Mayflower granted tax break

Plymouth city commissioners gave the Mayflower Hotel a tax break. But it was cut by $12,900 after residents showed up to a commission meeting to complain.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

The city doesn't give me a tax break, so why should the Mayflower Hotel get one?

That's what some residents and business owners told city commissioners on Monday, as they considered a $50,000 tax break for the hotel owners who are seeking a $2 million bank loan for a renovation project.

After hearing citizen comments and some debate amongst themselves, commissioners accepted Commissioner Donald Dismuke's motion to cut the Mayflower's tax break by $12,900 – and to forgive only interest and penalties on back taxes charged to the hotel.

What it means is the Mayflower is to pay $142,000 in back taxes owed to the city by October, in exchange for a $37,000 tax break.

One of two commissioners voting against the motion was Commissioner Joe Koch. "I'm just concerned we're getting involved where we don't need to be involved," he said. Also, Koch said there should be more of a guarantee from the hotel's owners that they won't build on the adjacent public Weidman lot, and that they will keep the establishment a hotel.

Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury also voted against the tax break, saying the current owners accepted back tax payments when they bought the hotel. "Any number of businesses in this community work and struggle on their own," he said.

Downtown business owner Frank Kuzak told commissioners, "These guys aren't going to crumble because you won't give them $50,000." He also asked what guarantee the city had that the $2 million sought in a bank loan by the hotel owners would actually be spent on the hotel.

Don Schneider of Deer Street told officials, "This deal stinks. You're giving them a $50,000 gift. If this passes we'll be dealing with another

Edwards wins treasurer's post

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Ron Edwards credited hard work for his win Tuesday over long-time Plymouth Township Treasurer Mary Brooks.

"I'm very happy," Edwards said. "In the last six weeks its been 18 hour days seven days a week," he said.

In the Republican primary, Edwards got 1,694 votes to 1,535 for Brooks, who is serving her third term as township treasurer. Edwards, a certified public accountant, runs unopposed in the November general election.

"I can't be sorry," said Brooks, who was upbeat on election night.

"I've had 12 years as treasurer and 11 years as deputy treasurer. I can't be sorry and I wish him all the luck in the world," she said.

"I tried to be honest, I tried to be good, I have never maliciously slandered anybody, I can hold my head up and be lady," she said.

Asked why he won, Edwards said, "It was a lot of hard work, talking to the voters, letting them know what I'm about, walking neighborhoods, making telephone calls."

"I had so many people working for me, my old English teacher went door to door, it makes you feel good," he said.

Another contributor to Edwards' win was likely a township auditor's report this summer that concerned some township trustees. The report stated that tax payments collected by the township treasurer's office were not being deposited quickly enough to banks. Brooks moved to correct the problem, stressing nothing dishonest was happening. But Edwards and some township trustees said they were concerned about lost interest.

James Kukalis, carrying daughter Ciara, 3, at 7 p.m. after he voted at the Plymouth Township annex said, "I went with Edwards."

A man who declined to be named voting at 6:30 p.m. at West Middle School said, "I voted for Mary Brooks because I know her a little bit and it seems like she's doing a good job."

A Plymouth Township man who declined to be named said after voting at West Middle School, "I voted for Edwards, it's a good time to change, not that she did anything wrong."

A Plymouth businessman voting at West Middle School said he chose Edwards. "There's a time to turn it in. If I ran my business that way they'd probably kick me out," he said.

Another Plymouth Township man voting at West Middle School said, "I voted one race,

Law too much for Vorva in primary

BY KEVIN BROWN

Incumbent 20th District State Rep. Gerald Law easily defeated challenger and former state representative Jerry Vorva in Tuesday's Republican primary.

Law will face Democrat Deborah Hoadley in the general election in November, in hopes of winning his sixth term in the state House.

Hoadley was unopposed in the Democratic primary.

Law had 6,359 votes in the district to 3,805 for Vorva, who served in the Legislature from 1992-94.

"I'm very happy," Law said. "I look forward to getting back to Lansing in September and looking at some pain management legislation as well as being lead sponsor on increasing DNA testing for juveniles," he said — legislation that will make it easier to identify felons.

Asked why he won, Law said, "I think I did a very good job in responding to legislation for my community. I did a good job with constituents who called my office for help."

On his loss, Vorva said, "There's another day. I'll still be there to study the issues than concern the district. It's just a loss, that's all you look at it as."

Vorva, a former Plymouth police officer and city commissioner, said special interest support for Law and a low voter turnout contributed to his defeat.

"You have a lot of voter apathy and when you couple it with the same special interest groups that get their numbers out it's an uphill battle, but that doesn't mean you can't fight the battle," he said.

"Right To Life and the MEA (Michigan Education Association teachers union) have a mechanized machine. If you look at people who voted for me they're not part of a special interest group."

Parks millage passes without suburban support

WAYNE COUNTY PARKS

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Wayne County's proposal to increase taxes to fund parks projects lost in western Wayne County, but won with Detroit's vote Tuesday.

Plymouth-area voters followed the suburban trend, with city residents voting 436 for to 583 against, and township voters numbering 1,585 in favor to 2,135 against.

Taxes will increase by a quarter mill, which to the owner of a $100,000 house means a $12.50 a year tax increase.

"I'm just ecstatic," Wayne County Parks Director Hurley Coleman said Wednesday morning after a late night of monitoring vote totals. The tax hike, called Proposition P on the ballot, won in only three communities, Highland Park, Trenton and Detroit, but got enough votes for approval, with (unofficially) 104,861 yes votes and 98,205 no votes. Detroit supported the proposal with 65,126 yes votes and 36,490 no votes.

"If we had planned for a dramatic finish we couldn't have planned it better. It came down to the wire," Coleman said, after some early reports that the millage had failed.

"It's not a resounding victory, but a very, very important statement," Coleman said.

The vote was close in many communities. "We were facing an incredible wave of anti-tax and anti-government sentiment," he said.

"This says something about parks, and that's the kind of thing we'll have to build on," he said.

A master plan approved by the Wayne County Commission in July will become the action plan, Coleman said. A process will be developed to start the projects, and then the contracts will go before the county commission.

Man charged with assault

David Warnick, 39, of Plymouth is scheduled to appear before 35th District Judge John MacDonald at 9 a.m. Friday for a pretrial examination on charges of domestic assault and attempting to obstruct a police officer.

Warnick pleaded not guilty at his arraignment in 35th District Court July 22.

Plymouth police were called to Warnick's residence at 561 Deer St. shortly after 9 p.m. July 21 by Barbara Glumm, Warnick's 58-year-old girlfriend. Glumm was placed on probation following a recent incident in which she stabbed her boyfriend at their home.

Upon their arrival, officers saw the suspect walking from the house toward the street with a woman close by. Police allege the man threw a partially-full bottle of whiskey at the woman, missing her.

The suspect, who police claim was intoxicated and argumentative, told police he was upset with his girlfriend because she intended to sell the house they live in, and that "that made him angry."

He claimed he'd been cut by a knife. When asked to show police his injuries, he allegedly "became combative, taking a boxer's stance and making fists, screaming for us to take him to jail," officers said.

The woman said she was watching a religious show on TV with her mother as her boyfriend grilled hot dogs outside on the grill. She said that when he came back in the house, he was in an unprovoked rage, calling her obscene names. The victim said the suspect grabbed her by the left arm and began throwing her around. He grabbed her throat and began choking her, police reported.

The victim's brother, who lives across the street, came over and attempted to take his mother back to his house when the suspect shoved him onto the couch.

The suspect was struck by police after he allegedly resisted arrest, officers said.

Police eventually overpowered the suspect, who allegedly continued kicking them. He was handcuffed and taken to a local hospital, where he was treated and released.

City meetings to be televised

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

By late fall, Plymouth city commission meetings could be televised.

And for those who like to attend the meetings in person, improvements are slated for the public address system in the commission room, to make it easier to hear and be heard.

Money to pay for up to $80,000 for equipment to allow for videotaping and sound improvements in the commission room is coming from Continental Cablevision, as part of the franchise renewal agreement with the city.

City Manager Steve Walters said improving the sound system and tape recording capability in the commission room "is critical now because of the functional problems with the present equipment."

Office space to the rear of the commission room would be converted to a video production studio for taping meetings and other public service program development, Walters said in a report to city commissioners.

That would mean the current senior citizen's office at city hall would be relocated across the hall to an employee lounge area. The lounge would be moved to the former fire hall kitchen space.

Walters said a wall would be built to replace the movable curtain along the back wall of the commission room. "This will provide sound proofing for the studio, a window for the meeting video operators and a door between the two rooms," he said.

The plan calls for the commission room ceiling to be repainted to provide better light and a better appearance for videotaping.

The project to improve the sound quality in the commission room includes suspending two microphones from the ceiling over the audience.

Walters said this would "allow citizen comments to be heard clearly without the formality of going to a microphone stand location to speak."

"This will improve the audio for those attending the meeting, for the tape recording for transcribing minutes, and later for the videotaping of meetings," he said.

The money will also be used to make available listening equipment for hearing impaired citizens attending meetings.

Thalner Electronics of Ann Arbor is helping the city administration plan the audio and video improvements to the commission room.

School bus route splits local family

By M.B. Dillon

Kindergartner-to-be Jessica Weber has looked forward to going to school with her sister, Amanda, especially since she attended Kindergarten Round-Up at Bentley Elementary.

Recently, though, Jessica found out she'll be bused to Hulsing Elementary, while Amanda, who will be in fourth grade, will return to Bentley.

Several of the Webers' neighbors are in the same situation, and are unhappy about the change. They plan to petition the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education at its Aug. 13 meeting not to bus kindergartners with siblings attending Bentley.

District officials say changes had to be made due to overcrowding.

"It's because enrollment at Bentley was going to be over 700 students," said Judy Evola, community relations director.

Evola said she spoke to the Webers' mother, Leila, and explained the situation. Informational letters have been sent to parents, Evola added.

"Two years ago at Bentley, enrollment was 440," said Evola. "To accommodate the growth, they're going to be using all the rooms in the building for regular classrooms, including the rooms used for art and child care.

"All kindergarten students who would already be riding a bus instead will be transported to Hulsing for kindergarten. That's about 50-60 students," said Evola.

Leila Weber said parents were given a different impression earlier.

"At Kindergarten Round-Up, principal Reeves, who is no longer principal, stated that there were already 140 kindergartners, and that he wasn't sure what was going to happen, except that they were going to rezone," said Weber.

"I remember one mom asking if siblings would stay together. Mr. Reeves said, 'I don't see them ever separating siblings.'"

Weber said she heard from a couple neighbors over the weekend that siblings would be assigned to different schools. She called the secretary at Bentley was told that 54 of the 140 kindergartners were being transferred to Hulsing. "She told me it was only temporary; 'Don't get upset – this happens.'"

Weber then went to the administration building and was directed to Evola. "I asked her who made this decision, and she couldn't really tell me.

"No parents were involved in this decision," Weber said. "Why are they separating siblings? It's very frustrating when you've been taking your daughter to a school for two years, saying 'This is going to be your school some day' and going to the Round-Up, expecting the same thing.

"My daughter got excited about going to school with her big sister. To have to tell her that wasn't going to happen was heartbreaking.

"I thought her older sister would say, 'Oh great, I don't have to go to school with my little sister,' but she started crying. They're closer than I thought."

Weber says she doesn't look forward to "having to run to two schools" every time there's an emergency, a conference, or a party. And it's not a school (Hulsing) that's two minutes away, but 10 or 15 minutes away," said Weber, who lives less than a mile from Bentley.

"I would move out of the district to keep my kids together. I'm looking at what is going on right now and wondering what's going to happen next year. Are they going to divide them up again?

"Other parents in our sub are just as upset. One mom is circulating a flier. If bus transportation was a problem for our kids, we would all form a car pool just to keep our kids together. I would leave work to pick her up. That is how important it is.

"The bad thing is we just bought a brand new van. Now we may have to put our house up for sale," she said. "My husband is furious we'd have to do that to keep our girls in same elementary."

It bothers Weber that boundary changes were made "prior to school getting out and here they're giving us just three weeks' notice."

Weber suggested counting the number transferred kindergartners who have siblings. "Maybe we could take a tally of that and go from there."

Evola said, "We are currently looking into that issue. Suggestions from parents are welcome."

Stay-at-home Plymouth runner takes world trek

Around the world: Jim Rawlinson has completed a run around the world, without leaving Plymouth. The photographer took up running to get in shape and has competed 25,0000 miles. He plans to start on his second trip.

STAFF PHOTO BY BILL BRESLER

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

With just his New Balance running shoes for transportation, Plymouth's Jim Rawlinson finished circumnavigating the equator July 21. The professional photographer began his 25,000-mile trek in 1980.

He didn't see the flightless cormorants, land and sea iguanas or penguins of the Galapagos Islands while traversing Ecuador's desolate lava piles. Nor did he see Colombia, Brazil, the Atlantic Ocean, Gabon, Congo or Zaire. He missed Uganda, Kenya, the Maldives Islands, Indonesia, Singapore, and the island of Nauru, stripped bare by miners.

That's because Rawlinson ran most of his 25,000 miles in downtown Plymouth, starting and finishing at his residence on Leicester Street. His daily runs varied in length from four to 10 miles. For more than a year, Rawlinson didn't miss a single day on the roads.

A physician was Rawlinson's inspiration. "I had a doctor friend who was out of shape, heavy, and a smoker," he said. "He decided he was going to overcome this, and run a marathon.

"He trained very hard, ran a marathon and accomplished his goal. Then he quit running, gained weight and started smoking again.'

"I think exercise should be an ongoing goal, and I gave myself an ongoing goal," said the owner of Rawlinson Photography.

The day he reached his goal, Rawlinson celebrated by treating 18 friends and neighbors to a breakfast he describes as a "cardiologist's nightmare."

He says completing the last four miles of his odyssey was no big deal.

"To tell you how normal it felt, I was thinking about a friend and some concerns before I realized I was running the last half mile. It was just another day."

Did Rawlinson's fellow Plymouth Kiwanians celebrate? "No. More than likely they'll fine me," he said with a laugh.

"My next goal is to do another 25,000 miles. If my body says it doesn't want to run, I may do speed walking," added Rawlinson, who does 50 sit-ups and 35 push-ups daily.

The wedding photographer ran for Vicksburg High School near Kalamazoo and for Western Michigan University but is quick to say, "I've never won a real race. I never run competitively."

Instead, Rawlinson runs for the joy of it, to enjoy nature, keep fit, stay healthy, and experience a sense of accomplishment.

So far so good. At age 56, his resting heart rate is 49. The single, 6-foot-tall Rawlinson weighs 169 — 16 pounds less than he did in college.

For several years, he didn't run at all. "I was having some irregular heartbeats. The cardiologist said I had a disorder that could result through exercise in instant arrhythmia and death. He suggested I not exercise."

"I found every day I was tense, thinking about my well being and health. I felt sicker and sicker," he said. "I was 25 percent heavier. I figured I was going to die one way or another. I felt terrible; I felt depressed.

"I started walking, and soon I started putting a little jog into it. I still have an irregular heartbeat, but my doctor says I should just be aware. If there is pain or numbness, I should go into the hospital. But I've never experienced that. I don't feel the irregular heartbeats any more," said Rawlinson. "Even doctors say we don't have all the answers.".

Rawlinson says running creates an "artificial fever" by raising body temperature, killing illness-causing microorganisms in the process. He surmises it's the reason he hasn't had the flu since 1984, and seldom gets a cold. Rawlinson says he now requires less sleep.

"I don't think I would be here if I'd continued on the way I was going. I'd be gone."

Rawlinson says he likes to share his story given the "epidemic of obesity in America" and the hefty price tag it carries for all of us. "If I could influence just one person who doesn't run, I'd be happy.

"Fitness isn't that hard to do. You just make it part of a daily habit. Do what's comfortable. Listen to your body and what it says. All it takes is two percent of your day. That comes out to about half an hour of walking, running, bicycling or aerobic exercise."

City considers bed and breakfasts

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Would you want a bed and breakfast next door?

That's the question some residents asked city commissioners on Monday. The commission was considering ordinance changes to severely restrict new bed and breakfast establishments in the city.

But others said the experience of other communities shows bed and breakfasts are an asset, as their owners often improve houses to draw business.

Taking a stand in favor of bringing bed and breakfasts to town, city commissioners unanimously voted not to accept changes proposed by the planning commission. That body had sought to keep bed and breakfasts out of Plymouth, by forcing them to meet a host of restrictions.

To settle the issue, city commissioners approved setting up a subcommittee of city commissioners and planning commissioners, to review the ordinance and make it more accommodating to bed and breakfasts.

The question of how much to regulate bed and breakfasts was first raised by city commissioners two years ago. They asked the planning commission to tackle the issue, saying they wanted to make it easier for bed and breakfasts to locate in Plymouth.

But a majority of planning commissioners saw establishment of bed and breakfasts in residential neighborhoods as potentially bad, and pushed for severe restrictions.

Mayor Ron Loiselle noted that in the past five years, only two people have asked about setting up a bed and breakfast here. So while it's not exactly a hot issue, it is generating some debate.

Jon Gary, who is running the second bed and breakfast to locate in Plymouth, said he was surprised city commissioners supported bed and breakfasts, after his experience with the planning commission.

"They said 'We don't want them,' " Gary said, adding planning commissioners ordered an engineering consultant to scour the state for the most restrictive bed and breakfast ordinances they could find.

■ 'I ask all of you to think how do you picture your neighborhood. I feel Ann Arbor Trail and Penniman are two of the most beautiful entrances to our city. Do we want to change it to commercial?'

Marion Gotshall
–Plymouth planning commissioner

The planning commission restrictions "go too far," said City Commissioner Doug Miller. He said that the current ordinance governing the establishment of bed and breakfasts gives the planning commission – which would review individual applications – plenty of flexibility.

Miller said the proposed restrictions "probably would make it pretty hard for a B and B to operate."

Planning Commissioner Marion Gotshall said, "I ask all of you to think how do you picture your neighborhood. I feel Ann Arbor Trail and Penniman are two of the most beautiful entrances to our city. Do we want to change it to commercial?"

Residents against making it easier for bed and breakfasts to operate included David MacDonald of Penniman Avenue. "I don't want somebody with a bed and breakfast next to me," he said, adding Penniman could become more commercial.

Also speaking against bed and breakfasts was former City Commissioner Bill McAninch. "You have a very beautiful city. I don't want to screw it up by putting a lot of little inns around town," he said.

Holding aloft a legal pad, City Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury said the planning commission proposed signs on the establishments would be no bigger. "It's not a detriment to a residential area," he said.

Police arrest Westland man with cans in car

Plymouth police arrested a 29-year-old Westland man shortly after 2 a.m. July 31.

Police were called to Danny's 24-hour supermarket after employees reported a suspicious red Escort in the lot.

Police stopped the driver and passenger of a red Escort near Danny's and noticed 200 flattened pop and beer cans in the car.

The driver said they'd been to Danny's to return the cans, but that the manager wouldn't accept them. The two left the store without incident.

Police checked and found the driver was wanted on traffic warrants out of Dearborn. Unable to post the $140 bond, the driver was handcuffed, arrested and taken to the police station..

Officers said the young men offered differing stories as to the origin of the cans.

The driver said they came from local bars, Ford Motor Company and a speedway. He said he and his friend flattened the cans with their feet.

The passenger said the cans came from a friend at Ford, who flattened them as a favor.

The driver was jailed. At 3:44 a.m., he was turned over to Dearborn police.

A message was sent to area departments regarding the cans.

Democrats win handily in Wayne County races

STAFF WRITER

Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney John D. O'Hair overcame a campaign to dump him to win the Democratic primary Tuesday.

O'Hair received 77,583 votes; Smith, 64,489.

"I look forward to four more years with a wonderful staff," a relieved O'Hair said Wednesday morning.

A Democratic win in the primary is tantamount to victory in Wayne County in November.

In other county races, incumbent Treasurer Raymond Wojtowicz of Hamtramck won the Democratic primary against Detroiters C. Edward Gordon, Pat O'Hara, and Beverly Kindle Walker. Wojtowicz faces Republican candidate John Kelly Wazney of Detroit in the Nov. 5 general election. In unofficial results, Wojtowicz received 67,600 votes; Gordon, 8,507; O'Hara, 23,581; Walker, 32,342. Wazney got 43,806 votes.

Incumbent Register of Deeds Forest Youngblood defeated Democratic challengers Reginald Fluker of Detroit, Ron Cleveland of Detroit, John Bernard of Detroit and Paul Citkowski of Canton Township. Youngblood faces Republican candidate Tony Spearman-Leach in the November general election. Youngblood received 64,467 votes; Fluker, 15,703; Cleveland, 19,470; Bernard, 15,229; Citkowski, 16,348. Spearman-Leach received 42,646 votes.

Sheriff's race

In the Republican race to face incumbent Sheriff Robert Ficano, Timothy John Olszewski of Livonia emerged from the pack to defeat Edwin Nassar of Dearborn, Mike Roberts of Detroit, Tim Adams of Dearborn Heights, Kenneth Kline Jr. of Canton Township, Daniel Glenn Tackett of Taylor and Robert J. Nozicka of Dearborn. Olszewski faces Ficano, a Democrat, in the November election.

Ficano received 132,064 in the Democratic primary. Olszewski emerged from the Republican pack with 11,418 votes; Roberts, 8,335; Adams, 6,566; Kline, 5,930; Tackett, 5,640; Nozicka, 4,525; Nassar, 2,842.

O'Hair, 66, defeated state Sen. Virgil Clark Smith, 49, of Detroit. He will now face the winner of the Republican primary Donald L. Knapp, 26, of Livonia who defeated Thomas Esordi, 30, of Wyandotte Tuesday. Knapp, who graduated from law school in June and took the bar exam last week, did not run a campaign in the primary. Knapp attributes his win to having two unknowns in the Republican primary.

"I didn't campaign at all apart from telling friends and neighbors to support me," he said.

Unexpected win

He doesn't expect to change his strategy for the general election and extended his congratulations to O'Hair for his win in the primary, adding he doesn't expect to be a challenge to O'Hair.

"I did not expect to win," said Knapp who received 34,691 votes compared to Esordi's 12,232.

Although O'Hair captured the Democratic nomination, it was hard-fought battle.

"I am disappointed at some of the negative efforts to unseat me," he said.

O'Hair, a Detroit resident, faced a negative campaign waged against him by Citizens for Justice, the political action arm of the Budzyn and Nevers defense fund.

Walter Budzyn and Larry Nevers, former Detroit police officers, were convicted in the death of Malice Green of Detroit. Citizens for Justice, who criticized O'Hair's prosecution methods in the case, distributed fliers calling on voters to dump O'Hair and attempted to have O'Hair's TV ads pulled, saying his conviction rate was much lower than the 92 percent he cited in the ads.

The votes in his favor show that kind of campaign is something voters don't want, O'Hair said. O'Hair was behind in the Detroit vote, but won in the suburbs.

Youngblood runs hard

Youngblood said he was feeling great Wednesday morning. "I won in every city including Detroit," he said.

He attributed his win in part to name recognition. "I've been around a long time," Youngblood, 70, said. He's been register of deeds for more than 20 years. And before that, his father, held the office.

Youngblood said he doesn't take elections for granted, pointing out incumbents went down to defeat in Macomb and Oakland counties.

He faces opposition in the general election, but pointed out Wayne County historically decides the race in the Democratic primary.

"I'll still run very hard," he said, but he has plans for the next four years, including a new computer system for the register of deeds office that will eventually allow people to get register of deeds information in local clerks' offices.

Treasurer Wojtowicz, who also won in the Democratic primary, was also pleased Wednesday morning. He won by a large margin, but pointed out the voter turnout was very low.

"We will maintain the integrity of the office," Wojtowicz said of his plans for the next four years. Wojtowicz, 67, has been treasurer since 1976.

"We view every election seriously. I'm very hopeful that Democrats will prevail in Wayne County and the state of Michigan (in November)," he said.

Sheriff candidate Olszewski couldn't be reached for comment.

County clerk Teola Hunter faced no opposition in the primary. She faces Republican candidate Sandra K. Wallace in the November election. Hunter received 121,739 in the primary and Wallace, 44,775.

Romney credits win to 'true grit,' huge volunteer support

BY TIM RICHARD

Ronna Romney, victor

Ronna Romney covered 150,000 miles of Michigan roads in her Republican U.S. Senate primary – 50 times as much as rival Jim Nicholson.

Nicholson outspent Romney $2.8 million to $1.5 million, plunking it into advertising.

Romney's months of travel – plus the work of thousands of volunteers, plus Right to Life's phone bank – gave her the edge Aug. 6. Unofficial returns showed the 52-year-old party worker and talk show host from Bloomfield Hills won a 52-48 victory over Nicholson, a Grosse Pointe chemical company CEO, in Tuesday's primary.

It was the same formula Romney used in managing Dick Headlee's 1982 primary victory for governor over two higher-spending rivals.

"It was a dead heat in Oakland County and see-saw in the (southeastern) area," said Paul Welday, her campaign manager and former chief of staff for U.S. Rep. Joe Knollenberg of Birmingham.

"We did well in Ottawa and Kent counties (GOP strongholds in western Michigan). He (Nicholson) has gotta clean our clock down here, and he's not gonna do it," said Welday.

The rivals held victory parties two miles from each other on the Lodge Freeway in Southfield, and the contrasts were apparent:

• Nicholson's gathering in the Marriott Hotel was studded with black suits and ties of executive donors. Ties were a rarity at Romney's party in the Radisson, and the young crowd favored shorts and casual garb.

• Nicholson's only visible officeholder supporter as of 10 p.m. was State Board of Education president Clark Durant, a Grosse Pointe lawyer. Romney boasted endorsements from 56 of the state's 77 legislators, though only a handful, such as Rep. Greg Kaza of Rochester Hills, showed up.

• Nicholson raised $1.4 million and matched it with $1.4 million of his own for a total of $2.8 million, but he was rarely seen on the campaign trail until the last two weeks. Romney treasurer Paul Sowerby, a Farmington Hills lawyer, said she raised $1.5 million. Looking at the cash bar in the hotel ballroom, Sowerby said, "They're getting two bucks for a diet Coke. Wish we had a cut of that."

• Campaign manager Dan Pero said Nicholson closed the gap in the final weeks because "people started to pay attention when they saw his family and background. We advertised a lot, though a lot of public attention was focused on the Olympics. They liked that he was not a politician but a businessman," said Pero, who was campaign manager in 1990 when a 20-year career politician named John Engler won the governor's office.

• Nicholson, who has backed Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer and the United Negro College Fund, had several pockets of black faces in his crowd. Romney's gathering was visited by Raymond Tanter, the University of Michigan political science professor and maverick.

Romney credited her "true grit" that carried over from her 1994 Senate bid in which she lost to E. Spencer Abraham by 22,000 votes out of 563,000 cast. This time, though analysts predicted a light turnout, Republicans cast more than 660,000 votes and gave Romney a nearly 30,000 vote edge.

Romney on Nov. 5 will face three-term U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, who was unopposed in his Democratic primary. She will be the third woman Republicans have fielded against incumbent Democratic senators. The others were Elly Peterson, the party chair, and Lenore Romney, Ronna's former mother-in-law.

The Romney-Nicholson campaign was unusually bitter, but in a near-midnight apperance the former radio personality held out an olive leaf: "I haven't had a call from Mr. Nicholson yet, but the phone lines are open." Next morning, they symbolically buried a hatchet in a unity breakfast in Warren.

Right to Life, the anti-abortion and anti-assisted suicide group, exercised the same muscle on behalf of Romney that it did in 1992 when its endorsees won every Republican congressional challenge it took on in Michigan. Christian Coalition state director Glenn Clark also took to the Fax machine on Romney's behalf – still saying the group is a "non-partisan" educational committee.

Funeral services held for Canton racer

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Last weekend's North American Midget Club race was the final race for lifelong Canton resident Clyde Perry Younce II.

Younce's midget racer was going about 120 mph when it bumped the wheels of another car at Michigan Ideal Speedway in Springport Saturday, Aug. 3, and struck the track embankment, killing Younce.

Younce leaves behind two sons, Alexander, 10, and Taylor, 7, and a fiance, Tina McGill, whom he planned to marry in October.

Father C. Richard Kelly of St. Thomas A'Becket Church planned to marry Younce and McGill, but found himself giving a eulogy Tuesday instead.

"He'd always go the extra mile for people," Kelly said. "He was just a real giving kind of guy. He had a passion for life, for the people he loved and for friendship. He had a likeable, magnetic personality. When he arrived the party began."

Younce began racing with his dad, Canton resident Clyde Younce, when he was 11, first motorcycles, then cars.

"It was a father-son team, just like my dad and I," said David Baumgartner, a driver for JB Motor Sports, which is owned by his father, Jim Baumgartner. "Perry was like a mentor to me. He was an excellent driver, he alwys finished in the top three. When Perry showed up at the track, all the drivers knew Perry would threaten their chances for first place. He was that good."

A devoted father, Younce often took his sons to the track. "Perry raced and we were there in the stands," said sister Mary McFarland. "We all had fun together."

"There are four different racing clubs, but Perry like the Lincoln Electric Series because the drivers and their teams were very supportive, like one big family, said longtime Younce crew chief Joe Danek. "When you had a problem in a race, he was always there to help you figure out what went wrong. I had so much left to learn from him."

Besides regularly finishing in the top three slots in feature races, Younce set speed records in 1996 at three Michigan tracks.

His 1,960 accumlated points made him the highest scoring racer this year. In 1991 Younce was named the Bob Higman Racing Rookie of the Year.

Jim Clark, vice president of Lincoln Electric Midget Series said Younce's death was surprising because the midget race cars are relatively safe vehicles.

"With the advancement in the structural metals produced today for these vehicles, fatatalies are extremely rare," he said. "I can remember the days when these cars didn't even have roll bars to keep the drivers from flying out when they were hit. But design uprades and new safety features give drivers security like never before.

"These drivers are like my sons. We're all shocked at the loss of such a terrific and experienced driver as Perry."

Plymouth Township resident Julia Hoglen contributed to this story.

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Two-term incumbent Wayne County Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter bested challenger Jeff Schroder in the Republican primary Tuesday despite a last minute rash of negative campaign literature.

Overall, McCotter won by an unofficial tally of 6,823 to 3,631.

Livonia voters preferred McCotter 3,741 to 1,862. Plymouth Township voters preferred McCotter 1,873 to 1,016. Plymouth city voters preferred McCotter 580 to 362. Even in Northville Township, where Schroder lives, voters preferred McCotter 629 to 391.

McCotter faces Livonia Democrat Karl Burnett in the general election. McCotter beat Burnett two years ago in his first re-election attempt. "Karl is a good guy, and he'll run a clean campaign," McCotter said.

On Wednesday, McCotter blasted the tactics that were used against him, including bogus campaign literature that lied about his positions.

A post card purporting to contrast the candidates' positions on abortion was sent to members of Ward Presbyterian Church claiming that "Schroder is an anti-choice extremist and must not be elected. Incumbent Thaddeus McCotter will not be led by Christian extremists when he votes on reproductive rights issues." McCotter, who was endorsed by Right to Life, opposes abortion.

"Whoever perpetrated these dirty tricks over the weekend and on Monday are evil," McCotter said Wednesday.

Another campaign handout of uncertain origin says "we must vote against county commission candidate Jeff Schroder and his unfair ideas." The flier goes on to say that Schroder will be "unfair to Detroit residents by cutting county spending in Detroit and ending affirmative action. If the suburbs don't help Detroit, then who will?"

The handout also claims Schroder will be "unfair to welfare recipients by forcing them to pick up trash in the county parks..., will be unfair to the gay, lesbian and bisexual community... (and) wants to be unfair and violate prisoners' rights by forcing them to work on road crews and taking away prisoner recreation programs."

Although McCotter suspects that Schroder was behind the dirty tricks, he admits that "we'll probably never be able to prove who did it."

Schroder did not return the Observer's phone calls Tuesday and Wednesday.

McCotter believes the dirty tricks probably cost him about 6 percent at the polls.

Because he ran a clean campaign, McCotter believes that the people who chose his name on the ballot voted for him and not against Schroder."My votes were for me," he said. "If you run a negative campaign you never know if someone voted for you or against the other guy."

Fitness program sponsors walks in Hines Park

Wayne County Parks is encouraging people of all ages to break out their walking shoes and head over to Hines Park to walk "for the health of it."

Walk Michigan is an annual fitness program sponsored by Michigan Recreation and Park Association to promote good health and to highlight the recreational facilities in Michigan.

Walkers of all ages have an opportunity to participate in walks sponsored by Wayne County Parks.

"To register for a Walk Michigan event, simply attend the event, and fill out a registration card," said Wayne County Parks Director Hurley Coleman. "Each time you come to a Walk Michigan event you will fill out a registration card. The cards will be entered in the drawing for the grand prize trip for two to Mackinac Island and the governor's annual bridge walk," he said.

The drawing will be held the end of July 1997 for the 1997 Labor Day Bridge Walk, he said.

The 1996 Wayne County Parks Walk Michigan Grand Prize winners were drawn on July 27 this year, after a Walk Michigan event at Nankin Mills in Westland. Representing Wayne County Parks at the Labor Day Bridge Walk will be Richard Prince of Livonia and Pat Dee of Dearborn Heights.

"Walking is one of the most practical forms of cardiovascular exercise, and it is something almost anyone can do. Millions of Americans walk for exercise," said Wayne County Executive Edward H. McNamara. "The great scenic routes during the walks give the impression that they have escaped into the country. It is a great way to relax and an easy way to stay healthy."

For more information on this or any other Wayne County Parks program, call (313) 261-1990.

STATE NEWS

Capitol capsules:

Wait 'til next year. That's when the big shift of state shared revenue from older, big cities to outstate townships will start.

Gov. John Engler has signed a new Revenue Sharing Act that changes the formula beginning in fiscal 1998, which starts Oct. 1, 1997. The distribution formula will allocate growth revenues on a per-capita basis instead of the "relative tax effort" basis, which rewarded cities with high tax rates.

"This most historic reform in revenue sharing since the program began more than two decades ago," Engler called it – "a dramatic step forward for fairness, equity and common sense."

The new formula won't affect "old" revenues – just "growth" revenues. Growth money will be deposited in a reserve fund.

DNR boosted

The Department of Natural Resources will be able to train and hire 21 more conservation officers in the fiscal year beginning this Oct. 1, Engler said as he signed its budget bill.

He urged the Legislature to pass bills hiking fishing and hunting license fees to further protect state resources. Currently, the DNR budget for fiscal 1997 is $214.8 million, with $50.5 million coming from the general fund, the rest from specific fees.

The new budget re-creates DNR's Office of Information & Education, aimed at giving students and adults information on recreation, hunting, fishing and ecosystem management.

The budget contains a $750,000 gift from Detroit Edison for planting about four million trees on state-owned land and $1.8 million for 13 local recreation projects from the Recreation Bond Fund.

Adoptions up

Adoptions through private agencies inched up 3 percent in 1995 under the first full year of laws designed to make them easier.

"It's a little too early to measure any trends based on first-year data," said Verlie Ruffin, associate director of the Michigan Federation of Private Child and Family Agencies. "Hopefully, we'll be able to see a trend of direct consent as another adoption alternative as more people learn about it."

She referred to a series of laws passed by the 1993-94 Legislature that took effect Jan. 1, 1995, at the urging of a commission headed by Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfeld with many suburban officials and activists as members.

Under them, 1,967 children were placed by private agencies, up 3 percent over 1994 but below the record 1993 level.

Biggest single change: an 8 percent increase in adoptions of children with "special needs" – older, suffering from emotional, physical or behavioral problems, usually state wards.

Biggest block of adoptions were "voluntary release" where the birth mother consents to adoption and releases the child to an agency. There were 475 voluntary release adoptions, or 24 percent of the total.

How they voted

Here is how area state representatives voted on final passage of Senate Bill 668, which allows the state to permit cities to create low-tax "renaissance zones." The bill was approved 63-34 at the end of a brief July session:

OBSERVER

YES – Lyn Bankes, R-Redford, Tom Kelly, D-Wayne.

NO – James Ryan, R-Redford, Deborah Whyman, R-Canton.

NOT VOTING – Eileen DeHart, D-Westland, Gerald Law, R-Plymouth.

What they said

The Renaissance Zone act split both parties deeply and drew negative comments in the House Journal from all shades of opinion. Samples:

Rep. David Jaye, R-Macomb County, a vocal conservative: "This legislation exempts billionaires and millionaires from all state and local taxes. Worse yet, the working men and women of the rest of the state are forced to make up the revenue lost by the city, college, K-12 schools in which the Renaissance Zone is located. People in these zones will even be allowed to vote on future tax increases which they will never have to pay."

Rep. Ed Vaughn, D-Detroit: "You help the needy. You have nothing for the greedy ... For Detroit you said: No on Highland Park Community College, no on casino gambling, no on equitable revenue sharing, no on maintain Recorder's Court ... So after all your racist undertones to beat up on Detroit, here you come like Freaks bearing gifts ... if Mayor Archer won't stand up for the people of Detroit, then I will."

Rep. Howard Wetters, D-Kawkawlin: "SB 668 is an unwarranted intrusion into the private business sector. We have no idea what this costs. This bill will also allow rich people to establish their 'make believe' residence in a Renaissance Zone and escape all state income taxes."

Senate majority leader Dick Posthumus, R-Alto, who sponsored the bill: "This isn't about cutting taxes. It's about restoring opportunity. It calls for up to nine tax-free zones to be located in a maximum of six urban and four rural economically-depressed areas. Every county can apply for a zone, as well as cities, villages and townships in eligible distressed areas.

"All state and local taxes except the sales tax and bonded indebtedness will be waived for businesses and residences in the zone for up to 15 years. Both existing and new properties will receive the tax break."

day afternoon that Jerry Vorva has very deep and broad support in the communities of this district. This does not diminish the mutual love the people of this community have for me and I have for them."

In the city of Plymouth, Vorva ran strongest with 501 votes to Law's 524. Law, of Plymouth Township, won handily there with 1,971 votes to Vorva's 1,272.

Voting at 1[illegible]0 p.m. at Central Middle School, Eric Haarz of Plymouth said he voted for Law because, "I think he's the better man. I've seen a lot of quotes from Vorva, I don't believe what he says."

A man who declined to be named said after casting his ballot at 6:30 p.m. at West Middle school said he voted for Vorva. "It sounded like Mr. Law used some scare tactics, I wouldn't want somebody conducting my business the way he ran his campaign."

Another man who declined to be named said after voting at West Middle School he voted for Law. "I'm a business person in town," he said.

At the Plymouth Cultural Center at 7 p.m., Mark Stieber of Plymouth said he voted for Democratic state representative candidate Deborah Hoadley.

James Kukalis, carrying his daughter Ciara, 3, said, "I went with Vorva because that was the NRA candidate."

Candidates face run-off in fall race in Salem Twp.

BY JEFF COUNTS
STAFF WRITER

Hot local races in Salem Township brought out one third of the township's 3,000 voters, according to clerk Marcia VanFossen, who was reelected

The primary set the stage for a general election run off in November for township supervisor.

In that race will be Michael Penn, who won the three way Republican primary with 297 votes.

The other Republican candidates were: Rodney Cannon, 156, and Marie Sherry, 212.

The winner of the Democratic primary was Tom Homrich, who beat incumbent supervisor Donald Riddering. Homrich received 100 votes to 94 for Riddering.

In the race for township clerk, Marcia VanFossen, the incumbent, won reelection over challenger Linda Hamilton in the Republican primary. VanFossen received 368 votes to 317 for Hamilton. There were no Democrats in the primary.

In the race for treasurer, incumbent Richard Rhinehart out distanced Republican challenger William Remski. The vote totals were: Rhinehart, 340, to Remski, 320. There are no Democrats in the race.

The winners of two, four-year terms for township trustee were: Joel Dunlap, 409, and William Baxter, 342. Running third as Christine Hamilton, 330. There were no Democrats in the race, and the two winner will face no opposition in the November general election.

prosecutor, I want to see him (John O'Hair) reelected."

In other races for elected township office, the six other township board members cruised to easy victory Tuesday, as they were unopposed in the Republican primary. They're also unopposed in the November general election.

Running unopposed in November are Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy, Township Clerk Marilyn Massengill, and trustees Kay Arnold, Charles Curmi, Ron Griffith and K.C. Mueller. Griffith, the longest serving trustee, got 2,121 votes. Arnold had 1,948, Mueller 1,888 and Curmi 1,862.

Massengill said the turnout for Tuesday's primary, about 20 percent of registered voters, was "very low, very disappointing."

"I believe it is one of the lowest voted primary elections the township has ever seen," she said.

group of commissioners in four years."

Graham Laible, who hears tax appeals on the city board of review, told commissioners that granting the tax break could spark other commercial businesses to seek them.

Sally Repeck, on the city downtown development authority, told commissioners, "I think all of us want the hotel to be saved."

But she added that some basic things to make the hotel presentable aren't happening now. "To take money from taxpayers, from people who strive and work hard, I really think it's an inappropriate way to go."

City Manager Steve Walters noted that a group of citizens determined in the 1920s that the town needed a hotel, and they raised money to build it.

"I want it to continue in the future and I don't want it to be anything else," said Commissioner John Vos.

When the hotel was struggling to get out of bankruptcy, he noted that only the hotel's current owners, who include hotel managers Matt and Keith Karmo, sought to keep it as a hotel.

The only other developers interested in the property wanted to turn it into senior housing. Downtown backers agree that losing the Mayflower Hotel could hurt the business community significantly.

"What we're looking at is there is someone wanting to make a substantial capital improvement in this community – $2 million," Commissioner Doug Miller said.

"If someone else comes to us with this we'd jump through hoops," Miller said. "We don't do these things out of the goodness of our heart, we do it because it's a smart business decision."

O'Hair leads spenders in countywide races

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Wayne County Prosecuting Attorney John D. O'Hair led the spending pack among those who filed statements in the race for county offices.

July 26 was the deadline to file pre-primary campaign spending reports with the Wayne County Elections Bureau of the county clerk's office.

O'Hair of Detroit listed $171,494.50 in contributions during this election cycle which began Jan. 1. He already had $129,432.92 in his campaign war chest, bringing the total to $300,927.42. O'Hair listed $175,634.52 in expenditures, leaving an ending balance of $125,292.

O'Hair's Democratic opponent Virgil C. Smith of Detroit didn't file a proper return by the July 26 deadline with the election bureau. He faces a late fine.

On the Republican ticket for prosecuting attorney, Donald Knapp of Livonia filed a waiver, meaning he is raising and spending less than $1,000 for the campaign.

His opponent Thomas Esordi of Wyandotte listed $290 in contributions, $266.80 in in-kind contributions and no expenditures for an ending balance of $290.

O'Hair's contributions (of $500 or more from a single person or group) included: Laurence Scoville, attorney at Clark, Klein and Beaumont, $1,500; Patrick Ledwidge, attorney at Dickinson, Wright, Moon, Van Dusen and Freeman, $600; Plunkett and Cooney PAC, $500; William Brodhead, attorney at Plunkett and Cooney, $500; Rolland O'Hare, attorney at Sachs, Waldman, O'Hare, Helveston, Hodges and Barnes, $1,000; James McCann, attorney, $1,000; Brian Sullivan, attorney at Thomas, Degrood and Witenoff, $750.

"We're definitely going to do what we said we were going to do," he said.

Of the negative votes in western Wayne County, Coleman pointed out it was a low voter turnout, but enough positive voters still voted.

Western Wayne had mostly Republican candidates, who campaigned against taxes, Coleman said. "I think this suggests a great deal of support," he said. "I can't feel bad about the results."

The county's proposal includes $26.3 million in projects, including $1.54 million for renovations to all parks; $2 million for Hines Park picnic area improvements; $1 million for Nankin Mills Interpretive Center in Westland; $200,000 for the William P. Holliday Forest nature preserve in Westland and Canton; $175,000 for winter sports improvements in Redford Township, Dearborn Heights, Inkster, Livonia, Trenton and Northville; $80,000 for the Bennett Arboretum in Northville Township; $850,000 for new sports facilities in Redford Township, Trenton, Inkster, Plymouth, Westland and Dearborn Heights; $4.75 million for improvements at Historic Fort Wayne in Detroit; $2 million for Mariner's Park in Detroit; $7 million to build a water park at Chandler Park in Detroit; $1 million for work at Crosswinds Marsh in Sumpter Township; $4 million for improvements at Elizabeth Park in Trenton; $350,000 for improvements at Inkster Park Picnic Area in Inkster; $250,000 for improvements at Colonial Park Sports Complex in Inkster; $300,000 for improvements at Lola Valley and Bell Creek Picnic areas in Redford Township; $250,000 for improvements at the Taylor Petting Farm in Taylor; $250,000 for improvements at Dingell Park in Ecorse and $300,000 for a lower Rouge canoe trail in Canton Township.

■ Taxes will increase by a quarter mill, which to the owner of a $100,000 house means a $12.50 a year tax increase.

The proposal includes the provision that the county will continue to fund parks out of the general fund budget at the fiscal year 1996 level of $2.8 million for each year of the millage.

The tax increase is projected to raise $7.9 million in 1997, $8.1 million in 1998; $8.2 million in 1999; $8.4 million in 2000 and $8.5 million in 2001. Along with the parks improvements the money will be used to increase parks staffing and provide for maintenance of the parks, Coleman said.

Honesty

Biker restores our faith

It was one of those stories that restores our hope in mankind.

A Canton biker couple was spending an afternoon cruising Kellogg Park on their Harley. They stopped and parked on Main Street to show it off. As they did, they watched a $100 bill flutter out of the pocket of a man.

As the biker said: "Part of me said I could use $100."

Let's face it, most of us could.

But, his conscience would have bothered him.

So instead of pocketing the money, the biker roared off down Main Street in Plymouth, breaking the speed limit, and followed the man until he stopped at a gas station.

There, the biker, Tom Bober, motioned for the man to roll down his window.

"He kind of looked at me for a minute." Then the man rolled down the window and said: "Can I get you something?"

Bober explained to the victim that the money had fallen from his pocket. The man took the money and silently drove away, without acknowledging the return of the cash.

Bober went back to Kellogg Park where he and his wife, Paula, wondered about why the victim of the money loss hadn't said anything about the return of the money.

However, moments later, the victim returned to the park to apologize.

The man told the couple he was "kind of surprised," and he offered his apology.

The story is a sad commentary on our times. People shouldn't be shocked speechless by honesty and caring.

But they are.

Let's just hope that there are more people like Bober around. They would help restore a feeling of trust that many of us have lost.

Helping hand: Tom Bober and his wife, Paula, returned $100 to a man.

Plymouth wins with dredging

A plan announced last week to dredge Newburgh Lake for the first time more than three decades is good news on two fronts – ecological and financial.

The lake straddles the border of Livonia and Plymouth Township in Hines Park. It is also one of the few recreational lakes in mostly land-locked western Wayne County.

For years though, through the 1970s and '80's, recreational uses of Newburgh Lake took a back seat to industrial ones. Storm drain runoff and illicit sewer connections have also had an adverse effect on water quality. The result has been contamination by PCBs and sewage, which have settled on the lake bottom.

Swimming hasn't been allowed for years. And although new fishing piers were built along with a boat launch in 1993, advisories against eating fish caught there are posted beside the lake.

The dredging process, in which the lake will be drained and sediment from the lake bed carted away, will allow for the eventual, full return of both activities. A dam built in the early 1900s will also be repaired. The faulty dam has contributed to the flood of pollutants in the 105-acre lake.

Hines Drive between Newburgh and Haggerty will be closed for about 18 months beginning early next year. The dredging work should be done by mid-1998.

Once the lake is cleaned, Wayne County plans to stock it with bluegill, largemouth bass and other fish. Rebuilding a swimmable lake will take a little longer, about 10 years according to officials.

We don't mind the wait or the inconvenience.

Dredging the lake will not only enhance the quality of life for local residents, it will clean up a longstanding environmental problem. The effort goes hand-in-hand with a 10-year campaign to make the Rouge River system – which includes the lake – environmentally sound.

Bids are expected to come in this week for the dam repair and the entire project has an estimated cost of $5-$10 million. That's where the other good new comes in.

The bill for these improvements will be paid by the federal government, as part of a nearly $300 million funding package that goes with the Rouge River National Wet Weather Demonstration Project.

Western Wayne County residents and businesses, by nature of their income, send a large amount of money to Washington when compared to other urban and suburban regions. It's going to be nice to see some of that flowing back to the area in the form of a clean, fully usable lake that will benefit all.

A dirty campaign

Here it is Monday, the day before the primary elections and for some of the individuals running, the last election of this campaign year.

It's time for me to reflect on the campaigns and how they were conducted.

As part of a District Republican chairman's responsibility, I review the voter turnout and try to determine how to get more people to the polls to vote.

I find I am hanging my head in shame because these have been the dirtiest campaigns I have ever been witness to.

Along with the low voter turnout, I feel the citizens will lose on two counts this election year.

First, we expect a low turnout at the polls and this means a minority of the people elect officials that will give direction to a government that will impact the majority of the citizens, who will in turn complain and distrust the government they didn't take the time to elect.

People all over the world are fighting for the privilege of going to the polls to elect a representative government and here we sit in apathy.

Secondly, the campaigns and the methods on how they are conducted. Whatever happened to a vision of the future and individuals willing to discuss it?

Individuals willing to point to the future with pride, make decisions and move this country forward.

We need to recognize we are all not perfect and not expect that of our leaders. They just need to be as close to perfection as possible.

The tactics used during the primary campaign season had very little to do with issues and our future.

It had a lot to do with who could throw the most mud with the greatest deception.

A point of concern is the so-called Western Wayne Civic Spotlight, a one-time issue filled with more affluence than our sewer system will every carry.

The names were smeared again for a project that was visionary and will serve our community well into the future long after other systems have failed.

The citizens lose on this type of campaigning, because the person sending it out doesn't clearly identify themselves or what they are representing.

They don't tell the citizens what they feel or the real issues and give us voters a clear choice.

Those individuals cause distrust of a government by the use of deception when they have a hidden agenda themselves and who knows what they stand for.

They stop quality and qualified individuals from running for public office, because good qualified candidates do not want to be subjected to distortions of the truth or even outright lies.

We want persons of high personal integrity, good reputation and excellent family values to run our government.

These are the type of individuals that can give us the future we are looking for.

We are losing sight of our future with low voter turnout and the type of campaigning that is taking place. Please, citizens, care about how you vote because that's my charge as a Republican District chairman.

What I also care about as a citizen is a government run by the majority of the people..

This election is over, but remember, there are future elections.

Make children the priority

The kids are the No. 1 priority!

That statement has been made many, many times over the years by the Plymouth-Canton school administrators. Do they talk the walk and then walk the talk?

At the board of education meeting on July 22, in the citizen's comments portion of the meeting, Bob Jones expressed a concern that when past millages failed the district did not make cuts. Dr. (Charles) Little explained that the district has whittled away at several areas, including textbook expenditures. (See July 22 school newsletter, "Board Briefs.")

Just last month, Dr. Little accepted a 3.2 percent salary increase from $110,210 to $113,751. By contrast, Dr. Simpson, superintendent of the Ann Arbor School District, accepted a 2.7 percent salary increase to $109,733. The Ann Arbor School revenue is $122,165,622 compared to $96,190,000 for Plymouth-Canton. The Ann Arbor School estimate of students for 1996-97 is 15,606 vs. 15,543 for Plymouth-Canton.

With $25,975,622 less in the 1996-97 budget, the Plymouth-Canton Community School District pays its superintendent more in salary then the Ann Arbor School District with approximately the same total student body and at the same time whittles away at textbook expenditures. It's time to whittle away at administrative salaries not textbook expenditures. It's time to really make the kids the No. 1 priority. It's time not just to talk the walk but walk the talk!

POINTS OF VIEW

Old Village a refuge from quaint New England

GUEST COLUMNIST

DOROTHY MATSU

Silence may indeed be golden, but peace and quiet are hardly shabby seconds. As I luxuriate in the tranquility of my new neighborhood, I cannot help but reflect upon the pandemonium from whence I came.

Many New England towns are quaint, but tightly packed, making for some very strange neighbors. Standing out from the typical tenement racket would be the Hell's Angels who thundered in next door on occasion to pay their respects to their somewhat embarrassed elders.

The traditional early and violent death would soon curb that clatter. In lovely Marblehead, we found ourselves on the tiny main drag across from the theater and next to the Riptide where at 2 a.m. the dregs of the town would spew out into the streets for a last round of incoherent garble, bickering and sloppy fisticuffs until the cop on the beat threatened them all with telling their mothers.

In charming Swampscott, I found the sweetest little attic apartment spoiled rotten by a hideous ancient trollop who assaulted anyone attempting to come or go with obscenities that would make a sailor pale.

Back in Salem, I found myself sandwiched between the Fishwife and the Seahag. Nothing short of being dropped on the roof by a chopper could save you from the harassment these bats spent their energies on to create.

They had no problem with me, it seemed, just everyone else on earth, and I was somehow chosen as an unwilling confidante.

The Seahag made a career of taking my downstairs neighbor to court unsuccessfully over her menagerie of pets. As evidence, she produced a photo showing three tiny kittens hanging on her screen door.

The Fishwife once dumped a bucket of fish heads on the hood of our landlord's car, probably because of his penchant for listening to military marching music at a bombastic volume.

I often stalled in a little old cemetery watching for that crucial moment when they would momentarily cease vacuuming the driveway or combing the shrubbery to make a break for my bleak lodgings without begin asked to relay various threats.

My next stop didn't appear to have any ruckus the nearby railway couldn't squelch, yet in the dead of night one man across the drive would let out a groaning wail of such length and despair, the hair on your head would stand up levitating you from the bed with genuine terror.

I nearly went as mad as a balloon when the Polarity Therapist above went away for a long weekend leaving non-stop New Age music playing for her plants.

She was followed by an eccentric who took up walking for exercise, but only in her apartment back and forth, turning me into a muttering murderer.

The wailer's arch rival was a cool old gent from our other side who appeared to be quite frail, but proved himself a remarkably fierce grumble duke who inspired apoplexy in the bravest of us when bellowing "Barney" like the blast of a launch horn across a harbor at his pathetic, even older stick dog who I can only assume was always attempting to escape to the tracks to end his own abuse.

The recent notice taken of wild dogs in Plymouth brings back many funny but honestly frightening tales.

Our neighborhood could nobly be described as "The Day the Earth Stood Still" when a demonic child ironically named Angel would let loose Pebbles and Bam-Bam, known to the rest of us as Fear and Loathing.

From the top of our long street one could see a wave of paralysis cause all life to freeze in place. The closest I ever came to fainting as a child was when Angel whipped open the door which we played statues behind and they trapped me on the second-story landing.

My dainty, demure mama swooped down to fend them off with a puny copy of the Dingleberry Daily and cries of scolding reprimands only the mother of five daughters could summon.

This lesson would serve me well many years later when a loose guard dog in San Francisco received my favorite uppercut when he hurled his sorry self at this innocent stroller.

Another common thread in the pattern of disturbing the peace is awful music. No matter where you go, you are bound to be tortured by adverse tastes.

It is startling that the music that made you gag as a kid is constantly revived only to be hatefully enhanced by new technology.

Living on the edge of Plymouth Township was as close to country as I had ever been, so I found it eerie for a bit. But there was always the crash of cicadas or critters combative and canoodling, or what sounds like the weird mocking laughter of waterfowl.

It was also like the Bermuda Triangle for car accidents mingling with the roaring road yard.

Here, in Old Village, I enjoy the amusing bustle of the daytime comings and goings. Velvety sunsets bring forth the rustle of great protective trees, summery showers shimmer among the lights and lanterns of the little sleeping shops, and I lay listening to the magnificent steely symphony of the trains.

Please help

In the Thursday, July 4, 1996, edition of the Plymouth Observer newspaper, you wrote a wonderful article on the garden of Archie and Joan Moore. In that article you made mention of my yard, the Abick yard. Iam Mary Abick and I am writing you not only to thank you for highlighting the beautiful garden of the Moores in such a way as to inspire others in our community to create their own special gardens, but also to ask your assistance.

Late last year I rescued two orange tabby cats from my place of employment, a State of Michigan facility, as they had been ordered trapped and destroyed by the administration. Being in excellent health and very sweet animals that had been well cared for, I could not bear to see them destroyed. Hoping to integrate them into my household of three cats, I had them spayed and neutered and all shots administred and began the process of integration.

Well, the rest of the story is not too pretty and suffice it to say my house is now a zoo with two of my three cats acting out in very unpleasant ways. I have tried everything to place the two tabbies, including posting fliers in every veterinary clinic and pet store I could find, taking an ad in the Observer & Eccentric, going to pet adoption shows at a local pet store and the Humane Society pet adoptathon at the Detroit Zoo last month, with no success.

And so now I am writing you. I know there is a very special someone out there who would take these sweet creatures into their home. But how to reach them? Call Mary Abick at 453-0846.

Mary Abick, Plymouth

Blood donations needed

As a member of the Board of Directors for American Red Cross, Southeastern Michigan Blood Services Region, and a resident of the Plymouth community, I am appealing to adults in the community to donate blood for the benefit of those in need.

While, summertime means fun times for people of all ages - summertime is a critical time for the American Red Cross.

During the summer months, the Red Cross experiences a decline in blood collections primarily due to school closings, family vacations, and changes in business operations. However, the need for blood donations continues. Hospitals throughout southeastern Michigan rely on the Red Cross to supply blood for ill and injured patients. We need blood donations to win the battle against blood shortages. An appointment to donate blood can be made by calling 1-800-GIVE-LIFE.

Communities join forces to test new firefighter recruits

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

A more structured approach to testing firefighters has been adopted by communities in the Conference of Western Wayne.

The conference is a consortium of 18 western Wayne County communities, including Canton Township, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Westland, Garden City, Redford Township and Livonia.

From now on all firefighter applicants for those communities will be drawn from a pool of those who have passed a certification test, which includes basic written and physical agility tests.

Schoolcraft College began administering the tests in July and will offer the tests on a regular basis.

"Successful completion is now required by the Conference of Western Wayne," Bob Pearce, director of public safety education at Schoolcraft College, said.

It possibly could expand and become a requirement in other communities, Pearce said. The program is modeled after one given for prospective police officers, under the Michigan Law Enforcement Training Council.

More than a year in the planning, the program began after local community officials requested it. "Communities were coming to us saying we need this," Daniel Gilmartin, executive director of the Conference of Western Wayne, said. The advantages for communities are it offers a standardized test, which communities can add their own requirements to, and it transfers the cost of testing to the applicant.

■ The advantages for communities are it offers a standardized test, which communities can add their own requirements to, and it transfers the cost of testing to the applicant.

The 100-question written test measures mechanical knowledge and reading comprehension, according to John Smilnak, advanced fire training coordinator at Schoolcraft. The physical agility test measures the mandatory strength, agility and endurance required of a firefighter. It is seven different tasks that are all fire-related, performed wearing firefighter gear, such as dragging or carrying a dummy, and dragging hose from a fire truck and hooking it up, Smilnak said.

Firefighter training isn't required to take the tests, but it is recommended as individual departments have training requirements, Smilnak said.

The test registration fee is $10, physical agility test is $45 and written test is $25. Registration for the test must be received at least 10 days before the test date. Call (313) 462-4400, ext. 5303 for information.

Written tests will be given: 6-9 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 15; 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Aug. 17; 6-9 p.m. Monday, Sept. 23; 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 28.

Physical agility tests will be given: 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 24 and Sunday, Aug. 25, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 14 and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 15. The physical tests are an hour long; times are assigned at registration.

Schoolcraft College also offers training through its fire academy. Firefighter one and two training are offered. Firefighter one is recommended for volunteer and paid-on-call firefighter candidates and firefighter two is recommended for full-time or career firefighters.

Many departments also require applicants to have emergency medical technician certification, Smilnak said.

Kinship coalition to sponsor adoption festival Sept. 7 in Farmington Hills

Hundreds of metro Detroit's adoptable children will be at the 8th annual Kinship Adoption Festival noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, at the St. Vincent/Sarah Fisher Center in Farmington Hills to meet with people considering adoption.

Kinship, a coalition of more than 25 Detroit area adoption agencies, arranges the festival so that prospective adoptive families can meet with children who are legally free for adoption.

Children of all ages and backgrounds will attend. The day's events will include: parenting workshops, a slide show of waiting children, games and activities and entertainment and refreshments.

Adoption professionals from each of Kinship's agencies will also be on hand to answer any questions prospective parents might have about the adoption process.

The St. Vincent/Sarah Fisher Center is at 27400 West 12 Mile Road in Farmington Hills.

To receive a map to the center, or for more information, call Ruth Lyons of St. Francis Family Services at (810) 552-0750.

Special class is for special teens

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Karen Rouhan

Karen Rouhan is looking for some very special teen-agers ... those who are special in their needs and those who are special in their interest in working with others.

The quest relates to her vision of having mentally impaired and non-mentally impaired teen-agers together, "fully self-expressed and accepting of one another."

And her vision will become reality in a special Sunday school class she will be teaching at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Livonia next month.

"I look at this as a way the mentally impaired can be a part of one church and not separate," Rouhan said. "I think they provide a lot for the church and for teens. For me, they are the most kindest people I know."

Rouhan is speaking from experience. She has been a Sunday school teacher at the church for six years, working with eight mentally impaired adults. Developmentally, her students are like 3-4-year-olds. They come from a group home for the one-hour class every Sunday.

"It's a lot of fun; I really enjoy it," she said about the class. "They do get a lot of what we do, even though they don't talk very well. They can sing 'Jesus Loves Me,' but not in words we would understand."

A longtime member of St. Paul's, Rouhan has been involved in the choir and other activities since age 6. It was an advertisement in the church bulletin that got her involved in teaching. And its was her work with her special adults that prompted her to approach pastor the Rev. Thomas Eggebeen and church members about a teen class.

"They loved it," Rouhan said. "Pastor Eggebeen was very excited; the volunteers were ex-

Market reopens with suburban flavor

When fire raced through the Gratiot Central Market last year, Rod and Diana Kallungi lost their thriving business. A year later, they are back in business with their Eastern Market of Canton.

Diana Kallungi of Plymouth Township believes that everything happens for a reason.

When a June 1995 fire destroyed her family's business, Kallungi Meats in Eastern Market's Gratiot Central Market, she held on to that belief as her hopes dwindled that the market would be rebuilt.

"They told us they were going to rebuild it, but we've had no contact from anyone," explained Kallungi, who runs the business with her husband, Rod. "All we know is what we read about in the paper. We can't put our life on hold until they rebuild the market. By the time they do, we could starve to death."

On Friday, July 26, Kallungi Meats found new life as Eastern Market of Canton in the Pine Tree Plaza on Joy Road just east of I-275.

The Kallungis took on the new name to remind old and new customers that they're the same customer-oriented company that was rooted in Eastern Market for 20 years.

"This is a good area for this," Kallungi said. "A lot of people we talked to said there was room for another good meat market. People get tired of going to the grocery store and walking 20 miles to get a steak."

All the meat in the store is fresh cut, Kallungi said, and her husband makes his own sausage.

"We'll cut it the way you want it. It's your choice. You're the boss."

The move to the suburbs has allowed the Kallungis to expand their business to include condiments, a deli and cheese counter, some frozen foods, specialty coffees and a cafe service.

"We were going to start out with just meats but we figured that out in the suburbs we need to be more than just a meat market," she said. "We don't want to be a grocery store. We're not a Farmer Jack or Meijer. But if you had a steak and you wanted A-1, we have it."

The store has only been open for nearly two weeks, but the Kallungis have already seen some of the old

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Ms. Green,

I just finished reading an article where you completely analyzed a woman by reading her handwriting. I could not believe how extensive the analysis was. It made me feel that if you were to do the same for me that your analysis would probably be greater than one my husband would give.

I am very curious as to what things you would write about my personality by looking at my handwriting. I was also wondering if your analysis is based 100 percent on the handwriting sample or if there are other factors as well, i.e., the way I've worded this letter, etc.

I am right handed and 24 years old. I am not completely finished with college yet and depending on your analysis of me I might want to take a few classes in this area.

T.F.,
Westland

Picture a young woman who is outwardly poised and self-controlled and that will give you a view of today's writer. She approaches things in a deliberate manner. Level-headed and self-motivated can be added to our description of her.

This woman is not given to impulsive behavior. Before becoming involved she is inclined to consider how a given situation or decision will affect her personally. When the legibility of this handwriting is considered with the total picture, it suggests that she wants to communicate in a sincere manner and be understood by others. At times she can be a little direct and call it as she sees it. But she also has a certain amount of personal magnetism to call upon.

High intelligence is seen in her handwriting. Her mind can travel from one thought to another by intuitive, associative or other non-logical processes. It often works ahead, finding viable solutions and original concepts for obtaining her ends.

There is an efficiency orientation about her. This is augmented by a sense of purpose about what she does. She knows how to strip away the nonessential and move right on to the important aspects.

The writer has a subconscious need to achieve. She sets goals. She makes decisions and has the resolve to carry them through. Determination helps her stay the course to completion.

A retentive memory cannot be missed. It is a valuable and time-saving trait. Detail-oriented, she does not skim over them. Seemingly, she makes conscious choices with regard to the things in which she becomes involved and how she uses her time. She has an active imagination and interest in material gain. She may feel that charity begins at home.

In the formative years of her personality she did not perceive her parents as being united in their parenting. She appears to see herself differently in various situations and times. This is probably part of her developing self-esteem.

In her interpersonal relationships, she places a little reserve between herself and others. Close emotional involvement may not come easily to her. Objectivity may have been developed at the expense of spontaneity.

She needs some time alone to develop her inner resources. I think she has known exposure to some of the finer things of life.

She is cognizant of the accepted behavior of her peer group and/or loved ones and will usually abide by it. Rudeness in others is hard for her to accept.

Loyalty is another positive trait of hers. Both to her friends and to her principles she can be counted upon to remain committed. When we contrast her signature, which is different, to the body of her handwriting, we find two things are suggested. One, she wants to be seen as more sophisticated than she may inwardly feel. Two, she may indeed be a gifted young woman.

Incidentally, I want to reassure the writer that my analysis is based solely on the handwriting.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful.

Handwriting. I was also wondering if your analysis is based 100% on the handwriting sample faces trickling in.

"Some old customers have been faxing in orders," she said. "I take care of them. We freeze wrap everything so when you go home all you have to do is put the meat away. We take real good care of our customers.

"When the old customers see our new customers, they even tell them, 'Don't worry. They'll take care of you. You're in good hands here.' "

Rod Kallungi started his business in 1974, 10 years before he married Diana. The two worked together to build the store into a bustling meat market with 20 employees behind the counter.

Just as the couple returned home June 22, 1995, they got a phone call with the bad news.

"It took us 15 minutes to get down there; we could see the smoke from Telegraph and the Jeffries," Kallungi said. "From the reports I heard on the radio, I knew it was our building."

The intense fire completely destroyed everything in the building – the scales, the meat counters, antiques that were kept in the basement, and all its stock. The cause was never determined.

Although insurance covered most of the loss, purchasing new equipment proved to be a costly venture. The new equipment cost nearly 100 percent more than what it cost 10 years ago.

The Kallungis decorated their new store with antique butcher equipment. The old model scales and knives on the wall contrast the new computerized scales and cash registers.

Kallungi said she's pleased with the new location.

"It's fun out here; the people are great and they seem to be happy that we're here," she said. "It's a lot more fun. In the city, there was a lot of pressure with the business. There was an intense business out there. On holidays, I'd make 5,000 shish kebabs in two days with another 5,000 on hold. It was nice. That meant that you made money.

"But at the end of the day, we'll all be too exhausted to enjoy the holiday. I don't think we'll see that kind of intensity out here."

If anything, the move to Canton has brought the family together. Diana Kallungi's daughter, Tracey Harris, runs the deli, while her sons, Mike and Matt Harris, help out around the store.

"I just believe that things happen for a reason. Maybe it was meant to bring us out to this location or to bring the family together."

Eastern Market of Canton is in the Pine Tree Plaza, 39493 Joy Road, between Hix and Haggerty roads, Canton. For more information, call (313) 459-0120.

cited. They offered to provide any support needed, any help needed to make it work."

Rouhan is developing a three-part format for the religious-based class. There will be stories and singing, discussions, some crafts and snacks. Depending on the age of the group, some classes will be held in conjunction with the adult class. She also plans to work with people who educate the mentally impaired in developing the program.

The class will run from the end of September through the end of May, when the church school is in session, and enrollment will be open to church members and non-members alike.

Rouhan also hopes to line up enough young volunteers to have one teen working with one or two students, "so we have a good mix."

Happy with her career as a business analyst, working for EDS at GM's Hamtramck plant and Tech Center in Warren, Rouhan admits she "loves teaching as a side job."

"I'm happy to see the changes in people," she said. "They hug you and everything and it's nice to know that they appreciate the little things you do."

For now, Rouhan is hoping there will be plenty of community interest in the class. People interested in enrolling teens in the class can leave her a voice mail message at (313) 972-6081.

"I'm not promising miracles," she said. "But if I can make a difference, I will."

Exercise equipment has roots in therapy

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Imagine signing up for a fitness class and ending up spending most of your time sitting, bouncing or laying on a large red ball.

Now, don't confuse this ball with the medicine ball you spent hours keeping airborne during physical education classes in school. And by no means is it like the children's toy that looks like a ball that's been stuffed through the hole in a flat plastic doughnut.

We're talking Fitball, a large beach ball-style, vinyl ball that has made the transition from therapeutic exercise, physical therapy and rehabilitation programs to the fitness world.

"There's a lot of people out there who don't like to jog, who don't like to sweat," said Kathi Carzon. "There are people out there who are tired of jumping around. When you're on the ball, your joints are supported so you can stretch safely and more effectively.

"I'm really excited about doing this class. This is like being a kid again and a lot of fun."

Fitball is one of two new fitness programs being offered this fall by Carzon's American Health and Fitness in conjunction with the Livonia Public Schools. It will be offered 6-7 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Bentley Center gymnasium, Five Mile Road at Hubbard, Livonia.

Range of motion

According to Carzon, Fitball increases range of motion, enhances stretching, improves balance and coordination and improves body alignment and posture, not to mention works the body as one connected piece.

In short, when you sit on the ball, you practice active sitting. Your muscles are being actively used to help maintain balance, and because the ball is round, it's difficult to "cheat" by trying to balance without using muscles.

Like the aerobics classes, participants warm up on the balls. The bouncing moves help stimulate the fluids in the spinal cord and the heart rate can be increased for the cardiovascular workout by adding in arm movements, all done with little or no impact and feet planted squarely on the floor.

"You get a full stretch, not hyperextension; it's a full stretch and you end up using every muscle to stay balanced on it," Carzon said. "It's just a good workout."

The other new AHF program, Hydro-Tone, will be paired up with AHF's popular aquacise classes. If the exercising on a beach ball sounds odd, consider strapping on Hydro-Tone Bootsthat resembles futuristic shoes with shin guards and hanging on to hand-held Hydro-Tone Bells to work out in a swimming pool.

While Fitball offers a total body workout, Hydro-Tone focuses on increasing water resistance, making the workout more effective. The Hydro-Tone classes will be offered at 9 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays, 9 and 10 a.m. Fridays and 10 a.m. Saturdays at the Bentley pool.

And like Fitball, Hydro-Tone is another crossover from the phy-

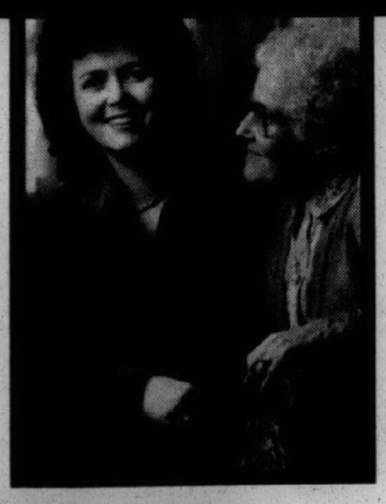
"I'M HAPPIER KNOWING THAT MOM IS IN GOOD HANDS. SHE'S JUST HAPPIER, PERIOD."



Active days. Discussion groups where every voice is important. Gardening where friendships bloom as well as flowers. And daily routines where people are secure knowing that trained, caring staff is nearby to offer assistance if necessary.

That's life at Springhouse, an assisted living facility for those who need extra help in their day-to-day routine, with things like dressing, bathing, and taking medications, but still want to enjoy life to its fullest. We customize care for our residents, giving them only the services they need or request. This helps them remain as independent as possible.

Friendship is one of the hallmarks of the Springhouse experience. In fact, it's never been easier for some of our residents as they are free to join each other for activities like walking and lectures. But residents can be on their own, too, setting their own routines. If they want to enjoy a quiet meal in their own apartment, they can. In short, residents make the choices that let them maintain control of their own lives.

We've designed Springhouse to be a safe and secure environment, with licensed health care professionals, staff and personal care assistants just seconds away—24 hours a day. So while residents are leading secure, active lives, their loved ones enjoy the peace of mind that comes from such special care—and Manor HealthCare's 35 year tradition of excellence in health care.

For a free brochure, call us or send in the coupon below. And if you'd like, schedule a tour to see firsthand how we make a difference in the lives of our residents.

sical therapy. It promotes muscle tone and balance and improves cardiovascular strength and endurance in a low-impact environment that reduces the shock to bones and joints.

According to Carzon, Hydro-Tone exercise provides for positive muscle contractions. When a person wearing a Hydro-Tone Boot in the water bends his or her knee, the resistance encountered exercises the hamstring.

When the knee is extended, the quadriceps are exercised unlike distance running which strengthens the quadriceps but does almost nothing to benefit the hamstrings.

The two classes dovetail with AHF's other offerings – Fat Burner, a low impact aerobic workout that helps burn fat; Fit to be Firm, a total body workout with cardiovascular benefits; and Step-Up II, aerobic exercise that shapes and tones buttocks, hips and thighs.

Also offered are Total Body conditioning, a 25-minute low impact aerobic segment followed by upper and lower body conditioning; and Abs and Gluts Plus, light, low impact aerobics designed to shape and sculpt the body.

Her instructors include Cher Hanna, her sister Lindsay Johnson, Patti Poirier, Dave Zeigler and Terry Timmer.

They have a variety of certifications through U.S. Water Exercise and the Aerobic and Fitness Association.

In the case of Poirier, she holds a master's degree in physical education and is a part of the physical education department and the athletic trainer for the cross country team at Divine Child High School.

And, Zeigler and Timmer are the stars of Livonia cable TV's "Body Moves" on Channel 8.

As for herself, Carzon has been into fitness since she was a child., when she would spend time in her room working out.

"I'd spend time in my room exercising," she said. "I'd fill a jar with pennies and use that as weights.

"It's been snowballing ever since."

She has been providing fitness classes through Livonia Continuing Education program since 1984. The classes have grown through the years and now attract more than 700 people per session.

People interested in registering for the Fitball, Hydro-Tone or the other AHF classes can call (313) 523-9276 for a registration book.

For more information, call Kathi Carzon at (313) 537-7343.

Respect sun to avoid skin cancer
By Johanna Chapel, M.D. and Thomas A. Chapel, M.D.
It is estimated that one in five Americans will develop skin cancer. The good news is that, with protection from the sun, most skin cancers can be prevented.
The sun's ultraviolet energy produces cumulative life-long damage to the skin. By age 10, the average person receives 50 percent of their total life-long sun exposure, and by age 30, more than 80 percent. This means protection from the sun should start in infancy and continue throughout life.
Infants under the age of six months should be kept out of the sun. However, children older than six months and adults also need sun protection. A simple way to minimize sun exposure is to avoid outdoor activities between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m — the period of peak ultraviolet irradiation.
Protective clothing is important. A cotton tee shirt has a sun protective factor (SPF) of only five and this meager defense is reduced if the shirt gets wet. Protective clothing is now available with SPF 30 and greater. Hats can shield the face from the sun's rays and are most effective if they have a rim that is three inches or larger.
Sunscreens should be worn regularly, and an SPF of 15 or higher is recommended. The best protection is afforded by sunscreen products that protect against both ultraviolet A and B rays. For maximum protection, sunscreens should be applied 30 minutes before sun exposure and reapplied with every one-and-one-half to two hours of sun exposure.
People must respect the sun and its potential to harm skin. However, by following a few simple guidelines, we can still enjoy summer activities and at the same time minimize the risks of skin cancer.

Coaches needed

Both Plymouth Canton and Plymouth Salem are renowned soccer powers. And both need coaches for their junior varsity teams.

The vacancies opened up somewhat late, but with optional practices already underway the need is becoming vital.

Those interested may call Salem athletic manager John Robinson at (313) 475-9611, or may phone the main office at (313) 416-7774.

Legion wins title

The perfect ending to a perfect season.

American Legion bounced through the regular season of Canton Parks and Recreation Services men's softball campaign without suffering a loss, then survived the playoffs the same way -- without a defeat.

It almost required a second game in the double-elimination tournament. Legion entered the last inning of the final round, against ASAP Machine, trailing 8-5. A four-run rally in the bottom of the seventh by coach Gary Chubb's team, however, made any further continuation unnecessary.

American Legion, which compiled a 14-0 record in the regular season, went 4-0 in the playoffs with wins over American Yazaki 15-4, Neumann-Smith 21-5 and ASAP Machine 15-11.

ASAP Machine finished second, beating Woodland Meadows 16-7 and Mexican Fiesta twice, 11-8 and 12-7, before losing to American Legion twice.

Indians still rampaging

The Michigan Indians, a Sandy Koufax baseball team that is almost entirely at the bottom of its 13-14 age division, continues to plow ahead -- no matter who the competition is.

Playing in the Continental Amateur Baseball Association World Series in Tulsa, Okla., last week, the team of 13-year-olds advanced to the championship round by winning four of six games. They beat teams from North Carolina, Guam, New York and Florida, the last a 6-5 win over a Florida team expected to be one of the tournament favorites.

A total of 16 teams were still alive in a tournament that began with more than 4,000 entrants. The championship is expected to be decided by the weekend.

Soccer tryouts

Tryouts for Plymouth Canton's soccer teams will begin at 8 a.m. Monday, at the soccer field in front of Canton's Phase III gymnasium.

Boys who will be starting grades 9-12 are invited to try out. All players must have a physical before beginning.

Questions may be directed to coach Don Smith at (313) 459-7686.

Good Counsel soccer

All those attending Our Lady of Good Counsel who are interested in soccer, take note: tryouts for both boys and girls teams will be open to all students.

No prior experience is required. Tryouts will be in the OLGC gymnasium on the following days: 6-7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 20, for girls in grades 4-6; 7:30-9 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 20 for girls in grades 7-8; 6-7:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 21 for boys in grades 4-6; and 7:30-9 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 21 for boys in grades 7-8.

For further information, call (girls) Pat O'Neill at (313) 455-2743 or (boys) Steve Savastano at (313) 416-1451.

Twisters fall 34-6

The Wayne County Twisters, a semi-pro football team, lost their first game of the season Saturday to the North Coast Rebels, 34-6, in a game played at the Downriver Community Center.

The Twisters are now 1-1 in the Lake Shore League.

David Hamway's punt was blocked and the Rebels recovered in the end zone for a quick 13-0 lead after only five minutes.

After falling behind 20-0, the Twisters, behind the running of Patrick Bowie (from Plymouth Salem), drove to the Rebels' 20, but a dropped pass and penalties pushed them back to the 34.

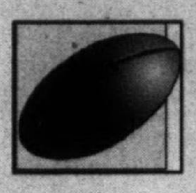
Trailing 26-0 at intermission, the Twisters got on the board in the third quarter with a long drive, including a 14-yard, third-down run by Jeff Platt followed by a 6-yard TD run by Bowie.

The Twisters threatened on two other drives in the second have, but an interception and fumble thwarted the scoring bids.

The Twisters return to action at 8 p.m. Saturday against the Toledo Tornadoes at Raider Stadium.

Hunter's catch aids East

■A victory certainly helped make Saturday's game enjoyable for Canton's Ron Hunter. So did his 35-yard reception that set up a touchdown.



BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

Observerland's gridiron talent went on the offensive Saturday in the Michigan High School Football Coaches All-Star Game.

Eric Curl (Livonia Stevenson), Ron Hunter (Plymouth Canton) and Jake Siskosky (Farmington) saw action on offense and helped the East win 20-12 over the West at Spartan Stadium in East Lansing.

The East led 14-0 at halftime and, after the West got within two points early in the fourth quarter, clinched the victory when Dion Grubbs (Detroit Cooley) sprinted 32 yards on a draw with just under four minutes remaining.

Curl, a standout two-way lineman for Stevenson, played offensive tackle and still enjoyed the game as much as he would have if we had been on defense.

"I still got some pretty good licks," said the 6-foot-3, 246-pound Curl. "I had a pretty good idea I'd be playing that; I just wasn't sure if it would be guard or tackle.

"I love offense just as much; I love hitting. On a couple pulls, I really got the linebacker. On a draw, I hit the linebacker so hard his head snapped back."

That block helped the East advance 15 yards but wasn't the only personal highlight for Curl.

On a bootleg pass play in which the quarterback rolled the opposite way, Curl "peeled around" when his first objective, the defensive tackle, went inside and "leveled the defensive end."

Curl, who is going to perennial Mid-American Conference contender Bowling Green on scholarship, butted heads with plenty of Big Ten players during the week of practice leading up to the game.

"I was looking at that, just to prove to myself I could hang with everybody," Curl said. "I was real happy with my performance."

One of the best friends Curl made during the all-star experience was fellow East offensive tackle Dave Sucura from Sterling Heights Stevenson who is headed to Michigan State.

"I got to know a lot of my teammates well," Curl said. "It was such an awesome experience, meeting all these talented players. I had a blast."

Hunter, a 6-foot-3, 195-pound wide receiver, caught only one pass, but it helped set up the East's first touchdown.

The 35-yard gain was the longest pass play of the day and put the ball on the West 26-yard line. The East scored three plays later.

Hunter would like to have seen the ball a little more, however.

"A lot more," he said. "But we won; so I'm happy."

Hunter discounted the idea it was difficult to install an adequate passing game with only a week of practice time.

East quarterbacks Kevin Kreger (Dearborn) and Matt Loughead (Mount Clemens Chippewa Valley) were 6-of-16 for 80 yards.

"Our passing game was pretty good," Hunter said. "We just need-

Finesse collects USSA World Championship

■ SOFTBALL

Sometimes brute force does it. And sometimes it takes Finesse.

That's Finesse as in the Finesse 18-under softball team that became the state's first United States Slow-Pitch Softball Association champion since 1983 when it won the World Championship in Lexington, S.C., during the weekend.

Finesse lost one game and capped its weekend tournament run with a 4-1 record Sunday against teams from Georgia it had not beaten all season long.

The Finesse 16-under team finished third in its World Championship tournament in Hutchinson, Kans.

Finesse placed five players on the USSSA All-World team. They included Jenny Myslinski (Harrison, WMU), who hit .600 and scored 14 runs in the tournament as the team's leadoff hitter and Vonne Jenks (Garden City, WMU), the shortstop acclaimed the tournament's Defensive MVP who also batted .500 and drove in eight runs.

The others were Christina Bogus-lawski, who hit .600; Sherry Foster, who had three home runs including a grand slam and had 16 RBI; plus tournament MVP Erin Engelkamp, who had five home runs including two grand slams and and had 18 RBI.

In games Friday and Saturday, Finesse won three times to remain in the winner's bracket of the dou-

Late rally makes champions of Lakers

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

First of all, to get to the championship circle, dial up the intensity level.

Both the Broncos and the Lakers did just that in the Metro Summer Hockey League's title game Sunday at the Plymouth Cultural Center. The result was a hard-fought, hard-hitting game that wasn't decided until the final buzzer.

And it took a dramatic three-goal, final-period rally by the Lakers to emerge with the crown, as they edged the Broncos 7-6.

The league's director, Keith Pietila, happens to play for the Lakers, so at least he was pleased with the outcome. "I don't know how we turned it around in the playoffs," he said, referring to the Lakers' 2-6-3 regular-season record.

"When the playoffs go, the intensity definitely picks up. Guys were dropping back on defense more."

A quick look at the scoresheet would provide proof enough of the increase in intensity. Most MSHL games have one, maybe two penalties; the championship game had 15 (nine for the Lakers, six for the Broncos).

The Broncos' got a goal from Brian Consolino, his second of the game, with 8:06 remaining in the final period to take a 6-4 lead.

That was pretty much the way the game had gone all night -- the Broncos would build a lead, the Lakers would battle back, the Broncos would rebuild their lead.

Consolino's first goal had made it 3-1 Broncos with 11:38 left in the second period -- the first of four two-goal leads by the Broncos. The Lakers never led and tied it just once, on Ron Pietila's goal early in the second period to make it 1-1, before the final-period rally.

After Consolino's third-period score, the Lakers

Improvements, expansion part of PCJBA success

The Plymouth Canton Junior Baseball League has concluded another successful season, one marked by the initiation of an aggressive field improvement program.

A fund-raising campaign was begun during the 1996 season with an initial target of improving fields at McClumpha Park and behind the Canton-Salem educational complex.

The four diamonds at McClumpha Park, where the 11- and 12-year-old boys leagues hold their games, were expanded to accommodate 70-foot bases. Fences and light poles are scheduled to be moved back this fall.

The PCJBL also staged its second Classic tournament and had a hand in the girls World Softball tournament at the Canton Softball Center.

■ LITTLE LEAGUE

The boys travel team program was expanded at age levels 10-14 and discussions are ongoing concerning adding girls fast-pitch travel teams next season.

All boys league championships and tournaments were decided by the first week of August.

The Tigers, 3-9 during the regular season, came alive during the post-season tournament to capture the PCJBL's boys F League title with a 6-1 victory over the Giants.

Jeremy Borsos hurled seven strong innings July 30 to lead the Tigers to their third win in the tournament for coach John Gorny, who was assisted by Dan Lindberg.

The Giants of coach Bill Styles had the best regular season record in the F League, which is for 14- and 15-year-old boys.

Members of the Tigers included Borsos, David Branders, Mark Dasher, Mike Dugar, Jim and John Gorney, Ross Huff, Daniel Lindberg, Brian Miedler, Jeremy Murray, Chris Oliver, Daniel Pellar, Steven Roberts and Mark Witthoff.

The Phillies defeated the Mariners for the PCJBL's Prep League (13-year-old boys) championship by winning the first two games of a best-of-three "World Series."

The two teams won their respective divisions during the regular season and the Phillies of coach Mike Plagens had to come from behind to win both contests from coach Alan Yonkman's Mariners. Plagens was assisted by Ken Opalinski, Yonkman by Mike Diedrich.

The Phillies came from behind in the final inning to take the first game, 13-12, after trailing by five on July 22. They trailed by a similar margin in the late stages July 26 before rallying to take a 14-13 victory with two seventh-inning runs.

Members of the Phillies were Daniel Bak, Tim Beier, Michael Harkins, Ellie Jimenez, Patrick Marchek, Andrew Murphy, Steve Nagel, David Oliver, Ryan Opalinski, Andrew Plagens, Mike Schmid, Michael Szlinis and Bradford Wolfe.

The AA League (12-year-old boys) championship went to the Reds, 13-5 in a mercy victory over the Indians.

Mike Vendetti hit a two-run home run in the third inning July 31 as the Reds scored in every inning. Tom Closurdo had three hits, including a pair of doubles, while Carl Space and Nolan Jacek split the pitching.

The Reds finished 14-2-1 for coach Dave Jacek and assistant Carl Space.

Other members of the Reds included Rob DeBoe, Scott Fisher, Robbie Garrett, Brandon Jose, Matt Lindberg, George Lukitsch, Scott McEvilly and Doug McShane.

It took two nights, but the Cardinals defeated the Dodgers, 11-9, to win the A League (11-year-old) boys baseball title.

The teams played 4 1/2 innings July 29 before rain halted play. The two teams picked up where they left off July 30 and the Cardinals held the John Thomason-coached Dodgers off to win.

The Dodgers were coached by Mike Lewis and assisted by Steve Caswell and Jim Commiskey.

Squad members included Madison Bechler, Chris Bednarz, Zachary Caswell, Matthew Cole, David Commiskey, Michael Grau, Sam Hargis, Jason Lewis, Jonathan Pisani, Matthew Schmidt, Casey Skrypek, Chris Vraniak and Brandon Wright.

The Cardinals jumped out to a 6-0 lead but the Dodgers tied the score in the bottom of the second. The Cardinals added four in the third and one in the fourth to take an 11-7 lead at the rain delay. The Dodgers added their final two runs in the fifth.

The Cardinals finished with a 15-6-1 record and a third-place regular season finish. They started the year 6-0 and finished with six tournament victories in a row.

In the BB League championship game (10-year-old boys), a squeeze bunt in the top of the extra inning, the seventh, enabled the Twins to defeat the Cubs, 2-1.

The Twins were coached by Mark Santeiu, with assistants Mike Kwiatkowski and Dave Clark.

The B League (9-year-olds) post-season championship went to the Orioles, who went 9-3-1 during the regular season and won three tournament games.

The Orioles of coach and league director Ron Rzeppa defeated the Phillies, 10-0, in the finals on July 29. Rzeppa was assisted by Tom Byrne, Troy Kimmerlee and Randy Ryba.

Team members included Kenny and Neal Brunner, Eric Byrne, Sean Downey, Craig Greenwell, William Kapelanski, Willie Marchek, Justin McDuff, Thomas Rich, Kyle Ryba, Nathan Rzeppa, David Scherbaty, Jeffery Valantas and Bryan Walker.

struck quickly. Dave Daavettila punched home a goal 31 seconds after Consolino's score to pull the Lakers to within 6-5; then, 1:09 later, Paolo Decina beat Bronco goalie Chris Thomas to tie it at 6-all.

The game-winner came with just 1:01 left, with the Lakers' Aaron Daavettila netting it -- his second of the game, to go with one assist. Dave Daavettila had two goals and an assist, too.

"I don't know what it was," said Keith Pietila. "Once we tied it up, it seemed like anyone's game."

Whoever's game it seemed like, it ended up being the Lakers.

Mike Harris also had a goal for the winners, with Charley Ciuffetelli netting three assists, and Steve Jones and Vic Decina getting two apiece.

Consolino totaled two goals and three assists for the Broncos, with Brent Bessey scoring twice and both Scott Hands and Jeramie Murray getting one goal apiece. Darren Hands had two assists.

Rickey Marnon and Shawn Miller divided time in goal for the Lakers, each giving up three goals. Including playoff and regular-season games, the Lakers had just a 5-6-3 record. The Broncos were 8-6.

One final note: A lack of ice time up north has forced the cancellation of the league champion's trip to Houghton for a two-game series against that summer league's champ. League commissioner Pietila is hoping to renew the alliance next year.

TRAILER NOTES
If hauling a trailer behind the family car or truck is in your vacation plans, here are some hints that may ensure safe motoring: To begin with, avoid the possibility of overloading by understanding that the maximum Gross Vehicle Weight Rating (GVWR), which is comprised of the weight of the loaded vehicle including cargo and passengers, should not be exceeded. Nor should the listed Gross Combined Weight (GCW) of the vehicle and trailer be exceeded. To do so risks compromising safety and causing damage to the vehicle. When loading the trailer, place 60 percent of the cargo weight in the forward position, balance its side-to-side distribution, and keep the cargo low to the floor. Be sure to inflate the tires in both the tow vehicle and trailer to the precise recommendations of the tire manufacturer for your particular load. Finally, shorten the maintenance intervals for the tow vehicle.
Taking these precautions can improve the chances of you and your cargo arriving at your destination safely. At HOLIDAY CHEVROLET INC., we are diligent in solving automotive problems and swift in diagnosis. We offer friendly hometown service, with one-on-one relationships between the technician and you. ble-elimination tournament.

They defeated the DeKalb Travelers of Tennessee, 12-1, edged the Forty Niners of Arkansas, 4-2, and trampled the Mississippi Dixie Darlings, 17-4.

Finesse was the lone non-Georgia team to make it into Sunday's finals.

Their first opponent was the Georgia Bandits, which had beaten Finesse three times earlier in the season.

Of course 14-year old Samantha Crews couldn't have been impressed by that since she was added to the 18-year-olds from the Finesse 14-under team strictly for the tournament.

Crews stepped up as a pinch-hitter in the bottom of the seventh and the score tied, 6-6, and two outs and stroked a single to drive in the winning run.

The defending tournament champion Panthers of Georgia put a 14-1 shellacking on Finesse in the last winner's bracket game.

Finesse stepped over to the loser's bracket and staved off elimination in dramatic fashion.

The Bandits led, 5-2, entering the bottom of the seventh but Finesse rallied for two runs and had runners on first and second with two outs.

The Bandits intentionally walked Engelkamp, daring to put the winning run at second because she had belted a home run earlier in the game.

Bad move. Foster hit one out to make the final 8-5.

That put Finesse into the finals against the unbeaten and rested Panthers.

Finesse drummed on the Panthers, 17-2, to force an extra game, and outscored the defending champions, 16-12, to become the first USSSA World Champions from Michigan team since 1983, when Jake's Harley Davidson won out of Garden City.

Team members included: Jackie Bayliss (Westland John Glenn), Carah Best (Plymouth Salem), Boguslawski (Dearborn St. Alphonsus), Lisa Cox (Wyandotte), Katy Duncan (Westland John Glenn), Engelkamp, Cassie Entsminger (Livonia Ladywood), Christy Feld (Cincinnati), Foster (Dearborn Edsel Ford), Jenks, Jenny Kruzel (Ypsilanti), Kristy McDonald (Redford Thurston), Myslinski, Colleen Wutke (Garden City), Samantha Crews (entering John Glenn), Sarah Lewis (entering Garden City) and Laura Gilliam (Louisville, Ky.).

The team was coached by Don Dreher (Lathrup Village), John Hagy (Westland), Denny Schlimgen (Orlando, Fla.) and Barry Patterson (Garden City).

The Panthers and Bandits were 5-0 against Finesse entering the tournament, including extra innings losses to each in the NSA World Tournament.

ed to use it a little more. The coaches thought we could with the run; we won, so I guess it was a good game plan."

Hunter, who planned to be back at MSU as a walkon player when practice started Monday, said he wasn't thinking of future exploits on the same field but was concentrating on the all-star game.

But it was an opportunity "to show my talent, because the Michigan State coaches were watching," he said. "I thought this would be a good time to show them what I can do. I guess I'll have to go out and show them in practice."

The 6-foot-1, 195-pound Siskosky expected to play outside linebacker but was made an all-purpose back the first day of practice.

He played almost the entire game on offense, being used as a blocking back, flanker and wingback depending on the play.

"I took this week to be good preparation," Siskosky said, "because I'll be playing the same position there (Ferris State University) and I've got a little head start now."

In that position, "I get a lot of pass routes; I do a little of everything -- run the ball, block and lineup as a wideout."

Siskosky caught two passes for 9 yards Saturday, but the all-time leading rusher at Farmington High never got a chance to rush the ball.

"I was a little disappointed; I thought I'd get it at least a couple times," he said. "I was still happy to play in this game.

"On a screen play, I got a first down, and I had a really good block on the first TD."

Siskosky acknowledged being unaccustomed to blocking since he carried the ball 25 to 30 times from the tailback position at Farmington.

"I got used to it; it's not so hard," he said.

Two other former Observerland players were slated to play for the East but didn't.

Farmington Harrison tailback Jason Granger was dismissed from the team for missing curfew, and Plymouth Salem lineman Tom Bish withdrew because of a recurring back injury.

Bish got a medical clearance to play too late in the week, however, to practice enough times and still play.

With fall approaching, now's the time to get ready

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

With the "Dog Days" of summer at hand, it won't be long before the winds of change usher in cooler weather and the bountiful harvests of fall. And with the change of seasons come a change of activities for Michigan's one million-plus sportsmen and sportswomen as fishing rods are replaced with rifles, shotguns and bows.

Opening day is just a few weeks away. The early elk season begins Sept. 9, bear season opens Sept. 10, small game season starts Sept. 15 and archery deer season begins Oct. 1. If you haven't begun honing your shooting skills, time is running out.

Shooting ranges are open at several locations in Wayne and Oakland counties but be sure to call ahead to see what time the range is open to the public. Many private clubs are open for members only at certain times and open to the public at others.

Shooting ranges are offered at both the Pontiac Lake Recreation Area near Waterford, (810) 666-1020, and the Bald Mountain Recreation Area in Lake Orion, (810) 814-9193. Shooting opportunities are also available at the Multi-Lakes Conservation Association in Walled Lake, (810) 363-7030; the Detroit Gun Club in Walled Lake, (810) 624-9647; the Western Wayne County Conservation Association in Plymouth, (313) 453-9843; the Wayne County Sportsmen's Club in Romulus (313) 941-9688; the Oakland County Sportsmen's Club in Clarkston (810) 623-0444; and the North Oakland Sprtsmen's Club in Oxford, (801) 628-9137. Archery shooting opportunities exist at many of the above locations as well as Detroit Archers in West Bloomfield, (810) 661-2550, and Royal Oak Archers in Lake Orion, (810) 693-9799.

But before we jump into fall, let's enjoy the summer and check out some more fishing tournament results.

Bass Champions

A pair of Rochester anglers topped the seven-boat field in the Bass Champions Tournament for Michigan Division I held recently on the Detroit River. With a five-fish limit that weighed 13.18-pounds, David A. Fairchild and David W. Fairchild claimed the top prize of $490. Auburn Hills anglers Mark Malvich and Mike McQueen placed second with five fish that tipped the scale at 11.93-pounds and Redford's Louis Favaro and Leo Favaro placed third with five fish which weighed 10.99 pounds.

The final Bass Champions Michigan Division Tournament will be held Saturday, Aug. 24, on the Detroit River. Call Mike Dyer at (810) 674-1472 for additional information.

PWT update

Two local anglers competed in the three-day In-Fisherman Professional Walleye Trail Lubri-Matic/Stren Eastern Pro-Am tournament recently on Saginaw Bay.

Thomas Rossman of Farmington Hills caught 10 walleye for a total weight of 45.02-pounds, while Bob Zenstra of Plymouth netted three fish which weighed 20.34-pounds. Both anglers were competing in the amateur division. Fred Goodrow of AuGres won the amateur division with 15 fish which tipped the scale at 102.39-pounds. Shannon Kehl, a resident of Bismark, North Dakota, topped the pro division with 18 fish and a total weight of 118-pounds. Goodrow also captured the biggest fish award with a whopping 11.48-pounder.

The tournament attracted 127 professional walleye anglers and 123 amateurs

Bass Bash results

Oxford resident Billy Edwards teamed up with Warren's Jeff Shafranski to win the Bass Bash tournament Saturday on Stringy Lakes in Oxford. The duo netted four largemouth with a total weight of 7-pounds, 2-ounces.

Second place went to Dale Caddick of Lake Orion and Mark Lamphgere of Waterford with four fish that weighed 6-pounds, 12-ounces.

Wear a life jacket

With one of the busiest boating weekends rapidly approaching it's a good time to remind boaters to wear a life jacket. This reminder isn't just for Labor Day weekend, but for the entire boating season.

Approximately 80 percent of water fatalities in Michigan could have been prevented if the victims had been wearing life jackets, according to K.L. Cool, director of Michigan Department of Natural Resources, which helps enforce boating regulations in the state.

The DNR is currently conducting a children's life jacket give away in an effort to promote safety on the water. DNR conservation officers on patrol at popular recreation areas across the state are distributing postcards to young boaters who can enter a drawing to win a life jacket.

Healthy or Harmful

Breast implant debate continues

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

Gloria Bywalec has awakened from what she calls her "silicone nightmare," and wants to send a wake-up call to other women as well.

Meanwhile, the former leading manufacturer of silicon breast implants continues to maintain the safety of these products some four years after they stopped producing them, and the safety of using silicone in other medical implements.

Bywalec, a Canton resident and registered nurse who had saline breast implants encased in silicone for 15 months, said she went through such trauma and physical pain because of her body's rejection of the silicone, that she is sharing her experience in a book.

Called "Betrayed," the book is written and published by Bywalec and her sister, Anna Marie Rzeppa, who also lives in Canton and is an RN. A portion of the proceeds of the book will be donated to the Silicone Implant Follow-Up Service, a clinic in Memphis, Tenn. which treats patients who have had implants and subsequent medical problems.

A one-year project, the book shares Bywalec's story and the stories of others. They also began a networking process around the world with others who have had similar experiences. "Our book . . . is about the innocent victims. It's designed to open the eyes of the unbelievers, close the wounds of the broken-hearted and offer truth, hope, help and understanding," said Bywalec, who has physical tremors, trouble functioning and some memory impairment which she said she did not experience before the implants.

Writing the book was also a therapy for these women. "It was definitely a healing process for me," she added.

Representatives from Midland-based Dow Corning, the largest manufacturer of silicone breast implants until 1992, cite some 13 studies, including some done by Johns Hopkins, the Mayo Clinic, and several large universities which refute the relationship between these physical problems and breast implants.

Dow Corning, owned by parent companies Dow Chemical of Midland and Corning, Inc. of New York, has been operating under Chapter II federal bankruptcy protection since May 1995 because of the more than $4 billion in claims from a class-action suit stemming from silicone implant lawsuits.

"We still stand 100 percent behind the safety of the product," said Barb Muessig, media relations manager for Dow Corning, She added that, although there has been a moratorium on using silicon implants for breast augmentation since 1992, they are still used for breast reconstruction, and saline implants like those for Bywalec are still being sold on the open market and are approved by the FDA.

Bywalec no longer works due to her disability, and travels to Harper Hospital twice each month for blood cleansing treatments which cost her insurance carrier between $4,000 and $6,000 per treatment.

She estimates some 400,000 women have had similar experiences "and those are only the ones we know about," she said. She said although many think saline implants are safe, they are still encased in silicone and her experience belies this. Silicone in a woman's body can also pass through the placenta and through a nursing mother's milk to babies, she said, which is something many women are not told.

The book's cover shows a shadow figure of a woman and was designed by Rzeppa's eight-year-old son and Bywalec's nephew, Nathan. According to the authors, the figure represents "The 'Eve' of a New Beginning" for many women, and is designed to be a symbol for women to honor and respect themselves and to respect their bodies as they are: without surgical alteration.

"I have come to realize that I am much more than my body image," said Bywalec, who had her implants in February 1993, while in her early 40s, and had them removed on Memorial Day weekend in 1994. "I learned to 'love yourself for what you are.'

"Sometimes it takes losing our health to realize what we're all about."

She said she hopes her situation has opened the eyes of her adult daughters, although she is concerned about the message she may have sent by having the implants put in. She also feels hurt by her medical profession, she said, which offered misinformation, and "betrayed" her — thus the name of her book.

Two plastic surgeons from the Houston, Tex. area approached Dow Corning with the idea of manufacturing the original silicone implants in the early 1960s. They became popular in the mid-1960s, and today between 750,000 and one million of implants manufactured by several large companies have been surgically implanted, according to Dow Corning information.

Epidemiologist Patti Klein, a Dow Corning scientist, said that, although today's studies show no link between implants and illness, that much of this research wasn't available when the surge of complaints began to surface in the early 1990s. She said pressure from patients, attorneys and negative media coverage fueled the process, until it was out of control.

"It wasn't that the company wasn't able to get it together," she

New school offers healthy dose of learning

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

■ 'It's real life ... the academy will help to channel these skills into something real and practical. It really will make them much more aware of what's out there. It gives them a bird's-eye view of the health care field.'

Sandy Hudson
president of the board, Michigan Health Academy

The need for a more skilled work force in the health care industry is prompting a new public, charter high school program to open this fall in Wayne County, and two competing hospitals to partner in the venture.

The first of its kind in Michigan, and only one of a handful of health care trade academies in the country, the Michigan Health Academy is seeking out high school juniors and seniors who are interested in getting specialized health care career training while earning their high school diplomas.

"This is really innovative for us – we've always been major competitors," said Sandy Hudson, director of Oakwood's Community Focused Health Promotion Network and president of the new school's board of trustees, in discussing the partnership between Oakwood Healthcare System and Henry Ford Health System. "We see this as an opportunity to develop a work force, and also to develop something special in our community."

"Charter school" status for the Michigan Health Academy was granted by Saginaw Valley State University, which will oversee the school's operational charter.

The specialized high school will accommodate up to 200 students – 100 in each grade – and will receive per-pupil funding from the state, just as other public schools do. The first year will focus on traditional high schools courses, as well as selecting a study emphasis from three areas:

■ therapeutic – which could include careers such as nursing assistants, patient care assistants, pharmacy and operating room technicians and respiratory aides;

■ diagnostic – which could include radiology technicians, phlebotomists, ultrasound and EKG technicians and cardiac catheterization technicians; and

PoliticsNow

Go online for the best in political flavor

O & E ONLINE

EMORY DANIELS

Extensive coverage this summer's national political conventions can be found easily on the Internet, especially if you point to the PoliticsNow site at http://www.politicsnow.com.

The site is sponsored by ABC News, the Washington Post, National Journal, Newsweek and the Los Angeles Times.

News reports of what people in southeastern Michigan are doing at both conventions will be filed by the Observer & Eccentric's own Tim Richard on the News Stand site operated by O&E Online. After the gavel drops, point to http://oeonline.com/news.html.

PoliticsNow will take you to the floor and behind the scenes of both the Republican and Democratic national conventions with in-depth coverage and interactive features that let you express yourself as a "virtual delegate" on the issues facing both parties.

If you are not in San Diego or Chicago, you still can chat with the politicians and the political experts online. You may not be on the GOP Platform Committee but you will be able to read the entire Republican platform online and compare it to the 1992 planks.

PoliticsNow round-the-clock convention coverage will include:

■ All the speeches, real-time results from the roll call votes on the floor, all the floor fights, and all the news form the floor as well as real-time audio of major speeches, daily video and audio clips of convention highlights.

■ A variety of interactive features to allow users to casts votes on important convention issues. Users also will be able to vote online for Bob Dole's choice for a running mate.

■ Exclusive interviews and live auditorium events with key convention participants, major politicians, and leading journalists such as David Broder, Peter Jennings, David Brinkley, George Will, Sam Donaldson, Hal Bruno or Howard Fineman.

■ Online discussions as each day's events unfold.

Prior to the conventions, users can go to PoliticsNow for interactive biographies of Bill Clinton and Bob Dole and or to enter a contest to win a trip to the Presidential Inauguration.

■ Point your Web browser to http://hcs.harvard.edu/~hpr/ to find the Harvard Political Review, a non-partisan journal of both domestic and international issues. Published quarterly, each issue offers fresh, in-depth analysis of the political world while maintaining a clear and accessible style.

"The Interactive Biographies of Clinton and Dole" presents the biographies of both using a storytelling format, rich with video, audio and photographs.

What do Bob Dole's army buddies have to say about him? Want to listen to Clinton playing the sax? How did Dole fumble during the 1976 vice-presidential debates? Have you heard Clinton's infamous letter to the ROTC officer?

These moments, plus hundreds more from their personal and political lives, can be found along with a photo timeline from 1923 to the present to chronicle the lives of both side-by-side.

A feature called "Generation Gap" compares Clinton the Baby Boomer with "GI Generation" Dole at the same stage in their lives and looks at the culture of the time. For example, when Dole was a teenager Glen Miller was hot; in Clinton's teen years, Roy Orbison and the Beatles topped the charts.

Another feature called "Time Capsule" looks at where each man was at a turning point in history, such as the Kennedy assassination, as well as where each stood on pivotal issues such as Roe vs. Wade.

"The Inaugural Bowl" is a new political trivia game available on PoliticsNow with the grand prize being a trip for two to Washington, D.C., for the Inauguration valued at $3,500. To play the game, players select states, each of which has point values equal to the number of votes each state has in the Electoral College, and then answer questions for each state. The goal is to get 270 electoral votes (the amount needed to win the presidency). Once in office, each player must correctly answer one final question to be eligible for the grand prize drawing. Entrants must be 18 or older and entries must be received by Nov. 1, 1996.

Phone chief: he's getting a new phone number too

If there were a better way, the president of Ameritech wouldn't be getting a new phone number next year.

That's according to Bob Cooper, new president of Ameritech. He spoke to area business and political leaders at a recent luncheon.

Forty-five new area codes will go into effect in the United States this year. "This story is repeating itself all over," he said. Pagers, faxes, personal computers, and cellular phones have combined to exhaust area codes more quickly than any one could have imagined even 10 years ago.

With all the changes happening in the local phone service, long distance and cable TV industries, Ameritech is looking at how Michigan can capitalize on the changes, Cooper said.

Advanced telecommunications are a tool that can be used to drive and manage growth, he said. Technology puts money in people's pockets and puts technology in businesses and schools, he said.

Ameritech is making a significant investment, with a $521 million budget in Michigan, Cooper said.

Some people say Ameritech's investment is because of competition, but they are ignoring history, he said. One hundred years have been spent building the telephone company, he said.

"We happen to live in one of the most progressive states in the nation. We could very well be the first state to reach total competition," he said, it's a three-way race between Michigan, Illinois and New York.

"It means that Michigan residents can be the big winners," he said.

Cooper said his mother, who is 85, often wonders why she has to deal with multiple companies for long distance and local phone service.

"It's clear to me, my mother and the people of this state deserve to have that choice," he said.

Companies have "had a hammerlock too long," he said. Long distance companies have raised prices at their own will, he said.

More and more companies like Ameritech are getting into long distance, he said.

And Ameritech is entering the cable TV business in nine communities in Wayne County, including Plymouth and Plymouth Township. This competition brings better service from existing cable companies, and "it's going to get even better as we continue to ratchet," he said.

"Competition creates its own growth," he said. "The pie gets bigger with competition."

"We welcome the competition. We always have because we're ready."

mation mailing. Officials said about 50 students are already enrolled for the opening semester.

School begins the day after Labor Day, and an open house for interested parents and students is scheduled for 5:30-7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 20, at 15100 Northline Road, Room 155B, in the Downriver Community Conference Center, one half mile east of I-75. Call (313) 284-4569 for information. No public transportation is provided for students attending the new school.

The partnership received a $65,000 state planning grant to get the school started, Hudson said. They hired Synergy Training Solutions, a consulting firm which helped design the school's curriculum and will run the school administration, help hire teaching staff and coordinate other services such as clerical and janitorial.

"It's a new business, and we have to break old paradigms," said Synergy vice president Chris Tooley. "We're giving that student a multi-skill advantage, plus a high school degree."

The company has specialized in health care education and consulting, and has also worked closely with the charter school movement in Lansing, she said.

For this project, they used a team of instructional designers from Wayne State University to bring the curriculum together.

With the many changes occurring in the health care industry, hospitals and other providers are seeking to have employees who can step easily into entry-level positions with minimal training. "As health care changes, these positions are changing," said Hudson. "They will need multiple skills. Our academy can provide that range of exposure.

"It's real life ... the academy will help to channel these skills into something real and practical. It really will make them much more aware of what's out there. It gives them a bird's-eye view of the health care field."

Any student who is a resident of Michigan is eligible for enrollment in the academy.

said. "But the research just takes time. A two-year turnaround (on research) is very good."

"The allegation is that the company didn't care," she added. "That they were in it for the money. The money was paltry" — representing only about one half of one percent of the company's business, she said.

Problems begin

About six months after having her implants put in, Bywalec said she began experiencing extreme fatigue, constant numbness in the left foot and a rash.

Thinking she had to take better care of herself, she tried to eat better, take vitamins and get more exercise and allowed the symptoms to persist for six months. "By the time I sought medical attention, I thought I was dying," she said. "I limped; my whole body was numb."

Her doctors diagnosed that her immune system had "turned on itself," attacking the protective covering of her nerves, which she said mimicked the silicone covering her implants. There is no cure for her chronic condition.

Rzeppa watched as this happened. "I adored her all of my life — she's my older sister," said Rzeppa, talking about why she got involved in writing the book.

"I just saw this healthy, beautiful woman deteriorating. It just tugged at my heart. I called her one morning and told her 'Glor, we're going to write a book'."

Bywalec and Rzeppa have traveled to support groups, rallies, and other events to tell their story, and are offering "Betrayed" to others. They also have had lapel pins designed based on the "Eve" figure, and also have bookmarks with a poem written by Bywalec.

"I would say to anyone contemplating this procedure: to a support group and talk with the women there," Bywalec said. "Have all the facts before making a decision."

Dow Corning's Klein said she is concerned that the reasons for these women's health problems are being obscured by years of bad publicity about implants: That the implants are getting the blame, when there are other problems not being properly diagnosed.

"It is not a question of whether these women are sick," she said. "Many women with implants are very sick. But so are women without (implants) — they just don't have a breast implant to blame. The real tragedy, is that the real cause of these problems is not being addressed and women are not being offered a cure and relief."

(To contact Gloria Bywalec or Anna Marie Rzeppa, write to Betrayed, P.O. Box 87203, Canton, MI 48187-0203 or call (313) 981-6775.

COMEDIANS GET SERIOUS FOR

Gilda Radner's Dream

STORY BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

When her best friend's daughter was diagnosed with cancer, Farmington comedian Alyce Faye wasn't sure how to react.

"It came with a whole emotional bag that we just didn't know how to deal with," Faye said. "We didn't know what to say. You're afraid you're going to say the wrong thing. It was like walking on egg shells. Here is a child that my son played with on a regular basis. When you have children you sit around and talk about well, 'When they grow up , maybe they'll do this, maybe they'll do that.' Never did we think that Stephanie wouldn't grow up."

So when Faye read about Gilda's Club, a cancer support center named after comedian Gilda Radner who died of the disease, she immediately wanted to be a part of it.

"I want to commit my life to raising funds for this because I feel that we are blessed with so many good medical facilities that can treat the condition, but we really didn't have a place that dealt with all the emotions and the psychological effects of the disease."

"When somebody gets cancer, people don't know how to react to them. Sometimes they stop calling. They're afraid they might say the wrong thing. They don't stop over. That's what Gilda's Club is about. It's a network system for cancer patients, their families and friends and it deals with the emotional, psychological and educational parts of this disease."

After less than three years of fund-raising and searching for an appropriate site, Gilda's Club, Metro Detroit has purchased a three-story, 5,300-square-foot building at 3517 Rochester Road, Royal Oak. It is symbolic for the club that the purchase coincides with the former Detroiter's 50th birthday.

To continue to help the club and to pay tribute to her mentor, Faye has organized "Laughs Across America," a benefit comedy performance at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 25, at the Royal Oak Music Theatre, 318 W. Fourth St., Royal Oak.

Tickets for the 21 and older show are $75 for suite seating that includes buffet dinner, $55 VIP preferred seating, and $35 for regular seating. The show is dedicated to two of Faye's friends Dee Krosnick of Franklin and Carol Silverman of Bloomfield Hills who recently died of cancer. Former Berkley resident Mary Miller, who co-founded the Motor City Women of Comedy with Faye, lost her mother to cancer a year ago.

The Motor City Women of Comedy benefit is also a registration site for the third annual Gilda's Club Family Walk and Block Party which will be held on Sunday, Sept. 29, at Cobo Center, Detroit. For more information about that event, call (810) 851-6557.

The Royal Oak Music Theatre performance features the rest of the Motor City Women of Comedy – Coco of Detroit, WNIC's Stacey DuFord of Bloomfield Hills, ex-Warren resident Lisa Goich of Los Angeles, Gilda Hauser of Southfield, Jennie McNulty of Royal Oak, Maria Menozzi of Grosse Pointe, and WDIV-TV's Jill Washburn of Rochester – sketch comedy by Karen and Darrin Brege of Totally Unrehearsed Theater, and special guest Sean Kanan who plays "A.J. Quartermaine" on the ABC daytime soap "General Hospital."

Faye, who will serve as emcee with Miller, explained that it is fitting that Kanan is participating because his character's mother on the show had breast cancer.

"Alyce Faye is a friend of mine," Kanan said via telephone from his Los Angeles home. "I came in and did a show at Gadzook's (comedy club in White Lake Township) and she asked me do it. I was more than happy to help."

Kanan, who will play Fran Drescher's love interest for the first few episodes of the "Nanny" this fall, explained that he tries to do stand-up comedy at least once a month. Most of his material comes from "General Hospital" but he said he also does impersonations.

Faye co-founded the Motor City Women of Comedy with Miller in 1993 "to use their comedic talents to promote good will and assist select organizations in raising funds." The group's line-up changes every year.

"It seemed to be like a good old boys network out there. The men got tired of hearing us say that, but we feel it's true. We really wanted to show that women are funny. A lot of times when they hear 'a woman comedian,' they think that's all we can do is get up there and male bash or talk about feminine hygiene products," Faye explained.

"A lot of us don't even talk about that because we're already labeled. They think that we can't be funny. But we can be just as funny as our male friends."

But, she stressed, men are just as welcome as women.

"We do many things and we can invite men in and have men as guests. We don't want people to think that we only perform for women. We're very interested in women's issues because we are women. We're very interested in promoting women in business and in anything that we can do. But we love those men. We're willing to do shows for men and we're willing to help men because we know they need humor and they need laughter."

The Motor City Women of Comedy's goal is to raise $1 million for different charities. So far, the group has raised $80,000 for various organizations and charities, with $33,000 of it going to Gilda's Club.

"We would like to take ('Laughs Across America') across America and put on different shows in different cities for different functions. It can be for whatever is needed in the community. We really like to do stuff with cancer research. It's really something that Mary and I are committed to."

Listen closely while walking through the "Peace Through Art" exhibition at Livonia City Hall and you can almost hear the artists chanting "all we are saying is give peace a chance."

Laura Callow, Human Rights Commission chairperson, let her eyes and heart guide her in organizing the show of painting, photography, assemblage and collage. The late German printmaker Fritz Eichenberg lived John Lennon's philosophy. His "Peace Endangered" wood engraving continues to move people like Callow.

On loan from the permanent collection of Swords into Plowshares Peace Center and Gallery in Detroit's Theater District, the group exhibition of art ranges from commentaries on the flag by Canton Township watercolorist Connie Lucas to Detroit artist Carl Owens' "In Memory of 2200 Slain Black South Africans."

Vladimir Shenkarenko was a photographer during the Chernobyl nuclear disaster 10 years ago in Ukraine. His photograph of a child's bedroom, "Nuclear Accident: Chernobyl," is wrought with emotion. Shenkarenko, who suffered radiation poisoning symptoms from the "accident," is thought to have died as a result of his exposure.

While most works were created by artists old enough to have lived through the Vietnam War, it is the art of children, wise beyond their years, that stimulates viewers to consider a world of peace and love for all living things. One collage by students of North Ohio Elementary in Gaylord features slogans urging the keeping of peace in the Middle East as well as a plea to protect wild animals.

"The Human Relations Commission is interested in creating good will and harmony. The Peace Center's goals are the same," said Laura Callow who curated the exhibit with Roberta Young.

"We wanted to show the way artists interpret peace because I believe power and goodwill begin at home. We feel the arts are always a way of presenting subjects. Art is universal and a powerful way of working toward peace which I think is much needed in our world."

Roberta Young seconded Callow's idea.

"The topic of peace is of interest to everyone," said Young. "With the bombing of TWA and all the terrorism in the world today, we all have to work for peace and that's what the exhibit is all about."

Well known for his illustrations of books in the '30s and '40s, Fritz Eichenberg (1901-1990) dedicated his life and work to peace. The haunting black and white wood engravings for Dostoevsky's "Crime and Punishment" and "The Brothers Karamozov," "The Tales of Edgar Allen Poe" and other classics by Tolstoy, Pushkin, Goethe, Erasamus, and the Bronte sisters were particularly well suited to portraying the tragedies of war. Born in Cologne Eichenberg, at the age of 16, was introduced to the work of Goya and Daumier whose dark documentaries of war fed his desire to become an artist with a message. Eichenberg and his family fled from Berlin at the height of The Great

Performing in Atlanta during Olympics thrills dancers

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Electricity filled the air at Joanne's Dance Extension as members of the senior company began a final dress rehearsal for performances at the Coca Cola Olympic Center in downtown Atlanta. Dance students ages 13 to 21, along with an array of professional international performers, singers, dancers and musicians entertained Centennial Olympic Games tourists at the venue across the street from Centennial Park.

"It was a huge shock to be invited in the first place. We are the only dancers from Michigan," said Joanne Zavisa who founded the Plymouth studio 12 years ago. "On top of that we were given an elite status because we didn't have to audition."

Team captain Marie Harrison led the 36 dancers hailing from Plymouth, Canton, Westland, Novi, Northville, South Lyon, Belleville, Taylor, and Brighton. The company had worked tirelessly for the last six months washing cars and selling cookbooks and flowers to raise $900 each in order to go. Blackwell Ford, C. D. Sparling and attorney Fred Brunk provided strong financial support. Donations of toothbrushes, bottled water and sports drinks, and various sundries were solicited and collected by Kim Hancock, one of the dancers mother's.

"The dancing and the trip both give them organizational and time management skills," said Zavisa who was up until 2 a.m. the previous night doing the necessary paperwork.

Although the trip was a glorious proposition, it was also a tiring affair. Dancers rose at 4:30 a.m. to board a bus for a two hour ride to Atlanta. Once there, they rehearsed, ate, performed, and boarded the bus for the ride back to the dorms at the University of Georgia.

For the last two weeks, dancers prepared for the heat by practicing their routines in the parking lot every day. From a video, they learned to sing and dance the Coca Cola Family routine that had them singing and dancing while a three-story bottle of the beverage was uncapped. Nothing, not even the bomb in Centennial Park, deterred their enthusiasm and determination to participate in this one-in-a-lifetime experience. A student at Plymouth Canton High School, Harrison, seemed cautious about the trip but not overly so.

"We were a little concerned at first but they've tightened security. The standards are pretty high," said Harrison who was excited about dancing with professionals.

Amanda Nora of Plymouth was in Atlanta performing with the Mid-American Pompon Team when the bomb exploded. When she arrived the busses were checked before entering the city. Security that had been tight before, became intense. Her teams' downtown shopping days were canceled and students had to remain in restricted areas.

"Going back is a little scary but you have to put it in perspective," said Amanda Nora, a Mercy High School student. Added Zavisa, before the performance. "They'll probably be safer than going to a rock concert."

Mark Christiansen, Plymouth's new finance director, wasn't really worried his 13-year-old daughter Lauren would be traveling to Atlanta.

The benefits of Lauren's dancing, including increased self-esteem and development of discipline as well as the chance to display her talents, far outweighs the risks.

"Lauren's dancing has provided her with numerous opportunities like dancing at Disneyland. Being at the Olympics is a once in a lifetime opportunity. In light of the events that occurred there's a concern but I think they have security under control," said Mark Christiansen.

Lauren, a student at Cook Elementary in Plymouth, was oblivious to everything but the fact she was going.

"It's real exciting," Lauren Christiansen said, before leaving for the trip. "The Olympics is such a big thing."

Depression because he sensed the evil of Hitler that would follow.

For 10 years he taught at the New School for Social Research in New York City. Later, he was on the staff of Pratt Institute in Brooklyn and the University of Rhode Island. Eichenberg became a members of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) in 1940 because he was dedicated to their teachings of peace.

His own book, "Endangered Species" dealt with the subjects of war and the final nuclear blast. Nominated for the National Book Award in 1980, the book played on animal fables with a twist. In a self portrait engraved in 1938, Eichenberg wrote "it is my hope in some small way to contribute to peace through compassion and also to the recognition." His work definitely fits the world peace concept of the exhibition.

Shirley Veit joined the 14 member Human Relations Commission twenty years ago. Founded in the early '60s after news reports of a racial incident in a neighboring community Livonia Citizens for Better Human Relations, of which Veit was a part of, preceded the Human Relations Commission created by City Council in 1966. The mission of commissioners, appointed by the mayor for three year terms, is to foster mutual respect and promote amicable relations among all segments of racial, religious and ethnic groups. Serving as a mediator of civil rights complaints within the community, the commission seeks to sensitize residents to the growing ethnic diversity among its citizens and to combat discrimination wherever it may arise. In the past it has held poster and essay contest as an end to these means. The commission was only one of the sponsors for recognition of Martin Luther King Day this year.

"The intent has always been to respond to any racial discrimination complaint because I feel strongly that all people are created equal," said Veit.

Pairing for Peace

Since Swords into Plowshares was founded in 1985 as a project of Central United Methodist Church the gallery in Detroit's Theater District has acquired significant works speaking to the need for peace and justice in a troubled world. According to Lois White at the peace museum, "the center and gallery is a creative response to a world of war and violence. We challenge artists to use their creativity around the theme of peace because as we all know the arts are a powerful persuader."

Redford artist Jack Keijo Steele will exhibit 25 years of paintings Aug. 18 through Sept. 8 at the Scarab Club, 217 Farnsworth, behind the Detroit Institute of Arts. The public is invited to attend an opening reception 2-5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 18.

A native of Ironwood, Steele attended Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills. In 1994 his early works, which earned him recognition as one of the Urban Realists of the 40s and 50s, were featured in an exhibit at Cranbrook. The paintings in the Scarab Club exhibit have never been shown before. Hours are noon to 5 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. For information call (313) 831-1250.

JAZZ CONCERT

Ursula Walker and the Buddy Budson Band are special guest artists in the Jazzical Nites series 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 10 at the Plymouth Community Arts Council, 774 N. Sheldon. Tickets are $12.50 and available in Plymouth at Frances Jewelry Gallery, the arts council office or by calling (313) 416-4ART.

Walker won a CLIO for best vocal performance. Over the years, she's worked with Matt Michaels at the London Chop House and Bess Bonier. Budson, who's been married to Walker for 20 years, is an accomplished composer and orchestrator. He has played with the Four Tops, Henry Mancini and Buddy Rich.

ARTISTS OF THE MONTH

The Livonia Arts Commission will host a variety of mediums and subject matters at its three venues during the month of August. "Peace Through Art," a mixed media exhibit curated by the city's Human Relations Commission, gives viewers plenty of food for thought in these troubling times of terrorist bombings. The work by recognized local and international artists continues on display through Aug. 30 at Livonia City Hall. Hours: 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday-Friday.

Norma McQueen of Garden City shows original paintings of florals, landscapes and genre scenes in the showcases at the Livonia Civic Center Library through Aug. 28. McQueen, who strives to leave the world with her personal interpretation of beauty captured on canvas and paper, is director of The Art Gallery in Garden City.

Egg tempera painting is rarely shown except in mixed media group exhibitions and then only one or two examples of this ancient method are included because few artists have the patience to work in the medium. Livonia artist Victor Vicini specializes in the intricate, time consuming art. His recent egg tempera paintings will be on display in the fine arts gallery at the Livonia Civic Center Library through Aug. 30.

The use of egg tempera originated in medieval Europe. Artists who worked primarily in this pain staking medium include Botticelli, Giotto, Fra Angelico, and contemporary painter Andrew Wyeth. Vicini recently began incorporating gold leaf into his paintings.

Hours for shows at the Civic Center Library are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday to Thursday, and until 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Ceramist is DIA artist in residency

In conjunction with the exhibit "African Form and Imagery: Detroit Collects," which continues through Jan. 5, the Detroit Institute of Arts hosts Nairobi-born ceramist Magdalene Odundo for an artist-in-residency program in August.

Odundo, world-renowned for her unusual style of hand-working clay, creates pieces that aren't only strikingly beautiful but also combine various associations and meanings with function.

Odundo assimilates a variety of sources in her work, including traditions of vessel-making from Britain and the American Southwest as well as methods used by 20th century peoples of sub-Saharan Africa, to derive an approach to transforming clay into compelling, provocative ceramic statements.

While her work may be viewed on one level for its exquisite beauty, her pieces evoke a feeling that there is a deeper meaning within them. The DIA, is at 5200 Woodward, call (313) 833-7900 for more information.

■ The Detroit Institute of Arts periodically offers opportunities for artists to teach workshops related to special exhibits and its permanent collection. Teacher certification isn't required. Typically these workshops consist of one-, two- or three-day programming and are offered to children, adults and/or teachers.

The DIA is updating its files to include local artists who may be interested in teaching workshops for the museum.

If you are an artist who wishes to be included for future consideration, forward a copy of your resumé, one to five slides of your work that can be kept on file and a brief artist's statement to Lisa Blackburn, Education Department, Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward, Detroit 48202.

TRAVEL

Don't pass up transportation, museum bargains

BY JENNIFER MERIN
AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Cities throughout Europe, Asia and the United States offer discounts on public transit fares and admissions to museums and other attractions.

Though the pre-paid passes are meant as savings for tourists, locals may find them economical, too.

Rebecca Werner of Las Vegas, on a two-day sightseeing spree in London, paid $4.50 for a One Day Travelcard and figured she saved $15.

"I'm riding the Underground for free, at this point," she said. "My one-day transit pass was paid for when I entered the Tube the third time. This is ride six, and I still have three more places I want to go this afternoon. Then this evening, I'm planning a long double-decker bus ride just to people-watch."

Except for the Gatwick train and Heathrow Airbus, Travelcards are good for unlimited travel on Britrail trains within London, the Underground and public buses. Public transit in London is based on distance traveled. The passes, sold at all Underground stations, are $4.50 for Central London and $6 for a six-zone pass. They are valid from 9:30 a.m. on weekdays and all day on weekends and holidays.

Werner also bought a White Card, an all-inclusive pass to 13 of London's top museums, including the Victoria & Albert, Imperial War Museum, the Museums of Science and Natural History, Museum of the Moving Image and the Royal Academy. The White Card is $31 for three days, $45 for seven days. Regular admission averages $8 to $9, so the savings is substantial.

In Amsterdam, where a transit ticket averages just under $2, a Daypass is about $8 for one day, $10.50 for two days and $2.50 for each additional day. Passes are sold at train and subway stations. In addition, one-day passes are available from bus and tram drivers.

The Amsterdam Pass covers admission or offers discounts to 28 attractions. It is $17 for three days at any city tourist kiosk or office. The Rijksmuseum and Van Gogh Museum are included, but the Anne Frank House is not.

In Paris, tourists may buy transit passes at Metro and RER (commuter train) stations. The Formule 1, a one-day pass, ranges from $6.50 to $21 depending on the number of zones. A Paris-Visite pass, good for up to five days, is $14.50 to $66.50, depending on the number of days and the zones. On average, five rides would cover the cost of a one-day pass.

La Carte Musees et Monuments is $13 for one day, $27 for three days and $38 for five days. It covers admissions to the Louvre, Musee d'Orsay, the Picasso and Rodin museums, Centre Georges Pompidou and 60 other sites.

On the Pacific Rim, the Tokyo Free Kippu offers unlimited use of subway and rail lines within Tokyo and of the Kanto Bus Lines. The pass is $15.50 per day at any subway or railroad station. Subway rides normally cost about $2 to $3 each.

In Australia, Sydney's transit pass is a real deal at $30 for three days, $39 for five days or $65 for seven days. It covers airport buses; the red Sydney Explorer tour buses, which make 22 stops around town; the Rocks-Darling Harbour Tramway Bus and all State Transit ferry and bus services. The pass is valid from 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. It is sold at the airport, on Explorer buses and at State Transit ticket offices.

Sydney also offers an excellent museum access package. Essential Sydney Ticket covers admissions to the Sydney Opera House Tour, Australian National Maritime Museum, Centrepoint Tower, Taronga Zoo and other stops. It is $33 for seven days at participating institutions.

San Francisco leads other U.S. cities in value and convenience of public transit and other passes for tourists. The Muni Pass, $6 for one day, $10 for three days and $15 for seven days, offers unlimited use of Muni light rail and buses and cable cars. BART (Bay Area Rapid Transit) routes are not included. Passes are sold at downtown Muni stations and visitor information kiosks. A day pass pays for itself in seven rides.

The city's Explorer Pass, $12.50, saves about 50 percent on admissions to the California Academy of Sciences, de Young Museum, Asian Art Museum, Japanese Tea Garden and Conservatory of Flowers. It is valid until all five museums have been visited and is available at any participating institution, visitor information kiosks and the Union Square TIX booth.

In Los Angeles, a Cee-LA pass is $25 for 30 days. It pays for up to four family members at each of 18 museums, including the Page Museum, Armand Hammer Museum of Art and Museum of Contemporary Art.

The L.A. County Art Museum and Norton Simon Museum are not included. Assuming the pass was used to the maximum, savings on a total of 72 admissions would be substantial.

All passes are non-refundable. Costs vary from city to city, as do rules on their use. Check on availability with hotel concierges and local tourist offices. Before buying, calculate savings based on limits and plan an itinerary that maximizes usage. Keep in mind that some transit systems shut down overnight.

Detroit Blues Festival moves to Magic Bag

The Detroit Blues Festival is making its return Friday, Aug. 9-Saturday, Aug. 10, with a new name and a new venue.

"The First Annual Dog Days of Summer Blues Festival" moves from Hart Plaza to the Magic Bag, 22918 Woodward Ave., Ferndale, and features 10 bands.

Tickets are $15 in advance, or $25 for a "Blues Dog 2 Day Pass."

Grammy nominee Johnnie Johnson, "The Grandfather of Rock 'n' Roll Piano," is slated to headline the first night with openers George Bedard and the Kingpins, Madcat and Kane, Mudpuppy and Garfield Blues Band. Johnson, who's been performing for 63 of his 71 years, began playing piano for Chuck Berry in 1952 and years later is credited for being a major musical influence by fans like Keith Richards, George Thorogood, and Eric Clapton.

Saturday's headliner, Sonny Landreth has the distinct honor of being one of the first artists to play Centennial Park in Atlanta after it was reopened Tuesday, July 30.

The blues artist's scheduled performances for Sunday, July 28, and Monday, July 29, had to be rescheduled after a pipe bomb exploded killing one person. James Wailin' and Wailin' Inc., Randy Volin and the Sonic Blues, Johnny "Yarddog" Jones, and Jim McCarty and Mystery Train warm up the audience for Landreth, who is on the road promoting his latest album "South of I-10" (Zoo/Praxis).

For more information about the 18 and older show, call (810) 544-3030 or (810) 645-6666.

MOVIES

'Emma' continues Jane Austen tradition

JOHN MONAGHAN

You hardly need to be a Jane Austen scholar to figure out early on who will marry who by the end of the new movie "Emma." If you've seen other recent Austen adaptations, even the Austen-inspired teen movie "Clueless," you know that the title heroine will end up with the most sensible man in the county. Of course getting to the altar is half the fun and "Emma," currently at the Main Theatre in Royal Oak, ably holds its own against those other Austen films, "Sense and Sensibility" and "Persuasion." Though produced by different studios, with radically different casts, each has done justice to the original work while creating something of a cottage industry around Britain's first great female novelist.Gwyneth Paltrow's Emma is a 21-year-old woman who fancies herself a matchmaker. She has successfully united her former governess with a wealthy widower and now wants to work the same magic for her gawky friend Miss Smith (Toni Collette).The friend wants to marry a local farmer, but Emma won't hear of it, manipulating Miss Smith's affections away from the man and to other bachelors of higher standing. Emma believes that any friend of hers is entitled to a superior match.Emma's own prospects for matrimony are intentionally grim.

Celibacy is tolerable with enough money and social standing, she, says. Only poverty can make you an old maid.Part of your enjoyment of the movie will depend on how much you like the title heroine. A vocal audience member during a preview screening loudly wished that Emma wouldn't end up happy at all, using the B-word (it wasn't busybody) to describe her personality.

True, you can get frustrated with the moneyed landholders in Austen's novels who have nothing better to do than worry about the romantic entanglements of others.

For me Emma irresistible After the somewhat martyred main heroines in those other Austens, she is almost refreshing in her weaknesses.Paltrow, seen peripherally in "Seven" and "Moonlight and Valentino," handles her first starring role well. Her impossibly long and elegant neck looks great with the period costumes and, unlike fellow model-turned-actress Andie MacDowell, she really can act, subtly making Austen's formal 19th century dialect her own. She's helped by a camera which focuses on her good points as much as it does the physical flaws of others.

In one clever scene, the camera pans away, along with the sound, from a conversation she's desperately trying to listen to as she's harassed by a persistent suitor. The rest of the movie is well-cast with classic Austen characters. Toni Collette, who made such a splash in "Muriel's Wedding," brings a sincere nerdiness to Miss Smith while Jeremy Northam typifies 19th century steadfastness as Emma's older friend and confidante.

Ultimately, "Emma" is escapist entertainment for the literate, who find steeping themselves in the social crises of others as cathartic as saving the world from alien invasion. And with the movie's guaranteed success, the new breed of Austen fans will be glad to know that she has other novels just waiting for the big screen.

Spearhead joins 'Olympic' tour of black bands

CHRISTINA FUOCO

Riding on the success of its debut album "Home" (Capitol), the jazzy soulful band Spearhead is getting ready to release its sophomore effort "Chocolate Supa Highway" this fall. But Spearhead fans can get a preview of the album at the "House of Blues Smokin' Grooves Tour" when it comes to Pine Knob on Monday.

Dubbed "Urban Lollapalooza," the tour features Spearhead along with Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers, Cypress Hill, Busta Rhymes, The Fugees with NAS, and A Tribe Called Quest.

"Smokin' Grooves is an opportunity to bring together new ideas from black artists and new perspectives in black music," said Spearhead's Michael Franti. "In the midst of the Summer Olympics, where many black athletes are coming together to represent the U.S. on courts and playing fields, six outspoken and socially conscious black artists are coming together in appreciation of black music."

The tour, Franti said, is "pretty fun just because I'm a fan of all the groups that are on it – Tribe, Fugees, Cypress, Ziggy, Busta Rhymes. It's like having season tickets to the (NBA's Chicago) Bulls."

Franti explained that unlike Lollapalooza there's one stage and not a lot of sideshow hype.

"It's not as developed as that. At some venues they have a B stage with some funk and acid jazz groups that have been playing. They have some booths where vendors are selling oils and incense and little stuff like that. But it's not like Lollapalooza."

Previewing new material: Spearhead – from left, Ras I. Zulu, Michael Franti, Carl Young, and Trinna Simmons – will debut material from its upcoming album "Chocolate Superhighway" (Capital) at the "House of Blues Smokin' Grooves Tour" which hits Pine Knob Music Theatre at 6 p.m. Monday, Aug. 12. Ziggy Marley and the Melody Makers, Cypress Hill, The Fugees with NAS, A Tribe Called Quest, and Busta Rhymes are also on the bill. "Chocolate Superhighway" is due out in October.

"One thing that the organizers of the tour made really cool about this show is with most of the acts there's a one-minute change over. A lot of time hip-hop shows and rock shows they notoriously have hours between each band, but here the crew is super efficient and works really hard."

"Chocolate Supa Highway" was recorded in Franti's home studio, which allowed the band to take its time with the album.

"We spent a lot of time working on the grooves and making the music and the beats be real strong. We would do three or four different versions of the same song before we came to decide on what version we were going to go with," said Franti, who co-produced the album with Prince Charles Alexander (Notorious B.I.G., Total).

Spearhead's debut LP "Home" spawned the singles "People In Tha Middle," MTV Buzz Bin favorite and CLIO winner "Hole in the Bucket," and the groundbreaking track "Positive," the cliffhanger story about Franti's AIDS test. The singer, a former founder of the Beatnigs and Disposable Heroes of Hiphoprisy, said he has no plans on revealing the outcome of the test.

"I don't want to say the outcome of my results. I wanted people to think for themselves. I wanted them to think about it as much as I was," Franti said.

"Positive" has made its mark. It appeared on the LP "Stolen Moments: Red Hot and Cool" (a musical project benefiting AIDS research). Additionally, the video clip for "Positive" has been chosen by the African-American HIV/AIDS Program of the Red Cross as an educational tool for their teen outreach efforts.

He promises more cliffhanger songs on "Chocolate Supa Highway."

"There are more songs on this record that are stories that lead you one way and then another. I like people to think about the song when it's finished."

Tickets for the "House of Blues Smokin' Grooves Tour" are $25 pavilion and $15 lawn. For more information, call (810) 377-0100.

• Pantera drummer Vinnie Paul is happy to report that lead singer Philip Anselmo is doing fine after a near-fatal heroin overdose last month in Texas.

"It's doin' great. He's doing better shows now than before the incident. It was a tough lesson but a well-learned one," Paul said during a recent phone conversation.

"You can tell the fans that it's not gonna happen again. We're going to take the negative experience and make it a positive one."

Pantera comes to The Palace of Auburn Hills at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 10, in support of its latest album "The Great Southern Trendkill" (Elektra), which Paul calls "the best record to date."

Tickets for the show, which also features White Zombie and the Deftones, are $25 reserved and general admission floor. For more information, call (810) 377-0100.

• "Alpha Soma," DJ Thomas Barnett's techno/jungle dance nights Sundays at the Magic Bag in Ferndale, is moving to Tuesday nights starting 9 p.m. Aug. 13. Besides changing nights, the event is changing names to "Visillusion Techno Rave." Cover charge for the 18-and-older dance night is $5. For more information, call (810) 544-3030.

If you have a question or comment for Christina Fuoco, you can write to her c/o The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150, or via the Internet at Cfuoco@aol.com, or you can leave a message for her by calling at (313) 953-2047 mailbox No. 2130 on a Touch-Tone phone.

Changes come down the 'Pike' at popular restaurant

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

From Livonia, it was a long drive north on Telegraph to Pike Street Restaurant in Pontiac, but newly promoted general manger Brian McNamara, who lives in Redford, and makes the drive every day, assured me it would be worth it.

"Pontiac is very exciting," said McNamara. "It's very alive. I wish more people would come here, and give it a chance."

McNamara, who has been with the restaurant for six years, is also proud of Pike Street's success. The restaurant, which also caters private parties, has won numerous awards, and recognition in national magazines.

Newly promoted executive chef Randy Emert, previously sous chef, is captain of the Michigan Culinary Team headed for the World Culinary Art Salon this September in Germany, and follows in the footsteps of Brian Polcyn, now of Five Lakes Grille and Derin Moore, executive chef of Bay Harbor Yacht Club outside of Petoskey.

The World Culinary Art Salon, held every four years, is to chefs what the Olympics is to athletes. "It teaches you a lot about food," explained Emert who lives in Farmington Hills and graduated from Schoolcraft College in Livonia. "You learn from your mistakes. I'm not on the line cooking as much as I'd like. One day I'd like to become a Certified Master Chef. Competing helps me fine-tune my skills."

In talking about his recent promotion, Emert, who has been at Pike Street for seven years, and won numerous awards in Food Salon competitions, is quick to credit Brian and Derin.

"They taught me to cook from the heart, to use the freshest ingredients possible, and to have respect for the food," said Emert. Popular entrees such as duck, beef tenderloin, pickerel and lamb remain, but garnishes, accompaniments, and menu specials reflect the changing seasons. You'll find venison, elk and other game on fall and winter menus, but not in the summer.

Pike Street Restaurant

Prices: Lunch ranges from: $6.50 (sandwiches) to $10.75 (entrees). Dinner ranges from: $15.50 (pasta entree) to $24.50.

Reservations: Recommended on Fridays and Saturdays.

Upcoming events:

■ A Late Summer Night — 7 p.m. Monday, Aug. 19 to introduce Chef Randy Emert as the new Executive Chef and Brian McNamara, new General Manger. Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres will be served with a live performance by Punch and Kitty. Tickets $25 per person, a portion of which will go to benefit Lighthouse, a foundation for abused children. Call (810) 334-7878 for reservations.

■ Michigan Theme Dinner, honoring the foods and wines of Michigan — 6:30-7 p.m. (hors d'oeuvres), 7:15 dinner. Cost $47.50 per person, excluding beverage, tax and gratuity. Call (810) 334-7878 for reservations.

Fish course Sauteed Lake Superior Pickerel with Imlay City Shallot Coulis, Mixed Field Green Salad with Fowlerville Plum Dressing, Main Course, Roast Gaylord Pheasant Breast with Howell Sweet Corn Polenta, Sage and White Bean Ragout, and Traverse City Cherry Chocolate Gateau with Michigan Beaujolais Sorbet for dessert.

Some of the new selections include Breast of Chicken with Morel Mushroom Cognac Sauce and Veal Chop with Tomato-Artichoke Ragout.

"I've been trying to use leaner sauces without as much butter or cream, and I'm using more herbs and spices for flavor," said Emert, who also added some vegetarian items to the menu. Daily specials reflect foods of the season, and allow patrons the opportunity to try something different.

"A lot of people have never been here," said McNamara. "Pike Street is hosting — A Late Summer Night — to raise money for Lighthouse (see chart), and to recognize our promotions. We put our heart and soul into th place. It will be very beautiful. One room will be filled with hors d'oeuvres and there will be ice sculptures too. It will give first time customers a chance to see the restaurant. We'll have live entertainment and dancing."

I admit, I was curious. There's been a lot of renovation going on in downtown Pontiac. New restaurants are opening, the Strand Theatre on Saginaw is being redone, and there are night clubs and galleries you can walk to.

Pike Street used to be occupied by Michigan Bell. The brick, warehouse type structure was abandoned for a long time before a previous owner opened a restaurant. The new owner, Jim Fitzpatrick, has helped create an elegant, upscale urban setting. It's warm, and inviting.

What customers don't see are the two banquet rooms upstairs that are used for catering business meetings, weddings, showers and other special events. You can even rent the whole restaurant if you want to.

"We've had couples get engaged in the Wine Cellar," said McNamara, opening the door to a cozy brick room in the basement whose name speaks for itself. "It's fun and charming."

McNamara's and Emert's enthusiasm is contagious. "We have great employees," he said. "No one leaves. It's a fun place."

Popular dinner entrees, which include house salad, are the Char-Broiled Atlantic Salmon served with Smoked Salmon Horseradish Crust, Sauteed Potatoes, Onion and Spinach ($21.50), Roast Rack of Lamb with Blue Cheese Scallop Potatoes, and Grilled Artichoke-Eggplant Salad ($25.50), and Pan Roasted Beef Tenderloin Medallions with Smoked Gouda Whipped Potatoes ($24.50). Pasta choices feature Grilled Vegetable Orzo with Feta Cheese and Pesto ($15.50 entree) and Wild Mushroom Angel Hair in Olive Oil and Garlic or Sherry, Shallots and Cream ($17.50 entree). Pike Street also has a very fine wine list.

You'll find sumptuous salads, pastas, sandwiches and lighter entrees on the lunch menu. Choices include Sweet Corn, Cilantro and Avocado Salad with Poached Gulf Shrimp and Tequila Lime Vinaigrette ($9.50), Sauteed Beef Tenderloin Tips on Grilled Wild Mushroom Toast $7.50, and Broiled Lake Superior Whitefish with Sweet Corn Cakes and Green Tomato Salad, $9.75.

NEW HOMES

AT HOME inside... ★ F1

Magic touch continues at Village Square

The Herman Frankel Organization has opened the second phase of Village Square, a platted residential subdivision off Farmington Road between 14 Mile and Maple in West Bloomfield.

The houses are fairly pricey, starting at $339,900, but prospects are drawn into the development by the Frankel reputation for quality, spacious floor plans and West Bloomfield schools.

Only a handful of the 65 lots in phase one, which opened in April of '94, are available. Several of the 50 lots in the second phase have already sold.

Who's buying?

"Many of them are family, friends and co-workers of people who already live here or in another Frankel development," said Donna Harris, sales rep at Village Square.

"They love the fact it's West Bloomfield and West Bloomfield schools," she said. "Of course, location is an asset. You can get to I-96 real easy. Northwestern Highway is easy. It's convenient to shopping."

"We have a knock-on-any-door policy," Laurie Frankel, director of sales and marketing, said of references. "I think we build them as good as you can get."

"Our floor plans are always strong," said Mark Frick, operations director. "We work them to death prior to bringing them to market. That's one of our trademarks."

But Frankel isn't so rigid that what you see is what you get.

"One of our strengths is customizing these homes," Frick said. "Being able to accommodate peoples' needs is real important."

"We don't trade drama for function," added Laurie Frankel.

Six basic floor plans are available.

They range in price from $339,900 for a 3,400-square-foot colonial with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $378,900 for a two story of 3,600 square feet with four bedrooms including first floor master, two full baths and two half-baths.

All include at base price air conditioning, fireplace, separate shower and jet tub in master suite, 20 recessed lights, two-car garage with automatic opener, dishwasher, double oven, cooktop and basement.

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

A first-floor laundry is standard on every plan except one.

Four models have been constructed.

The Kensington, probably the most popular plan in the sub, features a living room with two-story ceiling, dining room, kitchen/nook with island and walk-in pantry, family room and den on the main floor.

The master has a pair of walk-in closets, dressing area and dual-sink vanity. Three other bedrooms and a full bath are upstairs.

Base price is $339,900 for the 3,400-square-foot colonial.

"The kitchen is to die for, and the master suite is second to none," Frankel said.

The Parkside, similar in size to the Kensington with the same basic layout, features a curved staircase and places the kitchen sink in an island overlooking the nook and family room.

Again, the master is upstairs along with three other bedrooms and a second full bath.

Base price is $344,900.

The Breckenridge is a multi-level of about 3,500 square feet.

The living room, dining room and family room are on the first level off the front door and main foyer.

The library and master suite, with cathedral ceiling, walk-in closet, two separate vanities, are a couple steps up on the master wing. The kids' wing, with a game room, three bedrooms and a full bath, are a couple of steps up from the master wing on a third level.

Parkside beauty: This four-bedroom colonial features a curved staircase and the kitchen sink in an island overlooking the nook and family room.

The laundry and garage entrance are a couple of steps down from the first floor, the basement, below that.

Base price of the Breckenridge, 3,500 square feet, is $342,900.

The Village Manor, the fourth model, is a four-bedroom colonial with a bridge extended over a large family/dining room combination that features lots of windows.

Base price is $347,900.

Exterior materials on all plans include brick and wood siding – no vinyl or aluminum.

Village Square, which has sidewalks, is serviced by city water and sewers.

The property tax rate currently is $30.37 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $345,000 house in the sub would pay about $5,240 the first year.

The annual fee to maintain entrances and common areas is $300 per house.

Chris and Marlys Olenech, along with children Conner and Peyton, moved into a Parkside about three months ago.

"We were very impressed with the construction Herman Frankel produces," Marlys said. "We had seen a model of his about four years ago and fell in love with it but weren't ready to make a move yet.

"The main thing we like is the staircase," she said. "We like the openness of the entire floor plan, the family room floor-to-ceiling windows.

"Everyone from start to finish was wonderful. If there was something we came across, they were on top of it immediately," Marlys said.

Keith and Marylou Waineo are having a Kensington built for themselves and son, Matthew.

"My sister built there and had a very positive experience," Marylou said. "Herman Frankel has an excellent reputation. We definitely looked at that. We found them willing to work with us.

"I wanted a big family room and a big kitchen" she added. "That's where we find we spend all of our time. I got both of them."

The sales office at Village Square, (810) 661-5353, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily, closed Thursdays.

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

What is a TRUE no-income-verification mortgage program? This type of mortgage program does not require the borrower(s) to provide pay stubs or tax returns to the mortgage lender to verify their income. The borrowers are not required to tell the lender their current income or provide past records of income.

For self-employed borrowers, this program can be particularly attractive. First, it may help them qualify for a higher mortgage than they would have if the lender had used the actual tax returns to verify income. Because most self-employed individuals write off a large portion of their income for tax reasons and end up showing much lower income after expenses, their net income may look inordinately low.

The net income figure is what the lender uses in determining qualifying income, not the gross profit of a business. Therefore, the loan amount the person can qualify for based on the net-income figures is going to be much less.

In addition, self-employed borrowers can save time and money in the mortgage application process because they do not have to have their accountants specially prepare individual or business tax returns or year-to-date profit-and-loss statements. Oftentimes, lenders request updated financial statements on an applicant's business. If the time of year this request is made doesn't coincide with the business' year end, the special request can cost extra money in accountant's fees.

Others who may benefit from this program are people earning a large portion of their income from commissions or overtime.

So, this loan program has definite advantages for certain sectors of the house-buying market. Of course, each loan program carries with it certain requirements in order to qualify.

The following parameters were recently given to me by Old Kent Bank, one area lender offering a TRUE no-income-verification program:

■ Most lenders offering some form of no-income-verification program still require some verification of income, which really means . . . it is not a TRUE no-income-verification program.

■ 25-percent minimum down-payment is required. The money cannot be from gift funds and must be the borrower's own liquid assets and be verified by three months bank statements or written verification.

■ All borrowers must have "perfect credit," which is defined as follows:

• minimum of five trade lines as reported by the major credit repositories;

• minimum of two-year credit history;

• no installment and/or revolving payments more than 30 days late in the last 12 months and no more than two installment and/or revolving payments late in the last 24 months;

• no late mortgage payments in the last 24 months;

• no collections, judgments, liens, charge-offs or other derogatory credit items in the last 24 months;

• no bankruptcies or foreclosures in the last seven years;

■ Minimum of six months house payments remaining after closing. Must be in an asset account that can be liquidated in less than 30 days if needed.

■ Mortgaged property must be an existing property (no new construction). Purchases and refinances are allowed.

■ Borrow must have a mortgage history as a current or previous homeowner.

■ Borrowers should have two continuous years of employment with the same employers; some exceptions are allowed.

■ Loan amount of between $40000 and $450,000 (up to $650,000 available with a larger down payment).

■ Only 15- or 30-year fixed-rate loans are available. Rates typically are 3/8 to 1/2 percent higher than the normal rates. Zero points is available. There is no prepayment penalty.

Old Kent has indicated that, for borrowers meeting the above guidelines, the risk is minimal to the bank. And, of course, they hope to make the house-buying process as easy as possible for buyers who fit these qualifications.

Most lenders offering some form of no-income-verification program still require some verification of income, which really means . . . it is not a TRUE no-income-verification program.

Also, for many lenders, the rates and points charged can be significantly higher than the typical average rates.

I invite anyone who would like more information on this or other loan programs to call with your questions or comments at 1-800-405-3051.

Interest rates in review:

Here are some recent interest rates that may be helpful to you in tracking the direction of rates. These are just a guide. Be sure to call a lender to get current rate quotes.

In Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey, the 30-year fixed rate for the North Central area for the week ended Aug. 2, 1996, edged up slightly to 8.29 percent (U.S. average 8.23 percent).

A week ago, the average for the United States was 8.19 percent, and one year ago, it was 7.82 percent. Current 15-year fixed-rate mortgages have risen slightly to an average 7.983 percent. Adjustable-rate mortgages have also risen slightly to an overage 6.29 percent for our area of the county.

■ Germ killer

Sanit-Air of Troy (810) 879-0440 has become the sole Michigan distributor for the Ultra Germicidal Air Probe Sanitizer, an indoor air cleaner, odor-eradication sanitizer.

Consisting of a specially designed ultraviolet light kit and sensor, the unit is installed on the return side of the duct-work in a residential or commercial HVAC system. The probe is activated each time the system kicks on.

Cost of the unit, including installation, will average about $825. The bulb needs replacing every couple years at a cost of about $60.

"It will sanitize air in the whole house, not just one room," said Connie Morbach, Sanit-Air president. "You don't have the noise associated with room air cleaners."

■ Business cooperative

Three independent businesses have formed their own joint operating agreement of sorts.

Network Building and Design, a remodeling company led by Steve Zumberg and Robert Jablonski, Perfection Painting, headed by Dan Carlo, and Michigan Floor Covering, John Pinchera, president, offer one-stop shopping for customers who might need their services (810) 645-1702.

"We're independent, but co-managed so we can produce a more efficient package with better quality control and a more timely (work completion) package," Zumberg said.

"We can centralize our overhead in an office and have the ability to contract more work common to all our areas," he said. "We're basically a building cooperative, a managed building group."

The central office is in Livonia, a display center in process in Bloomfield Hills.

■ Mortgage workshops

Ross Mortgage presents free, no obligation workshops "Avoiding Tragic Mistakes When Shopping for a Mortgage," Monday, Aug. 26, at Freedom Hill County Park, 15000 Metropolitan Parkway east of Schoenherr in Sterling Heights, and Tuesday, Aug. 27, at International Business Center, 43000 Nine Mile east of Novi Road in Novi.

Both seminars run 6:30-7:30 p.m.

"By the end of the seminar, people should have a pretty good idea how to save money as well as how to simplify the home buying process," said Tim Ross, president of Ross Mortgage.

For reservations, call (810) 968-1800.

■ Licensing classes

The Birmingham Bloomfield Rochester South Oakland Association of Realtors offers a series of six-hour continuing education seminars, one of which must be completed by Oct. 31 to fulfill state real estate licensing requirements.

Each session goes 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Upcoming seminars are slated for Tuesday, Aug. 20, Walsh College, 3838 Livernois, Troy; Wednesday, Sept. 11 and Saturday, Sept., 21, Columbia Center, 201 W. Big Beaver, Troy; and Wednesday, Sept. 25, Standard Federal Bank, 2600 W. Big Beaver, Troy.

Cost is $35 per session. To register, call Carole Kowalik at (810) 879-9560.

■ Apartment management

Lawrence Technological University sponsors a series of workshops on apartment management and review of the registered apartment management certification 2:30-5:30 p.m. Thursdays Sept. 5-Dec. 12 on campus in Southfield.

Topics include risk management, marketing rental housing, planning for development management, financial management and maintenance.

Fee is $395. To register, call Karen Piontek at (810) 204-4020.

Vertical glides will help you capture more storage

Capture cabinet storage with vertical glide

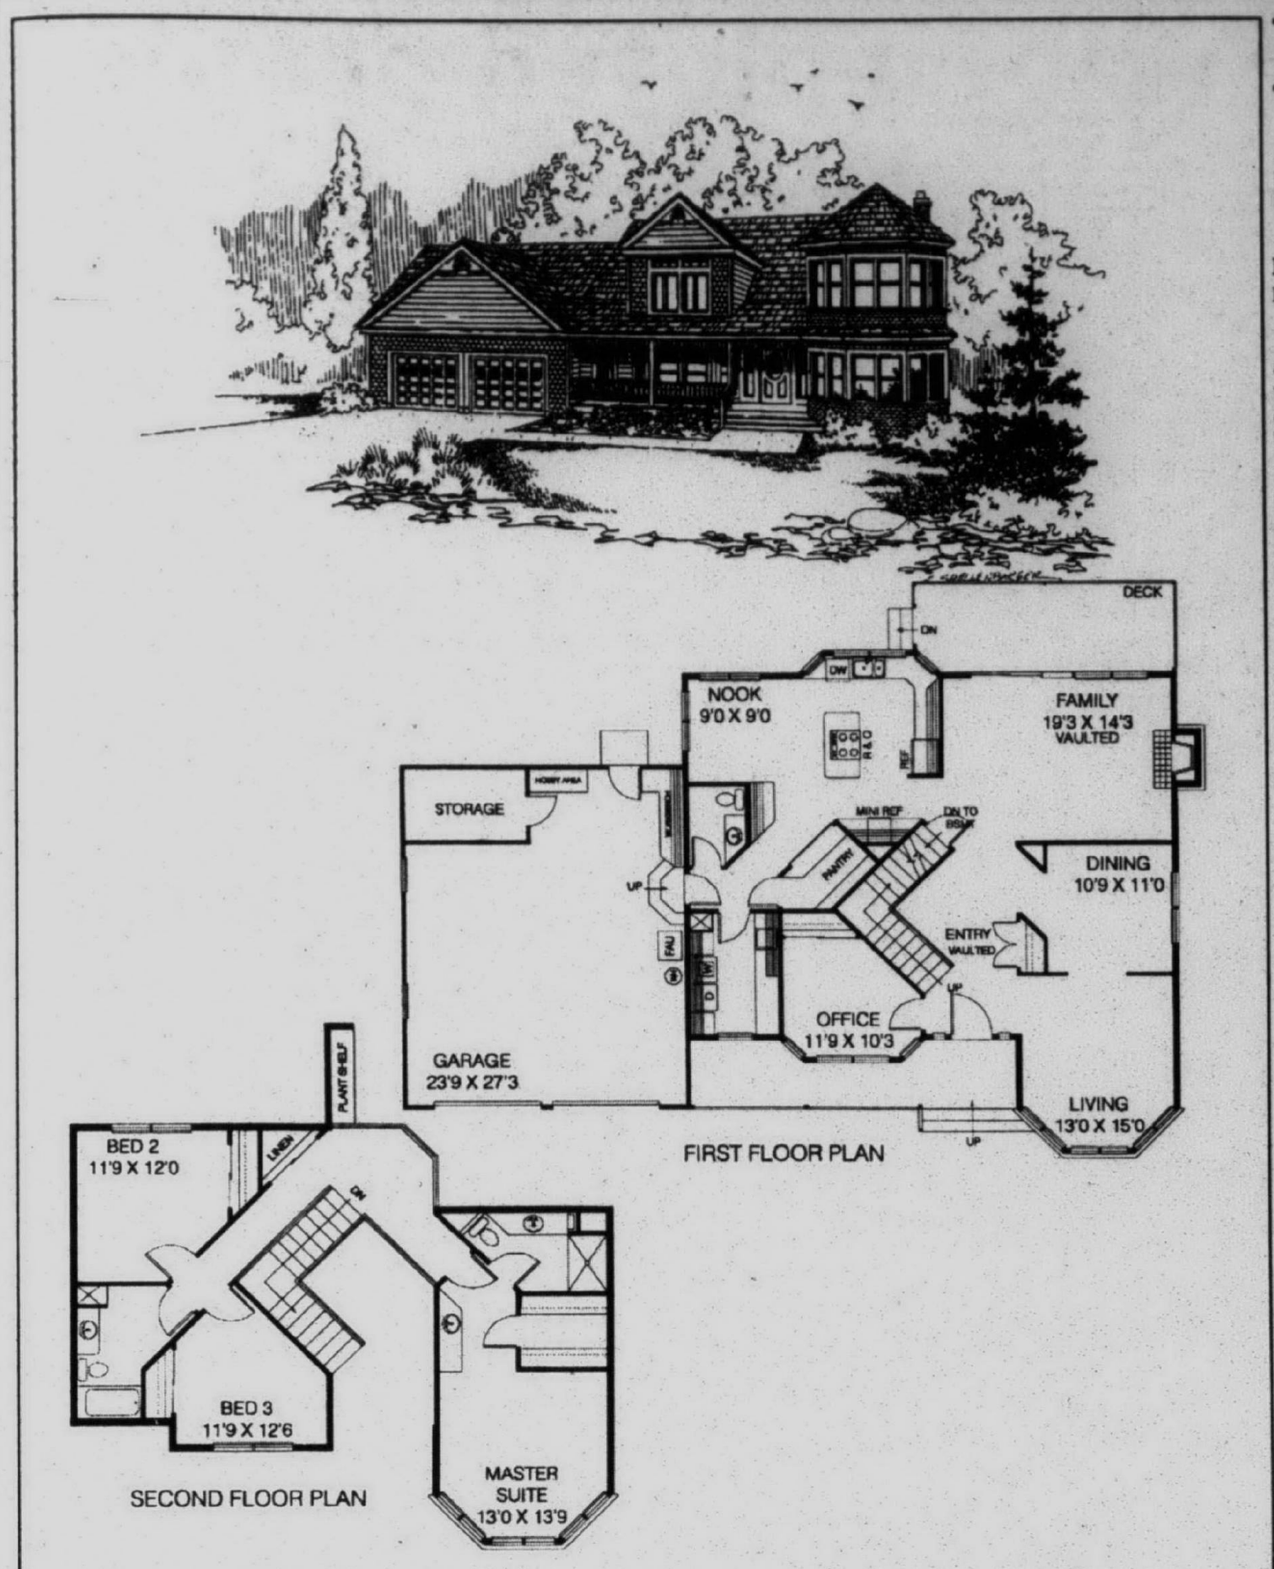
Cabinets are great places to store things. One of the main reasons people love them is because you can throw lots of things in them and then close the door!

This highlights, however, an important element to consider when buying storage products: Access and function are just as important as providing the storage space.

Closet Maid, the Storage Authority, is capturing and maximizing the storage space inside cabinets. The Vertical Glide is a prime example. The product is a vertical wall of wire that pulls out of a cabinet for easy access. It is available with hanging baskets or hooks for quick, practical storage of lids, sponges, grill equipment, hanging items and just about anything else you can imagine. The product is ideal for capturing unused cabinet space under the sink or in very narrow cabinets.

Closet Maid has a complete line of storage products for the inside of your cabinet. There is the Upper Cabinet line of basket systems designed to capture the entire cabinet area from shelf to shelf. There is the Ladder Rack Kit line, which is designed capture the back of cabinet and pantry doors. This line is completely adjustable and holds either hooks or baskets.

The bottom line; stop using cabinets to pile up your items and start organizing the inside of cabinets to create a more effective and useful kitchen.



Plan each project to save yourself work

By Reader's Digest Books
For AP Special Features

You'll save time, money and a lot of frustration if you think a project through and carefully plan each step before beginning.

For almost any undertaking, large or small, you'll benefit by drawing up your plans on paper. A good set of plans lets you see what tools you'll need and aids in estimating the amount and cost of the materials you'll use. It also helps you see the complexity of the entire job, so that you can decide whether or not you'll need professional help.

When planning a large project, break it down into a series of small, manageable projects. This allows you to make timely purchases, organize your time and spot any work that requires a professional.

Begin by making a sketch or diagram of the project. It needn't be elaborate or artistic – simply clear enough to illustrate what you mean to do, showing all the parts and indicating the materials you plan to use. You can make simple outlines of the parts and use heavy dots of X's for the nails, screws or bolts.

Then, to ensure accurate results, transfer the sketch to graph paper, letting each square on the paper equal 1 foot or some other clear-cut measurement.

For large projects, if you don't want to draw your own plans, you can alter existing ones. Purchase ready-drawn plans at home centers, or copy plans from books or magazines. If your project is elaborate, some home centers offer personalized computer planning.

Once the plans for the project are drawn up, think the whole job through and make a list of the major steps. Put the steps in order, break them down into substeps, and number the steps and substeps.

Checking through the steps, make a list of all the tools you will want to have on hand. Then examine the steps and plans to determine the amount of materials you will need, including fasteners and the hardware.

Line up helpers if the job is going to require working with materials that are heavy or awkward to handle. Also, set up a space for working on the project and storing the materials.

If there will be a lot of waste material, decide how you will recycle or dispose of it. Remember that materials such as oils, paints, lacquers, varnishes, thinners, strippers and other solvents are flammable or toxic. Some are hazardous to the environment.

Follow label directions for disposal. Or contact your local government to learn how to dispose of them properly.

Before finalizing any building or renovation plans, review them with your local building inspector, so that you are familiar with any related codes, restrictions or requirements and have complied with the law if a permit is necessary.

Get a permit if you need one, and schedule any necessary inspections. Permits are usually required for major renovations, such as turning a garage into a guest room. But they also may be required for small jobs, such as walling in a patio, building a barbecue with a high chimney, breaking through a curb to install a driveway, and many plumbing and electrical jobs.

When working on a project that requires digging or excavating, such as putting in a sidewalk, ask your local utility and cable companies to mark the location of underground cables or pipelines before you start digging.

This will protect you from possible injury, liability and disruption of service.

Nice House

The 2,397-square-foot Spectacular is one house that lives up to its name. The beautiful exterior, elegantly faced with brick and scalloped siding, is a perfect mate to the equally handsome interior floor design.

An old-fashioned front porch, covered and boasting attractive ornamental railing, is the first sight to greet your visitors. As they step into the vaulted entry, which reaches to the second floor, the openness of the Spectacular becomes evident.

With all the sleeping areas on the second level, the first floor is completely functional and allows ease of movement throughout. An enormous bay window extends the living room to the front, affording an excellent view and a green spot to spend an afternoon with a good book. Adjoining the living room is the formal dining area.

To the right of the entry is a good-sized home office. Whether it is to be used for conducting business or managing household accounts, your seclusion and privacy are assured. There is room here for a personal computer, filing cabinets, chairs, etc.

To the rear is a spacious family room. It has a nice cozy fireplace, vaulted ceiling and sliding glass doors that lead to a railed deck.

The walk-through kitchen and breakfast nook provide a great place for informal meals and morning get-togethers. Kitchen features include a bar with mini-refrigerator, island cooktop and a utility room with a sink, sewing table and laundry chute from the second floor.

For a study kit of the Spectacular (335-050), send $10 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307-OE48. Eugene OR 97402. (Be sure to specify plan name and number.) For a collection of plan books featuring our most popular house plans, send $20 to Landmark, or call 1-800-562-1151.•

BUILDING ON HISTORY

SEE INSIDE FOR THE COVER STORY

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

Some smells are impossible to forget

JOE GAGNON

I was once a young boy of age 13 and raised in the very northern bush country of Northern Ontario. Outside of Timmins there ran these huge high tension power lines which I pictured went for thousands of miles through the wilderness. When these towers were built the forest and brush were removed and the path line had a 100 yard clearance. Sometimes when you found a flat spot, you could see for miles straight down the power line.

It was down these man made trails that my friends and I would pedal out bikes loaded with sleeping bags and fishing poles until we came to the small creek loaded with fish, and we enjoyed the trouble free attitude that this atmosphere develops in young boys.

One one of these excursions after pumping our legs for about three miles, we came across an old deserted gravel pit which contained a brand new shiny car called a Thunderbird. Sitting inside the vehicle was a gentleman who had decided to end it all with a game of Russian roulette. It was not a pretty sight and one which took years to remove itself from my innocent brain. What did not leave was the odor that developed from a body which sat there for several weeks. That trip was set aside rather quickly, and I can assure you that we never traveled that part of the power line again.

In my work in the appliance industry, I have many times remembered the foul smell encountered as a young boy.

I remember in 1971 when I was a customer relations manager for the Amana Refrigeration company and I had to travel to Port Huron to investigate a compressor failure for a six month old Amana freezer. I walked into the house of a couple who had just returned from a three month vacation to find their large upright freezer had failed. It was loaded with game and fish that the couple had collected themselves. They were angry at Amana and wanted a new freezer and reimbursement on the lost food, which I took care of for them.

My other job was to take a small axe and destroy the freezer on site so that components could not be used by anyone. I removed the small metal tag which contained the model and serial numbers and placed it into a sealed envelope. The smell from the spoiled food has permeated into the walls and even the living room curtains. I arranged to have the fire department use their large air moving fans to try and reduce this remembrance of age 13. My job was complete and Amana took care of the bill for painting the house, drycleaning, etc.

Many times I have smelled the same from service calls where food has spoiled. I swear that even after taking showers which last for an hour and end up in cold water, it stays with me. Every week I receive several calls from consumers who ask how to remove it in their product. Some homeowners think it comes from Freon, which it doesn't, and overlook something that has spoiled in the back of the crisper drawers.

If you have this problem, let me suggest that you wash the product using pure tomato juice. When you're done washing and rinsing, then go to the hardware store and purchase a bottle of Smells Be Gone. If all of this is not good enough, then take the product and let the sun shine on it for several hours. The hotter and brighter the sun, the better. Remember me when I was 13, it's a tough story to forget.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM.

HOME ELECTRONICS

Photoelectric units have uses at home

Photoelectric units have been around for a long time. They frequently were used (and are still used) to open doors. But a homeowner can buy inexpensive photoelectric sensors for other uses.

A commercial example of photoelectric sensors you see often is the automatic door opener at, say, the local drug store. A photoelectric sensor is set up across the path of someone leaving the store. When someone passes in front of the sensor, light no longer falls on the sensor, so the electric door opener is told to open the door – so you don't have to open a door with your hands full of packages. (Pressure sensors are another way door-openers are controlled.)

The sun is a simpler and cheaper source of light to alert a photoelectric sensors – and frequent the best source of light.

BARRY JENSEN

The photoelectric sensor usually works by preventing current flow. How does this work? So long as light falls on the photoelectric cell, some action is STOPPED. But if less light is sensed, the current is no longer there to keep whatever it is from happening, so a door opens or an alarm sounds or a light goes on.

A homeowner can use a photoelectric sensor if he wants an outdoor light to come on at dusk to light the sidewalk. When the sun sets, the sensors notices the decline in sunlight and turns on the artificial light, making footing safer.

Photoelectric sensors also are available as part of free-standing "bollards," those short poles one sees along walkways or driveways that provide light at night. (They are often referred to as low-voltage landscape lighting.) The photoelectric sensor in each bollard senses when the light decreases below a factory-set or user-set amount and turns on the artificial light. A local retail electrical supply store sells bollard switch photoelectric sensors for $60 and up.

Sometimes, the bollards are solar powered: They absorb solar energy during the day and then release it when the light level falls too low.

Such bollards are available at some large retail stores or from lighting specialists.

Outside the home, one or more photoelectric sensors can control holiday lighting. Just be certain the power rating of all the strings of light powered through one photoelectric sensor does not exceed the safe rating for that sensor.

Often as a part of a home security system, several lights will be controlled by a central photoelectric sensor. When the sensor is triggered, it allows electrical energy to flow into the "security" lights around a home or garage or yard. Light has always been touted as a defense against crime. Hence the use of photoelectric sensors to turn night into day (or at least dusk).

But photoelectric sensors do not have to come only from a high-tech home-security service. Such sensors also are available for anyone who wants to have a light come on automatically after dark.

A homeowner can plug a photoelectric sensor into a yard light so that the yard light supplements the light provided the main street lights, but only when it is needed. This is especially valuable in those suburban areas where the street lights are few and relatively far between.

Your local supermarket or hardware store probably has photoelectric sensors that can be screwed into a normal incandescent light socket. The photoelectric sensor unit has an normal socket that a light bulb can then be screwed into and controlled by the sensor.

You just put the photoelectric sensor into a socket and screw a normal incandescent light bulb into the socket.

Most photoelectric sensors come with some type of control to allow you to adjust the level of light that will trigger the incandescent light. If they don't, you can use a piece of tape to cover part of the sensor opening. Do not use tape if the light bulb is below the sensor opening – the tape could dry out and catch fire from the heat of the light.

A small unit capable of safely controlling a 150-watt light bulb costs from $5 up.

Inside the home, one or more photoelectric sensors can be used if someone in the house needs additional light to see clearly. Once set, the photoelectric sensor will turn on additional lighting at the level you want. Depending on how sensitive you make the sensor, it will turn on additional lighting whether the cause of darkness is cloudiness or on-coming evening or closed drapes.

Other uses around the home for the little cells you can buy at the store are for stair wells (when the light declines, the incandescent light goes on).

This goes for safety night lighting, perhaps at the base of the stairs. No more groping at 2 a.m. in a sleep-induced stupor for the light switch if the night light has come on automatically.

With a tiny night light with a built-in photoelectric sensor, no child need face a totally dark bedroom. Yet, because the night light has a built-in photoelectric sensor, it will turn off at dawn. Something like this costs $4 at your local grocery or drug store.

One drawback is that even the little photoelectric sensors add several inches in height of the light bulb. So you can't add photoelectric sensors to some living room lamps.

But if you could use a light coming on automatically at dusk, visit your local hardware store and tell them you want to buy a photoelectric sensor.

INTERIOR MOTIVES

Tools of trade aid in design planning

NAOMI STONE LEVY

A good designer needs to have knowledge of the many tools necessary to do a competent job. Design schools teach students how to use these tools with dexterity. I will now divulge this information to you, and with it you will be prepared to do a better job on your own!

The effortless way to "scale" out the area you wish to design is to buy graph paper that is lined into squares that are 1/4-inch in measure. Most blueprints are done in that scale.

You will need some very sharp pencils, a good eraser and a 12-inch ruler with a good edge. A "T" square, a compass, a "French curve" and two triangles (one with a 45-degree angle and one with a 30-degree angle) will be helpful, though not necessary. All of these can be found in an art supply store. They also have plastic sheets with all manner of furniture pieces cut out for tracing. Your tools will make life easier.

You now make your own cutouts of proposed furniture. A sofa is generally 84 inches long and 36 inches deep, so your cutout in this scale will be 1-3/4 inches by 3/4 inches. Of course there are many other sizes. Continue on in this manner for each table, chair, chest of drawers, etc. you plan to use. I find it helpful to point out a lamp wherever it should occur, with a corresponding outlet plug nearby. I indicate these using a small circle with a line crisscrossing it.

Next you will draw the area to be furnished, in scale, on the graph paper, being very sure to allot the windows and doorways their assigned space. Don't forget to indicate which way the doors open so that your furniture plan won't conflict.

Here comes the fun! Move the cutouts of the furniture pieces around on the plan, and envision how the conversation groups work out. How are the traffic patterns? It is always helpful to avoid conflicts of people.

Television is master of our fate, and it must be considered. Please don't line the walls with your pieces. Design students are required to make up "boards," a remarkable tool, showing the plan, with photographs of the furniture to be used and with swatches of the fabrics and wallpaper attached. Seeing it all together reinforces your judgment.

Many other tools will help execute your job. Probably the one that will resonate your taste will be fabric. There are shops that carry very good lines. At this juncture I advise spending the most you can afford. The cost of applying the fabric makes it foolish not to invest in durability. When you hear the adage "You get what you pay for," here is where it is enforced.

Another tool is wallpaper. Cost here isn't the criteria, although I find the better and more costly papers are inevitably the loveliest.

The last tool is your mind, and taste, and good judgment. Make haste slowly! A mesmerizing room requires a considerable amount of thought. Good design is never arrived at hastily. If you have a friend whose opinion you value, don't hesitate to include him or her in your thoughts; two heads may be better than one.

LET'S REMODEL

Don't skimp when installing windows

Q: We are looking for replacement windows and many contractors have suggested vinyl windows. Can you help with what we should look for?

A: The vinyl windows that can be purchased in today's market have many features that you should consider a must.

First and most important to remember is that you are buying windows to last as long as the house does.

Another mistake that people make when remodeling is the "lowest price" consideration. Always look for quality and value for the home.

Quite often, when asked what to look for I suggest that you make sure the vinyl window is a virgin PVC honeycombed chamber vinyl system. Virgin PVC means that the vinyl has been extruded once. This ensures the structural integrity of both the frame and the sash. The honey-combed chambers create dead air space which will give you an insulation value. If one of the chambers are filled with foam insulation, that is all the better.

The next most important feature to consider is the glass. The glass represents 70 percent of the window and is the most important component to consider in energy efficiency. The glass must be double-paned. Double-paned glass provides dead air space. This will give also give you an insulator. The glass should be "Low E Glass" which stands for low emissivity. Low E reduces the transfer of heat energy through a window so that you reduce heat loss in winter and heat gain in the summer.

Argon gas, which is heavier than air completes the glass insulation by filling the gap between the panes. This will add to the cost a bit but will give you the thermal performance needed.

The last thing I suggest you consider is looking at the company you are choosing to replace the windows. Be sure the company has a strong background with references and jobs you can go see. Once again be sure they are licensed and insured and if possible look for a showroom so that you can see the actual windows. Be sure to check on the warranties that are offered by the manufacturer.

Keep planting throughout summer

Zelenka Nursery Inc. encourages homeowners and garden enthusiasts to continue planting throughout the summer months with the "Selected for Summer Planting" Program.

The program is supported by local garden centers that will be receiving fresh plants at their peak in appearance and viability on a regular basis throughout July and August.

Each plant will be identified by an attractive tag stating that each plant has been specifically "Selected for Summer Planting."

There are tips on the back of this tag to guide one to a successful summer planting experience, including how to plant, mulch, water and fertilize those items planted in the summer.

INVITING IDEAS

When you're not at the Cape – go fish

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

Some memories just can't be surpassed — August weeks in Cape Cod is one. While my brother-in-law and his family would lie on the beach for two weeks — David and I (poor little Jordan included) would visit antique shops and eat seafood. Route 6A became our haven — some summers the pickens were great, the others sparse — but the seafood and fish were always the best.

We found eight pound lobsters ready to cook, Cook's (a local out-East fast-food chain), which offered fried clams and lobster rolls, and enjoyed delicious fish lunches or dinners at the Impudent Oyster — who could ask for more? Of course our extended family prayed for sunshine, not us, even a cull or two hidden in our bags of lobsters couldn't have spoiled the moment.

Years later those tastes and memories still remain, and with good reason. I have the recipe for the Impudent Oyster's famous Barbecued Bluefin Tuna. Still offering fine dining, and the barbecued tuna on the menu, this delightful eatery at 15 Chatham Bars Ave. in Chatham, Mass., serves some of the best seafood and fish the Cape has to offer. If you're in Cape Cod....

At home in Michigan, you can make your own fishy memories. Spend a delightful day trout fishing in nearby Dexter, Mich. Visit Spring Valley Trout Farm, 12190 Island Lake Road, only 15 minutes from Ann Arbor, (313) 426-4772. This trout farm is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday, and has trout you can catch, barbecue, or take home cleaned and ready for cooking or freezing.

It's a great outing for the entire family, kids and grandparents alike — they supply all the equipment, a great atmosphere, and of course, there's nothing like catching your own fish! Our family usually catches enough to enjoy fresh trout all winter long. Don't forget to bring a big thermal container to take your catch, home. Once I'm back home, I put the cleaned fish in zip-top plastic bags half filled with water, and freeze them flat in my basement freezer.

If you have no time to fish — pick some fish up at your local grocery or fish market — cook it on a grill, fry, bake, poach, steam, or broil the fish in your air conditioned kitchen. Host a clambake for friends, or an old-fashioned fish fry. Invest in a smoker and make your own smoked fish — smoked salmon makes wonderful gifts for friends and family!

No time to shop — go out to a restaurant for some great fish. If you're my age or older, you will remember Susie Q Restaurant on Woodward. My folks and I would occasionally pig out on those perfectly fried golden goodies. Guess who's serving up those old recipes now? The four Payne Kids (big kids that is). Payne's Woodward Inn on Woodward, two blocks north of 11 Mile Road, serves Susie Q's original recipes including Shrimpniks, Fish & Chips and the Fishwich Sandwich (that old cod favorite).

Payne's newest spot —Woody's Diner on Fifth Ave. in Royal Oak is serving up the Fishwich Sandwich and Fish & Chips (sorry, no Shrimpniks at this location!)

If you're ready for a big splurge, and not counting calories or fat intake, take a trip down memory lane and happily gorge yourself — what a fun evening to share with a group of friends — and they don't have to be old enough to remember the original Susie Q's!

Here's my beloved recipe from the Cape, compliments of the Impudent Oyster:

THE IMPUDENT OYSTER'S BARBECUED BLUEFIN TUNA

Yield: 6 servings
2 cups fresh orange juice
1/2 cup soy sauce
1 cup red wine vinegar
1/2 cup olive oil
1 onion, chopped
4 garlic cloves, minced
1 teaspoon dried hot red pepper flakes
1 tablespoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 1/2 tablespoons whole mixed pickling spice
1 (6 ounce) can tomato paste
1/2 cup sugar
6 six-ounce bluefin or yellow fin tuna steaks (each about 1 inch thick)
2 tablespoons unsalted butter

In a bowl, whisk together the orange juice, soy sauce, red wine vinegar, olive oil, chopped onion, garlic, red pepper flakes, cumin, black pepper, pickling spice, tomato paste, and the sugar.

Arrange the tuna steaks in a baking dish large enough to hold them in one layer, pour the marinade over them, and let the tuna steaks marinate, covered and chilled, overnight or up to 24 hours.

Drain the tuna steaks, reserving the marinade in a bowl, and grill them on a lightly oiled rack set 3 to 4 inches over glowing coals for 3 minutes on each side. Return the tuna steaks to the baking dish, spoon 1 tablespoon of the reserved marinade over each, and bake the tuna steaks in the middle of a preheated 375 degree F. oven for 4 to 5 minutes, or until they are slightly rare. Top each tuna steak with one teaspoon of butter and freshly ground pepper to taste.

COVER STORY

Taking the past into the future

STORY BY HUGH GALLAGHER • PHOTOS BY TOM HAWLEY

A school of goldfish dart through the narrow pond under two small waterfalls. Surrounding the pond is a rich field of flowers, 60 different varieties in a crazy quilt of colors. Stone and brick walkways wind invitingly through the small, carefully planned garden. A deep green wooden deck is a platform for viewing the regularly changing show.

This narrow, sideyard oasis is so right for the stately brick Italianate house that it seems it must have always been here. But the garden is a recent addition to the house that has been on Maple Street in Plymouth since 1879.

Suzanne Krueger, an artist and businesswoman, is the latest in a series of conscientious owners who have maintained and improved on the handsome house at 391 Maple built by John Hood. She bought the three-bedroom house in 1991 and immediately began to bring it up to modern standards without violating its original structure or destroying its Victorian appeal. And she added the magnificent garden.

The house, called the Hood-Behr house after John Hood family and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Behr who owned the house before Krueger and helped to renovate it, is now being offered for sale by Weir, Manuel, Snyder & Ranke Inc. Krueger is anxious to move on to tackle another house renovation, a 1906 farmhouse in Beverly Hills.

The house she will leave behind is rich in history and architecturally distinquished.

John Hood was a Civil War veteran. He built the main section of the house in 1879 on land at the edge of the town. The house was adjacent to the town's fairgrounds, which were later destroyed by fire in 1904. A nearby street is still called Fairground. In 1881 Hood built an addition to the back that probably began as a carriage house but is now used as a family room with a wood-burning stove.

The house has been well preserved, but when Krueger moved in she knew changes were necessary.

"I did the major things we expect living in the '90s, new roof, new landscaping, sprinkler system, air conditioner, plumbing, electrical," she said. "When I came to the inside, I redecorated in keeping with the age of the house, tried to stay within the decade."

Krueger approached the house as an art project, an outlet for talents she wasn't using in her work as a manufacturer's rep.

"I'm an artist with a degree in business and art. While I was a manufacturer's rep, I wanted to use my artistic talents and this was my project," she said. "Two years ago I started Victorian Gallery which I sold. I started Decorative Accessories retail shop and then sold my inventory to Sweet Dreams in Northville. Now I'm supplying them my designs for florals and ribbon work."

Front Parlor: Suzanne Krueger decorated this sitting room with a formal Victorian style but without the clutter usually associated with Victorian design.

Stately Victorian: The Hood-Behr house is notable for its brick work and Italianate design. The front garden complements the architecture.

On the Cover: Suzanne Krueger designed and built the garden which features a pond with gold fish, winding walkways and over 60 varieties of flowers.

Krueger's first decision was to maintain the structural integrity of Hood's classic Italianate Victorian house. The design is notable for its hipped roof, four square design, long, narrow windows and beautiful brick work.

A handout prepared for the sale of the house explains the appeal of this 19th century design, "There is a timeless air of good design and good taste about these amazingly 'modern' Victorian houses. Their floor plans are open and informal."

Krueger said many people have a misconception about the Victorian period that it was dark and heavy. But she said Victorians were actually fond of color and light, which was especially evident in their floral decorations and gardens.

The garden at the Hood-Behr house is off the small kitchen, which was moved inside the house from an outside lean-to in about 1910. The garden is Krueger's special pride and joy.

"It's been a five year project," she said.

Mounds of dirt, stone, brick and wood have been brought in to create a multi-leveled, twisting and turning environment with stone benches and hidden nooks and crannies.

"Everybody is so enthused about the ponds. I did build them myself and I did dig them myself," Krueger said.

The landscaping also extends to the front of the house, where very formal flower arrangements and mature trees set off the house's red brick.

"I've been interested in gardening all my adult life, but this is the first time I've had an extensive garden and I have the time to do it and study everything I can study," Krueger said.

Krueger is listing the house for $258,000.

She has recently closed on the house in Beverly Hills.

"This house (the Hood-Behr) is a very sophisticated Italianate Victorian. In Beverly Hills the house is a 1906 farmhouse, not in the high Victorian style, more in the Arts and Crafts motif," Krueger said.

She said she has already made note of the mature trees and shrubbery on her new property and is busy planning what that garden will look like.

GARDEN SPOT

Determined plants grace garden, table

MARTY FIGLEY

This is a story about perseverance. Some plants just don't seem to stop trying, especially in the case of a red rose that Tina Dupke of Birmingham planted many years ago.

The rose was planted against a fence between two small spreading yews and in close proximity to a small crab apple tree. It seemed to thrive for several years. After a while, the area became shady as the trees matured and Tina presumed the rose was dead.

However, one sturdy stalk of the rose persevered and proceeded to climb up the trunk and through the tall branches of the tree. This year when it finally reached the end of the branches and found the sunlight, it bloomed in a cascading bouquet of red splendor, to Tina's delight.

Its bright blossoms are happily blooming in the sunshine once again, looking down into her pretty garden. Thus, this Queen of the Garden is ruling her subjects wearing a crown of red blossoms.

Another plant that perseveres is the Jerusalem artichoke, Helianthus tuberosus.

Barry Jensen of Birmingham grows this vegetable and said, "This plant always grows no matter what you do and it's so tall you can see it in the garden so it doesn't get lost."

He suggested I write about this native American sunflower, which isn't from Jerusalem nor an artichoke!

The vegetable traveled from this country to Spain and Italy and was called girasol and girasole. When the English people ate it there they misunderstood those words and thought the people were saying "Jerusalem," thus the name. It is also called sunchoke, sun root and Canadian potato and grows all over the North American continent.

American Indians used the tubers of Jerusalem artichokes extensively in their diet; the tubers are a very versatile food. They contain no starch, so are suitable for diabetics and dieters.

Easy to grow

These herbaceous perennials are very easy to grow but not so easy to get rid of once they are planted so you might want to try them before putting them in your garden.

Tubers are best planted in the spring, six inches deep in good garden soil about a foot apart in full sun or light shade. Plant them like potatoes with several "eyes" on each part. Jerusalem artichokes need very little attention other than some soil mounded up around the stems as they begin to grow.

They can grow to six feet tall so do well in the back of a border. They are quite attractive as they bloom with bright yellow flowers in late summer.

After the leaves fade in the fall, the tubers can be dug or left in the ground, mulched well and lifted when wanted.

Tubers are available from Park Seed Co. in the spring (call (800) 845-3369). A friend who grows them will probably be happy to share. One or two plants will be sufficient for most families.

You can use these vegetables any way you use potatoes. Raw, they are crisp and slightly sweet. They are good with dips and can be substituted for water chestnuts in stir-fries. If you put them in a tossed salad, drop the sliced tubers into water to which salt, vinegar or lemon juice has been added to keep the flesh from darkening.

I promised Barry a recipe, and you may want to try it, too. A new vegetable on our table can whet our appetites and prove to be a gastronomic delight.

HERBED JERUSALEM ARTICHOKES

4 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon finely snipped chives
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon, crushed (or 1 teaspoon fresh, chopped)
1/8 teaspoon salt
freshly ground pepper

Pare the chokes (or just scrub them very well). Slice and drop into boiling salted water to cover, return to boiling and cook 25 to 35 minutes, until tender. Drain. Place in serving bowl. Melt butter in same saucepan, stir in remaining ingredients and cook briefly. Pour sauce over chokes. Makes four servings.

If you are growing an unusual plant or have an interesting story to share, please drop me a line at The Eccentric, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham 48009.

Plant your garden with presidents and botanists

BY JAMES E. WALTERS
FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Plant names, or nomenclature, are part of a worldwide standard of reference.

The system is basically the same as that established in 1753 by Carolus Linnaeus, a Swedish botanist also known as Carl von Linne. His system identified plants by visual aspects of their flower parts, thereby standardizing procedure and terminology.

Some plants are named after famous people. The Washingtonia palms, for example, honor George Washington, first president of the United States. The woodland herb Jeffersonia honors Thomas Jefferson, our third president and a notable horticulturist and garden designer.

Reasons for other names are as varied as the plants themselves. Besides then-famous people, some are named for their discoverer or the person who financed a plant-finding expedition.

The New Royal Horticultural Society Dictionary of Gardening backgrounds how most plants received their botanical names.

Some plants, such as hoyas, are commonly cultivated by people who would be amazed to know the name honors someone. In this case it's Thomas Hoy, gardener at Syon House in London, who died in 1822.

Interiors: Oh! You beautiful dolls

BY BARBARA MAYER
FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Maybe it's the cult of personal decorating, but dolls seem to have the run of the house rather than being banished to the kids' rooms.

It could also be that so-called collectible dolls are more an object of art than for a child's amusement.

"To tell you the truth, I enjoy my dolls more than my children ever did," Akira Blount, an artist from Bybee, Tenn., says.

Blount made her first doll 27 years ago, before the birth of her first child. Today, her dolls and those by a number of other artists are on exhibit at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York through Sept. 8.

"This is one of the first exhibitions of dolls at a general museum," says Krystyna Poray Goddu. Goddu is co-curator and co-author with Wendy Lavitt of "The Doll by Contemporary Artists," (Abbeville Press, $45), a primer on artist-made dolls.

The number of adults who collect dolls is unknown, but Goddu says there are three national magazines on the topic with a total circulation of more than 200,000, including Dolls, a magazine Goddu helped to found in 1982.

'The fact that dolls are being used as art installations and as home accessories tells me that the attitude that dolls are just toys has really changed.'

Akira Blount
doll designer

Adult interest in dolls began to rise in the early 1980s as the number of artists and craftsmen making dolls increased.

For serious collectors, the most desirable dolls are antiques, one-of-a-kind dolls made by contemporary artists and limited editions. Also desirable are dolls mass-produced in the 1940s, '50s and '60s, the golden age of doll-making with its early Barbies and Madame Alexander and Betsy McCall dolls.

Typically, the collector is a woman who is interested in period fashion and history. Or she may have started a collection by buying the dolls she wanted as a child but her family could ill afford.

Collectors go to great lengths to create a fitting environment for their dolls, so it's not uncommon for dealers to make house calls. For one recent client, Karen Shay and Barb Lovett, of A Victorian Doll Shoppe in Northville, Mich., set up a showcase of dolls and accessories such as a crystal lamp, candlesticks, an antique purse and pearls spilling out of a box.

Collectors also look to the magazines for display ideas, according to Goddu, now special projects editor at Dolls. In the June/July issues, both Dolls and Contemporary Doll Collector magazines feature articles on displaying dolls in the home.

"Some people buy an old wicker bassinet or a crib and fill it with dolls," Goddu says. "Others arrange dolls around a child-size table set for tea, or in a highchair in a dining room.

They also can be displayed on long shelves or on perches large enough for one or two. Lights under glass, such as in a large curio cabinet or a commercial display case, also are used. Those with unusually large collections may devote an entire room to a personal "museum."

"Owl Deva," by Akira Blount, is among dolls at the Museum of American Folk Art. The 22-inch female figure wears an owl mask and sits in a twig chair made by her husband, Larry Blount. The doll holds a nest with eggs in it.

"A deva is a creative and protective spirit, and the doll is protecting the eggs," Akira Blount says. "On a symbolic level, the doll is about protecting species to make sure they survive. But on a simpler basis, I love animals and often incorporate them into my dolls."

The Blounts have built other vignettes to sell, and an Atlanta decorator recently chose a Blount doll as the main decorative element in the foyer of her home.

Dolls are also going to business. A 4-foot vignette created by the Blounts is a permanent installation in the lobby of North Point Center East, an office building in downtown Atlanta.

"The fact that dolls are being used as art installations and as home accessories tells me that the attitude that dolls are just toys has really changed," Akira Blount says.

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Give your photos a center of interest

MONTE NAGLER

Many good pictures you see aren't the result of a fortunate accident or taken by chance. Most often, they have been planned and created by the photographer.

How do you create strong pictures? Begin by learning good techniques of composition, which include choosing an effective center of interest for your shot.

For example, have you ever composed a photograph in the viewfinder only to realize that something just isn't right? There's an element missing that if included will give your shot special impact.

Perhaps it's the sunset picture over the lake that just doesn't make it until you include the silhouette of the lighthouse in the viewfinder. Or maybe it's the landscape that lacks impact until you place the dramatic mountain peak in view.

You see, including a center of interest can turn a weak composition into one that's strong in viewer interest.

Avoid placing your center of interest in the center of the picture. In the center, your shot may look static and uninteresting. Use the "rule of thirds." When you divide your scene into thirds both vertically and horizontally, the dividing lines intersect in four places. Any of these intersections provides a pleasing position for your center of interest.

"Framing" techniques and "lead-in lines" that I've discussed in past columns also help add special impact to your main subject.

On a recent trip to England, I visited the historic Rievaulx Abbey, built more than 1,000 years ago. The composition was good, but something was missing. I needed a strong center of interest.

My prayers were answered when a white horse (the ideal color) walked into the viewfinder. Notice how the horse becomes the center of interest. I placed him in the lower right "third" and made sure I used a small aperture to render everything sharp and in focus. What resulted is a captivating picture with the flavor of Old England.

Using a strong center of interest can improve your photographs dramatically.

Horse sense: The white horse adds a strong center of interest to Monte Nagler's photograph of England's ancient Rievaulx Abbey.

A coffee table that will take you to your grave

BY NANCY ROBERTS TROTT
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WEBSTER, New Hampshire (AP) – Bill Hale is one of the few furniture makers who will guarantee his product for more than a lifetime.

Hale's coffee tables, bookcases, liquor cabinets and blanket chests all are designed to go with their owners to their graves.

"Everybody laughs at me at first, but once I explain it, everybody goes, 'Hmmm, good idea,'" says Hale, owner of the Down to Earth Coffin Co. in Webster.

Hale makes coffins. But because most people don't plan far enough ahead to buy their own coffins, he has found uses for his products before they reach their final resting places.

"It makes a great liquor cabinet," Hale says.

He also will install temporary shelves inside for books or put hinges on a specially made door so a coffin can double as a gun cabinet.

Virginia O'Connor of Plymouth keeps her coffin, a plain pine casket with rope handles, in her living room.

"We use it for a coffee table," says O'Connor, 70. "I call it my coffin table. The kids kneel down and do coloring books and puzzles on it. It's very, very handy."

O'Connor bought her coffin table two years ago from a Newport, R.I., artisan because she wanted to make sure she was buried in a simple pine box. When she got it home, it quickly became a conversation piece.

"It seemed practical. You know, be prepared," she says. "It brought a lot of conversation I didn't realize it would bring when I bought it."

O'Connor says she wanted her coffin to convey the message that people should not be afraid of dying, but that isn't always the effect. She says her family was entertaining some people from Wales at her coffin table when her daughter suggested she tell everyone what it was.

"One man got all upset. He got up and moved to the other side of the room," she says. Eventually, everyone had a laugh over it, however.

Hale chuckles at the jokes, but says his products could be seen more as a necessity than a novelty.

His handcrafted coffins range in price from about $700 for a simple pine coffin to about $2,200 for a black walnut coffin with moulded stiles and rails. The average price for a casket sold through a funeral home is about $2,000 and hand-carved caskets can cost as much as $8,000.

"People do plan their funerals," says Hale, 46. "Why not buy your box and save yourself some money? The only trick is you have to buy it before you need it."

Saving money isn't the only advantage for buyers.

"There are some people who want some input in what they're planted in," he says.

A reserved man who prefers to let his work speak for itself, Hale builds his coffins in a workshop at home. He paints or stains the coffins, which are then hand-stenciled. Fitted quilts for the inside are optional, but every coffin comes with a small wooden box for treasured possessions.

Ade Bethune, 82, of Newport, Rhode Island, made her own coffin more than 50 years ago when she decided she would not be buried in a funeral home casket.

"I didn't want to be caught dead in a plush-lined coffin," she says. "Once you're dead, you're not there anymore to get what you want, so you have to prepare ahead of time. I attended a few funerals and I realized, 'Hey, that's not what I want.' Then I better do something about it."

She uses her coffin, a plain wooden box with rope handles, as a hope chest. She keeps it in her front hall.

Hale dismisses the suggestion that to be in such a business is macabre.

"It's not something we can get away from, and why not approach it from this angle?," he says. "It's not that big a deal, really."

Keep home fires from burning

(NAPS) — Fire Prevention Week is October 6 to 12, and for good reason. Home fires are most likely to occur in the late fall and winter, reports ITT Hartford Insurance Group, a leading homeowner insurer and the developer of Junior Fire Marshal, the longest-operating fire safety education program for children. Heeding these hot tips from those experts can help you protect your home and family.

■ Get your furnace and oil burners serviced before turning them on for the winter.

■ Have your flues and chimneys checked if you plan to use a fireplace or wood burning stove.

■ Keep space heaters, especially gas and kerosene ones, away from curtains, bedspreads, furniture and other flammable materials. Also, place space heaters in an area where they can't get knocked over.

■ Do not, under any circumstances, use the kitchen stove or other cooking appliance to heat a room.

New series examines world of design ideas

By Hugh Gallagher
Staff Writer

Though most people opt for traditional styles when decorating their homes or latch on to the latest trend, there are numerous alternatives to consider.

The new World Design series by Herbert Ypma takes a look at some interesting decorating options. The series is published by Stewart, Tabori & Chang, which specializes in large format art books. These design books are more in the style of art books than traditional books on interior decoration. The emphasis is as much on the stylish look of the books as it is on the design ideas being explored.

"London Minimum" begins with the understanding that most people think of British design as the opposite of minimalism. The pervasive influence of Victorian style has become synonymous with British design. Ypma presents several modern examples of British minimalism and expertly links them to a rich British design tradition from the formality of Georgian architecture to the utilitarian emphasis of the Industrial Revolution to the British take on the International Style of the post World War I era.

Ypma's writing is clear and interesting. He uses good examples and explains how each represents the minimalist tradition. Though many might find minimalism a cold approach to architecture and interior design, Ypma makes a good argument for putting function first. He also provides examples of minimalism that retain some air of romance or historical reference points, while maintaining the intent of "getting to the essence of a place."

He explores textiles, furniture design and kitchen ware. He even shows how the classic English phone booth fits into the minimalist tradition. (It was an award winning design by Sir George Gilbert Scott in 1924.)

"Pacific Island" is a nice contrast to the gray light of London with the bright sun of the South Pacific. Ypma continues the same format, covering the historical background for the various styles, influenced both by island natives and missionaries. The design of the islands is richly influenced by the sea, the palms, the bright sun, religious rituals and a love of bright color. The architecture is a form of minimalism itself, but here in vibrant sunwashed colors. Ypma shows how modern architects and designers redefine these Polynesian influences.

Ypma, again, is a perfect guide. He writes short sections rich with examples and historical background.

Both of these board bound, large format books (suggested retail price $27.50) are sumptuously illustrated and attractively designed.

Though you may never want to adapt any of the designs discussed, the trip is still worth taking.

Old wood transformed into furniture

By Barbara Mayer
For AP Special Features

Americans consider recycled furniture to be pieces rescued from Grandma's attic, picked up at garage sales or purchased as fine antiques.

Now there are other forms to ponder. New pieces are being made from old wood, or from other materials that don't rob nature or otherwise harm the environment.

This year, the first in the eight years that it has been in New York, the International Contemporary Furniture Fair mounted a display of about 25 such products.

"This is a new way of thinking that starts with the manufacturing process," says Susan Szenasy, editor of Metropolis magazine, a co-sponsor of the trade show.

Although recycling is the main idea, other concepts come into play. There's the use of readily-available and renewable resources such as plywood instead of scarcer materials like wood veneers and marble. There's the job of reformulating products to make them more benign and biodegradable.

Salvaged wood made an appearance at the ICFF as an elegant credenza with serpentine front made of recycled wood flooring.

"I started with old flooring out of ecological convictions, but now I also prefer the look of it," says Patrick Moore, who studied metal working at the University of Wisconsin before moving to New York.

Moore says the raw material is easy to find, though pulling out the nails cuts into his creative time.

"It's surprising what you can find on the streets," he says, "loaded into dumpsters at construction sites or simply sitting out waiting to be collected in the garbage."

At least 20 companies at the ICFF chose plywood as a more acceptable resource than wood veneer. Birch plywood pieces by David Kawecki for 3D Interiors of San Francisco are designed to be assembled at home by fitting tabs into slots.

"It's the design that makes the pieces interesting," says Patrice Davis, owner of 3D Interiors. "The tabs and slots require a high degree of accuracy in cutting, which is possible only with laser cutters. Five years ago this furniture couldn't have been made."

Wood paneling and natural stone facings are luxury materials and expensive to install. To reduce overall costs, Maya Romanoff Corp., a to-the-trade fabric and wallcoverings company in Chicago, introduced wallcoverings containing small quantities of wood or marble mixed with bonding agents and adhesives.

Wood-veneer wallpaper is made of paper-thin sheets of Chinese fig or pauonia wood bonded to a backing. It comes in a variety of patterns, including diamonds and squares. Other Romanoff wallcoverings combine wood pulp with rayon fabric, and pulverized marble is bonded to look like blocks of stone.

But for true cutting-edge design, pieces by recent design school graduates took the palm. Isabelle Moore of Redmond, Wash., created a sleek rocking chair from recycled detergent bottles and plywood at Parnham College in Dorset, England. The primary material, a high-density polyethylene, is known in the plastics trade as confetti because of the colors derived from a variety of bottles.

Inna Alesina collected egg cartons from New York City restaurants as the primary material for a stool she designed and made before graduating this spring from Parsons School of Design. The stool looks a bit like a giant Cheerio when not in use, more like an egg when sat upon.

Alesina's tool was a prototype made as part of a design contest. Moore's rocking chair, $990 and made by hand in her studio, is expensive considering it is made of recycled material. But the material is expensive to buy at the moment, and there is a substantial amount of hand labor, Moore says.

Both pieces will be on show at the Washington State Convention Center in Seattle July 11-Sept. 26 in an exhibition of award-winning, environmentally sound designs. The contest, now in its second year, is sponsored by the Clean Washington Center and other groups and administered by Johnson Design Studio of Seattle.

"Right now, environmental design is cutting edge," Szenasy says. "But there is grass roots sentiment for it, especially among kids who are growing up recycling their soda bottles and hearing about the environment from characters like Kermit the Frog."

Doldrums visit Realtors, too

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

All jobs have their routine. We can't be on top of our game all the time. The doldrums hit everyone, including real estate agents.

Marlene Klimecki, an associate broker with RE/MAX West in Livonia, likes to get out the pen and paper and touch base with previous clients when things get slow.

"I take the time to write little notes ... thinking of you ... of course, including some of my cards," she said.

"They call and say, 'I couldn't believe you took the time to write to us, I can't believe you'd do that.' Especially if you can remember the names of their kids or pets."

Klimecki also has started sending copies of new listings on streets where previous clients currently live. Not only does it keep them informed about property values, but it keeps her name in their memory bank.

"Another thing, I think, is keeping your name in personal advertising," Klimecki added.

Mitch Wolf, a broker with Cranbrook Associates in Franklin, finds that things can slack off during the holiday season in November and December and also during mid summer when people vacation.

"When I get slow, an inner voice or something tells you you better hit the stick and get back to basics," Wolf said. "I have open houses, contact for sale by owners."

Then, good things happen to those who hustle. Wolf describes a specific instance when an unexpected pick-me-up shook him out of the doldrums.

"A client was transferring into town and was looking in the $500,000 to $600,000 range. He couldn't really find anything he loved. Financially, he was worried because he was taking a new job. He told me he would take a rental.

"Then someone else I had gone to do a listing within the last year but who decided to rent called (unexpectedly) and asked me to look at it again," Wolf said. "The minute I got the listing, I called the buyer who was going to rent.

"I told him it was $250,000, it was in a great neighborhood, it would sell for much more in a year or two and it was better than having an apartment. He bought it."

One renter became a buyer, another renter, the seller. And Wolf was in on both ends.

"It just gets you going, moves you, shows you can make your own business," he said.

Dan Mullan, an associate broker with Mayfair in Livonia, said the doldrums usually hit every three or four months with ups and downs in business.

"One of the things I do is go through a list of past clients – I've been in business 15 years – go through and call and ask for referrals," he said. "It's not exactly cold calling.

"I'll get down to calling and the seventh one actually will say, 'As a matter of fact, a guy I work with or my brother-in law ...'"

Then he's in business.

But Mullan has other strategies, too.

"I'll pull out some of my (motivational) tapes. I'll keep books at my desk, a picture of Aspen, Colo., on my bulletin board and a picture of my boat in the water.

"In December, the market does tend to slow down," he said. "Most agents just give up. Typically, my December ad bill is twice most other months."

Mullan also has a story of how maintaining a professional demeanor in the wake of a major setback rocketed him from the outhouse to the penthouse.

"I remember a customer telling me after a long time that he was buying from a for sale by owner. That meant no commission. I was real disappointed. Then the buyer asked if I could recommend a building inspector. I went ahead and did that.

"Just by that service to him, the for sale by owner called me to work with them to find a house.

"You've got to come up punching, still be of service, still be positive," Mullan said.

Sally Witt, broker/owner of Heritage Real Estate in Livingston County/Better Homes and Gardens, doesn't find much excuse for agents to be in the dumper too long.

"We make our own business," she said. "We can't wait for people to come into our office and call us. We have to generate business."

And she's always doing just that.

"Everyone has to live some place," Witt said. "Whether I'm in the grocery store, doctor's office, Builder's Square, I go up to people and say, 'Hi, how are you? I'm in real estate. Do you or can you think of anyone who wants to buy or sell a house?'

"Or I wear my name tag and they come to me," she said. "This is a communications business first, selling property, second. If I felt self-conscious, I wouldn't be in the business."

There are ways to avoid burnout – and deal with it when it happens, Witt said.

"You need to take some time to smell the roses. You have to be a well-rounded person. You have to regenerate yourself.

"I think most of our people try to take time off for their family, do something special. Then you're ready to get back and do a good job."

That's the thinking of Bob Ogg, a Realtor with Max Broock in Birmingham.

"Go on vacation," he advises. "I'm serious. Take some time off and let your thoughts subside. Get away from the environment. Then come back and ... go back to the basics.

"I do a lot of open houses. It forces your talking to people. I do mailings to past clients. You call your circle of friends and ask if they know anyone who's thinking of moving.

"I also go to seminars and listen to what other people say," Ogg said. "Often, you can pick up one thing you can use.

"It's hard to not rest on your laurels," Ogg said. "A lot of agents expect it to fall in their lap, but that normally doesn't happen."

Last week's article on expenses associated with moving into a new house should have quoted the following rates for Corrigan Moving Systems in Farmington Hills:

- $100 per hour for three men and a truck
- $80 per hour for two men and a truck

You don't need a builder's license to subcontract

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. My wife and I are planning on building a new house and want to contract much of the work ourselves. Is it necessary or advisable to obtain a builder's license? If we do obtain a builder's license, are we exposing ourselves to any legal issues or liabilities?

A. Under MCL 339.2403 a person may engage in the business of or act in the capacity of a residential builder or a residential maintenance and alteration contractor or sales person in the state of Michigan without having a license if the person is, among other things, an owner of property, with reference to a structure on the property for the owner's own use and occupancy. Accordingly, it would not be necessary for you to obtain a builder's license if you plan to reside in the house yourself.

On the other hand, obviously if you want to contract out for the construction of the house, the contractors who work on the house must be licensed.

Moreover, the more information you have about contracting and building, the better you will do in regard to the construction of the house.

You may be well advised to hire a "general contractor" to assist you in letting the contracts to the subcontractors for the construction of the house.

If you were to obtain a builder's license, you would have to take classes and a test, which, would, no doubt, more familiarize you with the intricacies of building a house. In general, it is best advised to have as much assistance as possible in any endeavor, and that includes the construction of a house.

Q. We have a provision in our condominium documents restricting minor children. The president of the condominium association board of directors has indicated that since we are not enforcing this provision, we should not be violating any federal statute. Is this correct?

A: In a 1995 ruling by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (which enforces the Fair Housing Amendments), it ruled that a restriction on minor children included in the condominium documents, even though not enforced, violated Section 804(c)(42 USC, Paragraph 3604(c)), which would make it illegal to make . . . or publish, or caused to be made or be published, any notice or statement which indicates a preference against families with children.

Damages in that case were awarded in the amount of $1,500 for emotional distress, $500 to the children, $500 in actual damages, $750 penalty to the board member and a $1,500 civil penalty against the condominium association.

It is incumbent, therefore, upon condominium associations to amend their documents to eliminate any prohibitive reference to children in order to avoid possible sanctions, damages and other penalties.

Buy paintable wallboard

BY POPULAR MECHANICS
FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Q: I have just finished renovating my living room and am now at the stage where the wallboard work is completed. Can you give me some advice as far as painting is concerned?

A: Decorating newly finished wallboard can present a challenge for the amateur, because wallboard presents a problem surface for the painter. When painting wallboard you are actually painting two materials: the paper covering of the wallboard, and the compound that was used to treat nail or screw heads, seams, and corners. The paper face has a slightly rough or "calendered" surface, while the taping compound is glass-smooth. These two surfaces also present unequal absorption rates, and will soak up paint or primer unequally.

Because of these problems, wallboard manufacturers have always advised that you use a latex or water-based primer as a first coat on a new wallboard. Oil primers may dry slowly, soak into the paper face of the panels, and cause the paper nap to raise. Oil primers on wallboard will often cause very smooth spots where there is compound over seams or fasteners, and very tough areas where the nap of the paper has been raised. Thus all wallboard manufacturers and the Gypsum Association, a trade organization that represents all wallboard manufacturers, recommend a heavy-bodied latex paint as a first coat over new wallboard.

One major manufacturer, United States Gypsum, makes a special base coat for new wallboard, called, appropriately enough, First Coat. It is available premixed, or you can buy the primer in powder form and mix it with water. It is cheaper than ordinary primer, and will provide the coverage of primers and sealers, without the disadvantages of either of these two paint products. First Coat will seal the surface, and contains enough fillers to act as a primer, so it equalizes the suction on both the taping compound areas and the bare paper areas.

The Gypsum Association advises professionals to shear coat the entire surface of the wall and-or ceiling with compound, so no bare paper is left.

In effect, one just plasters the entire surface with painting compound, so there is no difference in texture between paper and compound.

However, troweling a complete room can be a messy job if you are not skilled with a trowel, so we advise using First Coat as a wallboard undercoater. Once the surface differences have been eliminated with First Coat, you can then recoat with any type of paint finish.

Routine maintenance cuts air conditioning costs

BY POPULAR SCIENCE
FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

Many homeowners instinctively feel that fixed appliances (furnaces, central air conditioners and water heaters), are simply too permanent and complex to be included in a routine maintenance schedule. If this is your position, it's a costly one.

An investment of an hour or two of your time will not only extend the lives of these appliances, it'll save you plenty in operating costs.

Of the three major appliances, central air conditioners probably suffer the most from poor maintenance. The problem is dust. In less than a season, the compressor fin tubes can become completely clogged with dust. As a large volume of air must be drawn through these fins with every cooling cycle, a matting of dust will stress the fan and compressor motors, and greatly reduce efficiency. When years of accumulation go unchecked, the problem grows.

To correct the problem, we suggest cleaning the inside of your compressor unit each spring. A second, midsummer cleaning is also a good idea.

When cleaning compressor units, begin by shutting off the power. This can usually be done at the dedicated disconnect switch near the unit. Remove the front access panel to reveal the compressor and the electrical and refrigeration connections. You'll then be able to undo the top panel that supports the fan and fan motor. As the top panel is largely open, shielded only by a coarse screen, leaves and other debris are likely to have fallen into the unit. Carefully lift the fan and clean out the debris.

With the area inside the condenser coil cleared, remove the shroud from around the coil. This will reveal the exterior of the coil where the fin tubes support the accumulation of dust.

Use a soft-bristle brush to sweep away the dust blanket. Don't press too hard or you'll bend the edges of the fin tubes, which will also reduce efficiency. When all of the dust has been swept from the coil, vacuum it up so it's not pulled back into the coils when the unit starts up.

Next, check for oil ports at the top of the compressor. If you see any, lubricate them with all-purpose oil or turbine oil. If you find no oil ports, the compressor is sealed and no oil will be needed. With the compressor unit cleaned, replace the side and front panels, and restore electrical power.

Along with the outdoor condenser unit, your air conditioner will have an indoor evaporator coil, usually located within the furnace plenum. In most cases, you'll have no direct access to this coil, short of cutting through the plenum. If you find an access panel, clean the coil with water and bleach. The goal is to remove any accumulation of bacteria that may have collected at the base of the coil.

And finally, keep an eye on the condensate hose attached to the evaporator coil. This tube, which typically runs from the evaporator coil atop the furnace to the nearest floor drain, can often become clogged with bacteria. The result is water spilling into the furnace or onto the floor. Your best preventive measure is to pour a 50-50 mix of water and household bleach through the hose midway through each cooling season.

Mortgage agencies' future cloudy

WASHINGTON (AP) – It's been a politically turbulent year for Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

Congress is questioning whether the government-backed mortgage agencies are taking on too much risk. Four new government studies openly asked whether lawmakers should make them independent and yank a $6 billion subsidy.

Despite these rumblings, one theme emerged from four oversight hearings by the House Banking subcommittee on capital markets, which concluded Wednesday.

Congress is unlikely to force the companies, formally known as the Federal National Mortgage Association and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp., to become fully private this year, although less dramatic reforms are in the works.

"We are far from having an answer to consider privatization at this point," said Rep. Ken Bentsen, D-Texas.

The focus of Congress' inquiry is the use of federal benefits by the two agencies, Both were created by Congress to expand the national mortgage market but have stock traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Both companies save about $400 million because they don't have to pay state or local corporate income taxes or register their securities with the Securities and Exchange Commission. They also can fall back on U.S. Treasury credit lines of $2.25 billion, which allows them to borrow at almost the same rate as the federal Treasury.

Banking committee members fear that with more than $1 trillion in outstanding mortgage-backed bonds, both companies may not have enough capital set aside to cover unexpected losses if the economy soured rapidly. If that happened, analysts assume taxpayers would be asked to help cover losses.

The companies' federal regulator, Aida Alvarez, director of the Office of Federal Housing Enterprise Oversight, said it would take an "unlikely scenario" – a 6-point increase in interest rates and high loan losses – before the two companies would run out of capital.

"The results do illustrate, though, that the survival of both firms in a very high interest rate environment is not a sure thing," Alvarez said. She suggested both companies may have to increase their capital levels when her agency finishes a review of capital standards next year.

Leland C. Brendsel, Freddie Mac's chairman, said it's misleading to compare his company's capital levels to banks or other lenders which engage in more diverse and riskier activities.

"Freddie Mac has only one line of business – the purchase of high-quality mortgage loans," Brendsel said in prepared remarks. Testimony of Brendsel and Robert B. Zoellick, Fannie Mae's executive vice president, was postponed due to a series of votes on the House floor.

In Zoellick's prepared testimony, he emphasized the positive aspects of the recent investigations. "All of the study agencies ... agree that Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac reduce mortgage rates, and that mortgage rates would rise if our federal charter were revoked," he said.

Service deadline extended

The deadline for nominations has been extended to Aug. 30 to nominate a business for the Small Business Community Service Award sponsored by Ameritech Small Business Services.

For more information, or an application, call the Detroit Chamber of Commerce, Small Business Department, (313) 596-0379.

The award was established to recognize small businesses who have demonstrated a sincere commitment to improving the quality of life in their communities. It also gives a financial boost to a nonprofit organization in the community.

One small business will be recognized and a nonprofit agency it supports will receive a $5,000 grant from Ameritech.

Check contractor's background

You're ready to have your kitchen or bathroom remodeled, and you hope that the contractor you selected will do a good job and back up the work. You aren't alone.

According to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, people call the BBB to check on home improvement contractors more than any other type of business.

And while calling the BBB can help you find out if there are any complaints on the company and its response record, homeowners can follow some simple rules to avoid the pain of being burned.

Keith Paul, president of Home Advantage Referral Service, specializes in matching honest contractors with consumers. His advice:

■ Ask for references. By doing this, you receive valuable information about workmanship. Ask questions like, 'How was the quality of work?' and "Would you use the contractor again?"

■ Check for insurance. If the contractor doesn't have valid insurance and one of the workers is injured on your property, you could be on the hook paying medical bills.

■ Ask for a written guarantee. This step is very important in case there's a discrepancy regarding workmanship or cost overruns. Get a written, detailed cost analysis before the project begins to prevent problems between you and the contractor.

■ Request a project completion schedule. Asking the contractor for a schedule that explains the tasks and time frames for the project should help minimize construction delays.

■ Don't pay everything in advance. The only time contractors need money in advance is when they order a custom, non-refundable item for the project.

Never pay more than 20 percent up front. Paying for work as it's completed helps ensure it will be done to your specifications.

■ Don't pick up the permit. Having the contractor pick up the building permit from your city or township serves two purposes.

First, when the contractor obtains the permit, it's proof that his or her building license is valid. Second, if there's a problem with workmanship, you can track the company by its license.

■ Make your final payment after you receive a waiver of lien. This document from supply companies indicates that all of your materials have been paid.
