Detroit Water Ready To Flow Here

By FRED DELANO

Detroit water may be flowing through City of Plymouth mains before this week is over. But it appears that, in contrast to the bitter debates which raged over the water source issue for years, the transition will be made totally without fanfare.

City Engineer Thomas Waffen is completing pressure and purity tests today and Thursday of the completed hook-up system between local mains and the 36-inch Detroit transmission main. If all signals are "go," the actual tie-up with Detroit will be put into operation as early as Friday.

Even if some fault is found, Waffen said he would not expect it to cause a delay in the Detroit flow beyond next week. He added that the switchover will be accomplished "as quietly as possible" and that no ribbon-cutting or other sounding of city hall trumpets is planned.

He is frank to admit that there may be complaints from many water users for a while because of rust. This will be caused because the directional flow of the water through the mains is being reversed in some areas of the city.

Flushing will be continued for an indefinite period, said Waffen, but he warns householders against expecting a new ambrosia suddenly to start flowing from the taps.

THE MOST noticeable change in the character of the water will be in its softness, said Waffen, who added that some residents may wish to keep their water softeners in use, however.

Pressure will remain constant throughout the city instead of showing the wide variations which it does at present, he stated.

When the hook-up is completed, it will make Plymouth the 87th community in eastern Michigan to become a customer of the Detroit Metropolitan Water Department.

The city's 3,448 users currently are served by municipally owned wells and the decision to abandon these in favor of joining the Detroit flow was made in a special election March 24, 1970.

The election climaxed many years of local argument as to whether to stick with Plymouth well water or turn to Detroit, and at the polls the latter course won by a scant 16 votes in a turnout of 40 per cent of the electorate.

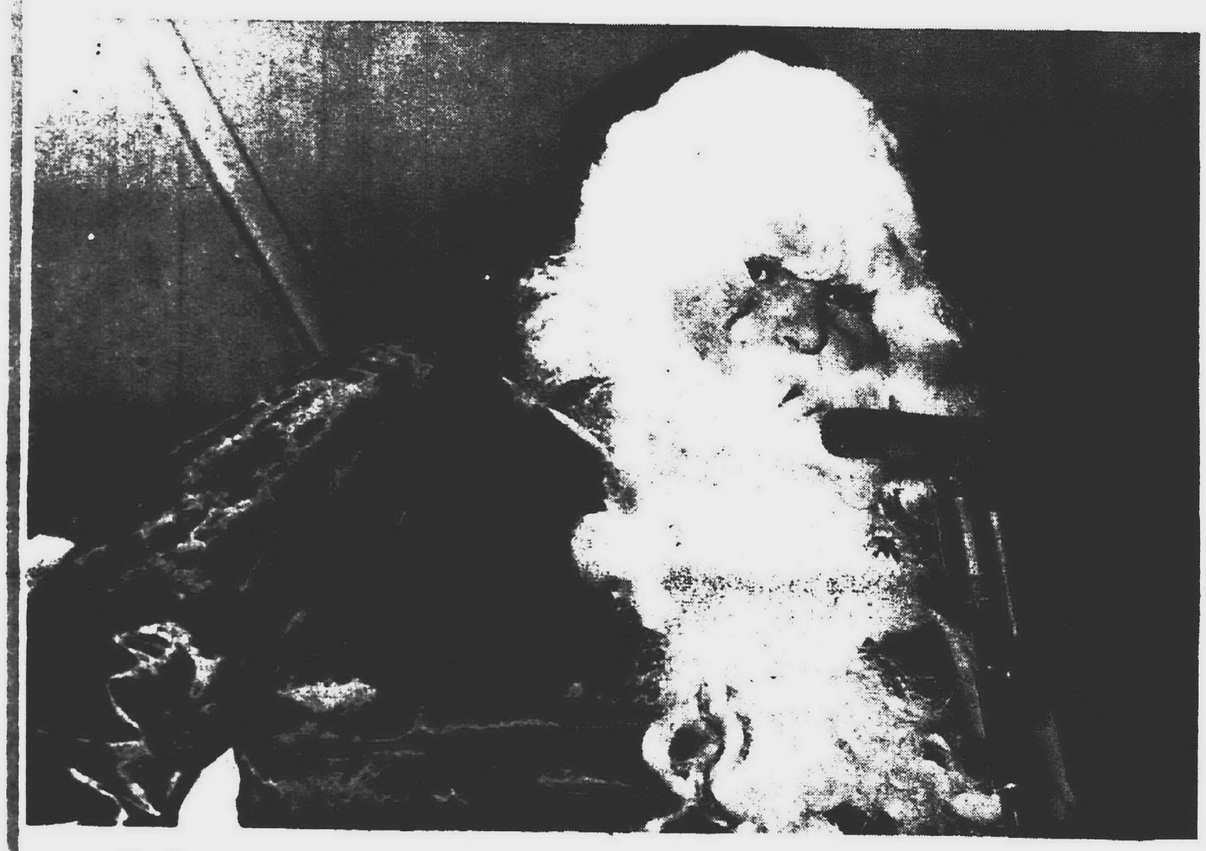
A NEW schedule of water rates already has been approved by the city commission, but will not go into effect until after all meters have been read following connection with Detroit. This will take about two weeks.

It is a policy which means that the next bills to be sent out by the city will be calculated according to the old rates, and that the billing procedure then can start fresh from the meter readings taken as quickly as manpower permits in the days following the hook-up.

The average increase in rates is estimated at approximately 50 per cent.

The city will be served from two new 16-inch metered connections with the Detroit transmission main on Sheldon Rd. The new meter pits are located at Goldsmith and Sheldon, and at Ann Arbor Rd. and Sheldon, and Waffen said all of this work is at last complete.

The Detroit transmission main is looped from Eight Mile Rd. and the Newburgh booster station on the north, and also tied into the Joy Rd. booster and reservoir on the south. Plymouth's average daily consumption of water last year was 2.58 million gallons.



THIS BEWHISKERED GENT from the North Pole arrived in Plymouth by helicopter Saturday noon to the cheers of hundreds of youngsters and immediately set up shop in Kellogg Park to hear their Christmas needs. He'll be on hand until Christmas Eve from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 1 to 8 p.m. Fridays and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays, thanks to the Chamber of Commerce. (Observer photo)

Set Artrain Workshop This Week

Art-minded Plymouthites who are interested in the possible 1972 community presentation here of Artrain, which is the creation of the Michigan Council for the Arts, are invited to a special workshop to be held from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 4, in the cafeteria of West Middle School.

Jo Hulce, chairman of the Artrain coordinating committee, said that although special notices have been mailed to many persons known to have an interest in this project, this in no way should limit attendance. All persons are welcome.

Artrain is a new kind of exhibit, consisting of several refurbished railroad cars designed especially to acquaint people throughout the state with the dynamic impact of contemporary art.

It was created early in 1971 and visits to numerous Michigan cities have been scheduled to develop the theme, "A Vision of Art."

The Plymouth Fine Arts Council requested some time ago that Plymouth be included on the 1972 schedule and in anticipation that this will become a reality, a working organization already has been established.

SATURDAY'S workshop will include a presentation of slides, amounting to a visual walk-through of Artrain. The history of the project also will be told and there will be discussion on how to coordinate facilities and services for an Artrain visit.

"Artrain is much more than a passing show," commented Mrs. Hulce. "It has been designed to stimulate community programs to develop appreciation of and participation in various art forms as a means of improving the environment and quality of life in Michigan communities."

Of the impending possibility that the traveling exhibit may be stationed in Plymouth for some period next year, Mrs. Hulce said, "This could be an exciting celebration, stimulating an awareness of the creativity of our own community. But to be successful it will need the full support and involvement of our citizenry."

Serving with Mrs. Hulce on the PCAC's Artrain coordinating committee are Mrs. Nan Cooper and Mrs. Wilma Newton.

City's Report Given New Look

City Manager Norman M. Gaffney has given a new look to the annual municipal report which the City Commission has authorized to be mailed to all residents.

Gaffney has changed the format drastically in going to a colorful 20-page brochure which explains the functions of each department. He commented, "We are hopeful it will provide basic information to our citizens as we build a better community."

The city manager also expressed appreciation to the mayor, commissioners, department heads "and all the employes who contributed so much to this publication."

Mayor James B. McKeon said that through the publishing of the report "we hope to provide all citizens with an accurate accounting of our municipal stewardship."

Twp. Residents Get Direct Line To State Police

A new telephone service to give Plymouth Township residents direct and toll-free contact with the Michigan State Police came into existence this week as a step toward strengthening township police protection.

Supervisor Maurice M. Breen announced that the township government has contracted with the Michigan Bell Telephone Co. for a leased, public line directly to the dispatch desk of the State Police post at Grand River and Seven Mile.

The number that residents should call to contact State Police is 455-5550. At the post, the dispatcher on duty will know instantly that any call coming through on that line is from the Plymouth area.

Breen said some residents of this area have mistakenly called the Ypsilanti post, which causes a time delay in service because it is the post in Redford which services Plymouth Township and assigns patrol cars here.

"Not only will it mean quicker service, but as a local number it will be toll free," said Breen. The township has agreed to pay Michigan Bell $154.75 per month for the service. The township's only other protection is provided by the sheriff's road patrol, over which a fight currently is raging as to whether it will be continued.

ARTRAIN ENTHUSIASM is growing in the Plymouth community as the likelihood increases that the rolling exhibit of creative art work may visit here next year. This model demonstrates the color and showmanship which could accompany such a project, many details of which will be discussed in a workshop Saturday morning at West Middle School.

2 Remap Hearings In Area

Two public hearings will be held in this area by the State Legislative Reapportionment Commission, the agency responsible for drawing up new districts for the Michigan Legislature.

One will be held Thursday, Dec. 9 at 1 p.m. in the commissioners auditorium of the Oakland County Building on Telegraph Rd. just outside Pontiac.

The other is scheduled for Friday, Dec. 10 at 10:30 a.m. in the City-County Building in Detroit.

The eight-member commission is composed of four Republicans and four Democrats. Co-chairmen are Paul G. Goebel (R-Grand Rapids) and A. Robert Kleiner (D-Grand Rapids). Only Observerland member is Anthony C. Licata (R-Plymouth), a former state representative from Detroit.

If the commission deadlocks--which is a strong possibility--then the State Supreme Court will select an apportionment plan. The court has a 5-1-1 Democratic majority.

P.O. BOX Drugs

Illicit LSD Can Cause Damage

Questions should be sent to the Community Commission on Drug Abuse, P.O. Box Drugs, Livonia, 48151.

Q. I would like some information if you can get it for me and print it in your P.O. Box Drugs. Some reports have told that steady use of LSD or acid can break down chromosomes and cause birth defects. Assuming this is true, do the chromosomes rebuild after you stop using it for good? and were only a mild user (once a week.) I hope you can answer my questions. Thank you.

Mrs. K.B., Westland

A. We'll try to give you the best answers we can and then give a little background.

About the best response we can find at this time is that LSD, taken in moderate doses, does not produce chromosome damage detectable by available methods. As for inducing mutations, LSD may have a very weak effect in this respect but not at the dose levels normally used. Reports of LSD - related birth defects have not been conclusively proven.

Where a great amount of concern regarding chromosome damage and birth defects has come from is regarding studies of effects of LSD on various test animals. Quite often the doses administered to these animals are 100 times or more than the human dose. At these fantastically high dose levels some of the effects you mention may be produced. Even so, there is no real certainty that the effects produced on hamsters, for example, would be produced in man.

Another type of testing has been the effects of LSD on cells in a test tube. Again the concentration of LSD is generally much higher than would be reached in normal human usage. As a result, any effects on cells demonstrated in such a manner are questionable.

NOW LET'S mention a few practical matters involving the use of LSD. Although ingestion of pure LSD (as available for clinical investigation) did not seem to result in many of the effects you mention, the use of illicit LSD seemed to result in three times as many cases of alleged chromosome damage as reported with the pure substances. And what is being sold in this area is rarely pure.

What's the reason for this effect? Nobody is sure, but there are several possibilities: (1) Illicit LSD may contain other by-products which possibly could produce this effect. (2) These effects may be caused by any of a number of drugs used in place of, or along with, LSD such as DET, DMT, STP or amphetamines to name but a few.

Club Hears Musicians From PHS

The Plymouth Women's Club will be entertained at its meeting at 12:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 3, in St. John's Episcopal Church with a program of seasonal music to be presented by groups from Plymouth High School. The meeting is open to guests.

Participating will be the Triple Trio, which includes Tina Cline, Kim Hale, Linda Sibbold, Janice Burns, Kathy Miller, Terese Kulich, Joy Newberry, Kathy Fulkerson, Diane Scheppele and Millie Jewel, accompanist.

A woodwind quintet of Linda Hagopian, Cheryle Hagopian, Karen Brett, Amy Schwartz and Mark Olson also will perform, as will a string quartet of Janis Shier, Jim Lee, Margaret Lang and Bill Moehle. In one selection the quartet will be assisted by Charles Wells.

The program was arranged by H. Michael Endres, director of the PHS orchestra. Club chairman for the day is Mrs. Erling Oyen and the tea chairman is Mrs. Charles F. Lang.

At this meeting members are urged to bring children's mittens or scarves which will be placed on a "mitten tree" at the Detroit Edison Co.'s Plymouth office.

plymouth THROUGH BIFOCALS

By FRED DELANO / Editor: Mail & Observer

JEFF PETERS AND ANDY TUCKER would love to be in Plymouth Friday night, not to sell liniments and cough cures on the street corners but rather to admire first-hand how maybe the biggest put-on this town ever has known has turned into the first annual "Commodore's Ball" of the Tonquish Creek Yacht Club.

The names Peters and Tucker mean something to you only if you are an O. Henry fan, and have reread the latter's "Gentle Grafter" series as often as I have. One can't picture them as confidence men in the David Niven film image, but for capitalizing on gullibility of the public, American literature never has offered a more captivating pair of shell men.

It's our loss that William Sydney Porter (whom fiction knows as O. Henry) never had the idea of turning a drainage ditch into a yacht basin that could be connected with worldwide ocean routes through the simple expedient of a $30 million federal dredging grant. Or of putting together a one-ship yacht club officially and legally chartered by the State of Michigan, as has been done.

The togs of the admiralty could have been worn well by Peters and Tucker, who were struck by the fact that all philanthropists they ever knew had plenty of money and that one must find new avenues of expression when he has too much money to be implicated in plain charity and not enough to make restitution.

IF YOU KNOW the works of O. Henry, then you know that this genius of the pen had what William Lyon Phelps called "a fear and hatred of conventionality." That's why he could have fallen in love with the T.C.Y.C.

There really is a Tonquish Creek Yacht Club organization, you know, and there's really going to be a "Commodore's Ball" Friday evening in the Mayflower Meeting House, just as there is going to be the annual Christmas dinner dance of the Plymouth Symphony League Saturday night at Ann Arbor.

But what the T.C.Y.C. has done as no one else is to deflate Plymouth's pomposity and gnaw at its roots of bigotry and hypocrisy by generating a laugh in the face of all those who are all too self-righteous from self-inflated ego.

This is exactly what has appealed to the chroniclers of television, the metropolitan press and wire services as they have given Plymouth more free publicity through the accidental instrument of this strangest of all "yacht clubs" than expensive Chamber of Commerce propaganda ever attained.

The response that's coming in is best typified by quoting a letter from L. A. Dillon in Florida: "In last evening's Orlando paper appeared the article concerning your yacht club. Being a former Michigan resident, got a real laugh. Hope you are successful in obtaining the loan from the government in order to build your way to the sea."

THE "PUT-ON" IS ONE of America's greatest forms of humor, and in my wanderings across this nation I've seen some beauties. One of the funniest stories involves a fellow Kentucky colonel who was given the red carpet treatment for two weeks at a private club in London after he had registered as Col. So-and-So, G.S.K., which, of course, stands for nothing more than "Governor's Staff of Kentucky."

The two Roberts, Delaney and Dwyer, who were the prime instigators in forming the T.C.Y.C., certainly can be identified as non-conformists in this community, and though the staid conservatives may scoff, they have done the little people a needed favor. But which to nickname "Jeff Peters" and which as "Andy Tucker" I know not.

Even the structure of ticket prices for Friday's soiree smacks of O. Henry creation. It's simplicity itself to charge a straight $20 a couple as the very worthwhile Symphony League is doing the next night to go out to Ann Arbor, but it took someone who could "work the Ohio valley with a line of family albums, headache powders and roach destroyers," to come up with the T.C.Y.C. scale.

Let's see if I can get it straight. For members, it's $14 a couple or $7.50 single. For non-members, it's $15 a couple or $8 single. It's obvious that whoever worked that out not only is educated, but as O. Henry wrote, "has a lot of useful information besides."

2 Sisters Win Praise

PLYMOUTH News releases to the Mail & Observer from two sources have told of recent accomplishments of Rebecca Glenn McGuire and Charlotte McGuire, both of whom are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Ottis F. McGuire, 1481 Palmer.

Bob Jones University at Greenville, S.C., has announced election of Rebecca McGuire as vice president of the French Language Club. She is a 1969 graduate of Plymouth High School and is a junior majoring in interpretative speech in the School of Fine Arts.

Charlotte McGuire, 17, is a member of the senior class at Interlochen Arts Academy, where she is majoring in cello. She also is taking several music courses in addition to the regular academic program.

One of the features of Interlochen is the regular chance to challenge other players, and twice Charlotte has moved up in the cello section of the orchestra, which will give a special concert Jan. 21 at Ann Arbor.

Charlotte has been a member of the Plymouth Youth Symphony, the Livonia Youth Symphony and Plymouth High School orchestra. Twice she has won scholarships to Interlochen's National Music Camp.

Faulty Stove Causes Bad Garage Fire

PLYMOUTH The fire which gutted a four-car garage at 837 N. Holbrook, heavily damaging four cars and two boats early last week, has been blamed on the faulty smoke stack of a wood stove.

Fire Chief George Schoenneman said the Nov. 22 blaze apparently started after John Moe had started a log fire in the stove to warm up the garage and then went inside the house. He looked outside a few minutes later and saw the garage enveloped in smoke and flames.

No one was injured in the blaze, according to Schoenneman, but the concrete block garage was gutted and the cars and boats inside received extensive damage.

Leave System

A leave of absence was granted and a resignation received by the Plymouth Board of Education Tuesday.

Karen S. Joslyn, fourth and fifth grade teacher at Isbister, was granted a leave.

The Stroller...

Pick Your Own All-Stars

By W. W. EDGAR

We are now entering what has come to be known as the silly season.

The well-picked-over carcass of the Thanksgiving turkey has been discarded. Kindly old Santa Claus has been welcomed, and we are going to be deluged with every Tom, Dick and Harry's All-America football teams.

We'll have the All-America, which varies in each locality to attract local attention. With these so-called all-star selections, we'll be served all-area teams ... all state teams ... all-conference teams ... all-city teams ... and possibly all-neighborhood teams.

By the time we've had them all, there'll scarcely be a high school or college player who hasn't been honored on somebody's "All" team.

This fad started many decades ago when the late Walter Camp, of Yale, one year offered a list of players and rated them the best in the land.

FOR YEARS on end his All-America team was considered the top honor that could befall a player. But after his death, there was no logical successor. First, Colliers magazine selected Grantland Rice, one of the top sports writers of his day, to pick the team. Then other magazines followed suit with their own "experts," and finally the news services got into the act until today we are being fed an overdose.

There are so many conferences and colleges and so many players that it is impossible to see them all and the selector must depend on another's opinion to make the choice.

Aside from that, we now have offensive teams and defensive teams to make the selections all the more complex.

While scanning some of these lists the other day, The Stroller got to wondering —

"Why don't we have an all-star team of city officials and political office holders each year?"

You don't know enough about them?

That doesn't rule you ineligible. Few of the so-called experts know anything about some of the football players they select, either. In many cases, they never have seen them.

But it would be a lot of fun ... just trying.

LET'S START with the City of Plymouth.

Who, in your mind, are deserving of seats on the all-time city commission?

Go back as far as you want. This will be the all-time, all-star commission modeled after the all-time all-star football teams.

Whom would you choose as the all-time all-star mayor? Your choice need not be limited to men.

Then go down the list to fill the rest of the public officials team.

Name the all-time clerk, treasurer, city manager, et al.

Once this is done, you may switch to the township and make your selections — starting with the choice of an all-time supervisor.

After this chore is completed, you can switch over to the school board and to the state.

WHAT FUN you can have — testing your memory and making your selections.

This is a great opportunity to pay a tribute to those who have served in public office — and it is your chance to rate them.

Just send in your choices to The Stroller. They'll be tabulated and the various "teams" named.

Your choices must be made before Christmas so that the selections can be made known before the pealing of the bells that usher in the new year.

Go ahead...enjoy yourself.

Boys' Cage Loop Sets Its Tryouts

PLYMOUTH

Late registrations and tryouts are scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 4, for boys interested in playing in the "AA" division of the Plymouth Junior Basketball Association. The age range includes boys from the eighth through 10th grades.

This will be the final registration session and will run from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Central Junior High School gym. The fee is $6.50 and a parent is asked to accompany each boy.

Tryouts for all who have registered at any date will open in the gym at 11 a.m. and all boys should bring gym shoes and shorts with them. All boys registering are guaranteed of being placed on one of the estimated 56 teams, and will play a minimum of one quarter per game.

Ron Mack is president of the association, and Phil McDuff is vice president in charge of the "AA" division. This will be the seventh season for the association which is planning to take all boys to a home University of Michigan basketball game sometime during the winter.

Coletta Aboard Attack Carrier

Navy Seaman Thomas A. Coletta, son of Mrs. Ann Beard of 39500 W. Warren, Plymouth, is in the Mediterranean aboard the 80,000 ton attack aircraft carrier USS Independence, homeported at Norfolk, Va.

Yacht Club Fete Goes Polynesian

PLYMOUTH

The task of creating a Polynesian setting for Friday's first annual ball of the Tonquish Creek Yacht Club is the responsibility of Mrs. Virginia O'Leary, decorations chairman, and her committee.

The Mayflower Meeting House in Plymouth will be decked with fish nets, palm trees and tropical fruits. A thatched roof will add a south sea island touch and the hors d'oeuvres' table will be centered with an exotic floral arrangement.

As a conclusion to the holiday season, topiary trees will twinkle with Italian lights, according to Mrs. Billie Bidwell, a member of the decorating committee.

The Dec. 3 ball is open to the public. For ticket information call the office of R.B. Delaney, 747 W. Ann Arbor Trail, Plymouth.

Dress for the ball is optional. Male attire tends toward business suits or bright Hawaiian shirts. Some of the ladies are planning to follow the Polynesian theme in their apparel.

Ecology Students Learn Auto Talk

EAST LANSING — Last year two Michigan State University students who were enrolled in a popular ecology course entitled "Man: The Endangered Species" got the audacious notion that they could help the auto industry in its pollution abatement efforts.

Bill Valentine and Betty Blaske reasoned that problems are solved by people, and that the key to curbing the various forms of pollution associated with the automobile lay in bringing the right people with the right skills to bear on the problem.

They recruited seven other MSU undergraduates and began a study of the "Pollution Abatement Manpower Requirements in the Automotive Industry" (PAMRAI).

THE EFFORT formally ended recently when officials of Oldsmobile Division, General Motors, and MSU held a luncheon to recognize the students and critique a project that should prove to have extensive implications for both higher education and industry.

"We've heard a lot of talk about ecology and the environmental crisis," said John Beltz, Oldsmobile Division general manager, "but the problems will be solved only through the application of technological expertise. That will fall to a group of people who can set realistic goals and work to achieve them."

Valentine and Miss Blaske (both of Dowagiac) recruited Larry Wisniewski (Cassopolis), Tim Dowling (Niles), Mike Reid (Niles), Janice Morlock (Berrien Springs), Les Schmidt (Berrien Springs), Keith Rudell (Berrien Springs), and George Zimmerman (Eaton Rapids).

The PAMRAI group had three objectives in beginning the study: to discover what skills the auto industry needed in its anti-pollution efforts; to find out what Michigan State was doing to provide these skills; and to open new channels of communication between MSU and industry for the exchange of information on an area of mutual concern.

Working through MSU's Center for Environmental Quality, the students approached General Motors. The nation's largest automobile manufacturer not only promised full cooperation, but also agreed to cover half the cost of the project.

None of the students was an engineering major, and all had only a consumer's knowledge of automobile technology. Since all were undergraduates, none had extensive research experience. On the surface, they seemed singularly ill-equipped to conduct a project of the anticipated proportions.

But it was to show the viability of undergraduate research projects of this type that was the overriding motivation.

"WE WANTED TO demonstrate that undergraduates could do meaningful research," says Bill Valentine. "We felt, and still do, that the university has been remiss in not introducing its students to the real world through involvement in projects like PAMRAI."

With the actual research scheduled to take place during the summer months, the students spent the winter and spring developing questionnaires and in other ways preparing themselves for the task.

Neil Nelson, a Canadian graduate student, was added to the group as an adviser in various research techniques.

In June, four students began extensive interviews with key personnel at Oldsmobile's complex in Lansing. Two worked through the summer at the General Motors Proving Ground at Milford, where the corporation's principal pollution abatement research efforts are centered. And three remained on the MSU campus where they interviewed and distributed questionnaires to selected faculty members and administrators.

Bill Valentine coordinated the effort.

THE RESULT was a 427-page report issued earlier this month to Oldsmobile, Milford Proving Ground and MSU personnel.

Not the structured dissertation common to academia, it tells of 10 students who stumbled, started over, fell again, and finally picked their way through a series of frustrations brought on largely by their own inexperience.

But when all the data had been collected the PAMRAI students saw it coalesce into a series of identifiable factors that helped account for the problem they were investigating.

They pointed to a series of specific skills that General Motors needed in building a more environmentally compatible car, and saw where Michigan State University could do more in developing those skills in the engineers and managers it sends to the industry.

They saw how the scheduling of night classes, and the subjects offered, could be better tailored to meet the needs of Oldsmobile and Milford engineers who need new information on pollution technology.

MOST IMPORTANTLY, however, they described two groups of people – educators and industrialists – with the same sincere concern about environmental pollution and with resources and information to share, but who don't seem to talk much to each other.

"We expected, and found, university faculty members who were convinced that the auto industry had made no effort to curb environmental degradation," Valentine wrote in the report.

"On the other hand," he said, "we found industry personnel voicing their complaints about the 'ivory tower intellectuals' of the university who knew nothing about business and profits.

"Both attitudes could hinder any concentrated effort by the two institutions to solve pollution problems."

TO MSU PRESIDENT Clifton R. Wharton Jr., who followed the project closely, PAMRAI has had a number of significances:

"It has demonstrated the viability of meshing undergraduate education into the search for solutions to environmental problems, an area of real concern to students," he says. "It has also been critically important in giving a new dimension to the relationship between Michigan State University and industry.

"It has shown how we can capitalize upon the sincere and dedicated interest of undergraduate students to cope with the contemporary social, economic, political and environmental issues as well as the genuine interest and dedication of the industrial sector with regard to issues of concern to students."

To Bill Valentine, the communication process is what PAMRAI was all about. In the afterword to the massive report, he said:

"We are a world of living, thinking interacting beings with diverse modes of thought capable of achieving, if joined together on the basis of mutual respect for one another as human beings, a quality of life that far surpasses any economically structured standard of living."

State Product To Be $50 Billion

State Commerce Director Richard E. Whitmer predicts that Michigan's gross state product may top the $50 million mark next year.

Speaking at a meeting of Michigan's Economic Expansion Council, Whitmer said "all indicators point to a banner year for Michigan's economy during 1972" following a two-year period during which there has been very little growth.

"Preliminary figures indicate this year's gross state product will be slightly more than $46 billion, up about nine per cent compared to last year, and that it should increase by about 12 per cent next year, to an estimated $52 billion," he said.

The gross state product is the total of all goods and services produced in Michigan.

WHITMER SAID that if the 1972 projections hold up, Michigan's GSP will have more than doubled during the last 10 years. Michigan's 1963 GSP was $25 billion.

"The future for business and industrial growth in Michigan is excellent, thanks to a solid foundation built during th 1960's when the state's economy grew at a faster rate than any other midwestern state," he said.

"At the same time, Michigan's industrial diversification programs accomplished during the late 1960s and continuing into the first two years of this decade give us reason to be optimistic about both the immediate and long-range economic outlook."

Whitmer said Michigan's industrial diversification programs have been successful in modular housing, farm product processing, technology based industries, plastics and wood and paper production.

"MICHIGAN now has 35 modular housing manufacturing companies, more than any other state in the midwest," he said.

The State Commerce director said Michigan's personal income for 1972 is estimated at $43 billion, up 10.3 per cent compared to this year. This will amount to an increase of about $450 on a per capita basis.

Retail sales are expected to climb by 13 per cent during 1972, rising to $20 billion from an estimated $17.7 billion this year, he added.

AID FOR COUNTIES -- Sen. Carl D. Pursell (R-Plymouth) looks on as Gov. William G. Milliken signs the bill Pursell sponsored to allow counties to borrow money to create a delinquent tax revolving fund for use in purchasing the delinquent property taxes of all taxing units of the counties. Sen. Pursell said the new law would allow taxing units to pay the full amount of the tax levy without waiting for delinquent tax collections and would save large sums in property tax administration funds at the county level.

Farmington Manager Quits For Business

John Dinan has resigned as Farmington city manager, effective Feb. 1, to pursue a private career in business.

Dinan's resignation announcement came as a surprise Wednesday although councilmen were told of the move in a special meeting Monday night, Nov. 22.

THE DEPARTURE will end 11 years as city manager for the City of Farmington and conclude an unusual close working relationship between city council and top administrator.

"It was a real tough decision," Dinan told the Farmington Enterprise & Observer Wednesday. "The city has been a great town to work in and has a real fine council."

The city manager will be leaving government service entirely, after 20 years in municipal administration, to pursue a career in business.

"I am considering a couple of good business opportunities," said Dinan, who added he was not at liberty to reveal details about the offers.

HE WILL, however, remain a resident of the city along with his wife, Jean, and four children.

The city will begin advertising to recruit a successor, Dinan said, by advertising in the state and national municipal journals.

Dinan, 46, came to Farmington in October 1960 after serving almost 10 years as Oak Park assistant city manager. He graduated from Lawrence Institute of Technology as a civil engineer and spent two years in the U.S. Navy before joining the City of Oak Park.

AS FARMINGTON city manager for the past 11 years, Dinan has administered the following advances:

Construction of a new city hall and DPW facility; conversion from well water to Detroit water and establishment of a complete water system; and construction of Drake Road Park and improvements to the City Park on Shiawassee.

Also: paving of six miles of streets in the city; annexation of 500 acres; doubling of city's population and growth in tax base of 300 per cent; repaving of Grand River; construction of three municipal parking lots; the beginning of the downtown redevelopment program; and addition of new subdivisions – Chatham Hills, Drake Heights and Woodcroft.

Dinan has been active in civic affairs, having served as president of the Farmington Exchange Club and member of the Farmington Founders Festival committee. He has also been active with the Farmington Chamber of Commerce as an ex-officio member of the board.

OU Hires Ob As 'Catalyst'

ROCHESTER

Oakland University has established a position of ombudsman to give humanism an edge over bureaucracy.

Named to the new post was Kenneth H. Coffman, 41, who has been director of psychological services at Oakland since 1963 and holds the faculty rank of associate professor of psychology.

Coffman will serve outside the regular table of organization in a role he envisions as "a catalyst for peaceful change."

He will serve all segments of the university community – students, faculty and staff – in handling requests, complaints and grievances dealing with both academic and non-academic concerns. If necessary, he will have the authority to investigate all matters brought to his attention and to seek the most expeditious settlement.

In describing the new position to the OU Board of Trustees, which endorsed the appointment unanimously and enthusiastically, President Donald D. O'Dowd said the ombudsman will have broad investigatory power, with direct and ready access to all university personnel and records.

JOHN A. MANOOGIAN, 9450 Ivanhoe Dr., Plymouth, has been named general manager of the newly-created Transmission Division of Ford Motor Co. He was formerly the assistant general manager of operations for the Automotive Assembly Division. Manoogian is a 30-year veteran at Ford.

He is a 1971 graduate of the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Lawrence Tech Woos CC Grads

Graduates of two-year colleges with associate degrees in science or engineering may now complete their education toward a bachelor of science degree in two years in a new industrial management plan at the Lawrence Institute of Technology.

Under the new "two plus two" program announced by President Wayne H. Buell, these graduates of community colleges, junior colleges, and technical institutes may enroll with junior class standing in day or evening college at LIT.

The B.S. degree work may be completed in six terms, which takes two years in day college and three years of Monday, Wednesday and Friday night attendance in evening college.

PROF. LELAND A. Lahr, director of the School of Industrial Management, explains that credits earned in science or engineering technology programs will transfer to the industrial management program.

"The average two-year college graduate may earn the bachelor of science degree with 100 quarter hours of additional study beyond his associate degree," he said.

The "two plus two" program (two years of associate degree study plus two years in industrial management) will lead to a degree of bachelor of science in industrial management with a concentration in industrial technology.

The introduction of the industrial technology option raises to seven the number available to LIT industrial management students. Others are accounting, distribution, finance, human resources, manufacturing, and business and management.

Students may enter any of these programs in the next evening college term. Registration will be held Jan. 24 through 28 with classes beginning Jan. 31. Classes in the next day college term will begin March 8.

Esch Helping Shape Policy In Education

WASHINGTON, D.C. U.S. Rep. Marvin L. Esch (R-Ann Arbor) has been appointed as a conferee on the House - Senate conference on the higher education amendments of 1971. Esch commented that, "the final bill emerging from this conference will influence post - secondary educational policy for the next decade."

This omnibus bill is the result of two years of hearings and was passed by the House on Nov. 5. Because of the complexity of the bill, Esch indicated that he expected a lengthy conference.

Included in the bill are two provisions which were authored by Esch. They include the institutional aid formula, which is the first type of general institutional aid ever present in a federal higher education program. This provision will make special allowances for smaller institutions, such as Adrian College in Michigan, which are in critical need of general aid to continue providing quality independent education.

A second Esch provision is Title XIV of the bill that provides for federal aid to occupational education. This $1.85 billion program will allow planning grants as well as grants for technical assistance to states for occupational education programs.

THE HOUSE bill is a 248 page omnibus proposal which deals with several important areas of post - secondary education. Included are titles which relate to extension and revisions of the National Defense Education Act of 1958, the Higher Education Act of 1965, the Higher Education Amendments of 1968, as well as the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963.

HR 7248 has provisions which prohibit discrimination on the basis of sex in institutions of higher education. Esch commented that this provision will help to insure that all of our citizens have an equal opportunity for post - secondary education. "Our country can no longer afford the luxury of depriving students of advanced training merely 'because they are women.'"

Esch stated that there is an important need for the careful study of educational resources and programs so that our programs will be most effective and that our goals will be clearly established. HR 7 created the National Institute for Education which will be patterned after the National Institute for Health. The institute will study educational problems on a systematic basis.

The House bill includes the prohibition on the use of federal funds for bussing schoolchildren, which Esch predicted would be the subject of lengthy discussion. The Senate bill has no similar provision.

Artrain

IT HAS BEEN indicated that representatives of the Michigan Council for the Arts will be present to give tips on promotions such as scheduling other activities to accompany the train's visit, and establishing ongoing programs to continue art involvement.

General chairman of the statewide Artrain project is Mrs. William G. Milliken, wife of the governor.

She calls Artrain, "an elegant catalyst designed to stimulate people in every community to enjoy a basic ingredient of humane living: to understand that quality in life demands individual aesthetic involvements, and through this appreciation to assist the arts to flourish."

Antique Shop's Sleigh Stolen

PLYMOUTH

Someone is dashing through the snow with a one-horse open sleigh.

It was stolen from the front lawn of the House of Antiques at 412 Starkweather last weekend.

The "cutter" type sleigh is six feet long, five feet tall, and three feet wide and has faded pink cushions. It is valued at $75 and is believed to have been stolen between 4:30 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Sunday, police reported.

'Fiddler On The Roof' Runs 3 Nights At PHS

PLYMOUTH

One of the best known musicals of recent years, "Fiddler On The Roof," will be offered three nights this week by students of Plymouth High School in a cooperative effort between the drama, vocal and instrumental departments.

"Fiddler On The Roof" offers beautiful songs and rousing dances, and has made families all over the world sing, cry, laugh and rejoice.

It is the story of a Jewish community in Russia just prior to the revolutionary period, built around the family of a man named Tevye, and will be presented in the high school auditorium at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Tickets are $2.

Stage, set and choreography direction have been, under Mrs. Gloria Logan. Fred Nelson is director of vocal groups and M. Michael Endres of the orchestra.

THE ROLE of Tevye, a dairyman, is being played by Glenn Clark and that of his wife, Golde, by Jane Mills. Others in the cast include:

Lazar Wolf, John Shultz; Mordcha, Rob Milford; Rabbi, Steve Whiteaell; Menddel, Eric Eisen; Avrahm, Pat England; Nachum, Judy Trombley; Granma Tzeitel, Carla Upton; Fuma Sarah, Caron Eddy.

Constable, Jim Vaughn; Sasha, Bryan Godwin; Singing Russian, Gary Leavenworth; Shaindel, Claudia Truax; The Fiddler, Karen Weideman; Yussell, Tony Henry; Russian soldier, Mark Voss.

WSU Swim

Wayne State University's 1971-72 swimming team will have 17 dual meets including eight at home plus appearances in two early - season relay meets.

By TOM DONOGHUE
Sports Editor

It was a simple case of first game jitters for Birmingham Falcon turnovers to win the Groves, Birmingham Seaholm opening rival basketball clash capitalized on numerous

LONG SEASON AT GROVES? Birmingham Groves basketball Coach Al Vordermark watched his Falcons lose their opener to Seaholm 75-50 and was caught in this pose wondering just how long the season will be. (Photo by Tom Donoghue)

"It was the first varsity start for six of my players," said Groves Coach Al Vordermark. "Seaholm has four seniors and one junior and we stacked up 'green' against them."

"In addition we had to pull our 6-5 center, Lindsay Miller, from the game in the second quarter because he had three fouls," added Vordermark. Miller fouled out of the contest early in the fourth quarter.

SEAHOLM got the opening tip and after three minutes, Groves led 4-3. Seaholm broke into a full-court press but Groves held a 10-7 lead midway through the first quarter, with Les Siegel paving the way.

With 42 seconds remaining in the quarter, Groves called a time-out and the score read 10-9. The Falcons had not scored in three minutes.

First quarter of play ended with Groves up 10-9.

Seaholm's John Denning popped in a jump shot at the two minute mark for the first score of the second quarter and Seaholm had its first lead of the game and was never to fall behind again.

Midway through the quarter Groves trailed 16-15 but a Siegel pass went astray and Seaholm bounced in front 24-17 with three minutes in the half.

SCOTT HAMMOND, Jim Hughes, and Bob Lyle hit on successive baskets for Seaholm.

Tom Adams scored for Groves in the closing seconds but Seaholm had jumped out 39-19.

Groves got the second-half tip but turnovers plagued the inexperienced Falcons and the third quarter ended with Seaholm in front 42-30.

When the final buzzer sounded, Coach Vordermark glanced up at the scoreboard and realized it was going to be a long season.

"We need a lot of experience," said Vordermark. "We aren't big at all and the loss of Scott Love is really going to show this year."

GROVES was unbeaten last year in Northwest Suburban play with a 10-0 record and was 13-3 overall. This is the third year for Vordermark at Groves who has enjoyed 13-3 marks each season.

"We dominated the entire league last year," added Vordermark. "But we lost 10 of 12 players and we really have to come back at it this year."

Groves opens league play with John Glenn on Dec. 10 but has a non-league clash with Kimball Friday at home.

"FRANKLIN has the best shot at the Northwest crown this year," added Vordermark. "If my kids can come around we might cause some headaches in the league, but it is going to be a rough trail."

Adams collected 13 points and Don Larsen 12 for Groves while Denning of Seaholm led scorers with 17.

Groves hit on 21 of 50 shots from the floor for 42 per cent and scored on eight of 23 from the line for a 35 per cent average.

Seaholm popped in 30 out of 74 from the floor for 41 per cent while hitting on 15 of 26 from the line for 75 per cent.

DRIVING IN for Groves is senior guard Les Siegel in the opening rival clash with Birmingham Seaholm. Jim Hughes (51) and Scott Hammond (33) of Seaholm defend on the play. (Observer photo)

Borgess Toppled

Bishop Borgess went cold in the fourth quarter of its opening basketball clash against De LaSalle and ended up on the short end, 70-64.

With four minutes remaining, Borgess held a three point margin but DeLaSalle got hot and Borgess cold, De LaSalle scored four straight baskets and over a two minute span outscored Borgess 14-4.

Three bad shots in a row told the story for us," said Borgess Coach Tom Denewith. "They got hot and we just fell flat on our face."

BORGESS gained a 16-14 first quarter lead but De LaSalle fought back to tie it at the half, 27-27. De LaSalle pushed to a five point advantage at the end of three quarters, 53-48, but Borgess rebounded in the fourth only to have the tide change and De LaSalle come out the victor.

"De LaSalle's center, Bill Glowczewski, really killed us," said Denewith. "He collected 18 of his 29 points in the third quarter and was hitting on shots 25 feet out."

The contest was filled with turnovers with Borgess fumbling 22 while De LaSalle collected 15.

Borgess junior forward, Mark Sopko, pumped in 20 points to lead the offensive attack with Greg Battle collecting 12 and Shawn McCarthy 10.

BORGESS hit on 16 of 38 free throws while De LaSalle scored on 10 of 23. Borgess was 32 per cent from the floor and De LaSalle did 10 per cent better with an average of 42 per cent.

"We missed 16 shots within 10 feet of the basket," said Denewith. "In addition we missed eight layups."

"The kids were hustling but just couldn't pop it in," concluded Denewith.

Borgess travels to Garden City East Tuesday night in what should shape up to be its toughest game. A clash with Mt. Carmel is on store Friday with its first league encounter on Dec. 17 at Sacred Heart Dearborn.

St. Agatha Tightens Defense To Sneak By Lourdes 54-48

St. Agatha won its cage opener at the free - throw line, in a 54-48 conquest of River Rouge Lourdes High School.

The Aggies popped in 20 of 44 from the line while Lourdes scored on only two of 11 free - throws.

ST. AGATHA trailed in the contest to the three minute mark of the fourth quarter when senior center Tom Churches scored the go-ahead basket. The Aggies never looked back.

"We were top - notch on defense and didn't commit a foul the entire first half," said Agatha Coach Tom Sankovic. "They were a bit sloppy, but we drove a lot, forcing them to commit fouls."

Lourdes committed 31 fouls in contrast to nine by St. Agatha.

The Aggies had four players in double figures with Churches leading the squad with 17 points. Pat Brown followed with 14 while Phil Hickey collected 11 and Mark Miron 10.

DAN SHIELDS was high scorer for Lourdes with 24 points.

"Our defense tightened up the second half," said Sankovic. "Shields scored 18 the first half, but we held him to only six the second.

"Their fouls killed them," added Sankovic. "But turnovers almost did us in. We had 22 the first half and 13 the second half."

St. Agatha is composed of a 10-man squad, but Sankovic feels his starting five is one of the smartest outfits around exercising ball control.

"We are in a tough division, but these boys have played together since they were little, and they know basketball," said Sankovic.

The Aggies host Mt. Carmel Friday on its home court.

Lathrup Grid Stars Honored In Banquet

By W. W. EDGAR

Rated the second best football team in the state after being ignored in the rankings for most of the season, members of the undefeated Southfield Lathrup High School football team learned Sunday that they are not without honor in their home community.

They were toasted and praised by a gathering of more than 150 persons that included parents, boosters, educators, coaches and school officials in the first such banquet in the history of the school.

Members of the school board, in turn, lauded them for the heaps of praise they brought to the school that now is known the length and breadth of the state.

THE PARENTS stated their praise with a giant banner across the head table that read "This Is Proud Country".

The team finished the season undefeated, successfully defended its Inter-Lakes title and ran its string of consecutive victories to 17 – the longest streak of any Class A team in the state.

To top off the season, nine of the players earned placed on various all-star teams.

"This was not a miracle team," Athletic Director Ed Litogot told the parents. "You don't build miracles in four years. This team was started four years ago and by hard work it finally landed on top – and we're proud of every member."

The dinner was co-sponsored by the Home Owners Association and parents of the players.

Each player was presented with a group picture of the squad in color and the players, in turn, presented Coach Darryl Harper with an altographed football.

Ed Youngs, an assistant to Duffy Daugherty at Michigan State, was the main speaker and spent most of his time on the podium relating the procedure of obtaining an athletic scholarship.

It was the first football banquet for Lathrup, but the parents vowed that it wouldn't be the last.

Ski Heil

By BILL CAMERON

I don't pretend to be a film critic, but some of the movies I've seen recently leave a lot to be desired for pure family entertainment.

If you would like to spend an enjoyable evening with your family, I would highly recommend you head for Ford Auditorium in downtown Detroit on Saturday, Dec. 4, at 8:30 p.m. to see one of the best ski movies on the market - Warren Miller's "Any Snow, Any Mountain." This is the annual American Youth Hostel's fund raising effort to support a very worthwhile program.

WARREN MILLER is perhaps the greatest ski photographer in the business today. For pure cinematography he is hard to beat, but his strong point is the humor he manages to interject in his narration.

The audience reaction ranged from sheer excitement to outright laughter at many of the scenes. He manages to capture the sheer beauty and rhythm of the top skiers, to the bumbling, clumsiness of the majority of skiers around the world. I guarantee you'll enjoy it.

Speaking of clumsiness, if you are planning on taking up the sport of skiing this winter, don't forget the Ladies Ski Day Workshop to be presented by "yours truly" at the Livonia Family Y on Wednesday, Dec. 8 at 10 a.m.

Experience has shown me that the most difficult move for a beginner is getting up after a fall. There are several ways of doing it - the easiest of course is to wait for a chivalrous gentleman to come along and lift you, but that's not always practical. And how do you put those skis back on after you fall?

There are many little tips that you should be aware of before you go out on the slopes. It will save you time and embarrassment if you're prepared for them beforehand.

Do you know why mittens are more practical than gloves? Do you know the difference between a rope tow, T-bar, pome lift and chairlift? Come to the workshop and find out. It's open to all and free yet.

Elsewhere on these pages you'll find a story on cross - country skiing. If you're planning on attending the clinic, please call the Viking Ski Shop. John Barnett would like to know how many people he can expect so that he has enough champagne and hor d'oeuvres on hand. See you there.

Cross Country Skiing Slated At Hawthorne

By BILL CAMERON

Cross - country skiing, the fastest growing winter sport in America. I've been keeping a watchful eye on this "step - child" of downhill skiing for the last few years and have been amazed at the growth of the sport in such a short period of time.

A few years ago you couldn't find a cross - country ski in any of Michigan's ski shops. The majority of sales personnel didn't know what you were talking about.

Today, many of the ski shops in the Metropolitan Detroit area are stocking as many as eight different brands of cross - country skis.

MY CURIOSITY whetted, I had an interview with John Barnett, owner of the Viking Ski Shop in Livonia, to get at some of the reasons for the sudden interest in the sport.

John has been in the ski business since 1960 and also has a store in Toledo. He recently enlarged his Livonia store in order to stock his cross - country line of equipment.

Following is our discussion:

Q. To what do you attribute the sudden interest in cross - country skiing?

A. There appears to be several reasons. From a purely economical standpoint, it amounts to about ¼ of the cost of downhill skiing. Your equipment is approximately 50 per cent less expensive, you don't have to drive 250 miles to a ski area, you don't have to buy lift tickets. But I think the safety factor also has been a selling point. Broken limbs are a rarity in cross - country skiing. And I think people want to get back to the out - of - doors with their families.

Q. How does cross - country equipment differ from downhill equipment?

A. Cross - country skis are made of wood, with as many as 60 laminations. They are narrower, longer and a pair of them weigh approximately 4½ pounds compared to 10 - 15 pounds for downhill skis. The boot is low - cut, leaving the ankle free to move. The heel is not strapped down, thus allowing up and down movement of the foot, similar to walking. The poles are bamboo and longer in order to get more push.

Q. How important is waxing your skis?

A. Very important! The proper wax is necessary to provide the slide and the grip for your skis. There are different waxes available for different temperatures. The Holley Plastics Co. has developed a specially prepared chemical spray wax and a spray wax remover which simplifies the waxing process.

Q. Is there a difference in the type of clothing you should wear?

A. Definitely. In downhill skiing you generally wear several layers of clothing to keep warm. In Michigan, particularly, you spend more time waiting in lift lines and riding those lifts than you do skiing downhill. Therefore, it becomes important to keep warm. Plus the fact that you're falling on occasion and the snow is cold.

In cross - country skiing, you're moving constantly and therefore expending more energy and keeping the muscles warm. A windbreaker, over a sweater, rather than a heavy parka, is adequate. And knickers give you more freedom of movement.

Q. Can I rent equipment?

A. Yes. We carry a full line of cross - country equipment imported from Norway, Sweden and Finland. We encourage rentals. Our charge is $5 per day or $8.50 per weekend.

Q. How many lessons would it take to make me a fairly competent cross - country skier?

A. There again, it depends on your physical ability. I'd say for the average beginner, a maximum of five lessons would enable you to be a competent skier.

Q. Are there any areas nearby where one can do cross - country skiing?

A. Michigan terrain is ideal for cross - country skiing. Most of your state parks are ideal. The Viking Ski Shop has made arrangements with the Hawthorne Valley Country Club, Merriman and Edward Hines Parkway, to allow cross - country skiing on the golf course this winter.

Arvid Henricksen of Royal Oak who is chairman of the Cross - Country Committee for the United States Ski Association, Central Division, is conducting a ski school on plastic snow at Arrowhead Golf Club in Pontiac.

Defeats Hillsdale 7-2

OCC Skating Hard

Oakland Community College maintained its undefeated record in Midwest College Hockey Association competition by defeating Hillsdale College 7 - 2.

The Raiders took control at 7:33 into the first period when right winger Bob Blackmore scored on a pass from teammate Ray Johnson. It was Blackmore's first goal as a collegian.

Hillsdale scored its first goal in the second period, when Barry Rose beat goalie Craig Wojay with 11:38 remaining.

OCC then proceeded to take complete control of the scoring with goals by Dave Balagna, Jim Blanchard, Mark Marasco, and Tom Zarb, giving the Raiders a convincing 5 - 1 second period lead.

FARMINGTON'S Tim Audette collected an assist on the third Raider score by Jim Blanchard; the goal which later proved to be the winning margin for OCC.

The Oakland advantage was increased with 13:37 left to play in the third period, when Mark Santoni beat Hillsdale goalie Pat Quinn. The final period saw a total of seventeen penalties called, including a game disqualification to Hillsdale defenseman Tim Lockerbie, for deliberately trying to injure.

The final Oakland goal was tallied with 2:16 remaining in the game by freshman Barry Drangin, on a pass from Dennis Chouinard, who collected two assists in the contest. Drangin's final period tally marked his first goal as a college hockey player.

OCC outshot Hillsdale 44 - 28, with Raider goalie Craig Wojay turning in a fine performance, ending the evening with a 93 per cent save average. The Oakland defense was led by team captain Kim Salmela, who also collected two assists in the game.

THE VICTORY over Hillsdale gave OCC a sweep of its season series, and placed the Raiders in sole possession of first place in the Northern Division of the Midwest College Hockey Association. In addition, it continued OCC's domination of Hillsdale in hockey, the Raider's never having lost to the Chargers in three years of competition.

The next OCC home game will be played at Royal Oak on Thursday, Dec. 2 at 7 p.m., when they meet the Rockets of Toledo University.

Turf Tips, Quips

By Doc Minard

Leon Slavin, president and general manager of the Jackson-Northville trotting meeting, is seeking the answer to a vexing problem.

The problem: why is it that Jackson-Northville has the best pacers and trotters ever, has an excellent glass enclosed grandstand with a capacity of more than 5,000 and an ultra-modern enclosed, heated grandstand, yet is only even with Windsor in the head-to-head battle for the bettors' dollars?

HE HASN'T been able to come up with any suitable answers with the exception that Windsor has the artificial Tartan track that insures good racing conditions at all times and Northville Downs has an all-weather dirt strip that is no better or worse than the weather conditions.

"We have a better class of horses," says Slavin. "We are putting on the best winter racing ever in Michigan, but we can't beat Windsor. On the last weekend, the Canadian operation beat us in handle and attendance on Friday and Saturday for the first time of the meeting.

"Our business is ahead of figures for a year ago for the same number of nights, but it could be better, and we should be beating our competition every night of the week...but we aren't.

"I have a belief that the Tartan track does make a difference especially on rainy and snowy nights. It must, because we have Windsor beat in facilities. Our clubhouse dining room serves better meals; we have excellent service. It isn't far to the mutuel windows. We have plenty of parking and yet we don't appear to have the drawing power."

Slavin's ambition this meeting was to beat the pants off the competition. He still hopes to do it before his season ends in late January (provided he receives the January dates from the state racing commissiotier.)

"Our pacing series has been tremendous, so popular that we have had to divide it into two heats each Saturday. On the same night, Windsor only has five or six in its invitational, while we have 14 to 16 in the two divisions," he points out.

"For instance Thimble, a great horse from Ohio, has won three legs of the series and appears to be one of the top pacers competing in the midwest at this time. Every one of the races has been a thriller, and those in attendance marvel at the horses on the grounds.

"But when the turnstile count and the mutuel handle figures come in, we're just a bit short of Windsor. I just can't understand it."

SLAVIN IS forgetting quite a few things. The wagering at Windsor is way down from that of two years ago when it had no competition...and the reason is Jackson-Northville.

Perhaps the Tartan track does have something to do with the difference, and if so, then it's time for the Northville Downs operators to start thinking. There's a winter meeting coming up at the 'Downs in February, and the story may be the same. Time will tell.

Smeltzer Chosen MVP At Harrison Banquet

Barry Smeltzer was honored as most valuable player at the football awards banquet held recently by Harrison High School.

Coach John Herrington congratulated his players at the banquet for winning the Western Six championship in the school's second year of competition with its first team to have seniors.

Special awards went to: Dave Manos, outstanding back; Larry Shaheen, outstanding lineman; Tom Erkert, Stick Award; and Chris Pagnucco, most improved player.

Also receiving special recognition were Harrison's Western Six All-League Selections: defensive team, End Paul Bey and Linebacker Tom Erkert; offensive team, Guard Fred Deschoff; Tackle Larry Shaheen; Tackle Barry Smeltzer; Back Dennis Thibodeau; and Back Dave Manos.

Honorable Mention were: Dave Norton, monster; Chris Pagnucco, quarterback; Bill Herpich, safety; and Mark Bentivolio, noseguard.

HAPPY HUNTER -- Catherine Simon, of 18894 Milburn, Livonia, proudly displays the nine - point buck she bagged on her recent hunting trip. This is the second deer she has shot in her seven years of hunting. Site of the kill was three miles outside Bellaire, Mich. (Observer photo by Maurie Walker)

Home grown parsnips: Anyone who's had French fried parsnips will agree this fine vegetable should be in every home garden. This highly nutritious vegetable does poorly in a clay soil, so if yours didn't fare too well, it could be the soil.

It's smart business to leave parsnips in the ground all winter for early spring harvest. Place a mulch of hay or straw over the row and they'll keep wonderfully. Many gardeners don't even do this and still get good parsnips.

Contrary to popular belief, parsnips do not become poisonous if allowed to start growth again the following spring. Their flavor will decline after growth starts since sugars from the roots are used up when top growth is resumed. Leaving parsnips in the ground all winter improves the flavor by changing the starch to sugar.

If you harvested your entire crop this fall, store them in an earth pit or cool cellar. Nature's own deep freeze in the ground keeps parsnips best.

Ever hear of parsnip poisoning? There's a story going around that you can be poisoned from eating the edible roots of parsnips.

There's no truth to this, although there is a type of poisoning you get from contact with the leaves. The first year the parsnip makes top growth and a fleshy root which is eaten. The second year the plant produces flowers and seeds, after roots have been stored over winter, and set out again the following spring, a practice followed by seed producers.

The first year, there's no poisonous effect from coming in contact with the leaves, but the second year great care must be taken in harvesting the roots because all the dead stems the plants are poisonous to the touch.

Meanwhile, don't worry about being poisoned from eating cultivated parsnips.

CHINESE chestnut: It's difficult to tell the taste between the meat of an American chestnut and the Chinese chestnut. No use comparing the two since the American chestnut is just about gone, except for a few scattered trees which are attempting to make a comeback.

Ever wonder why the meats of the chestnut becomes to hard? Not easy, even enough to crack your teeth.

Chinese chestnuts are starchy and quite different from other nuts. They contain about 45 per cent starch, 5 per cent oil and 50 per cent moisture. This means the nuts are highly perishable, more so than apples, and must be harvested properly.

If you put them in a plastic bag and keep the nuts in the crisper drawer of the refrigerator, you'll find they'll keep for months there.

GREEN THUMB CLINIC: A reader writes: "Our poinsettia has started turning color. Is there anything we can do to keep it colorful until Christmas?"

Answer: Just keep it in a bright window, well watered and cool at night (65 degrees or so) and it should be in good shape for the holidays.

Vestibule Addition Not Expensive

Does your front door lead directly into the living room? What an inconvenient, unpleasant, uncomfortable arrangement! Dirt is tracked directly into the room, occupants are hit by cold drafts and every caller has a full view of the living area when you open the door.

There are two possible solutions. When the room is large, you can erect a full or partial partition to screen off the entrance. But for most homes, the best answer is the addition of a small vestibule.

This is not an elaborate or expensive project. It should cost only a few hundred dollars. In many cases the existing concrete stoop provides an adequate foundation. And often the overhang of the roof is enough to eliminate the need to build a new roof.

The vestibule should be large enough to provide closet room for coats, overshoes, umbrellas and the like. It should be well lighted. And it should have a durable, easy to clean floor.

The Better Floors Council recommends vinyl asbestos tile. It costs around 35 cents a sq. ft.; it is available in a wide range of colors, in both smooth-surface and embossed patterns; and you can install it yourself -- the new adhesive-backed patterns are very simple to lay.

Vinyl asbestos tile is suggested for this type of area because it can be wiped clean in a jiffy, is not affected by water, is scuff-resistant and does not have to be waxed to be maintained at a high appearance level.

Modernize Bathroom

KITCHENS and bathrooms, surveys show, are two rooms needing—and getting—modernization attention first. The probable reasons are the heavy usage and the fact that moisture ruins ordinary walls sooner.

Home owners will have no concern about moisture problems or wear and tear when their bathrooms, dressing rooms and kitchens are paneled with Marsulite Royalite, which has surfaces that are plastic finished for moisture resistance, durability and easy, damp-wipe maintenance.

Available in a variety of patterns, those with thick panels were engineered by Marsulite Corporation for tub, shower or other severe moisture areas. They can be used to cover old or new plaster, cracked plaster, soiled paint and paper.

Royalite panels are ideal for do-it-yourself installations. They are available at lumber and building material dealers. For a free brochure, send a postcard to Marsulite, Box 8, Chicago, Ill. 60690.

Colonial Patterns Available

In this routinized world there is seldom chance for self-expression and job satisfaction. One way to buoy your spirits and relieve tension is - not with a little blue pill - but through woodworking. It not only provides instant escape but also produces tangible results that can be as handsome as they are money saving.

What little girl playing house wouldn't like a baby doll cradle and carriage of her very own? And especially one made for her by her own father, uncle, big brother or grandfather. Custom-made just for her, not mass-produced in a toy factory, it could become the start of a collection of cherished heirlooms.

A full size pattern simplifies making this carriage in a few hours time. The body and hood of the carriage can be covered with cloth, or the entire carriage can be painted. A floral design is included in the pattern so that each side may be decorated.

Send $1 in check or money order for Cradle / Carriage Pattern No. 773/61 to P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y. 10510. Send $1 additional for catalog illustrating over 300 other patterns and books. Add 50 cents if you want patterns sent by special handling. Be sure to include your ZIP code for prompt delivery.

Crabgrass Tip

Maintaining good healthy soil and cutting grass to a proper length can help keep crabgrass out of your lawn, the American Association of Nurserymen advises. Cutting lengths for bluegrass type lawns should be no lower than 2½ inches; the bermuda or zoysia type lawns, ½ to ¾ inches. Additional advice on lawn care can be obtained from your local retail nursery center.

Noisy Fun

Excessive noise levels are not confined to on-the-job situations, but also can be found in recreational activities according to hearing experts.

A REPRODUCTION of the 2½ inch clay brick tiles found in Old English designs, is one of the Devon series from Armstrong Cork Co. Each tile is seemingly hand chipped and individually set in mortar. It is available in five colors.

'Lonesome Plants' TO Be Discussed

BLOOMFIELD HILLS — Plants get lonesome, too, says Warren H. Wagner, Jr., University of Michigan botany professor.

Remoteness from relatives, one reason for rarity in certain Michigan plants, is discussed by Dr. Wagner in his Dec. 3 Cranbrook Institute of Science members' lecture: "Rare and Disappearing Plants of Michigan." Color slides illustrate his 8:15 p.m. program in Cranbrook School Auditorium, 500 Lone Pine Road.

"Changes in the customary habitats of some Michigan plants is another reason for their almost complete disappearance," says Dr. Wagner.

Ferns, wildflowers, trees and grasses are Dr. Wagner's chief botanical interest and lecture concentration, though his comments apply generally to all major groups of plants.

Director of University of Michigan Botanical Gardens, Dr. Wagner is an authority on a wide range of subjects — plants, butterflies, rocks and minerals. His particular interest in field study is ferns.

Dr. Wagner, who continually draws overflow enrollments in his classes, considers his last summer's one-week Dearborn campus course in teaching basic ecological principles to inner city teachers his greatest recent experience.

Having received his doctorate from University of California at Berkeley and a doctoral fellowship from Harvard, Dr. Wagner is vice-president of the Botanical Society of America and president-elect of the Society for the Study of Evolution.

Lecture tickets are free to adult members, 50 cents to student members and $1.50 to all non-members.

Juniors To Show Livestock

Michigan boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 18 can exhibit and sell market steers, lambs and hogs during the annual Junior Livestock Show at the Michigan State Fairgrounds in Detroit Dec. 8, 9 and 10.

The 1971 show, sponsored by the Livestock Improvement Association of Michigan, is coordinated by volunteer 4-H club leaders.

Entrants may exhibit up to two steers, four lambs, and four hogs. Each entrant may exhibit all three kinds of livestock. All entries will be judged Thursday, Dec. 9, and will be sold at a special auction Friday, Dec. 10.

Information regarding the event is available at county extension offices or by writing Mrs. Mullholland, Route 3, Charlotte, Mich. 48813.

Plants Protect Land, Water

Water flowing from property finds its way into rivers or streams in one way or another. Soil eroded from land and carried by wind or water plays a major part in contributing to the 500 million tons of sediment found in our rivers, harbors, lakes and reservoirs each year. Removal of that sediment costs the taxpayers about $250 million a year. Trees, shrubs, grass, and other plants not only help beautify land and protect it from erosion, but also help to preserve our priceless and threatened water resources.

SCHOOLCRAFT PRESIDENT C. Nelson Grote (standing) gave some pointers to the elected discussion leaders and recorders just before the committee work began. 'Sensitized' College Ponders. . .

By KATHY MORAN

A cross-section of Schoolcraft College paused in its rigorous routine for a breath of fresh air.

Escaping city pressures, representatives from all walks of campus life left Nov. 12 for a 26-hour retreat in Waldenwoods, just north of Brighton.

In the southern mansion-styled conference center which is perched amid thick woods on a lake, the participants began a vigorous look into where the college has been, where it is now, and where it is going.

IT WAS like a stew.

Trustees, faculty and administrators were stirred in the same pot with students, secretaries and maintenance personnel. Then they were dished out into eight committees with each facet of campus life represented.

Then the real work began.

It was time to take a hard look at the college, its sore spots, and its direction. With a new president and five new trustees, the time for the evaluation was ripe.

The committee touched on some of the tender problems in the college, primarily where faculty and administrative relationships are concerned.

HOW SHOULD the faculty participate in the decisions made at the administrative level which directly affect them?

Should the college have some form of institutional research to keep policies of the past cohesive with those of the present?

What about the layer of academic deans? Is it necessary--or could the structure be reorganized to make a more functional and efficient administration?

Should the college include, in its building plans priorities, a plan for student housing on campus?

What about student transportation to campus? Can any student get to and from the campus even though he may not have a car or use of a car?

THESE ARE just a shadow of some of the concerns that were examined.

The sensitivity of some of the issues was clearly shown in the defensiveness demonstrated by some of the persons directly involved in the decisions and policies that were some times thrown up for attack.

Some of the groups came to lobby for their special interests, but the tight schedule kept participants involved in mutual problems.

The students held their own ground and were vocal in the discussions. Some of the participants commented they were surprised at how the students were affected by almost every problem expressed.

"What really matters is that we're working together," President C. Nelson Grote said after hearing outlines of some of the committee discussions.

Dr. Grote observed, at the conclusion of Saturday's session, that the committees "never were talking about 'their' problems. We have been talking about 'our' problems, and to that extent I am grateful.

"I think we have realized that no one person can solve them. The only way we can solve them is by working together cooperatively.

"WHAT I HAVE gained is knowledge of the real importance and sensitivity of some problems. I can't work any harder, but I can work smarter," he said in discussing all he learned from the conference.

The two days were marked with a high level of interaction, improved human relations, gaining of mutual respect and the knowledge that "we share a lot of common problems," Dr. Grote said.

But aside from the airing of concerns and the proposing of possible solutions, the most important by-product was seeing the real people behind the suitcoats and ties or skirts and high heels.

In the relaxed atmosphere, it was the first time that the "higher-ups and the commons" could really mix together and see each other as individuals in blue jeans rather than as part of the levels of authority.

Administrators and faculty, who had previously been at odds with one another over incidents from the past, got to know each other personally.

AFTER THE committee meetings gave way for socializing on Friday night, participants discovered who could sing on key and who had the tolerance for late-night chatter.

And when the 49 persons "rose with the geese" on Saturday, they found out who snores or talks in their sleep and who prefers an extra half hour of sleep to bacon and eggs.

They slept in a two-story mansion with the men on one floor and the women upstairs. Dr. Grote locked himself in a room with three students.

As he described it, it was "a very fine time for a retreat."

What becomes of it is the responsibility of the participants. The ultimate effects may not be felt for a long time.

But as one committee member quoted, "Good communication won't solve all our problems, but we can't begin to solve them without good communication."

Faculty Hours Case Brews In Court

By KATHY MORAN

A conflict between the Schoolcraft faculty master contract and the state appropriations act is still brewing after legal action began last week.

At the request of two faculty unions, Ingham Circuit Judge Donald Reisig issued a temporary injunction to prevent state officials from taking action against community colleges which fail to comply with a conflicting state law.

Schoolcraft faculty members are typical of others throughout the state who found that the master agreement they had bargained came in conflict with a section of the appropriations act passed by the Legislature this fall.

THE DISPUTE centers on whether the contract or the public act takes precedence regarding class loads. It hits at the right of the faculty to bargain a contract.

Specifically, the conflict rose from wording in the new act. The act spells out the number of class hours a faculty member must put in per week.

This is an area which Schoolcraft faculty bargained for and which happens to conflict with the act.

A small number of faculty had their class loads increased in the fall to comply with the act despite the fact that their class loads were detailed in the contract.

The legal action taken in Ingham County was initiated by the Michigan Association of Higher Education and the Michigan Federation of Teachers to determine whether the faculty contracts should hold.

THE PRELIMINARY injunction which resulted thus far is specifically against John T. Dempsey, Allison Green, and Albert Lee, all state official involved with the state budget, to keep them from acting against colleges who have not yet complied with the act.

Said Schoolcraft President C. Nelson Grote:

"In my judgment, this preliminary injunction does not solve the basic problem. It does not relieve us of the duty to bargain in good faith as it does to many others as it does to solve them."

Dr. Grote said the college is developing a revised schedule of classes so it won't be caught cold if final action makes a change in faculty schedules necessary before winter classes start in January.

He said the college is also seeking a legal interpretation of the injunction and information on other possible litigation.

A meeting between State Sen. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), State Rep. Marvin Stempien (D-Livonia) (both members of their respective appropriations committees) and faculty, board and administration representatives is scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 18, 10 a.m., to discuss the conflict.

RICHARD ARLEN, president of the faculty's bargaining unit, the Faculty Forum, said the faculty is in the process of getting the full legal opinion and advice from their legal counsel on further action.

"The conflict only affects faculty members whose class load includes laboratories or where there are special areas such as the audio-tutorial [illegible] and English composition, Dr. Grote said. "A large majority of the faculty are [illegible]."

MSU Alumni Re-Elect Tunis

H. Dow Tunis, 16811 Pollyanna Dr., Livonia, has been re-elected president of the 3,200 member Michigan State University Alumni Club of Western Wayne County.

This organization, which has over 1,000 members, works actively in the promotion of MSU through various social functions, football excursions, scholarship awards and as a form of communication for the University.

Other officers elected were Vice President Ernest Wiegel of Livonia, Dr. Robert M. Johnson of Redford, treasurer, and Fran Tunis of Livonia, secretary.

Tunis has been a member of the board of directors since 1960 and previously served as club president in 1962, 1963 and 1966.

Tunis has been the chairman of the annual Michigan-Michigan State football excursion since 1964 and last Oct. 9 presented MSU with a second $1,000 check for the Ralph Young scholarship fund during pre-game ceremonies at the MSU-Michigan game.

H. DOW TUNIS
Heads Alumni

Tunis, a 1955 MSU graduate in business administration and employed at Ford Division, fleet and leasing office, is also currently serving as vice chairman of the Livonia Planning Commission and sergeant-at-arms of Michigan Elks Assn.

'Truth In Taxes' Bill Gets OK

A bill that would automatically cut back the property tax rate in local governmental units if the local property valuation increased drew support from three Observerland state senators and opposition from one.

Sen. William Faust (D-Westland) was one of two senators voting against the bill which passed last week 29 to 2. Voting for it were Sens. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth), David Plawecki (D-Dearborn Heights), and Daniel Cooper (D-Oak Park).

The bill was referred back to the House, which had passed it earlier in a different form.

ALAN R. FRASER of 8661 Randy Drive, Westland, has been appointed organization and administration manager for Ford Tractor operations in Troy. A native of Fitchburg, Mass., Fraser graduated from Dartmouth with a bachelor's degree in business administration and finished his master's at the Amos Tuck School there.

SENATE amendments to the bill would require local units of government to pass a resolution before they could collect increased property taxes resulting from an increase in unimproved property valuations.

If the local units fail to pass a resolution, they could not collect the additional revenue resulting from the state equalized valuation (SEV) increase.

Affecting school districts as well as city, township and village governments, the bill will be in effect for one year if it gains final passage.

PURSELL SAID that the bill takes no power away from local governing bodies, but makes them go on record publicly if they are to collect the additional revenue.

"We thought it was appropriate for the public to be aware of any change in taxes," he said. "We felt it was a solution to a major problem."

He added that in the past, public officials could avoid public notice of tax increase due to valuation increases.

The measure has been described as a "truth in taxing" bill making officials accountable to the public.

WSU Offerings Are Off-Beat Entertainment

By TIM RICHARD

Two of the year's finest evenings of pure entertainment are waiting at the Wayne State University Theater, which rarely does an indifferent job and in these cases has exceeded itself.

The musical version of "Canterbury Tales" at the Bonstelle and "Trelawney of the 'Wells'" at the Hilberry Classic are both off-beat enough to provide something different, traditional enough for the inexpert viewer and innovative enough for the more expert eye.

And if you've been hearing suburban gossip about crime in Detroit, ignore it because the WSU campus is one of the safest places around, and easier to reach (Forest-Warren exit from the Lodge Freeway) than many shopping centers one could mention.

THE BELLY-LAUGHS come at the Bonstelle, 3424 Woodward, in the modern translation of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" -- a production done in the mood of ribald piety.

You don't have to wade through a lot of "forsooths" and "yclepts" in this show. Translated by Nevill Coghill, the script is in couplets that preserve some of the more flavorful double-entendres. The Richard Hill and John Hawkins music is rock but easy on the ears.

Costumes and settings are like something from a tapestry, and the prologue of the Wife of Bath (Beverly Markowitz) is combined with the traditional narrative to tie together four stories--the Miller's Tale, the Steward's Tale, the Merchant's Tale and with Wife of Bath's Tale.

Miss Markowitz -- hippy, buxom, saucy, gleaming of eye, quick as any theologian to select Bible passages that suit her robust tastes -- is superb enough to stand out in a cast that is uniformly excellent.

Anita Greene might have done the role as well but instead gets to frolic as the heroines who surrender their virtue selectively in three of the tales.

Al Hamacher as the soused miller; Robert Robb as the slow-witted carpenter; Paul J. Hustoles as one of the fast-talking lovers; Robert Quigley as the kissing master on the ladder outside a lady's chamber in a scene that would be raunchy if it weren't so gut-bustingly funny...It's hard to pick a favorite.

This is Chaucer the way prim and proper English teachers never dared to try to teach it. It will be repeated Dec. 3-4 and 10-12. If word gets around, the Bonstelle might pack 'em in.

"TRELAWNEY of the 'Wells' " is the first new fall offering of the Hilberry Classic, at Cass and Hancock, and will be in repertory through much of the school year.

It's something of a period piece, written in 1898 and taking place in the 1860s. It's reminiscent of the early American drama you see summertimes at Greenfield Village, but a good deal slicker and better staged.

"Trelawney" is Miss Rose Trelawney, portrayed in a standout performance by Dianne Hill. Trelawney is the star actress at the Wells Theater, and in order to appreciate the company you have to get there in time to read the last page of the program notes for an explanation of the Victorian theater's rules and customs for actors.

There are two casts -- "theatrical folk" and "non-theatrical folk." Miss Trelawney falls in love with, becomes engaged to, and leaves the company for a non-theatrical person, Arthur Gower (Dennis Romer). He is an aristocrat with horribly stuffy guardians who constantly remind Trelawney that some action is "out of place...Young ladies always...Young ladies never..."

In an earlier century, the broken romance would have been healed by the heroine's inheriting a vast fortune so that she can ascend to royalty. Arthur Wing Pinero's plot ends in exactly the opposite way: Arthur Gower becomes an actor.

Unlike most Hilberry offerings, this one is lavishly staged in addition to having the usual slick lighting and gorgeous costuming.

SHIRLEY DARYOW (left) of Southfield, a painter, and Kathryn Irwin of Farmington, who makes Sesame Street puppets, look over some of the art work which will be sold from Dec. 3 to 12 in the Tel-Twelve Mall, Southfield. The sale of art and handicrafts is being sponsored by the Society of Originalists, which seeks to encourage excellence in arts and crafts and to assist artists and craftsmen in finding outlets for their work.

Schoolcraft Party Is For Youngsters

Tickets are still available for "The Ostrich's Christmas Party" at Schoolcraft College this weekend and next. The special film and puppet program for elementary school age children is being presented by the Masque Players of the College.

The showings are at 10 a.m., and 1 and 3 p.m., Dec. 4 and 11, in the Liberal Arts Theatre, 18600 Haggerty Rd.

"The Pied Piper of Now" is an original film by the students, and stars a Livonia youth, Bryan Dumisck, in the role of a boy who meets all kinds of animals in a search for a pet for himself. The all-puppet movie, "Dragon's Bread," is a story about brotherhood.

Tickets are available at the college bookstore, at the door or by calling Dr. Lawrence Rudick at the college. They are 50 cents each.

By BETTY MASSON

Sparked by three fine comedic talents and an impressive debut by a Livonia teenager, the Livonia-Redford Theatre Guild provided a fine evening's entertainment for a packed house Friday evening.

This was opening night for the guild's annual musical. This year it's "Babes in Arms" by Rodgers and Hart. In a uniformly good and attractive cast, the stand - outs are comedians Halen Rahaley, Sharon Bruce and J. Craig Collicott (or is it Lee Calhoun?)

The Livonian making her stage debut is Franklin High School student Robin Shaw.

Maybe the reason it all comes off so well is that the guild s choice cashes in on the current nostalgia craze and provides a most relaxing evening for jaded TV viewers and tax-payers.

ENTIRELY IRRELEVANT (and lacking the occasional moments of boredom even the most relevant themes have often produced in this viewer), the musical appeals to all ages. It was voted even better than "The Partridge Family"; by a member of the teeny-bopper set.

The plot revolves around a group of apprentice actors and actresses, and their efforts to impress a Broadway producer with their revue. The manager of the Surf and Sand Playhouse is more interested in putting on a dismal epic by Collicott-Calhoun, called "The Deep North," and starring the darling of motion pictures, Jennifer Owen, played by Sue Latham.

Helen Rahaley turns in a fine strutting, posturing performance as the would-be siren, Terry Thompson. Not the best singer in the cast, she does star in the best dance portion, a ballet number entitled "Imagine This." Miss Rahaley, a resident of Farmington, teaches at Thurston High School.

As Bunny, the theatre owner's put-upon partner, Sharon Bruce has a somewhat Carol Burnettish style. Her rendition of "The Lady Is a Tramp," is a show-stopper.

COLLICOTT PLAYS the Southern author a la Truman Capote, and is a riot as he wanders on and off the stage like the White Rabbit in "Alice in Wonderland."

It's hard to believe that "Babes In Arms" is Robin Shaw's first acting attempt, so ably and competently does she handle her part as apprentice Susie Ward. Robin, who is a sophomore, also sings well. Her specialty in the play is "My Funny Valentine."

This year's youthful band, under the direction of Neale Stahl, was an effective part of the show. One was almost tempted to ask the band members to play for dancing afterwards, so authentically did they recapture the music of the 1930s.

"Babes in Arms" plays again this weekend in Bentley High School Auditorium, 15100 Hubbard, Livonia.

Tickets are available from Mrs. E.J. O'Connell, 29639 Roberts Drive, Livonia; Mrs. D. I. Borovik, 34948 Grove, Livonia; or Mrs. A. C. Wrigley, 23403 Fenkel, Detroit. Curtain times are 8:30 Friday and Saturday nights and 7:30 Sunday night.

Community, Student Choirs To Perform

Schoolcraft College's two choirs will perform winter concerts the evenings of Friday and Saturday, Dec. 3 and 4. Both are at 8 p.m. in the auxiliary gymnasium of the Physical Education, and both are free to the public.

Under the direction of Brandley Bloom, the first will feature the Symphonic Choir (community singers) and pianist Donald Morelock.

The program includes Mozart's piano concerto No. 20 in D minor and Bach's "Magnificat."

MORELOCK IS a member of the Schoolcraft staff. He teaches private and class piano and music literature. The concerto he will play is described as the most dramatic of all the Mozart piano concertos.

The Symphonic Choir presentation of the "Magnificat" will be accompanied by members of the Schoolcraft Wind Ensemble and instrumentalists from the community. Soloists, all members of the choir, are Judy Slade, Rosemary DiDomizio, Robert Cassidy and James Graham.

The text deals with Mary's prayer of praise at being chosen to be the mother of Christ. The "Magnificat" is one of the greats in choral literature and has tremendous appeal for all ages.

THE SCHOOLCRAFT CHORALE and Madrigal Singers (college students) under Bloom will be in concert on Saturday night.

Their program includes "The Peaceable Kingdom" by Randall Thompson, madrigals, spirituals, and selections from "West Side Story."

The text of Thompson's score is taken from the Book of the Prophet Isaiah. It is a dramatic work written at the time when Hitler was in power in Germany. In two parts, the first deals with the prophecy of just punishment for the wicked. The second describes the peace and solemnity of the righteous.

Madrigals by French, German, and English composers will present texts based on love, celebrations and crickets.

The Chorale is a choir of select Schoolcraft students and the Madrigal Singers are members of the chorale.

Films listed in this guide are showing at area theaters. Check the theater listings for the specific theater and time of showings.

MAN IN THE WILDERNESS–Richard Harris, after being mauled by a bear, is left for dead and has to fight his way alone out of the Northwest Territory (GP, none)

THE CHRISTIAN LICORICE STORE–Sports heroes and their exploitation by fans and commercialism is the theme of this movie starring Beau Bridges and Maud Adams. (GP, none).

PLAY MISTY FOR ME–A suspense thriller in which Clint Eastwood plays a disc jockey, who becomes involved with one of his listeners. (R, none).

CARNAL KNOWLEDGE--A Jules-Feiffer-Mike Nichols movie about two men's lives and feelings about women. With Jack Nicholson and Candice Bergen. (R, A-4).

KOTCH–Walter Matthau plays a delightfully eccentric old man who refuses to be computerized. Jack Lemmon's first directing venture comes off extremely well. (GP, A-3).

BEDKNOBS AND BROOMSTICKS–Bearing a resemblance to Mary Poppins, Angela Lansbury plays a woman who is taking a mail-order course in witchcraft. (G, A-1).

T.R. BASKIN–Candice Bergen plays a friendly small-town girl who heads for Chicago and keeps her illusions in spite of various adventures. (GP, A-3).

SOMETHING BIG Isn't. Dean Martin plays the tenderfoot from the East who wants to pull off a big robbery in the West. (GP, A-3).

FIDDLER ON THE ROOF—The movie, based on Broadway's longest-running musical, lives up to expectations with excellent photography and singing. (G, none).

THE FRENCH CONNECTION—An exciting and violent account of the war against narcotics smuggling, based on a set of actual case histories. (R, A-4).

SUNDAY BLOODY SUNDAY – Strictly for the mature, this story of a man pursued by a homosexual doctor and a woman is a provocative film. (R, A-4)

Why Schools Dislike State Assessment Test

An Observer Roundup

As preparations are now being made to give the third annual state assessment tests to every fourth and seventh grader in Michigan's 612 local school districts next month, Observerland educators are wondering just how valuable the test actually is.

Having just received the results from the 1971 tests, Observerland educators are trying to figure out just what the results mean and whether the conclusions drawn from the results are valid considering the questions asked on the tests.

Educators and school board members in Livonia, Clarenceville, Farmington and Garden City school districts have criticized the tests.

"WE'RE JUST wondering if this is a valid way to assess the kids," said Patricia J. Vickery, elementary consultant to the Clarenceville Schools.

Livonia School District Trustee Dr. A. Edward Katz, who is a professional psychologist, said some of the 1971 test results show a "simple minded view" of the complex functions involved in education.

Southfield School Supt. John English said that while there were a lot of complaints about the tests last year (1970), the criticism appears to have died out there this year.

Dr. Don Shader, Garden City school superintendent, said, "There is no objection to having a viable state-wide assessment program but we do not think the (present) test itself has proven to be reliable or valid."

THE MICHIGAN Assn. for Supervision and Curriculum Development (MASCD), a state-wide organization of school curriculum specialists, issued a three-page position paper on the state assessment tests in June.

"We find that the present assessment program is unsound," the MASCD position said. "The validity and reliability of the tests are not established."

The MASCD said it opposed the assessment program in its present form because the State Department of Education and the Legislature do not use it to actually attempt to change the quality of education.

"There is emphasis only on documenting deficiencies. We in MASCD feel that a much more promising direction lies in a design for helping local districts upgrade education."

MUCH OF THE criticism of the test has centered on the first section which is designed to measure the school districts socio-economic status and pupil attitude toward school. The results of this portion of the test are used in some measure to determine how much state aid will be given to each district.

Questions asked in the first section include: Does your house or apartment have a dining room outside the kitchen? Who acts as your father? Does your family have a dishwashing machine? Is being a good student important?

The questions also ask students about the educational level their parents achieved, the size of their family, whether both parents work and how the students like reading, English, mathematics, their school and their classmates.

"THIS (SECTION of the test) is particularly difficult for fourth graders," Mrs. Vickery said. "They didn't know the answers to some of the questions."

Mrs. Vickery said the Clarenceville fourth-graders' difficulties with some of the questions on the socio-economic status part of the test last year led to a minor furor when the students went home and asked their parents the answers to some of the questions they didn't know.

The parents, many of whom did not know that the first section of the assessment test is anonymous, saw the socio-economic status questions as an invasion of their privacy. They complained to the Clarenceville Board of Education, which in turn asked the Michigan Department of Education about the matter.

The state told the board to tell students not to answer any questions about their socio-economic status that they didn't want to.

Mrs. Vickery questioned whether the results drawn from the questions asked on that portion of the test were valid. "Frankly, I think there are some better questions they could ask," she said.

KATZ ALSO criticized the number of questions used by the test to determine attitudes toward school and self evaluation as too small to provide reliable results.

Dr. English said most of the criticisms on the assessment tests in Southfield last year had centered on the questions on the socio-economic status.

The second portion of the test is designed to measure the fourth and seventh graders achievement in vocabulary reading, English and mathematics.

But educators have also questioned this part of the test. The mathematics questions asked of fourth graders have been called too difficult and more appropriate for sixth graders.

"The reading test doesn't test reading as much as it does speed," Mrs. Vickery said. She also criticized the varied subject matters covered in the reading test.

"Girls are not motivated to read about race cars, and boys aren't motivated to read about dolls."

THE TESTS were initially drawn up by the Educational Testing Service, a Princeton, N.J. research firm which prepares many educational tests used across the country including the college entrance exams known as the SAT tests (Student Achievement Tests).

The State Board of Education's Bureau of Research, Evaluation and Assessment Services (BREAS) works year-around to extrapolate results from the tests and to evaluate and revise questions for the next year's test.

While the exact content of the 1972 assessment tests has not been divulged as yet, the preliminary BREAS report indicates several changes have been made from last year's test, which included several changes from the 1970 tests.

Katz had criticized the changes between the 1970 and 1971 tests. The questions on the second test were weighed differently than on the first test so the results are no more comparable than "apples and oranges," the Livonia school trustee said.

UNDER STATE law, each Michigan school district with fourth and seventh graders must administer the annual assessment test in accordance with the State Department of Education guidelines.

1971 ASSESSMENT TEST results for Observerland school districts show that they generally ranked at or above the median percentile ranking of other districts in the state. All scores given here are in percentiles (if a school district has a 75 scored percentile, this means its median district score was as high or higher than 75 per cent of the other districts in the state). School districts are abbreviated here as follows: Garden City (GC); Wayne-Westland (WW); Plymouth (PLYM); Farmington (FARM); Clarenceville (CVLE); Livonia (LIV); South Redford (SR); and Southfield (STHFLD). Footnote 1 signifies an estimate percentile while Footnote 2 denotes a rough evaluation. Figures which could not be obtained were left blank.

OBSERVATION POINT

Wage-Price Program Hurts Average Guy

By Philip H. Power
Publisher

While judges, politicians and school boards have been fussing inconclusively about bussing, the main topic of conversation in these parts has turned to President Nixon's new economic policy and in particular to Phase II.

Only last week, an Oakland County Circuit judge ruled that the wage-price freeze was unconstitutional in certain cases. He probably will be overruled by higher courts. But it's interesting that this first legal setback to the freeze came from a judge sitting in a primarily suburban county.

Interesting because many of the aggravations and defects of the Pay Board-Price Commission setup hit workers and businesses here in the suburbs harder than elsewhere.

SOME EXAMPLES.

• This newspaper has received through newspaper trade associations and from government handouts no less than 58 single-spaced typewritten pages of regulations, rules, interpretations and guidelines. Most businessmen I have talked to have received as much, taking into account they aren't on the government's press release list. Nobody I've talked to knows exactly what all the verbiage means; I certainly don't.

• What with all the guidelines, both the Pay Board and the Price Commission seem to be in their rulings ignoring what they decreed in the first place. The Pay Board allowed the United Mine Workers 15.8% first year wage increase to go through, even though it was nearly triple the Board's own 5.5% upper limit.

The Price Commission, not to be outdone, approved last week six price increases. The percentages involved were 7.6, 7.2, 4.5, 3.9, 3.8, and 2 – all but one being over what is commonly believed to be the Commission's own 2.5% upper limit.

• The government itself, which might have been expected to be toughest in enforcing its own rules, has hardly been all that strict. Chief example is the United States Postal Service, which has on file with the Price Commission a request for a 23.9% increase on third class mail.

THE ODD thing about all these examples is that they bear most directly on big business or big labor, elements not particularly representative of the suburban economic scene.

The 58 pages of rules, for example, are darn hard for a small businessman to plough his way through, let alone understand. By contrast, a Washington lawyer friend of mine reports that a substantial part of his firm's recent business has come from big business clients asking for help in contacting government insiders to get a quick interpretation or a tentative ruling on one point or another in the regulations.

I don't know exactly what my lawyer friend bills his time at, but I would guess that $50 per hour isn't far off; and how many small suburban businessmen can afford that kind of expensive advice?

Big labor, despite all the snorting from George Meany, seems to be doing all right from the Pay Board. The Mine Workers got theirs, and so will the Longshoremen. Big contracts negotiated before the freeze will still carry their big deferred boosts in wages and benefits; covered in this group are Teamsters and workers in the telephone, auto, steel, can, aluminum and copper industries.

As one United Steelworkers official said about Nixon's policy, "You can't knock his timing. All the biggies had their contracts wrapped up when he made his move."

How many workers in small businesses in the suburbs does this leave out?

THE REAL POINT behind all this economic stuff is that while the big businesses and the big labor unions are doing all right, the small businessman, the small union member, and the average taxpayer are still taking it on the chin.

It's precisely these groups who are getting hurt who make up the backbone of the economy of the suburbs. And plenty of people are getting sore.

As one small businessman from Southfield put it, "I want to know just what the hell is going on. First they say we're gonna have guidelines, but then anybody who has the clout or the influence -- management or labor -- can go in and get just about what they want. It isn't fair."

I agree. It isn't fair.

The President's policy to stop inflation will eventually fail or succeed according as the average American tries his level best to go along with the anti-inflation guidelines. But if he sees the big guys getting away with what they want, regardless of the rules, he's going to do the same thing. And that will be the end of the anti-inflation program.

The people in Washington might want to think that over before they make too many more decisions like they've made recently.

Why Can't We Buy Returnable Bottles If We Want 'Em?

By MARGARET MILLER

A few years back, my shopping routine used to include a drive of several miles to a favorite party store, where the cost of various beverages was lower by the case and I could stock up on several kinds my family enjoyed.

They all came in returnable bottles. I had a wooden case for each kind of beverage, and I could keep track of the kinds needed each week and return the cases and bottles for a refill.

I stopped going there when the store no longer could obtain beverages in returnable bottles.

BUT NOW I travel even further in my weekly errands – I take large sacks of empty bottles and cans to the only going-concern recycling center in Observerland.

I make the trip because I feel it's one small thing I can do if I feel real concern over the way trash is filling up our landscape.

But the trip is unsatisfactory, much as I appreciate the devoted efforts of those fine volunteers who man the center.

Frankly, I find those great vats of empty cans and bottles rather depressing.

For one thing, I know the empty containers brought there are but a drop in the bucket compared to the millions used.

For another, I've been told that under present industrial processes, it's just not possible for the manufacturers to recycle all the used glass and metal -- recycled material can account for only a small percentage of the new product.

And last, but definitely not least, I know I'm paying more for those bottles I can't return, and I don't like it.

Maybe what bothers me most is the fact that the problem is so large and my possible contribution to a solution so puny.

BUT GREAT PROGRESS could be made toward significantly reducing the containers that clutter our environment, and at this point the local governments and the large retail outlets are the ones who could help.

Environmental action groups have asked local governments in this area to ban non-returnable bottles for soft drinks and beer and ale.

That would be a major step in reducing the volume of trash.

Wayne, Garden City and Northville have passed ordinances making it illegal to sell beverages in no-return bottles after the first of next year. Plymouth's city commission voted some months ago to ban non-returnable bottles beginning next Jan. 1, then this month missed by an eyelash rescinding the action and finally moved the effective date to Jan. 1, 1973.

Other local governments have declined to act, arguing -- with some validity -- that restrictions work hardships on merchants when they are not in effect in neighboring communities.

In the meantime, everyone sits tight, the stores stock beverages in non-returnable bottles and cans, and the used containers pile up.

LACK OF ACTION also is noticeable in the stores. One major supermarket chain made a big publicity splash a few months ago by announcing it was going to have beverages in returnable bottles because its customers had indicated by vote that was what they wanted.

The announcement may have won some customers, because other chains emulated the action, as far as it went.

But the customer soon learned that all it meant was that a very few brands of soft drinks and beer--no low-calorie and no mixes--are available in returnable bottles, and that even those frequently are out of stocks while the shelves are filled with disposable containers.

Now I'm well aware that the reason for the almost universal use of no-return containers is that many customers went along with manufacturers and retailers in referring them.

And I also realize that there are umpteen items that couldn't possibly be packaged in returnable containers. That's where the recycling centers are needed, and would continue to be.

BUT TWO FACTORS in the question nag at me. The first is that I, as a consumer who would prefer to buy returnable bottles and save money and trash can space by returning them, am denied any choice in the matter.

And the other is all the environmental pollution entailed in manufacturing and even recycling all those containers, and the persistent vision of great piles of trash just taking over.

Leonard Poger writes

History Needs Attention

Most of the action in municipal government takes place before city councils, township boards, and local planning commissions.

This is about right since those groups have the chance to act on anything of controversy.

BUT THERE is one corner of municipal government which doesn't seem to have much appeal--as local politics is concerned and it's a shame they don't get more attention than they do.

We're talking about local historical commissioners and the unsung jobs they are performing, usually without much fanfare or publicity.

A Westland historical commission member said recently that it is vitally important for a community to learn about its past so it can better understand the present.

We couldn't agree more.

BUT THE residents aren't the only ones forgetting about local historical commissions.

In Garden City recently, the chairman of the local historical commission learned to her dismay that one of the city's first churches was demolished.

No notice was given to the commission before the demolition so that the group could get final pictures and collect some of the valuable records inside the church.

We suggested to the chairman that she ask the powers that be in city hall that the historical commission be given a routine phone call or letter whenever a demolition permit is issued by the building department.

THIS TYPE of communication would help in preventing the loss of valuable historical records before it is too late.

In Westland last month, the commission held its first public-oriented function with the dedication of a 122-year old cemetery.

To the surprise of many, an estimated 100 persons showed up on a rainy Saturday afternoon when it would have been more convenient to sit in a comfortable living room and watch a college football game on TV.

This is the kind of support local historical commissions like to see--and should have from the public.

School Kids Don't Like Balanced Meals

By Marie McGee

The neighborhood school concept that promotes the walk-home-for-lunch theory played a big part in scuttling South Redford's elementary school hot lunch program.

Not enough kids were staying for lunch, and the program was losing money.

But that's only part of the reason.

EARLY LAST FALL there were signs that the program was faltering because of menu offerings. A hot lunch program basically has to be well-balanced to be nourishing. And to achieve that, ARA Food Service operators had to use vegetables.

Like beets. And sweet potatoes. Even peas and carrots. Remember them?

But the pampered appetites of South Redford's bubble gum set weren't having any of it. They threw the vegetables into the waste bin faster than you can say "Johnny Lightning."

It made ARA's job of supplementing the daily diet with nourishing goodies ever harder.

But there's a bright note to the situation. While a wholesome lunch is important, most educators believe it's healthier for the youngster to split the school scene for awhile, even for a steady diet of peanut-butter-and jelly sandwiches and a popsickle.

Use Only U.S. Stamps

"Stamps" to be produced and issued by a so-called "independent postal system" may not be used on deposits in the U.S. mails, the U.S. Postal Service cautions.

Referring to reports that "ipsa stamps" with denominations of one to 50 cents are to be issued by a private firm on Nov. 30, the Postal Service noted that putting those stamps on envelopes or packages would disqualify the envelopes or packages for mailing in the U.S. mails.

This is true even if the mail should carry additional legal U.S. postage stamps, the Postal Service added.

If deposited in receptacles for U.S. mail, letters carrying the so-called "stamps" are subject to return to mailers and postage due charges.

Mailers should make certain that the only stamps to be affixed to their letters and packages are the official U.S. postage stamps, if they want to insure prompt delivery.

Sense And Nonsense

The following lines were found in Ford World, a company publication, and are reported without comment:

"Press releases and brass bands, banners and jingles, hoopla and bally-hoo . . . and why not? Ford's two-ton infants represent thousands of machine and man hours – from the capricious drawing board to the computerized conveyor belt on the assembly – and you played a part in their birth.

"If you're excited, that's exactly how you're supposed to feel."

How SC Cut Budget

President C. Nelson Grote called a special meeting for employes of Schoolcraft College last week to detail steps he has taken in reducing college expenditures by $200,000 for the current fiscal year.

"We have balanced our budget," Dr. Grote said, "for the first time since it was adopted last June 23." He added, "Of course, we have data now that we couldn't possibly have had then."

Dr. Grote said the imbalance was corrected without any cuts in personnel, programs, or services. He sounded a note of caution, however, that such cuts still might have to be made if retroactive pay for Phase One is ordered.

IT HAS BEEN estimated that the college will realize a reduction in expenditures of $94,000 from employe wage increases not permitted during the August-through-November wage and price moratorium.

"Let me make it perfectly clear that this is your money," the president said, "and we will pay it to you if it is legally possible.

"If retro pay is possible, then we will have to go back and reduce expenditures by an additional $94,000. This will mean a loss of personnel, programs, or services, one or all three."

"If that happens," Dr. Grote concluded, "we'll be getting down to the 'nitty gritty' of budget adjustment!"

THE TOTAL budget imbalance amounted to $270,000. It was caused by various factors, some of which have been carried over from the previous fiscal year.

Revenue shortages for 1970-71 (anticipated but not received) included $217,000 less from state appropriations, $76,500 less from tuition and fees, and $57,250 less from federal and state vocational funds.

One of the bright spots in current budget adjustments was a check just received for $84,000 more than the auditors anticipated this year from federal and state vocational funds.

Dr. Grote said it couldn't have arrived at a better time and congratulated Dean Jon Adams, who heads Schoolcraft's division of applied science, for his efforts in obtaining the reimbursement.

The budget adopted last June totaled $6.1 million. The revised and balanced version just completed totals $5.9 million. The difference has been effected literally "by saving $10 here and $10 there," as Dr. Grote described it.

"IT HAS BEEN our intention to preserve the fiscal integrity of the college and to maintain our contractural obligations and objectives," Dr. Grote said. "So we decided not to make across-the-board cuts but to evaluate our expenditures line for line, postage stamp for postage stamp."

In retrospect, the budget adopted last June actually had a deficit of $132,601, something the college couldn't know then. This, coupled with a three per cent reduction ordered by the state from Schoolcraft's current state appropriation, has resulted in a total deficit of $204,940. This has been realized by reducing expenditures by $120,000, plus the $84,000 wage savings from Phase One.

A number of printed materials were distributed at the meeting, and Dr. Grote invited employe reaction and suggestions through supervisors and directors. He said further changes could be effected by Dec. 1.

He added, though, any changes would at this point have to be "dollar-for-dollar." By this he meant restoration of any cuts would result in cuts elsewhere to maintain the now-balanced budget.

The president announced periodic review of the budget, which will take place shortly after the first of the year and again during the fourth quarter. He also announced a faculty and staff meeting for 11 a.m. Dec. 17 in Waterman Campus Center to present the 1972-73 revenue schedule and budget guidelines.

New Aide Joins Pursell's Staff

A long-time political ally, Robert Webber of Grand Ledge, is the new legislative aide to State Sen. Carl Pursell (R-Plymouth).

Webber replaces Bob Ameen, who resigned a month ago.

Active in the Republican Party, Webber first became acquainted with Pursell in 1965 while working on Farrell Roberts' campaign for the State Senate. Pursell was Roberts' campaign manager and Webber was assigned by the party to work on the campaign.

At that time, Webber was the director of organization for southeastern Michigan in the Republican Party. He left that post in 1967 to become executive secretary to the House Speaker Robert Waldron until 1969.

Webber spent the last two years as director of urban affairs for the Republican Party.

He graduated from Michigan State University with a bachelor of arts degree in history and political science.

A native Detroiter, Webber also spent 10 years with Jam Handy selling audio visual equipment and also worked for the Aluminum Co. of America.

What Happened To Vets' Day?

EDITOR:

I for one would like to see the people of this great country, especially veterans, stand up and let their voice be heard and ask that Nov. 11 be returned as Armistice Day.

There is no reason why it had to be changed to Oct. 25. Did you note the lack of flags for either date? The lack of attendance for the parade?

What has happened to the day we were brought up when I was in school, and we were allowed prayers and we knew we always celebrated Armistice Day on Nov. 11? Many schools even had special programs. Did we suffer from this? No, I don't think so.

And I think it is about time we went back to some of those things that were presented when I was in school. When was that, you say? Well not many years ago, but if you really care back in the late '30s and graduating in 1943.

Our veterans deserve to have this date restored to Nov. 11. This was the official end of World War I.

My father fought in that war, along with many relatives and friends. Why has this special day been taken away from them?

It seems to me that the government is trying to take everything from us. The right to prayers in school. The right to celebrate the true Armistice Day, Nov. 11, along with several other things.

I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies.

But did you look about on Oct. 25, and Nov. 11? How many flags were flying, how many programs were held for this date? What happened to the days we used to honor our veterans? Let's do something about it, and before next year. Give Nov. 11 back to our veterans.

MRS. ANNA ADRAGNA
Legislative Chairman of the Ladies Auxiliary to Veterans of Foreign Wars, and member of Auxiliary 345.

I made sure I attended the school board meeting so I could hear for myself what was said in regard to the bussing issue. I came away with the impression nobody was in favor of bussing, but for one reason or another, certain members felt that now was not the time to make a definite decision, and they are clearly entitled to their opinion.

After all, Judge Roth has made no final ruling. While working at the booth, this was the explanation I used; then if the people had a desire to sign the recall, it was their own decision.

I also felt that the description of "petitions being shoved in front of busy shoppers" is unfair. If the people were interested in signing petitions, I was in a booth and they came to me. I never approached anyone, it was strictly voluntary.

I must, however, agree with your opinion that Harvey Moglke and several other members of the Livonia NAG are trying to make obvious political capital of the bussing issue.

They have, in my opinion, for their own personal gains, destroyed the basic concept and reason for forming an anti-bussing group.

Anti-Busser Not Recaller

EDITOR:

Ever since I read Leonard Poger's editorial on bussing in the Nov. 17 Livonia Observer, I have been going to write this letter.

I do not feel that the editorial was entirely accurate. It said "Persons with recall petitions have been manning booths at the Livonia Mall, telling shoppers that several school board members are in favor of cross-districting bussing."

I resent being attributed with that type of a statement.

I worked at the Livonia Mall to get anti-bussing petitions signed. Never did I say several members of the school board are in favor of cross-districting bussing.

2 Hamilton Agents Get Suspensions

The licenses of two Alexander Hamilton Life Insurance Co. agents have been suspended for 90 days by the Michigan Commerce Dept.'s insurance bureau.

The suspensions were handed out to Thomas E. Long of Southfield and James R. Williams Jr. of Bourbonnais, Ill., for allegedly misrepresenting the benefits or provisions of insurance contracts they sold.

The insurance bureau said licenses were suspended as part of a settlement with the Farmington Township firm reached following license revocation hearings held earlier this year on complaints received from several policy holders.

Disagree On Stadium

Reps Split 4-3 On Hotel Tax

By KATHY MORAN

Detroit's domed stadium is one step closer to reality, but Observerland's state representatives split on their support for it.

A bill to levy a five per cent tax on hotel and motel bills in Wayne County passed the House 59 to 39 last week (56 votes are needed for passage).

The split in the House was mirrored in Observerland where four representatives voted for the bill, three opposed it and one didn't vote.

IN SUPPORT of the tax were Reps. James Defebaugh (R-Birmingham, John Bennett (D-Redford Township), Thomas Brown (D-Westland), and Marvin Stempien (D-Livonia).

Opposing it were Reps. Raymond Baker (R-Farmington), James Tierney (D-Garden City), and Richard Young (D-Dearborn Heights).

Rep. Joseph Forbes (D-Oak Park) did not vote.

The hotel-motel tax is expected to bring in $2 million a year if it gets final approval in the Legislature.

THE WAYNE County Stadium Authority estimates it will need $13.5 million a year to pay off the revenue bonds to finance construction.

Since the stadium is expected to bring in $9 million a year, the authority still needs $2.5 million to finance the building. The balance could be paid by an increase in the state's share of racing revenue, off-track betting, or dog racing – all possibilities under consideration.

Reps. Bennett and Young were the only local legislators that could be reached for comment over the holidays.

BENNETT SAID he voted for the tax because the stadium will bring business into Detroit, thus increasing state revenues.

"I think the stadium will act as a catalyst, bringing more business into Detroit and generating more revenue for the state," he said. "It will also create additional job opportunities – and Detroit has a 10 per cent rate of unemployment.

"It is not a tax on the people in Wayne County. It is a tax on the people who use the hotels and motels in the county of Wayne. These are transient people, most of them come in from out - of - state."

The tax was vigorously opposed by Myra Wolfgang, secretary - treasurer of Local 705 of the Hotel, Motel and Restaurant Employers Union, who argued that it would cripple an industry which is ailing already.

Last minute opposition came from the AFL-CIO.

YOUNG SAID he opposed it because if the stadium fails to generate enough revenue to cover its $9 million share of the expense, the residents in Wayne County will have to make up the balance.

"If the expectations of the Stadium Authority are not met, it becomes the obligation of the county," Young said. "If the purpose is to solve some of the social problems existing in Detroit, I don't think Wayne County should get stuck with it (the bill)."

Young pointed to Cobo Hall and Olympia stadium as examples of facilities that are used at less than capacity.

"I think it is unfair to the hotel and motel operators that the tax is on them and not throughout the state," Young added.

The total cost of the stadium is projected at $126 million. It would be ready for use in December in 1974 with completion scheduled for April of 1975.

The stadium has already won approval by the Wayne County Commissioners.

Spotlight on Women

Goodfellow Or Heritage

Dolls Are Heralds Of Christmas

Ask the little girl in any woman – dolls have a special place in Christmas preparations.

So whether you're a junior high student not too many years removed from your own doll friends or a church worker who has admired antique dolls, you are a good candidate for doll fever.

Some home economics students at Farmington Junior High School and the women planning a Dec. 5 bazaar in St. Valentine Catholic Church, Redford Township, are recent victims.

THE EIGHTH AND NINTH grade girls in Mrs. Jane Williams' sewing classes in the Farmington school dressed Goodfellow dolls for a drive currently under way in that community.

The St. Valentine women's project has been dressing heritage dolls as a special feature for the bazaar that will be running from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. The church is located at 25800 Dow.

The junior high seamstresses, who also have made many little girl dresses for the Goodfellow drive, said they decided on the project because they had made several clothing items for themselves and wanted to do something for someone else.

Some of the scraps, which they fashioned into ball dresses, sport costumes and pinafores for the assortment of blond and brunette dolls, came from their home sewing leftovers. Other materials were donated, Mrs. Williams said.

The teacher said she was sure the project advanced sewing knowledge besides being a lot of fun. About 20 dolls and 20 dresses were contributed.

"AND WE FOUND OUT it isn't all that easy to make doll clothes," one of the girls said. "They're so tiny."

The heritage dolls that will be on sale in St. Valentine's are the result of hours of painstaking labor. The women who worked on the project – Carol McMaster, Toni Mancuso, Pat Koss and Dilly Janssen – started with purchased ceramic heads on a cone stand and separate ceramic hands.

The heads and hands were painted and antiqued, and hair was made from starched and carefully curled crochet thread.

Then the women designed the dresses and used starch to keep them in permanent folds.

"Each doll took about 12 hours of work," said Mrs. Janssen, who is president of the Altar Society that is sponsoring the bazaar. "The time-consuming part was the starching – you have to keep pulling out the folds to make it dry in place."

THE SMALLER DOLLS the women have made will be sold for $15 each or $27.50 for a pair, a price that's much lower than the one set for similar dolls in stores, the women said. A larger lady will go for $35.

Also on sale during the St. Valentine bazaar will be candlesticks, nut trees, paintings, decoupage and inexpensive gifts, and there will be a bake shop and refreshments.

A visit from Santa and puppet shows at 12:30 and 1:30 p.m. are planned for the children.

m. m. memos

Sometimes I think I could be a parent at least semi-effective if it were not for a certain five-letter word. It's spelled B-O-O-T-S.

I never was too fond of the word. When the girls were little, I remember that in my mind winter weather was boots-and-snowsuit time, and the effort required to get them in and out of the same was constantly exhausting.

But now that they can put on their own, the word has a new dimension.

First, there's the matter of finding suitable boots. It took considerable time and three stores to get two of the clan properly booted this weekend. The problem was reconciling their fashion standards and my unimaginative insistance on weatherproofing.

But purchasing the boots–at a dollar value that inflicted serious if not critical damage on the budget–was nothing compared to the trauma that ensued when I suggested they actually WEAR them.

Our high schoolers escaped into Monday's snow and rain because when they leave, it's too early for me to be revved up for argument, and anyway they're as big as I am.

Miss Junior High's excuse was that the precipitation had stopped for the moment, and besides, she had only a block to go.

So our youngest bore the brunt of my boot neurosis.

Protesting, she donned and wore her new boots, coming back only once to tell me that NOBODY else was so burdened.

Looks like a long boot-season ahead. Hope we–and the boots–can hold out.

Women Voters Will Discuss Integration

School integration will be among the subjects discussed at a general meeting of the Northville - Plymouth League of Women Voters at 8 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 2, in Epiphany Lutheran Church, 41390 Five Mile.

The league will review its Human Resource position as it relates to integration of schools.

In a simulated hearing, the views of Judge Stephen Roth, the NAACP, the Detroit school board and the Citizens' Committee for Better Education will be presented. Integration is being studied on a metropolitan basis by representatives of local leagues in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb and Washtenaw counties.

The first half of the program will be on the Lake Erie Basin Committee. As a result of the league's concern with conservation, pollution prevention and improved water resource planning in the Lake Erie area, an inter - league basin group was formed in 1963. Members will decide what new direction this committee should take.

Mrs. Charles Ayers, 511 Reed, Northville, is handling membership information for the league.

Girls Use Spaghetti To Fight Inflation

A spaghetti dinner may not be the answer to inflation, but it's part of the battle being waged against it by a group of Livonia Girl Scouts.

More than two years ago, members of Cadette Troop 620 started planning and saving for a trip to the Savannah, Ga., to visit the birthplace of Girl Scouting's founder in the U.S., Juliette Low. The trip is to take place in April, 1972.

But the price of jet fare and housing has been hit by inflation, like everything else, so the girls' original money goal won't be enough to cover costs.

Thus they have turned their talents to spaghetti-making, along with hot rolls, tossed salads and cakes, and will serve dinner from 5 to 7:30 p.m., Thursday, Dec. 9, in Emerson Junior High School, 29100 W. Chicago, Livonia.

Tickets are $1.25 each or $5 for a family, and will be sold at the door.

The girls are also selling nuts, decorating cakes for birthdays, graduations, Christmas parties and any other special occasion, and are collecting newspapers to help reach their new goal.

MARGARET HESS

Mrs. Hess Is Speaker

Mrs. Margaret Hess of Ward United Presbyterian Church of Livonia will give a talk entitled "The Holy Land" at this week's meeting of Church Women United.

The meeting will include a Christmas luncheon beginning at 12:30 p.m., Dec. 3, in Ward Church, Six Mile and Farmington, Livonia.

Reservations must be made with Mrs. Fred Dover, 16905 Pollyanna Drive, Livonia.

Mrs. Joseph Borowy, past president of the Detroit Metropolitan Association of Women's Fellowship, will install new officers.

Floral Show Set For Livonia Rotary Anns

Expressions of Christmas in Flowers will be the theme of the Rotary Anns of Livonia Christmas luncheon at 12 noon Thursday, Dec. 2, in the Meadowbrook Country Club, 40941 W. Eight Mile, Northville.

Jack Smith, owner of French's Florist, and Jan Mansfield, designer, will present a program on floral arrangements, and the Bentley High School choir will sing.

Proceeds from the $4.25 donation will go to the Crippled Children center. Reservations may be made with Mrs. Lee Rolls, 15396 Alpine Drive, Livonia.

First Child

Mr. and Mrs. James Edward Monette of South Harvey Street, Plymouth, announce the birth of their first child, Edward James Monette, on Nov. 17.

Ecolo-Craft Is Featured

Macrame and ecolo-crafts will be featured for the Holiday Workshop meeting of the Farmington-Livonia Women of Wayne at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 3, in the Farmington Community Center.

The ecolo-craft utilizes discarded materials, and all projects will be demonstrated by WOW members. The club is open to all women in the area who are graduates of Wayne State University or have taken classes there, and all interested are invited to attend.

Senior Scouts Set Fun Fair

Senior Girl Scout Troop 258 of Farmington will sponsor a Fun Fair and bake sale from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 4, in the First United Methodist Church of Farmington, Grand River at Warner.

Children's games, a fish pond, a cake walk and prizes will be included in the day's activities.

Wendy Arrives

Mr. and Mrs. Jonathon Adams of Plymouth announce the birth of a daughter, Wendy Erin, on Nov. 15 in St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, Ann Arbor.

Wendy's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Hayes of Plymouth and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas T. Adams of Barrington, Ill.

Women's Editor

She Helps The Blind To 'Read' Music

How does a blind child with music in his soul learn to "see" it translated into notes on a staff?

How can an adult suddenly blinded--perhaps in Vietnam--find a way to musical expression?

Is there help for the partially-sighted for whom music could be a creative outlet--if they could just read the score?

A GARDEN CITY teacher who knows the joy of making music has found a way to help these people and would like to persuade others to do the same.

Loupatti Miller makes her home in Westland and teaches music in Garden City's Farmington, Radcliff and Douglas Schools. She is one of about 20 persons in the country who can transcribe a printed musical score into a special music Braille.

Recently she was named by her honorary music fraternity, Sigma Alpha Iota, to head its nationwide program of volunteer Braille transcribing for musicians.

Another member of the group is concentrating on leading volunteers who produce an aid for the partially sighted known as bold notes.

"We're trying to do all we can to increase the number of music Braillists," Miss Miller said. "There's such a big need, and it becomes greater as people begin to realize the possibilities."

IT'S A complicated process, she admits, turning a musical score into a series of raised dots that a blind musician can "see" with his fingers.

"You use a long paper," she explained, "because they need to know the notes that go together. A few full orchestrations--as many as 24 scores--have been transcribed.

"The field is wide open and we have to sort of feel our way, especially considering the new developments like electronic and synthesized music."

LOUPATTI Miller's interest in Braille started when she was a senior at the University of Michigan completing requirements for a degree in piano music. She was president of the campus chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, and in that capacity attended a Chicago convention and learned about the organization's Braille project.

"I guess I got the bug then," she said.

The next year, working toward a degree in music education at Michigan State University, she roomed with a student preparing to teach the visually handicapped and also worked with a blind singer who was trying to master music too difficult to memorize.

She decided to study Braille, learning by correspondence course and starting with literary Braille. "You have to start there because the basics are in the literary alphabet and anyway words are needed in musical transcriptions," she said.

IT TOOK two years' work before she achieved certification by the U.S. Library of Congress as a Braille transcriber, and another two years was needed for music Braille certification.

About 40 in the country have completed the latter training, she said, but only half of that group is actively transcribing.

Miss Miller works with about eight other fraternity members, transcribing various works requested and cleared by the Library of Congress.

"We're only scratched the surface of the work to be done," she said, "and we can't begin to keep up with the requests."

In addition to the hours spent in volunteer transcribing, Miss Miller is glad to talk to all sorts of groups about her work, always hoping to interest more transcribers. She also talks to school children about the Braille program and plans soon to work with a Girl Scout troop in outlining the basics.

SHE WOULD like to see more training centers established, especially during the evening hours so employed people could participate in the program.

"And we need more young transcribers," she added. "Most of those actively doing the work are retired people. It's true that it is time-consuming, but it's extremely rewarding."

Refresher Course Graduates 19 RNs

Nineteen registered nurses, including five from Observerland, graduated Nov. 24 from the fall RN refresher course in the Providence Hospital School of Nursing, 16001 W. Nine Mile, Southfield.

The list of graduates includes Rose LaFave and Geraldine Doyle of Farmington, Bernice Nabors and Katherine Hamilton of Southfield and Clare Owdziej of Lathrup Village.

SPONSORED BY the Michigan Nursing Association, the Michigan Employment Security Commission and the Michigan Department of Education and funded by the Manpower Development and Training Act, the refresher course is designed to alleviate the shortage of registered nurses in Michigan.

In addition to Providence, more than 20 hospitals and colleges in the state offer similar programs.

The women who received certificates for completing the course had attended classes from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m. five days a week for six weeks. Following a week of orientation, they spent four hours each day in supervised on-the-job experience.

According to Agnes McMenemy, director of the nursing school, more than 100 women have completed refresher courses since they were started at Providence more than five years ago. More than 50 per cent have returned to full-time or part-time nursing.

THE SCHOOL of nursing also hosted 300 students from metropolitan area high schools at an open house on Nov. 29. Students from Redford Township, Farmington, Plymouth and Livonia were invited to attend.

The open house, highlighted by a tour of the hospital and nursing school facilities, was designed to give students interested in nursing careers an opportunity to explore the education programs offered at Providence.

A similar program is designed for March.

Sr. Timothy Named Top Educator

Sister M. Timothy Leahy, a member of the Ladywood High School faculty from 1965 until last June, has been selected as an outstanding secondary school teacher for 1971.

Her biography is included in the new volume of "Leaders of American Secondary Education."

Sister Timothy, now teaching in All Saints Central High School in Bay City, was nominated earlier this year by Ladywood administrators. Her selection was announced here by Sister Barbara Ann Celeskey, principal of the Livonia school.

Leaders of American Secondary Education is an annual program honoring men and women who have distinguished themselves by their service and leadership in the field of secondary education.

Dr. V. Gilbert Beers, director of the program, said of those selected: "The men and women chosen for this high honor have explored new paths, developed new insights and effectively communicated their knowledge to their students and colleagues. They are exception teachers.

Guidelines for selection include an educator's talent in the classroom, contributions to research, administrative abilities and civic service and professional recognition.

Extension Leader Earns 2 Awards

An extension home economist for Wayne County, Mrs. Kathleen Bufton, has received two honors this fall.

She has been chosen to participate in a two-year professional improvement program which will combine study with travel, and she has been named winner of the John Hannah Award.

THE AWARD, named after the former MSU president, is presented annually for "extension program excellence." It includes a $75 cash award and a certificate of accomplishment and is awarded by the Michigan Cooperative Extension Service.

Mrs. Bufton won first place in the competition by successfully initiating and directing a Model Cities Family Living Program in Highland Park. The program was an all-out effort to improve the quality of living for low-income families in the area.

Educational emphasis was placed on such subjects as clothing construction and repair, foods and nutrition, furniture refinishing and buying and preparing and storing food.

THE IMPROVEMENT program in which Mrs. Bufton will participate is funded in part by a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation to MSU's Center for Rural Manpower and Public Affairs.

It is called "Quest for Quality."

MRS. KATHLEEN BUFTON

Over the next two years, Mrs. Bufton will spend approximately 230 hours in a classroom or travel - learning experiences. Six week - long seminars will be devoted to study material drawn from political science, economics, sociology, communications, philosophy, history and education.

During the first year, program participants will travel in Michigan. A 10 - day seminar visit to various parts of the U.S. is slated for the second year.

A native of Detroit, Mrs. Bufton resides in Allen Park with her husband and four children. She received her BS degree from Eastern Michigan University in 1967 and joined the extension service that same year.

Zonta Club Sets Lunch

Members of the Zonta Club of Detroit will hold their Christmas luncheon on Saturday, Dec. 4, in the Sheraton - Cadillac Hotel. Arrangements are being made by Mrs. Inez Meyers.

Among the guests will be Edna Nairn of Toronto, the past international president; Louise Meyer of Ann Arbor, the district governor; and Dorothea Wyatt of Flint, the district lieutenant governor.

Entertainment will be provided by the Jills, an honors vocal ensemble from Bloomfield Hills Andover High School.

Zonta International is a service organization of executive women in business and professions, who, as leaders in their communities, devote themselves to civic and social welfare projects.

Mrs. Klymko Is Honored As New CPS

Mrs. Irene Klymko of Farmington was among six secretaries honored by the National Secretaries Association (International) chapters in the Detroit-Windsor area at a banquet in the Raleigh House, Southfield.

The six were honored as new certified professional secretaries, having successfully completed an examination administered each May by the Institute for Certifying Secretaries.

The exam is given by Wayne State University and Marygrove College for the institute, and covers the areas of environmental relationships, business and public policy, economics of management, financial analysis and the mathematics of business, communications and decision making and office procedures.

Mrs. Klymko is a member of the South Oakland Chapter of the secretaries association and has served as chairman of its publicity committee. She is presently chairman of the membership committee. She has attended two International Secretaries Association conventions since joining in 1968, as well as a Michigan division meeting and leadership conferences in 1970 and 1971.

Plymouth Brevities

ICE SKATING will be available this winter in Plymouth Township's Recreation Park at McClumpha Rd. and Ann Arbor Trail.

DPW Director Joe Bida has seen to the construction of a rink 100 feet wide and 150 feet long and now it all depends on the weather as to when it will be ready for the first touch of the blades.

PLYMOUTH'S representation at the National League of Cities convention, which is in session throughout the current week at Honolulu, didn't stir up nearly the commotion that Detroit went through in trying to determine how many the budget could afford for such a trip.

Only City Manager Norman M. Gaffney was sent to the island paradise by local taxpayers, whereas Detroit sent five after a debate over the travel costs.

BRIDGE PLAYERS in the community are being given the opportunity to organize a weekly plan for duplicate competition.

Several bridge lovers approached Recreation Director Stan Stenek about the possibility of a duplicate league, and he offered to accept registrations at his new office in the Community Building, 200 Union, and also to make space available there for the games. Call him on the city hall phone line if you are interested.

OTHER RECREATION announcements from the Stenek empire this week refer to karate classes and men's basketball.

Karate sessions for persons of all ages are being conducted from 7 to 9 p.m. every Monday and Wednesday in the gymnasium of the new high school, the fee being $10 per month. Those interested may join at any time, registering either at the Rec office in advance or when they show up for instruction.

Plans for the men's recreation basketball league will be finalized in a meeting at 7 p.m. tonight (Wednesday) in the Community Building. The team structure of the league will be determined at this time.

PEARL HARBOR DAY will reach its 30th anniversary Tuesday and in Plymouth the principal observance will come when representatives of the auxiliary of Mayflower Post 0695 of the V.F.W. lay a wreath at the war memorial in Kellogg Park.

This has been an annual custom of the Mayflower auxiliary since it was formed 25 years ago. Incidentally, that 25th birthday of the organization will be celebrated in a formal way in the spring.

A CHRISTMAS BAZAAR will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 4 in the Masonic Temple by the Business and Professional Women's Club. It's another feature of the "Christmas in Plymouth" program sponsored through the Chamber of Commerce.

One of the new features of that program will be the child - sitting service which the Jaycees will provide for mothers on Saturday, Dec. 18. Children from ages three through 10 may be left at Central Junior High School between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. that day while the parents shop, and the Jaycees will show them films and a general good time.

TWO CONCERTS by young musicians of the Plymouth community are on tap for the coming week.

The Youth Symphony will make its first public appearance of the season Wednesday night, Dec. 8 in the new high school auditorium and the Central Junior High School Band (made up entirely of ninth graders) will debut the night of Thursday, Dec. 9 at its own school. H. Michael Endres conducts the bandmaster at Central.

GRANGE 389 of Plymouth has decided to postpone "Booster Night" which had been scheduled for Thursday, Dec. 2 to a later date, and the substitute feature of this week's meeting will be the initiation of several new members to the Subordinate Grange.

Several members of the Junior Grange attended a statewide youth conference at Hillsdale recently at which Mary Ann Conrad received a blue ribbon and $5 prize for her art entry. John Marsh received a red ribbon and $2 award for his entry, also in art. Mrs. Kenneth Lunn presented the awards at a recent Grange meeting, at which the juniors also were given a Bible from the state Grange.

THE SALVATION ARMY kicked off its annual kettle campaign in Plymouth this week with a donation (at left) from you-know-who, and found another helping hand extended by the Rotary Club as President Ed Sawusch handed a check to Capt. Warren Yoder (right). Rotarians and other service club members are helping man the Army's Main St. kettle through the Christmas season. (Observer photos by Harry Mauthe and Bob Woodring)

B&P Net Up, Sales Take Dip

Brooks & Perkins, Inc. (AMEX), Detroit, reported improved sales and earnings for the first quarter ended Oct. 31.

Sales for the first quarter were $3,294,000, compared to $4,001,000 reported a year ago. Net profit increased to $93,000, equal to 20 cents per share, compared to $77,000 or 16 cents per share last year, an increase of 25 per cent.

Speaking at the company's annual meeting, Edward H. Perkins Jr., president, stated, "Although sales were lower than last year's level, primarily due to the slowness of government procurement programs for air cargo pallets, the outlook for this segment of our business appears to be encouraging.

"We are pleased that the trend of increased earnings established in our last fiscal year has continued with a 25 per cent increase for the first quarter of the current year. Management believes that this upward trend has been firmly established particularly with the increased volume of new orders recently received.

Put-Take Bird Experiment Set

Limited numbers of sportsmen will get a chance to test out winter pheasant hunting in a 500-acre area of the Rose Lake Wildlife Research Center near East Lansing under an experimental put - and - take program to be opened there on the weekend of Dec. 4-5.

Under the hunting experiment, which is expected to cover about eight weekends, the center's special area will serve as a proving ground for an extended release - and - shoot season on pheasants which the Department of Natural Resources hopes to launch on a larger scale in the fall of 1973.

That broader plan, now being studied by Michigan lawmakers, is aimed at boosting the state's pheasant harvest by 100,000 birds each year. To that end, it calls for the DNR to annually rear 200,000 pheasants for weekly releases during the course of an extended September - to - April hunting season.

THE PEN-REARED birds would be set free at a number of state game areas and some state recreation areas in southern Michigan where the put - and - take program is expected to produce the highest hunter returns.

As a guide-on for getting the most out of that program, the upcoming experiment at Rose Lake will be used to measure hunter interest and success, study the behavior of the birds under different winter conditions, and research other aspects of put - and - take action during this time of the year.

Except for a holiday pause during the Dec. 25-28 period, the experimental hunt will be repeated each weekend (on Saturdays and Sundays) until the project's supply of surplus birds is exhausted by releases at Rose Lake.

About 300 birds are available for the area's experimental season this winter from the Poultry Science Department of Michigan State University and the DNR's Korean pheasant rearing program based at its game farm near Mason.

With 100 cocks and hens to be released on the Friday before each weekend hunt, this winter's pheasant shooting experiment should run through the period of Jan. 29-30.

County Staffs Law Office

Backed by a court victory, the Wayne County Board of Commissioners is proceeding to staff its new office of corporation counsel.

The county legislative body authorized Corporation Counsel Aloysius J. Sucky to fill eight positions immediately, with another 13 positions provided for the budget year starting Dec. 1.

Wayne County Circuit Judge James L. Ryan ruled on Nov. 16 that the Board of Commissioners had the legal authority to establish its office of corporation counsel and to assign all county civil law functions to it.

THE COMMISSIONERS established the function of Corporation Counsel last June. Nine other urban counties in Michigan already had such offices.

Prosecutor William L. Cahalan immediately filed suit in Circuit Court, challenging the action. He later fired Suchy, apparently because he believed Suchy was in line for the new post. After the firing, Suchy was hired by the Board of Commissioners.

Judge Ryan ruled that the Board of Commissioners could not affect "wholesale transfer" of personnel from the civil division. However, he held that civil division employees could resign to take jobs with the Corporation Counsel. A number have done so.

Cahalan immediately announced he would appeal the decision. A number of other county boards which have corporation counsels are expected to intervene on the side of the Wayne County Board before the Court of Appeals.

Wayne County Board Chairman Robert E. Fitz-Patrick said the major factor in the decision to establish the Corporation Counsel's office was dissatisfaction with the services it was getting from the prosecuting attorney, including Cahlan's refusal on a number of occasions to initiate legal actions requested by the board.

CPAs Set Tax Talks On Friday

More than 500 certified public accountants, attorneys, bankers, tax executives and retail controllers are expected to attend the federal tax lectures being presented by the Michigan Association of CPAs.

Harold C. Catchpole, CPA, program chairman, said the lectures will be held in the Rackham Building Auditorium, Detroit, all day on Friday, Dec. 3.

Charles E. Gross, CPA, chairman of the committee on federal taxation will preside at the morning session; the speakers will be James Stephen II, CPA, Traverse City; Gary E. Barushko, CPA, Detroit; Michael F. Klein Jr., CPA, New York, and William Thomas, pension trust section, Internal Revenue Service, Detroit.

The luncheon speaker will be Charley Manos of The Detroit News. Robert E. Devlin, CPA, Traverse City, will preside at the afternoon session; the speakers will be Alan F. Olson, CPA, Grand Rapids and Peter I. Chirco, attorney, Detroit.

Tax Land Sale Set Dec. 15

DETROIT

Some 235 tax-reverted state land units in Macomb, Oakland, and Wayne counties, carrying a total minimum bid price of $89,865, will be offered for sale at a public auction to be held in Detroit Dec. 15 by the State Dept. of Natural Resources.

The sale, mostly involving platted lots, will be opened to bidding at 10 a.m. in the 13th floor auditorium of the City-County Building.

All of the parcels to be offered there have been screened by the DNR as not being suitable for its activities and projects.

DNR lands officials report that the three southeastern counties will receive all of the receipts from the Dec. 15 sale of lands in their areas.

The sale's listing of lands and minimum bid prices read as follows: 37 units in Macomb County ($10,540); 81 parcels in Oakland County ($32,315); and 117 descriptions in Wayne County ($47,010).

Treasurers of those three counties have free lists of lands to be offered at the Dec. 15 public auction.

Stempien Attends Conference

State Rep. Marvin Stempien (D-Livonia) will attend a "foreign policy conference for young political leaders" on Thursday and Friday, Dec. 2-3, in Washington D.C.

Stempien, a member of the House Committee on Appropriations and House majority floor leader, was invited by the U.S. Department of State.

The meeting will include briefings on power relationships in Asia, the Middle East, the United Nations, the international impact of the president's economic policy, the international drug problem, and the world food and population race.

WSU Captains

Wayne State University's two-time captains in cross country have been Bill Jasnowski (1929-30), David Babb (1954, 1956) and Mike Reamer (1965-66).

Newlyweds To Live InPlymouth

Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Edward Kerstens are living in Plymouth following their marriage Saturday, Nov. 13, in a candlelight service in the chapel of First United Presbyterian Church. Dr. Henry Walch officiated.

The bride is the former Elizabeth Kay Jewell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jewell of Plymouth. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kerstens, also of Plymouth.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory crepe. Her Edwardian bouquet was fashioned of white chrysanthemums and rosebuds.

Mrs. Ellen Caldwell was her sister's matron of honor. Her velvet gown featured a grey bodice with a floor-length floral stripe skirt in shades of grey, silver-blue and bronze. She carried dried flowers in colors complementing her gown.

John Jewell, the bride's brother, was best man, and Martin Kerstens, the bridegroom's brother, was the usher.

The reception was held in the Plymouth Knights of Columbus Hall.

MRS. RICHARD C. JOHNSTON
(Lane Godfrey)

Richard Johnston Wed In Kalamazoo

Richard C. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Johnston of Springbrook Drive, Farmington, claimed Lane Godfrey as his bride in a Nov. 27 ceremony in the First Presbyterian Church of Kalamazoo.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R.H. Godfrey of Kalamazoo. Her father gave her in marriage, and the Rev. David McShane officiated for the afternoon ceremony.

MRS. BROOKS GODFREY of Kalamazoo, sister - in - law of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. George Brooks of Berkeley, Calif., Denise Gladstone of Boston and Judith Johnston of Farmington, sister of the bridegroom.

Assisting the bridegroom were his brother, C. Wayne Johnston of Farmington, as best man; Brooks Godfrey of Kalamazoo, brother of the bride, Keith Collins of Kalamazoo and Thomas Mitchell of Detroit as ushers.

A reception for 250 guests in the Kalamazoo Civic Auditorium followed the ceremony.

AFTER a Florida honeymoon, the couple will live in Lapeer, where the bride is a special education teacher in the Lapeer Intermediate School District. She is a graduate of Western Michigan University.

Her husband, who graduated from Farmington High School and also has a degree from Western Michigan, is employed by Mike Harabedian, Inc., of Birmingham.

Miss McLean Is Bride

Dorothy Ann McLean and Daniel Victor Malkiewicz were united in marriage in a candlelight double-ring ceremony Saturday, Nov. 6, in Rosedale Gardens United Presbyterian Church in Livonia.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald J. McLean Sr. of Livonia, and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Malkiewicz of Livonia are parents of the bridegroom.

The Rev. Arthur Beumler officiated and the bridegroom's sister, Karen Madsall, was soloist.

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE by her father, the bride wore a lace-trimmed empire gown of white velvet and a floor-length veil edged in lace. She carried white roses, holly and stephanotis.

Charlene Palmateer of Yale, Mich., cousin of the bride, was maid of honor. Her gown featured an olive green velvet skirt with a long-sleeved white chiffon empire bodice and she carried a cascade of pink roses, holly and stephanotis.

Bridesmaids Karen Schlick and Joan Malkiewicz wore similar gowns with rouge velvet skirts. They also carried roses, holly and stephanotis.

Sharon Kowalski was dressed as a miniature bride and Mathy Mazanka, dressed like the bridegroom, carried the wedding rings on a white velvet pillow.

ASSISTING the bridegroom were his brother - in - law, David Hadsall of Detroit, as best man, and Donald McLean Jr., brother of the bride, and Tom Mazanka, cousin of the bridegroom, as ushers.

The bride's mother wore a pink dress and the mother of the bridegroom was in royal blue.

About 150 guests attended the wedding supper reception in the church's fellowship hall.

After a honeymoon trip to Disneyworld at Orlando, Fla., the couple will live in Plymouth.

MRS. DANIEL VICTOR MALKIEWICZ
(Dorothy Ann McLean)

MSU Chapel Setting For Rites

Michigan State University's Alumni Memorial Chapel was the setting for the Nov. 27 afternoon wedding of Jennifer Whitman and David K. Wallace.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Whitman of East Lansing, and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Wallace of Meadow Park Avenue, Redford Township, are the bridegroom's parents.

The Rev. Morris Bauman officiated.

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE by her father, the bride wore an ivory peau de soie gown trimmed with ivory velvet and venetian lace. She carried ivory roses and stephanotis.

Jean Whitman, the bride's sister, was maid of honor, and bridesmaids were Elaine Wallace, sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Joseph Riley. Carol Kirkeeng, the bride's cousin, was flower girl.

They wore royal blue velvet gowns trimmed in light blue and olive green.

Robert Hamilton was best man, and the ushers were Dan Gash and Thomas Reid.

THE RECEPTION was held in the Albert Pick Hotel, East Lansing.

The new Mrs. Wallace is a 1970 graduate of Michigan State and her husband graduated from MSU in 1969 and from Thurston High School in 1965.

MRS. DAVID K. WALLACE
(Jennifer Whitman)

Engaged

SHOPPING IN OUR BIG "FAMILY CENTER" CAN BE SO CONVENIENT — AND PROFITABLE!

Instead of going to the dime store for a can opener, to the department store for some kitchen towels, to an auto supply center for anti-freeze, to an office supply store for some ball point pens or stationary—you can now find HUNDREDS OF EVERYDAY HOUSEHOLD ITEMS right here at Chatham.

And we think you'll be pleasantly surprised at the LOW DISCOUNT PRICES you'll find, too!

So while you are shopping for your groceries this week, check the special values in our convenient "mini-department store" right in Chatham.

It will save you the trouble of driving from store to store, finding a parking place, waiting in line, fighting traffic.

Yes, your Chatham Family Center is truly your "one-stop-place-to-shop"—AND SAVE!

Cheese please!. . .especially for entertaining

Cheese is good and good for you–perfect for holiday entertaining!

In making the selections your family will like best, there are 4 basic types found in our markets:

–NATURAL CHEESE (unprocessed) made from milk and containing all the original ingredients of the milk. The only thing usually added is color and seasonings. Characteristic flavor and texture will depend upon the type and quality of the milk used - whole, skim, etc. . .it's great for appetizers, desserts, sandwiches.

–PROCESS CHEESE (pasteurized) - made from one or more natural cheeses heated and blended together to a smooth texture. It melts and slices more easily, and pasteurization[4] prevents further ripening so it has a more uniform flavor.

PROCESS CHEESE FOOD (pasteurized) - contains less fat, but more milk solids and moisture than process cheese. Other things like pimentos are often added. It makes excellent sauces.

PROCESS CHEESE SPREAD (pasteurized) - contains less fat and considerably more moisture than process cheese. A stabilizer is added to help make it spreadable at room temperature and ideal for canapes and sandwiches.

Each type is identified on the package label, and prices will vary according to the amount of cheese in the product. Natural cheese is ALL cheese! You use less to achieve the same pure concentration of flavor as from processed cheese. So expect natural cheese to cost more. However, pure process cheese is much more concentrated than the process cheese food or spread.

Prices also vary by flavor - mellow, medium or sharp. Flavor is determined by the length of time the cheese has been aged. The longer it's aged, the sharper the cheese and the higher the price per pound due to the cost of handling and storage.

Packaging determines price, too. You must pay for those special services done for you –cubing, shredding, slicing or cutting into special shapes to fit a cracker!
