Earth Day challenges students

Speakers tell how to clean up planet

By Susan Buck
staff writer

When you point a finger at a polluter, three fingers point back at you.

That was just one piece of advice students from Lowell Middle School mulled over during their Earth Day celebration Tuesday.

Earth Day, the 20th anniversary of this nation's organized attempt to become more environmentally-conscious began when these students' parents were just setting career goals.

Lowell students learned that they must be the ones to pick up the ball and run when it comes to exerting pressure on businesses who use excessive amounts of product packaging as well as non-biogradable items like plastic foam.

The 600 member student body listened to a variety of speakers and then broke up into small groups for reinforcement and discussion.

Speakers included: Jan Hoffman, Solid Waste Disposal and Recycling Center; Jim Anulewicz, Plymouth Township planner; Carol Scringer, Friends of the Rouge; Neil Chapin, Citizens Interested in the Environment-Groundwater; Paul Sincock, Plymouth assistant city manager and Les Vilcone, Resource Recovery Coordinator-Wayne County DPW.

"We're celebrating a day of the earth so in a sense, it is a birthday party," Hoffman said.

She explained the environmental three R's: recycling, re-using and reducing with all grade levels.

"We have had 20 years to try to get things cleaned up," Hoffman said. The formation of the Environmental Protection Agency was an instrumental first step but each individual must be willing to do his share, she said.

It takes more than sympathy for highly visible environmental situations like otters slicked by an oil spill to do it, she said.

Hoffman mentioned the Detroit Incinerator and its spewing of mercury into the air. "Can you imagine breathing mercury?" Hoffman asked.

Then Hoffman delved into the nitty-gritty aspects of everyday household living and the adjustments each person can make like buying a single canister of Coffeemate rather than an overwrapped cellophane-covered package with individually-wrapped servings.

Or using cloth rather than paper towels. And, using Tupperware-style containers rather than plastic bags to carry a lunch.

"It takes more energy to produce plastic than to reuse a plastic container, Hoffman said. "It takes 11 trees to make 500 paper bags,"

Hoffman called plastic foam "an evil commodity."

She held up a plastic foam cup. "Even as we speak, this Styrofoam cup is releasing CFC's," Hoffman said. Chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) are chemicals which destroy the ozone layer.

"Styrofoam does not biodegrade which means it does not return to its natural state," Hoffman said. "CFCs are like Pacman, only they love ozone. Birds and fish that eat Styrofoam, get poisoned. Don't support fast-food companies that use them."

Eighth grade students had their own ideas about recycling, too.

"Some schools have their own recycling area right inside the school," Suzanne Campagna said.

Lori Johnston says the $16,000 chain link fence the Kiwanis Club wants to put up around Miller Woods would detract from the appearance of the area.

Neighbors don't want fence around forest

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

No one disagrees that the Miller Woods, a 10-acre forest in Plymouth Township, should be preserved. But there's plenty of disagreement about a plan to accomplish that goal.

Owned by Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, Miller Woods is a climax forest, which includes plants ranging from young seedlings to flora dating back 500 years. Hundreds of students and teachers, including many from the University of Michigan botany department, have visited the site off Powell Road just east of Beck.

The Colonial Kiwanis Club of Plymouth and Friends of Miller Woods want to enclose the area with a $16,000 chain link fence to prevent motor vehicles from entering the area.

Plant specimens have been ruined by youths on motor bikes and by people who've dumped appliances and garbage in the woods, said members of the Friends of Miller Woods. Founded 15 years ago, the organization has about 75 members.

Bob Evans and Harold Fischer of the Kiwanis Club presented the plan to school board members Monday night.

"The woods need to be protected, and fencing is the only way I see to do that," said Evans.

"It should be preserved for posterity," said Fischer. "We don't want to restrict access, but knowing all the development taking place all over, there will be kids who could damage this with wheeled vehicles. We'd like to put up a six-foot chain link fence with a cable top for strength."

> "We'd like to put up a six-foot chain link fence with a cable top for strength."
> — Harold Fischer, Kiwanis Club member

Kiwanians and Friends of Miller Woods also want to construct a parking lot for visitors.

PEARSE AND LORI JOHNSTON, whose backyard borders the woods, strongly oppose the plan. Pearse Johnston said he'd like time to gather the opinions of area residents. The board, however, voted unanimously to approve the fence.

"We feel that it's a natural area. Putting a chain link fence in sort of defeats the whole purpose of a naturalized area," said Lori Johnston.

"We've left our backyard that way intentionally. I think it would be unsightly to have that type of chain link fence."

Johnston said she understands the concerns about refuse, "but we've never seen vehicles in the woods. People enjoy walking in there. I would hate to see it locked up with limited access."

Preliminary plans don't call for a locked gate. Instead, a baffle — metal poles placed at angles to prevent vehicles from entering — would be used.

Businessmen propose site for teen club

By Susan Buck
staff writer

Two area business partners are talking to Plymouth city officials about converting a vacant Plymouth supermarket on Main Street into a teen dance club, according to Paul Sincock, assistant city manager.

James McEwen and Robert Cortis of RJMC Corporation believe the former Farmer Jack, vacant for two years just north of Ann Arbor Road, would provide an ideal location for young people to gather and possibly stem the tide of cruising in downtown Plymouth.

"I think the idea has some viability," said property owner Stanley Dickson, Sr. of Grosse Pointe. "They are in the process of talking with the city and we are in the process of evaluating them as tenants."

The company is embroiled in a legal dispute with Livonia city officials on the building's specified use. Reportedly, the men have been up front in discussing these problems with Plymouth city officials.

Repeated attempts to contact McEwen and Cortis at their Livonia location, the Bourmet Buffet, their other business called the Barnstormer Club in Green Oak Township as well as a car phone number were unsuccessful.

As of Monday, the men had not yet made a formal application in Plymouth City Hall but had taken out a copy of the application form, said James Penn, Plymouth city building inspector.

"It would solve the lease of the building problem," Sincock said.

Cortis operated the Grande Ballroom at Warren and Merriman in Westland for several years, providing an alcohol-free atmosphere for teens on weekends while conducting ballroom dancing, a buffet restaurant and other programs during the week.

He opened a buffet restaurant in Livonia last fall, taking over the former Duff's Smorgasbord on Plymouth Road near Middlebelt. He closed his Westland business location in March with the intention of combining it with the Livonia restaurant and catering operation under the name of the Grande Music Cafe and Club X-S.

Construction at the Livonia location started in January to convert

Parents give 'suicide' film mixed reviews

By Mary Washko
staff writer

The reviews were mixed Tuesday when parents and residents in the Plymouth-Canton School district for the first time viewed the controversial film "Nobody's Useless."

The film has been blamed by the parents of 8-year-old Stephen Nalepa for the child's March 24 hanging death.

The youth's mother, Debbie Nalepa, has contended since viewing the film that her son was mimicking a suicide attempt in the movie without realizing the consequences. The couple has hired an attorney to investigate the death, and a law suit against the board could be filed.

THE NALEPA family didn't attend the showing. They saw the movie shortly after the death.

One mother, who asked not to be identified because her daughter was in Stephen's second-grade class, said after seeing the movie: "I think it's a shame the teacher didn't discuss or explain what went on in the movie afterwards.

"I have mixed emotions, though. I didn't like the suicide scenes but there's a lot of violence on cartoons and TV shows that kids always see."

Now that she has seen the film, she said she will speak with her daughter about it.

Julie Withrow, a Plymouth parent, said, "I think the age group was too young to see it and I think those suicide scenes should have been explained."

Withrow said she believes it may have been possible a child would act out what he saw in the movie.

five children through the Plymouth-Canton School district and said the school board is "getting a bad rap."

"My heart goes out for the family, but I think it was a positive movie on dealing with a handicap," Stevenson said.

Stevenson said she agreed kids are impressionable. But, she said, "if we attack things like this why not cartoons or other shows that are violent?"

Elaine Attridge said she almost walked out on the film when the boy started talking about "doing himself in."

"I cannot believe how offensive this film was to me," she said.

"An 8-year-old is not going to think of suicide to begin with (without) putting thoughts like that into their innocent minds," she said.

Michael Barnes, an elementary education student at Eastern Michigan University, said: "After I watched it I realized I saw it when I was about 14. But I don't know if it should have been shown to kids that young without an explanation."

Helena Valo doesn't have a child in school yet but wanted to see "Nobody's Useless."

She said the film was fine except for the two suicide scenes, and added: "It bothers me that it showed a friend helping him and never showing the end result."

School board candidate Diane Stamp attended the showing and said, "I don't think they should have shown it. I feel it's totally inappropriate."

Richard Egli, community relations director for the district, said afterwards, "The opinions seemed to vary. I heard people who had concerns and others who didn't."

The film was shown again Wednesday at 7 p.m. and will be shown tonight at 7 at Gallimore Elementary School.

Fence issue has 2 sides

Pearse Johnston said he's enjoyed the woods for 35 years, and would like his son and daughter to have the same privilege.

"In all due respect, a chain link fence to me sounds quite hideous," he told the board. "And I'd like to say there are ordinances to address the motorcycle issue. I've never seen or heard a motorized bike back there."

If a barrier is necessary, Johnston said he'd favor "something more in keeping with the surroundings."

"Maybe there is another way," said Trustee Barbara Graham. "A chain link fence isn't too attractive. And there hasn't been a lot of input from the area residents as to whether that's the way we ought to go. We don't have to do this tomorrow."

Bev McAninch, president of the Friends of Miller Woods, said the group has made an effort to contact residents.

"We leafleted the entire area," she said.

Evelyn Edgar, who founded the organization, said the woods "is there for people, but people who will take care of it."

The board approved the motion, 6-0. Board president Dean Swartzwelter was absent.

Some tips on saving the earth

By Susan Buck
staff writer

Americans everywhere are doing their part to protect the environment by conserving energy and natural resources and avoiding pollutants. Here are some tips:

- Think about what you want before you open the refrigerator.
- Turn off the lights when you leave a room.
- Remind family members to let dishes air dry in the automatic dishwasher.
- Challenge drivers in the family to develop a weekly car-mileage budget, then stick to it.
- Give a prize to the family member who takes the quickest showers.
- Run dishwashers and washing machines for full loads only.
- Limit the number of cookouts using charcoal briquettes. Their fumes produce ground-level ozone gas.
- Bring non-plastic forks and spoons to cookouts.
- Send a letter to a local business requesting that it use washable mugs instead of throwaway cups.
- Wrap a present in used wrapping paper or mail a letter in a used envelope.
- Encourage a gardener to pull weeds instead of using herbicides.
- Fix clogged sinks by using a metal snake rather than drain cleaners.
- Use steel wool with baking soda and water when cleaning an oven.
- Bring your own bags or boxes when you shop.
- Protect your wool clothing with cedar chips or natural sachets rather than buying mothballs.

part of the Livonia building for use as a dance hall, but then stopped when the city informed Cortis in March that he had to stop construction because he had changed the use of the property from a restaurant to a dance hall in violation of the current zoning use.

In an interview with a Livonia Observer reporter in March, Cortis claimed Livonia city leaders have decided that they don't want his operation in Livonia and are deliberately attempting to drive him out of business.

The Livonia location has been closed since April 12. John Fegan, Livonia building and inspections director, said that Cortis faces a May 16 trial date in 16th District Court. Some 13 tickets have been issued against the Livonia establishment on charges of operating a dance hall without waiver use, opening without final inspection and operating a dance hall without a dance license, Fegan said Monday.

"The city's position is that he has not filed for a waiver use," Fegan said.

As in Livonia, Fire Chief Al Matthews said that his leading concern is fire safety along with a correspondingly appropriate number of parking spaces. Cortis is talking about dances with upwards of 1,000 kids in attendance.

Matthews said that he told Cortis that he intends to speak with the fire chiefs in both Livonia and Green Oak Township, where Cortis has a similar business, prior to approval of his application.

Last Friday, Cortis "went into some detail" telling Chief Richard Myers about his problems in Livonia, Myers said. His response to Cortis was that the final decision to locate such a facility is not in the jurisdiction of the police department. "Our job is to deal with programs and projects when they are approved. Then we'll work with them," Myers said.

Does Myers think a teen dance club would reduce the problem of cruising in downtown Plymouth?

"It's speculative to assign an impact with respect to that," Myers said.

Longtime Plymouth doctor was a man of many talents

Dr. Walter W. Hammond of Plymouth Township, once in charge of surgery at the U.S. Penitentiary hospital in Lewisburg, Pa., died April 19 in Ann Arbor.

Memorial services were at Schrader Funderal Home April 21 with burial in Riverside Cemetery.

Dr. Hammond, a graduate of the University of Michigan Medical School, started a medical practice in Plymouth in 1938. He worked on the staff of Plymouth State Hospital, Sessions Hospital in Northville, Mt. Carmel Mercy Hospital in Detroit, Beyer Memorial Hospital in Ypsilanti, St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor and St. Mary Hospital in Livonia.

For a relative working on the family tree some time ago, Dr. Hammond penned a "Brief Synopsis of Life Activities of Walter Wesley Hammond Jr."

Dr. Hammond said he was born at home in an upstairs flat in New York, N.Y. on Oct. 1, 1904. At age 2, the family moved to Pennsylvania, where he later joined the Boy Scouts and worked in the Palmerton Foundry after school and on Saturdays.

He took "all the subjects offered in the general course and one in the commercial course in the Palmerton High School. He knew when he entered high school that he wanted to be a doctor, but was never sure he was going to make it," wrote Dr. Hammond.

At Cornell University, Dr. Hammond was in ROTC for a year and a half. He was "excused from further military training because he was on the Cornell track and cross country teams."

A member of the literary fraternity Delta Sigma Phi, Dr. Hammond graduated from Cornell in 1927.

He married Eleanor Inez McGee in 1930 while attending medical school at U-M. He received his medical degree from U-M in 1931.

Dr. Hammond interned in the U.S. Marine Hospital administered by the U.S. Public Health Service in Baltimore, Md. He became an officer in the Public Health Service and was assigned to the surgical service at the Marine Hospital in Baltimore.

He also served at the Marine Hospital at Fort Stanton, N.M., where he received training in chest surgery. He later was transferred to the Marine Hospital in Detroit.

Dr. Hammond obtained a fellowship in the American College of Surgery in 1956.

He belonged to the Washtenaw County Medical Society, the Michigan State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He served on the board of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce and belonged to the Plymouth Rotary Club for 39 years, during which time he had a perfect attendance record. He was a Mason and a member of the Plymouth Rock Lodge No. 47.

Dr. Walter W. Hammond

Hammond was divorced from his first wife in 1970 and later married June May Brodie.

Hammond is survived by his wife; daughter Ann Kideton of Kalamazoo; sons Walter W. III of Harrisburg, Penn. and Hobart of Tulsa, Okla.; seven grandchildren; and one great-grandchild.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

Exposed metal rod damages vehicle

A 45-year-old Plymouth man said his 1990 gray Ford Thunderbird was damaged to the tune of $12,000 at main and Amelia about 5:40 p.m. Sunday.

The man said he was southbound on Main, turning right onto Amelia when he heard a loud noise coming from the right side of his car.

When he completed the turn, he felt the right front tire go flat.

The man left his car and saw that the right side and right front tire were damaged. Plymouth police said the culprit was an exposed metal rod on the curb line at the northwest corner of the intersection. The DPW was summoned to the scene, and the driver was given a victim's rights card.

Union training facility planned for area

By Joe Bauman
staff writer

A training facility for union laborers from throughout southeast Michigan could begin operating in Livonia by the middle of May.

The Livonia City Council has approved a zoning variance for the Michigan Laborers' Training Institute to operate the school on Stark Road in Livonia's industrial belt.

The council's action overturned an earlier vote by the city's planning commission to deny the waiver request. The waiver is necessary for the school to store construction materials outdoors.

THE TRAINING institute was founded in Lansing in 1974 as an employee benefit for members of the Laborers' International Union of North America, and currently operates schools in Perry and Iron Mountain.

Classes and hands-on training provided at the schools are similar to apprentice programs offered through other unions but are more short-term and intensified.

"I am very happy that we will be able to proceed with our plans for Livonia," institute director Edward McDonald said. "We should be ready to start classes by the middle of May."

The variance was necessary because the current M-1 zoning for the site does not allow for the outside storage of equipment or building supplies.

McDonald said that without the ability to provide an outdoor setting it would be impossible to operate in the school's accustomed fashion.

"I think that part of the reason the planning commission voted against us was that they didn't understand our operations or the training institute," McDonald said.

"We will only store a small amount of materials outside and we will not be a nuisance to the surrounding area."

THE INSTITUTE appealed the planning commission's decision, and a public hearing was held Monday to discuss the proposal.

As part of his pitch, McDonald gave a slide presentation of the school's headquarters in Perry and explained the need for the Livonia operation.

"We believe we can best serve the metropolitan area by operating a local school," he said. "There is a great deal of construction activity going on in the surrounding communities and the need for training is great."

There were no public comments offered at the meeting, although representatives from several construction trades unions were present in a show of support for the school.

With the variance, instructors and students will be able to use the area behind the school building to practice such skills as highway construction, sewer and water main installation, and various types of commercial and industrial construction.

MCDONALD SAID the school will occupy a building already on the site, which will help reduce the amount of time it will take to begin operation.

Fire chief answers early call of 1st grandchild

You've got to hand it to Plymouth Fire Chief Al Matthews and his wife Lorraine.

They drove 1,500 miles in 48 hours Easter weekend to see their first grandchild, born five weeks prematurely to their daughter Kim Arment of Springfield, Mo.

News that the first member of the family's fifth generation came while the Matthews were vacationing in Florida. They wanted to stop in Missouri on their way home to Detroit, but Northwest Airlines said no.

So the Matthews flew into Detroit Friday night, (they arrived late because their plane had mechanical trouble) and slept five hours before hitting the road.

They drove 750 miles to Springfield, and met 5-pound-1-ounce Brihannon Nicole Arment in the neo-natal intensive care unit of Lester E. Cox Medical Center South about 7 p.m. Saturday.

The Ronald McDonald House at the hospital put the family up for the night, and the Matthews were able to be there for the 8 a.m. feeding Sunday morning before beginning their 12½-hour drive back to Detroit.

"We got in about 10 p.m. Detroit time," said Matthews, who made it to work on time, if a little tired, at 8 a.m. Monday.

NOW leader urges women to get into politics

By Judith Doner Berne
staff writer

Will Livonia resident Marilyn Rowens run for office?

What about Linda McCabe of Canton Township?

The two were among the more than 300 people who turned out to hear Molly Yard, president of the National Organization for Women, urge more women to run for public office in a speech at Birmingham Temple in Farmington Hills Monday night.

The unanimously supportive, largely female audience gave Yard a standing ovation as she walked to the podium and another as she finished.

"Women have got to be in public policy-making positions in this country," the imposing, gray-haired Yard implored. "You're needed in the legislative halls of this country. I urge each of you to see where you could fit in."

"We're more than half the population. We should share the privilege of directing this country. Until we do we won't get the public policy we're looking for."

Yard was matter of fact: "I have no faith in the courts. Three members of the Supreme Court were appointed by President Reagan and I have no faith in President Bush."

Of Bush's veto last fall of an amendment to ease restrictions on Medicaid abortions, she said: "How any man can expect a poor woman to carry a pregnancy to term as the result of incest and rape. I find it totally obscene."

SHE CALLED THESE both the best and the worst of times for women.

"It's the worst of times because we are in danger of losing the ability to determine whether or not we want to bear a child. It's the best of times because we have the opportunity to make changes greater than in the last 30 years."

In fact, since the Supreme Court's Webster decision, upstart legislation in states which would re-criminalize abortion has mainly been killed in committee, Yard said.

As for Michigan, "Thank goodness you have a good governor."

"The voters are way ahead of the political leaders of this country," she maintained.

"What's happening is that since the Webster case the women and men of this country are very angry," Yard described. "We are remembering what happened before 1973 — and we're saying not for my daughter, not for my granddaughter."

But what happens here has even greater ramifications, she said.

"We bear a lot of responsiblity in this country for what is happening to women around the world." She used examples of Algerian women being beaten for uncovering their faces and others in Mexico being denied birth control information in clinics which fear losing U.S. financial aid.

"We are looked to around the world to build a world where women are treated as human beings and first-class citizens."

CLOSING OUT the right of a woman to determine her own childbearing destiny and passing the equal rights amendment which will put the burden of proof on the discriminator are Yard's main agenda. But other areas also need attention:

- Child care: "We still need to get a good child care bill — it's as important to men as to women."
- Family medical leave: A bill to allow either parent to take an unpaid leave but keep their job in case of an ill child, adoption or birth is languishing, and now has been whittled down from 28 to 10 weeks.
- Pay equity: "We got it through the House twice — can't get it through the Senate."
- Sex education: "I can't tell you how angry I am about the way we treat our teenagers. Why wouldn't we do everything we can to keep them from getting pregnant."

ROWENS WAS one who took seriously Yard's message to run for office, musing whether or not she herself was too old.

"She had a lot of spirit, a lot of strength," Rowens said. "It just makes you feel good that she's saying those things for us."

'We are looked to around the world to build a world where women are treated as human beings and first-class citizens.'

"I was very impressed," said Bob Roether of West Bloomfield. "She has a message for everyone."

"I think its interesting that a woman her age was so involved," said Barbara Roether.

"She was saying a lot of things I've heard lately," said McCabe, a member of Western Wayne County NOW.

McCabe was also there to plug a demonstration at 3 p.m. Saturday on the University of Michigan-Dearborn campus, where a memorial service will be held for "women who lost their lives through back alley abortions."

Armenians recall 'first Holocaust'

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

It's being remembered — with tears — in homes and churches throughout western Wayne and Oakland counties.

Even though it happened long ago, the Armenian genocide remains an issue of profound global importance to this day. This week, survivors and their descendants mark the 75th anniversary of its beginning.

For President George Bush the event represents a "crimeagainst humanity". But for the estimated 50,000 metro Detroit residents of Armenian ancestry, the events of 1915-23 are a reminder some old wounds are never even recognized, much less corrected, and could be repeated, even in a modern, arguably more civilized world.

"WE CALL it the first Holocaust," said Livonia city assessor Ronald Mardiros, whose parents escaped from Turkey at the time.

Though historians say an estimated 1.5 million Armenians perished during the purges, even the term "genocide", a systematic plan to eradicate a race or ethnic group, is controversial.

The phraseology is that of Armenains themselves. Modern Turkey, descendant of the Otttoman Empire in which the massacres occurred, claims no responsibility. And Turkey, site of U.S. military bases, is a stable ally in an unstable region bordered by the Soviet Union to the north and Iran to the east.

Even Bush's statement of April 20 — perhaps the strongest of its kind by any American president since Woodrow Wilson — avoided using the term "genocide" and any mention of modern Turkey.

What area Armenians say they want most is recognition the events occurred. The president's statement, they said, was a beginning.

"What we want is recognition, just as East Germany recently recognized the Holocaust, just as the Soviet government, after all these years, recognized its responsibility in the slaughter of the Polish officers, said Harry Derderian of Farmington Hills, who has been active the the fight for recognition.

Bush's refusal to call the events genocide — the systematic extermination of a people for political reasons — was a disappointment to many Armenians. But for Derderian and the Washington, D.C.-based Armenain National Commitee of America, the president's words were sufficient.

"SOMETIMES, you can get too hung up over wording," he said.

Earlier this year, the U.S. Senate tried in vain to pass a resolution acknowledging the slaughter of Armenians living in what is now modern-day Turkey. The resolution died amid heavy lobbying and much acrimony.

Turkey's modern government warned the resolution would "inflame nationalist passions and historic grievances and incite further violence."

But the real issue could be reparations.

"Clearly, something is due," Derderian said. "I mean, the U.S. recently repaid Japanese-Americans who lost their homes and property during World War II. As bad as that situation was, this was even worse."

Reparations, either to individual families or to the people of Soviet Armenia as whole, could help the region rebuild after its devastating 1988 earthquake.

"With the earthquake, it (reparations) certainly would be welcome," Derderian said.

For other Armenians, recognition alone could be enough.

"We're not anti-Moslem, or anti-anyone," Mardiros said, referring to traditional hostility between Christian Armenians and neighboring states. "But we don't want people to Voices of survivors:

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Anna Giragosian remembers the wolves and the snakes that followed her family's steps as it made its way from its Turkish village to the inland concentration camp that awaited Armenians in 1915.

Now in her 80s, Giragosian recalls the events clearly.

"I remember calling, 'Mama, don't leave me,'" she said. "Even years later, people wondered why I was still calling that, 'Mama, don't leave me.'

These are the voices of what has been termed the Armenian genocide. Three-quarters of a century later, they still crack with emotion.

Roughly a dozen survivors live at Manoogian Manor, a Livonia-based home for elderly Armenians.

The past few days have been especially hard, they said, as they remember the events that cost them their parents, brothers, sisters and children.

"Every day, I think about it, every day I wonder why it was me who survived," said Virginia Krikorian, fighting back tears.

Though painful, the memories bind these elderly women together.

"All Armenians' stories are the same," said Sarah Ohanesian, another resident of the home.

Reasons behind the events of 1915-23 are still open to speculation, but for these women, and other survivors, the story is not so much about who was right, or wrong, but how brutal people can be to each another.

"It's not that people died, it's how they died," said Harry Zartarian, the home's administrator, whose mother survived the killings. "People were butchered."

Men were the first to be killed, Helen Mooradian recalled, often cut down by the sword.

"Some men even dressed as women, but they could not escape," she recalled.

Violence eventually included women and children as well, survivors said.

One resident, Baidzar Aznavorian was the only survivor from a family of 86.

While most of the killing occurred in 1915, Armenians living in what is now modern-day Turkey were subject to periodic violence until the early 1920s.

One woman described her brother's death in 1922, after her city passed back to Turkish control from its post-war Greek protectorship.

The events of 1915-23 and the courage of its survivors were remembered last Sunday in the area's Armenian churches.

The Armenian Congregational Church, in Southfield, held services honoring its 28 survivors, some as old as 101.

"It was a very emotional time, not only the older ones were crying but also the younger ones, too," said Rev. Vahan H. Tootikian. "It was a time of sadness, but it was also a time of joy, a time to look ahead."

Those who were there, however, can't help looking back.

"I still have dreams. . .," Giragosian said.

Young people get down to Earth in cleanup

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Peter Jesuale didn't mind spending a sunny Sunday afternoon cleaning up a part of Plymouth Township.

"People should think more about the earth," said Peter, 10, a fourth grader at Allen Elementary School and a Cub Scout. "We have to do something to preserve our earth."

He was among Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts who spent several hours on a cleanup project Sunday, April 22. The project was planned as part of the 20th anniversary celebration of Earth Day.

Scouts rolled up their sleeves and went to work, cleaning up the area along M-14 and Brentwood between Robinwood and Bradner. Many parents helped with the project.

Participants found plenty of trash, including an engine block, furniture and a snowmobile. Plymouth Township officials had suggested the group concentrate on cleaning up that area, said Lori Jouppi of Plymouth Township, one of the organizers.

WHEN THE project got under way at noon, about 60 kids were hard at work. Other families came by later in the afternoon, following church or other commitments.

"We're really trying to get the emphasis back on nature and the environment," said Jouppi. She's the leader of Brownie Troop No. 430 and the assistant den leader for Cub Scout Den No. 1, both at Farrand Elementary School.

These days, the handbook used by Cub Scouts reminds them only to build a campfire when necessary. Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts learn about the need to protect the environment.

Girl Scouts who participated in the project got a patch for their efforts Sunday and throughout the year. The girls have been participating in an Earth Matters environmental project and have been working on recycling.

Girls toured the Fermi 2 power plant in Monroe to learn more about energy, said Lori Potochick of Plymouth Township, an organizer of the Earth Day project. Some girls also toured a sewage treatment plant.

Potochick's the troop services director for the Farrand-Tanger area, and is the leader of Junior Girl Scout Troop No. 243 and Cadette Troop No. 367.

SHE WAS born in Plymouth Township near the site of Sunday's cleanup, still lives in the area, and has strong feelings about preserving the environment.

"It ought to be in its own natural state," said Potochick, who has an 8-year-old son and a daughter who's nearly 10. "Hopefully, it'll remain undeveloped. I'd like to see some places just remain natural in their own habitat."

Jouppi, who has a 10-year-old son and an 8-year-old daughter, agrees. She knows it's important for children to learn about recycling.

"Start them young," she said. "This is the future. The kids, it's second nature, they do it now." Getting into the recycling habit as an adult can be difficult, Jouppi said.

Andrea Brackney, 12½, a Cadette Girl Scout, enjoyed her time participating in the cleanup project.

"I'd say it's really good," said Andrea, a seventh grader at Lowell Middle School. Sunday was the final day of spring break for Plymouth-Canton Community Schools students, and the kids were glad to help.

"I think it'll help the animal life," Andrea said. "If we have too much garbage out there, we might end up having to live somewhere else and not live here."

Some of the students have participated in Earth Day projects at school, and some school PTO groups have been involved, Potochick said.

At Sunday's cleanup, the Scouts put up bluebird nesting boxes, designed to attract birds to the area. Scouts and parents concentrated on cleaning up the trash, and Plymouth Township trucks then went through the area to pick up large items.

Jeremy Hamrick, 9, thought the cleanup project was a good idea. Jeremy, a Cub Scout and a third grader at Farrand, would like to see a park in the area.

Andy Weiss, 11, was also enthusiastic about the cleanup. Andy's a fifth grader at Allen and a former Scout. He said the project was needed "because right now the world isn't the best place to be."

Peter Jesuale agreed.

"I hope it's going to be clean and I hope we don't have to have another Earth Day," he said.

Take With Plenty of Water

Increasing one's intake of water often is recommended with health problems such as kidney stones or urinary tract infection. Water is "good medicine" in combination with a variety of commonly used medicines including sulfonamide antiinfective agents and the bulk-forming laxatives. In addition to making swallowing easier, water makes these medicines safer and can increase their effectiveness.

Sulfonamides primarily are used for urinary tract infections. However, if there is a deficiency of water in the body, only small amounts of urine are formed. The result is an increased tendency for the formation of sulfonamide crystals in various parts of the urinary tract. Drinking additional water helps prevent the formation of sulfonamide crystals.

Bulk-forming laxatives may contain methylcellulose, polycarbophil, or psyllium. Each of these agents relies on the presence of water in the large intestine for its action. The Handbook of Nonprescription Drugs indicates that each dose of bulk laxative "should be taken with a full glass of water (at least 8 ounces)."

Slaughter of Armenians still a burning issue

forget this is something that occurred."

Remembering is hard, even for Armenian-American themselves.

"In a sense, we do feel distanced from it because it was something that happened a long time ago in a land far away," said Marilynn Varbedian of Bloomfield Hills, who just completed her second term as that city's mayor. "But we must remember this is an event on scale with the Holocaust and the Killing Fields (of Cambodia)."

Three-quarters of a century later, even the events themselves are still open to question.

Some Senators, including Georgia's Sam Nunn, argued more historical data need be presented before the U.S.

But others, including Michigan's Carl Levin, said overlooking existing documentation smacks of 1984-style politics.

"ORWELL'S VERSION of history being rewritten for the convenience of current geopolitcal strategy has become a modern-day reality," Levin said.

For Dennis Papazian, the Armenian genocide isn't a matter of historical speculation, but of fact.

"This has been one of the best documented events of human history," said Papazian, director of the Armenian Research Center at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. "Even our own ambassador documented it as far back as 1920."

Recongizing the deaths of Armenians at the hand of Ottman Turks, Papazian said, is the first step toward preventing the same events from occurring again.

Violence against Armenians in Soviet Azerbaijan — where many Armenians live as an outnumbered minority, hasn't gone unnoticed, Papazian said.

Nor has the fact that Soviet Armenia, neighboring Azerbaijan and other Soviet republics, including Balkan states such as Lithuania, could become independent nations with a foreign and domestic policy of their own.

"If the Soviet Union breaks up the wrong way, who knows what could happen," he said.

DESPITE FEARS, many Armenian-Americans are cautiously optimistic about Soviet Premier Mikhail Gorbachev and his proposed reforms.

"Armenians were the first to take to the streets, when glasnost and peristroika were announced," Derderian said.

Monitoring events in the USSR, with an eye toward peaceful resolution of the Armenian/Azerbaijan situation, is the next step, Derderian said, once this week's commemorations are complete.

Despite optimism over independence, Armenians cannot escape a past that makes them suspicious of any change.

Priding themselves as the world's first Christian kingdom, Armenians faced attacks from Persians centuries before coming under the rule of Ottoman sultans and their successors.

A post-World War I republic lasted a brief two years.

"As a people, our luck has been bad," said Harry Zartarian, who administers the Michigan Home for the Armenian Aged in Livonia. "We're known for our beautiful churches, but maybe instead of building churches we should have been building weapons."

Still, Zartarian said, remembering the events of 1915-23 should inspire peaceful solutions, rather than rather than more violence bloodshed.

"This happened in Armenia, it happened again in Nazi Germany, it's happening today in Ethiopia, where people are starving to death," Zartarian said. "If the U.S. doesn't recognize these kinds of things are possible, it will happen again. Only somewhere else."

Scholar says racism was its cause

Why did so many people — an estimated 1.5 million — die in an event recognized by many nations, though not by modern Turkey and its supporters?

Dennis Papazian has devoted much of the last five years to answering that question.

Papazian, director of the University of Michigan-Dearborn's Armenain Research Center, links the violence to traditional cultural and religious differences, intensified during the collapse of the Ottoman Empire.

"ARMENIANS WERE scapegoats," Papzian said. "Rascism was an ugly part of European intellectual tradition and, unfortunately, the Young Turks (who succeeded the Ottoman sultans who killed an estimated 300,000 Armenians some 20 years earlier) brought it to bear."

Removal from home villages, Papzian said, was inspired by the kind of intensified nationalism later exhibited by Hitler's Aryan movement.

Turkish leaders at the time, blamed Armenians themselves, arguing that their alleged pro-Allies stance undermined the Axis-allied Ottoman Empire's efforts

Monthly Allergy Tip
Your nose knows when spring has sprung!
As soon as spring comes around, along with the showers and the early flowers, comes the season of stuffy and runny noses. It's the time of the year you may be afflicted by sneezing and wheezing and your eyes may be itchy and watery. All this discomfort may be caused by allergies to microscopic pollen grains and mold spores which are a natural part of the life cycle of trees, grass, and plant life.
It happens every year, but you can put a stop to it this year. . . not the pollen and the spores, of course, but your discomfort. Find out if indeed it is an allergy from which you suffer. See us. Medications are now available which may be of help to you without making you drowsy.

Madonna to honor union leader, college supporters

Lech Walesa, leader of the Polish trade union movement Solidarity, will be awarded an honorary degree Saturday, May. 5, during Madonna College commencement ceremonies.

Walesa will be honored for his "true Christian behavior in non-violent pursuit of peace," a college spokeswoman said.

There is no confirmation Walesa will attend the ceremonies, but Madonna spokeswoman Andrea Nodge said efforts are being made to contact the Nobel Peace Prize recipient.

Other honorary degrees will be awarded to longtime Madonna supporter Michael Ilitch, chairman and president of Little Casear Enterprises Inc., and the Most Rev. Christian Wiyghan Cardinal Tumi, archbishop of Garoua, Cameroon. His nephew, Paul Kindong of Cameroon, will receive a degree in business management from Madonna during commencement ceremonies.

Approximately 700 graduates will receive degrees during ceremonies at Ford Auditorium, Detroit.

Michael Ilitch

Other honorees include Leslie Rose, chairman of fidelity Bank of Michigan and Dr. Chen L. Chang, principal of Pankow Vocational-Technical Center, Mount Clemens.

Dr. Chen L. Chang

Leslie Rose

Both men will receive the college President's Award.

Rose, a Madonna trustee since 1984, has been chairman of that body for the past three years. Chang has been instrumental in helping Madonna establish its master's program in Taiwan.

Lech Walesa

About 30 Taiwanese students will receive master's degrees as part of that program during the commencement ceremonies. Another group of Taiwanese students will arrive at Madonna this summer to complete their studies.

Madonna is a private liberal arts college with an enrollment of about 4,000 students. The college offers degrees in business administration, computers, criminal justice, gerontology, legal assistant, nursing, sign language studies, social work and teacher education, as well as in other areas.

Local students are honored in Earth Day art, writing contest

Three youngsters from western Wayne County were among those honored Sunday at Oakwoods Metroparks for their contributions to the Huron-Clinton Metroparks' Earth Day writing and art contest.

Jennifer McHutchion of Livonia and Tim Carter of Canton were prize winners in the sixth grade poster contest. Melanie Loyd of Garden City was a prize winner in the fifth grade essay and story contest.

McHutchion attends Fairlane Christian Schools, Dearborn Heights. Carter attends Lowell Middle School in the Plymouth-Canton school district. Loyd attends Douglas School, Garden City. All three received a $50 prize.

Contest judges included Blanche Glimps, school of education chairwoman, Marygrove College, Detroit; James Crawford, dean of the School of Natural Resources, University of Michigan, and Wayne-Westland Schools art teacher Larry Weitrella.

Dinner to honor SC chef

A tribute dinner has been scheduled for Schoolcraft College pastry chef Leonard Stec, who is retiring this year after 24 years with the college.

Stec, a nationally recognized baker and culinary arts professor, is regarded as an enthusiastic, patient and nurturing professor.

The dinner will be 6 p.m. Friday, May 11.

Dinner tickets are $20 per person. Ticket information is available by calling the culinary arts department, 462-4400, Ext. 5423.

SEMCOG joins incinerator battle

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Detroit has one million people, Lake Angelus 400, but both won help from the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments in their regional battles.

SEMCOG's Executive Committee last week voted to:

- Ask the state Air Pollution Control Commission to reconsider its 6-4 decision to shut down Detroit's trash incinerator.
- Endorse state legislation allowing Detroit to continue levying a 5-percent tax on utility bills.
- Object to the federal government's giving a "demonstration grant" for road work in the Auburn Mills megamall project area north of Pontiac without a SEMCOG regional planning review. Lake Angelus is fighting what many call an "urban sprawl" project.

TWO CHIEFS of SEMCOG blistered the April 17 action of the Air Pollution Control Commission in ordering the shutdown of the Greater Detroit Resource Recovery Authority incinerator, an east side trash-to-energy burner serving the city and some suburbs.

"I almost fell out of my chair," said SEMCOG Chair Milton Mack, a Wayne County commissioner who represents Canton Township.

"They made a mistake. If you wanted to harm the environment, you'd shut it down. If you wanted to improve the environment, you'd let it operate.

"The Sierra Club representative (on the MAPC) made the motion and said it was her duty to control air pollution. What they (Detroit) did with trash was up to them."

Mack said there would be a "ripple effect," with Detroit trash haulers lining up at landfills, where the trash could contaminate groundwater. The continued use of landfills throughout the region would do more harm than the incinerator, Mack said.

SEMCOG Executive Director John Amberger said the MAPC audience was "a very strong anti-incinerator crowd. They behaved abominably toward our (SEMCOG) staff, saying 'I hope your children have cancer some day.' There was a lot of abuse."

A VOICE VOTE was about 20-2 in favor of asking MAPC to reconsider its vote to close the incinerator.

SEMCOG noted the city and state Department of Natural Resources were agreeable to a consent order under which the city would install new equipment to remove excess amounts of mercury from the emissions.

THERE WAS NO controversy over SEMCOG's resolution asking the state Legislature to pass a permissive law restoring Detroit's 5 percent tax on natural gas, electric and telephone bills.

"SEMCOG has a long history of support for local government home rule and empowering local governments to address their own fiscal situations," the resolution said.

Wayne Circuit Judge Marvin Stempien in February ruled the tax uncollectible after mid-1988 because of a "sunset" provision in the enabling act. Detroit is now before the State Court of Appeals.

If Stempien is upheld, Detroit would have to 1) refund $100 million in back taxes and 2) lose $60 million a year in future revenue.

The Democratic-run House has passed a new enabling law, but the Republican-run Senate is holding up action until Democrats agree to pass GOP property tax cut plans.

Another question, unaddressed by SEMCOG and the Legislature, is whether the new utility tax would have to be approved by Detroit voters under the Headlee tax limitation amendment to the Michigan Constitution.

SC staffer keeps eye on Lithuania

By Darrell Pressley
staff writer

"It seems like we're living day to day," said Janina Udrys, a mathematics instructor at Schoolcraft College.

A native of Lithuania, Udrys has been keeping a watchful eye on the country's quest for independence.

A Birmingham resident and president of an organization called Ateitis, Udrys is working to keep the language and culture of her native land alive within the Lithuanian community in metropolitan Detroit.

Ateitis, which means "the future," is an organization which was formed in Lithuania in 1920. The organization provides spiritual and intellectual development for children, teenagers and adults.

And today, the organization is giving its support to those fighting for their independence in Lithuania.

"OUR GOAL is to keep the issue alive until the people get their independence," said Udrys who still remembers leaving her homeland at age 3.

"It took nine months to get out," she said.

"I remember the soldiers and hiding in bomb shelters."

After leaving Lithuania, her family spent six years in Germany.

"In the beginning, we lived in something like a refugee camp. It was very tough in Germany. The country was devastated," she said.

In 1950, her family came to the United States and settled in Chicago where Udrys was very active in the Lithuanian community.

At a youth camp in Michigan near Manchester for Lithuanian youth in 1963, she met her husband Narimantas who lived in the Detroit area.

"We proceeded with the romance from two different cities," said Udrys.

In the same year she met her future husband, Udrys received her bachelor's degree in mathematics from Loyola Univeristy in Chicago.

Two years later she moved to Michigan and married.

"When both people have the same heritage it makes it that much easier."

The couple has two sons, Gytis, 19 and Linas, 22, who both speak fluent Lithuanian.

JOHN DISCHER/staff photographer

Janina Udrys, a mathematics instructor at Schoolcraft College and a native of Lithuania, has been keeping a watchful eye on the country's quest for independence.

ALTHOUGH PRIMARILY interested in fostering Lithuanian culture, Udrys was among some 200 protesters who picketed President George Bush's appearance at a GOP fund-raiser earlier this month at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

The demonstrators urged Bush to show more support for the people of Lithuania.

Udrys said she is disappointed in President Bush.

"I wish President Bush would be a little more forceful," said Udrys, adding that a verbal show of support would be a great help.

"When people want democracy, you have to support them. When people want freedom, we have a moral obligation to support them," Udrys said.

"We'd like the American people who are enjoying the fruits of democracy to share with those who have not had the privilege.

"After perestroika, I thought the Soviet Union finally had a civil leader," Udrys said.

"The minute he (Gorbachev) gave the order for tanks and troops to be more visible, he began to show his other side."

In talking with those in Lithuania, there is fear that there could be deportation of officials in Lithuania. And the people would be replaced by Russians, said Udrys.

"It has happened in the past," she said.

SINCE LITHUANIA declared independence on March 11, Washington's policy-makers and politicians have exercised a rhetorical restraint inconceivable in the past.

The Bush administration has received broad political support for sympathyzing with the Soviet Union's dilemma and pressing for a settlement by negotiation, not by force or capitulation.

After President Gorbachev ordered tanks into Vilnius to intimidate Lithuania's Parliament, Congress responded by passing resolutions condemning his action in surprisingly mild terms and avoiding specific threats of retaliation.

Modeled after the U.S. Declaration of Independence, Lithuania's movement to freedom has created a dilemma for the United States.

U.S. politicians have demanded freedom for the Baltic states of Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia ever since Josef Stalin absorbed them into the Soviet Union in 1940.

Resolutions condemning Soviet occupation of the "captive nations" are rituals in Congress.

LITHUANIA'S FIGHT for independence seemed to satisfy those demands, as it fit into the pattern of what many see as the historically inevitable disintegration of Soviet empire.

But the countries action also came at an embarrassingly inconvenient time for the Soviets and the West.

Though there is much concern, Udrys is very optimistic about Lithuania finally receiving it's independence.

"At worst in five years. At best, by the summer," she said.

"The people have been oppressed for 50 years. How much oppression can people take?"

All of her tasks — at Schoolcarft and for Ateitis — are handled, "with great difficulty," said Udrys with a smile and wink.

"It's a lot of juggling. In the long run I feel enriched because of it," said Udrys, who holds a master's degree in arts and sciences from Wayne State University.

Udrys, who teaches calculus and algebra has been on staff at Schoolcarft College for 17 years. She received a Presidential Recognition award for teaching in 1987 and an Excellence in Teaching award in 1989.

And while she continues to work and enjoy her life in America, the independence of the Lithuanian people is in her thoughts each day.

"We really live in two cultures. We are as American as you, and yet we are all Lithuanian.'

Local man's anti-drug film has reel impact

By Marie Chesney
staff writer

In a recent letter to Detroit police, an 11-year-old Detroit girl described life with her drug-addicted mother.

She told of ducking bullets fired by dope dealers. She told of hiding drugs for her mother when police were near. She told of how ugly her mother looked after living her life on city streets.

News accounts said the girl, who now lived with her grandmother, wrote the letter after seeing a film about drugs at school.

"I called to see what film it was, and found out it was mine," said Plymouth resident Tom Van Dyke, a producer of video films for industry. "You have no idea how that made me feel. When you have something that works, you hope the right person sees it, so that it can have the impact you intended. I made this film so that it would make a difference for young people."

'The movie shows that recognizing you have a problem is the key to being in control of yourself.'

— Tom Van Dyke

THE MOVIE the girl saw, "Are You Talking to Me?," was filmed two years ago in various spots throughout the metropolitan Detroit area.

More than 300 local students from all backgrounds — suburban, inner-city, black, Hispanic — act in the movie's 60 scenes.

The movie opens and closes with big, bold words printed on the screen. "Think about it. Talk about it. Deal with it before it grabs hold of you."

"The most important person in your life is you," Van Dyke said. "You can't save the country, the state or your friends. But you can save yourself. You have to maintain control. The movie draws you in and makes this statement: You have to take control of your life now."

The first scene takes place in Westland's Maplegrove Cemetery, at the graveside ceremony of Tony, a teen who has died from drug abuse.

Tony's friends can't believe he's dead.

"I'm going to miss you little brother," said Tony's brother Jack.

The teenage actors (and a few adults) in the scenes that follow all tell the following story:

- Alcohol and drugs is part of the lifestyle of some high school students. "Pass these out to your friends," says a crack pusher in a Jeep.
- There's no one typical way students get involved with drugs. But, once involved, the one thing teens all have in common is that they're no longer in control of their own lives. "What's the big deal, it's part of growing up," says a teen at a beer party in a park.
- Futures are set during high school years. "High school's the key, you can't replay it," says Jack, Tony's brother.
- Once students lose control of their lives, the quality of their life rapidly deteriorates. "It was one big lie. I lied all the time," says a boy in a wheelchair.
- But help is there, if students want it. If students don't seek help, they face a hard life ahead, and maybe an early death. "Killer!" shouts a group of angry teens at a drug pusher.

VAN DYKE bristles at the phrase, "Say no to drugs."

"By the time a kid is involved with drugs, there's no instant fix. If you can 'just say no,' then why are there so many overweight people, or people who smoke? The kids who use drugs lack the confidence and security and self-esteem to be bigger than the drugs."

Van Dyke sees the teenage years as years when kids, bent on experiencing something new, seek out new experiences.

"They're changing every day, trying to discover who they are and like themselves. They move in and out of groups that offer them a variety of personal experiences.

"Drugs may initially be just another investigation. Some will try them and say, this is not for me. They'll say they don't need this and move on to experience something else. Drugs don't necessarily evolve from bad situations. It's easy to get trapped in stereotypes, such as coming from a broken family."

However, Van Dyke, in his talks with students, teachers, police and counselors before he made the film, did find one common denominator leading to teenage drug abuse. Parents today often aren't there to talk to their children when the use of drugs beckons.

"They've loving, caring parents, but they're not spending time with their kids. Mom and dad are working to afford things that they think they want or they think they need.

"Parents are not there today, they're not spending the time and their kids are undirected, unsupervised. Kids today are not being taught today by parents, but by others. This movie accurately portrays the social fabric that exists today and allows drugs to continue."

THE MOVIE also shows actions parents do which can lead to drug use by their children.

For example, in one scene, two girls watch their drunken mother. In another, a daughter helps herself to her mother's pills.

"Substance abuse is a media event we don't get close to until it touches us," Van Dyke said. "The drug commercials put us at ease because we see it as someone else's problem.

"The film is dedicated to 'Tony.' At the end of the film, we ask, 'Does anyone know a Tony?' In the suburbs, one-half the class knows a Tony. In the inner city, 100 percent of the students know a Tony.

"To not talk about this is senseless. The movie shows that recognizing you have a problem is the key to being in control of yourself."

Van Dyke, who spent $100,000 of his own money to make the film, would like to see it shown to youngsters across the United States.

"Many schools want one, but don't have funds to buy it. It costs $195. If a corporate sponsor would like to adopt a school and buy one, I'd be happy to give them a name. My goal is to put this movie in every school in America."

Van Dyke can be contacted at 420-0200.

Short video draws widespread praise

"Are You Talking to Me?", the 2-minute film that has won numerous awards at film festivals, also has won praises from educators, drug counselors, school districts and law enforcement officials throughout the country.

One letter of praise came from the White House, signed by Barbara Bush. Another came from the California-based Scott Newman Center, a drug abuse program set up when actor Paul Newman's son died from drug abuse.

Among the many accolades are those from the following:

- Michigan Sheriff's Association in Lansing.

"The film is one of the few realistic and street smart drug education films that I've had the opportunity to review," said Joseph Rohatynski Jr., public relations coordinator.

- Novi Police Department.

"It's the best anti-drug film on the market," Officer Robert Gatt said.

- Boysville of Michigan.

"It contains a clear and believable message about drug abuse that our youths need to hear," said Gene Hausmann, director of values education.

- Livonia's Holmes Middle School.

"Education, no drug use, healthy lifestyles, dealing with problems and planning for the future are all promoted in this video," said Cynthia Abbott, a teacher at the school.

- Livonia's Community Commission on Drug Abuse.

"I pointed out to a large audience of parents that every situation in Mr. Van Dyke's film, including incidents of violence and criminal activity, had taken place with families on our caseload, and our client population is basically middle class and suburban in composition," said John Farrar, executive director.

- Michigan Police Chiefs Association Newsletter.

"Skillfully woven throughout the film is the underlying theme that education and today's choices are key to tomorrow's successes."

- Michigan Students Against Driving Drunk.

"The (student actors) perform real-life situations ranging from experimentation with alcohol and other gateway drugs to involvement with cocaine, crack and heroin," said director Larry Rotta.

- Wayne-Westland Community Schools.

"The message is in kids' language. It's hard-hitting, relevant, to-the-point and timely. The message is an unequivocal and emphatic missive to stay away from drugs," said Jim Couillard, a counselor.

Man critically hurt at plant

By Joe Bauman
staff writer

A Union Lake man was critically injured Monday after being pinned between two pieces of equipment while working at the General Motors Delco Products plant in Livonia.

Alvin Walter Feole, 45, apparently was trapped for up to 15 minutes before he was discovered by a co-worker at the Eckles Road facility.

Investigators believe Feole was trying to free a jammed conveyor belt when he was struck in the back by a mechanical loader and pinned against a second machine.

FEOLE SUFFERED severe cuts to the chest and shoulders, and had no vital signs when rescue crews first arrived at the scene.

Feole was first transported to St. Mary Hospital, where emergency room personnel were able to resuscitate his vital signs and stabilize his condition, a hospital spokesperson said.

He was then taken by helicopter to the University of Michigan Medical Center in Ann Arbor, where he remained in critical condition Wednesday. No specific details of his condition nor the nature of his treatment were released.

Telephone calls to General Motors officials were not returned at press time.

AT THE Delco plant in January, employee Eugene Bishop was performing routine maintenance on a crane in the plant's plating operation when the welding on a scaffolding he was using broke loose, causing him to fall 17 feet into a vat of 130-degree liquid nickel.

The 27-year plant employee died three days after the accident. He was 44.

In addition to the two accidents, 22-year-old Jason Bickel of Westland was shot and killed Jan. 14 while working inside the plant.

Bickel was temporarily assigned to the plant as a security guard when he was shot to death near the office area of the plant.

Police are still seeking a suspect and motive in the homicide.

Polish dance group kicks up heels

About 1,800 people attended the Polish Extravaganza celebration Saturday and Sunday at Livonia Churchill High.

The celebration was an observance of the 10th anniversary of the Polish Centennial Dancers, a group of 135 dancers from Livonia, Plymouth, Canton, Redford, Farmington, Farmington Hills, Garden City, Westland, Dearborn Heights, Dearborn, Northville, South Lyon, Milford, Walled Lake, Bloomfield Hills, and Belleville.

The celebration featured several dances from Poland, opening with the stately Palonez/Mazur.

Other Polish dances performed include: Slask dances from the mining region; Kaszuby dances from the Baltic Sea area; Nowy Sacz, dances brining together the folklore of mountaineers and farmers; Gorale dances featuring the male dancers with their intricate footwork and stunts of skill and strength.

This series of dances concluded with the Krakowiah,a national dance of Poland with the entire ensemble on stage.

For variety, the dancers had a party doing the Jive Bunny, Hokey Pokey, Shout, Twist in a celebration atmosphere, complete with a juke box, baloons, and party favors.

The live orchstra of Pan Franch and the Muskegon Polka Towners performed lievley polkas, obereks and waltzes.

As a grand finale the Polish Centennial Dancers celebrated its 10th anniversary with an eight-foot birthdy cake with each of the dancers singing "Happy Birthday" and "Sto Lat."

The various groups of the Polish Centennial Dancers include the Silesian Dancers, Nowy Sacz Dancers, Slask Dancers, Pleniny Dancers, Kaszuby Dancers, Mazur Dancers. Anyone interested in joining the group or booking the dancers for a performance, may contact director Joanne Ygeal at 464-1263.

CBE effect

Farrow's decison was political

IT'S TOO BAD Jack Farrow felt the need to drop out of the race for the Plymouth-Canton school board, but we understand his decision.

Farrow was afraid the large number of candidates, nine before he dropped out, would increase the likelihood that a Citizens for Better Education candidate would win one or both of the seats up for grabs in the June election.

We have the same fear, too. We don't want to see a school board dominated by CBE. The group claims it's concerned about education, but we're afraid that their so-called concern will end in censorship of school material.

If everything in our political system worked correctly, Farrow wouldn't have felt the need to drop out of the race. Our system is supposed to allow the majority to rule, but that just doesn't happen.

Small groups that don't represent the majority can through determination and hard work, inflict their minority views on the majority. They can make their system work because the rest of us just plain don't vote.

School elections during years when there are no millage questions on the ballot often only attract 10 percent of the voters. However, you can bet that nearly 100 percent of the CBE supporters will be at the polls.

According to records, school elections in non-millage years attract about 2,000 voters. There are about 2,000 CBE supporters in the Plymouth-Canton school district.

That means CBE could easily elect two more board members in June.

To us there are only two solutions: A large voter turnout or a fewer number of candidates.

The latter isn't a real attractive solution. But then again, this is the real world of politics.

Festival

It's time to visit Old Village

ON SUNDAY, WE know where we'll be — at the Old Village Spring Festival — and we hope that others in Plymouth will stop by and see what's going on.

To us the event, which lasts from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., is a chance to stroll through the village to see what it has to offer.

And we hope others take advantage of the chance to walk through an area of Plymouth that we think has been neglected by the city.

Downtown Plymouth has Fall Festival, the ice festival and numerous other events in and around Kellogg Park. And partly because of those events, it gets most of the city's attention when it comes time to make improvements.

The Spring Festival is a new event and is part of a campaign by Old Village boosters to have two major events in the area. The Old Village Association dropped Dearie Days, a summer event, so it can focus on the Spring Festival and the Applefest in the fall.

We hope there's a good crowd and we hope that someday Spring Festival is as big as the Fall Festival.

Political protest

Privacy issue blurs basic freedom

PROTEST, an essential part of maintaining liberty, is being threatened in our communities. Residents should be deeply disturbed at and resent this dangerous intrusion into our rights of assembly and free speech.

Recently a handful of suburbs have enacted ordinances to curtail picketing in front of specific persons' homes. The guise under which these ordinances are being adopted is to maintain privacy.

In West Bloomfield, Bloomfield Hills, Bloomfield Township and Birmingham the situation revolves around the ever-controversial abortion issue. Pro-life forces are putting the squeeze on individuals who work at abortion clinics by picketing their homes.

Having someone stand in front of your home and protest has the potential to be annoying, embarrassing and maddening. But these inconveniences we must bear.

Our freedom to protest is too important to fritter away because some would rather restrict the noise in their subdivision to the incessant din of lawnmowers.

After all, nobody ever said that maintaining a free society would be easy. Unfortunately expediency for the sake of mediocrity is too rapidly replacing militancy in the defense of freedom.

While sketching out the parameters of "disturbing the public repose," Edmund Burke put it best: "the firebell at midnight disturbs our sleep; but it keeps you from being burnt in your bed."

In truth, these ordinances have nothing to do with protecting a person's right to privacy. The street in front of your house is just as public as those in front of township hall and the White House.

For some time, now, suburbanites' right of assembly and protest have been hindered by shopping malls whose management maintains that their enclosed areas are private. Hired security forces prowl the corridors seeking to quash any sign of divergence from the norm.

Malls are replacing the traditional town squares of America, subdivions are replacing neighborhoods. And at each stage of suburban development, those in charge of the status quo wrest a bit more of freedom away from us.

What these ordinances do is reflect an attitude in our society which says that political protest is somehow vulgar and beneath those who can afford to keep it out of their sight.

The issue over which the protest is taking place is insignificant — today pro-life, tomorrow pro-choice, the next day ecology. The cause matters not, the right to assemble, demonstrate and speak out is foremost.

Using privacy as a scapegoat is not only threatening to the right of protest but to the legitimate right to privacy. If everytime someone inconvenienced by protest raises the issue of privacy, the meaning of privacy will become blurred beyond recognition.

Village Players

Hard work pays off for local theater

THEY'VE KNOCKED ON dozens of doors, sent hundreds of letters and made more telephone calls than they could ever count, but a group of hard-working volunteers can be proud of the community support they've mustered for a longtime but little-known Birmingham organization.

Saturday's Theater Arts Ball, a fund-raiser for Birmingham's Village Players, is the finale to a week of activities orchestrated to involve the community in this thespian organization, one of the oldest in Michigan. The group was chartered in 1923 and has been producing first-class productions ever since.

Like most of the many community theaters in our suburbs, this group relies on support of its residents, the people who live next door to those who take the starring roles on the stage as well as behind the curtains, for its continuing support.

Volunteers raised enough money to cover nearly all of the Ball's costs, so that everything that's raised through ticket sales and the evening of the event will be profit used to renovate the lobby of The Village Players building. They also persuaded many downtown merchants to turn over display windows to the group during Village Players Week. The windows became living scrap books, showing photographs and costumes of prior Players productions.

An open house brought community residents into the theater to see the building renovation completed to date, as well as to watch rehearsals of the group's upcoming production and the set building that goes with it.

There are many community theater groups in the metro area who could take example from the activities and enthusiasm of The Village Players. These grassroots organizations can't be successful without the support of their communities.

Our hats are off to the Players and to the local businesspeople and residents who've made Village Players Week a success.

Future sure to be bright with a new generation

Steve Barnaby

FACING THE FUTURE — it can be poignant, it can be rewarding, it can be frustrating. But one thing is for sure, we should revere it for the symbol of hope it represents for us all.

It's a good feeling to see it happen.

The phone rings and a friend is at the other end. Usually we do business but today he calls just to talk. He talks of his son, an obvious source of pride. For my friend, his son represents the future. He is a symbol of that hope for a better world.

His son, a college student, recently donned the school colors to work out for the football team. College teams do that, you know, practice in the spring for fall football. Beats me why, but they do.

"You know, Steve, it was fun watching him out there after practice, talking with the little kids who were asking him for his autograph. My wife and I just stood for a moment and took it all in," he said.

THE SON took a lot of time with each starry-eyed kid. As he signed autographs he would have each young fan hold his helmet.

"Why'd you have the kids hold your helmet?" asked the father.

The son replied; "I remember when you used to take me to these games and the players would let me hold their helmets. I never forgot it."

A few weeks before the son had been rummaging through some old memorabilia and found the autograph of former University of Michigan quarterback Rick Leach. He remembered the thrill and wanted to share that same feeling with the next generation, the future.

But the son also brought home some disturbing news. Having forged some close friendships with minority students, he was faced with the personal tragedy of a society which prefers to keep cultures separate.

He was upset that his minority friend dropped out from pledging for a fraternity. But he was confused at the reason. His friend dropped out not because the fraternity turned away minorities, but because other minorities put pressure on him not to associate with whites.

Nothing's simple when you're growing up. Just when you think you've figured out the world, something else comes up to confuse the situation — even when you have a friendship with someone who happens to be black.

My friend finished his stories and I told him about my secretary, a very talented young woman. A few weeks ago she walked into the office and announced she had found another job. She was moving on to follow her career path.

Smart move, I told her. Of course, she already knew that. But young people are amazingly tolerant of old farts who insist on passing on their bits of wisdom.

I shut up after that, well for the most part, and thought about how excited I am for her. It's wonderful to watch the future happen right before your eyes.

My friend and I hung up feeling better about the world. After all, we should. We know the place is going to be in good hands.

Farrow used child's death for politics

To the editor:

To set the record straight: Immediately following our son's death, we requested the Plymouth-Canton School Board to allow my husband and I to see the film that was shown to our son's class. We were told that we should not view the movie for at least a week. At this point, we called Mrs. Daskalakis for assistance so that we could see the film as soon as possible. Mrs. Daskalakis then telephoned the board office on our behalf and requested viewing privileges.

The people from CBE were involved at my request and at no time has any member tried to exploit this family. People have to start believing this is not the religious fanatical group that the media portrays them to be.

Through my recent association with Citizens for Better Education, I have discovered their focus is not censorship but parental involvement in their children's education.

I did not like Mr. Jack Farrow's comments in the local papers. He seems to feel that his expression of sympathy gives him the right to use our son's death like a political football.

Broomfield legacy: his voting record

To the editor:

Judith Doner Berne's article on the Broomfield Legacy struck me as being peculiar. Buildings, such as the Capital Hill Club, will come and go, but his real legacy will be found in his voting record. Since April 22 was Earth Day I think it would be appropriate to review the environmental legacy U.S. Rep. William Broomfield would have us live.

Tropical rain forests and their inhabitants are disappearing around the globe at an alarming rate. The United States, in a leadership role, must demonstrate, not just preach, a conservation and wilderness protection ethic. That opportunity came last year in the form of the Nevada Wilderness Protection Act.

The act would establish 1.03% of Nevada a federally protected wilderness. Mr. Broomfield voted for an amendment that would cut that area almost in half. Fortunately, the rest of the house saw the wisdom in protecting it all.

In an effort to stem the destruction of the Tongass National Rain forest, Congress offered a bill to replace the outdated 50 year harvesting contract, which is heavily subsidized by taxpayers. Mr. Broomfield voted for a weakening amendment that would permit high levels of harvesting from this ancient forest and unique ecosystem. This forest, once cut, will be lost to the world forever.

With the Alaska oil spill still fresh on everyone's mind, Congress attempted to strengthen legislation on responsibility. An amendment that would have made an oil spiller liable for the total cost of the cleanup was voted against by Mr. Broomfield.

Time and time again Mr. Broomfield has demonstrated his contempt for most environmental legislation. According to the League of Conservation Voters, a non-partisan organization that reviews environmental voting records, it has been his history. In 1985-86 he voted against the environment 62% of the time. In 1987-88 he did it 69% of the time. Finally, last year, he voted against the environment a devastating 80% of the time.

With all of the ecological threats facing the world, as well as the United States, we can not afford a voting record such as Mr. Broomfield's. His real legacy, if he had his way, would haunt our ancestors forever.

Establishment runs Earth Day

Jack Gladden

QUAKING IN THE aftershocks of Earth Day.

The way I see it, if all of those trees that were being distributed were actually planted and grew, by Earth Day 2010 we'd all be attending rallies and teach-ins about "The Over-Forestation of the Planet."

I mean, think about it. Everybody . . . but everybody . . . was giving away trees. Supermarkets, department stores, auto companies, newspapers. I read somewhere that the goal (I don't know whose goal) was to get a billion trees planted around the world. That's ONE BILLION. The number 1 followed by nine zeroes. That's a lot of trees.

If they were all planted and reproduced normally, in 20 years those same companies would be passing out little hatchets with mimeographed notices attached: "Help Save the Earth — Cut Down a Tree."

Now don't get me wrong. I'm not attacking Earth Day. It's nice to see a worldwide movement dedicated to doing something positive. And if there was a bit of over-reaction involved, better that than shrugging our shoulders, saying "Who cares?" and tossing another candy-bar wrapper out of the car window.

It's just that when the frenzy dies down, supermarkets will go back to promoting double-coupons, politicians will renew their promises to make everything better without raising taxes and many of those seedlings that were distributed to help restore the Earth will end up in landfills somewhere, still encased in their little plastic bags.

Yet somehow I think life will go on and the Earth will keep on spinning.

A COLLEAGUE here at work likened the whole Earth Day movement to a religious revival. He's right, although there were plenty of merchandising techniques employed, too.

One department store advertised "Free seedlings to the first 1,000 customers making a purchase in each store." A supermarket chain introduced a "green line" of products and also gave away seedlings while another claims it sells more "Earth friendly" items than any other store on Earth.

A car company offered free emissions tests to the first 300 customers and tree seedlings to everybody. It also took the opportunity to show off some of its new cars.

What it all came down to, by the time April 22 actually arrived, was that Earth Day 1990 had become big business. "Earth friendly" and "green this" and "green that" were being used to sell everything from toilet paper to gasoline.

That was the main difference between this Earth Day and the first one 20 years ago, which was as much a protest against the establishment as it was a cry to save the Earth.

Remember that the Earth Day demonstrations of 1970 came only five months after the massive anti-Vietnam War march on Washington in November 1969 and were followed two weeks later by the Kent State massacre during a student protest over the U.S. invasion of Cambodia.

Protests and marches were the order of the day in 1970 and "the establishment" had not yet figured out how to deal with them.

THAT FIRST Earth Day was led by student activists and other leaders of the "Ecology Movement." While it did serve . . . particularly in the long run . . . to make us more aware of the limited resources of the planet, not everyone involved in it was so noble of purpose as we would like to remember. Some of the protesters just wanted to take another jab at the establishment.

Earth Day 1990 was largely orchestrated and led by that same establishment. And not all the purposes were completely noble and altruistic this time, either.

Being environmentally conscious — taking better care of good old Mother Earth — is something we need to do. But let's do it for the right reasons, not because we're caught up in the spirit of the revival or because we're being manipulated by the techniques of Madison Avenue.

Jack Gladden is a copy editor at the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. He lives in Canton Township and celebrated Earth Day by planting two trees and a rosebush.

Don't feel guilty asking for reports

Tim Richard

COPS WORK like ethnic mothers. They try to make you feel guilt.

Garrison Keillor, the sage of Lake Wobegon, chronicled the machinations of the Minnesota mother, who, faced with the tiniest disagreement, responds: "Is this the thanks we get after all we've done?"

Mothers of many ethnic groups use the same technique, and they have been especially adept at passing it onto the children who became cops.

DETROIT SGT. Reginal Dozer, speaking to newspeople at a forum on deteriorating police-media relations last month, tried the guilt trick.

"Currently we have three full-time police officers to handle Freedom of Information Act requests," said Dozer, who heads the FOI response section. "Each takes five to eight hours."

Cops on the line must provide reports to the FOI section "along with doing their regular duties — chasing down murderers."

His insinuation was clear: If the public didn't demand to know how governmental agencies operate, cops would have more time to catch murderers and bust drug dealers.

Dozer was less than complimentary to newspeople and civic leaders who make so much work for cops by holding seminars on how to request public documents under the Freedom of Information Act. "And I think the inmates might hold seminars, too," he said, lumping us in with the drug dealers and murderers.

A LIVONIA cop, Tim Larion, wrote a letter to the editor on this topic, closing with "Get off their (police) backs" and reminding us: "We should never forget, in our dealing with a police office, that he/she may have just spent an eight-hour day or more confronting drunks, thieves, drug users, suicide and accident victims."

Southfield city administrator Robert R. Block gave the Observer & Eccentric staff the benefit of his thinking at an in-house seminar last week. "I've got a $65,000 officer tied up . . . to be a news reporter's valet."

AS I INTERPRET these amazingly similar remarks, we the public are making trouble for our "men in blue" when we seek access to public records.

If a drug-demented, lust-crazed rapist killer goes free, it's our fault for tying up cops with our desire to know what our most expensive municipal agency is doing.

Phooey!

It wasn't civic groups and the news media that made Detroit — and many suburban — police departments decide to scrutinize every FOI request to see if they could concoct an alibi for denying it.

All over the state, bureaucrats are holding seminars, consulting "risk managers" and heeding the advice of attorneys like Tim Cronin. "My strong recommendation is that those reports be reviewed prior to release by the designee (in the police department) or that the news people be required to file a Freedom of Information Act request before the information is released to them," said Cronin, a member of a law firm advising the townships of Canton, Plymouth, Northville and West Bloomfield.

THE FOI law opens with this basic principle:

"It is the public policy of this state that all persons are entitled to full and complete information regarding the affairs of government and the official acts of those who represent them as public officials and public employees, consistent with this act. The people shall be informed so that they may fully participate in the democratic process."

A reporter, lawyer, claims investigator, civic activist or interested citizen should never — ever — feel guilty when requesting a public record.

But a lot of cities and townships should feel guilty about the time, talent and tax dollars they squander hiding their papers and then trying to blame us for "tying them up."

Should parent tattle on teacher?

Doc Doyle

Q: I recently saw my son's teacher shopping at an area mall one afternoon at 2 p.m. It was a regularly scheduled school day. She saw me and I know she went out of her way to avoid talking to me. I do volunteer work in her school and see her almost every week. I've heard teachers get personal business days but this didn't look like personal business to me. Should I mention it to her principal?

A: It is impossible to justify playing hookey but it has gone on since I began in education. The majority of teachers and administrators do not abuse the use of their sick or personal business days. But a few do.

However, most teachers and administrators with whom I've worked tend to come to school when they are not feeling well and probably should have stayed home.

The genesis of sick days and personal business days from the pre-teacher contract era to today needs to be reviwed to address your question.

When I started in education back in the 1950s we received three sick days and no personal business days. If you were on your death bed the superintendent had the right to decide if your sickness was legitimate. He then could grant a teacher more than three days. Otherwise, your pay was docked.

When negotiations were legitimized in the 1960s, sick days increased from five up to now 10 per year in most districts. The days also accumulate and can now be carried over. Many teachers have more than 200 days accumulated that they have never used.

Personal business days were then negotiated into the contract, initially one or two a year. These days originally were to be used only for a death in the immediate family and each day had to be approved by the administration.

As years rolled on, the number of personal business days increased up to four and could be used for other situations where a teacher is not in control of setting the dates and times (for example a doctor's appointment). In many of todays' contracts teachers do not have to declare what personal business they are going to be about. It is their business and it would be considered unethical to infer a teacher would ever play hooky as some kids do.

Frankly, as a teacher and administrator, there were a couple days it seemed I was mentally and physically burned out and I did stay home. However, those days were few and far between.

Unfortunately, there are a few educators who view both sick days and personal business days as vacation days. Having reviewed attendance patterns of staff members for years, they are easy to identify.

The most famous day to be sick is a non-payday Friday. This choice grants the long weekend and the next Friday to pick up the check. Days just prior to vacations also are popular. Deer hunting season often causes another period of extended illness.

Teachers who abuse this fringe benefit think only the building principal and central office are concerned. Wrong. Teachers within each building know who the abusers are as do union leaders. And although they say nothing to their face, they have strong personal opinions that are expressed in private.

Since you wonder about your child's teacher being in the mall at 2 p.m., you have choices. You can mention it to her, mention it to her principal or decide it is none of your business. You say she is an excellent teacher, seldom absent, so consider these factors before making your decision.

Dr. James Doyle is a former assistant superintendent in the Troy School District. Questions for this column should be sent to Doc Doyle, c/o Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150.

Beauty of nature: cause to celebrate

By Julie Brown
staff writer

CONSTRUCTION VEHICLES are easy to spot all around the Miller Woods, but the wooded area itself remains untouched. Evelyn Edgar, past president of the Friends of the Miller Woods, thinks that's just fine.

"Definitely," said Edgar, a Plymouth Township resident. "For one thing, just to have a place like this when everything is built up. It's been kept this way for so many years. I think that says a lot for the kind of woods it is."

The Miller Woods site, a hardwood forest, is on Powell between Beck and Ridge roads in Plymouth Township. The land is owned by the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, and Friends members and other volunteers help maintain the woods.

Edgar used to teach English at Plymouth Salem High School and retired in 1972. She remembers visiting the woods a number of years ago with another teacher.

Randal Krueger crosses a bridge at the Miller Woods, leading the way for his mom, Ginger Krueger (center), and for Evelyn Edgar.

AT THAT time, the woods were full of rubbish, including appliances, tires and other large items.

"We were just getting into the idea that we had to have some preservation here when Earth Day came along," she said. Friends members are planning their annual spring walks, and consider this year's walks their contribution to the 20th anniversary Earth Day celebration.

The land had been owned and farmed by the Miller family, and was bought by the school district in 1968. This year marks the 15th anniversary of the formation of the Friends of the Miller Woods.

The spring walks will be held 1-4 p.m. Saturday, April 28, and 1-4 p.m. Sunday, May 6. The walks will include guided tours of the woods, and participants will be able to see many spring flowers in bloom.

Participating in the spring walks is free of charge, and those who plan to attend should dress for the weather. Those who are interested may join the Friends group and dues are now renewable for current members.

Dues are $10 for individuals, $25 and up for patrons. Dues may be sent to: Friends of the Miller Woods, Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth, Mich. 48170.

FRIENDS MEMBERS help to maintain the woods and to make people aware of the need to preserve the area. Many school and Scout groups go on tours of the woods during the year.

Randal Krueger, 8, is among students taking a Saturday class at the Miller Woods. Randal, a third grader at St. Paul's School in Northville, and his sister, Heather, 11, are taking the nature class offered through the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

"We learn what kind of animals are here," Randal said. He and the other children have learned about the importance of taking care of the woods and not littering. They've also learned about different birds and their nests.

He agrees it's important to have sites like the Miller Woods available.

"Yeah, it'll be nice to walk around," he said. "The animals need the habitat to live and that's the only place they can find a good habitat."

His mom, Ginger Krueger of Plymouth Township, is membership chairwoman for the Friends group. She's also studying to become a master gardener through the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service and is a member of the Trailwood Garden Club.

Her family's home backs up to a wooded area, and they know it's essential to preserve natural sites like the Miller Woods.

"I think it's important to keep it intact for future generations because eventually there's not going to be anything like this around," Krueger said. Learning about nature is beneficial for children and adults alike.

"And it helps us in learning a little more about recycling," said Krueger, a homemaker who does accounting work at her husband's office.

Many Boy Scouts have contributed to maintenance of the Miller Woods over the years. Scouts have created signs and benches at the woods for Eagle Scout projects. Garden club members have also worked to make people more aware of the woods, Krueger said.

'It's been kept this way for so many years. I think that says a lot for the kind of woods it is.'
—Evelyn Edgar

More likely than not, this small pool of water in the woods will dry up in warmer weather.

Looking good

Styles can help boost self-esteem

By Julie Brown
staff writer

A woman who's had a mastectomy don't need to abandon all hope of ever wearing fashionable clothing again.

"As women, we're very fashion-conscious normally," said Annamay Morgan, coordinator of breast cancer support services for the Michigan Cancer Foundation.

After surgical removal of a breast, some women don't consider themselves attractive or worthy of wearing fashionable styles. Losing a body part that's often highlighted by society is difficult.

The Michigan Cancer Foundation, a United Way agency, sponsors a local breast cancer support group. Meetings are the third Thursday of each month at the foundation's Plymouth branch office.

DURING THE April 19 meeting, group members learned about swim wear, prostheses and bras for women who've had breast cancer. The program was presented by Regina Villemure, owner of the Unique Boutique, a hair salon in South Rockwood.

"Their self-esteem, how they feel about themselves, is the most important thing in the world," said Villemure. "You lose your pride, you lose everything."

Villemure brought a number of prostheses and bras to the meeting, giving group members a chance to see what's available. She also brought a selection of swim wear designs created by Camp International.

THE SWIM suits cost $60 to $72, and coordinates — skirts and jackets — are available. An ensemble runs about $150, Villemure said.

The swim suits are designed to accommodate a prosthesis. Suits are available in a variety of styles and fabrics and don't look any different from those worn by women who haven't had surgery, she said.

Villemure hasn't had cancer but has a niece who had leukemia. Her niece, who was 3 when she was diagnosed, is 10 and in remission.

"That's how it got me involved in doing it." Villemure now works with a number of people who've had cancer.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Many attractive swimwear styles are available for the woman who has had a mastectomy. Regina Villemure, owner of the Unique Boutique in Squth Rockwood, shows members of the Breast Cancer Support Group one ensemble.

AT THE TIME her niece was diagnosed, Villemure was working as a hair dresser and teaching. She found there wasn't much available in the way of wigs for children who'd lost their hair due to anti-cancer treatments.

Villemure works with many people who've lost their hair due to chemotherapy, radiation therapy or other reasons. Wigs and hairpieces in synthetics and human blends are available at her boutique for women, men and children.

At her salon, Villemure carries swim wear, bras and prostheses. She also does prosthesis fittings. She frequently speaks to groups such as the breast cancer support group.

WOMEN WHO come to the Michigan Cancer Foundation for help often ask where they can find swim suits, said Morgan, who is a registered nurse.

"So it is so very important for them," she said. "Now they're trying to get back and live their life as fully as they can."

Club to host stamp show

The West Suburban Stamp Club will host its 21st annual Plymouth show Saturday and Sunday, April 28-29.

The show will be held 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday at Central Middle School, Main at Church in downtown Plymouth. Admission and parking are free of charge.

Michigan Gov. James Blanchard has issued a proclamation declaring the week of April 23-29 Michigan Stamp Week. His declaration coincides with the show dates.

The exhibit portion of the show will consist of a 2,800-plus page exhibit judged by a panel of judges accredited by the American Philatelic Society.

The Plymouth show is a qualifying national show in the APS's "World Series of Philately." The grand award winner will compete against winners from the 33 other national shows this August for the 1990 championship in Cincinnati, Ohio. The grand award winner will also receive a framed duck drawing by wildlife artist Larry Hillard.

AT THE SHOW, a 45-dealer bourse will include material in a variety of price ranges from all over the world for both the new and experienced collector. Dealers come from 10 states and from Canada.

Post office substations from the United States, Canada and the United Nations will sell current stamps at face value at the show. The West Suburban Stamp Club will continue its support of the Shriners Crippled Children's Hospital rehabilitation program. Donors of stamps will receive a special souvenir card.

Several philatelic societies will participate in the show. The Plate Number Coil Collector's Club, American Association of Philatelic Exhibitors and Peninsular State Philatelic Society will present programs.

Junior stamp collectors will find many things of interest, including stamp-related games, programs on beginning stamp collecting and free stamps for each collector.

Raffle drawings will be part of the weekend's fun. This year, the club will also offer a set of two covers saluting the Detroit Pistons. Each cover will have a separate cachet, the 4 cent basketball stamp, and a cancel shaped like a backboard and basket.

Collectors may buy the set of two covers by sending $3, plus a No. 10 stamped, addressed envelope to: West Suburban Stamp Club, c/o Hal Williams, P.O. Box 643, Plymouth, Mich. 48170.

Program gives families a workout

By Carolyn DeMarco
staff writer

ON FIRST PASS it looks like the epitome of yuppiedom — a workout place for infants and toddlers. But Gymboree, it turns out, is more than the Vic Tanny of the diaper set. It's not another dropoff center for parents to liberate themselves temporarily from their offspring. It's a place for baby to play, develop and grow with mom or dad right there at his/her side.

Jim and Kathy Cornell of Farmington Hills opened their fifth Gymboree franchise earlier this month at the Orchard Mall in West Bloomfield. The location features an open space with dozens of specially designed play equipment pieces. Child and parent(s) enroll in a 45-minute class once a week for 12 weeks to play on equipment, engage in activities, and sing songs and chants with 15-20 other youngsters in their age group and accompanying parents.

The Cornells also operate a Gymboree in Plymouth, in the Lilley Executive Plaza, 9357 General Drive, Suite 105. The facility opened in January 1989.

"Plymouth has really done very well," Kathy Cornell said. The first Gymboree session in Plymouth attracted 175 children. About 230 youngsters are now enrolled at the Plymouth facility.

"So we're very pleased with the growth of the center," she said. "The response of the community has been great."

Many of the participants are working parents who bring baby in evenings after work. "We get a lot of suits and ties," Jim said.

Some fathers come in reluctantly, encouraged by their wives to take the baby just once during the 12 weeks, she said. They often become part of the workout threesome. A $75 charge for the 12 weeks is for the child and either or both parents.

Grandparents, often the daytime caregivers, are also Gymboree frequenters, as are other child care providers.

CLASSES ARE offered for five different age groups:

- Babygym (3-12 months) — This is an introduction to colors, textures, sounds and rhythmic songs for baby, parent education for mom and dad. Gentle exercises are choreographed to music.
- Gymboree I (10-18 months) is a time to explore. Top priority is developing balance and building confidence in new-found mobility.
- Gymboree II (16-30 months) — In this class, balance is practiced and body movements refined. Weekly themes like up, down, under and through teach concepts.
- Gymboree III (2½-3½ years) — Movement to music and activities with imagery is featured. Youngsters sing their own songs and take an active role in activities and games.
- Gymgrad (3-4½ years)— Creative movement, pre-sport activities, special equipment and non-competitive games are designed to enhance skill development. Using special props, parents and kids explore creativity through movement.

The Gymboree "play with a purpose" concept was created in California and spread to the Midwest. Kathy Cornell was a new mother when she first sought something the Cornells could do with Katie, now 4 years old, and found a local Gymboree. She and her husband were retail managers for the Waterford Meijer's store.

"We were into the '80s style of parenting to the 'nth' degree," Jim said. "We were a threesome. We did it as a family."

WHEN KATHY found the Gymboree area franchise was for sale in late 1987, she quit her job thinking she could take over the business and run it two days a week. Since then they've taken over or established businesses in a church in Northville, the Mercy Center in Farmington Hills, the community room of Livonia Mall, and the Plymouth and West Bloomfield sites. At the same time, they've added Maggie, 2½, and Robbie, 1, to the family.

"We had an office in the home and a computer. It just snowballed. It was more successful than anticipated," Jim said.

Mostly the job is fun. "If you're going to start a business, make sure it's one you can wear tennis shoes and sweat suits to," Kathy said. The difficult part is hiring. Staff members don't have to have college degrees, she said, but eight of nine do have early education background. In addition, all receive a six-week on-site training which includes first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

"We look for a personality, a type that is warm and affectionate — parents look upon them as resource people."

While the child is the main beneficiary of the class, parents also benefit.

"It's kind of a place for people to connect, I think," Kathy said. Participating in Gymboree gave her, as a first-time mother, a chance to meet other moms.

There aren't a lot of programs in which parents get to participate in activities with young children, she said.

"This is something the parents are out there together with their children." Children who take Gymboree classes have a chance to learn some socialization skills while having fun, she said.

As a franchise bonus, enrolled vacationing families may attend a Gymboree in the spot they're visiting, if available.

Day and evening classes are available at the Gymboree in Plymouth. For registration information, call 473-1845.

Clergy spouses juggle various roles

By Arlene Funke
special writer

Once upon a time — a generation or two ago — pastors were men and their wives often were unpaid "assistant ministers" in the church.

Times have changed. Nowadays, being the spouse of a pastor doesn't rule out a career or interests apart from the church. And with more women becoming ordained in some denominations, the pastor's spouse is a man.

"I think probably the whole understanding of clergy and spouse has changed," said the Rev. Kenneth Gruebel, pastor of the 400-member Geneva Presbyterian Church in Canton.

In some cases, the spouse of the pastor is deeply involved in church projects. Others are less visible as they attend school, hold jobs and cope with family needs.

"It's just a way of life for me," said Blanche Halboth of Redford. "We're a church family."

No wonder. Halboth's husband, Victor, has been pastor of the 2,000-member Grace Lutheran Church of Redford for 33 years. Victor's father served there before that.

NOW THE Halboths' son, Timothy, 27, serves as associate pastor at Grace, where he was ordained last June. Another son, Mark, a Livonia dentist, and his wife, Charla, also are active.

The Halboths, who are in their mid-50s, met while Victor was in training. Blanche always expected to be involved. She was less active when her sons were busy with school and extracurricular activities.

"You just grow with the job," said Blanche, who has taught vacation Bible school, sung in the choir and served as chairwoman of church committees.

In 1983, her denomination honored her for her many activities.

For the past 10 years, Blanche has been the church's full-time secretary.

"We're active because we want to be," she said. "Our members are like family."

GRUEBEL AND his wife, Sue, were high school sweethearts in New York. In the early days, Sue's potential role in his ministry wasn't discussed much.

However, in the ensuing years they "talked about it innumerable times," said Kenneth Gruebel, 42.

"We decided early on that this was my calling, and not hers. She would pick whatever (church) projects were important to her. The congregation has been very accepting."

CANTON RESIDENT Sue Gruebel, 41, is a full-time teacher and a part-time student at Eastern Michigan University, where she's working on her master's degree. This school year, she transferred employment from the Garden City Public Schools to the Livonia Public Schools, where she's an adult education teacher.

Their son, David, 16, a junior at Plymouth Canton High School, plays percussion in the Centennial Educational Park Marching Band. Daughter Melissa, a fourth grader at Gallimore Elementary School, swims and plays soccer and basketball.

"I have opted to not take a leadership role (in church) at this time because I have so many irons in the fire," Sue Gruebel said.

"The members have been very supportive," she said. "Before, we were in a church on Long Island. It was more traditional, but my time schedule was different. Things were different then, all around."

THE REV. Gilbert Sanders, a Missouri native, became pastor of the 500-member Livonia Baptist Church last June. Sanders, 43, said his wife, Susan, accompanies him to many church functions and he relies on her counsel.

But, said Sanders, his Southern Baptist denomination informally encourages each pastor to see his wife as "a person in her own right" and not simply as a helper.

"Before we got married, I felt I had a calling to church work," said Susan Sanders, 42.

With a strong interest in Christian education and music, she studied at the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago for two years before quitting to marry.

"It wasn't as mandatory (then) to have a career," she said.

The Sanderses, who have been married almost 22 years, have two children. Their son, Dale, 14, attends Livonia Franklin High School. Muriel, 12, is a student at Riley Middle School.

SINCE COMING to Livonia, Susan Sanders has taken a full-time job in an insurance office to help meet family expenses. Although that limits her free time, she is active in a church group that corresponds with missionaries. She also teaches Sunday school to preschoolers.

She hopes to initiate a class for pregnant women, aimed at laying the foundation for children's spiritual needs.

"Many baby boomers have dropped out of church," she said. "Whether we like it or not, the kids who go to church get into less trouble. Of course, there is no guarantee. We can build a support group to help you through the rough times of raising the child."

The Sanderses have talked about becoming volunteer missionaries overseas, perhaps after retirement. Susan said she has no desire to become an ordained minister, although there are a few Baptist women preachers.

IN SOME cases, both husband and wife are ordained. One such pastoral pair is the Rev. Randy Whitcomb and his wife, the Rev. Michelle A. Gentile of Canton. Both are United Methodist ministers. They have no children.

Whitcomb is pastor of the 145-member Cherry Hill United Methodist Church in Canton. Gentile is pastor of the 124-member Denton Faith United Methodist Church in Belleville.

"The church doesn't have that many expectations when the spouse is male," Whitcomb said.

Nationally, some 2,300 women have been ordained in the United Methodist denomination, Gentile said. Many marry other ministers. While barriers are dropping, many people still expect more from the women, Gentile said.

Gentile, who is from Rochester in Oakland County, met and married Whitcomb while they were in the seminary. He's from Rochester too, but a different state — Minnesota.

BECAUSE THEIR respective duties keep them so busy, "we have to schedule time together," according to Whitcomb.

"The hardest part is that we don't get to worship together," said Gentile, 35.

Occasionally, they will switch pulpits and preach at the other's church, which is enjoyable for them and the congregations.

"In all the churches we have served the people have been gracious," Gentile said.

ONE ISSUE that they must periodically grapple with is church assignment.

In their denomination, it is customary for pastors to be ordained and assigned in a designated geographical area, called a conference. Whitcomb gave up his conference and relocated to Michigan to be close to his wife. Pastors are reappointed each year.

"Our bishop, Judith Craig, was wonderful and made sure we had jobs together," Gentile said. "The church and the clergy couples are still learning — walking on new ground."

Both the Rev. Michelle A. Gentile and her husband, the Rev. Randy Whitcomb, are clergy spouses. She's pastor of the Denton Faith United Methodist Church and he's pastor of the Cherry Hill United Methodist Church in Canton.

Signs of strife start surfacing

Recent reports from Eastern Europe have included distressing news. Not front page material, nor subjects for evening newscasts. At least for the time being. But the issue is too important to ignore. It will not go away by thinking it inconsequential.

Major religious groups in Eastern Europe have reported incidents of contention, and even conflict, in their unfolding relationships with one another. The new experiences of freedom in religious life have awakened contentious issues between various groups within Christendom.

Some of these issues are localized conflicts directed by stronger personalities. Some are part of the positioning for power within the new orders of public life. Some open old wounds that go back and cut deeply in the faith community.

CONTENTIONS AND strife within the faith community of Eastern Europe have not been Western media subjects for more than 40 years. Perhaps we were just grateful for their existence, and missed the finer details of their life together. Whatever the reason, for the past four decades, most of us have heard nothing about the way the churches in Eastern Europe relate to one another.

Even if we would dare chastise the Eastern European churches for these unfolding tensions, we cannot ignore the tensions within our Western religious community. The news is less distressing about conditions in Eastern European churches than it is an indictment of the human spirit for failing to learn from the past.

More than 40 years of joint efforts by the religious communities of Eastern Europe to throw off the oppression of totalitarianism have created experiences of trust and acceptance of one another in matters of national identity. Forty years of fighting a common enemy has created bonds of community that will not easily dissolve in the face of tensions and contentions.

Experience alone, however, does not create community. Community exists where commitment is made to community. A commitment that begins with the self.

IN HIS "Letters to Olga," Vaclav Havel, the president of Czechoslovakia, wrote about the responsibility for spiritual and national renewal in these words: "The only possible place to begin is with myself . . . It is I who must begin . . . Whether all is really lost or not depends entirely on whether I am lost."

Both the experiences of Western churches and the reported tensions and contentions within the Eastern European religious communities strongly suggest that the ultimate source of our strife and divisiveness is not those who rule over us. What we need most to hear is the word which can do to us, but what we do to ourselves.

The Rev. Lloyd Buss is pastor of the Aldersgate Methodist Church in Redford.

Its primary objective is to enroll Michign Vietname veterans for participation in four specific types of health studies, including a studies of the overall mortality, cancer incidence, birth and dioxin exposure.

Veterans and organizations that use the Agent Orange hotline can now call (800) MIC-VIET for direct assistance. Veterans seeking information about Agent Orange compensation can call the Agent Orange Payment Program at (800) 225-4712.

We Need Volunteers Who Love Happy Campers!

Sun Deer® campers are happy campers and it's no wonder because most severely asthmatic kids are forced to spend their summers indoors. At Camp Sun Deer®, asthmatic kids ages 9-12 participate in a variety of outdoor activities, but they can't do it without your help. The limitations and doubts they face can be diminished by a volunteer who cares. Your participation at Camp Sun Deer® can make all the difference in an asthmatic child's summer.

Photography experts will be sponsoring group tours through Scotland this summer.

Photo enthusiasts are welcome to join the group June 24-July 7 and capture shots in the Western Highlands of Scotland. The group will begin the excursion in Girvan, Scotland, a fishing village and photograph several castles and an abbey ruin. A visit to the Robert Burns Center will also be made while in the Girvan area where photographers can shoot the bridge over the River Doon (the Brigadoon of Lerner and Lowe fame.)

The trip includes a drive through the valley of Glencoe where one night, while they slept, the MacDonald clan was murdered by their guests, the Campbells. The next stop is in Ft. William, the gateway to the Western Highlands and in the morning the group will then head for the Isle of Skye.

Two days will be spent photographing Skye, the rugged island, home of the Clan MacCleod. A ferry will then take the group to the Isle of Lewis where they will spend two days taking shots among the 3,000-year-old Standing Stones of Callanish, which is considered to be the finest stone circle in Scotland.

Back to the mainland, the group will take a scenic route to Inverness and spend a free day to sightsee, shop and relax. After two days in Inverness, they will head south down the coastline of Loch Ness, keeping an eye out for Nessie.

The photo tour is $1,950 and includes round-trip airfare, all transportation within Scotland, 12 nights accommodations at bed and breakfast establishments, all breakfast and dinners and admission into historical sites.

The trip also includes instruction by photography experts such as Nancy Goff of Ann Arbor and Cheryl Hogue of Saline.

For more information and reservations for the trip, call (313)973-1251 or (313)429-0594.

St. Louis on the riverside

IT'S A PLEASANT walk through the rose garden, Japanese garden or English woodland. A bonus is the sculptures which grace the fountains (turned off during the winter) and grounds — including works by Alexander Calder, Henry Moore and Carl Milles.

We were lucky to travel during the off-season because even Tony's, one of only nine Mobil Guide five-star North American restaurants had room for us on a Friday night with only an hour's notice. If you go now, be sure to make reservations.

The 94th Aero Squadron adjacent to the airport with a perfect view of landings and takeoffs was a great place for Sunday brunch.

● Begin with airfare:

All year round, Southwest Airlines offers special rates to St. Louis. As long as you travel Monday through Thursday, tickets are $19 each way with a 21-day advance purchase. Or you can get a $48 round-trip ticket with a seven-day advance purchase or a $78 round-trip ticket with a one-day advance purchase. That's for unreserved seating on a number of conveniently scheduled one-stop flights.

● Rental cars:

When you arrive at Lambert-St. Louis International Airport on a Friday morning, there are at least a half dozen rental car companies. A midsize car is $11.95 per day plus 17 cents a mile at Budget, $21.95 and 100 free daily miles at National.

The holy path to Mecca

The first time I saw the sign it was inside a bureau drawer in the Rasa Sayang Hotel, one of several beautiful high-rise beach hotels in Penang. Penang is an island connected by bridge and ferry to the northwest coast of Malaysia, on the southernmost peninsula of southeast Asia.

The sign was one word: KIBLAT. It was printed inside the outline of an arrow that pointed towards the rear corner of the drawer.

Malaysia is a Muslim country, but it has large minorities of many religious persuasions, so we had been taking our shoes off all day: to enter the state mosque, to climb the hill to the Pagoda of Ten Thousand Buddhas, to creep into the Snake Temple and to admire the 100-foot-long Reclining Buddha.

The second time I saw the sign was on the ceiling of our room in the Perdana Hotel in Kota Bahru, across the peninsula on the South China Sea. We had photographed Malay fishermen pulling colorful boats through the surf on to a wide sand beach, watched the top spinners, the drummers and the Kelantan dancers, before falling into bed, so I didn't actually see the sign until I was flat on my back, ready to turn out the light.

THE SAME word: KIBLAT. The same boxed arrow. Only this time it was on the ceiling of our hotel room, pointing toward the corner.

"It must be something to do with electricity or fire escapes," I said.

Malaysia is a small country, but we spent a lot of time traveling from one place to another aboard Malaysian Air Lines, so the mystery wasn't solved until we reached the capital city of Kuala Lumpur.

Our guide, Anuar Haji Abdul Hamid, took us for a walking tour around the minarets and domes of Masjid Jame, the public mosque, built on the very spot where Kuala Lumpur was founded centuries ago at the junction of the Klang and Gombak rivers.

"Why are the men stretched out all over the floor?" somebody asked. "They look like they're napping."

"Muslims must pray five times a day," Anuar said. "Today is Sunday, these men don't have to work and they are waiting for the next prayer."

"Do they pray facing to the east?"

"They face the holy city of Mecca," Anuar said.

The question kept nagging at me as we photographed the mosque, the old colonial buildings of Kuala Lumpur, the war memorial high above the Lake Gardens. How does a devout Muslim know the direction of Mecca when he travels?

It was a rhetorical question, long forgotten by the time we checked into the Hyatt Saujana Hotel and Country Club, eager to leap into the swimming pool.

I pulled a stack of clothes out of my suitcase, opened a bureau drawer and there it was: KIBLAT. And an arrow pointing nowhere.

By that time I had bought a Malay-English dictionary. I dug it out of the bottom of my carry-on luggage and flipped through to the letter "K."

"Kiblat. Here it is," I said. "You're not going to believe this!"

"What does it mean," Micky asked.

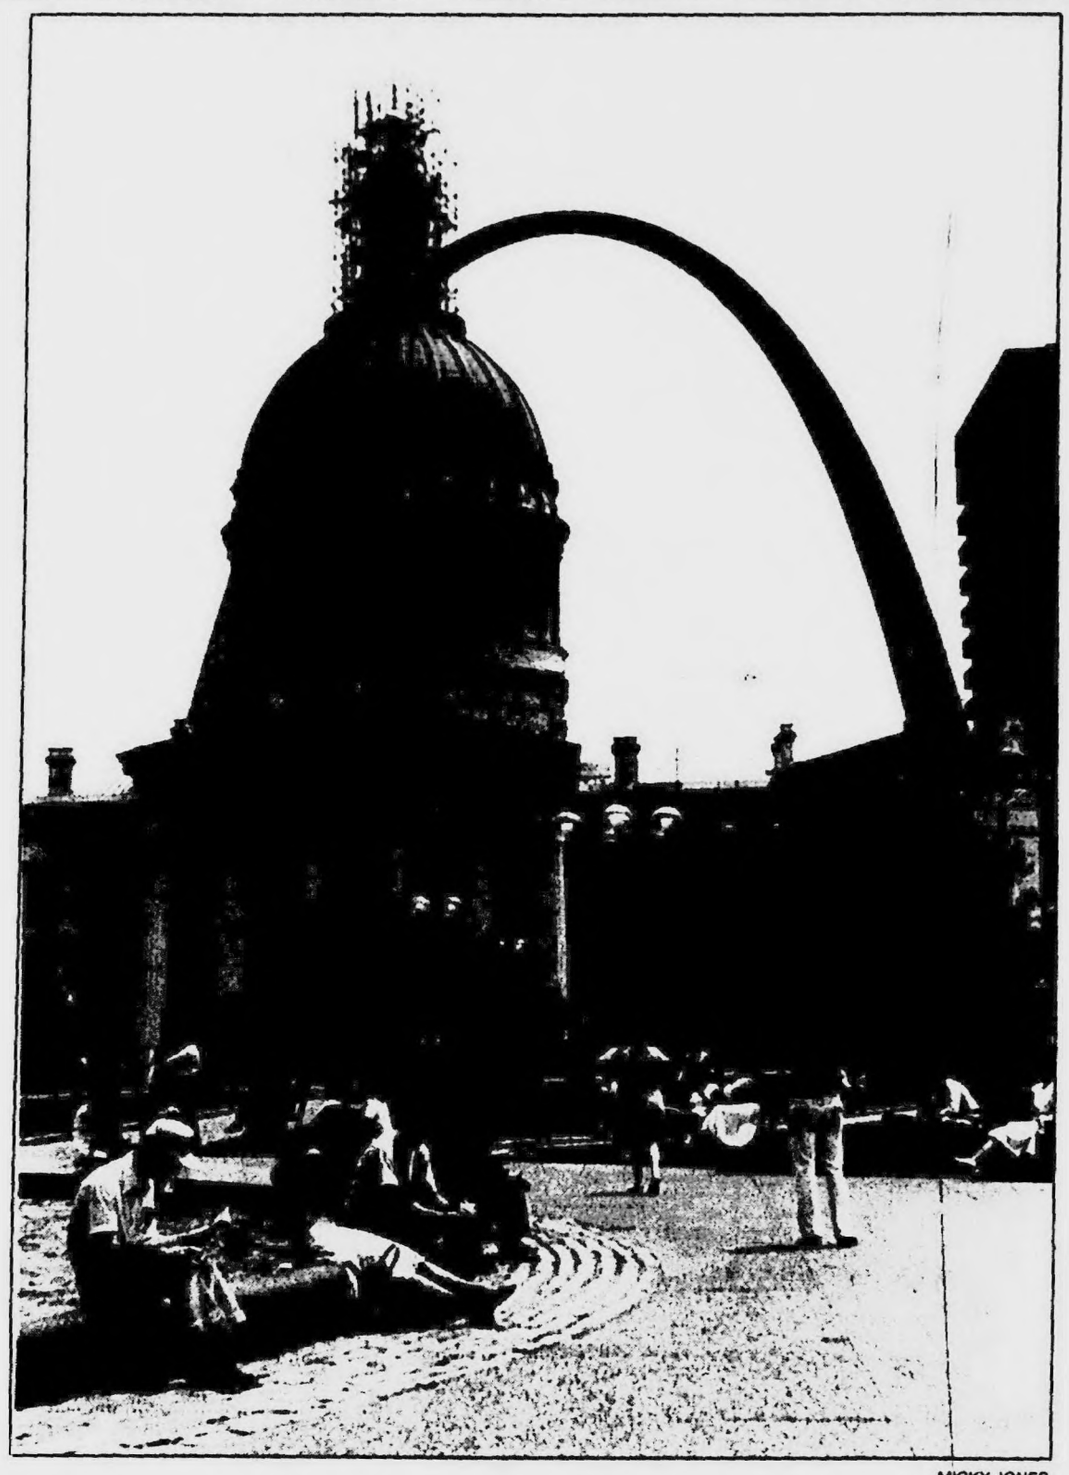
"It means 'the direction of Mecca.'"

He looked puzzled, but any devout Muslim would know exactly what it meant when he prepared for prayer at 6 a.m., at 1:30 p.m. and 4:30 p.m., at sunset and at 8:30 p.m. It is how you know the direction of Mecca when you travel in Malaysia.

St. Louis:

The Big, Small Town On The River

By Carolyn DeMarco
staff writer



MICKY JONES

The Old Courthouse (1839) in front of the Gateway Arch is a peaceful spot for relaxing in downtown St. Louis.

Welcome to St. Louis, Mo. — a big, small town or maybe it's a small, big town, pressed up tight against the Mississippi River, halfway between Canada and the Gulf of Mexico and proudly referred to as the "gateway to the west."

It's also the location of the world's largest brewery, site of the 1904 World's Fair, birthplace of sliced bread, home of the National Bowling Hall of Fame and the eastern border for all radio stations that start with K.

We took our trip during the midwinter season which offers cheap travel rates and a break from the hustle and bustle of tourist season. However, most river boats and outdoor tourist sites are closed for the winter.

Most Mississippi sidewheeler excursion boats run between May and October as well as the Six Flags Over Mid-America amusement park. If you go this summer check them out and don't forget St. Louis Cardinals baseball — the heart of St. Louis tourism.

HOTELS ARE plentiful in St. Louis. The Hotel Majestic, a historic pearl of a hotel, is $180 a night for two persons, according to the AAA Tourbook, $100 a night per a long-distance inquiry, and only $65 per night when you actually confront the desk clerk. Other hotels have similarly discounted for the quiet times.

A trip to St. Louis is not a trip to St. Louis without a visit to the famous Gateway Arch, this country's tallest monument and one of its most- visited sites since it was built in 1965. It's all part of Jefferson National Expansion Memorial, a national park commemorating St. Louis as the Gateway to the West.

For $2.50 ($.50 for kids) you can travel to the top of the arch. Allow one hour for the wait and the ride. While you're waiting you can tour the free Westward Expansion Museum on the site and learn more about the trend that Lewis and Clark started and nouveau Californians continue.

While down by the riverside, you can stroll the cobblestone levee (per Webster, an enbankment to prevent a river from flooding bordering land). Many excursion boats double as restaurants — including a floating McDonald's!

IN 1764, a French fur trapper, Pierre Laclede, established a trading post on this western bank of the Mississippi. Today it's a tourist attraction — restaurants and shops. Among them are Gibbol's Novelties and Costumes, a fun shop with adult novelties, stage makeup and magic tricks; Missouri Peddlers, a showcase for Missouri crafters with quilts, toys and folk art; and Swiss Village Book Store Antique Annex, a browser's dream of old and rare books and artifacts.

After dark the parking lots fill with funseekers there for the good music and fun times and the streets fill with strollers and horse-drawn carriages.

Young locals consider Muddy Waters the most popular nightspot. Hannegan's Pub features jazz. The Blarney Stone houses a dinner theater.

JUST ACROSS town at Market and 18th is a spectacular tourist attraction and prominent landmark, Union Station. In its heydey, the mammoth station was the largest and busiest in the world with more than 100,000 passengers through each day.

Shops in the station include all the upscale regulars you've come to know and love — Eddie Bauer, Crabtree and Evelyn, Banana Republic, and some interesting independents as well.

They include the Great Train Store, which sells O, N and H gauge to kids who never grow up as well as whistles, cassettes, books and mags for train lovers. Near it is America's National Parks, a store devoted to books about U.S. national parks, history and ecological topics; Joy of Ireland, all the obvious Hibernian imports like woolens, Irish oatmeal and heraldic keychains and posters; a computer genealogy kiosk, and Top It Off, a small hat store.

GO TO THE HOME of the world's largest brewery and not visit? No chance. The tour takes you outside through blocks and blocks of Anheuser-Busch property including the famous Clydesdales' stable, packaging plant and the ever-popular hospitality center. A large gift shop caters to logo lovers of Budweiser and Michelob brews.

Beer lovers are often baseball lovers as well. If you fit into the category, not far from the brewery is Busch Stadium, home to the (St. Louis) Sports Hall of Fame. Stan is still The Man here, 40 years later. Musial is immortalized with a statue outside, and a near—shrine inside. You can also follow the careers of baseball greats Lou Brock, Ken Boyer, Dizzy Dean and Red Schoendienst. All other sports take a back seat.

Just across the street is the National Bowling Hall of Fame, depicting the history and heroes of the game, an old-fashioned bowling alley and other exhibits. Ho hum.

INSTITUTIONS on the grounds of the 1,400 acres of Forest Park include the St. Louis Art Museum, St. Louis Zoological Park, St. Louis Science Center and the Jefferson Memorial, which chronicles St. Louis history.

The art museum is the successor to the oldest art museum west of the Mississippi and ranked as one of the top 10 in the United States. Admission is free.

There is an admission charge to the strikingly modern science center — the combined McDonnel Planetarium, Museum of Science and Natural History and the Medical Museum. The Discovery Room allows children the opportunity to see, feel and touch. Monsanto Science Center provides 24 larger-than-life exhibits in an outdoor setting.

The Missouri Botanical Garden is the oldest botanical garden in the United States, conceived in the 1850s by Henry Shaw, and still referred to by St. Louisans as Shaw's Garden. The 79-acre garden is built around Shaw's country home, Tower Grove House, which can be toured.

Holland's Tulip Time Festival, May 14-19, is busy with Dutch-like attractions, including Windmill Island Municipal Park.

Festivals: from tulips to trout

By Iris Sanderson Jones
contributing travel editor

The Michigan festival season will be launched in a burst of color when the annual tulip festival takes place May 14-19 in Holland. TULIP TIME '90 celebrates the Dutch heritage of this western Michigan city, where millions of tulips bloom every spring.

The festival includes 1,400 costumed Klompen dancers, eight miles of tulip lanes and a full schedule of parades, musical shows, street scrubbings and other Netherland-ish attractions.

You can beat the crowds by attending some of the warm-up events, which start with a musical cabaret called The All Night Strut May 9 and free performances in Centennial Park May 10. The traditional Tulip Time Market opens May 11.

This warm-up is designed to attract visitors a week ahead of the official festival, and to display the tulips as long as possible. The first big parade, Volksparade, will be May 16. By that time, the shows will be in full swing.

SHOWS INCLUDE the Living End Singers, 110 teens singing Christian music in a multi-image stage; the Annual Band Review; the Tulip Time Salute; a vaudeville show called Showstoppers; the Stars of Lawrence Welk; Barbershop on Parade; folk music; Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill"; Netherland folk dances; and a patriotic show called America Sings.

Year-round Holland attractions will be open and busy during the festival, including the Windmill Island attractions.

They include De Swaan, the only operating Dutch windmill in the United States, a 20-minute film about windmills, a Dutch merry-go-round called the draaimolen, and other picturesque Dutch attractions set amid the tulips of Windmill Island Municipal Park in downtown Holland.

To arrange housing, contact the Tulip Time Housing Service at 150 W. 8th St., Holland 49423. Ask them to send you a schedule so you can sign up for various events and meals.

For more information, call toll-free (800) 222-2770.

● HERE IS A LIST of other Michigan events to be celebrated through May:

Two maple syrup festivals will be this weekend: in Shepherd April 27-29, and Vermontville April 28-29. Mushroom festivals also flourish in May: in Mesick May 4-6; and the National Mushroom-Hunting Championships in Boyne City May 12-13.

The Highland Festival and Games will bring the clans together with a wail of bagpipes May 26-27, but not all Michigan festivals are that well known.

There'll be a live buzzard along with arts and crafts at the Buzzard Festival May 5-6 in Heil. And a Pasty Bake in St. Ignace May 27, where they'll try to bake the world's largest pasty for the Guinness Book of World Records.

● SEVERAL OF the state's fishing festivals will culminate this weekend: the Perch Festival in Caseville, the National Trout Festival in Kalkaska and the Walleye Tournament in Midland.

Vegas goers set a 1990 increase

(AP) — Las Vegas tourism officials say visitor volume showed a healthy 12.8-percent increase for the first two months of this year, compared to the same period in 1989.

Rossi Ralenkotter, director of marketing for the Las Vegas Convention and Visitors Authority, said 3.8 million visitors were recorded in the first two months of 1990, compared to 2.5 million for the same period a year ago.

While visitor volume is showing a double-digit increase, room occupancy was up 3 percent, because 6,000 new hotel rooms are on line this year. Another 10,000 rooms are under construction.

Southern California auto traffic increased by 22 percent in February, and 25 percent for the first two months of 1990, officials said.

Pilot program offers free advice on exports

By R.J. King
special writer

With dramatic social and political changes sweeping eastern Europe, the mood of corporate America is anything but lethargic.

General Motors, McDonald's and Levi Strauss recently have set up businesses behind the Iron Curtain, and the stream of larger American businesses seeking joint ventures is accelerating daily.

But for smaller area companies such as Concept Analysis Corp. in Plymouth and the Air Gage Co. in Livonia, getting into foreign markets is proving to be risky as well as enticing.

"We were the ultimate neophytes," said Dave Rourk, a research engineer for Concept Analysis, which designs and tests reinforced composites and plastics for use on everything from satellite antennas to patio furniture.

"We wanted to expand into Hungary, and we gave serious thought to sending a sales team over. But we didn't know where to go or who to see. Yet we knew if we could sell one contract for $20,000 it would pay for the whole trip and we could build from there."

AND THEREIN lies the risk.

Whether to take a gamble and get a jump on the competition or play it safe and wonder what might have been. So where to turn for insight?

"That's where we come in," said John Chichester, director of the Community Export Alliance Office at Schoolcraft College in Livonia, which assists and evaluates area companies with exporting questions at no charge.

"We give companies straight talk about whether to export or not, and when we're finished, they haven't spent one dollar, they haven't gotten lost and they have an idea of where they stand."

Through a $20,000 grant from the Michigan Department of Commerce — one of seven awarded across the state — Chichester said the college established a computer program which, when fed certain variables, evaluates the likelihood of success for export-minded companies.

ART EMANUELE/staff photographer

John Chichester, director of the Community Export Alliance Office at Schoolcraft College in Livonia, uses a computer program to evaluate the feasibility of area companies' exporting prospects.

Called CORE, for COmpany Readiness to Export, the process begins with a questionnaire, where companies detail the products to be exported, monetary commitment, management experience and market projections.

THE INFORMATION then is fed into the computer, where the numbers are crunched and sorted with demographic and population figures indigenous to a certain country or region and, within a few minutes, an evaluation is ready.

In the case of Concept Analysis, which employs 20 people, the evaluation was to hold off exporting until management experience came in line with expectations.

"The results surprised me a little bit," Rourk said. "While we had a high product rating for selling engineering software, we had a moderate organizational rating.

"Basically, it said we need to invest for the long term, not a short, quick in-and-out process that doesn't offer return sales. Consequently, we will not be exporting in the near future. It was the direct opposite of my gut feeling."

In retrospect, Rourk said he might have guessed at the outcome given the company's recent contract to sell software to a seating company in Switzerland.

"It was just one contract two years ago which didn't amount to return sales," he said.

UP AND RUNNING since March, Chichester said CORE prepares companies in northwestern Wayne and Oakland counties for the stiff competition ahead, not only in the Eastern Bloc but against a unified Europe in 1992, Canada and the Japanese-dominated Pacific Rim.

"I think the Pacific Rim offers great growth potential. Canada is very attractive. But nine out of the 10 calls we get are interested in the European Community," Chichester said.

"I suppose that makes sense given the fact most companies who call us are industrial-service firms and automotive suppliers. Everyone wants to rebuild the second Europe, but companies shouldn't forget about Latin and South America, which is a huge marketplace."

Even for companies already established on foreign soils, Chichester said the Community Export Alliance Office could offer guidance with expansion plans or access different markets in the same country.

Bank's value not reflected by stock price — chairman

By Tim Richard
Staff writer

Despite shareholder complaints about the skidding stock price, a two-year decline in earnings and a "Taj Mahal" of a new headquarters in Troy, the chairman of Standard Federal Bank sees "better days ahead."

Thomas W. Ricketts said core earnings — mortgage loans, consumer banking and credit cards — plus tight management make his thrift institution one of the best in the state and the nation.

Ricketts called the recent $7.50 stock price "goofy," adding that the 113-branch bank in Michigan and Indiana is on the federal list of approved buyers of troubled thrifts. A former mutual bank, Standard Federal converted to stock at about $10 three years ago and has been priced as high as $12.50 on the market.

"TERRIBLE PUBLICITY" has been partly to blame, Ricketts told the annual meeting Tuesday, citing the failure of thrifts in Texas and bad commercial real estate investments by New England thrifts.

"The thrifts in Michigan have not been tainted. Nobody in Michigan has been indicted," he said.

In the first quarter of 1990, Standard Fed's net income dropped 24 percent, from 42 cents ($12.9 million) to 32 cents ($9.7 million).

But he said four cents of that drop was due to a single factor — the federal Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act, which took effect last fall.

FIRREA means higher premiums on deposits, higher examination costs and a lower dividend on Standard Fed's Federal Home Loan Bank investments.

"It's costing us 16 cents (per share annually) to bail out those bums in Texas, although we had nothing to do with it," Ricketts said.

Here are other shareholder questions and Ricketts' answers:

Q. Why are you "so glowingly optimistic in a company that seems to be sliding off"? Net income fell from $67.4 million in 1987 to $63.3 million in '88 to $45.7 million last year.

A. Look at the middle lines and notice there are no flash in the pan earnings from sale of assets. For example, gains on sales of originated loans dropped from $6.6 million to $1.1 million to $410,000 in those years.

"We've been trying to build core earnings. We have a marvelous branch network. We dominate the home lending field. We have no troubled loans," setting another state mortgage lending record.

Q. What is the cost of this Taj Mahal of a new building?

A. $95 million for the land and building at 2600 W. Big Beaver Road, and it could be sold at a gain but won't be. SF has its operations and headquarters in a single building, in contrast to Comerica, First Federal and NBD, which have separate operations buildings.

"We're in the golden corridor, near Somerset Mall, K mart and VW. We have no country club memberships, no chauffeurs."

Besides being efficient to heat, cool and light, the "no nonsense, state-of-the-art" building helps attract employees.

Q. Are you planning any more acquisitions and mergers after the 1989 acquisitions in Kalamazoo and Monroe?

Dates set for 1991 auto show

The North American Auto Show, which drew some 658,000 spectators during a nine-day run this year at the Cobo Exhibition and Convention Center, will begin one week later next year to better accommodate the foreign media.

Next year's show will run Jan. 12-20. Public viewing started Jan. 6 this year.

"Putting the show on so close to New Year's the first two years has affected the ability of European and Asian automotive journalists to cover the show," said Robert Thibodeau, co-chairman of the event.

"This extra week will allow them to comfortably cover our show while not giving up vacation time or time with their families."

"We had 192 international automotive writers from 15 countries other than the U.S. at the 1990 show and 1,386 media credentialed in all," said Gordon Stewart, co-chairman of the show.

"We would hope to improve upon those numbers and selecting this later week in January should help us achieve that," he added.

Detroit's auto show keeps getting bigger.

More than 700 vehicles were displayed this year.

There were 47 worldwide or North American production/concept car introductions compared to 24 in 1989. Attendance for the charity preview increased by more than a third, while general attendance was up 3 percent.

An exhibit of an assembly line in action jointly sponsored by Buick and the United Auto Workers union proved to be a big crowd favorite.

"That had more attendance than anything at the show," said Daniel Hayes, executive director of the Detroit Auto Dealers Association, sponsor of the show. "It would appear that the UAW will be well represented at the show next year."

Show organizers will meet over the next few months to come up with fresh ideas to keep the show's momentum going.

"We're still working on some new things. They're not solidified yet," Hayes said.

A decision hasn't yet been made on ticket prices for 1991. Admission this year was $5, with children under 12 accompanied by adults and people at least 65 years of age admitted free.

"It's a relatively inexpensive public show," Hayes said. "We'd like to hold the line."

and manufactures equipment to measure engine components to one ten-thousandths of an inch, said the company recently received inquiries to sell defense equipment in Israel.

"We've consulted before with Schoolcraft College on whether to open a sales office in China but we decided to manufacture the parts here and ship them directly," Joslyn said of supplying dimensional gauging equipment to First Autoworks of China, which established a joint venture with Chrysler to build Jeeps.

"It didn't seem prudent to open an office overseas with the hope of coming in contact with new markets. There's so many cultural differences, and you really need someone who's been there and wants to go back."

AS FOR ISRAEL, Joslyn said he would consult with the Community Export Alliance Office and have a CORE evaluation made to assess the feasibility of expanding into, or selling products directly, to that country.

In addition to the Export Office, the Business Development Center at Schoolcraft assists area companies with procuring government contracts, developing management and technical training programs and assistance in receiving funding for training employees.

Competition will be stiff for new U.S. small cars

auto talk

Dan McCosh

You don't hear much talk about pushing imports to the shores these days, at least partly because today the shore in question is the west bank of the Ohio River.

Regardless, this year there is the strongest effort in history to recapture some of the ground lost in the small car market to imports, with the upcoming launch of the new Ford Escort and the new Saturn car line.

Ford has hardly licked them, and barely joined them, having developed the Escort off the new Mazda 323 platform, and turned over most of the manufacturing engineering at the newly refurbished Wayne assembly plant to Mazda as well.

THE RESULT is an operation that more closely resembles a Japanese transplant than a domestic small car, with the shift in strategy particularly beneficial to the Japanese machine tool industry, which supplied nearly all the big-ticket machinery to build the new Escort.

The result is a lot of American assembly line jobs more or less secured by a domestic assembly operation, although American college grad types, particularly engineers, don't fare so well.

Aside from the obvious development from the Japanese engineering staff, which made most of the critical decisions that directly affect ride, handling and the overall feel of the car, most of the engineering work that goes into development of modern production equipment likewise was done in Japan.

In some ways, this could be even more critical than the car program itself. Contracts for production equipment on the scale of a Wayne assembly plant are largely an act of faith in the abilities of the company that gets the contract since they are engineered and built on a custom basis.

Roughly $50 billion stamping press orders from GM, Ford and Chrysler have gone to Japan in the past decade or so, nearly bankrupting the U.S. industry, which likely will never recover since such orders only come every 25 years or so.

The result, in the early appraisals, is a fine small car. Ford has proved to be the only company that seems to be able to embark on a hybrid development and produce a product arguably superior than either parent could do alone.

NOW COMES GM's Saturn plant, which also is heavily reliant on Japanese machine tools but which is based on an indigenous effort at reviving the capability of a domestic car company to develop a new car from the ground up.

Without any great sense of irony, GM types point to the Corvair as the last such all-encompassing effort, which involved developing a new engine, transmission, chassis and body.

Early appraisals of the Saturn also indicate it is a fine small car, at least competitive, if not superior, to the best from overseas.

The two products ultimately will have a tough go in the marketplace, not because they are not competitive, but because they will have to displace something else — most likely the recent Korean efforts, a weaker Japanese company, Volkswagen or Chevrolet's GEO division, just getting on its feet.

PERHAPS MORE important is the residual fallout that will make the ground rules for such programs in the future.

In Ford's case, even better cooperation with the Japanese. In GM's case, the ability could be gained if not to push them to the shores, then at least to gain some practice in giving them an elbow in the ribs.

Life insurance can be a good tool for people in business finances and you

Sid Mittra

First of 3 parts

In recent weeks I have seen national network commercials in which the viewers are asked to "keep New York Life." This is done presumably to earn respect of the general public for the insurance industry.

The ubiquitous apathy of the general public toward life insurance is most regrettable. I believe that life insurance is an extremely valuable financial planning tool.

In a three-part article I will discuss some of the time-tested uses of life insurance.

Buy-sell agreement

The death of a principal owner of a business can create serious financial problems for the business and for the estate and survivors of the deceased individual.

Usually, the deceased's interest in the business is a dominant portion of the total estate. The estate tax payable can place a substantial burden on the estate and the business.

To meet expenses, the estate may be forced to liquidate the interest in the business. And, if it is sold under adverse conditions, substantial losses may be suffered as a result of a forced sale.

Even more important, if corporate stock is sold to outsiders, the surviving shareholders' interests may be jeopardized.

All of these problems can be handled with buy-sell agreements, which provide for the orderly transfer of the deceased's business interest to surviving partners, stockholders or key employees at fair values determined in advance.

Life insurance is used to assure that the money will be available either to the business or to an individual when the business interests are to be transferred.

The death of the owner whose interest is to be bought triggers the mechanism that produces the necessary money — the life insurance policies on the owner's life. The proceeds from these policies give the buyers the needed money to pay the estate the agreed price.

Key man insurance

No one would try to run a business without adequate insurance to cover possible loss of assets, operating facilities and profits in the event of fire, theft or other disaster.

Similarly, businesses frequently protect themselves against the loss of a partner, executive or other key employee. This is accomplished by means of life insurance.

More specifically, the company owns the insurance policy, is the sole beneficiary and receives the full proceeds in the event of the death of the insured.

In addition, by using the cash value, the company can provide a cash reserve to finance additional retirement benefits for the executive in the event that he or she does not die prematurely.

Next week: More on insurance.

Weekly cash flow system helps small businessman act in time

Mary DiPaolo

You see the bills and know what your obligations are. There's some money in the account and, of course, there are the accounts receivable.

Just then, your accountant delivers the company's monthly financial statement. Although it indicates that your business has been profitable, you find yourself still wondering where your company stands.

If this sounds all too familiar, you may want to consider starting a workable weekly cash flow management system for your business. For those interested in seeking a better way to handle their money and plan for its use, such a system has proven very successful for companies of all sizes.

WEEKLY CASH flow management systems often are confused with accounting and, as a result, usually are ignored as a management tool, said Ron LeTourneau, principle with the Southfield-based management consulting firm of LeTourneau, Lobb & Associates.

"Accounting basically serves to identify and ultimately summarize the financial aspects of past business transactions for a firm," LeTourneau said. "The main audiences for the financial statements include bankers and tax authorities."

Business owners often don't understand them or find them to be irrelevant. When compared to a weekly cash flow management system, accounting merely tells firm management "what happened" as opposed to what will happen in the future.

"ANYBODY CAN make money. The trick is being able to keep it."

As such, a weekly cash flow management system gives the decision makers the ability to predict the company's cash needs before they occur — and could potentially harm its financial position.

Such systems are not meant to replace a firm's current accounting procedures, he said.

"The right system is simply a process that assembles the firm's financial information in such a way that it becomes understandable to company management and, as a result, truly useful for short-term business planning purposes."

As a management consultant working with small- to medium-sized companies, LeTourneau has found that cash flow-related problems prevent a majority of firms from dealing with issues requiring attention and action before they occur.

"NO MATTER what a company's specific problems or opportunities might be, nothing can happen without first being able to accurately forecast the level of funds that are available to work with."

Described as a firm's "financial road map," cash flow management systems will present relevant financial information on a weekly basis.

In two weeks, we will present how weekly cash flow management systems are designed to "remove the mystery" of the disappearing dollars.

For additional information about this type of system, readers may call LeTourneau at 351-2644.

Mary DiPaolo is the owner of MarkeTrends, a Farmington Hills-based business consulting firm. She also is producer and host of the cable television series "Chamber Perspectives."

AAA names chief executive officer

Robert A. Alkema, a 22-year AAA Michigan executive, has been named chief executive officer and president-designate of the 1.5-million-member organization.

Prior to his appointment today by AAA Michigan's board of directors, Alkema, 62, has been vice president-finance and treasurer since 1980. He was named treasurer in 1974, assistant treasurer in 1972 and prior to that group manager-financial operations.

Before employment at AAA Michigan, he was with Security Mutual Casualty Co./Globe Security Co., Chicago, leaving there as controller. "Mr. Alkema immediately assumes the organization's daily operational and decision-making responsibilities," said Dean Richardson, AAA Michigan board chairman and a director of Manufacturers National Corp.

ALKEMA SUCCEEDS Jack Avignone, 58, who announced his retirement last month but agreed to continue serving with the club until a successor was named. Avignone's retirement is effective at the end of this month.

Avignone joined AAA Michigan in 1978 as executive vice president and was named to his present position in 1981. "Jack played a key role in the decade-long growth of the organization," said Richardson. "We wish him well in the future."

Since Avignone came to AAA Michigan, membership increased 30 percent and revenues have doubled.

ALKEMA IS a director and past board chairman of the Michigan Catastrophic Claims Association and the Michigan Property and Casualty Guaranty Association. He is a member of the Detroit Economic Club, the Detroit Bond Club, and serves on the Federal Tax, Investment, and Solvency committees of the National Association of Independent Insurers.

He has earned the designation of Chartered Property Casualty Underwriter, is a fellow of the Financial Analysts Federation and is a member of the Financial Executives Institute and the National Association of Security Dealers-Registered Investment Company Principal and Broker.

'Sydney' creator

Michael Wilson from Birmingham writes the show

Now living in Hollywood, TV producer and writer Michael Wilson feeds his son, 17-month-old Perry.

By Victor E Swanson
special writer

THE COMMERCIAL television networks — ever battling each other for ratings — recently premiered a number of new series, including "Sydney"(Wednesday nights on CBS).

The comedy, starring pretty Valerie Bertinelli as Sydney Kells, was created by Michael Wilson and Doug Wyman. Wilson is a graduate of Groves High School in Birmingham.

"It's a half-hour comedy about a contemporary woman in the '90s, trying to make it in L.A.," Wilson said, describing the series during a telephone interview from Hollywood. "And she happens to be a private detective. Her dad was a cop. She comes from a cop family."

"Sydney" began as a "spec" screenplay that Wilson wrote in 1988. Speaking as fast as Sydney does in the series, Wilson said, "I submitted it around, and I had some interest from a couple of studios on it for a couple of different actresses, and around that time I took a job working — running what you call creative affairs or development — for a guy named Bud Grant, who used to run CBS and now heads up his own independent production company. While I was running Grant's company as creative affairs vice-president, he read the script and started expressing an interest in doing it as a series."

MEANWHILE, Bertinelli was looking hard for an idea for a series. She had a 13-episode commitment for some type of series with CBS.

"Bud knew Valerie and her manager, Jack Grossbart, and set up a meeting, and I just went in and pitched the character to Valerie in a meeting. I'd never met her before," Wilson said.

> 'It's a half-hour comedy about a contemporary woman in the '90s, trying to make it in L.A. And she happens to be a private detective.'
> — Michael Wilson

The idea Wilson presented was a combination put together by Wilson and Wyman, partly based on the "Sydney" screenplay.

"She really, really liked it," Wilson remembered.

"I asked for a lot of lead time before we started the show," he said. "We took just three months and we just did readings, which is what you traditionally do with most pilots, but we just took a longer time than most pilots. We had a terrific casting director, whose name is Allison Jones; who also cast 'Dear John.' "

Other regulars in "Sydney" are Craig Bierko as Matt Keating, the married lawyer, from whom Sydney gets most of her cases and on whom she has a crush; Rebaccah Bush as Jill, her best friend; Matthew Perry as Billy, her brother, the police officer; Barney Martin as Ray, the bartender and owner of the bar called the Blue Collar; Daniel Baldwin as a barfly named Cheezy, and Perry Anzsilotti as a snitch named Perry.

Hardest character to cast was Jill.

"WE DIDN'T CAST that part till the day before we started shooting. We couldn't find a girl that we liked, and then we'd find people that we liked, but we couldn't make a deal with them," Wilson said.

"Initially, we did three shows and then we shut down, and Doug Wymam quit, and then I just took over the show on my own. I wasn't really happy with the first three shows we did. In fact, we're reshooting those next week."

Wilson does most of the writing on the show and is one of its four executive producers. The others are Bertinelli and two of her business associates, Jack Grossbart and Marty Litke.

"The executive producer in half-hour comedy is pretty much the writer who has the final say, the writer who runs what you call the room on rewrite night," Wilson said."

He works differently than many executive producers. To write an episode, he doesn't get a bunch of gag writers together in a room and have them pitch jokes. He wants character comedy, not joke after joke, which a stand-up comedian might do. That doesn't mean the show is slow. Each episode is produced from about a 45-page script. Usually, comedy shows are made from 35-page scripts.

"SYDNEY" IS officially Wilson's first writing job.

He did get some journalism experience at Groves High School, however, and he did study English and film at the University of Michigan, where he received a bachelor of arts degree in 1975. After college, he and his girlfriend moved to New York. Wilson held a variety of jobs till his father helped him get work in the mailroom of the William Moris Agency.

In New York, he and Brooke, the daughter of Dr. Vince and Mary Louise Greeson of Bloomfield Hills, decided to get married.

Wilson soon found himself working as an agent for William Morris. In the 1980s, he moved to California to work for the company. Then he worked for Creative Artists, where he met Marcy Carsey, an executive producer on "Roseanne" and "The Cosby Show."

"I ran creative affairs for Marcy Carsey for like three years," he said. "When you're writing creative affairs, you're not writing, but what you're doing is meeting with writers, you're getting scripts in and you're evaluating them.

"Everything I know about half-hour I learned from Marcy Carsey."

Carsey and Wilson did work on some scripts together, such as the pilot for the 1983-84 series "Oh, Madeline," which featured Madeline Kahn and James Sloyan.

WILSON REALLY started to write for himself when he and Brooke got together again about two years ago. They had divorced after a few years of marriage.

"The weirdest thing that happened in my life was when Brooke and I got back together. When we started living together, Brooke really encouraged me to write. I mean, I really have to give her most of the credit for all her support and encouragement with me."

They now have a 16-month-old son, Perry.

In June, Wilson's writing-producing contract expires with Grant/Tribune Productions, one of two companies that produces "Sydney."

His options, he said, are to renew with Bud Grant or go to another company. But, he added, "who knows what's going to happen."

review

Everyone is compulsive in one way or another. It just depends on the degree, as to how dangerous it is.

This is the basis for "Serenading Louie" at the Smith Theater. The play is more of a character study than story. It focuses on two couples who have been longtime friends, and each of them has a compulsion of one kind or another.

Alex, whose only true interest is in himself and his ambitions for the future, is played intensely by Jim Cook. While Alex is a tense character, Cook, who doubles as the show's director, makes him seem like he could go over the edge at any moment.

Alex's wife, Gabby, only wants a home and family, something Alex really does not have any interest in. Carrie Bickner as Gabby is probably the most convincing of the foursome in the show.

Bickner's emotions really make the audience feel for her character and her character's dilemmas. Gabby is probably the most normal person in the script.

THE MAIN PROBLEM of Carl, Alex's next-door-neighbor, is that he is fond of liquor and drinks to excess as often as is convenient.

Keith Chimiel, who plays Carl, seems uncertain as to how he wants to play the role. There are times when Carl has a distinct accent, while at other times, he speaks with no accent. Chimiel's display of emotion is similarly variable.

Carl's wife, Mary, is mainly interested in having a nice home, a nice daughter, a nice career and a good time. Carl just happens to be the only way she can maintain her lifestyle. As far as the good time goes, she has no shame in getting it any way she can, including having an affair with her husband's accountant.

Lori Lipten is somewhat bland as Mary. While the character of Mary is not exactly exciting, Lipten does little to add much feeling to the role.

Despite the few shortcomings of the cast, the performers are still successful in transmitting the personas of their characters and in delivering the play's message to the audience.

The stage features a simple space set. The couple's homes are on opposite sides of the stage, with effectively defined lighting separating the two homes. There is a problem when the set is brought together for an extended version of Carl's home. At first, there is no way to determine whose home the four are in.

IN THE SECOND act, there is some surrealism added to the show when Carl and Alex converse in person while still supposedly in their respective homes.

This effect would work much better if the neighbor joining in the conversation is in a spotlight, defining the surrealistic effect. As it is, because of the matching pieces of furniture in the two homes, the audience can be confused as to what is really going on.

Theatre Guild's production is a slick one

Bob Welbel

The Theatre Guild is presenting the first Michigan community theater production of "Steel Magnolias." It has all the ingredients to become very popular with amateur groups from coast to coast. The guild sets a high standard that others will find difficult to duplicate.

Co-directors Gail Susan Mack and John Eastman have put together a very talented cast — and her set creates just the right mood. That would be a beauty parlor in a small Louisiana town. It has three chairs (no waiting) and sinks with real running water.

There we meet six wisecracking women who laugh away life's problems as they gossip and needle each other about ex-husbands, wayward children and personal deficiencies. When tragedy strikes, however, they draw strength and comfort from each other. Every one is entitled to her sorrow. Then they pick up the pieces and get on with their lives.

The show centers around, Shelby, a spoiled Southern belle. She is diabetic and about to be married. She wants children, but that would endanger her life and perhaps the child.

KAREN MYERS brightens the stage with a nicely focused portrayal as Shelby. Her insulin-shock scene is stunning. And she is very good at evolving into a woman with the character and courage to face the consequences of her decisions.

Sandy Martin plays her mother, M'Lynn, with a quiet strength that is very effective. Martin's agony over her daughter's decision is genuine, her rage at the consequences is compelling.

Martha Hargett is splendid as the worldly proprietress, Truvy. She talks tough, smiles sweetly and delivers husband-bashing one-liners effortlessly.

Stacy Pattison is sweet and innocent as Truvy's young, unsophisticated assistant. Peg Humphrey is delightfully comical as Ouiser, twice divorced and a local curmudgeon, who likes to say, "I'm not crazy. I've just been in a bad mood for 40 years."

Jan Salisbury is very consistent as Clairee, a rich widow of the ex-mayor. A little more flamboyance, however, would give the role better definition.

The cast never allows the show to wallow in soap opera melodramatics, nor does it go for the easy sitcom laughs — though at times the smart-aleck remarks seem to come from quipsters rather than characters. Yet, they make natural transitions from comedic to dramatic sequences.

Bob Weibel of Westland is a freelance writer, who has spent more than 25 years in community theater as a director, designer and performer.

Coalition offers tips for reducing use of pesticides

Today's column is on pesticide myths from the National Coalition Against the Misuse of Pesticides (NCAMP), an organization aimed at educating people with the to prevent harmful exposure to and/or misuse of pesticides and encourage safe, alternative pest management strategies.

Myth No. 1:

"A pesticide registered by the U.S. E.P.A. and/or state authorities is safe."

Pesticide safety begins with what we know and don't know about these chemicals. While information on one chemical may be available, there may be no information on another. A 1982 Congressional staff report indicated:

- 79-84 percent of the pesticides on the market have not been adequately tested for their potential cancer-causing effects.
- 90-93 percent of the pesticides have not been adequately tested for their ability to cause genetic damage.
- 60-70 percent have not been fully tested for their ability to cause birth defects.

These basic problems are the result of an inadequate pesticide control law — The Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA). Because of major loopholes, this law allows pesticides to remain in use despite adequate information about the effects these products may produce.

Myth No. 2:

"A pesticide is safe when it is used according to the label directions."

Presticide ingredients must be listed on the label as "active" (the ingredients that actually do what the product is intended to do — kill insects) or "inert" (ingredients that form a vehicle to make the active ingredients easy to apply).

These inert ingredients are not tested for their acute or chronic health effects and may be as dangerous as the active ingredients.

Product labels regarding emergency antidotes may not be the best first aid remedy. A random survey found that 85 percent of the labels had inadequate or erroneous first aid information, while 6 percent of the labels had information that would be dangerous to the victim.

Toxic (poisonous) pesticides ultimately touch everyone's life. To reduce this overload of chemicals into your environment, try these suggestions when using or considering pesticides:

1. Contact your local cooperative extension service. It can recommend the most effective and least polluting product to use.
2. Consider alternatives to chemical pesticides whenever possible. Organic remedies work very well.
3. After using a chemical pesticide, avoid over watering the area. The pesticide may run off with the excess water into sewers, storm drains or streams.
4. Do not apply pesticides if rain is forecast. Rain will carry these chemicals into nearby creeks or bodies of water.

Roll Call Report

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending April 20.

HOUSE:

PRICE-FIXING ISSUE — By a vote of 235 for and 157 against, the House sent to the Senate a bill to help plaintiffs win lawsuits against vertical price-fixing, which occurs when manufacturers seek to enforce a minimum product price. The bill (HR 1236) eases Supreme Court-set standards of evidence that make it easy for judges to dismiss such suits. It gives plaintiffs a better chance of advancing their case to a jury.

The bill is backed by discounters such as Burlington Coat Factory and K mart and opposed by business groups such as the Chamber of Commerce and National Association of Manufacturers, according to floor debate.

Members voting yes supported the bill.

Local congressman voting yes were: Dennis Hertel, D-Harper Woods; William Ford, D-Taylor; and Sander Levin, D-Southfield.

Voting no were: Carl Pursell, R-Plymouth; and William Broomfield, R-Birmingham.

SUBSTITUTE BILL - By a vote of 155 for and 242 against, the House rejected a substitue version of the bill (above) to combat vertical price-fixing. The amendment sought to preserve exacting standards of evidence that plaintiffs, such as discounters suing manufacturers, must satisfy under 1984 and 1988 Supreme Court rulings. It also attempted to codify the 1911 court ruling that vertical price-fixing is illegal.

Sponsor Chuck Douglas, R-N.H., said Congress should "not fool around with Supreme Court decisions" that have evolved over the decades.

Opponent Lawrence Smith, D-Fla., said the amendment "would kill this bill."

Members voting yes supported the substitute. The lone local member doing so was Broomfield.

Voting no were: Pursell, Hertel, Ford and Levin.

STANDARDS OF EVIDENCE — By a vote of 192 for and 204 against, the House rejected an amendment to HR 1236 (above) toughening the standards of evidence in verical price-fixing cases. This retained the bill's objective of making it easier for plaintiffs to avoid dismissal by a judge, and gain a jury trial, of their suits accusing manufacturers and distributors of conspiring against them because of their low prices.

Supporters said the amendment would protect manufacturers who cut off discount dealers for reasons other than pricing policies. Foes said anti-trust policy is best served when vertical price-fixing cases are decided by juries.

Members voting yes wanted to make it easier for judges to dismiss vertical price-fixing cases for lack of evidence.

Yes votes were cast by: Pursell and Broomfield.

Voting no were: Hertel, Ford and Levin.

SENATE:

TARIFF ISSUE By a vote of 90 for and 3 against, the Senate agreed to allow the president to suspend tariffs on certain imports if the product is uncontroversial and Congress has done at least one year without acting on a request for suspension. Congress is empowered by the Constitution to regulate foreign commerce. But critics say it too often is unresponsive to U.S. companies' bids for tariff suspensions. The amendment was attached to a trade bill (HR 1594) that contained 194 requests for duty suspensions. The bill remained in debate.

Sponsor William Roth, R-Del., said his amendment would help American companies remain competitive by cutting the cost of certain raw materials.

Opponent John Heinz, R-Pa., said Congress should not "just pass the buck to the president" when it lags in one of its constitutional tasks.

Senators voting yes wanted the president to be able to suspend certain tariffs.

Both Michigan senators, Carl Levin-D and Donald Riegle-D voted yes.

Pups get bow wow look at shop

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Marci Rich wasn't one of those people who couldn't figure out what they wanted to do for a living. For as long as she can remember, she's had a mission in life: to groom dogs.

"It's all I ever wanted to do. It's what I wrote my high school term paper on," said Rich, who since last summer has owned the Posh Pup grooming shop on Middlebelt, just south of Ann Arbor Trail.

Rich says she feels at home in Westland, near the Garden City boundary. She grew up in Garden City and attended West High School, for one thing. For another, business in her first store has been excellent.

"I absolutely love it here," said Rich. "I grew up in Garden City and my dad worked at Ford for 20 years. So I can relate to working-class people."

BUT THE FIRST year hasn't been trouble free. One day in the winter, Rich and her associate, Diane Hasty, discovered an unordered alteration when they opened up one day: Someone had plowed a car into the side of the building, then backed up and left, leaving a huge hole behind.

"The wall was cave in and the wind was whipping through," said Hasty. "Someone was trying turn us into a drive-through dog wash. Or maybe they were making a night deposit."

But they just put some cardboard over the hole and opened as usual.

What's not usual is the inside of the shop. The back room looks more like a veterinarian's office, with its high-tech machines and hydraulic tables. The machines are industrial-strength blowers for getting a dog's hair straightened out just right. The tables go up and down so the animals can be attended to without the stress of pulling and lifting them.

"From the time they come in our store, our hands never leave the pet," said Hasty, who before her medical retirement because of multiple sclerosis was head of radiologic services at Heritage Hospital in Taylor.

She has also raised championship cocker spaniels. "And they rarely see the inside of a cage, which lessens the stress of grooming."

BEFORE OPENING up her Westland store, Rich had a portable business: People didn't have to bring their dogs to her, she drove to them.

"But then they started having all those freeway shootings and I figured I'd be better off getting off the road," said Rich.

Rich said she has never been bitten by a dog.

"You have to read their body language. Feel if they're tense. Read their eyes," she said. "There's never been a dog I've been afraid of, but I respect their capability to put me out of work for a long time."

A typical grooming is about $22 and includes brushing, ear cleaning, nail trimming, bathing, blow-drying and hand-scissoring. Sorry, no cats.

And none of that cheap generic shampoo, either. "It's all-natural, PH balanced, tearless shampoo," said Hasty.

How posh.

Salem's Lisa Ferguson steps in front of Canton's Ayana Nash to gain possession of the ball in Monday's soccer game. Ferguson scored the only goal of the second half to give the Rocks a 2-2 tie.

Canton-Salem tilt ends in stalemate soccer

'We know we can play with anybody now. Nobody is going to blow us away by any means.'

— Don Smith
Canton soccer coach

The final score was the same so it was not unusual that the two coaches had the same impression of Monday's girls soccer game.

Don Smith and Ken Johnson applauded their defenses and talked of the valuable experience gained by their younger players after state-ranked powers Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem battled to a 2-2 draw.

With both teams returning from spring break and not having played a game in 14 days, neither coach was unhappy with the tie, either.

"This was our first really big game," Johnson of Salem said. "After the holiday, we have some adjusting and catching up to do.

"Whoever had lost would have been thinking they were a little unlucky. No team really grabbed hold of it."

BOTH COACHES attributed that, in part at least, to the play of their defenses.

The Rocks (1-0-2) scored first but Canton (2-0-1) took a 2-1 halftime lead on a pair of Jenny Russell goals. Salem, however, had the advantage for much of the second half, but the Chiefs survived the pressure.

"Our freshman sweeper and keeper did a good job," Smith of Canton said. "This was a good test for us. We know we can play with anybody now. Nobody is going to blow us away by any means. We felt bad about tying, but we know we're ready."

Playing No. 5-rated Salem, Smith said, was good experience for Kathy Bahr, the new sweeper, and goalie Jori Welchans, who stopped 10 of 11 shots in the second half and 16 of 18 for the game.

Their play on defense, as well as that of stopper Erin Morgan (senior) and fullbacks Danielle Meyka (sophomore) and Laurie McNamara (junior) was crucial to preserving the tie, according to Smith.

Salem pulled even early in the second half on sophomore Lisa Ferguson's goal, but the Rocks, who scored both goals off corner throw-ins, continued to press the attack but without additional success.

"I THINK we got tired," Smith said. "Usually, we come on strong in the second half. I think they wore us down. We'll have to work a little harder.

"They had a little momentum in the second half and were taking it to us, although we could easily have won it there."

Ninth-rated Canton broke out of its end late in the second half for one of its few chances, a good one that was foiled by defender Jennifer Marshall and keeper Jenny Emmett.

Freshman forward Colleen Connell and Russell had a 2-on-1 breakaway, but Emmett came out of goal to snuff a shot by Connell. Marshall then screened off Russell, the All-American, to keep her from scoring while Emmett was out of position.

"Our whole defense did well except for Russell hurting us with her speed," Johnson said. "I thought Marshall had a great game. She had the job of marking Russell, but there wasn't anything she could do on the free kick (on which Russell scored her first goal).

"We had a lot of chances on pressure, but we could easily have lost by one. Emmett made some big plays, too. They were good on breakaways. We'd play down there for 10 (minutes), and they'd get a breakaway."

SALEM SCORED early in the game when Erin Harvey used a header to convert Amy Krajewski's throw-in, the first of two assists by her.

"She did that three or four times last year," said Johnson of Krajewski, "and she got into a routine of doing that. It's one of the strongest, for a girl, that you'll see.

"Amy had a good field game, too. She was kinda the hero, because (all-state forward Michele) Minton was pretty well held."

Russell, following an interference call against Marshall, tied the game with her direct free kick, and she later took a pass from Connell in front of the Salem goal to put the Chiefs ahead at halftime.

"She's a tough player," said Smith of Russell, who played all but a few minutes. "I have to get her out of there and give her a break, but when the pressure is on we need the offense.

"But when we're tired we're not going to get any offense, either. She'd never admit to being tired, but I have to get her out for a rest."

Welchans tipped the throw-in leading to Krajewski's second assist but couldn't hold it, and Ferguson redirected the rebound for the tying goal at 37:30 in the second half.

Chiefs regain relay title

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

girls track

Plymouth Canton's girls track team relied on superior depth and possibly its youth to win the Lady Chief Relays for the second time in three years Saturday.

Canton scored 69 points to edge runner-up Adrian (65) and distance itself from contenders Farmington Hills Mercy (49) and Plymouth Salem (40). Defending champion Livonia Stevenson was fifth with 39 points.

"The key point is that we scored in 12 of the 13 scoring events," Canton coach George Przygodski said. "In a meet with so many teams and individuals, you have to score in a lot of events, and we had the depth to be able to do that."

With the meet taking place on the final weekend of spring break this year, the Chiefs might, ironically, have enjoyed an advantage with the number of young but talented athletes on their team.

"I can't speak for the other teams, but we have a young team," Przygodski said. "And when you have young kids they tend to stay in town as opposed to the older kids.

"WE DID have our share of kids who weren't there. You have to run with the kids you have, and obviously we were pleased with the results."

The Chiefs won only one event — the shuttle hurdle relay in which Karina Kilpelainen, Angela Fountain, Khristina Kozuch and Michelle Lee comprised the winning foursome — but they were second in four others and finished no lower than fifth in seven others.

In addition to the shuttle hurdle unit that set school and meet records with its time of 1:10.2, Przygodski cited the performances of Kim Gudeth, who ran a pair of 800s and 400s, and distance runners Amy Smith and Adrienne Garrow, both of whom ran in the 3200 and 1600 relays.

The 300-meter hurdle team of Tricia Rousso, Kalee Smith and Michelle Lee also received praise from Przygodski. Ifoema Okwumabua excelled in the shot put and discus, helping the Chiefs to fifth-place finishes in those events, and Kristy Brugar ran three strong races, he added.

Unlike two years ago when the Chiefs made up a huge difference late in the meet to win, Canton was in contention all along this time.

In addition to the weight events and shuttle hurdles, the Chiefs placed third in the eight-mile and 3200 relays, fourth in the long jump and fifth in the 800 relay in the first half of the meet.

"WE WERE in the meet the whole way," Przygodski said. "We were scoring in every event, so we didn't fall behind by a lot. We had a lot of thirds, fourths and fifths that kept us in position to finish where we did."

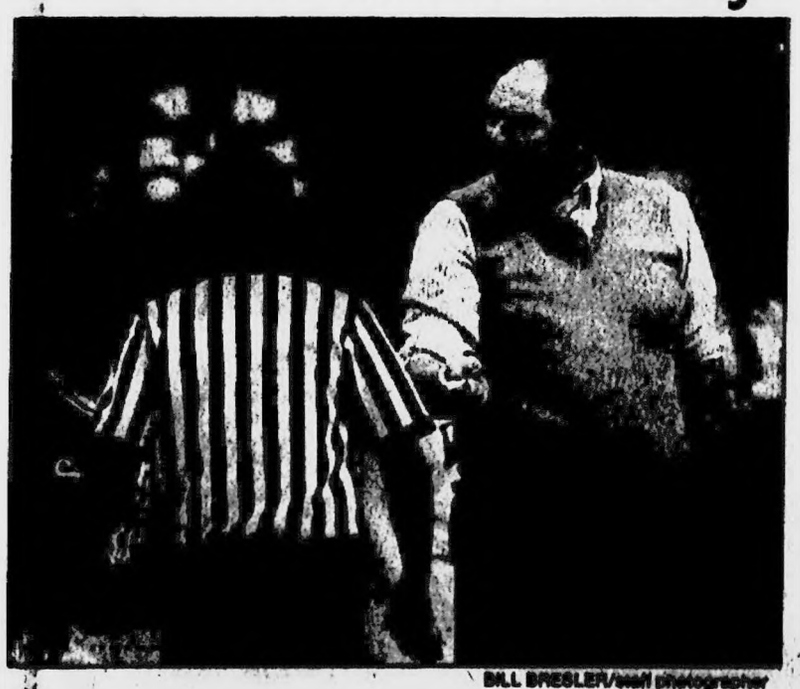
Thomann to stay at Salem



BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Fred Thomann was one of the leading candidates for the WMU position but will remain at Salem.

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Fred Thomann figured it was a can't-lose situation.

For that reason, he said he was not disappointed for long after learning he didn't get the job as Western Michigan University women's basketball coach.

Thomann was one of five finalists for the WMU position, but the university announced Tuesday it had hired Pat Charity Elliott, a 31-year-old assistant with the Broncos and former WMU player.

Thomann, who has been one of Michigan's most successful high school coaches for nearly two decades at Plymouth Salem, said he's happy to continue in his present role as Salem girls coach.

"I looked at it as if I had the best of both worlds," Thomann said. "It was a great opportunity for me. But, if I didn't get it, I still have a great job at Salem and plan to pursue that and work at that."

Former CC stars 2nd on depth chart

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Like Avis, a pair of Redford Catholic Central High grads are No. 2 and trying harder.

Both Eric Knuth and Pete Elezovic each feel more of a part of the University of Michigan football squad after their respective performances Saturday in the annual Blue-White spring game.

Knuth, a second-year player, has improved his stock immensely and appears to be ready to back up returning starter T.J. Osman at middle guard.

And Elezovic, in his first full season with the Wolverines, apparently has moved up in the kicking race behind returnee J.D. Carlson.

Elezovic kicked a 46-yard field goal in the first quarter and came back with a 36-yarder in the third period to account for all of the Blue team's points in a 31-6 loss to the White at Michigan Stadium.

"J.D.'s the No. 1 kicker," Elezovic said. "He had a great season last year. I'm just going to have to wait for a chance. It's Carlson's job and only his to lose. But hopefully in the future maybe I can do some kickoffs."

ELEZOVIC undoubtedly moved ahead of John Albertson with a strong spring showing.

And the CC grad showed he could boot the ball from a distance through the narrower goal-posts, which will be of pro-dimensions this fall.

"It didn't look that much smaller," said Elezovic, a Farmington Hills native. "I didn't notice a difference. You still have to put it in there. I feel great about what happened today and overall I had a good spring."

Elezovic, an All-Observer performer two years ago as a punter, turned down a football scholarship to Central Michigan to walk on at U-M.

"I wanted to got to a school in Michigan and Central called me on a Sunday night and said they wanted me to make a decision right away," Elezovic recalls. "Coach (Tom) Mach (of CC) made some calls for me and Michigan State finally said they would take me as a walk-on, but I always wanted to go here (Ann Arbor). I just wanted a chance. I told Central I was going, but when Michigan decided to take me as a walk-on on I changed my mind."

Coach Gary Moeller also came away impressed with his new-found kicker.

"LIKE A LOT of second-team guys, you never know what they're going to do when they get the opportunity," said the new coach. "The first one was a line drive, and he was probably nervous. The thing that was impressive is that he kicked the second one through. On the first one he may have been trying too hard. Every time you kick in practice, it has meaning, but not like it does when you're out in front of an audience.

Eric Knuth

"Carlson will probably be our kicker, but you always need a No. 2. With his performance today, he'll probably be our No. 2 kicker. It gives him an advantage, but I don't know if anything has been cemented."

Knuth, Elezovic's teammate on the Blue squad, saw limited action last fall for the Wolverines. He was used in goal line situations against both UCLA and Ohio State and also played against Maryland.

He recorded three solo tackles and one assist, but was far from satisfied about the Blues' outcome in the spring game.

"I couldn't believe it, they (White squad) kept putting it in the end zone," said the Plymouth native with sweat perspiring off his face. "But it's fun. Once you get out there it's pretty intense. You get to tee off on people."

'I wanted to go to a school in Michigan, and Central called me on a Sunday night and said they wanted me to make a decision right away. Coach (Tom) Mach (of CC) made some calls for me and Michigan State finally said they would take me as a walk-on, but I always wanted to go here (Ann Arbor).'

— Pete Elezovic
former CC kicker

football

WITH OSMAN, a fifth-year senior and fixture at middle guard, Knuth's wish is that he'll be used as a swingman. His main competition is Eric Graves.

"Last year T.J. swung with Mike Teeter (who graduated) in certain situations," Knuth said. "I hope something like that works out for me. I'm hoping that's what the plan is — second string."

Knuth is also finding out what life is like without Bo Schembechler.

"Everybody respects him (Moeller) because he's been around here for 19 years, but then again he's not Bo and we're going to miss Bo," said the former CC All-Stater. "But whoever is coaching, we've got something to prove. We're still Michigan. There haven't been too many structural changes. The first three weeks we had some marathon practices. We had a 140-play scrimmage last Saturday (April 14)."

The 6-foot-2, 246-pound Knuth finished spring term Wednesday and will spend the next term taking eight credit hours before heading up north to his parents' summer home.

For two other Wolverines, the summer will be spent doing rehabilitation in the weight room.

RUNNING BACK Tony Boles, a fifth-year senior from Westland John Glenn, began light running last week after undergoing knee surgery in December.

"Boles is like hitting the lottery if he plays," Moeller said. "That would be like a big bonus. Right now we're going as if he won't play."

Another starter, fourth-year linebacker Alex Marshall of Redford Bishop Borgess, sat out the spring game with a partial ligament tear to his knee.

Surgery, however, is not in Marshall plans. A summer of strengthening will be sufficient, according to U-M tea doctors.

And like Elezovic and Knuth, both Boles and Marshall may find themselves in backup roles when fall drills begin.

They too, will have something to shoot for.

Canton ace hurls no-hitter at N'ville

Geoff Allen pitched a no-hitter Tuesday to lead Plymouth Canton to an 18-0 pounding of Northville in Western Lakes Activities Association baseball.

Allen walked a man with two outs in the seventh inning to just miss recording a perfect game. He struck out 11 and has gone 21 innings without giving up an earned run.

Ron Groh (three hits and four RBI), Chris James (two hits and two RBI) and Jason Demby (two hits and two RBI) were the leading offensive performers for the Chiefs.

The win moved Canton's record to 5-2 overall and 3-0 in the Western Division of the WLAA.

At home on Saturday, Canton split a pair of games with two Lansing teams, losing 5-3 to Eastern in the first and winning 5-0 over Everett in the second.

The Quakers won the first game with two runs in the seventh inning via three walks, two errors, a hit batsman and a single.

John Anthony went 6⅓ innings for the Chiefs and took the loss. He gave up one earned run, allowed two hits and struck out five. Scott Kennedy relieved Anthony in the seventh and finished up.

The Quakers scored three runs in the first frame and made them hold up until the sixth.

Chris James homered in the first inning for Canton, and the Chiefs tied the game in the sixth inning on a two-run single by Dave Makara.

In the nightcap, Coleman Flaskamp tossed a shutout in his first varsity game for the Chiefs.

Flaskamp allowed two hits and struck out 10 while going the distance.

"He pitched a marvelous ballgame," Canton coach Fred Crissey said.

The Chiefs got on the board in the fourth inning on a single by Shawn Branam, a stolen base and a single by Ron Groh.

They padded their lead in the fifth inning on a two-run double by Jason Dembny. Makara (five hits) and James (four hits) were the top hitters during the double-header.

ROB KOWALSKI earned his third pitching victory Monday as Plymouth Salem rallied to defeat host Walled Lake Central 4-2 in Western Lakes Activities Association baseball.

Kowalski, who pitched the last two innings in relief of starter Jeff Paluk, has the decision in all three of Salem's victories. The Rocks are 3-3 overall and 2-0 in the Lakes Division.

Kowalski, who entered with the score tied 2-2, pitched to six batters and struck out three, allowing no hits and raising his record to 3-0.

"He really pitched well," Salem assistant coach Dale Rumberger said. "His velocity has picked up a lot. I can't remember when I've seen him faster."

Rumberger added he was pleased with Paluk, too.

Paluk walked two batters in the bottom of the first inning when Central took a 2-0 lead, but he retired the next 11, eight on ground outs. He allowed three hits, struck out two and walked four in five innings.

"He got to 67 pitches, and this time of year that's about as many as he needed to go," Rumberger said.

Eric Nielson was 3-for-4 and had the game-winning hit, a two-run single, in the seventh inning.

Brian Rudolph, Scott Niemiec and Kevin Craggs had two hits apiece. Niemiec had a leadoff double in the seventh and scored two runs, and Craggs knocked in the tying run (2-2) in the fourth. Tracy Ewald drove in the first Salem run in the second inning.

The Rocks had 12 hits but left too many runners stranded, Rumberger said. Salem left the bases full in the third, fourth and sixth innings, and they loaded them again in the seventh but moved the runners around that time.

Salem dropped a double-header on Saturday, losing 11-3 to Lansing Everett and 3-2 to Lansing Eastern at Centennial Educational Park.

Jeff Belisle and Mike Makowiec were the losing pitchers, respectively. Dave Makowiec started the Eastern game and left with a 2-1 after throwing 70 pitches.

In the Eastern game, Niemiec had an RBI fielder's choice, and Nielson drove in the other run with a sacrifice fly.

MANISH NANDANI pitched out of a jam in the seventh inning and led Plymouth Christian to a 7-6 victory Tuesday over host Warren Bethesda.

Bethesda put runners on second and third with none out in the seventh before Mandani bore down and struck out the side.

Mandani gave up eight hits, walked six and struck out 12 on his way to the win.

He also contributed offensively, banging out two hits, scoring three runs and driving in a pair of runs.

Keith Majeski scored two runs and drove in the game-winning run in the fourth inning with a double.

Chiefs rout Hawks in dual

Plymouth Canton opened defense of its Western Division girls track title Tuesday with an impressive victory over Farmington Hills Harrison.

The Chiefs hope to win their sixth consecutive championship, and the visiting Hawks were expected to be among the challengers again.

After breezing past Harrison 80-48 at Centennial Educational Park, Canton could be headed for another first-place finish.

The Chiefs, 1-0 in dual meets, had double winners in Ifoema Okwumabua and Amy Smith. Okwumabua won the shot put (30-10) and the discus (96-8), and Smith excelled in the distance runs, running the 1600-meter race in 6:08.3 and the 3200 in 14:03.8.

Canton swept the field events with Stephanie Gray winning the high jump (5-0) and Jessica Souter the long jump (15-10).

Karina Kilpelainen had the best 100 hurdles time at 16.5, and the Chiefs had two other winners in opening events. Alicia King won the 200 dash (29.2) and Kim Gudeth the 800 run (2:31.2).

Canton, however, won only one relay — the 3200 in which Gudeth, Christie Saffron, Monica Pellow and Adrienne Garrow combined for a 10:53.5 time.

Harrison's Colleen Heinzmann captured the 300 hurdles (51.5), Heather Conley the 100 dash (13.6) and Audra Cockerham the 400 run (1:04.4).

The Hawks, 0-1 in the division, had relay times of 53.7 in the 400, 1:53.1 in the 800 and 4:27.4 in the 1600.

Canton captures own relays title

Canton finished second in the distance medley — the ninth event — but still trailed Mercy by one point.

But the Chiefs finished strong, scoring 29 points in the last four events. They were second in the sprint medley and 300 hurdles, tied for second in the high jump and placed third in the 1600 relay.

Redford Bishop Borgess won the 800, 400 and 1600 relays, and Salem was first in the 300 hurdles and high jump. Mercy won the eight-mile run, Livonia Franklin the 3200 relay and Stevenson the shot put.

FARMINGTON HILLS Mercy won its second Catholic League dual meet Tuesday, thumping Harper Woods Bishop Gallagher 103-29 at Mercy.

The Marlins swept the relays and won every individual event with the exception of the 100 hurdles, the high jump and the long jump.

Jeanette Turner, Kim Cook and Lauren Hood were double winners for Mercy.

Turner won the shot put (31-8) and discus (113-10), Cook the 100 dash (13.6) and 200 dash (28.1) and Hood the 400 run (1:02.2) and 800 run (2:38.7).

Heather Noll was first in the 1600 run with a 5:49.9 time, and Carrie Walton won the 3200 at 12:54.0. Mary Beth Strand did the 300 hurdles in 53.2.

The foursome of Cook, Kristin Lewis, Strand and Kathy Cook won the 400 and 800 relays in 54.2 and 1:57.9, respectively.

Heather Sullivan, Megan Lombardi, Kathleen Gerigk and Hood comprised the winning 1600 relay team (4:30), and Judi Rosowski, Walton, Brooke Mansour and Cara McDonagh won the 3200 relay (11:32.5).

Glenn commitment translates to win in Dearborn meet

While most high school boys track teams took the week off for spring vacation, Westland John Glenn used the time to get ready for the 25th Dearborn Elks Relays.

And the week of practice paid off as the Rockets took home the first place trophy, winning its second title in three years.

"We decided that if we stay together, it would help us for the Elks," said Glenn coach Richard Gordon. "Our main people were there. They were committed to stay on vacation. We were working. Our motto has always been, 'Be the best you can be.'"

Glenn scored 57 points, one of the highest totals ever at the Elks. Redford Catholic Central finished second with 45 followed by defending champion Dearborn (32), Detroit Osborn (28), Hazel Park (22), Temperance-Bedford (18), Plymouth Salem and University of Detroit-Jesuit (16 each), Plymouth Canton (7), Livonia Franklin (6), Novi (4) and Wyandotte (1).

The Rockets won five events, but more importantly got off to a good start thanks to the efforts of their throwers.

HAROLD RANKEY, Garnett Woody, Jason Key and Dave Arbour won the heavy-man 400-meter relay in 51.8. They also teamed up for a second in the shot put relay with a combined toss of 165 feet, 10 inches.

Key, Woody and Arbour added a first in the discus relay (153-3).

"They got the momentum going early, especially winning the heavyman relay, that got us pumped up," Gordon said.

In the 800 relay, Carl Lowe's 200-meter split of 21.9 carried Glenn to a first place finish. He teamed up with Chris Gumke, Randy Seach and Andrew Dobbins for a time of 1:31.1.

Lowe was also the anchor for the victorious 1,600 relay, recording a split of 48.2 to making up a 50-yard deficit. He combined with David Ryan, Seach and Gumke for a time of 3:30.7.

In the distance medley, Glenn took first again as Lowe went 1:59.0 for 800 meters as the lead-off leg. Gumke ran the first 400 meters, while Jason Nowicki covered 1,200 before handing off to Ryan for the 1,600 leg. Their time was 11:07.0.

Glenn's Jason Pizzuti recorded a leap of 20-8 to give Glenn a second in the long jump relay. He teamed with Brandon Buck and Brian Schultz for a combined effort of 59-3.

IN THE POLE VAULT relay, Glenn took third as Rob Conde, Frank Wojcik and Ryan Wilson combined for a total of 29-0. Conde cleared 11 feet to lead the trio. The Rockets also took third in the 400 relay as Lamar Ellison, Pizzuti, Schultz and Dobbins were clocked in 45.4.

Glenn also scored in high hurdle relay, as Ed Kwilos, Gamal Ahmed, Rob Facione and Mike Weaver, each running 110 meters, combined on a time of 1:14.4.

Redford CC captured three events. Dave Galvin, Mike Krasko, John Borke and Mike Sheridan won the 6,400 relay, while Ben Nelson, Galvin, Krasko and Sheridan added a first in the 3,200 relay. (A week ago, Sheridan went 4:28.2 and 9:47.1 to win the 1,600 and 3,200 individual runs, respectively, at the Rocket Invitational at the University of Toledo.)

CC's Mike Burns, Dave Baucus, Matt Putti and Eric Starkweather took the high hurdles relays.

Canton pitchers stifle N'ville

softball

Plymouth Canton opened its Western Division softball campaign with a pair of impressive victories Monday.

The Chiefs, undefeated with a 5-0 overall, swept a double-header from defending Western Lakes Activities Association champion Northville, 8-2 and 10-7.

Stacey Thompson was the winning pitcher in the first game, while freshman sensation Kelly Holmes, who has allowed Thompson to move to catcher this season, won the second game.

"It was a league game and I thought we needed an established pitcher in the first game," Canton coach Dave Racer said. "I didn't want to throw Kelly right in there. They were the league champs last year, and I wanted to go with a more experienced pitcher."

Thompson pitched a two-hitter, walked three and struck out two. The Mustangs managed just one hit off Holmes, who issued seven walks and fanned eight, in the nightcap.

Jenny Sekovich had two hits and scored two runs for the Chiefs in the first game. Anne Hooper drove in three runs with a bases-loaded single, and Jennifer Vanootighem scored twice and stole two bases.

Canton third baseman Chris Ford had two hits and three RBI, and Hooper was 2-for-2 with one RBI.

"(Ford) played a super game on defense in both games," Racer said. "She made a couple stops that were unbelievable."

Julie Nicastri delivered a two-run single, Thompson drove in one run and Vanootighem had another stolen base to bring her season total to 12-for-12.

PLYMOUTH SALEM fell to 0-2 in the Lakes Division and 0-5 overall Monday after being shut out by visiting Walled Lake Central, 5-0.

Cathy Cassinski went the distance for the Vikings and tossed a two-hitter. She walked three and struck out three. Jenny Garvey went the distance for Salem and allowed six hits, but Central had only one earned run. She fanned five and issued three walks.

"We beat ourselves," Salem coach Rob Willette said. "When we were on base, we made base-running mistakes, but that's due to inexperience."

Kelly Glennie had two hits, including a triple, and one RBI for Central, and teammate Nikki Converse also had a three-base hit.

Mercy's debut on new field success

By C.J. Nisek
staff writer

Henry Klimes didn't like what he saw, but he wasn't completely surprised by it.

The Farmington Hills Mercy soccer team, which Klimes coaches, hardly looked like the state's sixth-ranked Class A team during Monday's match with Harper Woods Regina. Still, the Marlins did manage to win, posting a 2-0 victory.

"We flat-out didn't play," said Klimes. "We've played much better."

There were all sorts of reasons why Klimes expected the poor showing, but the overwhelming cause was spring break. The Marlins hadn't practiced in nearly two weeks; most of the team spent the break in Florida and didn't return until Sunday.

Also, the match marked the grand opening of Mercy's new field. Indeed, the Marlins hadn't even practiced on it prior to Monday's game. Their previous home matches had been played at Pioneer Park in Farmington Hills on a field measuring 55-by-100 yards. Mercy's field is 65-by-115.

The bigger field and lack of practice had the Marlins looking weary. "We were very lucky to get that outcome," said Klimes. "For the first 60 minutes, Regina was taking it to us, but luck was with us."

The match was scoreless until midway through the second half, when Kathryn Dudley, a senior forward, popped a shot over the Saddlelites' keeper and into the net. Carrie Bowler got the assist; the scoring play started with Kathy McDonald's superb throw-in to the front of the Regina net.

Carrie Dzaidosz, a freshman midfielder, got an insurance goal 10 minutes later when she regained control of a thwarted pass and bounced it into the Saddlelite goal. Dudley got the assist.

Zena Garmo got the shutout, making an excellent save early in the second half on a Regina breakaway.

The victory left Mercy at 3-0-2 overall, 2-0-1 in the Catholic League.

MARGARET MARTIN'S two goals carried Farmington High to a key 2-0 girls soccer victory Monday over visiting Livonia Stevenson.

The Falcons are now 3-1 overall, while the Spartans fell to 1-1-1.

"We needed this one to stay in contention, both in the conference (Western Lakes) and the Division (Western)," said Farmington coach Cathy Cole. "We played hard. There were moments when both teams had an opportunity to put the ball in."

Both of Martin's goals — one off a restart and the other off an intercepted pass — occurred in the second half. Farmington outshot Stevenson, 17-7.

"I didn't think we played well, but they (Farmington) are a good team," said Stevenson coach Mary Kay Boots. "Their forwards ate us up."

Both Farmington goaltenders, who split time in the nets, sophomore Mandy Cannon and junior Kristen Soper, each stood out. Cole also singled out the play of midfielder Amy Trunk.

Stevenson's Alicia Smith also made several big stops.

Both teams are at full strength, although Stevenson played without starter Shannon Wilkinson, who is out with a broken leg.

CHURCHILL 11, W.L. WESTERN 0: On Monday, Livonia Churchill (3-0-1) blitzed visiting Walled Lake Western as junior Mechelle Brazin and sophomore Carol Jackson each scored two goals.

Other Churchill scorers include Shelly Hamby, Tracy Lingeman, Lori Place, Kristy Thurston, Marcy Woloch, Daniel Priebe and Nikki Johnson.

FRANKLIN 6, W.L. CENTRAL 0: Livonia Franklin earned its first victory of the season Monday, ripping host Walled Lake Central.

The Patriots, who jumped out to a 5-0 halftime bulge, were led by sophomore Patty Shea, who scored twice.

Sue Barone, Jenny Whitfield, Jenny Rettiog and Keri MacKay also scored goals for the Patriots.

Goalie Erica Sundeck, who faced only two shots, posted the shutout.

White wins 2 for OCC

Shannon White, a former Livonia Ladywood pitcher, won two games in relief Sunday for the Oakland Community College women's softball team.

White raised her record to 3-0 as she guided the Lady Raiders to a double-header sweep of Southwestern Michigan Community College, 10-4 and 5-4, at the Orchard Ridge Campus.

White relieved Amy Edward in the first game and pitched the final four innings.

Amy Knapp and Jackie Patrick had two hits apiece for OCC, which has won its last eight games. Knapp also had two RBI, and Patrick scored two runs. Jenny Pichlik added a two-run triple.

In the second game, White entered in relief of Pichlik and also had the game-winning hit, delivering a two-out single in the bottom of the sixth inning to drive in the deciding run.

Edward had two hits, including a triple, three stolen bases and two RBI, and Kelly Koss contributed one hit, three walks and two base thefts.

The Lady Raiders, the first-place team in the Eastern Conference, are 7-1 in the league and 14-5 overall.

OCC plays Henry Ford Community College at 3 p.m. today at King Boring Field in Dearborn.

Thomann to stay, coach Rocks again

THOMANN, THE only male coach among the finalists, said there was initial disappointment when he learned Monday of WMU's decision, but he quickly put that behind him.

"I was disappointed I didn't get the job, but I'm also comfortable with the job I have, the team I'm coaching and the players we have in the program.

"Yesterday, I was disappointed. Today, I'm elated."

Elliott replaces Jim Hess, who resigned in March after compiling a 104-113 record in eight years as coach.

Michelle Fortier, a former Plymouth Canton standout who played for Thomann's AAU team last summer, started at point guard for the Broncos as a freshman last season.

"I was familiar with the program, and I thought I had something I could offer," Thomann said. "A lot of the kids who play there either played for me in the AAU program or played against my teams in high school.

"I FELT honored they even brought me in for an interview. It was good for me, because it forced me to prepare and put together a resume. I had to be ready for questions like 'Why are you doing this?' and 'What do you like about this?' I had to think through a lot of things I haven't had to do in a long time."

Thomann has been considered for other positions in the past. He was interviewed for the Eastern Michigan University men's basketball position in 1979 — a job eventually given to Jim Boyce. Thomann accepted the athletic director's position at Ypsilanti High School two years ago but reconsidered a few days later.

"I've been happy at Salem," he said. "If a job comes along that piques my interest and presents a challenge to me, I would apply for it, but those jobs don't come along very often.

"I have an interest to coach at the college level, but I've never been one to go out and politick for a job at the expense of not getting my next team ready."

In applying at WMU, Thomann had to weigh the appeal of that job against the time he has invested in his career as an educator. He has taught and coached for 25 years and can retire in five years with retirement benefits.

"I would have been giving that up, but I also would be in a position to be doing what I want to be doing five years from now," he said, adding a teacher in that situation has the option to buy those remaining years.

"MY LONG-range goal is to get those five years in and coach basketball somewhere. This job opened up unexpectedly. It took me by surprise, but it's also a job that has some untapped potential."

Thomann added the WMU experience was good, because it helped him to prepare for that time when he does look to coach full time. But he reiterated he is content with his present situation at Salem.

"I feel good about what I have," he said. "We're going to have a helluva team next year."

Madonna halts skid

The five-game losing skid came to a halt for Madonna College's baseball team Tuesday in the opening game of a double-header at Wayne State, but many of the problems that plagued the Fighting Crusaders during the losing streak cropped up again in a second game loss.

Madonna rolled in the opener, getting a grand-slam home run, a double and a single and five runs batted in from outfielder Mike Wozniak in a 12-0 romp. Wozniak's bat was all the support Rich Roy needed; Roy tossed a three-hitter, walking two and striking out three in improving his record to 2-1.

Roy had a no-hitter going until the fourth inning, and he needed it. Madonna started slowly, leading 2-0 on a second-inning two-run homer by Kyle Irwin. The Crusaders collected three runs in the fourth, four in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

KEVIN O'CONNOR'S two-run triple made it 4-0 in the fourth, and Wozniak's grand slam iced it in the fifth. O'Connor and Bill Terski had two hits apiece. Marty Moraniec had two of the Tartars' three hits. Rob Ognian (from Livonia Stevenson) was the losing pitcher.

The second game was more distressing. WSU scored three unearned runs off Madonna starter Bob Elliott, which proved fatal in the 5-3 loss. The Crusaders committed three errors in the game and six in the twinbill.

The winning rally came with two out in the sixth. Ron Cortez (Livonia Franklin) broke a 3-3 tie, singling in the go-ahead run, and Mike Ganfield singled in another. Chris Klock was the losing pitcher in relief for Madonna.

The Crusaders got a run in the first on a single by Rick Gierczyk, another in the second on a single by Irwin, and their third in the fifth on Terski's triple. Ganfield had three hits for WSU and Dave Mondoux had two. Darrin Clark (Garden City) was the winning pitcher, allowing seven hits and two walks in six innings.

THE WARM weather which finally arrived last weekend was no help to Madonna. After losing three-straight NAIA District 23 games in less-than-ideal conditions Thursday and Friday, the Crusaders traveled to Aquinas College for a double-header on a bright, sunny Saturday — and lost two more.

Against Aquinas, Madonna was beaten 11-4 and 6-5, with inconsistent pitching, ragged defense and a slow-starting offense all playing a part. Mike Hocking was hardly at his best, pitching 5⅔ innings in the opener and giving up all 11 runs. But four were unearned; the Crusaders committed four errors.

"If we make the plays, they don't score three unearned runs in the first," said Madonna coach Mike George.

The Crusaders never caught up. Aquinas added six runs in the fifth, all after two were out. Chris Sisler knocked in two runs for Madonna, and Sean Maloney had two hits and an RBI. Matt Jones, Dino Paganelli and Paul Bastien each knocked in two runs for Aquinas, with Bastien getting two hits. Steve Witt was the winning pitcher.

In the second game, Sisler slugged a two-run homer in the first inning to put Madonna ahead, but the Saints scored five runs in their half of the inning and added another in the second to go up 6-2. Craig Karankiewicz was the Crusaders' pitcher who was victimized; he went the distance, giving up four earned runs (Madonna made two errors) on six hits and a walk, fanning four.

THE CRUSADERS made it close with three runs in the fourth on singles by Pete Berrios, Wozniak and Kevin Learned (scoring a run), a ground out by Irwin (scoring a second run) and a grounder by Jeremy Krol that was booted (scoring run No. 3). Wozniak finished with two hits for Madonna.

Rod Rojas was the winning pitcher for the first-place Saints, who improved to 7-1 in the district.

Last Friday, the Crusaders managed to get in six innings before the steady rain forced cancellation of the second game. Maybe that was fortunate, considering Madonna fell 10-3 and committed nine errors on rain-soaked Ford Field.

Kurtis, Park rule at West Bloomfield

By Tom Henderson
staff writer

Doug Kurtis of Northville and Laurel Park — not the shopping center in Livonia but the runner from Ann Arbor — each thought they'd use the 14th annual West Bloomfield half-marathon as an easy training run. Each ended up racing to victory and walking out of the awards ceremony with the first prize of a color television.

Park didn't even know till race day she'd be running in West Bloomfield. A friend called and asked her if she wanted to race, and since she was planning a long run, anyway, she figured why not do it with plenty of company. It wasn't until the two-mile mark that Park, 27, found out, much to her surprise, that she was in the lead in the first half-marathon of her career.

Her time of 1:25:21 was good for a four-minute win over Maureen Carter, 35, of Brighton.

Kurtis, who last year set the world record for most sub-2:20 marathons in a single year, 12, was hardly an upset winner. After all, he had set the course record here a year ago, in 1:07:32. But with another marathon just a week away, Kurtis, a former standout at Livonia Stevenson, planned on a cruise-control run at 1:10 pace.

Instead, he ended up in a heart-stopping, crowd-thrilling, back-and-forth stretch duel with Don Johns, 25, a one-time NCAA runner-up 10,000 meters on the track.

KURTIS SURGED to a 10- to 15-yard lead just after the 12-mile mark and seemed to have it wrapped up. But here came Johns, churning furiously, and when he passed Kurtis at 12½, he had the look of a runaway winner.

Kurtis, who won the Barcelona, Bangkok and Detroit Free Press marathons last year, knows how to find his way to the winner's circle. He used his superior strength to muscle up the last quarter-mile hill to the finish line, blowing past Johns and winning by 10 seconds as the crowd went wild.

Trailing him were 744 other entrants. Another 425 entered the inaugural Earth Day 3.5-mile walk.

"I didn't want to run that hard. I saw Don at the starting line and I said, oh-oh," said Kurtis, who in the spirit of Earth Day wore a long-sleeve T-shirt to the awards ceremony which declared on the back: "The answer is very clear: Stop polluting the atmosphere."

Kurtis and Johns ran together till about 11 miles, acting more as if it were a training run than one of the top races in Michigan. But from 11 on, it was serious.

When Johns went by him half a mile from the end, Kurtis nearly packed it in. "I was almost ready to give up. I didn't want to kill myself. Then I thought, if I'm going to run faster than 1:10, I might as well make the effort."

EFFORT — THAT was the key word on this hot, sunny day, on this grueling course with its uphills, downhills and endless turns.

Greg Gillson of Windsor had done the Boston Marathon the Monday before and thought West Bloomfield might be a nice little race. Welcome to reality, Greg. "That course is tough. I've never run it before because it's usually the same week as Boston. I'd heard what a nice course it was and wanted to see it. Whew! I don't think I'll pull that trick again (running West Bloomfield six days after a marathon).

"There were times I wanted to stop and walk. That's what you get for being brain dead," said Gillson, who finished 13th overall in 1:17:37.

"What neighborhoods, eh?" he said. "I couldn't believe how big those houses were. I said to someone: 'I don't think we're running through the welfare district.'"

Bob Sklar, editor of the Farmington Observer, was making his first appearance in West Bloomfield, too. "With all those ups and downs, it's hard to get into a pace," he said. He'd hoped to break two hours. He gladly settled for 2:03.

Some runners complained of the heat, though serious problems were negligible. Most of the complaints — fond complaints — were about those hills.

Bill DeChant doesn't see many hills on his Troy postal route. Even though he's a veteran of the race, those steep uphills and downhills always come as a rude awakening. "I always forget how hilly this course is," he said, moments after his 1:28 finish.

Paul Deladurantaye, 44, of Riverview, easily won the master's division, with his time of 1:16:57 good for a two-minute win over Larry Hromek of Lennon. June MacDonald, 41, of Detroit, topped the master's women in 1:33:10, beating Joan Murphy-Walker of Windsor by nearly two minutes.

The sole wheeler in the race — a particularly tough race for wheelers — was Art Hope of Munger, in 1:28:09. The winning couple, with a combined time of 2:53:28, was Maureen and Jim Carter of Brighton.

Cage recruits restock OCC

college sports

The heart of Oakland Community College's men's basketball team last season will be pumping life into a lot of different programs next season.

Three key members of OCC's team have received scholarships to continue their education, and three others are considering options.

Toine Murphy was the top Raider prospect. As OCC assistant coach Chris Peponis said, "All the coaches liked his versatility."

They also liked his 6-foot-6 height, as well as his deft ball-handling and shooting (19 points a game last season). The team that won out was Austin Peay, an NCAA Division I school in Clarksville, Tenn.

Other finalists on Murphy's list were Arkansas-Little Rock, Lamar, Butler, Eastern Michigan and University of Detroit. Murphy also averaged 6.8 rebounds and 4.5 assists. He'll have junior eligibility.

Austin Peay, a member of the Ohio Valley Conference, was 13-16 last season. There will be another addition to the Tennessee-based team. Peponis has accepted a graduate assistant coaching position.

A MAJOR reason for OCC's success last season was Mike Bailey, a 6-3 forward who led the team in scoring (20.2 points) and rebounding (10.4). Bailey has signed with Norfolk State, an NCAA II powerhouse from Norfolk, Va. Bailey will have two years of eligibility left for a team that went 27-2 last season and was ranked as high as second nationally.

The third Raider to commit was Ed Pasque, a 6-3 off-guard who averaged 10.4 points, 5.2 rebounds and 5.3 assists for OCC last season. Pasque is headed to Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Fla., an NCAA II school that was 18-9 last year.

The Raiders still considering their options are Bobby Dinges, a 6-4 shooting guard who averaged 12 points and made 52 percent of his three-point efforts; Tim Roberson, a 6-4 forward who averaged 12 points and five rebounds; and Tim Maxfield, a 6-7 reserve forward.

Dinges is hoping to land a spot at one of three New York-based NCAA I schools: Hofstra University in Hampstead, Long Island University or Wagner University, on Staten Island.

Roberson may join Bailey at Norfolk State. LaCrosse (Wis.) College and Siena Heights are also possibilities. Maxfield may end up at Siena Heights or William Penn (Iowa).

Man conquers 'noisy killer'; warns others

By Alice Collins
staff writer

Richard Bloom, a man enjoying what seems like a new life, has a story to tell — and he tells it whenever he has the opportunity.

It's a very personal story for the 38-year-old Southfield man who twice ran for city council. He feels it's his mission in life to reach as many people as he can.

"I just might be able to help save somebody's life," he said in an interview this week.

The focus of Bloom's story is sleep apnea, a treatable condition that almost killed him simply because it went undiagnosed for many years. "It can be such a deadly illness and many people who have it may not know what it is." He's also concerned, he said, "that doctors are not looking as carefully as they should."

Bloom saw five doctors over a period of several years and only the last one diagnosed it. "And I had classic symptoms," he said.

SLEEP APNEA is frequent and prolonged episodes when breathing stops during sleep, especially deep sleep. In serious cases it can lead to the physical and mental deterioration of the victim.

"Since I wasn't getting any deep sleep at night, I'd fall asleep throughout the day. I'd sit in my office and sleep. I became forgetful. As a salesman, I work by appointment and it got to the point where I was even forgetting to look at my appointment book.

"Once at Vic Tanny I not only forgot my lock number. I didn't even remember which locker was mine.

"I'd get so sleepy while I was driving to work and back, I'd have to pull over onto I-75 or M-59 and go to sleep for five minutes, 10 minutes, maybe an hour."

"Even my speech was affected. My wife would tell me I was stuttering and mumbling." Bloom also maintains that it affected his hearing.

BLOOM BELIEVES HIS problem began when he was 19, right after a rapid growth period of his life. "That's when my family started telling me about my snoring. I've had some tell me I sound like a wild animal and I've also been compared to a diesel truck.

"Blood pressure is called the silent killer. I call this the noisy killer."

The first time he felt something was really wrong with him was was when he was 28. A physical and blood tests checked out as normal and a few weeks later he felt back to normal.

The progression was slow through the years. "Again and again I'd tell a doctor I just didn't feel as good today as I did yesterday. Then in 1986 my system went out of whack and everything went crazy for me."

He was putting on weight, tried desperately to lose it but couldn't. He weighed 195 pounds when he got married in 1974 and at one point went above 260 pounds.

"EVERYBODY IN MY family started clipping articles from newspapers and magazines about sleep apnea. Or I'd get a call from my sister and she'd say 'Turn on TV, there's a program you should see,' " he said. "I believed I suffered from sleep apnea. My relatives and friends believed I had it." He asked a couple of doctors he consulted if he had it and they told them he didn't. "They just told me to lose weight. I tried, but I'd put on five more pounds."

Finally last spring he made an appointment with Dr. Michael Rosen, a Livonia internist his sister had started to work for. "She'd told him about my symptoms and I went in we sat down and talked. He told me I suffered from sleep apnea and sent me to a sleep clinic at Henry Ford Hospital to confirm the diagnosis. It did.

The study on Bloom found he experienced 84 apnea episodes an hour. "Having 10 or more isn't normal," Rosen said. "His oxygen saturation went from 98 percent when he was awake to below 60 percent in REM (deep) sleep."

X-rays showed that the cause of his apnea was the small size between the base of his tongue and the posterior wall of his pharynx. "It measured 3.5 to 4 millimeters. The normal size is greater than 10 millimeters," Rosen said. When Bloom was asleep and the muscles relaxed, the air couldn't get through. His breathing would stop and the lack of oxygen would awaken him.

"THEY CALLED ME when I was on vacation in Florida to give me the results," said Bloom. "My body was deteriorated. Everything was being affected from my head to my toes. I was so weakened. I felt worse every day and I just knew I was dying."

The date he remembers most, last July 13, is the day he got his CPAP (continuous positive air pressure) machine. The CPAP includes a mask he straps on his face when he goes to bed. The machine forces the obstructing tissue out of the way pushing air down through his nose.

"The next morning I woke up and I wasn't hungry. I got rid of the Twinkies from under my car seat and the M&Ms out of my closet. (He'd been eating them to try and get energy.) I walked to the window and everything looked bright again. The grayness was gone."

His health returned rapidly and he began losing the weight he'd tried for so long to get ride of. Last July 7 he weighed 250 pounds. This week, he weighs 210, with a goal of 180 pounds. When he reaches that he'll be restudied to see if his problem is improved by weight loss.

SURGERY TO remove the obstructing tissue may be in the future for Bloom if the weight loss doesn't help. If not, he'll continue to hook up his CPAP every night at bedtime.

Bloom's family is as thrilled with his recovery as he is — perhaps more. "I was just terrible to live with. I couldn't do anything. I just sat around and slept and snored. Janette and I have been married 16 years. Thank goodness we had a strong relationship. I don't think most most marriages could have survived it."

Treasures await your discovery at book sale

Can you imagine the thrill of reading in old books, in spidery steel-penned Palmer Method penmanship, inscriptions such as:

"For the best decorated hat at the December 1882 Grange meeting," "A birthday present from myself — Berlin Germany Free Library 1950," "Thanks for a Most Memorable Evening," or "From Grandma and Grandpa April 1913" ?

Such inscriptions have been and could be found among the thousands of books that will be on sale for the Friends of the Livonia Public Library used book sale, which will take place this weekend.

The sale will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1-5 p.m. Sunday in the Livonia Civic Center Library on Five Mile just east of Farmington Road.

Among the sale items will be collectible children's books, hundreds of phonograph records, and special collectible books.

Hardcover books will sell at $1, paperbacks at 50 cents, romance novels for 25 cents, magazines for a dime, and records at $1 each.

All proceeds are used to buy equipment for the public library system in the community. More than $12,000 was donated last year from the book sales.

Harriet Larson is book sale chairwoman.

RECYCLING IS GOOD NEWS:

Overcrowded landfills. Garbage barges no one wants to deal with. Terminal trash.

News.

Bad news.

The good news? More and more people, businesses and industries are finding ways to recycle.

It takes more than 6,000 tons of newsprint each year to print The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers plus a number of other publications, so we're doing a number of things to help the solid waste situation:

1.For years we've sold our waste newsprint to a recycling firm.

2. 25% of the newsprint we print on is recycled and we're increasing this amount by another 25% this year.

3. Our employees have begun to routinely put office paper (memos, computer paper, waste copy paper) in recycle bins instead of waste baskets.

Of course, we still deliver thousands of newspapers twice each week. It's our business to bring you news of your local government, schools; sports scene and community events; the news you need to know.

And when you're finished reading your hometown newspaper there are places that will recycle them.

We've listed a few for you on this page because we think recycling is Good News.

What do an apple, a cow, and a car door have in common?

Recycled newspapers play a role in all three.
Apple growers in the northwest use recycled newsprint for packing, farmers use it for bedding instead of straw and auto manufacturers use it in car doors.
There are many uses for your used newspapers, why not start saving them today?

Keep wildlife at home in art

nature

Timothy Nowicki

OCCASIONALLY, some of the squirrels that visit our bird feeder will walk along the window sill by our kitchen window. They look in and we watch them separated by only a couple inches. Observing animals this close is very enjoyable.

Being close to wild animals may motivate people to keep wild animals as pets, or to help "abandoned" animals they find. Concern for animals is fine, but good intentions are often not the best for the animal.

Many animals are not "abandoned," adults are often hidden nearby waiting for you to leave. Young birds with adult-like feathers leave the nest before they are fully capable of flying. Their parents will find them and feed them until they can acquire food on their own.

Proper food is often hard for people to supply wild animals. Finding enough insect protein to feed a nesting bird every 15-30 minutes from sunup to sunset can be very demanding.

In addition to several practical aspects of caring for a wild animal, there are federal and state laws that prohibit people from possessing wild animals without special permits.

The best thing to do with "abandoned" animals is to leave them alone. A significant amount of mortality exists naturally in any animal population. Animals discovered may be part of that segment of the population which will not survive. Adults will do the best they can to help the rest of the segment to survive.

If you want to bring wildlife into your home, the best way is through art. There are a number of excellent wildlife artists that depict animals and their habitats with artistic skill and accuracy, which will please anyone's taste. No matter what your interest, there are artists who paint or sculpt that subject.

Concern for animals is fine, but good intentions are often not the best for the animal.

Collecting and displaying wildlife art has many advantages, it does not jeopardize the animal, it decorates your home, you don't have to feed it every 15 minutes and it can help organizations preserve habitats so the animals can take care of themselves.

The National Wildlife Federation periodically offers special prints by well-known artists for sale. Proceeds from their sale go toward conservation efforts around the world. Recently, a beautiful bald eagle by Robert Batreman was offered and now a family of red fox by Carl Brenders is being offered.

Visit local wildlife art galleries such as Wild Wings and S & R for your choice of print or original.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

This print "The air, the forest and the watch," by Robert Bateman was published to benefit the celebration of Earth Day 1990. It is sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation.

WE HAVE THE BEST WEATHER-RESISTANT LUMBER IN TOWN

EXTRA Wolmanized

It really weathers the elements!
Water beads right off Wolmanized EXTRA Weather-Resistant Lumber because it's got something "extra" – it's pressure treated with a special water repellent to prevent moisture penetration from rain and snow. All wood swells and expands when it absorbs moisture. As it dries, it releases moisture and shrinks. Constant expansion and contraction causes grain raising, checking, splintering and warping. Spray or brush-on water sealers can't repel water like Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber – in laboratory tests Wolmanized EXTRA Lumber shows almost two-thirds more moisture resistance than pressure-treated lumber protected with a leading water sealer. Of course, this fantastic lumber is also pressure treated for lifelong protection against termites, rot and decay. Don't settle for ordinary treated lumber. Insist on Wolmanized EXTRA!

Orchestra's percussionist innovates with sounds

By Carolyn Barnett-Goldstein
special writer

From primitive beats to musical effects characterizing outer space, the symphony orchestra percussionist produces the sounds and rhythms the composer writes. In fact, many times the percussionist must create the instrument to produce a particular sound.

"You have to be a carpenter, a mechanic, an inventor, an engineer. You have to be able to put things together — to design things, come up with new ways to hold things, new sounds. It's very interesting," said Robert Pangborn, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra's principal percussionist, as he describes his life and work.

He is sitting in the library of the expansive, Bloomfield Hills home he and his wife, Brenda, designed to accommodate their pursuits, interests and collections. His collections of figurines of percussionists from pre-Columbian periods to modern day metal, nuts and bolts sculptures, along with his collection of instruments from various cultures from around the world, show an appreciation of craftsmanship and the use of materials. He, himself, uses the same metals, woods and stones to create instruments.

HIS HOBBIES ARE an extension of the skills he needs as a percussionist. The model room, dominated by the workbenches he made, is set up with their hobby of train modeling, and his of dollhouse remodeling and making miniatures.

He said that as head of the four-man percussion section his main responsibilities are "to direct and to organize it, to understand everyone's abilities, fortes, because, you know, we can't all necessarily play all of the percussion instruments equally well — and I must assign parts." As an example he cited the composition, "Aftertones of Infinity," by Schwanter which the orchestra recently performed. "The percussion parts are written by the composer for two players only, but they are so extensive — it's very difficult. So my job is to edit (the parts) so our full section can be involved." There also are fewer chances for mistakes, he said.

While he is in charge of the "general battery" that includes the snare drums, cymbals and bass drum, he is also assistant timpanist under Sal Rabbio. Timpani, or kettle drums, are played more often than the other percussion instruments in the section because of the repertoire.

"Many conductors regard their timpanists as extremely important in the orchestra for keeping the time. If the left hand is the concertmaster, the right hand of the conductor keeps the beat and is the timpanist."

He paused, then continued, "There was never any question in my mind I wanted to be a musician. The persons, my heroes, that I looked up to were orchestra musicians. They were my uncle, who played trumpet in the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra, and Cloyd Duff, my teacher in high school, and that orchestra's principal percussionist."

Born 54 years ago in Painesville, Ohio, 30 miles from Cleveland, he credits his mother, who played piano in theaters in the days of silent films, with his interest in music. His father gave him the woodworking skills.

JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

Robert Pangborn, principal percussionist with Detroit Symphony Orchestra, draws on a amazing variety of skills to come up with many unusual sounds called for in symphonic scores.

HE BEGAN STUDYING DRUMS at 9, played professionally in high school and joined the DSO in 1963. Through the years he has continued to learn new instruments and techniques.

"Today," he said, "many composers are trying to use percussion instruments in a way to affect electronic sounds." In the Schwantner composition for instance, he said, "We resin the hair on the string bass bows very heavily, and, then, use the bows on the edge of the vibraphone bar. It vibrates the bar, and it gives almost an electronic sound." The "ringing pitches" of the four crystal glasses "fit right in with outer space.

"Where they are not utilizing instruments that are already in existence, many times they're creating instruments, and a lot of percussion instruments are designed and created out of a composer's desire for a certain sound."

This is where his "bag of tricks" comes in. For both studio and symphonic percussionists this represents their personal collection of instruments, their searches and successes over the years to play sounds and effects. It holds their secrets.

Pangborn remembered, "'When I recorded for Motown years ago, and that was a very basic kind of recording, I already had quite a collection of different sounds. Some of the producers were always interested in some kind of new sounds to get something going. So I would bring in weird things. I remember my first set of African log drums I bought in New York. I brought them in. They used them. They were fascinated . . ."

For the symphony his "bag" includes chromatic scales of tuned stones, and "things call boobams, long tubular drums, with a very distinctive sound. Such instruments derive out of Hollywood studio orchestras. Somebody came up with a sound. They were playing around. A composer heard it, liked it, and wrote for it, that's how a lot of percussion stuff we use today in the 20th century music had its beginnings."

He said that, while other musicans may dispute their validity, "they've found their way into the family of percussion instruments, into our large bag of tricks."

IN THE BOXES on his studio shelves are Balinese gongs, cup bells, Oriental bell trees, clay drums and metal chains.

One of John Cage's pieces calls for wood blocks — not Chinese, "With the help of my father, who had special equipment, I ended up making blocks (in graduated sizes). Of course, they all had a certain pitch. But where was I to get blocks that weren't "Chinese?" What kind of blocks wouldn't be "Chinese?" So we designed and constructed blocks that didn't sound "Chinese." So they weren't Chinese. We did it. It worked. To me it's one of the fun things about percussion, creating sounds, creating the instruments to play some of these sounds. You call upon your own abilities, to put some thing together. Sometimes they (the instruments) are a little bit crude looking, but they work. I always enjoyed that part of being an orchestra percussionist — the challenge."

THE PERFORMANCE itself has built-in pitfalls. He said, "One of the most difficult things about being a percussionist is to know where you are at all times, because of the fact that you're not playing that much. Yet, when you make your entrance, it's dramatic — and important. It's an accent point in the music — and it had better be in the right place. So you've got to count.

The cannon effect for next year's performance of Tchaikovsky's "1812 Overture" is already a concern. Will it be the bass drum, a shotgun fired into a barrel backstage or Pangborn's "super huge bass drum — the kind they have to put on a cart with wheels to take onto a football field?"

African-American quilts may steal the show

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

Three outstanding local quilt collections will be on exhibit at "Quilts! Quilts! Quilts!" 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday, May 3 and 4, at Evergreen Center, 13 Mile at Evergreen, Southfield.

The show, hosted by BASCC, Birmingham Area Senior Coordinating Council and the Center, is coordinated by Merry Silber of Birmingham, curator of quilt shows throughout the country.

In addition to the quilt display there will be a mini-mall, ongoing quilting demonstrations, quilting supplies and fabrics, films, books, crafts and appraisals.

The award-winning film, "Hearts and Hands," will be shown several times daily at no charge. "Bring Your Own Quilt," a lecture/appraisal, will be presented at 2:30 p.m. both days.

A new quilt, "Indian Maiden," made especially for this show by members of the BASCC Quilt Club, will be given as a prize at 5 p.m. Friday.

MOST OF the quilts to be displayed have not been shown before, Silber said. They are from the Jean Conway, Kempf Hogan and Albert and Merry Silber collections.

Silber discovered Conway's rich quilt treasure only recently when she was called in to appraise and date them, she said.

The 10 quilts were made by Conway's two grandmothers from original designs of Marie D. Webster, foremost quiltmaker and designer who reigned supreme during the early 1900s, she said.

"Every art form has its Rembrandt — Marie Webster was the Rembrandt of quilt making. She created original designs at Marshall Field (Chicago) and wrote the first full-length book on quilting, 'Quilts: Their Story and How to Make Them.'"

Several of Conway's quilts are illustrated in the book. Some of Webster's sample patches and hand-written instructions will be on display at the show.

ANOTHER CONWAY quilt in the show is one made by her great-grandmother, Sarah Morris McGregor of Springfield, Mo., when she was 18. The needlework is extraordinary.

Silber had Conway hold her quilt up before a window and pointed out the cotton seeds left in the filling.

"That's one way we date quilts — if they have seeds, they made before the cotton gin."

HOGAN, WHOM Silber described as "collecting everything," is now acquiring African-American quilts, which Silber called "a phenomenon, the hottest new collectable."

The African-American quilts are reminiscent of slave-made quilts, she said.

The quilts are the "complete antithesis of the quilts in the Conway collection or Silber's quilts, which were recently in a Michigan State University traveling exhibition."

HOGAN'S QUILTS are to Conway's and Silber's as jazz is to Haydn, he said.

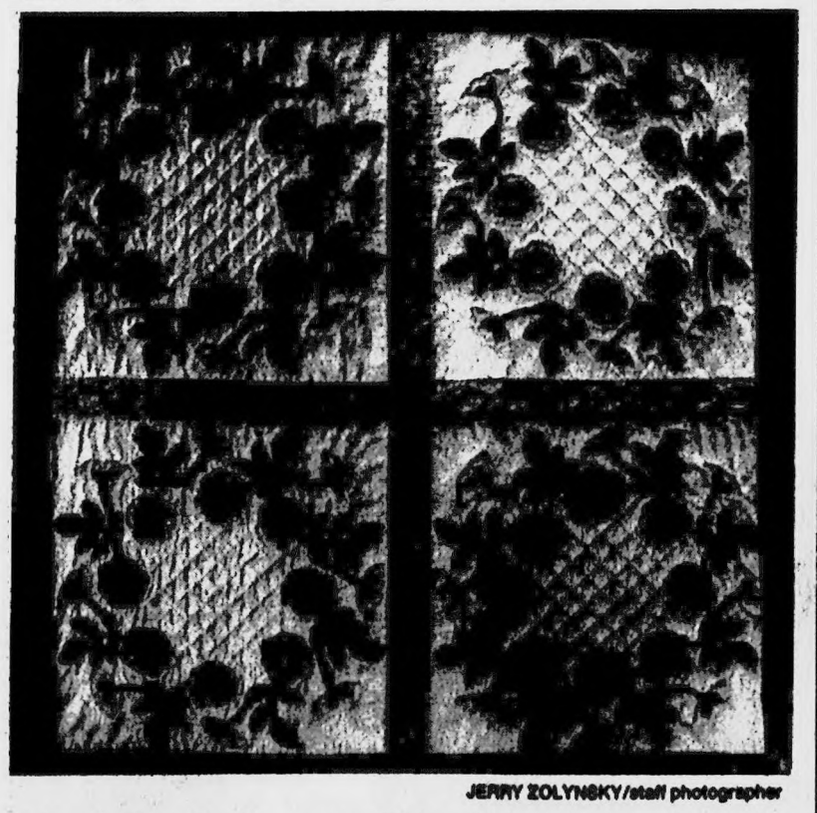
The American Folk Art Museum of New York City recently had a slave quilt exhibition, but quilts such as those are extremely hard to find — for one thing, they were made to be used until they wore out, Silber said.

They are not as finely made as others, doubtless because the makers had little time to work on them, but they are highly expressive and exciting in content and originality.

"Until 1971, these quilts were not recognized," Hogan said.

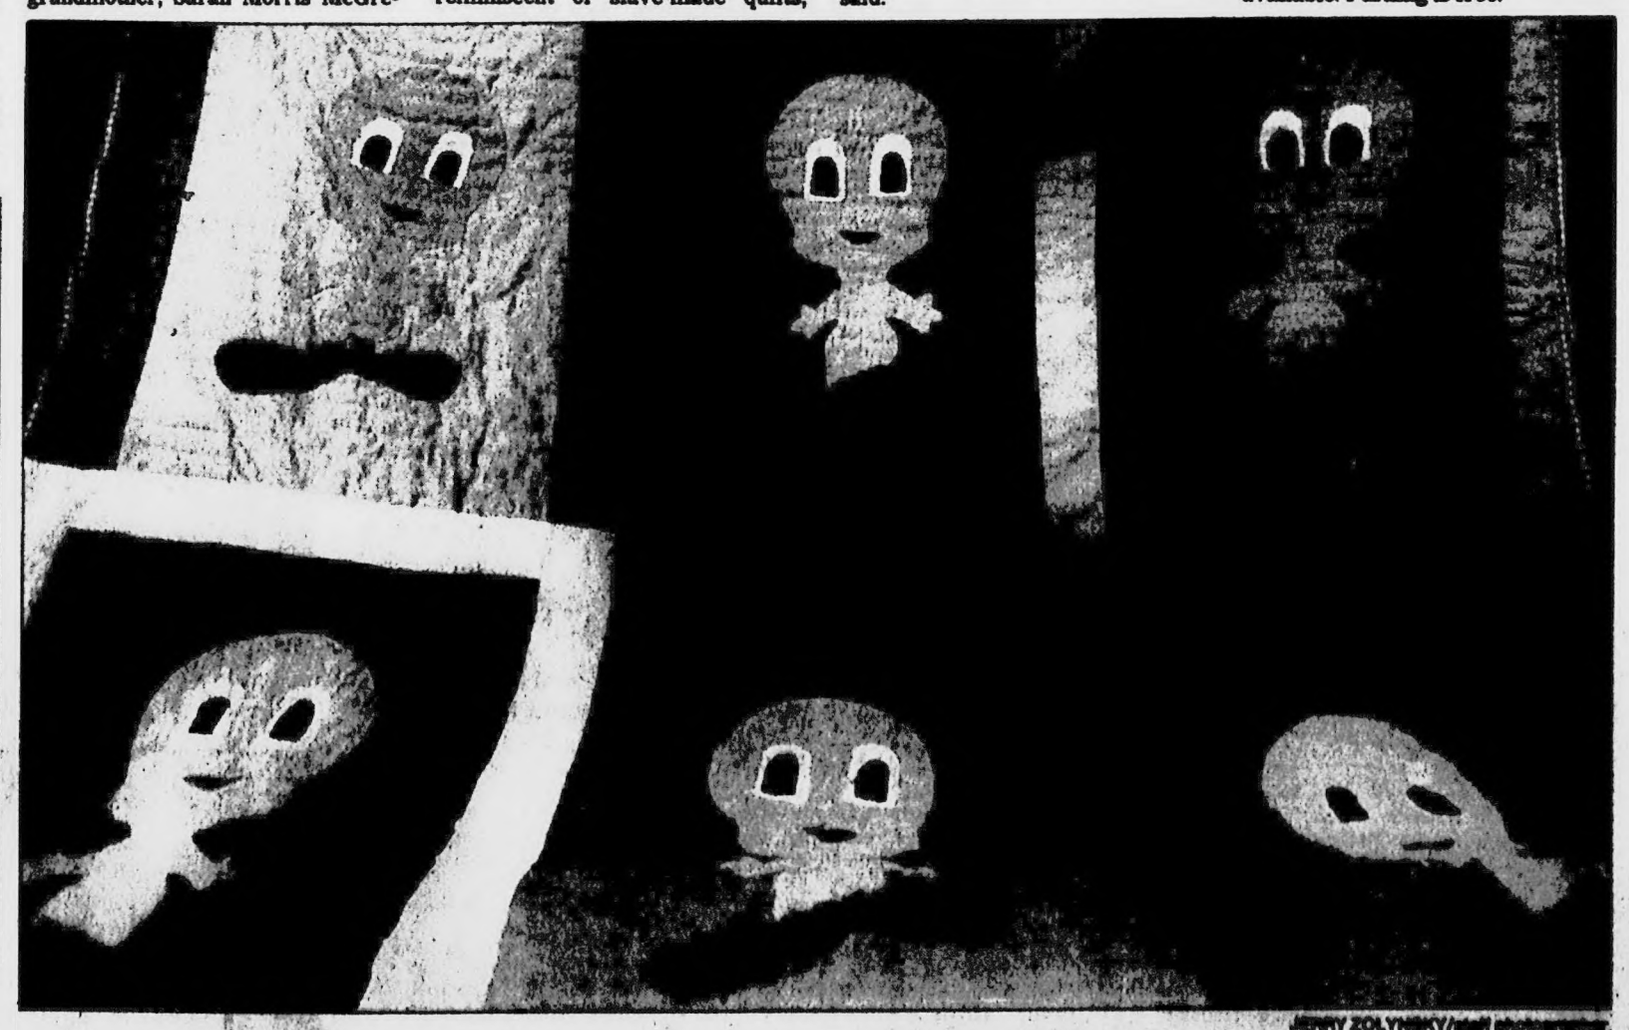
Silber will have posters available at the show of the quilting painting by Romare Bearden that was used for a mosaic at Detroit Institute of Arts.

Admission to "Quilts! Quilts! Quilts!" is $3. Refreshments will be available. Parking is free.



JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

"Magpie Rose" is the name of this quilt in Jean Conway's collection. It is in perfect condition and was made by her grandmother, Mary Elizabeth Mann, in 1920 from Marie Webster's pattern.



JERRY ZOLYNSKY/staff photographer

This "Tweety Bird" pattern in brilliant primary colors, from Kempf Hogan's collection, is reminiscent of the slave-made quilts. Many like this were made in the late 1930s by Mattie Jackson of Mississippi.

Chinese people loved his camera

Monte Nagler used a telephoto lens to move in close for impact. The use of a large aperture blurred an unwanted background.

Because of commitments to government officials and trip sponsors, I stuck close to the large cities during my recent trip to China.

And what better subject to photograph in the cities than the people. Never on any of my previous trips have I seen such an abundance of interesting people (1.1 billion in all of China) and never before have I seen people with such character in their faces.

The Chinese were very friendly and, in most cases, very willing to pose for me. However, their curiosity over my cameras sometimes prevented me from getting my shot. The Fuji 6-by-17 panorama camera drew so much instant attention on the streets that within seconds after removing it from my camera bag crowds of onlookers blocked any chance of a shot. Even the simple task of changing film drew crowds of curious people.

INITIALLY, WHEN my Chinese subjects held out their hands after being photographed, I thought they wanted to be paid. As I reached into my pocket for some yuan (Chinese currency), they shook their heads. They didn't want money — they wanted the photograph.

Many Chinese think that all cameras are the Polaroid variety. Well, through sign language, body gestures, and drawing of pictures, I let it be known I wasn't shooting instant film while promising to send a photograph to those who gave me an address.

At all times, I felt perfectly safe and comfortable walking the streets of China in search of photographic material. And at times I had the luxury of a taxi driver who could be hired for an all-day photo excursion for just a few dollars.

Here are some tips that worked well in China:

- When photographing people to show character, use a telephoto lens to get in close. A large aperture will blur out a distracting background and allow for a faster shutter speed.
- Sneak some candid shots, but if your subject knows you're there, ask permission to take a photograph. Even with a language barrier, more often than not you'll get the okay to take the shot.
- Learn to change film quickly in a bus or on a busy street. After all, the next shot may be just around the corner.
- Get off the tourist path. Go to the out-of-the-way places, explore, be adventurous. Always be on the lookout for photographic opportunities.

Pierre Fracalanza winding things up

Fracalanza closes symphony season

The Livonia Symphony Orchestra will end its 1989-90 concert season with the appearance of guest soloist Pierre Fracalanza at the Yamaha midi-grand piano.

Billed as "Music Out of This World," the program will begin at 8 p.m. Friday, May 4, in Churchill High School, Joy and Newburgh roads, Livonia. The orchestra will be under the baton of its director Francesco DiBlasi.

Fracalanza will introduce his audience to sounds of the 21st centry via the midi-grand with Beethoven's "Ode to Joy" from the "Ninth Symphony," Vangelis' "Chariots of Fire," "Phantom of the Opera" by Webber and selections from "Star Trek" by Goldsmith.

The soloist has been associated with the Hammell Music Co. of Livonia and Troy for many years and is a well-known entertainer in the Detroit area having appeared at the Vineyards, Fox & Hounds, Caucus Club, Hyatt Regency, Dearbon Inn and most recently at the Ritz-Carlton, Dearborn.

FRACALANZA BEGAN the study of music with his father, Romeo Fracalanza of Port Huron, and continued at the Eastman School of Music, Rochester, N. Y. An experienced church and theater organist, he began church performances at the age of 12. He has performed at Detroit Unity Temple and frequently has been called upon to play for Governor James J. Blanchard at the governor's residence in Lansing and also to perform for a national governor's conference in Traverse City.

DiBlasi will begin the evening's entertainment with Modest Mussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain," followed by two Debussy nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Festivals."

The orchestral portion of the program will be concluded with "Berceuse" and "Finale" from "The Firebird" by Stravinsky.

Romantic finale

'Dance' titles headline Plymouth concert

The final concert of the season for the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra at 8 p.m. Friday features an all-orchestral program of music of the late Romantic era.

Each of the three works to be performed has a dance title and was either composed as music to be danced to or inspired by dance music.

Rachmaninoff had hoped that his "Symphonic Dances" might be used as a ballet, but it is actually a symphony characterized by wonderful melodies and rhythms.

The Dvorak "Slavonic Dances" have great audience appeal with their folk dance character.

The tunes of the "Polvetsian Dances" by Borodin conclude the program with several very familiar tunes that are recognized from their adaptation in the musical comedy, "Kismet."

TO FOSTER a comprehensive and cooperative fine arts experience, the PSO has arranged with the Plymouth-Canton schools' art departments for a display of selected high school student works.

More than 200 pieces in a variety of media will be featured. Coordinating the show are Joan Claeys and art instructors Graham Martin, Kris Darby, David Falsetti and Richard Saunders.

The concert will be in the Plymouth-Salem High School auditorium, 46181 Joy Road, Canton. The art exhibit may be viewed an hour before and after the concert.

Admission is $8 for adults; $7 for seniors; $2 for students K-12. Tickets may be bought at the box office 30 minutes before the performance time.

● SPRING FESTIVAL

The great success of last fall's Applefest in Plymouth's Old Village has prompted the creation of a full festival event where a previous smaller "spring walk" had been held.

The festival, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, will include antiques and craft dealers, free entertainment, food dealers and children's entertainment. Most of the shops in the Old Village area will be open.

Residents of Old Village will be holding their spring yard sales. For more information or Old Village walking maps, call the village hot line, 455-7011 or 455-4169.

● CHRYSANTHEMUM SALE

The 30th annual chrysanthemum plant sale of the Greater Detroit Chrysanthemum Society will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, May 19, at the Livonia home of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Slesak Sr., 33451 Rayburn, north of Five Mile.

Plants are potted and ready to shift to containers and gardens. There will be many varieties and colors, including cushion mums, tall upright, exhibition and football mums. Members with many years of experience will be at the sale to assist with selection and growing suggestions.

● PERENNIAL SALE

Perennials, rock garden plants, herbs, flowering baskets, ferns wildflowers, ornamental grasses and old-fashioned roses will be some of the offerings at the perennial sale 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday-Sunday, April 28-29 sponsored by the Friends of Matthaei Botanical Gardens at the gardens, 1800 N. Dixboro Road, Ann Arbor. The plant sale is conducted under a giant tent as well as in the auditorium. For more information, call 998-7061.

'Te Deum' concert features old, new "Something Old, Something New" will be the theme of the spring choral concert at 2 p.m. Sunday May 6 in the sanctuary of the Meadowbrook Congregational Church, featuring the church's chancel choir, soloists and members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

The concert, which is open to the public with no admission charge, will feature three settings of the "Te Deum" ("We Praise Thee, O God") by three different composers. All will be under the direction of Ray P. Ferguson, Wayne State University professor of music and minister of music at Meadowbrook Congregational Church.

The first setting is the "Utrecht Te Deum" written by Handel to celebrate the Peace of Utrecht in 1713. The 20th works illustrate the "Something New." English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams composed his "Festival Te Deum" for the coronation of King George VI, and the work was first performed at Westminster Abbey on May 12, 1937. The "Te Deum" of John Rutter was composed in 1989 for the centenary of the Guild of Church Musicians and was first performed in a service of Thanksgiving at Canterbury Cathedral.

Meadowbrook Congregational is at 21355 Meadowbrook Road, Novi.

David Messing

One of my students was asked to sit at a party and draw caricatures. "Sure" was his reply, but after a few practice caricatures, he found that this particular art form is much more difficult than it seems.

A caricature is truly an art form. Art is selection and selection is caricaturing. It is studying the model or photo and extracting only those lines and shapes that are characteristic of the person. How you place those lines and shapes on paper sets the mood of the caricature. If your lines, shapes and colors are vold and greatly exaggerated, then your caricature will be wacky or silly. If your lines, shapes and colors are more carefully drawn and more subtly placed, then your caricature is more realistic yet still humorous.

BOTH STYLES are appreciated and will be accepted. A caricature is a visually brief description and that is a good tip for finding what to draw and what to leave out. Mentally describe the features to yourself before you begin to draw. Remember, it is your mind that tells the hand what to draw. Clarity in the mind produces clarity and accuracy of line on the paper. Abstraction means to pull out or select, and the caricaturist must first master abstraction if he or she is to improve in this field.

Caricatures of many artists are weighted down with too many lines and details, causing the artwork to hover somewhere between realism and cartoon. Probably the greatest compliment to a caricaturist is when someone says something like "that's his face exactly. In just a few lines you got his features perfect." The hardest people to caricature are pretty girls and women because everything is pretty and there is little to be humorous with.

Men are a caricaturist's playground because their features are usually bolder than those of women. Always be sure to ask what are the hobbies of the subject and also the occasion for the request. That way you can add in some golf clubs, tennis racket, or a birthday cake, to make it even more personal. Have fun.

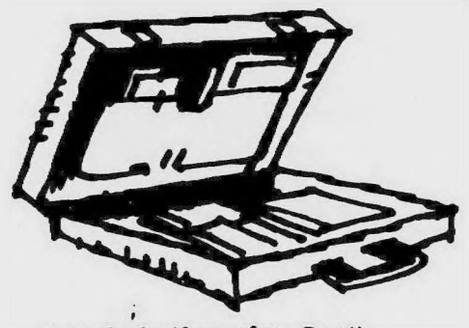
WRITE IT AND REAP!

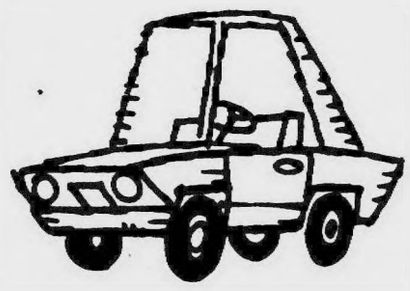
Writing a classified ad that gets results—whether it be for real estate, employment, the personals, transportation, or merchandise— is easy if you follow the guidelines below.

1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

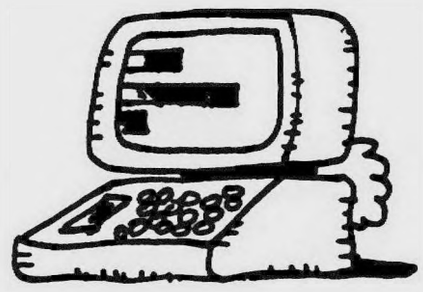


2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.



4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!



5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

New skyscrapers fail to display new forms

By Dale Northup
special writer

The skyscraper has always been considered a symbol of American corporate enterprise and an exclamation point of civic pride. The identity of most American cities are defined by beckoning towers: New York, the World Trade Center (by our own Minoru Yamasaki); Detroit, the Renaissance Center; Chicago, the Sears Tower; San Francisco, the Transamerica Building.

At one time that identity was nearly lost with the advent of what came to be termed modernism. Its promoter was Mies van der Rohe who espoused, as well as exposed, glass and steel as the skin and bones of modern architecture. This took hold on the American architectural scene in New York City with Lever House (1952), which became the prototype for the corporate box, and subsequent anonymity was unveiled with a bland facade.

ARCHITECT ROBERT Stern has referred to these boxes as containers in which the older, more identifiable buildings were packaged. Stern is associated with a reactionary group of architects under the heading of post-modernism. Their ultimate aim is to attach visible reminders of an older style or tradition with which the viewer can identify.

The ancient regime is back on the scene, and one of its promoters is Phillip Johnson, who curiously was once a disciple of Mies van der Rohe. Now labeled a "turncoat," Johnson claims "it is . . . much more old-fashioned to make a glass box than to copy other great periods." And with that statement he embellished the New York skyline with a broken pedimental cap atop the new AT&T Corporate Headquarters in 1978. The building elicited quite a response, with one person referring to the building as a giant Chippendale skyscraper and Detroit architect William Kessler saying that Johnson was becoming senile. Nonetheless it is a new corporate identity blatantly visual and one for which everyone is now scrambling — a new-old countenance of character.

The design of AT&T was conceived the same year when Johnson formed a partnership with John Burgee. Since then they have jointly helped change the complexion of U.S. skylines, most notably with Houston developer Gerald Hines on Hines' home turf: Penzoil Place, 36-story trapezoidal towers; 64-story Transco Tower, reminiscent of the early 1900s' commercial buildings; and the 56-story NCNB Center, described as neo-Gothic.

THE SKY and Houston are no longer the limit for Gerald Hines. He has now enlisted John Burgee Architects (Johnson is semi-retired) to design the 50-story One Detroit Center on Woodward in downtown Detroit.

The new tower will contain approximately one million square feet of space. It has a gabled roofline that will have a major presence on the Detroit skyline. Clad in warm, light beige granite and gray glass, materials that will make it compatible with older surrounding buildings. One Detroit Center, will feature high-ceilinged lobby and granite-paved plazas outside relating to the pedestrian level. The facade has a strong vertical thrust accentuated with peirs that terminate in small pyramidal caps

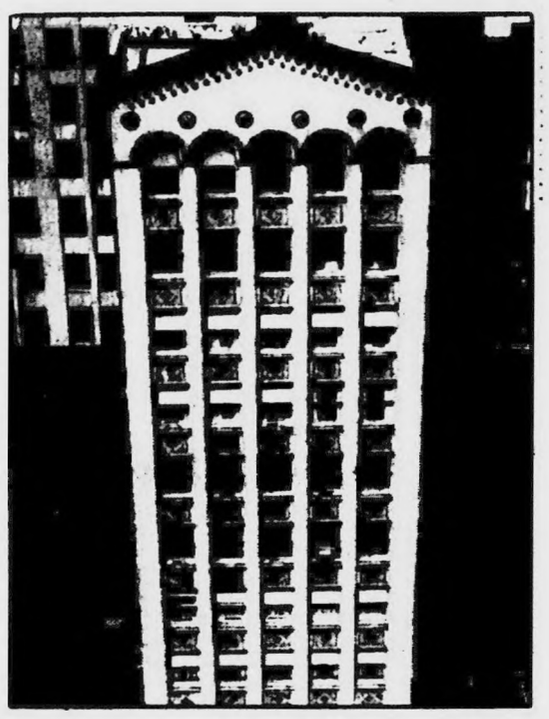
One Detroit Center is a 50-story office tower designed by John Burgee Architects of New York in the neo-gothic, post-modern style.



The former Vinton Building was designed by Albert Kahn in 1917. The building has the clarity and simplicity of Kahn's industrial buildings with a triangular cap.

suggesting Gothic architecture already reclaimed in the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Corporate headquarters in Pittsburgh, also by Johnson/Burgee.

Cylindrical, pavilion-like corners mediate the four sides of the building. Thankfully they relate to the central tower of the Renaissance Center two blocks away, creating some contextual venue that brings the Renaissance Center visually closer to the central business district.

As exciting an addition One Detroit Center is to Detroit architecture, it does not represent anything new in terms of local architectural vernacular. Right across Congress Street to the north is the original Vinton Building done by Albert Kahn in 1917. Only a 12-story building, it has the clarity and simplicity of Kahn's industrial buildings that first expressed the metal-reinforced concrete frame, the early "bones" of 20th century American commercial architecture later espoused by Mies van der Rohe.

The piers have a verticality accentuated by recessed spandrels and are terminated with a gabled roofline. Thus One Detroit Center is an amplification of an adjoining building making it a kindred spirit, or sort of a big brother or sister. Perhaps the Spirit of Detroit statue to the south was instrumental in exercising some zeitgeist on John Burgee.

AN ENGLISH writer, John Gloab, exclaimed upon viewing the World Fair of 1933 in Chicago: ". . . that (something) is always slightly bewildering to an English mind attuned to the belief that in America new ideas have a better chance of life that anywhere else." He also relabeled the fair, which was called "a Centry of Progress" "a Century of Safety First put over as Progress."

In a similar vein, architectural precedent has again repeated itself in the automobile center of the world, the reputed purveyors of public taste. Post-modernism has been described as artistic novelty or gimmickry by critics. Perhaps they were right. In our aerodynamic, industrial technological society we are deserving of newer forms.

HOST applications placed on hold

By Robin Gaines
special writer

The state is no longer accepting applications for participation in its Home Ownership Savings Trust program because of the volume of applications.

Since January, the state treasurer's office has received more than 2,000 applications, according to Lynn Rycus, public affairs assistant.

"We don't know how many participants in the program we actually have until we start receiving payments, but the response has been fantastic," she said.

Proposed by Gov. James Blanchard last year, HOST will allow a savings program to provide a down payment toward the purchase of a house for a first-time buyer. Buyers will be able to pre-select the value of the home they wish to purchase and the amount of down payment they want to save for in a specified number of years. Once the figures are determined, participants will make monthly payments to the state. The state, in turn, will invest the money in state-backed bonds.

The bonds will have a variable interest rate guaranteed to equal or exceed the annual increase in Michigan housing prices, and the interest income is tax-exempt. Participants can withdraw their savings at any time without penalty.

The program is similar to the Michigan Education Trust, which allows residents to save for their children's college education.

ONE OF THE chief criticisms leveled against HOST when it was introduced was that Michigan taxpayers would have to bail out the program if the treasury department's predictions about housing inflation and rates of return on bonds are incorrect.

The state is anticipating a 5-percent yearly increase in the cost of a home and an annual rate of return on the bonds of 7.5 percent. Some real estate experts believe housing will increase more than 5 percent per year, thus using up the $40 million in bonds the state has set aside for the HOST program sooner than expected.

In 1988, Michigan voters approved the issuance of $800 million in bonds for environmental cleanup and recreational purposes. A portion of these bonds, about 5 percent, are reserved for participants in the HOST program.

The treasurer's office is compiling statistics from the 2,000-plus applications it has received to get a better idea of whom the program should be targeted toward in the future, Rycus said. So far, it does not seem that applicants are concentrated in any one section of the state.

After current applications are processed and payment schedules are begun, the treasurer's office will decide when the next application process will begin.

For more information, call the HOST hotline at 1-800-642-4178.

Making kitchen living easier

There was a time not all that long ago that American kitchens were designed with one type of consumer in mind: the full-time homemaker with 2.6 children and a breadwinner husband.

Today, manufacturers are recognizing that the typical consumer has gone the way of newsreels and tail fins. One kitchen design simply can't meet everybody's needs. More and more, today's appliances are being designed for and marketed to groups such as disabled or elderly people, whose needs are much different from other consumers.

Nearly 40 million Americans have a permanent disability, the number of Americans 45-64 is expected to increase by one third in the next decade, and more children than ever are helping with housework.

Manufacturers are becoming more sensitive to the needs of people with physical limitations, older people and the very young. Today's products reflect these needs, especially in the kitchen.

Considering the needs of the least-able user is the key to modifying or designing houses, work areas and products that everybody can use. This might range from simple and inexpensive measures such as using a potato masher to turn knobs on a range; removing cabinet doors for easier access or something more extensive, such as building a kitchen around an adaptable "universal design."

A universal design includes wide, barrier-free aisles and smooth floors to allow for wheelchairs and walkers to move easily about. Work surfaces of varying heights accommodate those who are short or tall or who work seated. Good contrast between cabinets and appliances and in graphics on control panels are helpful to those with limited vision.

In the cooking area, built-in products are the most adaptable to special needs. Installing a drop-in range or cooktop at 32 inches — compared to the standard 36-inch counter height — can be a boon for wheelchair cooks — or at a higher level for a person who can't stoop or bend.

Microwave ovens are especially useful for people with limited physical abilities. They can be installed at any height. The shallow cooking cavity is easy to reach, there's no flame or heating element, and the interior stays cool.

Side-by-side refrigerator/freezers have narrow doors for easier handling. Some models have deep door shelves and bins, baskets and shelves that pull out for easier access and use.

There are many simple in-home modifications that can help physically limited people. For example, elevate appliances with front-opening doors (dishwashers, clothes dryers) to the height needed for a wheelchair user or someone who can't stoop or bend. Lower a built-in oven for wheelchair use or raise it for someone with back problems.

Whirlpool Corp. offers use and care guides and microwave oven cookbooks in Braille, large type or on audio cassettes. Control panel overlays for many kitchen and laundry products are done in Braille that are free to visually impaired owners of Whirlpool appliances. For assistance, call the Whirlpool Appliance Connection line at 1-800-253-1301. For TDD users, the number is 1-800-334-6889.

More information is available in brochures from Whirlpool. "Universal Design" looks into the features of the adaptable kitchen; "Designs for Independent Living" offers advice for modifying, remodeling or designing kitchens and laundry areas; and "Tools for Independent Living" emphasizes the use of everyday tools and products as aids to appliance operation.

Whirlpool says its brochures are based on research and suggestions from disabled people, rehabilitation specialists and appliance experts. For a copy of the set, send a postcard to Whirlpool Corp., Dept. NCW, P.O. Box 5551, Kalamazoo 49003-5551.

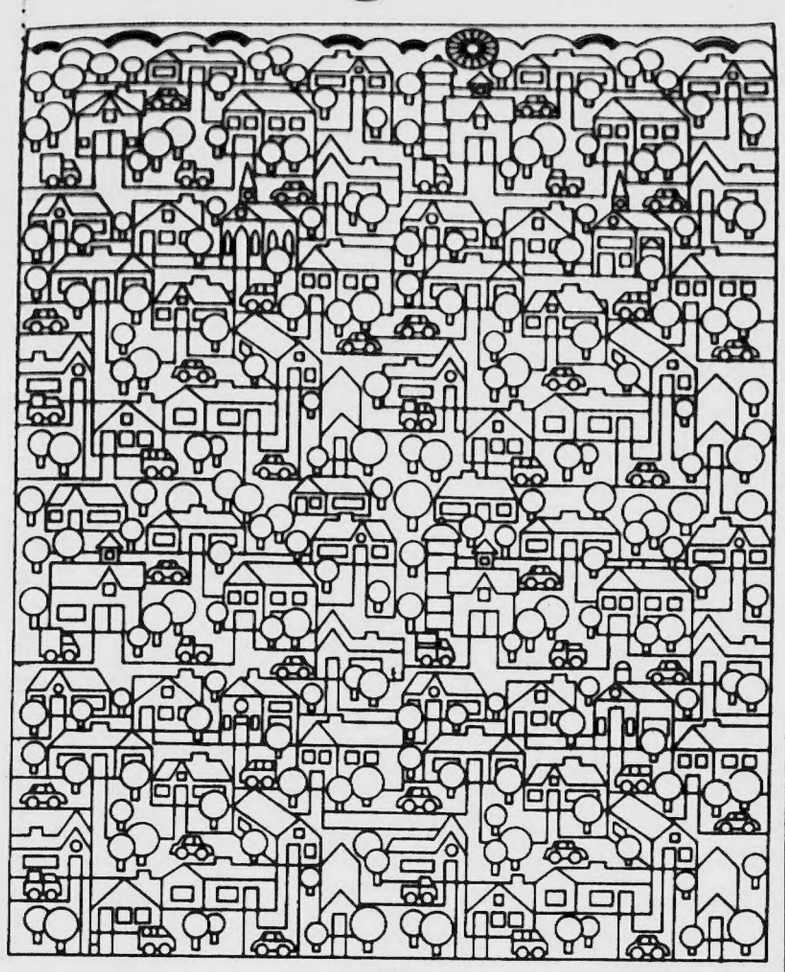
Housing demand to be come sharply segmented



As the baby boomer starts worrying about retirement and the baby bust matures, housing demand will become more sharply segmented than in the past, according to a report from the National Association of Realtors.

The study, "Demographics in the U.S. — The Segmenting of Housing Demand," anticipates strong housing demand and stable house values over the next decade in spite of the smaller baby bust population producing fewer prospective buyers than the baby boomers.

The demand will be fueled by widely varied housing needs — for affluent trade-up baby boom couples, baby boomers thinking about retirement and growing numbers of non-traditional households and immigrants, the report says.

"THE HEALTHY markets will offer diversity. They will have a variety of niche-oriented housing," said NAR President Ira Gribin.

The study explores several current and projected demographic changes that may have the greatest effect upon the housing industry over the next decade. Foremost among these are the changing age structure and housing composition of the U.S. population.

The total number of households in the nation rose by an average of 1.3 million annually during the 1980s, dropping from 1.7 million annually during the 1970s. The population ages 25-34, the group at which household formation is typical, is getting smaller, while the age group 65 and older is getting larger.

The number of married-couple households is declining. The decline is being countered by an increase in single-person households, female-headed households, non-family households and a larger number of 18- to 24-year-old men living with their parents. Additionally, th average household size dropped from 3.13 people in 1960 to 2.66 people in 1987.

HOUSEHOLDS ARE moving more frequently, which is causing and will continue to cause a higher housing turnover rate. Legal immigration, notably by Asians and Hispanics, is increasing. The average rate of 570,000 was 30 percent higher in the 1980s than in the 1970s.

Increased demand by foreigners seeking to rent or buy in the Unites States will contribute to housing demands in the 1990s, the study says.

The changing needs of changing households will help offset a drop in housing demand due to the smaller baby bust population, said NAR chief economist John A. Tuccillo. Predictions that house values will sour due to a decline in demand are too simplistic, and such projections fail to consider the continuing effect the baby boom generation will have, Tuccillo said.

INCREASED SAVINGS by baby boomers, combined with a smaller federal deficit and a larger Social Security trust fund, likely will push interest rates lower over the next seven years, he said.

Baby boomers previously unable to buy houses will be buying. "As the leading edge of the baby boom moves through its peak earning years, demand will pick up for second homes and retirement homes," Tuccillo said.

He predicted that demand will shift significantly toward "smaller units in sunny climates."

IN SPITE OF house purchases by baby boomers and baby busters, houses will continue to be too expensive for poorer consumers. According to the study, it appears that a widening gap in household demographics is accompanied by a growing disparity in house-buying power.

For example, the study says, typical real incomes for families in the highest-earning fifth of the population rose by more than 29 percent between 1970 and 1986. But real income for families in the lowest-earning fifth rose by just 9 percent.

WEDDING PLANS

Looking good

Latest in attendant and guest fashion trends

"Dear Abby: I am furious with my daughter. She is planning her wedding and just called to instruct me that I'm supposed to buy a mauve dress so I won't clash with the bridesmaids or the mother of the groom (whom she is telling to wear gray).

I want a dress that makes me look wonderful, not like part of the window treatment. For heaven's sake, I'm only 43 years old!

Please tell me the best way to handle this. I'm not going in mauve anything.

— Too Young to Be a Dowdy Dowager"

At a formal wedding, women wear street-length dresses or suits in the daytime, long, ballerina or tea-length dresses in the evening. Attire for men is coordinated to their escorts, unless otherwise stated on the invitation.

PITY THE poor bride. Not only does she have to look stunning on her wedding day, she has to attend to a myriad of details — not the least of which is advising the bridal party what to wear (think of the pictures!).

But in her book, "Dear Abby on Planning Your Wedding," (Andrews and McMeel), Abigail Van Buren tells prospective brides: "Mothers have changed — they work, they work out, they have full lives, today they look younger at 45 than 45 looked in the '50s."

So what's a daughter to do?

Abby continues, "First, the only style you should set is that of your wedding party — meaning the bridesmaids and groomsmen. The day of telling mothers what to wear is past. You should, instead, encourage them to select whatever they feel good in. Unlike wedding gowns, they will want dresses they can wear again and again."

With more mature brides making the decisions, common sense reigns in today's weddings. Maids aren't stuck wearing a mountain of peach satin that is unflattering, expensive and screams, "Bridesmaid!"

Just as styles for bridal party mothers have gone from dowdy to elegant (beaded, rhinestone-studded or tapestry jackets worn with chiffon skirts; pastel satin fitted suits), bridesmaid styles have moved toward sophistication.

You'll see lush velvets with alluring lines, floral and metallic brocades, taffeta with water-color prints, and plenty of black (yes, black) — combined with white.

In fact, colors in general have changed, advises Los Angeles bridal consultant Lynn Jeter.

"It used to be soft pastels — pinks, lavender and light greens," she says. "There are no color boundaries any more. We're seeing everything, including fuchsia and red — the latter is popular in December and February (for Christmas and Valentine's Day weddings)

"Colors are more vibrant. I did a wedding in which the bride combined electric blue with ivory for the maid's dresses and the table coverings. It was absolutely beautiful."

Bridesmaids certainly don't have to wear blue, but here's another letter from Abby's book that is bound to make any bride pause:

Dear Abby: After seeing all the letters in your column from people who complain about the high cost of being a bride or bridesmaid — I want to report a beautiful scene I just witnessed.

"The July wedding was formal — at least the bride and groom were formally attired. But the bridesmaids' dresses were outstanding in their design. They were street-length navy blue linen chemises with high V-necklines and a pleated flounce at the hem. The chemise line was elegant on the slender bridesmaids and flattering to the heavier

Floral finesse

Nuptial blooms, from bouquets to decor

WEDDINGS AND flowers like love and marriage, just seem to go together.

Brides in ancient times carried nuptial garlands and medieval brides wore wreaths of fresh blooms.

Bouquets and floral arrangements are an integral part of your wedding, and the florist should be one of the first people you contact. Flowers should be ordered at least three months before the nuptials.

There are floral fashions just as there are trends in bridal fashions. Wildflower bouquets reflected the natural mood of the '70s. In the '80s, bouquets got more lavish and traditional. As we enter the '90s, the choice of blooms is entirely up to you.

"The philosophy is 'you are the bride,'" says florist Ryan Gaine. "The emphasis is on the bride's individuality."

"There is a loose, relaxed feel in bridal bouquets," says florist Jani Adair. "Bouquets are less stiff and flowers, such as roses, are open instead of the traditional closed look. The garden effect is very popular. You'll see natural styles with long stems and loose, garden-gathered looking bouquets."

While many brides still opt for traditional nosegays of white, ivory and champagne blooms, more want a shot of color, ranging from soft pastels to vivid hues.

"THIS FOLLOWS THE garden look," notes florist Eve Davis.

If you have your heart set on carrying daffodils in a December wedding, you probably can.

"In the past few years, there has been a dramatic increase in the year-round availability of flowers at florists across the country," floral designer Bobby Wiggins told Bride's magazine.

Nonetheless, florists encourage brides to use seasonal blossoms. Not only are they more abundant and healthy than hothouse flowers, they are more affordable.

Shapes for bouquets range from the traditional clusters to elegant cascades. Sweet nosegays are perfect for weddings with an Edwardian flair. Sophisticated brides can carry arm bouquets down the aisle.

Year-round flowers include orchids, freesia, iris and rhubrum lily. Asters, daffodils, dahlias, delphinium, jasmine, pansies and peonies are spring-summer specialties. For fall and winter weddings, try amaryllis, calla lilies, heather and holly.

Your floral needs don't stop with bouquets. Look for creative ways to use flowers.

Elaborately decorated wedding and reception sites may only need simple flower arrangementss, whereas a spartan reception hall will look more festive with garlands of flowers, potted palms and bright centerpieces.

For church weddings, use flowers and greenery on pews and at the alter. For a Jewish wedding, request a festive chuppah festooned with flowers.

The florist can also come up with arrangements for buffet and serving tables. Flowers make a nice accent for serving platters and a fresh way to top a wedding cake.

Whether it's traditional roses and tulips or more exotic blooms, the bouquet adds a fresh finishing touch to any bride's ensemble. Bridal gown is from After Six Bridal Collection.

CENTERPIECES CAN also create the right mood for your wedding. Baskets filled with black-eyed Susans and hydrangea are perfect for an outdoor wedding. For more formal affairs, use candles and all-white blooms, such as calla lilies and white freesia. (Arrangements should be no higher than 16 inches.)

Another idea is to have the flowers for your decor reflect the region: sultry magnolias for a Southern wedding or terra cotta bowls filled with exotic blossoms in the Southwest.

Start by looking for a florist through recommendations. Friends can give you some names and the people at the wedding site and reception hall can often recommend a good florist.

Arrange for your first consultation to take place at the florist's shop, says Bride's magazine. The shop should be efficiently run and the salespeople courteous. And the flowers should look fresh.

Bring along photos of bouquet styles, centerpieces and arrangements you like, as well as fabric swatches from the bridal and attendants' dresses. Also bring a sketch or photo of your dress, if possible.

Let the florist know how many guests will attend, whether it's a sit-down meal or buffet and how many tables will be set up.

You should also arrange for a consultation at the wedding and reception sites or at least give the florist the addresses for both if he or she is not already familiar with the sites.

After the florist has an idea of the look you want to achieve, set a budget. Cost-cutting tips include using seasonal locally grown blossoms, as well as mixing dried and silk flowers.

DON'T FORGET TO order boutonnieres for the groom, fathers and ushers, as well as corsages for the mothers.

When you have agreed on the floral arrangements, both of you should sign a written agreement. Include the date and time for the flowers to be delivered, what types of flowers, bouquet size, number of corsages and boutonnieres. Also describe any vases, balloons or ribbons the florist promises to provide, as well as the name of the person who will set up the site.

Wedding traditions—many are a-changing

By Cathie Breidenbach
special writer

FORMAL receiving lines, the traditional tossing of garters, rice and bouquets, the groom's cake and even the little plastic bride and groom atop the wedding cake are fast dwindling in popularity.

Traditionalists needn't despair, however. Weddings still make people teary-eyed and brides still choose to walk down the aisle in once-in-a-lifetime dresses, but even the rituals of romance change with the times. Today's brides and grooms are abandoning some of the rigid rigamarole of centuries-old etiquette in favor of greater flexibility. They're changing the cookie cutter sameness of wedding receptions in favor of parties with individualized touches.

TODAY'S WEDDINGS reflect the busy lifestyles and limited time of modern brides and grooms who are, on the average, older when they marry than they were a few decades ago. More modern brides-to-be have finished college and begun their careers when they decide to marry. They simply don't have months to dither over details of their weddings. And there are brides and grooms embarking on second marriages. They want ritual and romance to mark the occasion but they want it to be clearly different and often more sophisticated than the billowing white dress and veil routine of first weddings.

The staff at the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham, one of Michigan's two four-star hotels, hosts wedding ceremonies and wedding receptions during every season of the year. They make it their business to know the latest trends so they can help perspective brides and grooms make informed decisions. In fact, they offer a complete wedding planning service.

Kitty Adler, marketing director at the hotel, said: "Busy professional people don't always have the time to plan for a wedding, so they come some place that they can do it all — invitations, menu, flowers, band, pastries, cake. Someone can literally walk in the door and say 'I'm getting married June 1. Here's my budget. I'll be there. You take care of everything.'"

Diane Fillion, catering manager, says that nowadays "everybody seems to get in the act (of planning weddings). Grooms included. The father comes along for taste tests. Ten years ago, we dealt with the mother of the bride. Now the bride and groom plan their own wedding and mom gets invited along."

THE STAFF AT THE Townsend knows from experience what's "in" with weddings and receptions and they also know what is on its way out.

Formal receiving lines are on the way out. "Nobody ever knows what to say anyway," said Adler of receiving lines and repetitive, inane things people say to satisfy protocol.

Added Adler. "Brides and grooms get tired of regimenting guests" by making them wait in tedious, formal lines. As an alternative, many bridal pairs nowadays go around and visit every table during the reception. "It doesn't seem so staged."

In the Townsend's Regency Room, many bridal parties forego the traditional head table in favor of an oval table in the center of the room. Adler said that the bride and groom often "don't want to be on display."

Bonnie LePage, managing director of the Townsend, said: That way (with a central table), they're more like part of the party. It's a nicer alternative." Plus guests are less likely to feel slighted because they've been seated far from the head table.

Brides and grooms are aware of healthy eating trends and don't want to sabotage the medical diets of their guests. Fillion said health trends play a part in the move to offer two entree choices instead of of the usual one-for-all. Nearly all invitations now include response cards, and brides sometimes ask guests to check their entree choice on the cards — perhaps boneless chicken breast with artichoke hearts and lemon capers and beef tenderloin. All menus are predictable. One bride and groom wanted a Southwest theme and served eggs benedict with salsa, guacamole and corn bread.

When it comes to desserts, Le Page said, "Many couples perfer to offer guests a fabulous pastry table or sweets and fresh fruits instead of cake, or sometimes in addition to cake. Groom's cakes and bride and groom dolls atop wedding cakes have nearly disappeared at Townsend receptions. "If they do have (have a plastic bride and groom)," Adler said, " they do it as more of a joke and try to find the ugliest ones they can."

Fillion says "Everybody expects wedding cake to taste lousy, "but brides are departing from the traditional bland white cake in favor of fresh fruit and mousse fillings, chocolate cake or even cheesecake. Napkins and match books personalized with the names of the bridal pair are also disappearing.

LePage said "People are putting money into the quality of food and flowers. They're eating less and drinking less. Bar bills aren't what they used to be and receptions aren't the bashes they were 30 years ago when people got drunk and toasted all night."

RATHER THAN AN open bar during the cocktail hour, many brides choose to have guests served fine wine, champagne and hors d'oeuvres on silver trays.

The old custom of throwing rice at the departing pair is losing ground — and so is tossing the bouquet and garter. But calligraphy on invitations and place cards and videos are "in." So are limos as the means of transportation for the bridal party.

"Limos are very trendy, even if they're only going to go a block," said Adler.

Live music is also "in." "They don't want dead silence, so we see a lot of pianists and harpists." When a dance band plays, musicians try to please everyone by including a multi-generational mix, some music for friends of the parents and some for the younger generation. At Townsend receptions, the bridal pair almost never leave early. Instead, they stay to enjoy the party until the end, then invite guests to their room at the hotel to continue celebrating.

Even the most deeply rooted traditions, the wedding ring and bridal gown, are changing.

"Rings are more substantial than ever with bigger diamonds and more stylized settings," said LePage. Eternity rings are popular and more brides are choosing one, stylish ring rather than matching two-ring sets. The old-fashioned scenario had the groom picking out the ring and surprising the bride with it. The modern scenario has the couple going together to choose rings. None of the Townsend staff can recall a wedding when the groom didn't also wear a ring.

LePage said she sees more slim line bridal dresses these days, "fewer big pouffie dresses." They also see fewer headpieces and veils and more bare shoulders and cleavage in modern bridal gowns than in the past.

Bouquets are less "arranged." Sometimes brides carry just one elegant, long-stemmed cala lily or a white orchid. Mothers of the bride and groom seldom wear corsages any more. Instead, they're presented with a single flower to carry. Flowers at the reception reflect the same casual elegance. Popular centerpieces feature long stemmed flowers loosely arranged in a glass vase.

Whatever the planning decision, LePage tells brides and grooms, "Try to get the best quality you can and let your needs be known." She adds that even in the romance and ritual of weddings, "there are no hard and fast rules anymore."

'Brides and grooms get tired of regimenting guests by making them wait in tedious, formal lines.'

Wedding dress by your own hand

By Cathleen Collins Lee
special writer

ACCORDING to Toby Haberman, the bridal counter at Haberman's Fabrics is a very busy place on Saturday mornings.

"There are dozens of brides and their mothers lined up here," says the co-owner of this family store. "There are yards of lace and silk all over the place. The customers are so pleased to see the different options we have here, and they all check out what the other (brides) are doing."

But even Haberman was surprised by a recent industry study showing that 40 percent of brides sew their own dresses or have a dress made for them, rather than buy it ready made. She wasn't too surprised though — to her, the advantages are obvious.

Here are some tips for makihg your own gown:

- Plan to be finished at least a week before the wedding.
- If you are beading the lace yourself, do so before applying the lace to the gown.
- Keep the dress, other pattern pieces and lace in plastic bags to protect against dust, dirt and spills.
- Make a rough, muslin sample for a fitted bodice.
- Use a clean, sharp shears for fabric and embroidery scissors for lace.
- Use new glass-head or silk pins to avid snags in fine fabrics.
- Use a new sewing machine needle in a size appropriate to your fabric.
- Make sure your iron is clean.
- Wash your hands and use hand cream to avoid pulls on fine fabrics. But leave time for the cream to be absorbed so that it doesn't cause stains.

Those who sew themselves or work with a dressmaker have more options because they can combine styles that they like and which flatter them, Haberman says. Because the dress is made for them, it's going to fit them perfectly. And often they will have a better quality dress for less money. But even for those who plan to buy a wedding dress ready made, Haberman feels her store has a lot to offer.

"IT'S PROBABLY the most expensive and important dress a woman will buy," says Haberman. "I can't imagine making that kind of purchase without learning a lot about it. People at a ready-to-wear shop are not going to take the time to explain about all the different fabrics and laces. This is the bridal resource for the state of Michigan — we can help people make an educated decision."

The Royal Oak store, founded by Haberman's in-laws in 1958 and formerly known as House of Fabrics, does carry many options for bridal dresses. In addition to silks, there are polyesters, acetates and taffetas that can work as well as silks and cost less. Other fabrics there include tapestries, moire, velvet, charmeuse, and jacquard. The shop also has an entire case of different colored French laces — re-embroidered, beaded, appliqued, and plain.

Haberman says that the staff is made up of experienced seamstresses who can point out some of the many options available. They can show how to combine patterns and how to choose materials that fit within a budget. They tell you about shortcuts, like having the store "serge" or bind the edges of the bridal veiling for a nominal cost. And they might point out that if you want beaded lace, you can save money by beading it yourself. One customer who took them up on that idea handsewed 3,000 beads on her wedding gown.

Haberman estimates that the materials for a wedding gown could cost from $50 to $500. If you use a dressmaker, those costs can vary, too.

"Sometimes you known a dear little lady who likes to keep her fingers busy who will sew it for you for $50," she says. "But depending on the complexity of the design, the number of fittings, the difficulty of handling the fabric, and whether the lace needs to be beaded, it could cost $150 to $500."

"But even if you're in the upper range for both fabrics and dressmaking and you spend $1,000 on your dress, you're going to have good stuff," she adds. "You're talking about a dress you couldn't touch for under $3,000. And it's going to fit you."

ACCORDING TO Haberman, sewing a wedding dress is not as complicated as you might think.

"The techniques involved are very basic," she says. "It's not like tailoring, where you have to be able to roll collars or make welt pockets. It's all straight seams. And making veils or headpieces is really easy — I tell people their little brother could make it with one hand."

'It's a combination of traditional values and '90s choices. Forty years ago, you wouldn't have gotten married in a pink beaded gown, or had your bridesmaid wear black.'

Haberman's manager Patty Aumann (left) helps bride-to-be Molly McMillan of West Bloomfield choose bridal veils. Watching is Molly's mother, Mary Jo McMillan.

For those with less talented little brothers, Haberman's offers a seminar every February on how to make your own wedding gown. It features recent customers modelling their own gowns, and includes tips on how to work with difficult, expensive fabrics.

Haberman says that although interest in sewing dropped dramatically 10 or 15 years ago when many women began working outside the home, a small but rising number have taken up sewing again. She has customers coming in on the recently completed I-696 freeway from as far away as Ann Arbor, St. Clair Shores and Flint to take some of the many classes offered at the store and to buy materials.

"It's a demand for quality and for self-expression," she says of the increase in sewing. "You know how when people cook nowadays it's gourmet cooking? Well, home sewing is gourmet sewing. People are taking some of their limited and precious free time and doing something creative with it. They feel good and the end product is wonderful."

HABERMAN SAYS HER shop is benefitting not only by the renewed interest in sewing, but also by the return to more traditional weddings as well.

"Interest in wedding dresses slacked off greatly in the '60s and early '70s," she says. "People were getting married in fields of daisies in their blue jeans. And that was fine, it suited the times. But now people seem to be returning to traditional values and traditional weddings."

That doesn't mean that they're wearing the same dresses people wore in the '50s, though.

"It's a combination of traditional values and '90s choices," Haberman says with a smile. "Forty years ago, you wouldn't have gotten married in a pink beaded gown, or had your bridesmaids wear black."

ones. They all wore wide-brimmed straw hats, a simple strand of pearls, and short white gloves. Best of all — that dress will go to the office, to a dinner party, anywhere!

"And the mother of the bride wore a dress of a similar design in beige. The groomsmen, unlike the groom in his 'tails,' wore dark business suits. They looked so tailored and classy."

ABBY NOTES THAT more brides and grooms are electing to have their groomsmen wear dark suits. "Not only does it save the cost of time and money for rentals, but the man's own suit is likely to fit much better since he would have had it altered specially for him."

If you do use rented tuxedos, Abby suggests, "to prevent disaster on the wedding day, please instruct every one, from groom to groomsman, to try on the whole outfit once more before leaving the store. Too many guys have discovered that they made the pants too long — 20 minutes before the ceremony begins!"

Formalwear styles for men reflect new, rich fabrics and designs, observes Bride's magazine, which "harken back to a more lavish age when a gentleman dressed with exquisite care and imagination for the great events of his life."

This translates into merino wool tuxedos with satin shawl collars; vests and waistcoats of silk jacquard in rich, vivid colors and gold-threaded tapestries; notched or peaked lapels; black wool gabardine pants with sleek black satin waistbands; imported voile shirts with prewoven pleats and French cuffs; black-on-black diamond (or window pane) patterned dinner jackets, paisley bow ties and cummerbunds you get the idea.

When asked about attire for child attendants, Bride's magazine gives these suggestions from Pat Kerr, a bridal gown designer in Memphis, Tenn:

Children's fashions should reflect the overall tone of the wedding. For a semi-formal or formal wedding, a flower girl may wear a style similar to the bride's gown (with a higher back or neckline, of course), perhaps in silk or taffeta. A junior bridesmaid might wear a dress similar to your maids' (in the same color but perhaps with a drop waist or other style suited to a younger figure.

For a ring bearer, consider English-style knickers of silk taffeta, with tab ties or elastic; a silk shirt with a Peter Pan collar, or an antique cotton shirt with a lace collar. Older boys may wear all white or off-white; a junior groomsman, a tuxedo to match other male attendants.

Guests should heed this advice from Modern Bride magazine: "At a formal wedding, women wear street-length dresses or suits in the daytime, long, ballerina, or tea-length dresses in the evening. The attire for men is coordinated to their escorts, unless otherwise stated on the invitation."

From the maid of honor to the flower girl, attendants look great in sweetly traditional dresses. These, by the way, were made from Simplicity patterns. Children's fashions should reflect the overall tone of the wedding. The flower girl may wear a style similar to the bride's gown with a higher back or neckline in perhaps a different material.
