpayers to tell Griffin's staff what inflation is doing to our paychecks, and that a strong consumer voice in Washington is needed in these hard times."

THE CONSUMER BILL has received the support of Michigan's senior senator, Philip Hart.

"Congress can guarantee an important protection of consumers rights by enacting this bill," Hart said last summer on the Senate floor. "The need for bolstering consumer protection is obvious."

Bills similar to the current legislation have been introduced in two previous Congresses. However, each failed to find needed support.

Four separate votes to end the filibuster on the current bill have failed. In the last vote, 65 senators—one short of the 66 needed—voted to end the filibuster.

Griffin supported a 1970 bill for a federal consumer agency, however, he said the new bill is substantially different— especially in exempting labor unions and broadcast media from the jurisidcition of the agency.

"Under these circumstances I believe the title of the bill should be amended to rename it an act to create a special interest protection agency," Griffin has told Congress.

The MCL-prompted calls are not the first indication Griffin's office has received in support of the legislation.

Last month, 68 letters urged Griffin to support the bill while only 22 voiced opposition, an aide reported. Previous months' mailing also showed more support than opposition to the bill.

Nursing homes to bond patient money deposits

WESTLAND — Patients in nursing homes in Michigan will soon have legal assurance that the money they deposit with their nursing home will be properly spent.

The Legislature recently gave final approval to a bill sponsored by Sen. William Faust (D-Westland), whose district includes Garden City and Canton Township.

The bill requires nursing homes to post bond for 125 per cent of the patient funds entrusted to their care.

"Purpose of this bill is to ensure nursing home patients' personal funds aren't stolen or misused by the nursing homes," explains Faust.

"Patients and guardians currently have no way of recovering any money misused by a nursing home without engaging in expensive legal action."

Faust's bill would require nursing homes to post a bond equal to at least one and one-fourth times the average balance of all patients' funds held during the previous year.

The homes would be required to give a complete accounting of a patient's money upon request. If a home misappropriates, steals, or otherwise misuses a patient's money, the patient, or his guardian, could recover through the bond.

"Earlier this year a Michigan House subcommittee discovered a nursing home in Detroit had borrowed about $63,000 in patient funds without the consent or knowledge of the patients.

"My bill would prohibit this kind of deception and provide patients with a means of getting their money back," Faust says. The bill now goes to the governor for signature.

VA to pay dividends

The Veterans Administration on Jan. 1 will begin paying dividends to Korean Conflict veterans who carry "RS" and "W" prefixed National Service Life Insurance policies.

Authorized last May, the dividends will be paid on policy anniversary dates.

The amount of dividend a veteran receives depends on the face value of the policy, his age at the time the policy was issued and the number of months in force during the 1975 dividend year.

Officials point out the amount will be small in comparison to those normally paid on other policies carried by veterans of World Wars I and II.

The VA mailed dividend option selection forms in October which allow acceptance of dividends in cash, or leaving them with the agency as a dividend credit or dividend deposit, both at interest.

Dividends also may be used to pay insurance premiums in advance, buy additional paid-up insurance or to reduce debt on policy loans. Dividends left on credit are used to automatically pay premiums should the policyholder fail to do so.

Veterans with "RS" and "W" policies are urged to complete dividend option selection forms and mail them or inquiries to the VA insurance center which maintains the veteran's insurance records.

Cases of child abuse, runaways and suicide decline during yuletide

By MAURIE WALKER

Perhaps it's the spirit of Christmas, or maybe just the cold weather, but whatever is the cause, several kinds of incidents that keep area police departments busy throughout the year, taper off around the holidays.

oOlice report there are fewer cases of juveniles running away from home as the yule season approaches. As policewoman Margaret Setza of Livonia expressed it, "Apparently some of them still believe in Santa Claus and want to stay home to see what he leaves in their stocking."

Youth bureau officers say Eastertime is the heavy runaway season, many of the youths taking off for Florida to be with the gang.

FEWER SUICIDES are reported during Christmas also, police say.

"Generally persons become closer during the holiday season. It is also a busy time of year giving a lot of us something else to think about besides our own problems," a detective says.

Family problems, however, are another story.

"There is a great deal of heavy drinking over Christmas and New Year's and some persons tend to become short-tempered when they drink," an officer says.

A youth bureau sergeant, Redford's Oliver Gallagher said reports of quarrels and assault and battery "climb sharply" during the holiday season.

CASES of shoplifting climb considerably.

"A lot of kids go Christmas shopping but don't intend to pay for the items they want to give as gifts," the youth officer says.

"We get a great many more complaints from stores about shoplifting. Of course, not all of this is done by young persons, there are adults too who help themselves to store items. It's just at this time of year, more young persons are involved in shoplifting."

Police have received numerous complaints from residents about youths stealing or destroying outdoor decorations.

"IT HAS GOTTEN to the point where many persons just don't bother putting decorations outside their homes anymore," Chief Robert Turner of Livonia says.

"There have been cases where certain homes had decorations vandalized several times and the residents just gave up in disgust," he adds.

The holiday season annually brings warnings from police and fire chiefs regarding driving and safety in the home.

Traditionally police crack down heavily on drunk drivers with judges handing out heavy sentences.

"NO MATTER how often we warn persons of the danger in drinking and driving, we know there will be a certain number of persons picked up during the holidays," Plymouth's chief Timothy Ford says.

Police say one of the problems during the holidays is that many persons, not used to drinking, "think they have to make up for the whole year in just a few days."

House fires are a threat that worry fire departments, especially this time of year.

"Children should never be left alone at home. They could be trapped and helpless if fire or another emergency occured," he adds.

STUDIES by the National Fire Protection Association show that one of every four children who die in fires is alone at the time of the tragedy.

"Parents should see to it that children are left with a reliable babysitter and that the sitter knows where to reach the parents," Schoenneman says.

"Too many persons are inviting disaster by not checking electrical equipment carefully," Redford's Fire Marshal Nick Segadi says.

SMOKING NEAR decorations, leaving tree lights on when going out or to bed, and dried out trees are just a few of the fire hazards pointed out by fire departments.

Police Chief Edwin Gleza of Redford sums up the holiday season with:

"While there is a decline in some incidents, there is an increase in others. It all boils down to the fact that the type of holiday season a person has, depends to a great dealon themselves."

Taylor blasts plan for temporary jail

WESTLAND — County Commissioner Tom Taylor (D-Westland) has blasted a plan to convert a hospital building in the Eloise complex at Merriman and Michigan Avenue into a temporary jail facility.

Taylor, whose 20th District includes Garden City, reacted angrily Monday after the commissioners' Ways and Means Committee voted to recommend to the full board the temporary jail plan at a cost of $850,000.

MAYOR EUGENE MCKINNEY of Westland, Mayor Patrick Norton of the City of Wayne, and Westland Councilman Robert Wagner were among area officials to join with Taylor to protest the plan Monday.

But the protests must now be carried to the full board which could approve the recommendation when it meets today (Thursday).

Taylor said the plan was a "hastily conceived notion." The building wasn't designed to be a jail, he added, and if used as such will put persons at Eloise and Wayne County Hospital, and those living in the area, in immediate danger.

The Ways and Means committee was reacting to pressure from a three-member circuit judge panel which has ordered the county to alleviate overcrowding of the Wayne County Jail downtown.

The committee is suggesting renovation of N Building at the center of the Eloise complex.

McKinney declared that it was "preposterous for the county to declare a vacant building can become a jail just because it's there. The county ought to quit fooling with this question of an out-county jail and begin construction of a new institution with court facilities instead of slapping together a jail to relieve crowded conditions downtown."

Norton suggests the county consider building a new jail with court facilities on a site near Metropolitan Airport in Romulus "where few persons live and where it can be reached without causing traffic problems."

Wagner, city council president, said the city hadn't received any official notification of Monday's committee meeting. "Crime is on the rise, and the population in the jail facilities when a permanent facility could be more secure and better equipped to handle prisoners."

TAYLOR PUT THE blame for the move on the three-judge panel by emphasizing that overcrowded conditions at the jail could be relieved "with a little more work on the part of the courts."

The temporary jail may be a scheme to get "judges off the hook from criticism of taxpayers during the holidays when the jail population goes up."

Taylor said judges are giving themselves an "escape valve" for the holiday period when many will not be on the bench to hear cases, and more prisoners will be held in jail pending trial.

"It certainly seems fishy to me such a haphazard plan would be conceived this close to the holidays, especially when the real problem lies in the inability of the courts to hear cases quickly."

The average stay of prisoners in Wayne County Jail is 59 days and could be cut, maintains Taylor, if cases would come to trial sooner. "I think it is far better to hire a few more people in the courts than to throw money down the drain on a temporary facility whose need won't exist after the holiday."

Taylor added that seven of eight prisoners in Wayne County Jail are sentenced in Detroit Recorder's Court.

Livonia computer pact OK'd by school board

LIVONIA—After nearly two years, the Livonia School District and City of Livonia have reached agreement on using the schools' computers.

The school board Monday unanimously approved a contract which outlines the services and costs for water billing, voter registration and financial reports.

The negotiations between school and city officials created a small controversy last summer over the format of the contract and how detailed it should be.

The council approved two weeks ago the detailed contract the school district wanted, but felt it was getting more services than present for a good price.

At present, the city uses three different firms to handle its computerized services.

The idea for the city using the schools' computers was initiated in mid-January 1973, by then-School Board President William Brown.

In the contract, the city will pay $61,167 for the next six months, through June 30, 1975; $114,032 for the 1975-76 fiscal year, and $111,507 for the following year.

School officials said the transition to put the city on its computers would take up to four months.

Besides the financial aspect, the city wanted the convenience advantage of getting computer reports by just walking across the street to the board office.

The contract to be signed soon by city and school officials is the seventh revision.

Necktie view of Harrison concert

There is a generation gap.

Last week I attended a concert by one of the former Beatles. My spouse and I were probably the only people there over 20 years old and I was probably the only male in the place wearing a necktie. But that's to be expected.

The music of the younger generation is not measured in mellow tones, but in how loud the volume. We are raising a generation of kids who will be hard of hearing, because ears just can't take that kind of beating on a consistent basis.

In their effort to do their thing and be casual this generation has lost something important.

WHILE BOOTS and blue jeans are casual, when people purposely go out wearing dirty jeans with holes in them and with hair that looks as though it hasn't seen shampoo in several months, it hard to believe they have any pride in themselves.

And it is hard for our generation to understand the drug scene. We were surrounded by 15,000 howling and shrieking kids standing on chairs and clapping their hands, mesmerized.

Our generation did this for Frank Sinatra, so it is nothing new.

But an overwhelming number of the kids were smoking marijuana during the performance, with no attempt to hide it, and with no apparent guilt feelings about it.

AS MY WIFE and I watched the kids we discussed what kind of children we want to have raised.

We want them to be free spirited, intelligent, and not stifled. On the other hand, we want them to have pride and social graces and understand what society expects of them, like what to wear for what occasions.

We don't want our children to be square.

There were four little girls sitting behind us who could best be described as being members of a varsity pep club in some junior high school. They were young, well dressed, hopping up and down in unison as one thinks of old football rally cheerleaders. Later in the performance even these square little peppies lit up a joint of marijuana and passed it around.

Somewhere along the line we are not giving our children all of the values they need. I am sure they feel that we are trying to impose too many values on them, but maybe we are not imposing the right ones.

THERE IS a good chance that the children of many of you were at this performance and you are oblivious to the fact that they are experimenting with drugs or, perhaps, you want to pretend the problem involves someone else's children.

But, when you see some of these kids freaked out and getting into cars and driving home, your distaste at confronting the subject could be signing the death warrants of your children.

All of us at some time in life try to seek the true values and the true meaning in life. In doing this we should seek guidance.

You can't be critical of the children's seeking the true meaning in life, but we have a responsibility to offer guidance to them during this experimental age.

Observation Point

by PHILIP H. POWER

Michigan's Democrats came back from their weekend pow-wow in Kansas City with big smiles on their faces.

The meeting was supposed to write a new charter for the party, which suffered terrible internal schisms ever since the catastrophic national convention in Chicago in 1968.

The politics in Kansas City were heavy, and Michigan pols were in the thick of it: Detroit Mayor Coleman Young led a charge by black delegates to firm up anti-discrimination parts of the proposed charter, and the UAW's Leonard Woodcock and Douglas Fraser were prime movers in the liberal-labor coalition that rammed final compromise language through the Saturday session.

The main fight was over representation for minorities in party gatherings: Blacks, women, youth. Would representation be established by quotas (as was the case for the 1972 convention) or by "affirmative action," which would set goals and require state parties to come up with selection processes which insured that blacks, women and youth had a fair shake for power in the party's internal competition?

Affirmative action won; Democrats went home smiling and chanting about unity; Republican Gov. William Milliken told other Republican governors their party had to do some serious thinking if it was to survive.

HE'S RIGHT.

In Congress, the Democrats' sweep in the November election gave them nearly the "veto proof" two-thirds majority in both House and Senate they wanted. The present situation in Washington reminds me of the days when I was an administrative assistant for a congressman after the LBJ sweep of 1964, when the question was not if we would pass legislation but what legislation we would decide to pass.

In Michigan, it's a similar situation: A Republican chief executive in a sea of hostile Democrats. The incoming State Senate will be 24 Democrats and 14 Republicans, a big switch from the 19-19 deadlock of the past two years. The Democratic bulge in the House is as impressive, 66-44, up from 60-50.

All the polls continue to give evidence that in these post-Watergate and pre-depression days, more and more people are becoming Democrats and independents, and more and more people dropping allegiance to the GOP. As Oregon's outgoing Gov. Tom McCall suggested at the Republican Governors' Conference, it might make sense for the Republicans to change the name of their party that has come upon such dark days.

ALL THIS leads to an observation about what really was happening at the Democrats' meeting in Kansas City.

On the surface, it was billed as a big unity meeting, gearing the party up for 1976. But what really was going on was that the party was reacting to the fact that America has become very nearly a one-party nation.

To call it a one-party nation might be overdoing it, as the phrase brings to mind totalitarian systems such as Russia or Hitler's Germany. But at a minimum, American politics are no longer those of competition between two roughly equally balanced parties. Our politics today is more nearly like what the economists call "oligopolistic competition," in which one or a few huge firms dominate a market, with smaller firms not really competing but thrashing along in the wake of the biggies.

In competitive politics, the forces of competition determine what the internal rules and procedures of each party shall be; excessive exclusion of one group or another by one party will, in competitive politics, tend to shift that group's allegiance to the other party. No formal charters are necessary; competition does the job.

But in oligopolistic politics the ordinary checks and balances of competition between two parties no longer apply; the choice for groups which feel excluded is not to bolt to the other party, but rather to fight for power within the dominant party.

This is really what has been happening inside the Democratic Party for the past eight years or so. Republicans are so weak nationally that blacks or women or youth or other groups have felt that bolting to the GOP in response to being put down by regular Democrats was not an available option.

Hence, with oligopolistic competition existing between the parties, the Democrats had to draw up the formal rules — i.e., their new charter — of the game in written form, rather than relying on the checks and balances of unwritten political competition.

I suspect that over time this condition will change. But for now, we have oligopolistic politics rather than competitive.

The key thing to watch is not the balance between Democrats and Republicans but rather just which groups within the Democratic Party have the upper hand.

New safety menace: Snow-blowers

R. T. Thompson writes

More and more was the need for safety brought out during the recent "snowstorm of the century" which resulted in more then 30 deaths attributed to snow shoveling in this area.

It seems strange how some of the older gentlemen who have been warned not to do any hard or strenuous exercises forget all about the warnings when the white stuff starts to gather on the ground. Seems like they suddenly think of their childhood days and how they loved to get out and shovel and shovel and shovel. They couldn't get enough snow then and suddenly they can't give up the urge to get out and perform again, just as they did when youngsters.

Of course there is quite a difference between now and then. Then the body was young and could handle almost any kind of situation. But as we grow older we exercise less, we start breathing harder after a few minutes, and that's when we should turn the snow shoveling over to the young and go back to watching the tube and having a few brews.

BUT THERE ARE those who refuse to listen to Mother Nature, scoff at the warnings and usually get back inside the house sweating, breathing like a steam engine, puffing all over the place, and all at once they topple over...their snow shoveling days over for good.

That's the way it happened in most of the snow shoveling fatalities. Perhaps all but a few could have been avoided by taking more care.

Now there's another dangerous weapon being used for the removel of snow that found at least 10 persons in this area being rushed to the hospital for emergency treatment for injured fingers and hands.

The new danger is coming from careless use of snow-blowing machines. These are the machines that are supposed to take all of the work out of snow removal and make the owner the pride of the neighborhood when he clears sidewalks, strips to the garages and then quickly goes on his way with a smile and a wave of his hand.

Would you believe that 10 persons lost fingers or parts of their hands by careless use of this machine which are supposed to be foolproof? It appears there are more fools handling the machines than we care to believe.

SAFETY IS stressed in every instruction book. Don't reach into the machine unless the motor has stopped is the No. 1 warning.

So what happened? The deep snow caused the blower to jam. Without thinking, the operator reached in with his hands to release the snow and get the motor operating again. At the same time the motor started, his fingers or hand were caught removing the snow.... and off to the hospital for treatment, perhaps minus a finger or two and in a couple of instances, part of the hand.

Apparently there is need for safety everywhere. Most of the time we talk about safety on the roads. Now it seems there's even more need for safety courses in how to handle a "foolproof" snowblower and made it a world of more people with 10 fingers and two hands.

Dem's dilemma: Teacher strikes

Tim Richard writes

Michigan Democrats, with hefty majorities in both houses of the Legislature, would seem to be an enviable group, but they have a serious problem: How to deal with the teacher strike question when the new term opens in January.

Ten years ago, after the Goldwater debacle, Democrats had their first majorities in Lansing for the first time practically since the depression, and their instinctive reaction was to repeal, as quickly as possible or faster, the long-standing prohibition against public employe collective bargaining.

It turned out, however, that their new law, instead of placing public employes on a par with other workers, opened a large can of worms.

IF FORD workers go on strike, consumers can still buy from the other three domestic car manufacturers, but government is essentially a monopoly. So the analogy between governmental workers unions and the rest of organized labor breaks down immediately.

When auto workers hit the bricks, they lose pay. Teachers, however, are guaranteed 180 days of work a year. A strike may delay their salaries, force them to borrow, disrupt their summer school plans and so forth, but those teachers still get that 180 days of work a year.

If industry makes an inflationary settlement — that is, one in which the wage increase exceeds the productivity increase — it can raise prices or eliminate jobs. Local governments can rarely raise taxes without going to the voters, and school boards are boxed in by negotiated pupil-teacher ratios, which put a floor under the number of jobs.

The 1965 Legislature forbade public employes from striking, which was kind of ridiculous because there is no power to negotiate without the power to strike and it's impractical to throw several hundred teachers in the calaboose if they do strike.

THUS, THE DILEMMA of the Legislature, and particularly of the union Democrats therein: The teachers unions will expect them dutifully to repeal the strike prohibition, but at the same time the public —most notably in Garden City—has lowered its esteem of teachers to a point as low as the American Medical Association had sunk when it opposed medicare.

The Legislature will look foolish if it fails, in some way, to lift the prohibition against teacher strikes. Telling free human beings in America they can't strike is like telling water to run uphill.

Arbitration is a poor solution. One side or the other usually distrusts the arbitrator, and elected public officials feel— quite correctly—that they shouldn't surrender the duties given them by the voters to a third party.

THIS TAXPAYER and student of public affairs has many instant, magic solutions for many problems, but not for the teacher strike problem.

The answer is mature collective bargaining, and that is neither instant nor magic. It's darned hard work and requires sound judgment.

House Speaker-to-be Bobby Crim, himself a former teacher, is making a complicated proposal. So is a Republican representative, Melvin Larsen, who proposes a well-defined procedure for contract negotiations and specific conditions before a strike can take place.

Building a bridge across the Straits of Mackinac or a freeway across the state may turn out to be relatively easy compared to getting teachers unions and school boards to negotiate. Lotsa luck, legislators!

Sense And Nonsense

IS GOD DEAD in Garden City? Recently the Garden City planning commission made the following recommendation: "In order to insure that, in the future, churches will be located to minimize a detrimental effect upon the surrounding neighborhood, it is recommended that the following additional requirements be placed upon their establishment."

What was on the commissioners' minds was traffic congestion.

Coal, oil may be gone in 500 years

By Membership Advisory Committee
American Physical Society

Q. Everyone is worried about running out of coal and oil, yet we are told that coal and oil are remnants of decaying plants and we know that such decay still occurs today. Thus, presumably, coal and oil are still being created. In that case, why should we worry about running out of coal and oil?

A. The coal and oil present in the earth today were created over the past 200 million years. At the rate at which we are using coal and oil today, the earth's present supply will be gone in about 500 years.

Division of 200 million by 500 shows we are using coal and oil about 400,000 times as fast as it is being created, assuming that present rates of creation are the same as in the past. Compared to our consumption, such a small creation rate can be ignored. Effectively, no new fossil fuels are being created and present supplies will run out, hence, the worry.

A. M. Saperstein,
Wayne State University

Q. The term "super" is used rather loosely today. Recently, I have begun seeing references to superconductors. I am not sure what that means. Could you explain?

A. When certain metals or alloys are cooled to extremely low temperatures, they lose all resistance to the flow of electricity. This phenomenon is called superconductivity. So far it has been found only below about 20 degrees Kelvin ... 423 degrees below zero on the Fahrenheit scale. To obtain such low temperatures special cryogenic dewars (similar to thermos bottles) filled with liquid helium are required.

Although this phenomenon has intrigued scientists since its discovery by Kammerlingh Onnes in 1911, it was only in 1957 that its detailed explanation was given by John Bardeen, Leon Cooper and J. Robert Schrieffer. These men were awarded the 1972 Nobel Prize in physics for their theory.

Powerful electromagnets made from superconducting wire have been used by scientists in research for some time. Scientists at the Ford Motor Company, for example, have been studying the use of superconducting magnets for high-speed ground transportation. Vehicles moving at speeds up to 300 miles per hour will be suspended magnetically over aluminum guideways.

Small test vehicles of this type have been built by the Stanford Research Institute in California and by the Japanese National Railway. Other applications of these magnets may include the more efficient generation and transportation of electrical power than by present-day methods.

Wayne County vets get one-third of funds spent by VA in state

Veterans Administration expenditures in Wayne County for fiscal year 1974 ending June 30 totaled almost $153 million, or about 34 per cent of total VA expenditures in Michigan.

Veterans in Michigan received almost $451 million in federal VA funds during the year. Of this amount, the largest single item was pension for payments and compensation payments to service-connected disabled veterans — some $222 million.

WAYNE COUNTY veterans received $89 million in pension and compensation payments, $36 million for schooling and vocational rehabilitation payments, and $8 million in insurance and indemnities.

Hospital costs in Wayne County accounted for about $84 million. An additional $2.4 million was expended for construction.

Veterans attending schools and vocational rehabilitation costs statewide were $116 million. Insurance and indemnities amounted to almost $26 million.

Direct loans made to veterans in areas where money was unavailable from private sources for homes totaled $98,209. Operating costs for the regional office and five VA hospitals in Michigan was $84 million.

FRANK KILCULLEN, regional office director in Detroit, is the officer in charge of benefits to the state's 1,180,000

Each hospital is a separate entity with its own director, serving a different area of the state. Through regionalization, however, veterans may be treated in any one of the hospitals through transfer to other facilities when special equipment or treatment is needed.

Hamilton rifle details sought

Editor:

I bought a used rifle at an auction sale which was made by C. J. Hamilton & Son. It is a Hamilton Rifle No. 27; 22 caliber; patented Oct. 30, 1900 and Aug. 13, 1907; Plymouth, Mich.

I would appreciate any information that anyone could give me about the company and how many guns they made.

Bulldogs rally, 79-78

By FRED DeLANO

It's a rare occasion when a high school basketball coach is carried off the floor on the shoulders of his jubilant pupils in only their third game of the season, but that's the reward Livonia Bentley's cagers gave new coach Larry Jackson after upsetting Plymouth Salem, 79-78.

Emotion ran as high in the Bentley gym Tuesday night as in a title game at season's end, and the din was tremendous when Jim Rhodes tossed in the two free throws that, first, knotted the count at 78-all and then gave the Bulldogs their one-point victory.

Previously unbeaten Plymouth, defending Suburban Eight champion and considered by many as the favorite to repeat, had led in this renewal of one of the area's best prep rivalries from the opening tip-off to deep into the fourth quarter.

At one point in the second quarter the Rocks led by as much as 10, and they got it back up to nine in the third period. In the fourth, the best margin was five, 71-66 with four minutes left.

But always the persistent, tenacious, aggressive and alert Bulldogs came clawing back.

It was Plymouth which won the battle of minor statistics, getting 33 field goals to Bentley's 30 and 44 rebounds to 30 for the home club, but the last column in the scorebook—total points—belonged to Jackson and such standouts as Rhodes, John Miller, Tom Weiss, Dan Dinsmore and Greg Smith.

IT WAS A rugged, give and take scrap from the start and Plymouth's superior height looked in the beginning as though it again would be the vital factor as the Rocks went hunting for their third straight victory.

Jim Ellinghausen, 6-8, who finished with 22 points and 16 rebounds paired with 6-10 Eric Agardy (21 points and 12 rebounds) and Dan Moore to give the Rocks a quick 10-2 lead. From then on it was one comeback after another for Bentley.

Plymouth was on top after one quarter, 24-20, and it was 44-36 at halftime. Bentley let it be known it was playing for keeps by cutting the margin to 44-42 in the early moments of the third quarter, and with another spurt at the end of the period that cut a 58-49 Rock edge to 58-56.

Plymouth still was in command 71-66 late in the final stanza on the shooting of Ellinghausen, Agardy, Moore and John Maloney when six quick points from Dinsmore and Miller shot Bentley in front for the first time, 72-71.

An Agardy free throw tied it at 72, but Bentley's Smith dropped in a two-pointer from under the bucket—only to be matched by an Ellinghausen shot that put it at 74-all.

Smith added a point of a charity toss, but Brian Wolcott's basket again put Plymouth in front, 76-75. Miller made it 77-76 for the Bulldogs, only to have Agardy score on a tip-in for a 78-77 Rock advantage.

That set the stage for Rhodes and his two clutch free throws.

"WE WERE worried by Plymouth's size, but figured our press would bother them and I think it did," said the jubilant Jackson. "Our seniors never had beaten Plymouth and we really wanted this one. Every kid played well, and in the Sub 8 I think we now have as good a chance as anyone."

"Emotionally, Bentley was as high as any club we've seen in two years," said Salem Coach Fred Thomann. "We outshot them from the floor and outrebounded them, but it wasn't enough."

The Bulldogs made only 10 turnovers compared to Plymouth's 21—which included 14 passes thrown away. Bentley also made 12 steals against the Rocks, setting up numerous quick shots as Miller (18), Rhodes (11), Weiss (11) and Dinsmore (14) all scored on double figures for the Bulldogs.

In the league, Bentley will be at Edsel Ford Friday and Plymouth has a home date Saturday night against unbeaten Belleville in what suddenly has become a "must" game for the Rocks.

Golfers may get winter break

Are you one of those interested in taking golf lessons during the winter? One of those golfers who like to improve the game indoors and then really have a ball when the outdoor season opens?

The Livonia Parks and Recreation Commission may have an answer for that urge. It is discussing plans for an indoor class at Pierson School, conducted by Whispering Willows golf course pro Gary Whitener.

Under the proposed plans, the school would start operation on Feb. 15, 1975 and continue for six weeks, winding up with the final lessons at the golf course.

Whitener plans a complete course in fundamentals including proper stance, grip, trouble shots and how to play them plus lessons on proper etiquette on the golf course.

Under the proposed plans, a regular net would be installed in the multi-purpose room at Pierson School to allow students to hit real golf balls instead of plastic ones.

Recommended fees for the six one-hour lessons, with a maximum of 12 students in a class, is $30. The classes would be held in the afternoons and mornings for men and women.

In addition, Whitener is planning classes for junior golfers in the 9-15 age group, with a reduced fee.

Golfers registering before Jan. 1 will have the benefit of a reduced rate of $25. This would make an excellent Christmas gift and would give the recipient a great deal of satisfaction during the winter months, said Whitener.

Persons interested in either individual or group lessons are urged to call the Livonia Department of Parks and Recreation or Whitener for additional information. These calls will have considerable bearing on the decision of the Recreation Commission whether to go ahead with plans or not.

Hot-shooting Tractors beat Spartans, 81-59

The Spartans of Stevenson High lost their poise for a time in the second half and before they could recover Fordson High had its second straight victory successfully tucked away, finally winning, 81-59.

It was the initial setback in four starts for the Spartans who more than held their own in the first half, walking off the court at the intermission on the short end of a 38-33 count.

Coming out for the second half, the Spartans ran into a hot shooting Tractor quintet that quickly pulled away to a 52-37 margin. That left Stevenson playing catch-up ball and the Spartans weren't equal to the task.

Of course if one wanted to be truthful about the matter, the officiating had something to do with the sag in the Stevenson spirits. There was a time in the second period when the Tractors converted on 11 of 13 free throws. During that same period Stevenson had only two chances and made one of them.

It wasn't that rough a game but the officials made it appear that way and time after time called questionable fouls on the Spartans. It isn't meant to say the Spartans are a bunch of lily-whites, far from it, but then it doesn't appearthe tractors were giving any ground either.

Coach George Van Wagoner had few comments after the game. He did point out that Fordson had an excellent club, one that will be heard of as the season p:ogresses.

"We have never been able to beat Fordson," said Van Wagoner. "I thought we might get the job done this time but their boys played quite a bit better than ours. Most certainly they were hot from the field. We thought we had a good shooting team but not this time. It just wasn't to be our night."

The first quarter was a tight battle all the way and found the score knotted no less than five times before the Tractors pulled off to a 16-12 edge.

Free throws ebabled Fordson to widen the gap at halftime, converting on 12 of 16 attempts. Ths tractors only tallied four field goals during that time but walked off the floor with a 38-33 edge.

Then came the deluge with Keith Szajnecki furnishing most of the fireworks when he hit six times during the eight minutes and put the game out of reach of the Spartans.

Stevenson lost the services of George Herman via the five foul route with two minutes remaining in the quarter.

Szajnecki was the big gunner for the victors with 11 field goals and four foul tosses for 26 points. Dale Haberman was high for the Spartans with 18.

Churchill falls to West, 66-56

Garden City West tuned up for Friday's Tri-River League clash with Inkster Cherry Hill by beating Livonia Churchill, 66-56 in a non-league encounter.

After blitzing to a 12-0 lead and 20-7 first quarter score, Babler's crew faltered and the visiting Chargers made a game of it the rest of the way.

As in its previous game, West came out running with guard Dave Niles scoring 10 first quarter points and forward Gary Hutnik adding six.

Then Charger mentor Pat Montagano changed defensive strategy and Churchill rode the hot hand of forward Jay Nelson's six baskets to close the gap to 36-25 at halftime.

Rugged rebounding by the visitors kept West from the boards in the second stanza. However, the Tigers got 11 third quarter markers from center Mike Susko to outscore Churchill 17-14 in that span for a 53-39 margin.

Nelson, who led all scorers with 25 points, kept hitting from the outside and Matt Foster boarded well and scored 14 points to narrow the final difference to 66-56.

NILES STUNG the nets for 17 first half Tiger points and added six in the last half for 23. Teammate Susko finished with 19 and Hutnik had 11 first half markers.

"I was pleased with the way the boys ran and moved the ball in the first quarter," Babler said, "but we executed poorly much of the time."

"We made too many silly mistakes and didn't go to the boards like we should. However, when you consider our lack of practice facilities, I feel the boys are making good progress."

West upped its overall record to 3-1 after an opening loss to Wayne Memorial, 61-60, and is 1-0 in Tri-River League competition.

However, that could change quickly as the flying Tigers go up against powerful Cherry Hill led by 6-foot-5 All-State candidate, Bob Fowler, a four-year player on the varsity.

Babler realizes this more than anyone.

"Cherry Hill has an outstanding basketball team, as usual, and Fowler is going to be hard to stop. They are especially tough on their home court and we respect them very much.

"We'll have to out-hustle them and go to the boards if we hope to stay in the game," Babler said.

CHURCHILL'S RECORD dropped to 1-3 overall and the Chargers host Farmington Harrison in a Western Six Conference clash Friday.

Charger Coach Montagano had some reservations about playing at Garden City West High School during the current strike there.

Garden City West and East High Schools had been playing only away basketball games before the Athletic Booster Clubs of each school got approval this week from the board of education to use the home gyms with certain stipulations.

"I wish we could have changed the game to Jan. 28," Montagano explained, adding, "I feel it would have been better for us."

Montagano, who had been requested by some friends not to play the game at West during the strike, explained his feelings.

"I don't want to see the kids used as pawns in this and I definitely don't want them subjected to the least bit of unpleasantness.

"But we had a contract to play the game and I felt we should honor it. We have the greatest respect for the West High basketball program and appreciate our relationship with Chris Babler and the school."

For Churchill, the outside shooting of Nelson and Foster's rebounding and scoring underneath in the last three quarters against West was encouraging.

The pair produced 17 of the team's 23 field goals while Niles and Susko evenly split 16 of West's 27 baskets. Both teams were hot at the charity stripe as Churchill canned 10 of 13 and the Tigers connected on 12 in 15 tries.

WEST: Niles, 8, 7-9, 23; Hutnik, 5, 1-1, 11; Chavis, 2, 1-2, 5; Susko, 8, 3-3, 19; Gooch, 1, 0-0, 2; Poole, 1, 0-0, 2; Carr, 2, 0-0, 4. Totals: 27, 12-15, 66.

Hodgkins stars in 9-7 Viking victory

The first place Livonia Vikings added another Michigan Junior Hockey League victory to their record in a free wheeling 9-7 battle with Royal Oak Ellis in which the Vikings' Steve Hodgkins scored four goals.

The Vikes had 60 shots on goal to only 23 for Ellis, which4 holds third spot in the loop standings with Ecorse Big D in second place.

Hodgkins put the puck in the net three times in the first 11 minutes at the Ford ice rink to help the Vikings to an early 4-0 lead, but at the end of the opening period the Vikings were on toponly 5-3.

The period was marked by 11 penalties, four against Livonia and seven for the Oakers.

Each team added three more goals in the second stanza, and they wilted to one each in the final session for the 9-7 count.

The St. Clair Shores Saints, who have beaten the Vikings twice, will be at Ford rink for an 8 p.m. game Satur-

Dearborn dumps RU

In what Redford Union Basketball Coach Carl Andrews likened to a football scrimmage, the Panthers dropped their second Suburban Eight decision of the season to unbeaten Dearborn, 66-55.

The Panthers now are 1-3 overall and will be host to Allen Park Friday in another Sub 8 test.

Of the game at Dearborn Tuesday, Andrews not only called it "very physical" but added:

"RU didn't play football any harder than we played basketball out there. The officials let it get completely out of hand."

Again referring to the officiating, the RU mentor declared, "It could have been a completely different game. As it was called, we weren't at the line half as much as we should have been."

The Panthers had nine men in the scoring column, but only Greg Wood was in double figures with 24 points. Setting the pace for Dearborn's Pioneers were Jim VanderHull, son of the coach, with 26 and Bill Rucker with 17. Ten of VanderHull's points came at the free throw line where he had 15 chances.

For the night, Dearborn shot 44 per cent from the floor to RU's 33 per cent, and it was a disastrous third quarter which killed any hopes of a Panther victory.

RU came back from a 16-13 first quarter deficit to take a 28-25 lead at halftime, and then the roof caved in as Dearborn added 24 points in the third period to only eight for RU. That gave the hosts a 49-36 lead which RU could cut only by two in the last eight minutes.

In the league, Redford now has lost to the unbeaten front runners, Dearborn and Belleville, but Andrews said he still considers Plymouth Salem "the team to beat" despite the Rocks' upset loss to Livonia Bentley.

Defense sparkles in Canton victory

Plymouth Canton turned in what Coach Casey Cavell called the best performance of the season in scoring a non-league basketball victory over Dearborn Heights Riverside, 70-55, to even the Chiefs' record at 2-2.

"Defense was the final difference," said Cavell in praise of his club which had trailed at halftime on the Plymouth court, 36-34.

"The third quarter when we outscored 'em 19-8 was the turning point," added Cavell. "In that period Riverside had only four field goals and not even a chance at a free throw, and it was thanks to our defensive play."

Dave Edwards paced the Chiefs' attack with 19 points. Joe Waid and Rick Thorn also hit double figures with 12 and 11 points respectively. Paul Wild of Riverside took game scoring honors with 21.

After the third quarter burst to take command, Canton kept the upper hand with a 17-11 margin in the last period and in the final statistics outshot Riverside from the floor, 28 goals to 22. Canton now goes back to Western Six competition, hosting Waterford Mott at Plymouth Friday night.

Q With words like "inflation" around, do words like "luxury, performance, and economy" mean anything?

These days the word luxury is almost as inflated as the dollar. The fact is, the Audi 100LS actually is a luxury car at a reasonable price. Because of German engineering and craftmanship the Audi handles easily and rides smoothly.

It's luxury because of the orthopedically designed seats that help prevent fatigue. And because of the legroom and headroom for a person well over 6 feet.

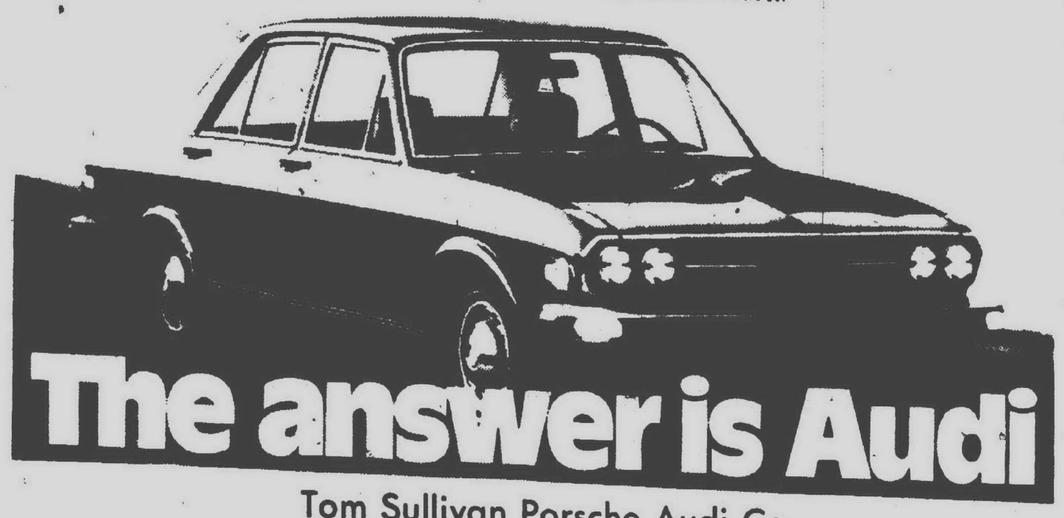
It's economy, 24 miles to the gallon*

"Luxury, performance and economy," in times like these?

No question about it.



The answer is Audi

Glenn ready for Franklin

John Glenn may have had exactly what the doctor ordered as a tuneup for Friday night's important Northwest Suburban League cage clash with Livonia Franklin as the Rockets rolled easily over Taylor Center, 72-53.

Having lost only a non-league decision to powerful Cherry Hill, the Rockets now are 3-1 for the season and never were pressed in scoring the easy win over Taylor, leading all the way.

"We jumpred out in front right away with a good running game and led after the first period 22-13," said Rocket Coach Gordie Davis. "On top of that, we played good defensive ball — getting lots of points off steals and the fast break."

Mark Thweat hit the cords for 24 points as Glenn's top scorer and he had ample help from John Jesson with 18. Terry Johnson and Harry Polovino. Each of the latter pair scored 10.

Jesson had a particularly hot hand in the first half as he got 16 of his 18 points in those first 16 minutes, and at intermission Glenn was in front, 42-22.

Friday's game with Franklin at Glenn will send the Rockets up against the defending Northwestern Suburban champions who are 1-2 for the present season.

It was Glenn that outfinished Franklin at the wire to win the loop crown two years ago, and the upcoming battle is bound to be an important key in the current race.

Preps set for puck twin bill

A doubleheader at the Ford ice arena in Livonia Friday night will highlight the first week's action in the Suburban Hockey League which is made up of eight high school teams in the area.

Livonia Bentley will faceoff against Allen Park at 7 p.m. in the first half of the twin bill, and at 9 p.m. it will be Livonia Churchill against Wyandotte.

Other schools in the loop are Livonia Stevenson, Livonia Franklin, Southfield and Southfield-Lathrup.

Franklin won the league championship last winter, with Stevenson finishing runnerup and their first meeting of the 1974-75 campaign was set for last night at the Ford rink.

In the George Gee tourney that followed the regular schedule last season, Stevenson reversed the tables on Franklin to take the trophy.

Salem edges Glenn on mat

Plymouth Salem opened its varsity wrestling season with a 27-23 triumph over John Glenn although each team scored six individual victories.

Lester Hassen (98 pounds), Carl Schultz (119), Jeff Kenney (132), Rod Sibel (138), Jerry Brink (145) and Scott Agnew (167) posted wins for Salem, Hassen, Sibel and Agnew pinning their opponents in 5:50, 3:04 and 3:49 respectively.

John Glenn had winners in Jerry Hensley (105), Agron Basha (112), Bill Ficyk (126), Mark Coulston (155), Mark Flach (185) and Chuck Squires (heavyweight), with Basha and Squires getting pins in 2:30 and 43 seconds.

In bouts that went the distance, Salem scored a pair of one point victories when Schultz defeated Don Cicotte, 8-7, and Kenney took the measure of Scott Davis, 7-6.

Statistics no help as Patriots lose

"You can't win on statistics," reflected Franklin basketball coach Bob Visser after his Patriots had lost to Southfield, 55-48, for their second defeat in three starts.

The defending Northwest Suburban League champions outrebounded Southfield 48-27 and had a 20-18 margin in field goals, but as Visser put it, "Free throws hurt us badly."

Franklin added only eight points at the charity line in 14 tries in this non-league test, while Southfield hit on 19 out of 25.

"Time and again we had shots that hit the rim and rolled off; we just couldn't put it in.," said Visser. "Nonetheless, we did a fine job defensively, holding Southfield to 18 baskets and a 33 per cent average on its home court."

The Franklin mentor singled out Sam Williams as having turned in a particularly outstanding job. Williams led the Patriot attack with 18 points and had the defensive assignment of guarding Southfield star Steve Trowbridge, who was limited to three points.

FRANKLIN: Pederson, 4, 3-4, 11; Gleason, 2, 0-2, 4; Williams, 8, 2-2, 18; Gibson, 1, 3-4, 5; Newman, 5, 0-0, 10; Wesley, 0,0-2, 0.
Totals, 20, 8-14, 48.
SOUTHFIELD: Loewy, 3, 8-9, 14; Rossen, 5, 0-0, 10; Trowbridge, 0, 3-4, 3; Phillips, 5, 4-4, 14; Wieland, 4, 4-7, 12; Diemont, 1, 0-0, 2; Ruben, 0, 0-1, 0.
Totals, 18, 19-25, 55.
Franklin ..... 8 16 12 12 -- 48
Southfield ..... 9 15 17 14 -- 55

It was all even between the two clubs at halftime, 24-24, but Southfield took command in the third period. Friday night Franklin will get back to league action in an all-important clash at John Glenn.

GC teams win use of school facilities

Garden City high school athletes and fans got the go-ahead this week from the board of education for use of school facilities for home sporting events under certain conditions.

East and West High basketball teams have been playing all their games on opponents' courts until the ruling came at Monday's board meeting.

Also affected by the decision were the swimming and wrestling teams which, along with the cage squads, have found it difficult to find places to work out.

The teachers' strike had prompted the closing of facilities due to inadequate supervisory personnel for the events.

But this week, the Athletic Booster Club of each high school came up with the idea of renting the facilities and providing adequate supervision of their own.

FIRST TO TAKE advantage of the ruling was Garden City West which hosted Livonia Churchill Tuesday night and the adult Booster Club members handled all details in connection with the basketball game. This included everything from selling tickets and supervising the premises to keeping score and running the clock.

Norm Miller, president of the West Booster Club, said this action did not mean it was taking sides in the strike dispute.

"We do not want anyone to misconstrue our action here tonight," Miller said at the game. "We just feel that the schools are here to be used and that the seniors are missing out on something they will never be able to make up."

Gary Faber, director of community and school relations, outlined briefly the Garden City School Board's position.

"THE DESIRE of the board is to accommodate community and student needs as to the use of school facilities. If the parents or sponsoring groups are willing to accept liability, provide adequate supervision at every activity and make sure of the safety and welfare of everyone concerned, the board feels they should be able to use the facilities."

However, Faber quickly added, "There is no blanket rule automatically okaying all events. Each program or activity must be presented to the board and will be decided upon individually as to whether it fulfills all requirements."

In announcing the board's decision Monday night, President Kenneth Carman said it included all extra-curricular student activities.

"But each activity must meet all the requirements laid down by the board and will be judged individually when it comes before us," Dr. Carman said.

"If they meet certain criteria, we are agreeable to letting them use the facilities."

Wayne victor as East wilts

Catch-as-catch-can practice sessions at non-school facilities caught up with Garden City East Tuesday as the Panthers wilted in the final minutes to drop a 69-64 basketball decision to Wayne Memorial.

Although Wayne is unbeaten for the season, East was in command most of the way and well into the fourth quarter, leading by eight points, 60-52, with five minutes left.

"We just ran out of gas," said East Coach Billy Joe Young. "We practice when we can, where we can, and are just not in shape. No one can say we didn't try, but we couldn't last."

A 31-point performance by East's Greg Emery went for naught in the loss, which leaves the Panthers with a 1-2 mark. The next outing will be at North Farmington Friday in a Northwest Suburban League game.

Emery piled up his 31 points with 10 field goals and a perfect 11 for 11 record at the free throw line.

Even after Wayne caught the Panthers in the closing minutes, East still gave it the big try, having a chance to tie it up with half a minute to go. "We missed, they got the ball, and that was that," said Young.

GARDEN CITY EAST: Hale, 1,1-2, 3; Wysocki, 0, 2-2, 2; Tomaszewski, 4, 0-0, 8; Emery, 10, 11-11, 31; Riley, 2, 6-8, 10; Peter, 1, 1-5, 3; Mitchell, 2, 3-5, 7. Totals, 20, 24-33, 64.

LETTING THE CAT out of Santa's bag? Consider size and type of pet before you choose one for Christmas giving.

Christmas pet: Joy or nuisance

Planning on giving your children a pet for Christmas? These suggestions from the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA), can make the gift a joy for the entire family.

Decide what size pet you can accommodate in your house or apartment, allowing enough room for the animal to sleep, eat, play and exercise. Be sure to select a pet that will fit your family's style of living.

Exotic animals such as monkeys, skunks, jungle cats and certain reptiles rarely make good pets. They are usually expensive and difficult to care for. Exotic animals also can be very dangerous.

Pets cost money. Be prepared to pay for the day-to-day expenses of food, health care and other essentials.

"FREE" PETS from animal shelters also involve expense.

Any animal you bring into your home should be thoroughly examined by a veterinarian and vaccinated against infectious diseases. Depending on your local laws, your pet also may need a license.

Good health depends on proper nutrition and correct treatment and handling.

Be sure family members do not mistreat the pet. Very young children may unknowingly injure a young animal, often by "over loving" it.

IT IS A GOOD idea to have your pet spayed or neutered as soon as your veterinarian says the animal is ready.

Bugs creeping out of firewood?

If you feel a little buggy seated before a cheery fireplace on a cold winter's night, you may be.

It might have something to do with the wood. So be careful about storage unless you don't mind a back to nature movement across your living room floor, says Dr. Donald Cress, Michigan State University extension entomologist.

Frequently homeowners will find wood-dwelling insects such as carpenter ants, Pennsylvania wood roaches, the long horn and the short horn wood borers, or powder post beetles appearing in their home, Cress says.

He explains that the insects emerge from the fireplace wood (their natural host) as temperatures rouse them from what would have been a normal winter's sleep.

THESE INSECTS are not common in dried or dead wood, the type usually used in fireplaces. They normally live their life cycle in soft or hardwoods. Some have one generation per year, others require two or three years to complete one generation," Cress says.

The cycle starts with the adult insects laying eggs on the bark or wood surface. When the eggs hatch, the larvae start boring around inside the wood until they reach the pupa stage and eventually develop into adults. They in turn emerge from the wood and restart the cycle.

"Mother Nature normally brings the adult insects out of the wood when spring temperatures rise. But homeowners, by storing wood in their basement or living room, trigger the adult insect emergence.

"THEY ARE REALLY conflicting with Mother Nature's plan, and you know how that story goes," Cress says.

Even though the insects may start crawling or flying around the house in zestful search for something to bite, they aren't likely to chew your house down or swallow your settee.

"Generally, they can be considered a nuisance. These insects are not likely to attack wood which has been treated with paint or varnish. Probably the best thing to do is get rid of them as they appear and not become too alarmed about potential damage," Cress says.

Fireplace wood should be stored where winter temperatures will keep the insects in the wood.

BRING ONLY ENOUGH wood into the house to last an evening, or an afternoon. That way insects in the wood will not have a chance to emerge.

Don't treat any wood with insecticides or accept any firewood which has been treated for insect emergence. It cannot be safely or satisfactorily done, Cress warns.

"No chemicals are registered or recommended for controlling beetle emergence from firewood. Dangers with this idea are: The chemical could easily be absorbed by the skin, especially through the palm of the hand; chemical fumes from the burning wood could escape into the room. Both of these possibilities could be a health hazard," Cress says.

"Insects found in this type of wood are highly beneficial to nature's cycle because they break down old or decaying wood so it returns to the soil.

"It's just a natural process. And if homeowners will take the precaution of storing wood outside the home, they'll have enjoyable fireside get-togethers with the bugs absent.

Preparation pays off

What you do before you wallpaper may be even more important to the overall success of the project than the actual hanging.

The walls must be properly prepared for the new wall coverings. Shortcuts at this point will cause trouble at the end.

It is suggested that painted walls be washed with water to which some soap powder and household amonia has been added.

East girls drop regional final

By JIM BRADLEY

After overcoming many obstacles to reach the Class A regional title game, Garden City East's girls basketball team was ousted from the state tourney Saturday night, 34-24, by Ann Arbor Pioneer.

A cold-shooting night was the downfall of Coach Jan Moore's cagers who made it to the regional finals at Trenton for the second year in a row.

"We didn't shoot when we had the opportunities, and lack of practice hurt us very much," Coach Moore said after the game. "It was a very slow moving game and we just couldn't put the ball in the basket."

EAST STARTED as if it would take command as the Panthers sped to a 9-6 lead on the strength of Jeanette Fisher's five points. But East's point production dwindled to four in the second quarter, and Pioneer slipped into a slim 15-14 halftime edge.

A 14-point outburst by Ann Arbor in the third quarter was the difference in the contest. With high-scoring Janet Balbierz hitting four long shots, the Pioneers pulled away to a 28-18 third quarter lead and played the Panthers even in the final stanza to take the victory.

Ann Arbor advanced to the quarterfinals at Brighton Wednesday, when it was to play Farmington Our Lady of Mercy, a 72-57 victor over Bishop Borgess.

Pacing the Pioneers was Balbierz with six baskets and four of five free throws while teammate Betty Smitch canned three from the floor and added four of six from the charity stripe for 10 points.

Denise Kossik and Jeanette Fisher led the way for the Panthers with nine points each. Denise, an All-area selection, connected on four from the floor and one free throw and Jeanette sank three field goals and three of five free tosses.

GARDEN CITY EAST did well in going as far as it did. The Panthers had to overcome the teachers' strike, lack of practice time and facilities and the loss of All-Metro selection Carol Anliefner due to a knee injury.

The Panthers won the South Suburban League championship for the second consecutive year with a 9-0 record and finished with a 14-5 mark overall.

"I'm as proud as I can be of these girls and the dedication they showed under all circumstances," Coach Moore added. "We had another outstanding season and if Carol (Anliefner), who was chosen All-Metro last year, had been able to play we could have probably gone farther.

"The parents did a marvelous job in driving the girls to practice and to the games and are to be highly commended for their fine help."

Coach Moore said the South Suburban League, comprised of East, Crestwood, Annapolis, Southgate Shaeffer, Southgate, Riverview, Wyandotte, Monroe and Lutheran West, was being dissolved this year and that East would probably play independents next season.

Mercy eliminates Borgess cagers

Despite Mary Kay Itnyre's game leading 29 points, Bishop Borgess missed in its bid for the regional Class A girls' basketball crown when the Spartans fell to Farmington Our Lady of Mercy, 72-58.

The victory sent Mercy against Ann Arbor Pioneer in Wednesday night's state quarterfinals, hoping to improve upon its third place finish in last year's state tourney.

Coach Kathy Collins' Borgess girls, who wound up 17-5 for the season, fell behind 24-10 in the first period against Mercy and were down 43-22 at the half. They came back strong in the second half to outscore Mercy 36-29 for that stretch, but it was too little too late.

Miss Itnyre, a 5-11 junior center with a fine scoring touch, pumped in 10 field goals to go with nine successful charity tosses for her 29 points, but had only one other teammate in double figures. That was Laura Zessin, another junior, with 11 points.

Meanwhile, Mercy's Marlins produced two big scorers in Katy Harte and Jean Otto with 23 and 21 points respectively to set the pace in boosting their season record to 16-2.

Miss Harte's output included an amazing 15 points from the free throw line in 15 tries, an accomplishment which would be the envy of just about any basketball player anywhere.

"We didn't play as well as we should have in the first half," said Coach Collins of her Borgess team. "We made too many turnovers and didn't rebound well. It was much better in the second half and looking at the season as a whole, I have to say this was the best team I've had in my eight years here."

Borgess whipped Ferndale and Detroit Redford in the district tournament and then topped Livonia Stevenson in the first round of the regional to set up the finale with Mercy.

From the floor Mercy outshot Borgess 25 goals to 19 and the Marlins had a 22-20 edge in free throws.

Sacred Heart beats Aggies

Foul trouble proved fatal for St. Agatha as new coach George's basketball troops dropped their third in a row in as many starts, this time to Dearborn Sacred Heart, 63-50.

The Aggies outshot the visitors in goals from the floor, 20-19, but Sacred Heart canned 25 of 33 free throws to only 10 of 22 for Agatha, and that told the story.

"We gave it all we had and these kids really put out," said George, "but we were in foul trouble early and it cost us dearly when we lost four men on personals in the last quarter. There was no one left to get the boards."

Nick Monti, who finished with 20 points, and Pat Ruvolo, who added 14, led Agatha to a 28-25 halftime edge, but Sacred Heart moved out in front by three points in the third period, 43-40.

The roof then fell in for Agatha in the final stanza when four men went to the bench on fouls and the team was outscored, 20-10.

"I'll tell you something, though," commented George. "We've been 2-18 each of the last two seasons, but these kids are going to win more than that. Believe me, we're on the move."

Fishing licenses now available

Michigan fishermen can now get their 1975 fishing licenses and trout stamps at local dealers, according to the State Department of Natural Resources.

Almost 2 million licenses and 300,000 trout stamps have been mailed to approximately 3,000 local license dealers. Also available will be the 1975 Michigan Fishing Guide which details laws and regulations governing fishing.

One change for 1975 not in the guide is a new restriction on the size of landing nets used in designated trout streams during April, May and June. The new regulation limits the nets to no larger than 66 inches in circumference, with a handle not more than 14 inches in length.

There have been no major changes in basic fishing regulations since 1974 with only minor modificatiocs in local controls.

There is a positive force that is moving forward in America today, opening doors for young men and women who will make a difference in the America of tomorrow.

Since 1970, John Wesley College, under the dynamic leadership of its president, Dr. Kenneth S. Armstrong, has been pulling back the curtain on unique and exciting educational programs.

These are programs that live on the cutting edge of tomorrow. They are designed to meet America's youth where they are living and take them to a point of responsible living and leadership.

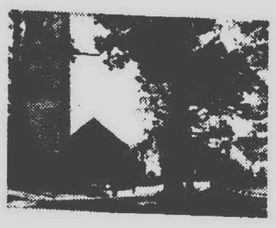
Today, while many of these small, private colleges are dying, some – such as John Wesley College – are finding new vitality and reclaiming their heritage of providing a guiding and stabilizing force in the midst of social and moral upheaval in America and of being pioneers in education by designing and implementing educational programs that meet the real needs of America's youth.

a few things you should know about John wesley college



LEARNING VILLAGE

The campus of John Wesley College is a unique English Learning Village. All buildings are designed in the old English motif and strategically located to create a village atmosphere. This helps to emphasize the College's commitment to building a community, not an institution.

LEADERSHIP

The success of any mission is largely dependent upon the quality of its leadership. The president of John Wesley College, Dr. Kenneth S. Armstrong, is a highly creative individual with strong academic preparation with two earned doctorates.

RECOGNITION

John Wesley College is recognized by the North Central Association of Colleges and Universities as a Candidate for Accreditation. Although its programs are innovative, its history reaches back to 1909 when it was chartered by the State of Michigan and vested with the power to confer degrees.

UNIQUE PROGRAMS

John Wesley College is among those colleges pioneering several innovative programs in education. One unique program is Foreign Travel-Study which makes it possible for EVERY STUDENT to spend four weeks in Europe as part of his regular academic experience at no extra cost.

FINANCIAL SUCCESS

John Wesley College has accomplished one of the most successful small gifts fundraising campaigns of any small, private college in America. In two years nearly 5,000 families have committed $5 million to John Wesley College through its Endowment Club. And each week the total increases. The College's assets have climbed from $1.5 million in 1969, to $15.4 million in 1974.

YOU, TOO, CAN OPEN DOORS...

...by investing in John wesley college and earning 9% annual interest

As John Wesley College keeps on growing, so do the needs for the youth who come to the campus. Next school year, at least 100 new beds will be needed to accommodate the continued projected increase in student enrollment. New classrooms, lecture halls, an audio-visual center, and a fine arts building are all important additions that need to be constructed in the English Learning Village.

To help finance its capitalized expansion program, John Wesley College goes directly to investors instead of financial lending institutions and pays investors 9 per cent annual interest.

The College offers its $1,000 minimum Investment Certificates through a professional firm, Atlantic Charter Corporation, whose representatives are all licensed with the Security Exchange Commission.

Investors in John Wesley College come from all walks of life – farmers, doctors, dentists, small businessmen, industrialists, factory workers, retired ministers, educators, and many others.

There are at least two reasons why they invest in John Wesley College: 1) A rate of interest that provides them with a good yield on their savings, and 2) There is double satisfaction in knowing that invested dollars can be used to provide valuable living-learning experiences for youth who can make a positive contribution to the quality of life in America.

America needs men and women who are willing to invest in the youth of our nation. There are some doors that only they can open.

For more information on the John Wesley College investment program, mail the coupon today.

Please provide me complete information on your 9% annual interest program.

Postage-stamp gardens yield good therapy, taste and fun

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

One of President Ford's main points in fighting and whipping inflation (WIN) was an appeal to grow more food. This makes us feel good because most politicians in Washington find it repugnant to get their hands in the soil.

People who live in apartments or have a postage-stamp backyard shouldn't go without fresh vegetables, summer or winter. All you need is some kind of a planter (such as a window box) or pots to do some container gardening, now or in summer.

Stokes Seeds of Buffalo, N.Y. recommends a good soilless mixture such as two parts Jiffy Mix to one part sand, with a handful of a slow-acting fertilizer, to grow many vegetables.

A LARGE SHRUB tub, 10 by 9 inch deep, will accommodate three plants of Tiny Tim, or one plant of Stakeless Dwarf Tomatoes, or three plants of Patio Pik (or Presto), two Victory cucumbers (Tee Pee staked in the pot).

A 25 by 8 by 6 inch deep planter, with two handsful of a balanced fertilizer is sufficient for any of the following: six plants of Buttercrunch lettuce (resow after each harvest), two rows of Ebenezer of white onion sets (replant after harvest), two plants of green curled endive or full heart Batavian escarole, two rows of parsley, eight plants of Baron Solemacher strawberries, or three plants of marjoram, thyme, or summer savory.

A liquid plant food such as 23-19-17 is helpful on all these crops.

THE SAME planter, fed with a balanced plant food, will grow two rows of 12 plants each of spring red beets (resow after harvest), two rows, with the plants thinned to three inches apart of Baby Finger Nantes carrots (resow after harvest), numerous Cherry Belle or Champion radishes, sown every two weeks for continuous supply.

Or, four bean plants of such varieties as Sprite Bush Green, Bush Romano, Honey Gold Bush Wax, or similar types such as Fordhook 242 (bush lima bean). Repeat sowing for continuous crops.

You may not get gigantic crops from growing vegetables in containers, but there is a lot of fun involved and the taste is great. Get your kids involved in a project like this. It's great therapy, and it's something to think about, especially with a global famine looking us in the eye.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: "We raised a beautiful crop of berries on our pyracantha this year, but all the berries turned black. Will this harm the birds and what caused it?"

The berries had a fungus disease, causing them to turn black. They won't harm the birds, except it may make them intoxicated. Next year, spray the tiny berries with a fungicide such as zineb, ferbam or captan, one tablespoon per gallon of water, applied at two week intervals. You might even start applying at two week intervals from the time the leaves first emerge.

City golf course has record year in play, receipts

With a welcome hand from the weatherman, business boomed at the City of Livonia's municipal golf course during 1974 with play up 10 per cent over 1973 and gross receipts totaling $186,180.75 for a hike of 15 per cent over last year.

It was the greatest year since the Whispering Willows course, located at the intersection of Eight Mile and Newburgh Roads, opened.

" There were three major factors in our success this year," said Pro Gary Whitener. "We had perfect weather from early April through late November, we had the advantage of daylight savings time and the interest was greater this year than at any period since we opened."

Whitener made a check of other neighboring courses and learned Whispering Willows was No. 1 in all categories— total rounds and gross revenue.

A total of 52,008 rounds were played, either over nine or 18 holes. The green fees showed a net profit of $54,000 and that has to be another record.

No league play is permitted at the 18-hole course, with the exception of the Department of Parks and Recreation Women's League with a membership of 140 playing on Fridays.

The course allows juniors to play from June 10 through Labor Day at reduced rates but other than that it is all open play. That accounts for the huge volume.

During the past summer, Mayor Edward McNamara appointed a Greens Committee consisting of five enthusiastic golfers headed by John McDonald, for the purpose of working with the greenskeeper in the proper maintenance of the course, to expedite improvement projects and to prepare a capital improvement program for the course.

Many tournaments were held at the links during the year with the Observer & Eccentric Open the largest with a total of 140 entries and four flights.

The tourney, open to all residents of the areas covered by the 11 newspapers of the chain, was won by Bill Curtis of Farmington.

The entire report of the Whispering Willows activities and business has been turned over to the Livonia City Council for a review and for comments.

Wayne-Westland audit indicates tight budgeting

An auditor from Plante and Moran has praised administrators of the Wayne-Westland School District for "tremendous accuracy" in its budget figures.

That compliment came from Pete Davis of Plante and Moran before the school board Monday accepted the auditor's report on the 1973-74 fiscal year budget.

Davis was responding to a question from Trustee William White about charges from the teachers' union during the last negotiation sessions that the district was sloppy in its accounting procedures and had "excess baggage" in its budget.

The budget anticipated $29 million revenue for operation. The actual collection was only about $400,000 less than anticipated, Davis said, for a margin of error of about one per cent. "That's getting very close," he remarked.

On the expenditure side, excluding federal reimbursement projects, the district's actual costs came within $11,000 of its budgeted estimates. "Remarkable accuracy," said Davis.

Davis explained he used "remarkable" to describe the degree of accuracy based on audit comparisions with other school districts and comparable municipalities.

He added there was no particular line item within the budget which was significantly off from an auditing standpoint.

The audit covered the last school fiscal year which ended June 30, 1974.

ECHO

CHAIN SAWS

A good home saw must be light, easy to use; safe to handle; free of trouble; sturdily built to withstand possible unskilled handling, powerful enough for light, casual use. In other words, a good saw is a saw like ECHO 302.

Rep. Smit to head county GOP

Retiring State Rep. Raymond J. Smit (R-Ann Arbor) will serve as Washtenaw County Republican chairman following his retirement in January.

Smit, whose district includes most of Plymouth, was elected Dec. 5 by the county party's executive committee. He succeeds Mrs. C. Borden Chase.

The legislator sees an increasingly important role for the county party, especially in Washtenaw.

"THE COUNTY GOP organization will be one of increased political realism and increased activity," he said.

"Washtenaw County is in a position to play an important role in the state Republican Party structure.

"Through the effective work of our county party leaders and a fine slate of candidates, we emerged from last November's election, which was a GOP debacle in many other areas, with our heads held high...

"WE SENSE a decline in the strength of the Democratic party in Washtenaw County due to the emergence of a radical third party based at the university campus," Smit said, adding "I know of many dissident Democrats in Washtenaw County who are dissatisfied with their county organization simply because the county Democratic organization is attempting to 'out-radical' the Human Rights Party. These people will certainly be welcome in the Washtenaw County Republican Party."

Smit, who has served eight years in the Legislature, emphasized his belief in the political party system, saying, "The primary purpose of the political party system is to develop alternatives to whichever party is in power at the time. It's a very necessary way of expressing at least two points of view.

Wrap carefully—prevent tears

During each Christmas season there is a section in most post offices called the "heartbreak corner."

This is the section of the claims and inquiry office where undeliverable packages, those with improper addresses, and torn labels and wrappings, are held while postal employees search for clues to enable them to complete delivery.

The corner was christened by Detroit General Post Office director of support Emile Asa in 1967 who noticed the undelivered toys and gifts, and realized the heartbreak it cause when they didn't arrive.

Last year more than 30,000 packages made it only as far as the corner. Fortunately many had sufficient return identification to route them back to their senders. Sometimes items can be identified and retrieved by their owners. But, last year, after 60 days on the shelf in the corner, 15,000 unclaimed parcels were sent to the auction block of the dead letter office in Chicago.

In addition to careful wrapping, the post office suggests including the name and address of the sender, the recipient and a list of the contents inside the package.

'Pioneer in Progress' Michigan Week theme

"Michigan — Pioneer in Progress" is the theme for Michigan Week 1975 to be observed May 17-24.

The theme for the 22d annual observance was announced by Herbert G. Daverman, president of the Greater Michigan Foundation which sponsors Michigan Week. Daverman is a member of Daverman Associates, Inc., a Grand Rapids-based architectural firm.

"The 1975 theme for Michigan Week tells the whole story," he says. "Michigan's frontier roots, phenoménal development through the years despite adversities, and because of our state's ongoing, confident march into the future.

"I believe our Michigan Week corps of volunteers will find this a stimulating theme with which to work."

Michigan Week debuted in 1954, the direct result of state leaders putting their heads together to lift the state out of the doldrums caused by an economic downtrend the year before.

Michigan Week is an educational program which encourages state residents to know and appreciate the facts about their state, enlists them as strong supporters for Michigan, and allows them to work together constructively in its behalf.

School site is retained

LIVONIA—The Livonia School Board Monday made sure it will have a 10.45-acre site in the northwest corner of Westland when it's time to build an elementary school.

The board unanimously approved excercising its option on the site, next to a 45-acre city park south of the Holliday Park nature preserve. The boerd has paid $10,000 for the option and will pay another $10,000 next year.

The purchase price is $55,000.

The school administration was directed to formally ask the City of Westland to rezone about 10 acres the schools own just south of the Holliday Park Townhouses, east of Wayne Rd., and south of Joy.

That site isn't needed any more, and the sale of the parcel after it is rezoned would offset the cost of the new parcel.

Uniforms urged for musicians

LIVONIA—The Bentley High School Band Boosters Club wants the Livonia School Board to share in replacement of uniforms of its musicians.

William Ponder, club president, said the group has raised funds for band activities and hopes the board will adopt a policy of uniform replacement and provide the funds in the annual budgets.

Ponder said the club recently spent $1,500 to send musicians to a one-week band camp near Charlevoix and is considering financing a music scholarship.

But it would be a major expense to replace 100 uniforms and their accessories.

Board President Mark Scarr said the school administration will report later on what the district has spent at the four local high schools on uniforms and supplies.

Board Secretary Charles Akey questioned the program subsidy since parents of students in school athletics pay for physical exams, insurance and some equipment.

Oakway, ballet offer variety plus excellence

By SUE ROSIEK

The Oakway Symphony's second concert of the 1974-75 season last Sunday in Harrison High School, Farmington Hills was a triple treat for symphony goers.

The program featured a four-violin solo, Haydn's symphony No. 88 and highlights from Tchaikovsky's fantasy ballet, "The Nutcracker." It was a well-balanced and enjoyable musical and dance production.

VIVALDI'S concerto for four violins performed by Peruz Zerounian, Alyze Dreiling, Ann Cannell and Margaret Nagy was an example of perfection among string musicians.

All four are members of the Oakway violin section, and each has an interesting musicial background.

Mrs. Zerounian is concertmaster of the Oakway. She was born in Istanbul and was a member of the Istanbul Philharmonic and soloist with the Istanbul Radio Symphony.

Her daughter, Ani Kavafian will be a featured guest artist with the Oakway orchestra Jan. 26 at 4 p.m. in Seaholm High School, Birmingham. Miss Kavafian will play the Sibelius violin concerto. She also will give a recital in the Schoolcraft Waterman Campus Center on Jan. 28 at 8 p.m.

Miss Cannell recently returned from Bogota, Columbia where she was a member of the Philharmonic Orchestra of Bogota. She was also second principal of the Bogota Chamber Orchestra.

Miss Nagy graduated from the University of Michigan as a violin major. She has played with the Michigan Youth Symphony.

Miss Dreiling is a student at Franklin High School in Livonia and is currently studying violin with Mischa Mischakoff. She is assistant concertmaster of the Oakway.

THE ORCHESTRA, under the direction of Francesco Di Blasi, shared the program playing the Haydn selection, and offered a clear sharp tone coupled with brilliant accuracy.

The ballet theater, headquartered in Farmington Hills, is composed of some 40 dancers ranging in age from 12 to 20.

The group danced 10 selections, a variety of long and short numbers.

For the most part dancers and musicians displayed perfect timing. The result was a precision and colorful production.

DANCE selections included five numbers from "Kingdom of Sweets," including "Chocolate," (Spanish), "Mirlitons" (candy canes), "Coffee" (Arabian), "Trepak" (Russian) and "Tea" (Chinese).

Melissa Mitchell performed an impressive "Dance of the Sugar Plum Fairy." The grand pas de deux danced by Karen Ziemba and Ron Hollenkamp was an example of fine ballet technique.

The Oakway and the ballet theater performed well together, and for a relatively young group performed like a seasoned company.

THE OAKWAY has been together for about 18 months and the Michigan Ballet is in its sixth year.

The orchestra and ballet theater will perform the "The Nutcracker," again Friday, Dec. 20 at 8 p.m. in the Music Hall for the Performing Arts, Detroit.

Sunday seemed to be a popular date for all area orchestras to perform their annual Christmas presentations. The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Wayne Dunlap, and the Kenneth Jewell Chorale performed "L'Enfance du Christ," at 4 p.m. The Madonna College Chorale presented "The Spirit of Christmas," later that same evening and the Westland Civic Symphony, conducted by H. Michael Endres played at 3:30 p.m. in Wayne Memorial High School.

All these groups are within a 10-mile area and draw from the same residents for their audience. It's too bad they were all scheduled on the same day.

Yuletide aglow at G'field Village

Christmas is a special season at Greenfield Village and the Henry Ford Museum in Dearborn. The traffic doesn't turn December snow into slush, Christmas trees aren't made of aluminum and the mistletoe that dangles in doorways is fresh and green, not plastic.

Now through Jan. 5, Yuletide traditions of grandfather's Day are remembered and recreated throughout the historic homes and shops in the Village.

More than 300 years of holiday decorations are traced in the Village's researched Christmas observance. Popcorn and cranberry strings decorate trees, stockings are hung by chimneys with cedar roping, and poinsettias and holly grace the Village homes just as they did when the original famous owners prepared for the holidays.

In the parlor of the 1860 Henry Ford birthplace stands a tabletop Christmas tree trimmed with American flags and candles in tin holders.

In the Susquehanna House, a festive board setting, complete with roast suckling pig and plum pudding typifies a holiday tradition familiar to early English settlers. In the Secretary Pearson House, a pyramid of luxury imported fruits grace the dining room table, recalling the days when holiday decorations were both attractive and edible.

Bread bakes on the hearth in a pioneer cabin, holiday candy simmers on the stove in a 19th century farm kitchen and at the Stephen Foster birthplace visitors may savor smells of freshly-baked mincemeat tarts and pies.

Throughout the Village, in firelit parlors, craftsmen demonstrate domestic skills to the music of Yuletide tunes played on mandolins, recorders and harpsichords.

Complimentary hot spiced cider and Christmas cookies are served in the Town Hall on the Village Green.

The Henry Ford Museum is also decked out in Christmas finery and features a special exhibit, "The Crafts of Christmas."

Visitors may watch experienced artisans demonstrate the skills that provided earlier generations with holiday luxuries and the necessities of life.

In a special exhibit area, "The Toy Shop" offers a collection of 19th and 20th century dolls, trains, cast iron toys and carved playthings.

In the Decorative Arts Galleries, the rooms and alcoves are graced with garland of green, fruit centerpieces and fanciful decorations of the past.

Christmas in the Village is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, except Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

The Museum is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily and 9 to 6 on Saturdays and Sundays. It will be closed Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

ENTERTAINER Jim Cox will emcee the United States Marine Corps Reserves' "Toys for Tots" benefit program Sunday, Dec. 15 from noon to 6 p.m. in Roma Hall, 27777 Schoolcraft (near Inkster) in Livonia. Detroit Symphony presents holiday festival package

The Detroit Symphony Orchestra will present a two-week Christmas Festival in Ford Auditorium. A total of 11 holiday performances will be offered between Dec. 12 and Dec. 22 in a festival package which includes music for every member of the family.

The festival will open Thursday, Dec. 12 at 8:30 p.m. with a concert entitled, "Fabulous Festivals of the World." Principal pops conductor Richard Hayman will direct.

Hayman also will appear on Friday, Dec. 20 at 8:30 along with the Rackham Symphony Choir.

Handel's "Messiah," a traditional Detroit Symphony holiday offering is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 14 and Sunday, Dec. 15.

Three performances of Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" Ballet, featuring Detroit's Severo Ballet Company under the direction of Sanda Severo, will be conducted by Theo Alcantata. It will be staged at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 21 and at 7:30 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 22.

Concluding the 1974 Christmas Festival will be the Yuletide opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors," conducted by Paul Freeman at 1:20 and 3:30 p.m. performances on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 22. Directed by David Aiken who atarred in the world premiere cast of Gian Carlo Menotti's now-classic work, "Amahl" will be staged with sets and costumes.

A Christmas special on the Young People's Concerts series will be 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. performances of Humperdinck's "Hansel & Gretel" on Saturday, Dec. 14, conducted by Josef Blatt and featuring the University of Michigan Opera-Ralph Herbert, stage director. Both performances have been sold out in advance.

Tickets for festival events are on sale now for $6, $4.50 and $3 at Ford Auditorium, and all Hudson's and Grinnell's tickets offices.

Film classes offered at EMU

Film production film theory will be added to broadcasting courses this winter at Eastern Michigan Univeristy. Radio and television courses also have been expanded to include the study of the third medium.

"We've had a great demand for film-making courses," says Henry Aldridge, assistant professor of speech and dramatic arts. "Now, students can take three courses in film."

Eastern also has a broadcasting minor which has been modified to accommodate film study. Students can now receive more hour-for- hour credit for work in that area.

"The introductory course has become two courses." Aldridge says. "One is a study of the nature of mass media in America and the other is strictly a production course."

The production facilities of Eastern's FM radio station, WEMU, were moved recently freeing a large area for use as an instructional facility.

FLOYD AND EMMA Saley on the set of "Two by Two." (Photo by Mitchell Booth).

By SUE ROSIEK

A helping hand is always welcome on the set of a community theater production. Because of their low budget plays, new volunteers are being constantly recruited, and once they get a taste of theater life many have stayed.

Emma and Floyd Saley of Livonia offered their services to the Theater Guild of Livonia-Redford some 13 years ago and enjoyed it so much they never left.

According to the Saleys, community theater has gone from their individual hobby to a family activity. The Saley children, Noelle, 13, and Buddy, 11, also enjoy working on theater productions.

MRS. SALEY has put her creative talents to work on costumes and set decorations. She recently dyed all the materials, designed and sewed the costumes for the eight characters in the guild's latest play, "Two by Two."

Mrs. Saley estimates she worked about two months preparing for opening night, and even then her job wasn't finished.

"The costuming for a play begins immediately after the show is cast, and there's always a few odds and ends to be completed on opening night," says Mrs. Saley.

Her husband says it took about four weeks to complete the set painting. The set construction also posed a problems for the stage crew.

"The rigging of the water for Noah's ark and the special effects were pretty tricky manuevers," recalls Saley, "and as a result took a lot more time and hands."

SALEY, AN ENGINEER at Ford Motor Co., says the theater group lets him put his practical and creative talents to good use.

Saley, a member of the Livonia Arts Commission, has always worked on backstage projects. He has served as technical director for several other theater groups in the metropolitan area.

Mrs. Saley's costume credits with the Livonia-Redford group include "Guys and Dolls," "Destry Rides Again," "The King and I," and "The Apple Tree." She also works on tickets, ushering and makeup whenever she's needed.

She has sewn costumes for 33 guild productions and is never seen without her needle and thread. She is a sewing instructor and is currently enrolled in a cermaics class.

THE SALEY children have also participated in guild productions in acting roles and behind the scenes jobs.

Noelle often helps her father paint scenery. She was cast in the guild musical "Bye Bye Birdie," but got sick and had to drop out. She is currently studying piano and ballet and hopes to put her talent to good use in the theater.

Buddy, a student at Jefferson Elementary School has played in "Huck Finn," and "The King and I." He also offers his father a painting hand whenever needed.

"Once the children are old enough to participate, it's great to channel the family's creative abilities into something that we can work together on," says Saley.

"There are so many things to done in a theater group, we'll never run out of jobs to keep this family busy," smiles Mrs. Saley.

Other local families involved in the recent musical "Two by Two" included Shirley Hulet, who appeared as Esther; her husband, Ross, who served as co-chiarman of set construction; Ruth McGlone, assistant director and stage manager; her husband, Charles, who helped paint the set; Barbara Foster, in charge of membership and tickets; andher husband, Corky, who assisted in set construction.

Arts group receives grant

The Wayne-Westland Arts Association has received a $4,000 grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts that will be used to produce a community resource survey and a monthly local arts newsletter and calendar of events.

The association plans to survey some 37,000 residents to find out what arts activities people are participating in, what local resources are available to those interested in the arts, and what type of arts projects do local residents enjoy.

The survey is designed to help the association to determine its goals and projects for the future, according to Don Toms, association board member and grants chairman.

The calendar project will be geared toward collecting and disseminating information of local meetings, performances and activities concerning fine arts to the Wayne-Westland community.

The 14-member board of directors is currently setting up committees to work on these and other projects in 1975. Anyone interested in participating should contact one of the following persons:

Grants projects: Don Toms, Wayne Westland Community Schools, membership: Eleanor F. Arrwood, 35746 Elm, Wayne; treasurer James Dupree, 34529 Brockwood, Westland; bicentennial: Thomas Wilson, St. John Episcopal Church, Westland, or special projects: Muriel VanPatten, Wayne Westland Community Schools.

U-M features instrument display

The University of Michigan's Stearns collection of musical instruments recently moved out of Hill Auditorium into the Frederick Stearns Building, open from 1 to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday

The display includes an assortment of polished Medieval and Baroque trumpets, bizarre stringed instruments and saxophones (one made by Sax himself). Also a 75-year-old Estey organ newly restored, ceramic and glass flutes, walking canes which can be used a fiddle and flutes, and an assortment of keyboard instruments and harps.

Many of the instruments are used in various ensemble for the U-M School of Music's programs.

The Stearns collection, now numbering 2,000 items, was started by Detroit philanthropist and pharmaceutical manufacturer Frederick Stearns. It was presented to the university in 1899.

Tours are available upon request by calling Ann Day at the Stearns Building, U-M North Campus, Ann Arbor, 48105. Tours may also be scheduled through the visitor and guest relations office, 6044 administration building. Museum hours apply only when U-M schools are in regular session.

Choir offers Yule concert in Redford

The Village United Presbyterian Church Choir will perform its annual Christmas concert of the Redford Township Music Society and Redford Civic Symphony Orhcestra on Sunday, Dec. 15 at 3 p.m. in Thurston High School, Schoolcraft west of Beech Daly Road.

The concert choir, under the direction of Rodger Pillips, will perform traditional Christmas music and carols. The Madrigal Youth Club Choir and the Handbell Choir will also be featured. Soloist will be Melvin Beckner singing "O Holy Night," by Adophe Adam. The Rev. James A. Crawford wil speak on "One Solitary Life."

Actual art succeeds over slides

By PATRICIA BEACH SMITH

It took four jurors three days to jury 146 art works into the three-fold "Michigan Focus—The Exhibition for Michigan Artists."

During those three days, Syzanne Delehanty, Henry Hopkins, Lester Johnson and Robert PincusWitten looked through 3,400 works brought to the gathering spot by more than 1,400 artists.

Despite the task created as a result of juring from actual works instead of slides, Suzanne Hilberry, coordinator of the show and curatorial assistant in modern art, said it was worth it.

"It was very arduous, but we'll do it again. This Michigan show has always been critiized because it was juried through slides. There was a tremendous response as a result of our wanting to see the actual works," Ms. Hilberry said.

She said that more than 800 artists brought the works on the last day of collection.

HOUSING THESE works was a problem and Ms. Hilberry said the burden of the responsibility fell on the shoulders of the Detroit Institute of Arts (DIA) because its staff is larger and physically closer than the other two museums who are sharing the exhibit.

All the sculpture is at the DIA. The paintings are at the Flint Institute of Arts, and the graphic works are in the Grand Rapids Art Musuem.

"As a result of this type of judging, the show is stronger and more original. There is a great adventuresome energy in Michigan art which cannot be seen in slides," Ms. Hilberry said.

The catalogue for the show illustrates each work in the entire three-part exhibition. It also contains biographical data on each artist.

"It was intended to be a real catalogue, a visual representation of the show, not just something to hand out. It is part of a long range plan to sort of systematize making a list of working Michigan artists, Ms. Hilberry explained.

THROUGH A $9,800 grant from the Michigan Council for the Arts, the catalogue was made. Other monies totaling $10,000 were used for awards.

This money was contributed by several groups and individuals including the Detroit Art Dealers Association, Detroit Artists Market, the participating art museums, Friends of Modern Art, and Smith, Hynchman & Grylls.

IT'S HARD TO KNOW whether to laugh or cry when you come face to face with Santa Claus. (Staff photo by Mitchell Booth)

'She's been talking about Santa for months, but I know she'll scream.' (She did.)

That Santa visit-- treat or trauma?

•BY SHERRY KAHAN

Santa was on coffee break, but most of the parents and children waiting in line to see him are very patient.

There were a few exceptions.

"Chuckie, stop it," says a mother to her son. Waiting at the rear of the line, Chuckie is crying and seems totally uninterested in standing still amid people who were only legs to one of his size.

An eight-year-old boy and his six-year-old sister bound forward to the long-anticipated meeting. But not their four-year-old younger brother.

Pushed by his mother to Santa's knees, he sets up a wail and strains away from the white-bearded fellow. Mom pushes him back, but he bends toward her, bawling loudly.

Finally she accepts him, scooping him up and carrying him past his brother and sister, who are chatting happily with Santa. When they catch up to him, his sister says, "You were the only one who cried."

THIS IS THE PATTERN of the day. Those of school age usually walk up to Santa as though he were a valued old friend. A few, though, turn their heads away or shield their eyes as though facing a blinding light.

Perhaps because their school experience has matured them, or possibly because they no longer believe in Santa, the older ones are able to handle it.

"I'm glad I'm not up there with her," says a mother watching her husband approach Santa with their small daughter. "She's been talking about Santa for months, but I know she'll scream."

This prophecy comes true a moment later. The tot makes it all the way to Santa's knees. His long arms reach out to pull her onto his lap, but she flees to Dad, starting to wail.

Together with Dad they march forward. A toy is offered the child by Santa, but the child pushes it away. Her mother then thrusts her in Santa's direction, but she thrusts her little body back. Mom waits a minute and then sets her on Santa's lap, all the time talking about what fun it is going to be.

AN EXCEPTION occurs occasionally. A tiny girl bounces up to the great man, sits on his knee, babbles a while and then gives him a big kiss. It must have made his day.

DO YOU REMEMBER Chuckie? There he is with his mother and her friend about 10 children away from Santa. He's still crying. He tries to collapse to the floor and his mother yanks him to his feet. Once up, he tries to pull away toward an exit, any exit. This standing quietly in a crowd is not his cup of milk.

John is standing off a little way from the line of children. His mother calls over to his grandparents standing nearby. "He's not going," she says. "I stood in line all this time and he's not going."

Then he bursts into tears. "He wants to go back," his mother cries. "I stood in line an hour and a half and now he wants to go back."

A THREE YEAR-OLD GIRL is waiting, her tiny tummy protruding beneath her pink smock. Three times she starts off to Santa, each time being restrained by an attendant because she must wait her turn.

When the time comes, she follows her older brother, who climbs up to Santa's lap. Her father places her on the other side. In no time flat she slides down and returns to her father. He pushes her back.

CHUCKIE IS STILL kicking and pulling as he finds himself in the front of the line after an hour of waiting. It looks as though there is about to be another disaster in the life of the long-suffering gentleman in the red suit.

Chuckie walks forward with his mother and is lifted to Santa's lap. He sits there like a blond angel. He smiles and talks to Santa. He smiles and talks to Santa's attendants.

The rehearsal for the junior high Christmas concert was called for Wednesday night, and that meant yet another postponement of the birthday celebration planned for that evening.

No one should have been surprised. We've found it next to impossible this year to celebrate birthdays or anything else on time. This one actually occurred Nov. 6, but Thanksgiving had passed before we managed a family party.

The special treat this week was to have been a present from our birthday girl's college student sister who couldn't be home when the rest of us extended best wishes.

FOR YEARS WE'VE ALL been accustomed to not having birthday parties right on the natal day. With a father who works evenings, the girls have learned to wait a day or two.

But with the departure of one family member for campus life and the increasing involvement of everyone else in assorted activities, the wait is longer now.

Our standard method of celebration is to have the birthday girl choose the dinner menu as well as receiving gifts.

That month there are two birthdays on successive days, and we still have to get in that celebration postponed this week. No chance until then.

THANKSGIVING WAS LATE at our house this year, too. (The trick-or-treaters made certain we celebrated Halloween on the proper date.)

The reason for the late Turkey Day feast was that the man of our house was scheduled to work on the holiday. It certainly fitted, though, into our delayed-reaction pattern.

—Margaret Miller

Sale supports area Birthright

Christmas trees made of velvet ribbon and tiny crocheted flowers in apothecary jars are among the unusual items that will be for sale in the bazaar sponsored by Birthright of Western Wayne County Saturday, Dec. 14.

The sale to raise funds to support the organization's area headquarters in Garden City will be from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. in the Thomas A. Dooley Knights of Columbus Hall, Joy Road between Middle Belt and Inkster.

"It's the last of several craft sales we're holding as fund-raisers," said Marie Gonzales, leader in the organization that seeks to offer counseling and help in problem pregnancies.

Money raised will be used, she said, for rental of the office at Middle Belt and Ford and office facilities and supplies to keep the counseling service going.

MEMBERS HAVE BEEN working at weekly meetings all year to get a wide variety of craft items ready, said Cecilia Barna of Redford Township, bazaar chairman.

"A lot of our offerings are different than what we have seen in other bazaars we visited," she added.

Mrs. Barna has contributed most of the crocheted flowers in jars, an accessory that will sell for $5.50 and $6.

Offered at $5 will be antique bottles made by a 12-step process, she said. The most expensive things on sale will be $12 crocheted ponchos and baby blankets for $10.

"We'll have a children's table where nothing costs more than 75 cents and some items are as little as a quarter," Mrs. Gonzales said, "and there also will be a table especially for senior citizens on limited budgets. The things for sale there will be $2 or less."

MRS. GONZALES SAID the Birthright center in Garden City now is handling up to 175 clients, with about three or four new ones calling each week.

"We've been able to inform more people of our work," she said, "and that is bringing in more women with problem pregnancies."

BY MARGARET MILLER

"My hair will come back in six months or so,

The bittersweet couplet ends a poem written by a teen-aged boy who had leukemia and was losing his hair because of chemotherapy.

And it epitomizes, in the mind the Rev. James Meyer, chaplain at Children's Hospital in Detroit, the spirit of many terminally-ill children he has known.

FR. MEYER TALKED about critically-ill children and their parents when he participated in a seminar on death and dying sponsored by the Western Wayne Vicariate Adult Education program.

"Does a child who is dying know he is dying?" Fr. Meyer quoted the question he often is asked. "Just about always he does, if he's five or so or older.

"How could he not know? His hair falls out, or he's the only kid on the corridor who receives an autographed football from the Detroit Lions.

"But he may not want to talk about it, and in that case I tend to be conservative and wait until he is ready."

In working with children with terminal illness, the chaplain said, "you walk a narrow corridor between false hope and giving the idea that the child is already dead— useless in this life."

"You don't keep telling him he'll feel better tomorrow," he added, "but you must be sure not to separate him from life, to keep the learning experience going."

FR. MEYER DISCUSSED ways to help the parents of ill and dying children as well as the youngsters themselves.

In any of these relationships, he emphasized, there is no one right way to act or one right thing to say.

That was the case, he related, when a little boy who had been badly burned died on Easter Sunday. "I went down to Children's Hospital," he remembered, "and as I sat with the boy's mother I felt the challenge to say something but no words would come. Later she thanked me for just being there."

Charlie had a blood disease that was diagnosed when he was six months old and he died on his 19th birthday, the Chaplain said.

"Of course he knew he would die, but he never wanted to talk about it," the chaplain said. "We discussed many things in our long conversations.

"And when he died, it was with great dignity. Although he could hardly breathe, he was still trying to eat to keep life going."

RALPH ALSO KNEW his tumor was incurable, Fr. Meyer said, but his family thought Ralph did not know so the little boy was going along with them.

"But what happened was that he reached the point where he had so blocked the matter out of his mind that he did not recognize relatives who came to see him," the priest added.

"His father realized he had to talk to him about it but could not find the words. Then Ralph asked, 'Dad, are you trying to tell me I'm going to die?'

IN WORKING WITH PARENTS, the chaplain said, you have to keep in mind that they never are prepared for death, even in the case of a long illness, and that they always will feel guilt.

"One mother I knew is an extremely capable registered nurse," he said, "but when her two-year-old died, even though she had known there was no hope for recovery, she went to pieces."

And feelings of guilt, he said, can't be brushed off with a brusque "It's not your fault."

"I'm inclined to let all these feelings come out," he said, "and then the parent usually can work out in his own mind that his actions were not the cause of death."

FR. MEYER COMMENTED, somewhat sadly, that "a chronic complaint from parents is that once a child is diagnosed as being in the process of dying, the doctor stops coming."

"Everybody stops coming," added a member of the audience. "I think it has to do with the fear of death that is in everyone."

Fr. Meyer said the often-expressed opinion that "it's a private time and the family wants to be alone" just doesn't jibe with his experience.

"Usually they want someone else there, even though they may not be up to much reaction," he said.

THE SPEAKER also touched on the problems of explaining loss through death to very young children.

"It's good to discuss the general matter of death with children before a crisis occurs," he said. "We talk of sex now, but we still are afraid to talk about death.

"But it should be discussed as a part of life, and children's questions should be answered honestly."

When small children worry about the death of someone close to them, a couple of things should be emphasized.

"One is that death is permanent— he won't wake up some morning and find the person there," the chaplain said. "And the other is that death is most unusual—it's not at all likely to happen to him or another person he loves.

"Also, we should be sure to make it clear to small children that hospitals are not places you go to die."

Fr. Meyers said there is a group of parents called First Sunday that meets regularly. "This group is composed of parents who each other support."

Parents in this area interested in the group may call Fr. Meyers at Children's Hospital in Detroit.

Santa will be luncheon guest

Baker-Gennara rites in St. Raphael

Barbara L. Gennara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gennara of Schoolcraft Road, Livonia, became the bride of Fred Baker in a recent afternoon ceremony in St. Raphael Catholic Church, Garden City.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred L. Baker of Dearborn. Officiating for the rites was the Rev. Robert T. Kerr, and the bride was given in marriage by her father.

She wore an ivory silk organza gown with lace bodice and cuffs and a camelot cap with fingertip veil. Her flowers were white roses, carnations and baby's breath

Gail Gennara of Dearborn Heights was maid of honor for her sister, and the bridesmaids were three other sisters, Mrs. Sue Guill, Mrs. Connie Ruff and Mary Gennara, all of Livonia, and Chris O'Bierne of Westland.

All wore floor-length apricot polyester gowns with ivory lace trim and wide-brimmed hats in the same shade. Each carried three apricot carnations.

The best man was Jerry Baker of Melvindale, brother of the bridegroom, and the ushers were Jim Frank of Garden City, Gene Jones of Dearborn Heights, Mike Rushing of Melvindale and Larry Canning of Kalamazoo.

MR. AND MRS. FRED BAKER
(Barbara L. Gennara)

For the reception in the Dearborn Heights VFW Hall, the bride's mother created a four-tier wedding cake with a waterfall fountain and trimmed with tiny apricot rosebuds.

The couple honeymooned at Niagara Falls and will live in Dearborn Heights. The bride is a 1968 graduate of Bentley High School and a secretary for the Ford Motor Co. The bridegroom, a 1963 graduate of Lowry High School in Dearborn, works as salesman for a food company.

Rep. Edith Green differs with HEW

Although she is author of Title IX of the Higher Education Act which is intended to prohibit sex discrimination in education, Rep. Edith Green (D-Ore.) disagrees with the way it is being administered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

"I drafted the provisions of Title IX and sometimes am inclined to deny its parentage," she said during a recent lecture at the University of Michigan.

Rep. Green said the legislation was never intended to integrate organizations such as boy scouts and girl scouts, fraternities and sororities.

It was not intended to force integration of physical education classes and was not intended to foster establishment of quotas in admissions or among faculty.

FOR GOVERNMENT officials to use provisions of the legislation to enforce quotas and blanket integration, she added, "is the crudest form of mindless interference."

"I feel strongly about ending all discrimination on the basis of race or sex," said Rep. Green. "I intended to direct HEW that there be no discrimination in admissions policies, that there be equal pay for male and female professors, that there be equal promotions and job opportunities — the end of the old boy syndrome and insider promotions.

"It was never my intent — or that of the committee or the Congress — to include all organizations in a universal integration policy."

"There are girls, for example, who are better off in a girls' physical education class just as there are boys better off in a boys' class. To assume otherwise is an absurd interpretation of the law."

REP. GREEN said she objected to establishment of quotas to regulate admissions and employment standards "because decisions about people then are not made on merit and there can be little hope in such a rigid system."

Older women have lowest income, new booklet shows

The poorest group of people in America are 7.5 million older women, half of whom exist on an income of less than $1,888, according to a booklet recently published by the Institute of Gerontology.

These older women who are employed earn only 57 per cent of the average wages for males of the same age, points out the booklet, "No Longer Young," which is the work of more than 800 persons who attended the 28th annual conference on aging held last year at the University of Michigan.

The booklet consists of highlights of the 17 work group reports from the conference sponsored by the Institute of Gerontology, a joint unit of the U-M and Wayne State University.

"AFTER 45, women are no longer needed as breeders, factory workers, pampered housewives or sex objects" writes Natalie Trager, conference co-coordinator.

"Sociologists and feminists have argued that because of the pill, all this will change. But it is a moot point for today's middle-aged woman," she says. "She must deal with her life as it is, not as it could or should be in the future."

The conference workshops were designed to help older women adjust to these realities. The workshop group that discussed "Sexuality and Alternative Life Styles" concluded that, contrary to popular belief, women lose neither their interest nor capacity for sex as they grow old.

A WORKSHOP on psychotherapy determined that many women over 50 are likely candidates for long-term counseling. "Particularly the rising number of middle-aged women who are abandoned by successful husbands."

A workshop on continuing education concluded that for most older women, college enrollment is impeded by self-doubt.

"Women are ususally encouraged to be intellectually lazy, to consider themselves gifted with 'intuition' but not with logic," the participants explained.

Significantly, they stressed the importance of emotional support needed by the older woman who returns to school, particularly from her husband.

TWO WORKSHOPS on careers and retirement suggested that retirement is less threatening to women than to men. Many participants indicated that since paid employment always came secondary to domestic duties, older women can go on feeling useful even though one phase of their productivity is terminated.

A workshop report on "Literature and Myths" explores the shallow and stereotyped portrayals of old women in 19th century British and American fiction.

"Advertising in particular promotes the unrealistic image that all female consumers are aged 18-49, middle class and obsessed with cleaning house and looking younger," the report said.

"No Longer Young" may be ordered from the Institute of Gerontology, 543 Church, Ann Arbor. It costs $1.95.

DR. BARTLETT L. HESS (right) accepts his award from Ivan Hamel, president of the Mid-America Sunday School Association.

Dr. Hess is named pastor of the year

Approximately 500 representatives of churches in Michigan and states as far away as Texas attended the meetings in Troy and were present for the awards.

Also honored were a Sunday school superintendent of the year, director of Christian education of the year and church of the year.

DR. HESS, a native of Spokane, Wash., has bachelor and master's degrees and a doctorate in modern history from the University of Kansas.

He started preaching at the age of 19, ministering to churches in Missouri and Kansas while in school.

He served churches in Chicago and Cicero, Ill., before coming to the Detroit area as pastor of Ward Memorial Presbyterian Church in the northwest part of the city.

In 1968, when the Livonia congregation changed its status from that of outreach mission of Ward Memorial to that of separate church, it called Dr. Hess as its first pastor.

Ward Church of Livonia now has nearly 2,200 members.

DR. HESS and his wife, Margaret, have traveled extensively, especially in the Mid-East and the Holy Land. They have conducted four tours of Bible lands and have visited the Far East twice.

BY MARGARET MILLER

The familiar Christmas story goes contemporary and multi-media in the presentation scheduled by Newburg United Methodist Church of Livonia Sunday, Dec. 15, at 4 p.m.

But in preparation for the program, some 200 children in the church school may have come closer than ever before to the scene in Bethlehem nearly 2,000 years ago.

Like the people described in the Bible, they have known the inside of a stable, only they called it a barn. They smelled hay like that in which the Christ child slept, and came close, some for the first time, to barnyard animals like those that were part of the first Christmas scene.

SCENES SUCH AS THIS view of the townspeople at the time of Jesus' birth will be part of the film made of children of Newburg United Methodist Church for their Christmas program.

ALL THIS HAPPENED as the children, directed by the Rev. Duane Snyder, associate minister, took part in some film-making at the Plymouth Community Schools farm on Joy Road west of Plymouth high Schools.

Instead of working with the customary stage props in a dramatic presentation of the nativity story, Rev. Snyder arranged to have the children taken to the farm to reenact the story in a natural setting.

Pictures of the farm visits, both slides and movies, and tapes of the story in song and drama, are being put together into the program to be presented Sunday in the sanctuary of the church at 36500 Ann arbor Trail.

Also part of that program will be biblical narrative by Rev. Snyder and the Rev. William A. Ritter, senior minister, and music by the church's youth choirs and the congregation.

REV. SNYDER SAID the filming was done with a great deal of help from Daniel Sandmann, supervisor of the Plymouth school farm.

"Also, the congregation was extremely supportive," he said. "More than 60 parents helped get the children to the farm and have become very interested in the project. I think they are as excited as the kids about the results of the picture-taking."

THE PRODUCTION is the result of an integrated effort on the part of several of the learning centers that comprise the church's Christian education program, Rev. Snyder explained.

The filming center, headed by Linda Stubbe and Jessie Berryman, headed arrangements for the film-making, with Dennis McGregor, William Berryman and Lyle Gibbs serving behind the cameras.

Music is provided by the music center, headed by Sue Emmett and Marlys Campe, and the church youth choirs, directed by Dottie Van Marter. Newburg organist Clara Walker will help furnish music for the Sunday production.

Other learning centers that contributed to the production are the story-telling center, headed by Larry Johnson and Kathy Gooze, providing the script, and the costumes center, involving the efforts of Dot Atwell, Paula Galsson, Tony Walding and Judy Stewart. Robert Emmett taped the show.

ALSO PART of the Sunday program will be a puppet show that will tell the Christmas story in still another way. Della Neuman and Charlotte French are in charge of the puppetry learning center.

The pictures will be shown as part of birthday parties for Jesus, scheduled for sessions at both 9:30 and 11 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 22.

"We'll have birthday cakes and blow out the candles and sing 'Happy Birthday' that day," Rev. Snyder said.

Candlelight service to tell Christmas story

The chancel choir of the Livonia Christian Church will present the cantata, "The Story of Christmas" by H. R. Evans, at a candlelight vesper service Sunday, Dec. 15 at 7 p.m. in the church at 36075 Seven Mile.

The choir will be under the direction of Mrs. Mary Lou Bark, and the organ will be played by Mrs. Gwen Jackson. A trumpet introit will feature Wayne Carrel, Pat Jeffrey and Reggis Czeck.

Robin Rickard will appear as Mary, and Paul Grisdale will be Joseph during the manger scene. Wise men will be Phillip Keasthley, David Pennell and John Rickard. Shepherds will be Kevin Schnarr and Brian Pennell.

Angels will be played by Connie Pennell, Susan Grisdale, Debbie Van Heyningen and Melinda McKinley.

The Stroller

Looking at that inflated dollar bill

By W. W. EDGAR

If we are headed into a depression as purveyors of doom and gloom predict, it will be a new experience even for the oldest among us.

It will be new because we will be struggling with an inflated dollar—something we didn't even know about back in 1929 when the nation's banks closed. And further back, right after World War I, the inflated dollar was only a figment of someone's imagination.

It so happens that The Stroller survived all of these setbacks in the economy. For that reason, some younger folks who are looking to the future with fear in their hearts keep asking:

"What will we do?"

It used to be that when "hard times" were predicted the common reaction was to comment, "Well, I guess we'll have to live on beans."

But the public prints carried the shocking news the other morning that the lowly bean was selling for 79 cents a pound and may be out of reach for the lower income families.

THAT'S THE RESULT of the inflated dollar.

"How was it in your younger days?" The Stroller often is asked and "what do you mean by the 'hard' dollar?"

On the fateful day, years ago, when The Stroller had to leave school to join the work force and help support the family, his kind, old mother consoled him with the remark that just because he was leaving school it didn't mean he had to stop learning.

"Learn a trade," she said, "and what you have in your head no one will steal from you."

So, The Stroller, then only 14, was accepted as an apprentice in the largest machine shop back home. And his wages—would you believe it?— were five and one-half cents an hour.

That was it—55 cents for a 10 hour work day, and he had to pay 10 cents car fare and carry his lunch.

Many a time he laughs now when he looks back and recalls that when the pay car pulled up alongside the shop every two weeks he would climb aboard and collect an envelope containing an average of $7.60.

The second year was a bit different. When a fellow reached that point, his wages went to 65 cents a day, with 85 cents the third, and $1 a day for the fourth year.

THE STROLLER stuck it out for the four years, and when he qualified as a full fledged journeyman machinist, the top wages being paid were 22½ cents an hour on the day shift. This was boosted to 25 cents an hour if a fellow would accept the 13-hour night shift.

The Stroller took the night shift because the family needed the extra pennies. That meant he would draw $3.25 for each night or $16.25 for the five night week.

Along about this time, defense plants started booming and The Stroller, at the urging of an uncle, moved to the giant Bethlehem Steel Co. plant. The word giant is used advisedly as the shop was almost a half mile long and seven stories high.

On the morning he passed the qualifying test and was hired he asked, "What is the machinist rate?"

"You'll see when you get your time card tomorrow night," the foreman answered.

The young mechanic couldn't wait until he could see that card on reporting the next evening. And you can imagine his feeling when he saw the rating— Class A, 48 cents per hour plus piece work, plus bonus. This was the highest rate in the shop.

But can you imagine, his wages were doubled, yet he was drawing only 48 cents an hour— a rate the scrub women of today would spurn.

THAT IS WHAT is meant by the "'hard' dollar of those days when there was no such thing as a minimum wage law or unemployment compensation. And it is why working with the inflated dollar will be a new experience for all of us if, and when a depression comes.

There is one thing to be said. We will survive—we always have. So, have no fear. It will be a most valuable experience and give us a new sense of values.

Townships may sue for adequate protection

By RICHARD GOLD

Seven townships in western Wayne County have taken the county to court to get more protection from the sheriff's patrol.

The townships of Plymouth, Canton, Sumpter, Huron, Brownstown, Northville, and Van Buren have been embroiled in a fight with the county for the last four years for more policing.

The townships are protected by the sheriff's patrol and the state police, but all seven maintain current service is inadequate.

Presently, the county assigns 28 men to cover the 200-square mile area, or approximately three cars per shift. According to Undersheriff Loren Pittman, however, sometimes the road patrol is reduced to two cars per shift due to the lack of manpower.

IN 1970, the board of commissioners determined they no longer wanted to maintain protection for the townships. Consequently, they funded police protection for nine months and forced the township supervisors into complaining all summer before financing services for the last three months of the year.

This year the supervisors didn't complain. Instead they hired attorney Louis Wechsler who filed for an injunction to prevent the county from withdrawing the sheriff's protection when funds expired at the end of August. Wechsler went before Wayne County Circuit Court Judge Thomas Foley and won his suit on Aug. 28.

Five days later, the county allocated $120,000 to the sheriff's department for the remaining three months of 1974.

BUT THE supervisors were not satisfied. They asked Wechsler to get a declaratory judgement from the court, which would, in essence, avoid a suit while getting a policy statement on the matter from the judge.

Attorneys for the county argued that there was no need for a policy statment from the court because the county had funded the road patrol for the rest of 1974. They contended the point was moot.

When the 1975 budget was accepted by the County Board of Comissioners in early November, the commissioners resolved "not to cut back on services to the townships." But when the Ways and Means Committee of County Board of Commissioners met the following week, they suggested that only $350,000 be appropriated to the sheriff for 1975, effectively reducing funds by 25 per cent. In 1974 they had allocated $470,000 for the same purposes.

RECOGNIZING that the board had vowed not to reduce services, the Ways and Means Committee appointed a select subcommittee to study the problem and develop "recommendations on how to implement the activites of the road patrol" in view of the cutback.

Last week the subcommittee submitted its recommendations. They suggested that an additional $20,000 be granted to the patrol for January and February. But they also suggested that the townships chip in $90,000.

This did not satisfy the township supervisors or Wechsler, and they will file an amended complaint in January alleging that current service is inadequate and asking for specific service guidelines.

WECHSLER explains that the new complaint is more potent. "The old complaint asked for a restraining order to prevent a pullout and funding cut, but that complaint could have been interpreted to mean the current level of protection received by the townships was adequate."

The amended complaint will state that the current level of police service the townships receive is "grossly inadequte and that a reasonable level of protection should be established and adhered to." Wechsler explains that this effort will avoid setting funding guidelines and will instead place the emphasis on service, "where it should be."

"You see," he said, "the state says that by law the county has to provide police protection, but they don't say how much. This new complaint will ask the judge to say how much."

Wechsler will cite federal guidelines as evidence. If those guidelines were imposed on Wayne County, the sheriff's patrol would have to be beefed up "10-fold."

ROBERT GREENSTEIN, Canton supervisor, indicates that the amended complaint will bring more pressure to bear on the county. He says, "Before they had nothing to lose, because we were asking for a maintenance of service, but now we're asking for more service and this will mean they stand to lose something!"

Greenstein hopes this added pressure will force the county to take the townships seriously enough to negotiate an out-of-court settlement.

The Sheriff's Department wants to increase service to the townships. Undersheriff Loren Pittman said, "We'd like to serve the townships more fully but we don't have the money." Chief of the road patrol, Inspector Dick Novak concurred. "It's hard to get money these days, but the townships need more protection. The county just hasn't recognized the tremendous amount of growth out there." Novak also says that service to the townships has decreased in the last decade. He would like to see at least five cars per shift, although he added " that would be traveling light."

Adults get degrees

Adults can begin earning a four-year bachelor's degree without attending regular classes or going through a lengthy registration process when Wayne State University's University Studies and Weekend College program opens the winter quarter Jan. 6.

More than 1,000 adults are expected to take advantage of the program which allows students to take 48 hours of college credit each year, getting a degree in four years and not interrupting a fulltime work schedule.

TV COURSES are carried on Channel 56 on weekday mornings and evenings and repeated on weekends.

Workshops, small discussion groups of 12-20 students, meet once a week with an instructor at convenient locations.

Weekend conferences are held on Wayne's campus and meet once or twice each quarter.

Individual counseling and special tutorial services are available throughout the school year.

THE PROGRAM, which is a department of WSU's College of Lifelong Learning, consists of one year of social science or urban studies, one year of science and technology, one year of urban humanities and a fourth year of advanced studies.

The first three years can be taken in any sequence—and must be completed before taking the advanced studies year. Credits from other institutions are transferable and may be applied to any of the first three years of study.

The curriculum is approved for veterans, and many companies and unions underwrite costs through their educational assistance programs.

EACH TV course offered this quarter offers four hours of credit. The half-hour "classes" begin Jan. 6 and run 12 weeks.

Classes offered include "Work and Labor," a study of work and the labor movement in American society; "Shadows on the Wall," the development of the motion picture art in America and "Science and Ecology."

Rails received warm welcome in Plymouth

PLYMOUTH—PAST AND PRESENT
by Sam Hudson

The two railroads which crisscrossed at Plymouth in 1871 received a warm welcome. Prior to the building of the railroads, local business and civic leaders, replete with bushy beards and high silk hats, were in high spirits as they assembled at Shearer's Cut.

The occasion was a tree-felling ceremony prior to the construction of the east-west railroad bed. In common with the rest of Plymouth's 975 residents, they were firm in the belief that the growth and prosperity of a village depended on a railroad—and Plymouth was to be blessed with two of them!

Railroads were good for business.

George Starkweather, prominent citizen, lawyer, storeowner and village official, was certain that the area adjacent to the railroad station would become the new business center of the community.

He built a brick building, still standing at the corner of Starkweather and Liberty, and moved his store from its location near Kellogg Park to what was to be the new bee-hive of activity. A few others followed, but upper village (often miscalled "lower town") never became the hub it was supposed to be.

RESIDENTS of Plymouth were no longer restricted to horse and buggy when they travelled. Detroit and Lansing were now within easy reach on the Detroit, Lansing and Lake Michigan, the new east-west railroad line, regardless of road and weather conditions.

The second railroad, the Holly, Wayne and Monroe, spearheaded by Jared Lapham of Northville, provided north-south service from Holly, on the north, to Monroe on the south.

The north-south station was built near the Daisy Air Rifle plant, behind what is now Kroger's Supermarket. It was situated at the end of Depot Street, now named Hamilton. About 1918, the station building, no longer in use after both railroads came under a single ownership, was moved to a spot in the back of McLaren's Coal and Lumber Yard, where it was used for hay storage. It was destroyed by fire a few years later.

THE EAST-WEST station, established on Starkweather (then called Oak Street) north of Liberty, has survived to the present day. The area near this depot provided work for many local residents during the years when Plymouth was a busy railroad center. Two local freight train crews tied up here every night. Crews from Grand Rapids and Toledo also patronized the two restaurants near the depot.

In 1916 the eating establishments were owned by Jake Streng, who advertised "meal or lunch at all hours—Special Sunday dinner;" and by Frank J. Pierce, whose ad promised that "you can get a lunch or warm meal at any time, day or night." Both restaurants had rooms above for railroad lodgers. The nearby Hotel Victor (later called the St. Anderine, and now the Nelson) also catered to railroad men.

Frank Pierce's service for railroad men who ate at his restaurant or lodged there was unique. They were provided with tickets which were punched as service was rendered. The money was then taken out of their pay by the railroad at the end of the month.

OWNERSHIP and names of the original railroads changed several times over the years. By 1890, when Silas Farmer wrote his "History of Detroit and Wayne County and Early Michigan," the east-west line was known as the Detroit, Lansing and Northern. Lapham's north-south line, the Holly, Wayne and Monroe Railroad, bogged down for lack of money and was taken over by the Flint and Pere Marquette. By 1898, the Flint and Pere Marquette was still operating here, but the east-west line was now called the Detroit, Grand Rapids and Western.

In 1900, after a merger with other railroads, the Flint and Pere Marquette became simply the Pere Marquette, and it now operated both of the lines which intersected at Plymouth. In 1951 the Pere Marquette, one of the oldest institutions in Michigan, with the greatest railway mileage of any line operating in the State, was absorbed by the Chesapeake and Ohio. The C & O now operates the railroad lines traversing Plymouth.

BY 1916, PLYMOUTH was a lively railroad center. Its facilities were surpassed by the big installations in Detroit, Grand Rapids and Saginaw, but they were large for a village the size of Plymouth. More than 100 local residents, all working in the community, were on the Pere Marquette's payroll.

A total of 30 men were employed in the round house, nine in the depot and freight house (which recently moved across the railroad tracks) and 40 as section men. The remainder worked in the yard office or as members of the switching crews. The total payroll was $7,763 a month, or an average of $74 per month per worker. Paychecks arrived at the local depot once a month.

Eighteen passenger trains rolled in and out of Plymouth four ways every 24 hours. A train from Toledo waited at the station to pick up passengers arriving from Detroit or Grand Rapids. A "hay fever special" stopped at Plymouth annually to pick up those who suffered from summer allergies for the trip to the pollen-free country in the north. An average of 60 cars of livestock were fed in the Plymouth yards every week.

Surveying all this, the Plymouth Mail, in its March 3, 1916 issue, concluded that "Pere Marquette officials are kindly disposed toward Plymouth...and Plymouth people are most kindly disposed toward the Pere Marquette and are always ready to show their appreciation for what they are doing for Plymouth."

(Part II will cover both the years in which the railroad was a major employer here, and the railroad crossing problem).

WESTLAND — About 60 students attending John Glenn High School in Westland will bring a bit of holiday cheer Dec. 17 to children of the Plymouth Center for Child Human Development in Northville.

The idea originated with the physiology students, many of whom are working part-time in area hospitals and medical institutions.

The party will be at the students' expense with the only cost to the district being a bus to transport them to the Center Tuesday morning.

They will bring cookies, punch and Chtistmas toys for a groupof 40 mixed adolescent physically and mentally handicapped patients. The advanced drama class will help with the entertainment, including singing of Christmas carols.

THIS BOY AND THIS GIRL ARE MISSING

This boy and this girl are missing out on a lot of things they could be having as carriers for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. They could be earning such things as money, merchandise prizes and tickets to special events.

But earning pocket money and winning special prizes are just two of the nice things that can happen to carriers. There are bigger advantages. A carrier goes into business for himself. At an early age, he or she learns how to get along with people. They do a bit of bookkeeping. They learn responsibility. They gain additional confidence.

Is your child missing out on these things? If one of your children is 12 years old or more, we suggest you get in touch with us, and hear about our carrier program.

Commission's goal: To help people get along

By SHERRY KAHAN

"He had no idea there was a law against this," said Nancy Liddle, new commission chairman.

"The commission then spoke with him and he ended the ban."

Conversations usually work, reported Mrs. Liddle.

"When citizens come to the commission with a specific problem, we try to solve it by an informal conversation between the interested parties. Usually we an of agreement

"ANOTHER GROUP of young people once came to us saying that some restaurants in Livonia require minimum purchases from their younger customers, but not for adults. We investigated and spoke to the owners and managers about it. In some cases, it was corrected."

Mrs. Liddle pointed out that the commission's charter from the city allows it various kinds of reconciling action — from informal conversations to formal hearings with testimony.

"If someone wanted to go the full route and file a grievance, the commission would conduct hearings," said Mrs. Liddle.

"All of us on the commission would like to see ourselves as persons hoping to make Livonia a more open, human, caring community," saidthe Rev. William Ritter of Newburg United Methodist Church, a commissioner.

Ritter said he has a fantasy about the commission — that a great many problems would be dumped in its lap and it would investigate and reconcile all of them.

"But I don't think this is the case now and I doubt it will be the case in the future," he said.

"It is romantic to see the role of the commission as running around putting out fires. Most discriminatory acts and most breakdowns in human relationships in place like Livonia are far more subtle than overt.

"This means our role has to be one of prevention of discrimination and of fostering strong human relationships."

The Human Relations Commission was formed 1965 as a result of pressure toward open housing legislation on the part of a private organization, called Livonia Citizens for Better Human Relations, said Phyllis Murch, a past commission chairman.

The city council created an official city human relations commission and passed an open housing ordinance.

The commission has illustrated its continuing interest in minority relations by creating a film library which includes mvies of varying lengths on human relationships across all lines of race, religion and age. Harriet Abramowitz headed the selection committee.

THE FILMS are designed for use by teachers, scout leaders and any interested group. They are at the Noble Library.

"We would also like to start a speakers' bureau with commission members making themselves available to community groups," said Rev. Ritter.

The clergyman himself could probably qualify as one of the speakers because of his own personal experience in inter-racial cooperation.

His church participated in an exchange with a black church in Detroit, Scott Memorial United Methodist Church, which involved an exchange of ministers and social events like an adult camping weekend.

"It worked very well for the year and a half we did it," said Rev. Ritter. "Many of the 'pal' families still maintain warm friendships with the people of Scott Memorial."

"In the past four years, age discrimination — against both the young and the old," have been our biggest concern," said Mrs. Liddle.

"This fall, the council created a committee on aging and a representative of our group was asked to serve on that committe and act as a liaison between us. He is Lester Waldman."

Mrs. Liddle also noted that the commission has helped draft an ordinance to prevent discrimination against the physically handicapped.

In a recent letter to the commission, Harry Tatigian, city attorney said the commission would receive complaints and investigate them as it does with other forms of discrimination.

Recognizing that Livonia's younger citizens are occasionally concerned with discrimination, the commission recently added two appointees under 22.

"TIM CARRICK and Mike Peacock have been interesting to have on the commission," said Mrs. Liddle. "They are capable, bright young men eager to do things. They will be valuable in representing the young viewpoint."

Mrs. Liddle and Rev. Ritter feel the comission's main job is to raise its low profile to a high one.

"Many people don't know we exist and we must make the community aware we are here," said Mrs. Liddle. "I think we're a reasonableand reliable group — we are made up of conservatives, liberals and and middle-of-the-roaders."

BLIGHTED CONDITIONS in low income housing must be eradicated and the housing maintained in good condition if suburban cities are to be eligible for federal funds under the Community Development Act of 1974.

Coalition to monitor cities on housing

A NEWS ROUNDUP

Citizen volunteers are being organized this week to serve as watchdogs on suburban governments to encourage compliance with the Housing and community Development Act of 1974.

The watchdogs are especially concerned about whether local municipalities meet requirements of the Act to plan for necessary low-and moderate-income housing.

Establishment of a volunteer corps was the topic of a meeting Monday afternoon attended by the housing action committee of the Metro Detroit League of Women Voters, Interfaith Action Council of Metro Detroit and the Michigan Committee on Law and Housing (MCLH), headquartered in Southfield.

This was a followup meeting for one MCLH held Nov. 26 in Southfield. Other watchdog groups at that meeting included Coordinating Council on Human Relations, Human Rights Department of the City of Detroit, Interfaith Centers for Racial Justice, NAACP Housing Committee and Coalition to End Discrimination in Housing.

Monitoring will be conducted under the banner of the Coalition for Block Grant Compliance (CBGC).

THE METRO LEAGUE of Women Voters has made a general commitment that its suburban member leagues will provide volunteers to monitor local Community Development Act (CDA) projects.

Watchdogs will monitor CDA grant applications in process involving $5 million in Livonia, $2.7 million in Southfield, $5 million in Westland, $585,000 in Garden City and $312,000 in Rochester.

The Community Development Act combines seven former revenue-sharing-type federal block grants. The new legislation involves federal funding for model cities, urban renewal and neighborhood development, water and sewer facilities, public facilities loans, open space, neighborhood facilities and rehabilitation loans.

The legislation has two significant features: an insistance on citizen input in the planning stages and a demonstration that the community is making plans to fulfill its needs for low-income housing. The CBGC is concerned with the latter requirement.

"Compliance with the law" is what monitors want to insure, explains Joe Guggenheim, MCLH executive director. Without special efforts being made, he explains, it would be easy for local governments to sidestep the law without it ever coming to the attention of the U.S. Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Department which administers the act.

A POSITIVE approach will be used first with volunteers appearing at local public hearings and asking what plans have been made for low-income housing.

These public inquiries will hopefully stimulate local governments to comply with the law, he adds. If compliance isn't forthcoming, the CBGC plans to report this failure to HUD. In some cases, legal action may be instituted.

"We would hope local government will comply with the law on its own initiative. If not, a positive reminder from citizen volunteers may encourage compliance while the city is still in the application stage.

"But if the law's requirements are ignored," Guggenheim continued, "then HUD will be informed by our watchdogs of this local non-compliance."

REGARDLESS OF what type of assistance is requested under the Community Development Act, the applicant must submit to HUD a survey of housing needs and a plan to meet those needs.

A city with substantial industry, for instance, must report whether it has adequate housing for factory employes. If the city has an industrial base, but workers commute to the factory, then the application must include a plan to provide some housing for workers.

If the city's zoning provides for a future commercial center then the application must indicate what the municipality's plan is to provide housing for retail employes.

Or if the community has housing units for senior citizens or other low-income residents, it must provide for the maintenance of its existing low-income housing to prevent urban blight.

Examples of each of the above cases exist in various Observer & Eccentric communities. Livonia, for instance, has a large commercial and industrial tax base and higher-priced residential homes with proportionately little low-income housing.

Southfield has a large commercial and office tax base and generally high-income housing with low-income housing scattered in areas which could become future blight spots. Farmington Hills, with high-income housing, already has a square-mile area of urban blight containing the largest concentrated poverty pocket in Oakland County.

Westland has an increasing commercial and industrial base, but also has a low-income housing area in NorWayne and other parts of the city. Keeping blight out of NorWayne, a post-war federal housing project, is a challenge for Westland.

Garden City, on the other hand, is a bedroom community consisting almost exclusively of low-income housing for factory workers, senior citizens, retail employes and young married couples. Its challenge is to provide more adequate housing for senior citizens, housing rehabilitation and development of a commercial industrial tax base.

Rochester has a mix of income levels housed on high tax-evaluated property. The city has an expanding commercial district and some light industrial development. Although still discussing priorities, its sites are aimed toward historical development and senior citizen housing.

The estimate of housing needs must include not only low-income families and the elderly, but also handicapped persons and those displaced or about to be displaced.

This survey must consider "any special needs found to exist in any identifiable segment of the total group of lower income persons." The municipality must have a "realistic annual goal for the number of dwelling units or persons to be assisted, including the relative proportion of new, rehabilitated and existing dwelling units, and the sizes and types of housing projects and assistance best suited to the needs of lower income persons."

The applicant also must report the general location where low-income housing is planned, if the city if deficient and the proposed location must "provide greater choice of housing opportunities and avoid undue concentrations of assisted housing in areas containing a high proportion of low income persons."

The act's goal is summarized by requiring municipalities to give "maximum feasible priority" to projects that benefit low- or moderate-income persons or help prevent or eliminate blight.

The law also requires each city to undertake affirmative action to "overcome the effects of prior discrimination" and to "overcome the effects of conditions which would otherwise result in limiting participation by persons of a particular race, color, national origin or sex."

THESE PURPOSES, however, could be only "paper" requirements if applicants avoid compliance.

Any "skirting" will be reported to HUD which can refuse to grant the funds or ask the U.S. Attorney General to sue for recovery of funds in cases where cities have already received planning or construction money from the federal government.

If the coalition is successful, Guggenheim concludes, the only way for these goals to be subverted is for cities to refuse to apply for federal funds.

Meanwhile, the watchdogs are organizing in this area. And it is a program which the Potomac Institute, a research agency in Washington D.C., has described as the best monitoring system in the U.S. What is in the making here may become a national model to make sure the law is followed throughout America.

COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT funds may be used for a storm sewer project but the drainage application must include a housing needs survey and housing remedy plan before drainage funds will be allocated.

GM executives spend week on MSU campus

After leading the life of Michigan State University students for a crowded week, two General Motors Corporation executives have some tentative suggestions on how to shorten the gap between the academic and the corporate worlds.

Michael V. Tierney, director of personnel and public relations at the Diesel Equipment Division in Grand Rapids, and L.B. Pryor, assistant general sales manager for Cadillac Motor Car Division in Detroit, will make formal reports to GM and MSU on their experiences and reactions. Two other GM officials will be in residence at MSU in January.

SOME BUSINESS-RELATED courses, said Tierney, might be incorporated into liberal arts study programs, and perhaps liberal arts students might benefit from field experiences in GM corporate offices.

He also suggested fairly regular meetings between corporate officers and recruiters and deans of liberal arts colleges could also facilitate understanding between academic and commercial institutions.

Pryor shared Tierney's reactions, and added the suggestion that women and minority employees in middle management visit campuses to answer students' questions abouts jobs in business during class sessions.

"There are plenty of openings in business and industry," Tierney said, "for nontechnical personnel, even though our recruiters who come to campus usually concentrate on the kinds of engineers they want."

The executive-in-residence program was designed by MSU Placement Services working with GM officials and several colleges within the university.

TIERNEY SPENT his week with students in James Madison College, a residential college on campus offering a four-year public policy program.

Pryor visited with students in Justin Morrill College, also a four-year residential college, but emphasizing international and cross-cultural studies.

Both Tierney and Pryor conventionally work an eight-hour day with GM. On campus, they began their day with 7 a.m. breakfast with students and placement officers. They had lunches and dinners with administrators, faculty and students both on and off campus.

During the days, they met with various administrative officials, faculty, students, student editors, and attended regular undergraduate classes and seminars. Evenings, they joined the students in recreation on and off campus.

Each evening when he returned to his dorm, Tierney was surprised to find that the classroom lights were still on and the students listening to lectures.

TIERNEY AND PRYOR said they were impressed with the seriousness of the students, who asked endless questions about career opportunities, required training and job descriptions.

Tierney said "women students wanted to know if they could get jobs as foremen—or forepersons. I guess you'd say." The answer the women got was, "Yes."

"Business is people," Pryor said, "we in GM promote equality programs both because of awareness and because of external pressures. Corporate administrators and stockholders, along with government, want better equality."

Both executives fielded questions about GM's "social responsibility." Tierney pointed out some 4,800 GM employes are engaged in a wide range of research. "Local executive programs also make worthwhile contributions to community endeavors and development."

Vol 2 No. 3 Supplement to The Observer & Eccentric Wednesday, December 11, 1974

Santa welcomes children to Briarwood

Children 12 years old and younger who visit the jolly, bearded gentleman and are accompanied by an adult will get a free coloring book and a free coupon for an ice cream sundae at Farrell's.

Daily visiting hours with Santa are Monday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sundays noon to 6 p.m. On Dec. 24, the red-suited fellow will come by at 10 a.m. but will have to leave at 5 p.m. to harness up the reindeer for his ride across the Earth.

Photos will be taken of the children visiting Santa. Although there is no obligation to buy them, the pictures make beautiful additions to parents' or grandparents' albums.

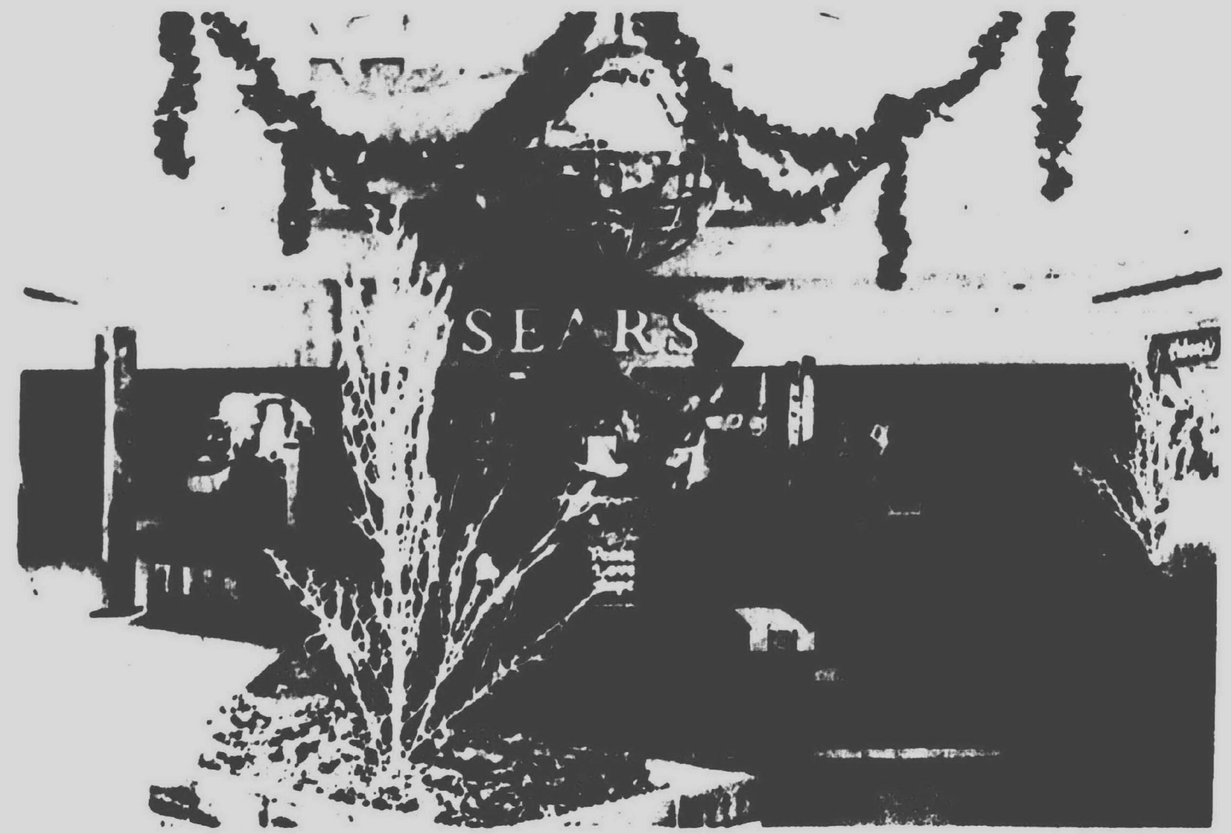
Santa's cottage is a fun place to visit with its dormered roof, shutters, brick chimney and crackling fireplace. The cottage is open on one side so parents can enjoy seeing their children visit with Santa.



CHRISTMAS LOOK — It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas at Briarwood. The theme of Christmas decorations at Briarwood is "A Christmas of Peace, Love and Hope." Unisphere chandeliers are suspended from the ceiling in front of each of the three major stores, Sears, JCPenney and Hudson's.

Trees add Yule spirit

The 18-footer greets shoppers at the main entrance while the taller tree towers above the Santa display in the Grand Court.

An eight-foot Christmas card reading "May the Christmas Spirit of Peace, Love and Hope Abide in All Throughout the Years" stands beside the tree at the main entrance.

Some 35 bee light trees are in planter beds throughout the center. They are made from live tree branches, sprayed and dusted silver, and outlined with clear ice lights.

In the Grand Court, an animated display illustrates the theme "... and the Lion shall lie down with the Lamb." The scene depicts a group of animals clustered around a snow-covered Christmas tree in a forest setting.

Holiday hours at Briarwood

BRIARWOOD

Holiday hours through Dec. 23. 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday. 12 to 7 p.m. Sunday. (Hudson's 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sunday). 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Dec. 24 and 31. Closed Dec. 25 and Jan. 1.

State Street parkway completed

State Street from the Eisenhower Parkway to Interstate 94, a major route to Briarwood, has been completed.

The highway includes extra-wide turn areas for Briarwood and adds three more ramps to the interstate highway.

Eisenhower Parkway, a new road about 2½ miles long and extending from Packard Road and Colony Street west to Saline-Ann Arbor Road, also helps shoppers drive quickly to the center.

Shoppers may exit I-94 at State Street and at Ann Arbor-Saline Road.

Merry Christmas from Briarwood

OF COURSE, HIS TIMEPIECE IS ROLEX.

Under the baton of a great conductor, heard melodies take on perfection. Then time is music: and music, art. For Maestro Antal Dorati of the National Symphony Orchestra of Wash., D.C., one timepiece reflects this harmony: Rolex. His own Rolex Day-Date in 18kt. gold is a superbly precise 30-jewel chronometer with matching President bracelet. Like his music, its craftsmanship is flawless.

L'Air du Temps: the spirit of the season

Some exciting and fun-filled entertainment is awaiting shoppers when the preview extravaganza by the Moslem Temple Shriners of Detroit welcomes the new year to Briarwood.

The colorful, clowning Shriners will entertain at Briarwood with such groups as the Keystone Cops, The Americans, the Legion of Honor and Drum and Bugle Corps on Friday, Jan. 3 from 7 to 8 p.m., and Saturday, Jan. 4, from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.

The Shrine Circus, world's largest circus family, will again bring action and thrills to Detroit, starting Jan. 31, with their international acts, world famous artists, and animal acts.

It will be family fun at its best, for the goal of the Shriners has always been to entertain children. The Circus runs from Jan. 31 through Feb. 16 at the Michigan State Fair Coliseum, Woodward at 8 Mile Rd. Tickets will be available at Hudsons, Sears, Grinnell's, Bank of the Commonwealth, and at the State Fairgrounds.

Tickets for matinees and evenings, Monday thru Friday, are priced at $2.25, $3.75, and $4.25. Friday evening through Sunday, prices are $2.75, $3.75, $4.25 and $4.75.

Performances are at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Monday through Friday. Three shows are held Saturday, at 10 a.m., 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. Sunday performances are at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m.
