Vote paves way for new roads

City of Plymouth voters overwhelmingly approved a road millage that changes the financing of street improvements. It will also speed up repairs.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Plymouth voters said a big yes to a road improvement millage on Tuesday, as nearly 67 percent of voters passed the measure.

Unofficial returns had the measure passing more than 2-to-1 with 2,743 yes votes to 1,268 no votes.

Passage of the measure means work will start in the spring on the first phase of a 10-year road improvement project.

That work was slated to begin in the spring, no matter what voters decided. But passage of the issue means two things: Road improvements will be completed more quickly than first planned. And those improvements will no longer be paid for by levying special assessments on homeowners living on affected streets.

Instead, all city taxpayers will be assessed 2 mills or less over 20 years. The money raised will pay for two successive 10-year street improvement programs.

Del Templeton, the city resident who organized volunteers to spread the word on the road millage, said that upon learning it had passed, "I was just ecstatic."

"It showed to me the community has a great deal of pride in their city," he said. "People realize the condition of the roads is definitely reflective of a community."

Why did the measure pass? Templeton and a dozen volunteers passed out leaflets, and talked to people on the streets and by telephone. He credited newspaper publicity on the issue, adding, "I think the city definitely did a top-notch job informing every resident in the community with three mailings," Templeton said.

Now that voters have approved the roads issue, City Manager Steve Walters said the first half of the bond issue will be sold over the winter.

Plymouth incumbents walk to re-election

BY KEVIN BROWN

The voter turnout in greater Plymouth on Tuesday was large, but only if compared to a primary or school election.

Despite Indian summer-like weather, voter turnout was down from the last presidential election four years ago.

In Plymouth Township, 12,411 voters cast ballots, just 65 percent of registered voters. That was down from the 14,131 voters who cast ballots in 1992. Voter turnout was also down in the city.

A lack of potent local races could have played a part. The only city issue to be decided was a road millage, which passed. And in the township, the entire board of trustees ran unopposed.

Re-elected to second four-year terms on the board were Supervisor Kathleen Keen-McCarthy, Clerk Marilyn Massengill, and trustees Kay Arnold, Charles Curmi, Ron Griffith and K.C. Mueller. All ran as Republicans.

Ron Edwards was elected to his first term as treasurer. He defeated

New law could help city clean up sites

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Toxic spill sites have traditionally been tough to develop, as potential businesses don't want the headache of paying cleanup costs.

A prime example in Plymouth is the former Amoco station on the corner of Main and Ann Arbor Trail. It has sat vacant as business activity flourishes all around it.

But that could be changing. Plymouth city commissioners on Monday approved an ordinance to allow the city to use taxes collected on such a property to help pay for cleanup.

What is making this possible is the Brownfield Redevelopment Financing Act. It allows local governments to establish a Brownfield Redevelopment Authority to deal with contaminated properties.

"It would allow us to capture taxes to clean up the site," said Mayor Ron Loiselle.

The Amoco site won't likely benefit from the new legislation, as the company has already committed to a plan to clean up the property within the next two years.

Some examples of contaminated city sites that could benefit are the Bathey-BMG property on Mill Street in Old Village, and Stahl Manufacturing on Junction.

In a report to city commissioners Monday, City Manager Steve Walters said the captured taxes can be used "to assess the environmental status of a property, to take steps to mitigate exposure to existing contamination, and to clean up existing contamination."

The captured taxes can also be used to pay for costs of review by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality.

"For example, the city might enter into an agreement with the owner or buyer of a contaminated site, by which the city would finance the remediation of the contamination and the owner-buyer would redevelop the property," Walters said.

The city would capture taxes from the development to pay remediation costs, which could be financed by a tax increment bond issue.

The owner-buyer would also get Single Business Tax credits for part of the redevelopment costs – a 10 percent credit on that tax up to a maximum of $1 million.

The credit must be related to redevelopment costs before Jan. 1, 2001.

"Thus, industrial tax abatement would not have to be used to provide a private incentive," Walters said.

The Brownfield Redevelopment Authority would be able to capture both local and state school operating taxes, but only for work consistent with a remedial action plan approved by the state.

The Bathey site is believed to have become contaminated during World War II when barrels of chemicals were disposed of by emptying them into the ground.

At the Stahl site, byproduct chemicals produced in the process of coal gasification were dumped in the ground at the site beginning in the 1930s.

"There may be other sites we don't know about," Walters said.

Clergy object to Halloween seance

BY VALERIE OLANDER
STAFF WRITER

The YMCA of Plymouth will not be holding seances next Halloween due to a group of Canton clergy condemning the act.

"In our simplistic look at it we didn't see any harm, but after talking to (Rev. Bryan Smith of Geneva Presbyterian Church) I can understand his view. Kids can get into the occult," said Joanne McCarthy, director of the YMCA.

Rev. Smith said several teachings in the Bible's Old Testament speak about seances being prohibited by God. Not only Christians, but Jews and Islamics consider seances to be sacrilegious, he said.

Rev. Smith added, "Treating it as a fun activity desensitizes kids."

Six clergy signed a letter to McCarthy, saying they were concerned with the practice, he said. The churches include Geneva Presbyterian, Free Methodist, Canton Community Church, Charity Church, Church of the Risen Lord and Lake Pointe Bible Chapel. Rev. Smith personally took the letter to the YMCA on Halloween Day and spoke to McCarthy.

"The Y's response was very positive. There's no doubt that their motives were good. They were trying to provide a positive activity through Halloween," said Rev. Smith.

About 400 parents and adults attended the two-day event held Oct. 25 and 26, said McCarthy. Children under 9 were required to be accompanied by an adult.

One of the reasons the YMCA decided to have a seance as a Halloween fundraiser, instead of a haunted house as in previous years, was because the Fire Marshall requested a sprinkler system for any maze-type haunts this year, she said. The YMCA didn't want to bear the cost, she said.

"There was no intent to conjure up the spirits or black magic. We just wanted to do something similar to a haunted house," she said. "I guess we'll move away from it. It's not a big fundraiser... It was not meant to insult anyone in the community it was to keep kids off the street."

How the seance worked was the children signed their names on a list as they waited for the event to begin. Volunteers listened to the children talking as they stood in the line and matched the conversation with the names. During the seance, the "voice from beyond" repeated the information (for example, "Susie just had a birthday party"), said McCarthy.

The only calling up of a spirit was a seance volunteer asking to talk to Uncle Frank. Frankenstein appeared out of the darkness, she said.

Hollywood's Arnold could show at ice fest

Could Arnold Schwartzenegger be coming to Plymouth?

At this point it's a stretch, so don't get too pumped up, movie fans. But a Plymouth-Hollywood connection could be in the offing.

The new "Batman" movie includes a role for the villain "Mr. Freeze." Schwartzenegger is reportedly to be cast in that role.

Plymouth Ice Spectacular promoter Mike Watts said that in the spring, someone from the production company working on the movie called him.

"I was kind of surprised how he found out about us," Watts said.

On Monday, Watts presented Plymouth city commissioners with a thick book of press clippings from around the country and abroad on the last festival, attended by an estimated 650,000.

Watts said the man from the production company had some questions, and was considering for the film "some ice carving aspects to work on in the future."

"I told him we have the best ice carvers in the world attending the Plymouth ice festival," Watts said.

He sent a packet of information to Hollywood, including photos of some past carvings _ which include a Batmobile.

Watts said he hasn't heard back yet, but plans to call the production company.

"I told him we'd love to consult with him," Watts said.

Vandals spray paint Mayflower Hotel

The manager of the Mayflower Motor Inn called Plymouth police Oct. 29 to report a spray painting incident.

About $200 in damage was done at the business at 471 Main St. by someone who painted an upstairs door, wall, and wood partition with orange and silver paint.

In silver paint, someone wrote, "Baby, sin for me." An angel was painted in orange.

The manager knows of no suspects. He told police he assumed it was a random Halloween prank.

POLICE CALLS

DOMESTIC FIGHT: Plymouth police responded at 11:45 p.m. Oct. 29 to reports of family fight on Sutherland.

An argument arose between a teenage girl and her mother's boyfriend. The boyfriend told the girl to get off the telephone because her mother wanted to make a call.

When the daughter continued talking on the phone, the man pulled the cord and ripped it out of the wall, disconnecting the phone.

The girl then said, "Maybe I should just kill myself," to which the man replied, "Just go ahead," according to police.

The mother said the daughter has threatened to kill herself so many times that they don't take her seriously.

When police asked the girl about the suicide threat, she said, "It was just something I said." She also claimed that her mom's boyfriend shoved her.

The mother denied it, saying there was no physical confrontation.

The girl said she was leaving to spend the night with a friend.

the choice was easy. "I went with a straight Democratic ticket. I think they have more heart," she said.

Barbara Trudell of Plymouth also voted straight Democratic. "I want more Democrats in Congress. Clinton hasn't done anything I oppose, except veto partial-birth abortion. Other than that, he has done a wonderful job. So has Hillary."

B.T. Morse, who identified himself as "part of Plymouth's underworld," went with Clinton and Levin. "Ronna Romney is not going to represent me," he said. "She's an airhead and is playing basically upon her married name. I don't think Clinton is a good enough Democrat. He compromises too much. But it's better than going with the Prince of Darkness. In the Senate, he voted everything down," Morse said.

Other voters also shared their views.

"I'm pretty sick of the present administration," said a Plymouth Township man. "But I stuck with Levin, because I'm a union worker. A lot of policies of the government trickle down to middle class people, of which I'm one."

Plymouth's George Tatarian voted for Perot. "I think he has the right idea; downsizing government and balancing the budget," he said.

Bill Secunda of Plymouth opted for Dole and Romney, "because of the character issue, in a nutshell. I like Romney's stands on the issues, specifically gun control, abortion and flag burning. I can't believe I'm conservative in my old age."

Beth Gilmour of Plymouth voted for Dole because of his promised 15-percent tax cut. She didn't vote for Romney, however. "I saw her interviewed, and her personality turned me off. She didn't want to discuss her views."

Plymouth's Nancy Rogman and her husband both voted straight Republican. "We're for less government and taxes," they said.

Steve Stetu of Plymouth voted straight Republican as well. "I work in health care, and Clinton is putting me out of business, or at least trying to," he said.

Chris Michalek voted for Perot as "a protest vote against the two-party system."

One worker at Central Middle School said that in 18 years, he's never seen more voters. However, he didn't see Volodymyr Birko of Plymouth, or Paulette Wisnom, who works in Plymouth.

"I wasn't particularly enthused about either candidate; I didn't see much of a race, and I didn't feel like waiting for three hours to vote," said Birko, who normally does vote. "Plus I have a court date at 9 a.m. tomorrow. The election is not the foremost thing on my mind."

Working election night at the Plymouth Coffee Studio, Wisnom said, "I chose not to vote because I didn't prefer any of the candidates. I don't believe elections are the ways you change things. I believe in working more in local ways."

Plymouth joins others; says yes to stadium

By Casey Hans
Staff Writer

It was the dream of Detroit city and county officials that came true Tuesday.

Voters from throughout Wayne County — both city and suburbs — overwhelmingly supported a bond proposal to build a new Lions stadium in the theater district of Detroit.

Meanwhile, opponents are vowing not only to continue the fight, but to form a watchdog group to follow future county politics and policies.

"We're working as partners — that's what this Proposition S is all about," said Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara, during a jubilant Democratic victory party Tuesday at the Detroit Westin. "People recognize we all are one community and we have come together."

In unofficial results more than 70 percent countywide voted in favor of the ballot issue more commonly known as the "stadium tax proposal," although vote totals were not available at press time.

The measure approves a new excise tax to be paid through rental of vehicles and hotel rooms to help pay for a new stadium for the Lions that will be built next to a new Tigers baseball park.

The tax, not to exceed $80 million, could be levied up to 30 years to pay off bonds.

All Observer-area communities followed the trend in favor of the proposal. The widest margin of support in this area was in Canton Township; the closest vote in Garden City. According to unofficial vote tallies, the yes/no totals included:

- Redford: 10,684 to 9,811
- Garden City: 5,278 to 5,177
- Westland: 12,787 to 11,124
- Livonia: 23,929 to 21,721
- Canton: 13,037 to 9,952
- Plymouth: 2,162 to 1,823
- Plymouth Township: 6,438 to 5,322
- Northville 780 to 631
- Northville Township 4,963 to 4,107

McNamara and Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer applauded not only those who had worked hard for passage of the countywide initiative, but suburban and city leaders and voters who supported it. Archer called the project his "dream come true" for the city.

"What happened here was magic. It was inspired leadership," said Detroit Lions team president William Clay Ford Jr. "Never has such a complicated deal come together so well . . . for something so arduous and grilling, this was a lot of fun."

Wayne County Deputy Executive Mike Duggan, a key architect of the project, attributed the win to hard work, including 15 phone banks per night staffed by volunteers. "We gained 18 points in Canton in the last four days, and that was our lowest community," he said, adding that the vote "erases the differences between city and suburbs."

With a voter mandate, the real work begins for the Detroit/Wayne County Stadium Authority which is continuing efforts to acquire property and firm up stadium footprints. Anti-S forces say they will not go away despite the win and the overwhelming approval of voters.

Retired U.S. Congressman Carl Pursell spearheaded Taxpayers Against Proposition "S", a group opposed to using tax money to build private stadiums.

"This is a major revolt — that's what we're looking at here," said Pursell in his campaign headquarters in the basement of his Plymouth Township home. "This is only one round, only one election. Anything that goes on the books can come off."

Pursell said he and his supporters, including Garden City Councilman Ed Juarez and defeated Republican challenger for the Wayne County Commission Carol Juarez who were active in the anti-S movement, plan to form a regional group to keep an eye on county government and push for reform.

"When you step up and kiss me on the cheek, while reaching for my wallet, I don't like that," said Ed Juarez, a self-proclaimed Republican convert.

"It makes me nervous," added Carol Juarez. "A $505 million deal — don't you think it takes more than three days to put together?"

Meanwhile developer Chuck Forbes and his attorney — a specialist in the area of condemnation law — said Monday they were hopeful about reaching a post-election settlement this week involving the future of the historically restored Gem Theater, owned by Forbes and located in the heart of the proposed entertainment district along Woodward Avenue.

"I, frankly, look forward to working something out," Forbes said. "To give the community a lift."

Forbes said his ideal preference is to save the current location of the Gem and build the new stadiums around it or move the Gem between the Fox and State theaters along Woodward.

A move within a two-block area of the current location would also be acceptable, keeping the theater district intact, he said.

Both Forbes and his attorney Alan Ackerman spoke in favor of both the stadium and gaming proposals approved by voters Tuesday.

Forbes said the issue is about enhancing and improving the city and saving a historical landmark. The 450-seat theater was restored in 1990 to its Spanish Revival-style; it is listed on the National Register of Historical Places.

longtime Treasurer Mary Brooks in the August Republican primary.

State Rep. Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, was handily re-elected in the Republican-dominated 20th District which includes greater Plymouth and Northville and west Livonia. Districtwide, he received 29,941 votes to 13,604 for Democrat Deborah Hoadley.

"I'm very happy. I appreciate the voters re-electing me to another two-year term," Law said. "I'm going to keep up my 100 percent attendance and keep working very hard work with others to downsize state government."

In another race of local interest, 35th District Judge John MacDonald won re-election to a six-year term as he ran unopposed. The court serves greater Plymouth, Canton and Northville.

In the Plymouth District Library board race, two incumbent board members listed on the ballot, Hugh Harsha and Stephen Harper, were re-elected. That left room for one write-in candidate to win election to a third open seat. Unofficial results on Wednesday showed Joseph Gilmore was the likely winner among about 50 write-in candidates.

Louise Smith and husband, Brian, of Plymouth, voting at the Plymouth Cultural Center at 6:30 p.m. voted for Bob Dole.

"I felt I could trust him," she said.

She voted against the ballot issue to support a new Detroit stadium for the Lions. Husband Brian voted yes: "I think it would be good for the city."

In the 20th District state House race, Louise Smith voted for incumbent Republican Gerald Law. "He's done well for the district," she said. Brian Smith also voted for Law over challenger Democrat Deborah Hoadley.

Teresa Sardinha, who voted at noon at the Plymouth Township Annex on Ann Arbor Road, said she voted for Dole: "It's the lesser of two evils," she said.

Sardinha voted for the proposal to regulate bear hunting, and against the Detroit casino gambling proposal: "I don't think we need more poor people."

Al Trillich, who voted at the same time at the township annex, also voted for Dole. "I think there's a fair amount of room for improvement," he said.

Trillich voted against the Detroit stadium proposal. "If they want to invest money, they can build their own stadium," he said.

He voted for Law for the state House. "He is pretty big on attending sessions of government, that's one of the key issues, he's got to be there," Trillich said.

Peg and Dave Stratton voted at the Plymouth Cultural Center at about 6:30 p.m. Dave Stratton said he voted against the Detroit stadium proposal. "I think it's ridiculous to have two stadiums next to each other. But I wouldn't mind these rich guys paying for their own stadiums, we'll have to pay for it somehow," he said.

The Strattons voted against the proposal to regulate bear hunting. "I didn't like that at all," Dave Stratton said. Both also voted for Bill Clinton. "He's the working man's president," Dave Stratton said. Peg Stratton said of Dole, "I don't think he's very credible. Both said they voted straight Democratic.

will be completed over the winter, and construction bids will be taken towards the spring," Walters said.

While the project is being paid for in two 10-year bonding cycles, the work will happen in the first three years of each cycle.

Voters will first see the road millage billing on their July tax bills.

"The city had pledged to limit it to 2 mills, but it will be based on the interest rate we get," Walters said, adding a more favorable interest rate could drop the rate below 2 mills.

Among voters leaving Precinct 4 at the Plymouth Cultural Center on Tuesday, Dave Stratton said he voted in favor of the street bond issue. "I voted yes so I'm not going to be paying for it by myself," Dave Stratton said. His wife Peg agreed.

Barbara Burch of Plymouth said, "I read the material they sent to my house, I just didn't understand it," and added she didn't vote on the measure.

Louise Smith, who voted at Precinct 4 as did Burch and the Strattons, said she voted against it.

"I just didn't want the taxes," she said. "Our street isn't slated to be done in 15 years. Her husband Brian also voted no.

■ 'It showed me the community has a great deal of pride in their city.'

"I needed more screens for every precinct," she said. The township owns 64 screens and also used eight owned by the Plymouth-Canton schools. "I'd like to have approximately 16 more screens," she said.

Adding to delays were two equipment breakdowns that were repaired in minutes, Massengill said, adding volunteer election workers are still getting used to working with the new equipment.

Melton said she first waited an hour to vote at Allen School on Haggerty. Then, she learned from an elections worker that her two-sided voter registration card showed she had to go to Fiegel School to vote in a general election.

"It's an important day in this country, it shouldn't be this bad," Melton said. She said some people looking at long lines at Fiegel at around 6 p.m. were turning around and leaving.

While waiting at Fiegel, Melton said voters waiting in line were told by an elections worker that there was a glitch in the new touch-screen voting equipment, making the wait a little longer.

"I never knew it was going to be such a nightmare," Melton said.

Also dissatisfied with her voting experience was Barbara Burch of Plymouth, who voted at around the same time at city Precinct 4 at the Plymouth Cultural Center.

"It is insane to take two hours to vote," she said Tuesday. "I've got some friends that are still waiting in there."

"It seems to me with modern technology as it is, why can't we mail in our vote? Why do we have to have all this nonsense?" Burch said.

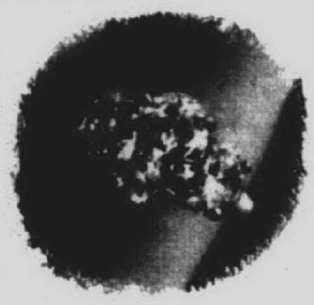
But several other voters in the city and township reported a half-hour to hour-long wait to vote.

Voting at noon was Al Trillich of Plymouth Township, at the Township Annex building on Ann Arbor Road. "It took almost an hour. Today was less than last time; I came in the evening," Trillich said.

Peg and Dave Stratton of Plymouth said they didn't mind their half-hour wait at the Plymouth Cultural Center at around 6:30 p.m. Brian and Louise Smith of Plymouth, who voted just after the Strattons at the cultural center, said they had a half-hour wait.

Melanie Blair, who finished voting at Central Middle School at about 8 p.m., said she was disappointed over her long wait to vote.

"I think in this day and age it should be a lot easier to vote. It's not acceptable that it should take two and a half hours," she said.



Big diamonds aren't everything.

Whyman retains Canton House seat

BY VALERIE OLANDER
STAFF WRITER

Canton Republicans pushed incumbent Deborah Whyman over the top to win her third and last term in the state House of Representatives.

Whyman has been called an extremist, but the 38-year-old lawmaker and former computer analyst amassed more votes than the Republican candidate for president and U.S. senator in the heavily conservative district. On a statewide basis, Republicans lost control of the House.

Whyman said her win says a lot about her Republican support-base in Canton.

She won 59 percent of the vote with 12,865 votes cast in her name. Democratic challenger Deborah Nesbit had 41 percent or 8,837 votes. The results were unofficial tallies released by the Canton Clerk's Office Wednesday morning.

Whyman didn't do as well in the outlying 21st District. Nesbit won the support of voters in Belleville, Van Buren and Sumpter townships with 55 percent of the vote. However, the votes weren't enough to change the overall winner of the heated race, which was ignited by a last minute campaign mailing from Whyman calling Nesbit a "homosexual extremist."

The total of all votes for Nesbit and Whyman in the three outlying communities didn't amount to the 12,865 votes Whyman alone received in Canton.

"It's a heavy Democratic area and there were a lot of mindless straight ticket votes," said Whyman of the Belleville, Van Buren and Sumpter defeat.

In Canton, 62 percent of the 40,303 registered voters came to the polls. Of those casting ballots, 22 percent voted straight Republican and 19 percent voted straight Democratic ticket.

In Observer exit polling, a select number of residents said they didn't vote in the state House race at all. Of the 25,188 voters who cast ballots Tuesday, 14 percent of them skipped over the Whyman-Nesbit race.

"I was more interested in the wildlife proposal and the presidential race so I didn't vote in that one," said Kim Barr, who was voting at township hall Tuesday afternoon.

Craig Closser said, "I don't even remember. I was more interested in the presidential and the proposals."

"I don't know. Probably for the Democrat. I know I should follow the grassroots campaigns, but I'm not familiar with those names. I'm sure it was for the Democrat, though. If I don't know, I vote Democrat," said Sharon Boyette.

Now that the election is over Whyman said she will return to Lansing to push for legislation that will give school officials more say in determining speed zones in areas where students walk to school. Residents living along Morton Taylor near Hulsing Elementary School have been watching in anticipation of the bill's approval for the past 18 months. The bill must be approved by the House before the end of the legislative session or the process will have to begin all over again.

Two other bills relating to tax policy for long distance and local phone carriers will also lose momentum if not passed this session, she said.

Nesbit, who was campaigning at St. John Neumann Catholic Church from 7 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, doesn't plan on going very far either.

City to close alley despite man's plea

Most of an alley running behind Arthur and Pacific streets will be closed, because that's what most neighbors want.

As city commissioners took up the issue on Monday, they noted that eight of 10 homeowners along the alley had signed petitions asking for the alley to be closed.

Jim Mattern of Arthur , who circulated petitions, said "The block has been ecstatic," about the alley being closed, after the commission first voted to take that action in August 1995.

"That petition definitely represents a lot of people that want it closed," he told commissioners.

Lyle Downing of Pacific Street said that since the commission first decided to close the alley, he built a new garage, extended his fence back, and his wife did a lot of landscaping work.

The commission in recent weeks decided to revisit the issue as Robert Smith Jr., a retiree who lives on Pacific, was against closing the alley. He also addressed commissioners Monday.

"I can understand that you don't have a clue as to what these problems are," he told commissioners. "I've been dealing with these problems for 46 years."

The commission proposed leaving one end of the alley open, off of Junction, so Smith could have access to his garage.

But he told commissioners both ends of the alley should remain open, as muddy conditions and an incline make it tough to get to and from his garage from the alley at Junction in winter and spring.

The commission voted 6-0 to close the alley, with Commissioner Doug Miller excused. But Commissioner Donald Dismuke proposed that the city spend $2,500 to remove topsoil in the alley and replace with gravel, in hopes of making it easier for Smith to drive to and from his garage.

Large Dem vote helps Rivers win

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Debbie Chamberlain sat at Lynn Rivers' election party Tuesday night and patiently waited along with 200 Westland supporters for the votes in the 13th Congressional District to be tallied.

For Chamberlain, the election wasn't just an opportunity for her to show support for a candidate, but a chance to show a support for ideas and a common bond she felt with Democrat incumbent Rivers.

"She's a working woman," Chamberlain said. "She's a mother. I heard her once say she knows what it's like to take pop bottles back to buy milk for her kids."

That working class message rang out loud and clear from the University of Michigan campus to the middle-class neighborhoods of Garden City and Westland as Rivers fought off a challenge from wealthy Republican Joe Fitzsimmons and won reelection to the U.S. House of Representatives.

Rivers received 119, 114 votes

Area agency needs foster families here

Open your heart and home and become a foster parent.

That's the message from Joyce Newsom, a licensing worker with Methodist Children's Home Society, Children's Village, 26645 Six Mile Road, in Detroit.

"Every day, many children are left without a place to go due to neglect, abandonment or abuse," Newsom said.

The Society is again campaigning to recruit foster families for children aged up to 14.

For more information, contact Newsom at (313) 531-4155.

Science study

Tonda students in Bob John's 5th grade class are participating in a month-long environmental science study with schools from around the world.

The students will collect rain samples and measure the pH as part of the Fifth Students Watching Over Our Planet Earth acid raid study. More than 280 schools from various countries are participating.

"We are pleased to have the students from Tonda Elementary participating with us," said Terry Kerns, director of the project. "having data from their area will add greatly to our study."

The project's goal is to involve students in long-term science activities that give them opportunities to share data with students in other areas of the world through the Internet.

Students submit their data at the end of each week by e-mail and then receive a report on data from all other schools participating in the project.

Spelling bee

Susan Nerenda placed first in a spelling bee on Saturday, Oct. 26, that was hosted by the Fr. Victor J. Renaud Council of the Knights of Columbus.

Nerenda is a 6th grade student at East Middle School. The second place finisher was Angela Olandese, also a 6th grade student at East Middle School.

The spelling bee was the first in a series being sponsored by the Michigan Knights of Columbus to find the tip spellers in the state.

At the recent bee, the 4th through 6th grades from the Plymouth-Canton schools were invited. The schools included Our Lady of Good Council, Our Lady of Victory in Northville, East Middle School, Isbister, Lowell, Allen and Hoben schools.

Other winners were: Christine Denstedt, a 5th grade student at Allen Elementary, placed third and Brian Smith, a 5th grade student at Allen Elementary, placed fourth.

The top students were presented trophies and dictionaries and will be able to represent Plymouth at the archdiocese level later this year. The state competition is Feb. 2, in Fenton.

Other students who participated were: Peter Lorelli, Nadirah Ross, Steve To, Kuma Ofori-Mensa, Kelly Wu, Mary Radcliffe, Emily Shmyr, Ashley Demsky, Stephanie Philips, Sheena Joychan, Matthew Timco, Deidre Difazio, Kenny Brunner and Robert Shrimpton.

The students are under the direction of Greg Rinehart and will be playing pieces ranging from rag time to contemporary. Invitations to perform were limited to one high school and one college ensemble, based upon a screening process of the hundreds of ensembles from throughout the country. The groups were required to apply and submit a tape of their performance.

The ensemble plans to hold a send-off concert at the Plymouth-Canton High School Little Theater on Sunday, Nov. 17, at 4 p.m. Tickets are $5 and can be obtained from the music department at 416-2909. Proceeds from the concert will help pay the cost of the trip.

Elizabeth Dole makes late campaign stop

As the election campaign wound down, Elizabeth Dole made a last-minute appearance in Livonia Saturday to boost the candidacy of husband Bob Dole for president.

Mrs. Dole appeared at a continental breakfast Saturday morning in the gymnasium of Schoolcraft College.

Among the Republicans present to boost the Dole campaign were Gov. John Engler and wife Michelle, U.S. Sen. Spence Abraham, U.S. Rep. Joe Knollenberg, congressional candidate Joe Fitzsimmons, and state Sen. Robert Geake among others.

Mrs. Dole, in speaking to those assembled, emphasized that the final moments of the race were the "defining moment" and that it was necessary for voters to stay focused on the choice of leadership character and quality her husband offered.

Make-A-Wish has alert

The Make-A-Wish Foundation is alerting the public that a recent request on behalf of a child using the foundation's name is unauthorized.

"In 1989, Craig Shergold, a 9-year-old English boy diagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor, wanted to be recorded in the Guinness Book of World Records for receiving the most greeting cards," said Nanette Trimpe, Make-A-Wish executive director.

"His wish was fulfilled after receiving 16 million greeting cards. Make-A-Wish, however, was not involved with this request," she said.

The boy's tumor was removed in 1991 and the family asked for an end to the mail.

compared to 88,009 for Fitzsimmons.

Results showed that Rivers won big in Ann Arbor - her hometown and a Democratic stronghold, in Westland, 13,368 votes to Fitzsimmons' 10,019; and in Garden City, 5,722-4,651.

Fitzsimmons won in Canton Township, 13,329-9,915; Plymouth Township, 6,996-4,381; and in the city of Plymouth, 2,216-1,878.

Rivers saw her work pay off, particularly in Garden City. "That was a much bigger margin," Rivers said. "We only won that by 17 votes two years ago."

Rivers attributed her win to the diverse support from unions, African-Americans, gays, the environmental community, and working class families. "That was a very humbling experience for me to get that kind of support," Rivers said.

Rivers, 39, first won election to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1994. Prior to that election she was a member of the state House, 1992-94; and on the Ann Arbor Board of Education, 1984-91, including three terms as president.

Rivers spent election night first in Westland at the Ford Civic League on Wayne Road at a 13th District Democratic Party gathering. At that time, she correctly predicted the numbers "looked good" in Westland, and believed she had doubled — or perhaps tripled — Fitzsimmons vote in Ann Arbor.

"That's the kind of numbers we need," Rivers told the crowd.

For both candidates, the campaign was characterized by negative ads and the collection of millions of dollars in campaign funds. For Fitzsimmons, he spent much of his own money.

That worried Rivers.

"As you know, this has been a very frightening campaign for me," Rivers said. "And as you know, he (Fitzsimmons) has spent $600,000 of his own money. He raised over $1 million.

"But my campaign raised $1.2 million. We made it clear that working people need a voice in this country to make sure your values and our values are heard. I am so proud to represent you."

Rivers then moved to Ann Arbor to the Arbor Brewing Company. She was greeted by a crowd that filled the street. Shortly after midnight, that crowd roared when the Ann Arbor figures were added to figures on a television screen and gave her an unofficial 2-to-1 margin.

It soon became apparent that Rivers would win. Fitzsimmons called Rivers to congratulate her at about 1:45 a.m. from his party at the Ypsilanti Marriott.

"Someone once told me, timing is everything, and I think we ran a terrific race," Fitzsimmons said. "But this year, apparently, was not to be our year. The coattails at the top of the ticket just ran deeper than expected.

"I offer my heartiest congratulations to Lynn Rivers and wish her much success in her next term."

Fitzsimmons, 61, of Ann Arbor, said he was "proud" of the race he ran. He thanked his supporters, family, campaign team and the new friends he made during the campaign.

"This has been a wonderful experience and look forward to continuing to contribute in many ways to my community."

Earlier, Fitzsimmons remained optimistic even though Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole had already conceded his race to President Clinton.

"My schedule has been pretty hectic," Fitzsimmons said. "We've done a lot of leg work, bowling alleys, drop-offs and phone calling. We're just trying to get out the vote."

Fitzsimmons, a retired president and CEO of University Microfilms, believed his campaign contributed much to the public debate on issues important to 13th District families.

Rivers doesn't look for gridlock in the next Congress, but realizes it will take work between the parties. Michigan Congressional Democrats picked up a House seat with Debbie Stabenow defeating Republican incumbent Dick Chrysler of Brighton. Republicans managed to retain control of the House for the first time since 1928.

"I think it will be a thinner majority, and we'll need more cooperation to get things passed," Rivers said. "I think the moderates will take control."

"We'll need to deal with Medicare and Medicaid issues." She also expects environmental issues to hit the next Congress.

Rivers believed the turning point in the campaign was the television ads, which soon turned negative. It forced her camp to react and work harder, she said.

Voters approve county charter changes, WCCC millage

In addition to Proposition "S," the stadium tax proposal which was approved by county voters, three other county proposals were reportedly approved Tuesday with some 80 percent of the ballots counted as of Wednesday afternoon.

Proposals included:

■ A measure labeled "Education First," which sought to renew a 1-mill tax levy for Wayne County Community College for five years for general operations appeared on several local ballots. Although it won in official balloting in otaher parts of the WCCC district, voters in parts of Westland and Canton Township and Redford Township turned thumbs down on the measure. Westland voted against the measure 7,097 to 8,021; Redford voted 8,360 to 10,972 against; and Canton voted 973 to 1,036 against.

■ On charter changes expanding the power of the county auditor general's office, the Observer-area vote was unanimous. The city of Plymouth voted 2,121 to 878 in favor; Plymouth Township voted 6,001 to 2,939 in favor; Westland voted 10,886 to 7,229 in favor; Redford voted 11,057 to 5,608 in favor; Garden City voted 5,278 to 3,221 in favor; Canton voted 11,817 to 5,798 in favor; and Livonia voted 25,275 to 11,706 in favor.

■ On a related amendment to permit county commissioners to appoint an independent attorney instead of relying on the county corporation counsel for legal services, western Wayne communities issued a resounding "no" with the exception of the city of Plymouth which voted 1,517 to 1,424 in favor. Plymouth Township voted 4,392 to 4,500 against; Westland voted 8,619 to 10,137 against; Redford voted 7,413 to 9,073 against; Garden City voted 3,760 to 4,462 against; Canton voted 8,355 to 9,013 against; and Livonia voted 16,639 to 19,397 against.

■ Wayne County Commission Vice Chair Kay Beard, D-Westland, said she was pleased the independent commission counsel proposal was approved by voters, saying that the situation presented an ethical problem for corporation counsel and interfered with a true separation of power.

Wayne County Commission Vice Chair Kay Beard, D-Westland, said she was pleased the independent commission counsel proposal was approved by voters, saying that the situation presented an ethical problem for corporation counsel and interfered with a true separation of power.

The Wayne County charter set it up so that the Corporation Counsel is the attorney for the county executive and the county commission, but the corporation counsel is appointed by the county executive, Beard said.

Most Observer towns back Levin

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

They partied in Michigan's poshest spot – a Westin Hotel ballroom in the Renaissance Center. They said nice things about General Motors and the suburbs. They talked about middle-class issues and never mentioned "diversity."

These were Michigan Democrats?

Yes, and their move to the middle of the political road paid off for U.S. Sen. Carl Levin, the congressional delegation, their political bingos and the twin sports stadiums for Detroit.

"We had a positive campaign on issues the middle-class families and the working families of Michigan genuinely cared about," said Levin, 62, the only state Democrat ever to win four terms in the upper chamber of the U.S. Congress.

"We'll fight for education – more of it and more people having access to it. We'll fight for health care – protecting the seniors and the 10 million children who do not have health insurance. We'll fight for the environment. . . We'll fight for campaign finance reform."

Observer area results

Levin defeated former Republican national committeewoman Ronna Romney of Bloomfield Hills handily statewide. Most Observer-area communities followed that trend. Levin beat Romney in Plymouth, Canton

■ 'We'll fight for education – more of it and more people having access to it. We'll fight for health care – protecting the seniors and the 10 million children who do not have health insurance. We'll fight for the environment. . . We'll fight for campaign finance reform.'

Sen. Carl Levin

Township, Redford Township, Livonia, Garden City and Westland. Romney, however, edged Levin in Plymouth Township with 49 percent of the vote compared to 46.76 percent.

Romney didn't hold a separate party in Southfield, as she had after her primary victory, but combined forces with the state GOP in the Lansing Center.

"I thank Ronna. She called me tonight," Levin said. "She's a very graceful lady – one great, tough competitor who will land on her feet, one who could debate issues clearly and say what she believed in."

Romney said she hoped Levin would "cling to the Republican policies he has currently espoused." Until the end, however, she stuck to her campaign theme that "I believe every day should be the Fourth of July (Independence Day). Carl Levin believes every day should be April 15 (federal income tax deadline)."

Later returns showed voters handed Democrats a 56-44 percent victory by rejecting a GOP-passed state law prohibiting political parties from running bingos. Something like 95 percent of party-run bingos aid local Democratic organizations.

Dems celebrate

Democrats also celebrated turnaround time for Detroit-suburban relations.

"Two hundred elected officials from outside Detroit helped us with Proposal S," said Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer, heaping profuse thanks on Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara and deputy Michael Duggan, both Livonia residents, for backing the twin taxes for the twin sports stadiums.

"We're working as partners. That's what S was all about," said McNamara. "We'll have two stadiums and the best airport in the world with 17 overseas flights daily bringing in economic development and jobs.

"This airport couldn't have happened without (President) Bill Clinton," McNamara said of the Detroit Metro Airport expansion. "The last time he came in, he said, 'Carl (Levin) has bent my ear all the way from Washington about your damn airport. Yes, you can have that $150 million'" in federal aid.

Campaign money

Despite GOP complaints about $35 million in union money helping Democrats, state chair Mark Brewer gave credit to a different twin-pronged strategy. "First, this fall we persuaded independents. Second, we worked the phones, mail, door-to-door canvassing with thousands of people volunteering.

"We helped the education candidates with party events and editorial board interviews – more than the typical party does for those candidates. I don't believe in coattails, but Levin and Clinton did bring the total up, " said Brewer, a Macomb County lawyer who has headed the party the last two years.

Voters, staffers speak up for candidates

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Mary Harden and Kate Raven share different political viewpoints and support different candidates in the race for the U.S. House.

But for several months during the 1996 election year, they had something in common: they worked on political campaigns.

Supporters for U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers, an Ann Arbor Democrat, and Republican challenger Joe Fitzsimmons were out in full force Tuesday, from the campaign leaders and advisers to the precinct's voters hitting the voting booths.

Harden worked as Fitzsimmons' finance director. Raven was a campaign volunteer for U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers.

Raven first came in contact with Rivers when Raven ran for Canton Township clerk in 1995.

"She helped me a lot and encouraged me," Raven said. "We have the same background and philosophies and share the same concern about social issues.

"She isn't afraid to take a stand and I respect that."

It wasn't just the politics, it was the person in the campaign for many supporters.

Harden looked at Fitzsimmons as a fatherly figure. "He's warm and caring, truthful and honest," she said.

Isaac Gesser of Ypsilanti backed Fitzsimmons because he supported Bob Dole's tax cut proposal and supports the Republican policies and philosophy.

"When you have a tax cut, three things happen: it increases the money available to citizens to buy more or invest, you increase the sales tax revenue, and investing that money increases the general growth with the economy," Gesser said.

Andy Karhu, of Canton Township, recently moved from Ohio. He worked with the Fitzsimmons campaign on "a limited basis."

"From my perspective as a young taxpayer, the Republican agenda brought me here," Karhu said. "I support less government, more state control and less taxes, which are things Joe is for."

Karhu worked at a precinct on Tuesday in Inkster. "A lot of people went for a straight ticket and that concerns me. How informed are the voters when they have to carry a slate into the voting booth?"

Fitzsimmons spent more than $600,000 of his own money on his campaign, which concerned the Rivers camp, including Raven.

"I sent her more money, and I know a lot more did the same," Raven said. She was "saddened" by the negative tone of the Fitzsimmons campaign, she said.

"He wanted to run a campaign like that and use the basic 'tax-and-spend liberal' label. (His campaign) was just making waves."

Rivers also returned $244,000 from her congressional budget, which Belleville resident Debbie Chamberlain liked about Rivers. "I like the fact that she spent just about the least amount of Congress from her budget," Chamberlain said.

Carl Jarman of Westland liked "everything" about Lynn Rivers. "The Democrats are working for the people and are doing what the people are asking them to do."

Westland proved to be a big winner for Rivers. Voters leaving polls at the clubhouse of the Holliday Park cooperative reflected much of that support for Rivers and President Bill Clinton.

Dean Ceifetz voted straight Democrat. He said his whole family is Democrat. He supported Rivers and Clinton.

"I think (Rivers) has better ideas than Fitzsimmons. President Clinton also needs another four years in office.

"I'm not any better than four years ago, but I'm not any worse. And Dole wasn't in tune with his ideas."

Hermann Hartmeyer also voted for the Democrats. He said Rivers was "doing a good job." He criticized the Republicans for last year's Congressional gridlock during budget hearings.

"I would like to bury the Republicans so deep so I won't see them for the next 20 years," Hartmeyer said. "I don't see her doing anything wrong. You don't see (the Democrats) doing any of that stuff.

"It's just unacceptable. If the Democrats had done the same, I'd have the same problem with them."

Jack and Linda Chenault supported Fitzsimmons because they did not like Lynn Rivers.

"She hasn't done anything," Jack Chenault said. "I refuse to vote for anyone once I look at her ads and most of her ads are blatant lies. Fitzsimmons' ads are more believable and accurate. I would take the lesser of the evils."

At Edison School, Heather Connor supported Rivers.

"I heard she's very good on the issue of student loans and cares about that, and I can relate to that, being a college student," Connor said.

Diane Smith split her ticket, voting for Dole and Rivers.

"I just read the stuff in the mail and then make a list (of who I will vote for)," Smith said.

But the political tables turned in Canton Township. The Republicans voted in big numbers throughout the township, including Field Elementary School on Haggerty Road.

Greg Remmy voted Republican and for Fitzsimmons.

"I feel confident with him in office," Remmy said. "He's pretty straight-laced. I supported him because he wants to cut waste in government and he basically agrees with Gov. John Engler."

Steven Seiler also voted for Fitzsimmons.

"Rivers is too loose with programs and spends too much money," Seiler said. "Fitzsimmons is conservative. He would hold the line on spending and that's what he promised to do."

Eric Bretz supported the Democrats, "mainly because of what Clinton's done," he said.

"I'm proud of what he's done in the Persian Gulf," Bretz said. Bretz said he had no opinion of Rivers, but called the campaign "a pretty heated thing."

"I don't think they should cut each other down," Bretz said.

Steven Seiler, voted for Fitzsimmons:

"Rivers is too loose with programs and spends too much money. Fitzsimmons is conservative. He would hold the line on spending and that's what he promised to do."

Commission incumbents re-elected

It was a winning day for local incumbent Wayne County Commissioners who were returned to their seats in Tuesday's election.

Republican Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, and Democrats Vice Chair Kay Beard and Commissioner Michelle A. Plawecki won re-election by a comfortable margin.

McCotter of Livonia with 39,200 votes defeated his Democratic challenger R. Karl Burnett of Livonia, who received 20,818 votes, in District 10. District 10 includes Livonia west of Middlebelt, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Northville and Northville Township.

Beard of Westland with 28,817 votes defeated Republican challenger Carol Juarez of Garden City, who received 12,435 votes, in District 12. District 12 includes Westland, Garden City and Inkster.

Plawecki of Dearborn Heights with 30,561 votes defeated Margaret Horvath of Dearborn Heights, who received 18,519 votes, and Kerry Smith, who received 1,977 votes, in District 9. District 9 includes Livonia east of Middlebelt, Redford Township and Dearborn Heights.

"You don't ever take any race for granted. You have to make a commitment and do the best job, which I did," Plawecki said after winning election to her third term.

She said she felt she was running for the right reasons. Her opponent was running, because she felt that no one should run unopposed, and she didn't put up much of a race or go door-to-door, she said.

"Still you should never take anything for granted," Plawecki said.

A tired Kay Beard, who serves as vice chair of the commission, said Tuesday night at the Wayne Ford Civic League in Westland that she had been working the polls all day in Inkster, Westland and Garden City.

"This was the biggest turnout in years," she said.

Beard waited for precinct results throughout the evening

Students debate the issues in mock vote

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

On the eve of the election, presidential candidates Bill Clinton, Bob Dole and Ross Perot and their running mates debated everything from affirmative action to welfare in the Canton Little Theater, festooned for the occasion with red, white, and blue banners; crepe paper; campaign signs; and balloons.

The candidates actually were portrayed by Close Up government students. Melissa McDonald and Kristina Bales played Dole and Jack Kemp.

Jason Zao was Perot for a day, and Chris Majer played the role of Pat Choate.

Erin Babich assumed the role of Clinton, while Paul Bersok impersonated Gore.

Afterwards, Canton High School students - 1,993 of them - cast ballots in a mock election, handing an overwhelming victory to President Clinton. The incumbent received 790 votes; Dole 506; and Perot 444.

Libertarian Harry Browne received 95 votes; Monica Gail Moorehead of the Workers World Party 51, Socialist Jerome White 48, and John Hagelin of the Natural Law Party 20. Ralph Nader received two votes.

Just about every student voted, said Close Up teacher Ben McMurray. "They liked doing it, and could see value in the process," he said. Early Tuesday, McMurray was confident students would once again foreshadow the election's actual outcome. "They've been pretty accurate the last two or three elections," he said.

"Candidates" were assisted by their "campaign staffs" who wrote position papers, vision statements, speeches, and even produced commercials and downloaded the candidates' positions from their web sites on the Internet, said teacher Steve Williams. "They got a chance to see how the democratic process really works."

To further reduce the deficit, we need to "make minor cuts in many areas instead of eliminating any one program," said Clinton/Babich. "I'm for lower taxes."

Dole/McDonald promised a 15 percent tax cut saying, "My parents were poor but they still managed to teach me hard work will pay off. Working families are tired of explaining to government they want to keep what they have earned."

Perot/Zao promised the packed, vocal auditorium a better life. "But only you can make a difference by voting. I plan to stop blaming and start reforming so that our problems won't ruin the future for our children and grandchildren." Perot/Zao lamented America's illiteracy rate, "highest in the industrial world."

The candidates fielded questions from moderator Irfan Raheem, a Canton sophomore, and fellow students. They queried presidential hopefuls on education, taxes, drugs, gun control, welfare and immigrants' rights.

Arlene Paquette was proud of her students. "The kids did a great job. They put a lot of hard work into this and worked as a team."

REAL ESTATE UPDATE

HANDLING THE SURPRISES!

Many real estate transactions result in some changes between the initial meeting of the minds and the final sale – and sometimes major changes. This is where having a professional to handle the sale of your home makes a big difference.

Real estate professionals don't view these as problems, but rather as challenges. Many of the potential problems are predictable, and we can minimize their consequences by anticipating them. We draw on our own experience and that of colleagues to ensure that the buyers and sellers wind up with a successful closing. When disputes arise, we use our expertise to create Win-Win situations. This approach to listing and selling real estate makes the difference for our buyers and sellers. We go the extra mile to handle the countless details and to keep our buyers and sellers informed at each step of the transaction.

with two of her sons, Don and Kevin. She won her ninth consecutive two-year term.

When Beard went to the stage to speak to the crowd, she took off her jacket to show her shirt proclaiming that bad politicians are sent to office by people who don't vote.

"It's wonderful to know that you've got people in your corner who want to see that you return to office," she said.

She praised the Democrats for pulling together. "Thank you, Newt Gingrich for pulling the Democrats together," she said.

"Gingrich is the best thing to happen to the Democratic Party," Beard said.

"It's nice that people decided they wanted me to serve another term," Beard said Wednesday morning, adding she would do the best of her ability to serve her district.

She expects her involvement in the School to Work program to be even more important in the coming term. She will be going to Washington next month to attend a meeting of the National School to Work Advisory Council.

■ Republican Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, and Democrats Vice Chair Kay Beard and Commissioner Michelle A. Plawecki won re-election by a comfortable margin.

"It's going to be more important to have a better trained work force," Beard said. "This is a time to be preparing," she said, as the expansion at the airport alone is expected to bring 20,000 construction jobs and many more new permanent jobs.

Five to 10 years after the airport is completed the number of jobs directly involved or at companies that locate near the airport are expected to number about 50,000, Beard said.

"Then of course there are the things that are going on in Detroit, that will make this area more of a destination again," she said.

McCotter, who was elected to a third term, said he knew Karl Burnett would run a clean campaign as opposed to Jeff Schroder's campaign in leading up to the Republican primary in August.

"I think it clearly gives me a mandate to continue the course I've been on for four years."

"The Democrats had a good year," McCotter said.

"All things considered, given the Democrats' trends and (Sen. Carl) Levin's coattails, I'm glad I was able to keep the seat in Republican hands," he said.

His opponent Burnett didn't seem surprised by the results. He was willing to concede even early on in the counting.

He paid McCotter a mild compliment.

"I think he's done a fine job in the election," he said. "I think he's a hard worker who really believes in what he can contribute."

Burnett said he sees voting Republican as a "balance of nature" or "gestalt" that occurs in Livonia because of Wayne County's strong Democratic ties.

"I've tried to impress on voters that it's more the candidate than the party."

Republican Bruce Patterson of Canton Township was unopposed in District 11.

County commissioners serve two-year terms and make a base salary of $47,012 a year.

REPORT CARD TIME: Struggling Students Find Success

Children who are failing third grade, boys who can't read, spell and have terrible handwriting, high schoolers with headaches when they study...

This is life with an undiagnosed visual deficiency. Many of these children are diagnosed with A.D.D.

Dr. John P. Jacobi is a specialist, working with children whose learning problems are due to visual deficiencies. Their success is remarkable.

"We are so excited for these kids who had no hope, only headaches or poor grades, and now get A's and are on the honor roll."

"When we started, Tommy was really struggling in school, having excessive homework and seemed frustrated most of the time. Tommy has really worked hard and the improvement is unbelievable," states S. Sporer. "Tommy's teacher has said she has never seen as big an improvement in a student in so short a time as she's seen in Tommy."

"Shesaid he seems happier and is able to work without squirming. I would recommend this to anyone having the problems Tommy was having. It really works!", she continues.

"Mark had a negative attitude toward learning because everything came so hard to hom. He also had a problem with self esteem," adds Deborah Pikulski. "I have seen great improvement in these areas. Comments from his teacher, tutor, and coaches have all been good and they can see a difference in him also. I am very pleased..."

"I am very concerned about those with A.D.D.," shares Dr. Jacobi. "Parents are often baffled that the school screening didn't pick up this problem--and a basic eye exam won't either. The school screenings are misleading, because parents believe vision problems have been ruled out. This isn't the case."

"Then, I constantly see cases where extensive testing is given, but not a single test is given for vision. Many, in fact most, of these children suffer from eye strain trying to focus, poor focus when their reading, and even double vision. No wonder they can't comprehend what they read and remember those spelling words!"

"Since starting, my child's self esteem is much higher than ever. When it's time to study for spelling words, he wants to do it and it is no longer a dreaded chore for him. He is excited and feels good about himself. He also seem to want to read more. I recommend this for anyone, to have a less frustrated child in school," says C. Neimi.

80% of learning is through the eyes, so vision has a great deal to do with the child's problem. Working with other specialists in the field of attention deficit, John Jacobi's, O.D.,F.C.O.V.D. is helping to spread the message to have school-aged children receive full vision and visual processing testing.

Free testing is offered in Dr. Jacobi's Livonia office at (313)525-8170.

The following is a list of symptoms to which parents should be alerted:

• headaches, tilting head to look at things.
• avoiding reading or any near work (e.g., computer work)
• easily distracted, can't sit still • reversing letters
• working slowly, bringing a lot of work home to finish
• poor handwriting (but may be a detailed artist) • poor memory, poor speller

Dr. Jacobi also speaks to schools and colleges so that parents and teachers know how critical a child's eye examination is, and know what symptoms to watch for.

For your child, a simple phone call to his office can bring you some answers.

Democrats roll up big numbers in sweep of county posts

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

It was a winning day for the Democratic incumbents for Wayne County offices.

Incumbent Democrat John D. O'Hair of Detroit, who received 507,325 votes, was re-elected to the office of prosecuting attorney over Republican Donald L. Knapp of Livonia, who received 162,930.

Sheriff Robert Ficano, a Democrat from Livonia, was re-elected with 521,850 votes over Republican challenger Timothy John Olszewski of Livonia with 157,349 votes.

County Clerk Teola P. Hunter, a Democrat from Detroit, was re-elected with 452,636 votes over Republican challenger Sandra K. Wallace with 201,599 votes.

County Treasurer Raymond J. Wojtowicz, a Democrat from Hamtramck, was re-elected with 496,379 votes over John Kelly Wazney, a Republican from Detroit, with 162,427 votes.

Longtime Register of Deeds Forest E. Youngblood, a Democrat from Dearborn Heights, was re-elected with 506,011 votes over Republican challenger Tony Spearman-Leach of Detroit with 147,826 votes.

"I think everybody's happy that the elections are over," O'Hair said. There was a lot of negativism and people were disappointed in that, O'Hair said.

Continuing programs aimed at curbing habitual criminals, domestic violence, child abuse, drug abuse and prostitution will be part the plan for the new term, O'Hair said.

With the plans for Detroit, it's an exciting time to be downtown, he said. "It's a very desirable time to be an officeholder in Wayne County," O'Hair said. The prosecuting attorney serves a four-year term and makes $105,777 a year.

"We feel very, very fortunate that the citizens have chosen to return us to office," Ficano said.

He said he looks forward to a number of programs to increase public safety in Wayne County.

"I think the overall Democratic victory sent a message," he said. The sheriff's post is a four-year term and pays $488,148 a year.

Youngblood was also happy to see that the Democratic Party did well. "It looks like we're winning very big. It's very gratifying," Youngblood said.

As for the next four years in the register of deeds office, "We're tearing our whole office apart," Youngblood said.

A new computer system is being installed and the staff is "putting all the old stuff on the computer," he said.

The register of deeds serves a four-year term and makes $82,271 a year.

Wojtowicz is also making plans for a new computerized system for the tax data base in the county treasurer's office. He expects it to take a couple years.

"We will continue keeping our sleeves rolled up and continue doing the quality work that our citizens expect," he said.

The treasurer serves a four-year term and is paid $88,148 a year.

Hunter was unavailable for comment. The county clerk serves a four-year term and makes $88,148 a year.

Brickley, Kelly win court seats, county voters say yes to casinos

Michigan's Supreme Court will have a 4-3 Democratic majority and 4-3 female majority as Wayne County's late vote tipped the scales Tuesday.

Wayne voters also saved state Proposal E, which would allow three gambling casinos in Detroit, from defeat. (All numbers are unofficial; Wayne's results were 94 percent complete; Macomb and Ingham were among the counties yet to report by press time.)

Otherwise, Wayne County voters fell in line with the rest of the state in permitting political bingo, giving the Natural Resources Commission control over bear hunting, raising the qualifications for judges, and locking up the Veterans' Trust Fund.

Chief Justice James Brickley, 67, nominated by Republicans for a non-partisan ballot position, topped the field of Supreme Court candidates with 1,131,582 with only a handful of counties yet to be counted.

The second slot went to Court of Appeals Judge Marilyn J. Kelly of Bloomfield Hills. A Democratic Party nominee, Kelly leaped into second place on the basis of a strong showing in Wayne County, collecting 934,476 statewide.

Kelly trailed Oakland Circuit Judge Hilda Gage, the second GOP nominee, by just 7,000 votes until Wayne gave Kelly a 110,000-vote boost.

Gage was third with 832,957, followed by Court of Appeals Judge William Murphy, a Democratic nominee from Grand Rapids, with 763,098.

Kelly, 52, succeeds independent liberal Justice Charles Levin, forced to retire at age 70. Under Michigan's system of nonpartisan elections based on party nominations, Democrats have four seats and Republicans three on the state's highest court.

Kelly will join Justices Patricia Boyle, Dorothy Comstock Riley and Eliabeth Weaver on the bench. The female factor is bad news for criminal defendants appealing their convictions and sentences because the women jurists tend to be tougher, regardless of party.

Proposal E, a state law to permit three casinos in Detroit, was trailing until Wayne County reported 405,000 in favor and 225,000 against. That gave E a victory of 1,585,659 yes to 1,522,258 no. Late outstate results still could sink E.

Other state ballot results:

■ Proposal A, to prohibit political parties from running bingo games: defeated 1 million to 1.3 million.

■ Proposal B, a constitutional amendment to require judges to be licensed at least five years: approved 1.9 million yes, 450,000 no.

■ Proposal C, an amendment to give constitutional status to the Veterans Trust Fund: approved 1.7 million yes, 573,000 no.

■ Proposal D, the "CUB" initiative to ban bear hunting with bait and hounds: defeated 877,000 yes to 1.6 million no.

■ Proposal G, a rival to D endorsing "professional wildlife mangement": passed 1.7 million to 748,000.

Lucas, Callahan win; voters return 10 others to circuit court

Former Wayne County Executive Bill Lucas and Bill Callahan, an attorney who grew up in Livonia, won seats on the Wayne County Circuit Court defeating incumbents J. Phillip Jourdan of Plymouth and Roland L. Olzark of Grosse Pointe.

■ Voters returned incumbents to probate court and Canton's Sean Cox was elected to serve the remainder of a partial term on the circuit bench.

Ten other incumbents retained seats on the bench.

All three incumbents in the probate court race won re-election Tuesday.

In the race for 12 full terms on the 3rd Circuit Court bench, incumbents were defeated as challengers Lucas of Detroit and Callahan of Detroit gained seats on the bench.

The first 12 finishers are: incumbent Richard P. Hathaway of Grosse Pointe Park, 264,958; Susan D. Borman of Detroit, 260,532; incumbent John H. Gillis Jr. of Grosse Pointe, 245,096; Lucas, 239,509; incumbent Pamela Rae Harwood of Detroit, 235,461; incumbent Edward M. Thomas of Detroit, 232,063; incumbent Michael James Callahan of Belleville, 225,396; incumbent Susan Bieke Neilson of Grosse Pointe, 224,999; incumbent William J. Giovan of Grosse Pointe Park, 203,093; incumbent Brian Zahra of Grosse Pointe Farms, 198,460; Bill Callahan of Detroit, 192,249; and incumbent Arthur J. Lombard of Grosse Pointe Farms, 181,103.

Others on the ballot were: Sheila Gibson Manning of Romulus, 174,000; Jourdan, 172,249; Olzark, 160,554; Isidore Torres of Detroit, 160,169; Laura McMahon Lynch of Grosse Pointe Farms, 149,552; Donald Coleman of Detroit, 147,119; and Paula Georgette Humphries, 124,399.

For two partial terms in the 3rd Circuit Court appointed judges Sean F. Cox of Canton Township and Kirsten Frank Kelly of Grosse Pointe Park were returned to the bench. Cox received 200,511 votes and Kelly received 298,666 votes. Challengers Jane Gillis and Kenneth Hylton Jr. received 169,932 and 142,750 votes, respectively.

In the race for three probate court judgeships, David J. Szymanski of Grosse Pointe Park finished first with 316,402 votes, Martin T. Maher of Canton Township finished with 306,745 votes and Frances Pitts of Detroit finished third with 293,222 votes. Challenger Robert L. McClinton of Detroit was fourth with 192,841 votes.

Old Village needs

Restaurant draws attention

The opening of the Lower Town Grill in Plymouth's Old Village should put the city of Plymouth on notice that it needs to become more involved with the redevelopment of the city's other downtown.

Since the opening of the new bar/restaurant at Liberty and Starkweather in late October, crowds have been attracted to the area, sometimes creating parking problems.

The city should move quickly to address those problems. The downtown area around Kellogg Park has long received the lion's share of attention from the city.

And now that the streetscape is nearly complete, the attention should be shifted to Old Village. Revitalization of that area is an opportunity for the city to increase its tax base.

Improved properties in Old Village that house thriving businesses like the Lower Town Grill would produce more tax revenue for the city.

For years, Old Village has lagged behind the central business area in development. However, thanks to the owners of Station 885, the new owners of the Lower Town Grill, and other determined merchants in Old Village, the area has maintained a business district.

Kim Guenther, a partner in the Lower Town Grill, should be recognized for his commitment to the area.

He grew up in the area, a former center of commercial activity that in recent years has become the home to mostly antique stores.

What the area needed was a Lower Town Grill type project to get people walking the streets. That way both the antique stores and restaurants could thrive.

With more people using the area, the city should look to help provide more parking. Also, street and sidewalk improvements are needed.

The Old Village Development Authority should play a role in such improvements. It's now headed by Steve Guile, who also heads the Downtown Development Authority.

One problem that stands in the way of any sort of streetscape project for Old Village is that a city can only have one such taxing unit to do that work under state law. That has been done in the downtown area.

Old Village deserves its due from the city. The success of the Lower Town Grill, coupled with the commitment of other businesses in the area, should show city officials that there is a good potential for revitalization of the area.

Let's get on with the work.

Changing face: The opening of the Lower Town Grill in Old Village has helped revitalize the area. The city of Plymouth must now pay more attention to the city's other downtown.

Lower Town or Old Village?

The opening of the Lower Town Grill revives an old debate in Plymouth: Old Village versus Lower Town.

For years, Plymouth-area residents have gone back and forth on what to call the area which has uncertain boundaries. It's located north of Main Street, between Starkweather and Holbrook.

Earlier in this century, the business district was called Lower Town. However, that fell out of favor. Some speculate that it made the area sound less appealing. Lower Town denoted down and out.

Thus, the name Old Village came into being. It has a more upscale sound to it. But it has a certain cuteness to it that doesn't really apply to the mixture of housing, businesses and now upscale restaurants that are in the area.

Chances are the debate will continue between the devotees of each name. In a recent Plymouth Observer story, we asked Old Village residents and business people what the area should be called. Most liked Old Village, but others really didn't care.

Whatever the eventual resolution is to the not-so-serious controversy, we should all be thankful that the owners of the Lower Town Grill revived the name and put it on their building.

It's a name that although not generally used should at least be preserved.

Army serves

The familiar ring of the bell from the red round kettle heralds in the holiday season as the Salvation Army serves to help people move from the "red" to the "black" in their lives.

Serving the Plymouth-Canton-Northville communities for many years, the Salvation Army is a stable and predictable force in combating poverty, homelessness, hunger and disaster.

Throughout the year, families and individuals are helped when disaster befalls them. The extensive food pantry is administered by the Corps social worker dispersing food to local people facing hunger. Temporary shelter in available to provide a warm clean place for people who need to sleep. Should a disaster befall our communities, such as a tornado or fire, the Corps is ready on a minutes' notice to respond with aid, help, food and support.

Outreach programs, including day care and summer camp, are administered by Martha Schultz, serving the needs of a variety of families while providing a safe and educational environment for our young people. The fees are minimal for these programs with scholarships available.

The Corps building provides a gymnasium and meeting rooms that sports and support groups may rent for a nominal fee.

Administrative costs of the Army are among the lowest of all charitable organizations. Funds are raised through mail contributions, kettle campaigns, endowments and United Way gifts.

As families and individuals experience misfortune or a temporary downturn in their lives, the Salvation Army is there to help people operate in the "black" instead of the "red."

Anniversary help

We appreciate the help the Observer provides by printing stories on WSDP. As an educational station, our budget is limited and the publicity you provide goes a long way.

We are currently working on our 25th anniversary reunion. It's hard to believe that 1997 will mark 25 years of serving the community through broadcasting and training students. We have heard from many of our former students but others have not been contacted because our mailing lists are outdated and incomplete.

We are asking your readers to use their contacts to help us update the lists. If you know of any current addresses of former WSDP staff members please contact me at (313) 416-7732. Your help is invaluable.

We are tentatively planning for a reunion in the fall of 1997. An organizing committee will begin working in the next few months. As a graduate of WSDP, I'm eagerly anticipating the chance to catch up with old friends. It has been great hearing from former staff members, especially as they share the important role WSDP played in their lives. Thank you for helping.

Stores refuse ringers

I have recently learned that Arbor Drugs and Meijer stores have refused to let the Salvation Army Red Kettle bell ringers stand outside their stores in the Canton-Plymouth area (as well as other areas) again this holiday season.

I want people in this community, especially those who shop at these stores, to be aware that the bell ringers have been turned away for the third straight year. Based on the last year in which the bell ringers were were allowed to ring at these area stores, this represents a loss of at least $40,000 in contributions toward helping people in need in this community through the services of Salvation Army.

I believe that people of this community care about those who are poor and who are in temporarily difficult straits. Christmas is a season in which we remember that God appears to us especially in places of human vulnerability and need. Salvation Army, through its Red Kettle Drive, responds to many food and emergency assistance requests in the Canton-Plymouth area throughout the year. Red Kettle bell ringers are a trusted tradition of compassion that is easily recognizable across the community. Their presence gives people a chance to help. It cheers the giver, the bell ringer, and eventually the person in need.

My hope is that area customers of Meijer and Arbor Drug, as well as compassionate people throughout the area, would ask the local store managers why they are refusing to allow the bell ringers to stand outside their stores. I also hope that when area shoppers do see a Salvation Army Red Kettle outside a store they patronize, that they will give generously and will thank the store manager for providing a place for the bell ringers.

Persons wishing to be a bell ringer or who want to write the policy making office of Arbor Drugs and Meijer stores can contact Martha Schultz at the Salvation Army.

POINTS OF VIEW

Ghost story scares up mystery, love

DOROTHY MATSU

In the season of the spirit I offer the most uncanny ghost story – my father. Having passed on some time ago, he seemed a ghost even in life. I feel strangely foolish of how little I know of him, not even his birthday but that it once fell on Thanksgiving.

I was the fourth of five daughters and by that point he appeared way too late on spur of the Saturday nights to wake us all up either dragging us down to the beach to see killer waves at high tide, or to watch horror movies on "Fantasmic Features" with him.

Sometimes delighted, but always disoriented, we would be tucked in with a recitation of his favorite Poe tale "The Raven" which, when he forgot the words, would smoothly turn into the tune "Up a Lazy River by the Old Mill Stream..." The bed with slats inevitably crashed down, stuffed to capacity, and after laughing ourselves sick, we would listen for the shuffling of purple corduroy slippers to the icebox and the chug-a-lugging of milk from the great glass gallon.

Sunday morning we all stood on our heads up against the wall in bed and had our feet tickled. Then we sat baffled by one enormous blueberry pancake that he'd make in an iron skillet to divide among us. My mother herded us off to church while dad stayed home to "cook" Sunday dinner.

At times, from our places in the choir, I saw him at the back of the church positively beaming. After Mass he often gave spontaneous ragtime performances on the ancient pianos sprinkled about our sanctuary. How kind most people were to us! Perhaps we had chicken for dinner with the rare treat of orange soda, and were not surprised when he put food coloring in the mashed potatoes.

I did not as yet understand that my father, although a sweet fellow, was a gambler and a drinker. The Blue Laws of Massachusetts made it a challenge to find a drink on a Sunday, but I have dreams even now of riding in one of those huge bulgemobiles of the day – that he won the night before – with no seat belts, watching the road flying beneath my feet where the floor boards had disappeared!

I do not recall my father ever speaking directly to me, except perhaps "Get me a pack of Chesterfields and a Record American." He was always clowning, teasing, singing and flinging me about like a rag doll.

By Sunday night he was usually gone again, and very soon for good. My sisters and I are incredibly close, and each has her own memories that I wonder about. Perhaps my elder sisters suffer from knowing too much, and surely my younger sister suffers from knowing too little of him, yet they all thrive in the present making use of our peculiar adversities to better their own families.

I stand in awe, marveling every day at my mother who was too wise and weary working for her daughters to ever say an unkind or bitter word against our father, no matter how shattered she must have felt.

I have a couple of fuzzy photos, one where he is only the shadow shooting me, a smirking toddler smothered in a snowsuit at Fisherman's Beach with hundreds of screaming seagulls soaring into the sky. So goes my ghostly tale of mystery, inexpressible sadness and inexplicable love.

Report shows Great Lakes improvements

TIM RICHARD

On balance, things are improving for our Great Lakes, the 95,000 square miles of water that are North America's most noticeable feature from outer space.

That's the conclusion one reaches after plowing through "State of the Great Lakes," a 67-page report from Michigan's Department of Environmental Quality.

I must warn you the writing is dreadful: flaccid abstractions, listless verbs, airy adjectives. Just 7,500 copies are in print, so I'll save you the bother of tracking one down and the eye-glazing labor of reading it.

In sum, we're getting a handle on chemical problems, but the habitat and "exotic" fish problems will be tougher to solve. We need those lakes for our drinking water, shipping, manufacturing, recreation and the health of our ecosystem. Key items:

■ Eagles: excellent. The bald eagle, our national symbol, no longer is "endangered," just "threatened." A record 268 pairs nested in 1995, a steady increase from 83 in 1973. Eagles eat fish. Chemical pollutants in the food chain caused eagles' eggs to have thin shells that broke before hatching. Eagles nesting within five miles of the Great Lakes shoreline are less successful than those nesting inland.

■ "Exotics": spreading. These are mid-European creatures like the ruffe, roundnose goby and zebra mussel. They stowed away in the ballast tanks of ships and entered the Great Lakes when the tanks were drained. A new law called the Nonindigenous Aquatic Nuisance Prevention and Control Act requires ships to exchange their ballast water at sea. (Hooray for government regulations!) This cuts imports, but we still face threats from the species already here.

■ Perch: uh-oh. Once Lake Michigan's most abundant, easily caught panfish, the tasty yellow perch is in big trouble. No one is sure why. There still are jumbos from the class of 1988, but younger fish are missing. Although creel limits have cut the catch by half, DEQ is "not optimistic."

■ Lake trout: trouble. We got municipal and industrial wastes out of the St. Marys River and brought back Lake Huron's lake trout. But the situation north of Alpena has worsened recently as the lamprey, the vampire of the waters, makes a comeback. Probable solution: treating the river in 1997 to sterilize male lampreys.

■ Urban sprawl: killer. Builders and their unthinking customers are eating up land far faster than population growth warrants: From 1990-2020, population will rise less than 12 percent while urbanized land will increase 63-87 percent. Results: erosion, sedimentation, loss of wildlife habitat, air and water degradation, closed beaches.

In one of the book's few concise statements, Carol Misseldine of the Michigan Environmental Council says, "There's no diplomatic way to say it: human beings, and particularly our manufacturing systems, are destroying the habitat on which we and all other species rely." We've lost 60 percent of our coastal wetlands, so necessary for spawning and the food chain.

The authors point out that more than 50 bills in the Legislature would affect land use. They fail to point out that most are in political trouble.

■ Pollution: down and up. Point pollution from factories and sewers has been reduced. But non-point pollution – from parking lots, fertilized fields, treated lawns, salted roads – is increasing and is tougher to stop. Generally, water quality is improving. PCB levels in gulls and salmon have "declined significantly."

■ Water levels: fine. On the four Great Lakes surrounding Michigan, water levels are close to their historic averages – "less flooding and shore erosion" and wider beaches.

■ Public lands: good. The state is using Natural Resources Trust Fund money to help communities buy critical shoreline parcels. Organizations such as The Nature Conservancy, the Rails-to-Trails Conservancy and other private conservation groups are helping to save natural lands.

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and regional events.

Historic debate behind new policy on character

PHILIP POWER

So the State Board of Education says it's OK to teach character in the public schools.

I suppose I should be relieved, but a quick glance at the four-page policy adopted last month makes me more than a little bit wistful.

The document starts with a lengthy and remarkably pompous preamble quoting, in order, the 1995 Michigan Youth Risk Survey, the 1994 National Assessment of Educational Progress, George Washington, the Constitution, Abraham Lincoln, Susan B. Anthony, Martin Luther King and Thomas Jefferson.

The board adopted the policy by a 6-1 vote, with Democrat Kathleen Straus, who voted no, explaining that she might have voted for the measure if the preamble had been deleted.

The policy statement holds, "Principles such as respect, responsibility, caring, trustworthiness, justice, civic virtue and citizenship determine the character of our people and the tenor of the society in which we live. The formation of character, both individual and social, is the responsibility of all of us. Education has a direct impact on the development of character in our citizens."

The board resolution then "empowers and encourages public schools to provide character education ... based on the principles of our governing documents, including the principles of the First Amendment and maintaining the separation of church and state."

So what are we to make of all of this?

At first blush, it looks like the pretentious in search of the obvious. Of course, character is important. And certainly it does little harm to encourage schools to address matters of character in educating students.

Personally, I've always felt that parents are best equipped to provide their children with insights into the importance of character through the daily hurly-burly of family life.

Character comes about through engagement with complicated situations in real life, not through listening to a lecture in a classroom and taking a multiple-choice exam.

But behind the somewhat obvious nature of the board's resolution lies a significant and historic debate.

It seems clear that the unfortunate tendency of the last 40 years or so has been to decouple matters of value – character, ethics, citizenship, religion – from our public schools.

In part, this trend has been based on aggressive interpretation of the First Amendment, which prohibits government from establishing a religion.

Certainly, this doctrine is fundamental to our secular society because it prevents government from imposing any certain religious doctrine on a people that are growing increasingly heterogeneous in race and religious doctrine.

But despite the enormous number of lawsuits brought against the schools in recent years, there is precious little evidence that the authors of the First Amendment intended it to be used as justification for purging all matters of value from the curriculum.

To the extent that the new policy helps rectify this situation, it's a helpful advance.

However, the issue here is that all too often the extreme becomes the enemy of the good.

State Board president Clark Durant set off this particular debate in July by arguing that schools ought to teach character by using the life of Moses as a role model. Members of the religious right then weighed in by arguing, simultaneously, that parents were best equipped to teach character, and if character were to be taught in the schools, it should be based on the Bible.

Others demurred. And it was not until board member Dorothy Beardmore of Rochester Hills added language referencing the First Amendment and maintaining the separation of church and state that the policy was passed.

Somehow, I would have wished that this sensible resolution could have been achieved without all the sound and fury.

FAMILY ROOM

KAREN MEIER

From the ashes comes 'Phoenix'

There's a chorus of voices singing out there. Gently. Quietly. And the antithesis of it is out there too, shrill and discordant. The chorus is huge. The antithesis? Barely there.

Last week, I promised I'd share the responses to the Letter. But last week, I'd no idea how big this was. There've been scores upon scores of messages.

And what you've said, how you've said it, is inspiring and healing. And I can't chop these responses up and boil them down for quotes, that'd be no good. Too much grace and goodness would be lost that way.

My family, prompted only by the Letter, before even the first response came in, began talking about forgotten things, taken-for-granted things. And we, as a family, rediscovered our reasons for doing the things we were doing, and why we were living the way we were living.

We talked about it around the dinner table, in the van on the way to school, on the way to Scouts, to gymnastics, to church, to Grandma's. We talked in the laundry room as I put the wet things in the dryer. We talked at the grocery store in the cheese aisle. We talked in the middle of the night.

I could almost hear the rush of wind under the phoenix bird's wings. I heard love unabashedly given to one another even as the peas were passed. Sanctity of family, safety of family, marriage vows, all of that's been the stuff of family chatter here. In response to the Letter.

Re-examining life

And you responded to the Letter. In your homes, around your tables, in your lives. You told me so yourself. You re-examined life and family and discovered that no matter what harsh criticisms were hurled regarding such things, you stood tall. You stood firm in your beliefs and you encouraged me to do the same.

And who, exactly, are you? Who has it been this past week or so who has encouraged and been encouraged? Who has it been who has felt "outrage," "fury," "sadness," and even "fright" after reading the Letter?

It's been men, women, young, old, current "professionals," put-on-hold professionals, never professionals, quite wealthy, wealthy only in the ways of the heart, religious, not so religious, frazzled, buoyant, inundated, coiffed and perfumed, glopped and fixing the vacuum, degreed, and not, divorced, single, married, parents, grandparents, hoping to be parents – marvelous spectrum.

Now, to be fair, there were two who felt the need to slash and burn. One was the Letter writer herself (again) and the other, I surmise by the self-description of career and philosophy, the Letter writer's friend found quoted in the Letter.

The sheer volume of response is unprecedented for the "Family Room." The "Family Room" purposely steers itself away from the controversial, and from the terribly important. But the Letter brought controversy, importance, and a chorus.

And as you know, what I write here is not terribly important or powerful, it's more towards the "mundane," ordinary, because I am ordinary. And these are only my experiences, they are not edicts. I offer up my experiences because that's all I can do, if I am to be an honest writer. Honesty is important.

Ordinariness of it all

And to me ordinariness is too. I'm a regular person who has fears, history, a slew of mistakes, a nice triumph now and again (not over anybody, over something), and a family I would literally lay my life down for.

Anyway, I wish I could personally write a thank you note to each of you who spoke, and gathered, around your tables, around the water coolers. But my family wouldn't have clean laundry for weeks if I did that. I wish I could let each of you be heard right here, but space and editorial considerations constrain me.

But I'm compelled to give back, somehow, what you've given to me. You've been raising your voices, in song, and the song has got to be heard. You've got to hear how spirit is still alive, and family too, and tolerance, and unity, and abiding respect for one another, that's the song quietly and gently performed by the chorus out there.

I'm going to share this song, this gift of hope and affirmation. I'll let you see this pile of paper next to me on this desk. I'm publishing it. In a book. I'm calling it, "The Phoenix." Your words will be in it, gleaned from the cards, letters, and phone calls (I'll transcribe them) and I'll make it available to you, the "Family Room" readers. I won't include names, addresses, or phone numbers; you sent these messages in good faith and I'll protect you from that harm that sometimes comes from being in the public eye.

'Tis time to spread cheer

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Every holiday season, people spend billions of dollars on Christmas cards, and area organizations are hoping to cash in on the trend while raising money for themselves.

"It's a nice service," explained Joan O'Halloran, who is coordinating the Christmas card sale for the American Cancer Society. "Instead of buying a real expensive card from Hallmark and that money going to Hallmark or any other greeting organization, I think they (consumers) want their money to be working for them.

"It's like memorials, more people want to do a memorial to somebody to have that money fighting cancer instead of flowers that are going to die anyway."

The American Cancer Society has sold cards for more than 20 years, earning $130,000 last year. O'Halloran said she has seen the market grow for cards.

"When we started we were probably the only person in town that was doing it," she said. "Now with other organizations selling them, the dollar is stretched more."

A direct benefit

Proceeds from the cards sold by organizations like the American Cancer Society, St. Vincent and Sarah Fisher Center in Farmington Hills, Michigan Humane Society, Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International in Southfield, and Angela Hospice in Livonia go directly to the non-profit groups.

For the American Cancer Society, the proceeds will help the organization in its mission to eliminate cancer as a major health problem through research, education and service to cancer patients and their families.

Locally, the cards are available at 29350 Southfield Road (just north of 12 Mile Road), Suite 110, (810) 557-5353; 6071 Harrison (off Ford Road, between Inkster and Middlebelt roads), No. 6, Garden City, (313) 425-6845; or at the Farmington Hills Discovery Shop, 23330 Farmington Road, (810) 477-1081.

Angela Hospice in Livonia jumped on the Christmas card bandwagon last year because it recognized the demand that O'Halloran spoke of, said David W. Ripple, director of public relations.

"The number of patients and families that we care for each year is getting larger and the response from those patients and families and friends in the Livonia area and in the local community has been great to have cards. The response last year was very good," Ripple said.

This year, however, the hospice is selling the cards at a reduced rate of $8 a dozen or $20 for three dozen. For more information, call (313) 464-7810.

"We have four different designs. One was designed by a former hospice patient, one is by a sibling of a pediatric patient, and the other two are designed by children of hospice employees," Ripple said.

The holiday card sales represent a small portion of the budget, but it provides for a good community outreach program.

"For the families, it's a good way to give back to Angela Hospice; it's also our way to give to the community by having holiday cards available," Ripple added.

The sales are also a good way to get the name out in the community, Betty M. Jones of the Sarah Fisher Auxiliary said.

"The Sarah Fisher Auxiliary is a group of women that does different activities in order to raise money for the children here," she said. "All the profits are used for things like buying campership for the kids. We do hope to get a considerable amount of money, but it's also a matter of getting the name out there."

Unlike other organizations, the Sarah Fisher Auxiliary doesn't have the resources to ship out boxes of cards. They can be purchased at the center, 27400 W. 12 Mile Road in Farmington Hills. The center can be reached at (810) 626-7527.

The Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International, which has an office at 29350 Southfield Road, Suite 42, in Southfield, has "done real well" with holiday card sales for the last 16 years, raising between $20,000-$25,000 a year.

Besides using the sales as a fund-raising activity, the sale allows outstate members to give to the foundation.

"I think it (the reason to sell cards) was basically a fund-raising opportunity and I think another part of it was to reach chapter members that may not otherwise be able to participate in some of the fund-raising that we do. We have members throughout the state," said Marcia Moglia, holiday card sales co-chairwoman.

The organization offers nine different styles that vary in price from $18.50 to $27.50. For more information, call the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation International at (810) 569-6171.

A special event

Money aside, the holiday card sale is a special event for the Michigan Humane Society. The cards, offered in six different styles, cost $10 for 20 cards and envelopes at the Detroit, Rochester Hills and Westland Michigan Humane Society locations, or they can be ordered by phone at (810) 650-1179. The society also sells pet stockings ($7.50), snow/mow cat sticks that measure snowfall and grass ($18), and stocking stuffer ornaments ($5).

"It's always been one of our very special fund-raising program, not just in terms of dollars raised," said Michele Mitchell, community relations director of the Michigan Humane Society. "It's one that's close to our hearts because it's an effort that's accomplished by getting entries by local artists in the community who design them exclusively for us.

"It's a very important fund-raiser for us this year."

People interested in the charities' holiday cards can visit the Observer offices at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, and 794 S. Main St., Plymouth, where books, containing samples of the cards and ordering information, are available for perusal during business hours.

Kids take to the air on Radio AAHS

STAFF WRITER

The new children's radio station Radio AAHS is not only for kids but it's by kids.

The network, the new format on WCAR 1090 AM, will feature more than 20 on-air kids, known as "The Radio AAHS AirForce," who will present music, stories and brain games, but will also bring the news home to kids.

The Garden City-based station will audition children ages 9-17 from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 9, in the east court at Westland Center. Applications can be picked up at any metro-area Co-Op Optical or Fantastic Sams locations. For more information, call (313) 525-1111.

All entrants will receive a complimentary "goodie bag" of special items from Radio AAHS.

During the audition, children will read fashion, sports, news, computer or other reports that they wrote in advance to an audience at the mall at Wayne and Warren roads. They also must write a paragraph about themselves to read and go through a question-and-answer period.

Kids chosen to work for the station will make guest appearances with the Radio AAHS mascot, a tiger named AAHSIE.

"They'll act as his little associates ... and learn what radio is all about," said Susan Pepera, operations manager for the station.

Brian Carroll of Garden City is one of the first kids to jump on the Radio AAHS bandwagon. The 11-year-old student at St. Michael's School in Livonia will be reading health tips, sponsored by Garden City Hospital.

"It's a great station to be with," Brian said. "It's also pretty educational for the kids, too. In the health segment, we talk about child deaths in the home and accidents around the home, and everything from Halloween candy to airway obstruction."

The former talk/ethnic station was purchased earlier this year by the Minneapolis-based Children's Broadcasting Corporation, which had previously rented time at 1310 on the AM dial. Children's Broad-

Celebration

Directory for Visually Impaired debuts

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Gary Gaynor and Kathleen Fleissner gathered with their families and supporters last week to celebrate ... a small, intimate gathering, with food and champagne.

They greeted their guests personally. Handshakes and hugs were plentiful. But the most plentiful were the thank yous they shared with each and every one there.

The celebration was about reaching "the first part" of a goal ... publication of the first-ever "Directory of Visually Impaired Services – Michigan Version."

"You are all a part of a miracle," Gaynor said. "We believe God has had a hand on this project all along. Things have happened that have led us to know this was meant to be."

"Gary and I shake our head over the past year; it's been incredible," added Fleissner. "With the help of God, we were led in the right direction."

Gaynor and Fleissner spent some 13 months talking to people across the country and throughout the state and checking and rechecking the information for the almost 700 agencies, organizations, businesses and physicians included in the 55-page directory.

The twosome worked on a shoestring budget, depending on donations from people and groups included in their Founders Society, a garage sale that raised $2,200 and a bottle and can drive that brought in another $600, to pay the cost of publishing 20,000 copies.

"That seems like a lot, but it's not when you consider that there are 147,000 visually impaired people in the state of Michigan," Fleissner said.

Gaynor is among those 147,000 people. In 1976, at age 22, Gaynor was diagnosed with retinitis pigmentosa and told he would be blind in three years' time. The doctor was a bit off. It wasn't until some 20 years later that Gaynor was forced to leave his job as an accountant because of the chronic progressive eye disease. Although considered legally blind, he has been left with some useful vision.

In 1991, while undergoing therapy, Gaynor asked what services were available. He was handed a 8 1/2- by -11-inch sheet of paper. That's when he started collecting all the information he could find. By the time he and Fleissner did the directory's first draft, they had 105 entries.

"In three years, I knew more than what was on the 8 1/2- by -11-inch sheet of paper the rehab center had given me," Gaynor said. "It's been a learning experience."

The couple gave kudos to the Matt Collins Livonia High Nooners Lions Club, which provided "a push to get over the hump" and provided the first donation, and Joan Mackie who made the first private donation in memory of her late husband, Edward W. Mackie.

"They were the guide that got us here," Gaynor said. "We were flying high when they made the first donation; it was the fuel for our fire."

In a way, the Founders Society reads like a who's who of area groups that work with the visually impaired. In addition to the High Nooners, the Garden City, Livonia Lamplighter, Redford, Westland Breakfast and Westland Host Lions Club are society members, as are the Plymouth Community Council on Aging Inc., Optical Illusions – the Michigan Blind Skiers Association, Seedlings Braille Books for Children, Livonia Parents of the Visually Impaired and Fleissner's son, Ryan.

"Ryan is our number one supporter, he helped us out in every way with the directory," his mother said. "Thank you very much for your understanding. It was a very difficult year. When I was home, my nose was stuck to the computer."

"Thank you for letting us have her," Gaynor added, drawing a quip from the teen to "just have her home by dinner."

Ryan estimates his mother spend "at least six months in hours," sitting in front of her computer at night working on the directory.

"I always thought it was a goal of my mom and she was so happy doing it," he said. "When the first copy came out, she was so happy, she was jumping all over the place."

The couple saved their "most special thank you" for their parents who "have always been there with a helping hand and strong shoulders to lean on and encouraged then on with their 'If you don't do it, who will?' "

Fleissner and Gaynor don't plan to rest on their laurels. Phone calls are coming from throughout the state for the directory and they want to get copies out to ophthalmologists, optometrists, opticians and Lions Clubs, so people don't hear about what's available "through the grapevine."

The directory will be updated every two years and, if all goes well with the Michigan version, they may branch out to do versions for other states.

"There's so much information out there and it's not getting into the hands of the people who need it most," Fleissner said. "This is not a cure-all, it won't answer everybody's questions, but it's a start."

Ta-dum! To the delight of family and friends, Kathleen Fleissner and Gary Gaynor chose to cut the ribbon on a box to unveil their first-ever "Directory for the Visually Impaired – Michigan Version."

casting Corporation has 31 affiliates throughout the United States.

"Our ratings weren't bad, but it wasn't increasing," Pepera said. "When we got the change, a lot of people thought, 'Oh, a kids' station,' but I have realized the need for something like this in the area. We don't play anything inappropriate for kids. It's very positive, very educational and very fun."

"It is an untapped market. Although there's a lot of artistic music out there, it's not quite appropriate for kids. It's not sickeningly sweet, it's just nice and the energy is good."

The music programming isn't all Barney, Raffi and Sharon, Lois and Bram. Radio AAHS plays hits from acts like Mariah Carey, R.E.M., The Rembrandts, Eric Clapton and the Beatles.

"Kids aren't stupid, they know what's going on," Pepera said. "If they're going to have to listen to Barney all day, it's not going to cut it. We play a lot of oldies for parents because most of the time when kids are listening, the parents are listening too.

"One aspect of our music is we play music done especially for kids by people like Bruce Springsteen, Little Richard and Paula Abdul."

The station's goal is to entertain and educate children and their families through positive multimedia programming and products.

In support of its mission, Radio AAHS uses a variety of programs to offer educational entertainment and a platform for communication between family members.

Some of the 500-watt station's programs will be satellite fed while others will be locally based.

"We personalize our programs for the Detroit market," said Pepera, a Garden City resident. "The goal is to not make it seem like it's national. We want to make kids feel like it is their station."

The stations' highlighted programs aside from its music include visits by local DARE officers and government officials.

"The All-American Alarm Clock" (7-11 a.m. Mondays-Saturdays) is a wake-up show for the family that features music, traffic and weather reports, special features, quizzes and contests.

The imaginary destination "Avenue A" (11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Mondays-Fridays) is a city street on which Radio AAHS's studio, shops, offices and stores are located. The segment includes "The 60 Second Spotlight" where listeners are welcome to air their complaints and compliments about the show and environmental tips by "Babbling Brooke."

Actors, such as Meryl Streep, Jack Nicholson, James Earl Jones and Sigourney Weaver, read fairy tales, fables, adventures and other stories during "Storytime" (1-1:30 a.m. and p.m. Mondays-Fridays, 1-1:30 a.m. Saturdays, and 9-9:30 p.m. and 1-1:30 a.m. Sundays)..

Pepera said that working with Radio AAHS is one of the most gratifying experience she's had in the radio business: "This is hard work," she said. "It's totally different, but I get more out of it. It makes you feel so good."

I'll let you know when it's ready and how to get a copy and all that kind of stuff within the next week or two. Until then, know this, the phoenix HAS taken wing. But he's flapping around in my house and he's big, he needs to be outside where he can really soar. Where he can rise, where you can see him at last, rise up from the now cold, dark ashes.

If you have a question or comment for Karen Meier, a Plymouth resident, call her at 953-2047, mailbox number 1883, on a Touch-Tone phone, write her at The Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150, or reach her at her E-mail address: FamilyRoom@worldnet.att.net.

800 number has cancer information

When it comes to cancer, people know a lot of numbers:

•One in eight women will face breast cancer.

•An American man is diagnosed with prostate cancer every two minutes.

•Lung cancer accounts for 5 percent of all deaths in the U.S.

Now, patients and their families need to know only one number – (800) KARMANOS.

The new toll-free service of Detroit's Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute provides information on the institute's state-of-the-art cancer treatment, research and community education and health care programs.

As importantly, it's a gateway to the institute's 1,200 physicians, scientists and support staff who work out of 42 sites throughout southeastern Michigan.

It can connect patients and physicians with other information resources, according to the institute's director and CEO, Dr. William P. Peter.

"The (800) KARMANOS number is the nerve center of our geographically dispersed institute," said Peters. "Whether you need a second opinion, a support group or information about special events, it's all accessible through this phone number."

The Karmanos Cancer Institute is one of the nation's leading cancer research, treatment, education and outreach centers. It is affiliated with the Detroit Medical Center and Wayne State University and supported by several area United Ways.

This is the third year Arbor Hospice has teamed up with the Women's Resource Center in cosponsoring the conference for people who are grieving after the death of a loved one and for those who wish to help them. It will be 8:30 a.m. to 3:40 p.m. in the college's Waterman Center.

Schneider, who speaks and conducts workshops on the subject of grief across the United States, has written two books concerning and grief and bereavement issues and has four other books in preparation for publication, including "Holding Hope in Times of Darkness," the title of this year's conference.

He currently is in private practice in Traverse City.

The afternoon sessions will cover Anger: The Agony of Grief with Arbor Hospice counselor Tanis Allen, Spirituality of the Grief Process with licensed marriage and family therapist Margaret Devereauz, Handling the Holidays with Arbor Hospice's director of bereavement services Cathy Clough, Men in Grief with counselor Richard Reinsmith, Mended and Moving On with counselor Dottie Frazzini, Grief and Depression with counselor Daniel Zak, Managing Life's Transitions with grief educator Kelly Rhoades, Channeling Grief in healthy Ways with Susy Endara de Clipp of MADD and Mystical Experiences with counselor Barbara McLeroy.

Last year's keynote speaker Georgann Fuller will conduct the workshop on Sudden, Traumatic Death. A psychotherapist, Fuller lost her husband when, as the result of terrorists, Pan Am Flight 103 exploded over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988.

Writer shows some ambivalence about the future

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Ms. Green,

I find your work fascinating. I am curious as to how you'd analyze my writing since I tend to write somewhat different day-to-day, depending on my mood. I will be writing this letter over a course of three days to illustrate this, but I must say my signature never changes.

I am 30 years old. I am female and right-handed. I am a mother of four.

I hope you can make some sense of this mess I call my handwriting. I realize my writing varies greatly and hope it's not too difficult to analyze. Thank you.

R.P., Livonia

This writer is observant in recognizing she has three different styles and that moods often have a bearing on the one she selects.

Although there are some differences, the important aspects a graphologist considers are not that different in her three styles.

How and where the handwriting is placed on the paper is perhaps the first consideration a graphologist makes. Her spacing is very similar in all three samples. The margins on the left side of the paper are narrow. While on the right side they are wider. The basic interpretation here is her need for security and some ambivalence about moving into the future are both present.

Before moving on, let me interject an important rule in graphology. No trait stands alone, each one must be considered within the framework of the entire page of handwriting.

Most lower loops are made large and they move leftward, further supporting her need for security. When the going gets tough she may look to the mother figure for emotional support.

These large lower loops in all three samples entangle with the line below. This condition tells us she is very busy, active, social and probably overextended. She tends to become involved in so many things that she cannot always keep them straightened out. I am cognizant how busy four children can make a mother.

Perhaps she may want to examine her priorities. A lively imagination is pervasive in the three styles. Restlessness is also present. She requires sociability and activities and may get carried away talking about them. Life with our writer would not be dull.

All three samples are penned very legibly and all have straight baselines. There are only a few lead-in strokes at the beginning of her words. From this combination we know she wants to communicate with others. She uses her time wisely and is efficiency oriented. She has also learned to eliminate the extraneous and can move straight to her goal.

Flexibility runs throughout the different styles. She is not a long-range planner. Planning is probably done while she is involved in the activity. This young woman has been exposed to some of life's finer things. She is also talented.

Tension can be found in the samples. Her emotional energy does not seem to be finding release. At times, she is rebellious. And some male disappointment from the past is suggested.

Our writer has an extreme sensitivity to personal criticism. At times, she expects it when none is intended and may magnify it out of proportion. She has more need of positive feedback than criticism.

In striking contrast to her legible handwriting, the signature is large, ornate and illegible. Seemingly, she wants to make a big impression, but at the same time be an enigma to others.

My last observation concerns the many blobs in her handwriting. I can't help wondering if it is the result of a defective pen or is something else involved.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful.

Suffrage movement has its 'Who's Who'

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Like the advertising jingle: when Elizabeth Cady Stanton speaks, people listen.

And speak the well-known 19th century suffragist did when she showed up at Schoolcraft College in Livonia recently.

Wearing period clothing and a very 1990s' "Vote Nov. 5" button, she was there to open the Women's Resource Center fall luncheon series.

Portrayed by Lynette Brown, public information director for the American Association of University Women of Michigan, she also was there to introduce the all-female audience to the women who were in the forefront of the suffrage movement.

The focus of her talk was Ernestine Rose, who addressed the Michigan House of Representatives, seeking the right of women to vote, on March 26, 1846, the first time a woman appeared before a U.S. legislature.

■ 'During the more boring things, we'd walked and talked about the need for a women's rights convention.'

Lynette Brown
–as Elizabeth Cady Stanton

Let me tell you: As Elizabeth Cady Stanton, Lynette Brown provided a personal view of the leaders of the women's rights movement with her audience at Schoolcraft College.

Rose was inducted into the National Women's Hall of Fame on Oct. 5. She was nominated by Brown who traveled to Seneca Falls, N.Y., to accept the medallion and made a brief speech on Rose's behalf.

"Ernestine Rose was very important in the lives of women," Cady Stanton told the audience. "The daughter of a rabbi, Ernestine was a rebel, studying the Torah, and learned Hebrew at a time when women didn't do that."

In the beginning

The champion of women's property rights in this country, at a young age Rose went before the civil court in her native Poland to argue for a return of the inheritance she had received from her mother that had been given to an older man to whom she had been betrothed and whom she refused to marry.

"She argued her own case and the judge was so impressed with her that she won the case," Cady Stanton said.

After her success, Rose left Poland for Berlin, Germany, but not before giving her father half of her money to give to charity. The rest she used to develop a chemically treated paper that deodorized rooms which she sold door-to-door to support herself.

She traveled to several other countries before landing in England where she became involved in the Robert Owen Movement which believed in equality for everyone. That's when she met her husband and fellow Owen follower, William Rose. They married in 1836 and shortly after sailed for the United States.

They settled in New York City where William sold jewelry and worked as a silversmith. Ernestine sold her deodorizing papers and perfume and quickly began seeking women's rights and social reforms.

"She was here only a few weeks when she discovered that American women had no right to own or inherit property," Cady Stanton said. "So she drew up a petition and went door-to-door to get signatures. In five months, five women had signed the petition, but she wasn't discouraged.

"It took her 12 years, but she did get the Married Woman's Property Rights Act passed by the New York State Legislature."

Like Rose, Cady Stanton was a bit of a rebel. Born in Johnstown, N.Y., she studied on her own, teaching herself to read. Her father "indulged" her, letting her the books in his law office. It was there she made a discovery similar to Rose's, that women had few rights by law.

"I looked up all the bad laws and marked them with a pencil," Cady Stanton said. "I was about to cut them out of the law books, when my father found me. He explained that they were not only in the books, they were on the books because they were passed by the state legislature.

"My father would tell me that 'Perhaps, when you grow up, you can change the bad laws.' "

Cady Stanton studied at the Troy Female Seminary and with the help of her father and a minister friend was enrolled in a boys' school similar to a high school. The school officials were hesitant about enrolling, fearing she would "hold the other students back." Cady Stanton, however, won awards in Greek and mathematics.

She married Henry Stanton, an agent for the antislavery movement in 1840, but contrary to the times, she too kept her maiden name of Cady and did not say she would obey her husband.

"Henry was not going to own me like he owned a horse," the suffragist leader said. They couple settled in Seneca Falls and had seven children.

A fateful meeting

It was also in 1840 that Cady Stanton met Lucretia Mott at the World Antislavery Convention. While legitimate delegates, they could not participate and had to sit in a balcony behind a curtain.

"During the more boring things, we'd walked and talked about the need for a women's rights convention," Cady Stanton said.

The women began planning the convention, which took place on July 19-20, 1848, at the Westland Methodist Chapel. The women were a bit apprehensive about how many people would attend the two-day meeting, but "lo and behold, carriages started showing up."

"We had 300 people come and 100 were men," Cady Stanton said. "Most opposed the right of women to vote except Frederick Douglass who came both days and on the second day gave an eloquent speech about women having the right to vote. He spoke from the viewpoint of someone born of a slave."

Cady Stanton also stood up at the convention and argued that women should have the right to vote, while Mott opposed it.

"It wasn't that she didn't want women to have the right to vote, she thought it would make us look foolish," Cady Stanton said.

Of those in attendance, only 100 signed the Declaration of Sentiments and Resolutions that declared that woman was man's equal, advocated suffrage for women, and called attention to other in equities and limitations imposed on women.

While it was a happy occasion for organizers, it ended when the press started ridiculing the participants about women wanting the right to vote.

"By the end of the year, many of the people who signed wanted their names off the declaration," Cady Stanton said. "Nobody expected the huge storm of protest."

Three years after the convention, Cady Stanton met Susan B. Anthony who also became active in the women's rights movement. A good friend, Anthony became a key figure in voting rights for women, founding the National Woman Suffrage Association in 1869.

In 1878, 30 years after the convention, considered the beginning of the women's rights movement, a constitutional amendment to grant full suffrage to women was introduced in Congress. It was introduced every year until it passed in 1919 and was ratified in 1920.

Political correctness takes toll on words

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Within the next century language is going to change so dramatically that words like manhole, emancipated, book and overweight are going to be out of our vocabulary, mused writer Christopher Cerf at the Northville Town Hall series recently.

The "Sesame Street" lyricist and the author of "The Politically Correct Dictionary" joked with the audience about the number of strange – yet true – words that have been "corrected" so as not to offend anyone.

"These words are not one that we made up; I have a source to prove every one of these things," Cerf said.

"Waitron," he said, has become the new catch phrase for someone who serves a customers' meal at a restaurant.

" 'Waitron' has spread like wildflowers' it's even in the latest edition of Random House Webster's Dictionary," said Cerf. "That means that if Betsy Ross was alive today we would have to call her a 'Seamstron.' "

The politically correct term for criminals and thieves got the biggest laugh from the audience.

"Instead of saying that people were stealing or looting, we say that they were partaking in 'non-traditional shopping,' so anyone who's arrested for looting can feel better about themselves," Cerf said. "Pretty soon we'll be calling prisoners 'a client or guest of the correctional system.' We have a wonderful, wonderful tradition of getting people to stop taking responsibility for evil actions."

Another example of the goofiness, Cerf said, is the politically correct word for book – processed tree carcasses. And the "political correctness" trend has even spread to the set of "Sesame Street."

■ 'One person came up to me and said, 'I have to take exception with what you people are doing. I would appreciate you not using the word 'American' on your show because America was named after an Italian explorer. I think you should use the phrase Turtle Island.' '

Christopher Cerf
–Town Hall speaker

"One person came up to me and said, 'I have to take exception with what you people are doing. I would appreciate you not using the word 'American' on your show because America was named after an Italian explorer. I think you should use the phrase Turtle Island,' " Cerf recalled.

She thought that by using the word "America" that "Sesame Street" was singling out Italians. What she didn't take into consideration, he said, was that "Turtle Island" is a Cherokee term.

"Sobriety deprived" (drunk), "game management" (hunting), and "pulling non-human animal fibers over a person's eyes" (pulling the wool over your eyes), are also among his favorites.

Cerf is the son of Bennett Cerf, founder of Random House and the host of the "What's My Line" who happens to be among the first speakers at Northville Town Hall inaugural series 1961-1962. As the founding editor-in-chief of Children's Television Workshop's Products Group, Christopher Cerf played a pivotal role in the ongoing funding of the "Sesame Street" television show.

Before joining CTW, Cerf spent eight years at Random House, where, as senior editor, and edited books by such diverse authors as George Plimpton, Andy Warhol and Ray Bradbury.

For the past decade, Cerf has played a major role in the advancement of digital technology as a tool for educating young children. In conjunction with Jim Henson Productions, Inc., he helped create "Muppet Learning Keys," a computer keyboard for preschoolers and was hailed by "InfoWorld" Magazine as one of its "Products of the Year."

Cerf is best known as a humorist, however. Besides writing "The Official Politically Correct Dictionary," he helped launch "The National Lampoon" magazine in 1970. He is penning a new book about the thousands of quotes with blaring factual errors that he has collected.

His talk took a serious turn when he discussed the new show that he is writing, "Between the Lions," that is designed to teach reading. It takes place in a library run by lions where patrons can go inside books and the characters come to life. Designed for children ages 4-7, "Between the Lions" will begin airing in 1998.

"We find that so many kids are not learning at home what they used to learn at home," he said. "We'd love kids to watch it a lot and get them up to the reading level where they should be. We also hope that parents whose literacy skills are lacking can learn something too."

Future Northville Town Hall speakers include attorney Sharon McPhail on Monday, Nov. 18, Editor-in-Chief/Vice President of "Women's Day" magazine Jane Chesnutt on Monday, March 10, and ABC television's political director Hal Bruno on Monday, April 14. All town hall lectures begin at 11 a.m. at the Holiday Inn West, 17123 N. Laurel Park Dr., Livonia. For more information, call Carmen Kuckenbecker at (810) 349-7227.

Salem defense dooms Canton to defeat

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

A different look, a different result.

A month ago, Plymouth Salem's girls basketball team attacked Plymouth Canton with a tenacious man-to-man defense -- and the Chiefs ate it up en route to a 10-point victory.

In Tuesday's Western Lakes Activities Association Tournament semifinal at Canton, Salem coach Fred Thomann changed things up, putting his team in a zone defense that challenged the Chiefs to either penetrate or score consistently from the outside.

They could do neither, which is one very good reason the Rocks won this time, 38-22.

The victory puts Salem (now 16-3) into Friday's championship game opposite surprising Farmington Harrison (12-6), which reached the final by upsetting Northville Tuesday (51-44) and Walled Lake Central (36-32) last Thursday.

The WLAA playoff championship will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Walled Lake Central HS.

Canton (also 16-3) will play in the consolation game against Northville at 6 p.m. Friday at Walled Lake Central.

"Their defense was awesome," admitted Canton coach Bob Blohm, sizing up Salem's victory. "Very simply, they played an aggressive zone. They spread it out, and when the ball went inside, they collapsed on it.

"That defense is suited to (Thomann's) team."

The Salem coach wouldn't disagree. In the first quarter, the Rocks limited Canton to two points while opening up a 10-2 advantage. The Chiefs managed to trim that deficit to four during the second quarter, but could never get closer.

By halftime it was 18-11 in Salem's favor; the third quarter doomed Canton, which again was handcuffed offensively, scoring a meager four points. The Rocks took a 25-15 lead into the final period.

"Two points in the first quarter," noted Blohm. "It was like the Farmington game all over again."

In beating the Falcons last Thursday 34-20, Canton scored just one first-quarter point.

Defense saved the Chiefs against Farmington. Against Salem, however, they were out-played on defense.

"We weren't ready to win last time," said Thomann, referring to Salem's first meeting with Canton. Then Thomann listed the reasons the Rocks won this time: "We changed our defense, we were a little more patient with the ball, we rebounded much better, and we got better games from the people handling the ball."

The final two reasons were evident statistically -- after being outrebounded by the smaller Chiefs in their first meeting, Salem claimed a 21-16 rebounding advantage this time; and Canton committed 19 turnovers to the Rocks' 12.

There was one other factor that played a

CROSS COUNTRY

Certainly, something more was expected. When Dave Gerlach is your coach, getting something more is always part of the plan.

Gerlach had hoped his Plymouth Salem girls cross country team -- which had pulled off a minor upset by finishing third at the Class A regional at Ann Arbor Pioneer -- would use the momentum gained from that performance at the state final last Saturday.

And they did. Unfortunately, everyone else was in top form as well.

The Rocks did a more than creditable job, placing 12th with 368 points in the 27-team Class A meet, held at Michigan International Speedway in Brooklyn.

Sterling Heights Stevenson was first with 104 points, followed by Livonia Stevenson with 126 and Novi with 182.

The other teams in the top 12: Traverse City, fourth (184); Rockford, fifth (190); Grosse Pointe South, sixth (199); Birmingham Seaholm, seventh (200); Brighton, eighth (211); Milford, ninth (275); West Ottawa, 10th (323); and Utica Ford, 11th (323).

Nicole Bolton, a senior co-captain, led Salem with her best showing of the season. She placed 28th overall in 19:26.

Kristie Giddings, another senior co-captain, was also in

New coach ready to face bunch of new problems

MADONNA

Perhaps this will work for the best.

After all, a lack of knowledge -- in this situation -- will be a two-way street. Marylou Jansen won't know what to expect of her adversaries in the upcoming season, her first as Madonna University's women's basketball coach.

But then again, they won't know what to expect of her, either.

That doesn't provide much solace to Jansen, who at present is trying to juggle two coaching jobs: at Madonna and at Dearborn Divine Child, which she has guided to the final four in the Catholic League playoffs.

After coaching 12 years in the Catholic League, Jansen knows the importance of preparation. And with Madonna's season starting this weekend (Friday at Indiana Wesleyan, Saturday at Taylor University), pardon her for feeling a bit queasy -- like a blind person hiking up a mountain.

"Part of the problem for Madonna, at least for me, is knowing the competition," said Jansen, the successor to Bill Potter, who resigned after last sea-

SCHOOLCRAFT

Imagine losing three players you expected to have back, two of them starters.

Wouldn't a development like that make a title-contending team an also-ran faster than Bob Dole became (becomes?) the answer to a trivia question?

Not at Schoolcraft College, where women's basketball coach Ed Kavanaugh has overcome such losses and built something better.

Or so he believes.

"I don't think it will be an issue," Kavanaugh said when questioned about the losses of Jenny Markham (from Redford Union), Becky Bilicki (Livonia Ladywood) and Sarah Camp (Livonia Franklin), all of whom decided not to return for their sophomore seasons.

"What we lost in offense, we picked up in defense."

What Kavanaugh wanted to improve upon after last season -- in which the Lady Ocelots finished 18-11, placing second in the Eastern Conference -- was quickness.

"All we do (on defense) is press," said Kavanaugh. "If you don't have quickness, you get burned."

CC routs Rice to make playoffs

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Just a month ago, a Catholic League championship and Class AA playoff berth appeared remote for the Detroit Catholic Central football team.

But on Sunday night, the Shamrocks earned both with a 28-0 victory over Birmingham Brother Rice in the Prep Bowl championship game at the Pontiac Silverdome.

The championship was the ninth for CC coach Tom Mach and the Shamrocks' fourth in the last five years. This is the same team that blew a 14-0 halftime lead and lost to Rice, 21-14, in overtime in the Boys Bowl on Oct. 6.

But not really the same team.

FOOTBALL

"We've been getting a lot better in practice but I didn't know the score would end up this way," Mach said. "It seemed like this year has been a 'Must win' game every week. It's been a rough season and the kids have held together. I can't say enough about them."

Senior quarterback Greg Call scored on a three-yard run and threw an 18-yard touchdown pass to junior tight end Don Slankster. The Shamrocks also scored on a 10-yard run by senior tailback Greg Alcala and a one-yard run by junior fullback Chris Dueweke.

Placekicker Aaron Rock made all four extra-point attempts.

Senior fullback Milam Brooks led the Shamrocks with a career-high 144 yards in 10 carries. Alcala had 75 yards in 11 carries and Dueweke had 69 yards in 17 carries.

Brooks credited the blocking of linemen Brian Douglas, Brian Baaki, Chris Koss, Ben Herman, Mike Bowen and rotating tight ends Kurt Camden, Jeremy Jakary, Mike Danczak and Slankster.

"I felt like I could drive a truck through there," Brooks said.

The passing combination of Call to Slankster proved effective on the Shamrocks' first scoring drive which covered 66 yards. Slankster caught a 19-yard pass over the middle on third down and 11 from the Shamrocks' own 33. He capped the drive with his TD catch after getting wide open in the Rice secondary with 3:15 left in the first quarter.

"I came out and said to Don, 'You've got to make a big play today' and he did," said Call, who was three for five for 52 yards. "You could tell after that TD catch, it loosened things and opened up everything. We've been playing better and better each weeked and we topped it off this week. I think we're going to make another run."

The Shamrocks' had a huge edge in time of possession, scoring on drives of 66, 62, 72 and 75 yards.

Rice senior tailback Brian Marshall was held to 67 yards on 15 carries. Twice, the Shamrocks stopped Marshall for gains of less than one yard on fourth down and short plays in CC territory.

The Shamrocks preserved their shutout when defensive tackle Gino DiGiandomenico batted down a pass by Eric Marcy on fourth down and goal at the CC 6 with 9:04 left in the game.

"The last game (against Rice) was on our minds all week," CC defensive end Brian Teefey said. "We just wanted to come out and beat them like they did in the second half last time, let them know we're back."

Last game is decisive

Thanks to Detroit Catholic Central, Farmington Observer sports editor Dan O'Meara was declared the winner of the 1996 Grid Picks column against his colleague Brad Emons, Livonia-Westland Sports Editor.

The deciding game was the Catholic League Prep Bowl in which CC defeated Birmingham Brother Rice, 28-0, Sunday night at the Silverdome.

O'Meara was 10-4 on the final weekend and 108-26 for the season.

Emons, the defending champion, finished 9-5 and 107-27.

O'Meara has won two of the last four years and holds a 7-3 advantage in the friendly, decade-long rivalry.

Shamrocks travel treacherous trail to meet Rockets

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

If you think Detroit Catholic Central's scoring drives on the football field are simple, you should see how coach Tom Mach gets to and from work.

Mach's coaching personality is reflected in the car he drives: a rusted-out 1977 GMC pick-up truck. He bought it off his father-in-law about 12 years ago with 80,000 miles on it.

"Now it's got 82,000," laughs his assistant coach Roy Dudas. "He drives about two miles a day, 2 1/2 when he gets gas."

Mach drove the pick-up Monday night to an all-state meeting where there was valet parking.

"I gave the valet guy $1 and he gave it back," Mach said, laughing. "He must have felt sorry for me."

Like his beat-up old ride, his football team usually makes it to its final destination. The Shamrocks are the defending Class AA state champions and have reached the finals four times in this decade, winning three.

PREVIEW

The Shamrocks won their final four games to finish the regular season as the No. 4 seed in Region 3 with a 7-2 record.

Standing in the way of another playoff run is No. 1 seed and undefeated Westland John Glenn, which hosts the Shamrocks in a regional semifinal game at 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

Everyone who thinks of CC as invincible forgets the Shamrocks have had to sweat out several of their victories during their fabulous run in the '90s.

There was the overtime win over Detroit King in the 1991 state semifinals.

How about 1992? There was a late field goal to beat Troy in the regional final, followed by the overtime victory over Utica Eisenhower and a comeback win in the finals against Saginaw Arthur Hill.

The Shamrocks didn't have it easy last year either, holding on to beat Livonia Stevenson 14-6 in a regional semifinal and rallying in the fourth quarter to beat Troy 21-14 in the semifinals.

The only close playoff game the Shamrocks have lost in the 90s was the '91 championship game won by Saginaw Arthur Hill.

Mach thinks Glenn is as formidable as any of those teams.

"They have a good balance, strong linemen and speed in the backfield," Mach said. "Their defense puts a lot of pressure on you, has good pursuit and gets to the ball well."

Glenn's 6-foot-6 junior quarterback Justin Berent concerns Mach. Berent also has a tall and fast receiving group, led by 6-3, 195-pound wide receiver David Jarrett, and 6-4, 217-pound tight end Jon Becher.

"We're not going to bat a lot of passes down," Mach said. "We have to put pressure on him. He drops back and sees the whole field. He has a good, strong arm and is accurate."

The Shamrocks have outscored their opponents, 201-74, including 89-13 the last three games. The offense has come on, but it's the defense that's been the constant, recording 25 sacks.

Leading the way is 6-4, 260-pound all-state candidate Gino DiaGiandomenico, a senior tackle, with nine sacks. Senior Rich Deptula, a 6-0, 235-pound senior tackle, has 5 1/2 sacks, and 6-2, 195-pound senior end Brian Teefey has two sacks.

The linebacking unit is led by Milam Brooks, a 5-11, 215-pound senior, who has two sacks and a team-high 86 tackles.

Mach said losing starting two-way lineman Dan Dominguez early in the year to a leg injury took some adjusting. Putting 5-10, 205-pound junior Chuck Spolsky at nose guard on defense and moving 6-2, 220-pound senior Brian Douglas to right guard on offense solved some of their concerns on offense.

Seniors Chris Koss (6-2, 285), Mike Bowen (5-11, 215) and Brian Baaki (6-0, 215) have been mainstays all season on the offensive line.

"We finally have what we feel is our best combination," Mach said.

The Shamrocks have a shifty tailback, senior Greg Alcala, who has gained 663 yards in 114 carries (5.8 average) with four TDs. Their two fullbacks are solid runners and blockers: Brooks (who had a career-high 144 yards on 10 carries last week; 277 for the season) and 6-1, 215-pound junior Chris Dueweke (529 yards on 130 carries, 4.1 average).

Senior quarterback Greg Call does whatever asked, running for 278 yards in 87 attempts with four touchdowns and completing 31 of 69 passes for 384 yards and two TDs.

He also leads the team with three interceptions at safety.

"He's a winner," said Mach, who playfully knocked his own playcalling. "He has thrown for 500 yards, counting little league and high school."

Mach's style isn't always pretty, but his offense and car usually get him where he wants to go.

SC best at home; Madonna wins 3

VOLLEYBALL

Schoolcraft College capped a perfect home season Tuesday by sweeping past Lansing CC in three sets, 15-11, 15-8, 15-9 Tuesday in women's volleyball.

The win improved the Lady Ocelots' record to 29-11 and came on the heels of their impressive five-match win in the Schoolcraft College Invitational last weekend.

During the SC Invite, the Ocelots had to play the University of Windsor -- a team that had beaten them in three-straight games Oct. 29 -- twice. Both times, SC got the better of the Canadians.

The Ocelots opened the Invitational with a 15-8, 15-4 victory over Oakland CC, then followed that with wins over Kalamazoo Valley CC, 16-14, 15-12; Windsor, 5-15, 15-9, 15-10; and Lansing in the semifinals, 15-11, 15-13.

Which set up a rematch with Windsor in the final, which SC won 15-13, 5-15, 15-10.

In the win over Lansing, Hermina Angeles had 15 kills, four service aces and 12 digs; Stacy Sailus had seven kills and four blocks; Jamie Clark (Livonia Churchill) had six kills and 16 digs; Yvette Sixbey (Garden City), five blocks; and Mindy Sullivan, 16 digs.

All that remains for SC now is the NJCAA Region 12 Tournament, which will be this weekend.

Madonna sweeps

Madonna University's volleyball team made a successful trip through Florida last weekend, winning all three of its matches without losing a game.

The Lady Crusaders beat Eckerd College 15-8, 15-0, 15-11; Palm Beach Atlantic 15-3, 15-6, 15-9; and Eckerd again 15-10, 15-8, 15-7.

Kelly McCausland (Redford Union) led Madonna's offense, collecting 51 kills in the three matches. Julie Martin (Livonia Stevenson) had 31 kills and Karin Sisung had 15.

McCausland also had 32 digs and eight blocks, while Martin had 15 blocks and Sisung added 31digs. Meg Paris collected 70 assists to kills.

The three wins improved Madonna's record to 38-3.

2nd-half goal carries Troy past CC

BY STEVE KOWALSKI

SOCCER

Being new at school, probably the best way to make friends on a soccer team is to be a playmaker.

So it's no wonder Justin Coffey fit right in with his new teammates at Troy after his family moved to the area over the summer from Pittsburgh, Pa.

The nifty dribbler set up his biggest goal to date on Tuesday as the Colts beat Detroit Catholic Central, 1-0, in a Class A quarterfinal played at Macomb Community College.

Junior midfielder Brian Larkin completed Coffey's centering pass to break a scoreless duel with 29:43 remaining in the second half. Larkin's shot from about 15 yards cleared the head of CC goalkeeper Matt Kessler, who didn't have much of a chance.

The lead stood after a goal by CC late in the game was disallowed due to an offsides call.

"He's a playmaker, with good vision, very unselfish," Troy coach Carlos Wheatley said of Coffey, a junior midfielder. "When kids move in, you always hear stuff from the mom or dad that he's the best player... But he's living up to the accolades that preceeded him."

Coffey raced down the sidelines with the ball and his top priority was finding an open teammate. Coffey and senior forward Mike Healy were turned away on good scoring opportunities in the first half.

"I lifted my head and was lucky enough to get the ball to his feet and Larkin made a wonderful finish," said Coffey. "What's so special about this team is this is a real tight group of buddies on and off the field and they've made it easier to adjust."

The win sends Troy to the Final Four for the first time ever. The Colts, 18-2-3 overall, will play in a semifinal game at 7 p.m. Thursday at Grand Blanc. The finals are scheduled for 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Bloomfield Hills Andover.

CC, which never before advanced as far as the quarterfinal, bowed out with a 13-7-2 overall record.

After an evenly-played 80 minutes of soccer, what it came down to was Troy's goal counted and CC's didn't.

The Shamrocks appeared to tie the score at 1-1, but a goal by senior midfielder Mike Martin with about 8:45 remaining was disallowed because the referees ruled he was offsides. Martin had scored on a rebound off a shot by teammate Casey Cook.

The referees indicated that three CC players were offsides on Cook's initial shot, but it would have counted had it gone in.

Once Martin touched the ball after Sawyer made the save, the play was dead, according to referee Jim Charbeneau. Sawyer, who gained his 11th shutout, was the only Troy player between Martin and the goal.

"If the first shot went in, it would have been OK," Charbeneau explained. "But if a player in the offsides position seeks to gain advantage on a rebound off the goalkeeper or goalpost, the goal does not count."

CC coach Dana Orsucci didn't argue the call long.

Tony Moucoulis, who had a good opportunity tipped over the crossbar by Sawyer with 16 minutes remaining, was one of eight Shamrocks playing their final high school game.

Larry Schmid, Ryan Haight, Brad Winslow, Mike Graff, Martin, Mike Juarez and Brian Lindsay are the other CC seniors.

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

The countdown has begun.

Only eight days remain before opening day of the 1996 firearms whitetail deer season. Despite having already spent dozens of hours in the woods during the early archery season, I know I'll be as giddy as a kid on Christmas when the eve of opening day rolls around.

The excitement and anticipation will build throughout the night as I wrestle with restless sleep. I'll set the alarm clock, but I know I'll be awake before it rings. When sunrise arrives, I'll be comfortably seated in my blind hoping for that single opportunity to present itself.

Bow hunters have been experiencing success so far, particularly in southern Michigan where the deer population is at an all-time high. There were 1.8-2 million deer in Michigan as of Oct. 1, which is about 10 percent fewer than last year.

Although there are more deer in the southern Lower Peninsula, hunters headed to the northern Lower and the Upper Peninsula are likely to see fewer deer than last year. Winter losses were estimated at nearly 200,000 last year in the Upper Peninsula, which is about one-third of the herd after the hunting season.

Don't get the wrong message here. Last year was a record-setting season and this year there may be fewer deer, but there are still plenty of whitetails around.

In fact, because of an increase in the number of antlerless permits available this year, DNR biologists expect the 1996 harvest to top 500,000 and eclipse last year's all-time record of 476,960 whitetails. (The DNR issued 295,000 antlerless permits in 1995 compared to 406,000 this year.)

The DNR divides the state into 13 management districts. Following is a brief outlook for each district according to DNR wildlife biologists. The accompanying phone numbers are for the corresponding DNR district offices.

Districts 1, 2 - Baraga/Crystal Falls (901) 875-6622: The western Upper Peninsula was hit hardest by the severe winter and the whitetail population suffered, particularly in eastern Gogebic and Iron counties, Dickinson and Ontonagon counties. An estimated 100,000 deer were lost to the winter kill last year in these two districts alone.

Best bets are where last year's winter timber harvest helped the deer survive.

District 3 - Escanaba, (901) 786-2351: A record harvest of 23,000 antlerless deer in 1995 coupled with a long, hard winter has resulted in approximately 30 percent fewer deer in District 3 than last year.

Best bets are around the farming regions of south-central Menominee and western Delta counties. However, most of the land in this area is private and access may be difficult to obtain.

Public land near the farms provides good opportunities, but hunting pressure is normally high during the firearms season.

District 4 - Newberry (906) 293-5153: Winter took a toll in District 4 as well and DNR biologists estimate there are 20 to 25 percent fewer whitetails this fall than last year.

Southern Chippewa, western Mackinac and southern Schoolcraft counties have the highest concentrations. Early snow storms will drive deer into the winter cover along M-28.

District 5 - Gaylord (517) 732-3541: The 1996 season will be good for hunters in the Gaylord District as deer numbers appear to be higher than in 1995 levels in quite a few areas.

Best bets are in the farm/forest areas of western Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, Alpena and Presque Isle counties.

District 6 - Cadillac (616) 775-9727: A severe winter took its toll on the 7- to 10-month-old deer and a large buck harvest took a toll on the older buck population. Breeding does came through the winter fine and the overall population is close to what it was last year, but there will be more antlerless deer than bucks. As usual, there are more deer on private land than on public and more deer south of M-55 than north.

Best bets are the oak ridges. There is a great mast crop in the district this year.

District 7 - Mio (517) 826-3211: Expect another good season in District 7 with population levels comparable to what they were last year. An all-time record buck harvest last year has resulted in fewer 2 1/2 year-old and older bucks, but bowhunters are reporting a good number of 1 1/2 year-olds.

Best bets are on private land in agricultural areas with mixed woodland habitat in Clare, Gladwin, Arenac, Iosco, Ogemaw and Alcona counties.

District 8 - Bay City (517) 684-9141: The outlook is excellent for District 8. Hunters should take more deer of both sexes in this district this fall as compared to last year. The number of bucks is apparently up, but there is a large number of spike bucks in the herd. Agricultural harvests will be later than usual, which means the deer will be dispersed over a wider area. Hunting will get better as the corn is cut.

Best bets are the agricultural areas of Sanilac, Huron and Isabella counties and parts of Tuscola County.

District 9 - Grand Rapids (616) 456-5071: Deer numbers are up across the district, but there are fewer bucks than in 1995. Hard and soft mast crops are better than last year while autumn olive and thornapple have also produced well.

Best hunting will be on private lands across the district. Responsible hunters willing to harvest an antlerless deer stand a better chance of obtaining permission from landowners than buck-only hunters.

District 10 - Livonia (313) 953-0241: Deer numbers are similar to last year across the district with the exception of Lapeer County and northern St. Clair County where there are more deer than last year. Most of the land in this district is private and permission is often difficult to obtain in northern Oakland and Macomb counties. Some of the more urban areas have restrictions against the discharge of a firearm so be sure to check with the local unit of government for specific regulations.

Best hunting is near the agricultural areas, particularly after the corn is cut.

District 11 - Shiawassee (517) 625-4600: The deer population in District 11 is showing a slight increase over last year, particularly in Eaton, Genesee and Shiawassee counties. The overall harvest is expected to be excellent, but standing corn early in the firearms season could be a disadvantage to hunters.

Best bets are southern Shiawassee, western Livingston, western Ingham and southwestern Eaton counties. The Maple River corridor should also offer some excellent hunting opportunities.

District 12 - Plainwell (616) 685-6851: Expect an excellent season in District 12. The late, wet spring had a dampening effect on hard and soft mast crops so hunters who can locate some mast crop will undoubtedly have located a whitetail hot spot.

Best bet is Cass County, which continues to hold some of the highest deer densities in the district. Also check in and around unharvested corn and scattered oaks.

District 13 - Jackson (517) 780-7900: Based on all indicators the deer population is up in District 13 and the harvest should correlate with the population increase. Crop removal may be a little late this fall so there could be a large amount of standing corn.

Best bets are Deer Management Units 147, 250 and 251, which corresponds to Calhoun County and portions of Branch, Jackson and Washtenaw counties.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-2573.

Even with the losses, Kavanaugh has a nucleus of five returnees to build around: Kristi Engel (Redford Thurston), a 5-foot-11 forward/center; Yvonne Malewski (Thurston), a 5-10 guard/forward; Julie Schmidt, a 5-6 forward; Sheilah Coulter, a 6-1 center; and Christine Edwards, a 5-9 guard/forward.

"Schmidt is a tenacious rebounder," said Kavanaugh, who started four sophomores and a freshman in last weekend's season-opening tournament (SC split).

"Coulter was in doubles (in scoring) in both games over the weekend -- and we're looking for more consistency from her this year. Engel has matured as a basketball player; she's one of our best defensive players. And Malewski is shooting better and going to the basket better.

"Edwards is equally capable of starting. She's going to make some real big plays for us, she's improved her quickness this year."

Still, it's the newcomers who will put the Lady Ocelots on top of the conference this season.

The biggest of them is one of the smallest: 5-5 point guard Esther Ross. She's the lone freshman starter.

"She gives us the ability to penetrate, plus she can shoot from the outside," said Kavanaugh. "She's very quick."

There are five others on the roster whom Kavanaugh is counting on to provide support. Crissy Harmon is a 5-7 guard whose "added a three-point shooting dimension that we didn't have before."

Cindy Leung (Plymouth Salem), a 5-8 guard, and Amy Wilson, a 5-4 guard, both possess similar qualities: "They're not flashy, but they won't hurt us, either," according to Kavanaugh. Wilson's passing ability is a plus, while Leung is solid in all phases of the game.

Then there's Alana Caver, a 5-9 transfer from Henry Ford CC who won't become eligible until the second semester, at the end of December; and Theresa Cooper, who has outstanding basketball skills but whose academics have kept her on the sidelines.

Kavanaugh believes SC to be among the top (if not the leading) contenders for the conference championship, a belief bolstered by defending champ St. Clair CC's loss of its best player, Stacy Leasher, to a season-ending knee injury.

But it won't be easy. The Ocelots lack height ("We don't have a lot of size, so we're going to have to work for everything we get") and, according to Kavanaugh, "right now we're inconsistent. They're still getting to know each other on the basketball court."

But there are a lot of plusses. "They enjoy playing defense," their coach said. "They're real competitive. And we've got a real fine team chemistry going right now."

If their improved quickness does indeed improve their defense by a measurable amount, SC could make a stronger run at the conference title and a longer run in the NJCAA Tournament.

TOURNAMENT WEEKEND: At the Durham College Big Eight Classic, SC lost its season (and tournament) opener to the host team 81-76 Saturday, then rallied to win its consolation game against Mott CC 66-60 Sunday.

Against Durham, the Ocelots led 39-37 at the half thanks to 11 first-half points from Malewski, eight from Coulter and seven from Harmon.

But SC couldn't keep pace in the second half, partially due to Durham's exceptional free-throw shooting: 29-of-34 for the game (85.2 percent), compared to SC's 23-of-34 (67.5 percent).

Malewski's 23 points led SC. Schmidt scored 11, and both Coulter and Edwards had 10. Engel finished with nine. Durham was led by Marcy Skribe's 23 points; Stephanie Kassian had 17.

In the win over Mott, the scenario was just the opposite: SC trailed 30-25 at the half, then held the Bears scoreless for the first nine minutes of the second half.

Schmidt and Coulter each scored 15 for the Ocelots. Edwards had 12. Angela Ensley's 20 led Mott, with Jennifer Scollon netting 16.

SOCCER

Livonia Stevenson forced a miscue Tuesday night, converted it into a first-half goal, then added a second half score to defeat city rival Livonia Churchill 2-0 in the quarterfinals of the Michigan High School Athletic Association soccer tournament.

Coach Walt Barrett's team, 17-2-1, advanced to tonight's 6:30 p.m. semifinal at Jackson against Grand Haven, a 2-1 overtime winner over Portage Central in their quarterfinal. The Chargers bowed out 15-7.

Mark Dietrich scored Stevenson's first goal with 6:15 left in the first half on a misplayed Churchill throw-in, perhaps due to good pressure the Spartans were putting on.

The Chargers' goalie thought the throw was coming short and moved up -- only to see the throw go over his head. Dietrich elbowed Mike Skolnik aside, used his body to prevent him from getting to the ball and then gently tapped a shot from the left side into the far right corner.

Stevenson got the clincher with 24:17 to play in the match when Scott Babinski fired a shot. It was deflected and Brandon Good kicked it by Skolnik, who had no chance to make a play as the ball deflected off the inside of the left post into the net.

son without leaving much in terms of scouting reports or films. "The girls on the team know more about the league than the coaching staff.

"We are really going in blind. What I see of our team I really like. But if you don't have a meter stick, how do you judge it?"

This is Jansen's first exposure to coaching at the college level, so it will be a learning experience for both her players -- at least some of them -- and herself.

The players who won't have much of an adjustment are Dawn Pelc, a 5-foot-8 junior guard; Mary Murray, a 5-9 sophomore forward/center; and Jennifer Jacek (from Livonia), a 5-8 freshman forward.

The reason: All three played for Jansen at Divine Child.

"That's definitely a comfort level for me as a coach," admitted Jansen. "When you say something, it's not like you're speaking French or some other foreign language."

Still, the players Jansen will need to communicate with best are sophomore point guard Katie Cushman, who started at point for Madonna as a freshman and was second on the team in scoring (15.1) and first in assists (2.8) -- and turnovers (2.6); and Murray, one of the team's tallest players and the third-leading scorer (9.9) and rebounder (5.5) last season, in which the Fighting Crusaders were 20-13.

But despite their former status, no one, according to Jansen, is assured of anything. "For the girls, for some of them it's a major shift," she said. "I think they know they won't have a guaranteed position."

The other roster players Jansen is working with are seniors Michelle Parmentier, a 5-8 forward/center, and Meegan Zann, a 5-7 guard; juniors Erin Wiley, a 5-10 forward/center, and Courtney Senger, a 5-8 guard/forward; sophomore Angela Negri, a 5-8 guard (7.1 ppg); and freshmen Christine Dietrich, a 5-8 guard, Kimberly Lucas, a 5-8 forward (from Redford Thurston), and Stephanie Uballe, a 6-1 center.

Right now, it's still a matter of getting acquainted -- something that's quite compressed due to Jansen's time conflicts.

"It's a lot to squeeze in there," she admitted. "We'll just try and make the best of the situation."

That situation could lead to Jansen patrolling the bench on the sidelines at five games in a six-night stretch.

One consolation, of sorts: Madonna won't be competing in a conference quite yet. The Crusaders are still an NAIA independent until next season, when they join the Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference.

"I think it's going to be a lot of fun," Jansen said in summary.

Maybe. But there's still that "fear of the unknown," as Jansen put it -- for her, certainly, when contemplating the schedule ahead, and for her players, who aren't certain where they'll fit in quite yet.

prime form; she took 60th in 20:00.

The next three scorers for the Rocks were all juniors: Ellen Stemmer, 90th in 20:29; Evelyn Rahhal, 93rd in 20:32; and Erin Lang, 97th in 20:34.

Other Salem runners were senior Mari Disbrow, who was 105th in 20:38, and freshman Rachael Moraitis, 111th in 20:43.

Plymouth Canton's Becky Wolfrom, a senior, competed in the individual runner's race, finishing 27th in 19:56.

Top runner in the team race was Portage Northern's Sharon VanTuyl (17:52.60). Livonia Stevenson's Kelly Travis was fourth (18:48.40).

In the individual race, top finisher was Andrea Rosema of Jenison (18:34.0). Westland John Glenn's Marjori Brooks was second (18:50.80), Farmington's Kate Atheris was fifth (19:08.30) and Livonia Churchill's Ashley Fillion was seventh (19:12.80).

"We didn't lose -- we got beat by people," said Gerlach. "When you get 'em prepared and then five of seven run personal bests, there's not much you can say.

"Looking at the teams that beat us, they were supposed to beat us."

Among those that particularly pleased Gerlach were his senior co-captains. Bolton's time was by far her best of the season, although the course wasn't the most challenging.

Indeed, not much of Saturday's race will be remembered with fondness. Both the course, for the first time at MIS, and the running of the races proved less than satisfactory.

At least Salem's performance rose above that. In the Rocks' first appearance at the state meet in more than a decade, their performance was a solid one.

significant role and magnified Salem's defensive performance. The Chiefs were a mere 7-of-26 from the floor (27 percent) to Salem's 12-of-31 (40 percent). And Canton made just 1-of-8 from three-point range (12.5 percent); the Rocks were 3-of-4 (75 percent).

For Salem, Angela Pruett led offensively with 10 points and six rebounds. Laurel Weinman had eight points. No one stepped forward offensively for Canton; Kristi Fiorenzi's eight points was best, with Melissa Marzolf getting seven.

"We did all the little things better this time around," said Thomann. If the Rocks continue to do just that, they'll not only win the league's playoff title but a few more things in the upcoming state tournament.

Agape 35, Zoe Christian 22: A fast start allowed Plymouth Agape Christian to complete its Metro Christian Conference regular season with a perfect 6-0 record Monday against Warren Zoe Christian at Agape.

No one scored in double figures for Agape, which led 12-2 after one quarter and 20-6 at the half. Kim Ther had nine points, four assists and four steals, and sister Jaci Ther totaled seven points, five assists, five steals and five rebounds.

Crystal Palmer and Caley Mullen each added six points, Palmer getting six steals and Mullen five boards.

Keri Carlson and Laura Carlson each scored eight points for Zoe.

Agape improved to 12-1 overall with the win.

If you want more than just the highlights these are the guys to turn to:

In Garden City and Redford—

"Covering community sports is challenging."

We caught a glimpse of Steve Kowalski's sense of humor when he first told us why he enjoys doing what he is doing, "Coming home at three in the morning, paying for parking and hot dogs at the games..."

Then on a serious note he admits that it's the challenge that keeps him going, "Some of your sources are young, never been interviewed. It's fun and rewarding to do a good job."

Steve knew that when he scored only four points in Junior Varsity Basketball during his own high school days, that he had a better chance writing about sports than playing them. He's done it so well that he's received awards for it; the most recent in 1994 from the Michigan Press Association in their "top game story" category.

In Livonia and Westland—

"We have a good group of schools to cover."

When we asked Brad Emons what he enjoys most about covering community sports, he told us, "The people we deal with, from the coaches to the student-athletes, they truly appreciate the coverage—we cover a good group of schools from the smallest to the largest."

Brad began reading the major league box scores when he was still in grade school, wrote in high school and earned a degree in journalism from Franklin College in Indiana. He's been writing for your hometown newspapers since he graduated in 1977.

How does our coverage stack up? Brad says that unlike the metropolitan newspapers, "We cover a variety of prep sports and do it in-depth—both boys' and girls'. We're able to hit more than the highlights. We get to know nearly every high school coach and athletic director by their first names."

In Plymouth and Canton—

"It's real, it's serious, but it's also fun."

C.J. Risak is talking about SPORTS, of course.

When did he decide on sports reporting? "Early in my career, after being out in the real world. Sports is real, it's serious, but it's also fun."

One facet of the job C.J. especially enjoys is meeting people—the players and the coaches, "We get to know a lot of people first-hand," he said.

His enthusiasm and dedication is reflected in his writing. In 1994, he received a first place award from the industry for best sports column and second place for putting together the best sports section.

Stress-free holidays

People affected by chronic illness sometimes have a rough time coping with the holidays. A program this evening will offer stress-reduction strategies geared toward preparing for and enjoying the holiday season.

"Positive Steps for a Stress-Free Holiday will be held from 7-9 p.m. in the cafeteria of the Senior Health Building, 5361 McAuley Dr., on the campus of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital. Sue Webster McDonald of Family Consultation Services will be the featured speaker. She works extensively with clients who are affected by chronic illness such as arthritis, lupus and fibromyalgia.

For more information, call the Arthritis Foundation-Ann Arbor Region at (313) 572-3224.

Get fit at Schoolcraft

More than 6,800 can't be wrong — that's the number of people who took physical fitness classes at Schoolcraft College last year. Conventional fitness classes include aerobic exercise, swimnastics, conditioning and yoga. A variety of dance classes, plus golf, tennis and fencing classes are also available.

If all of this activity causes sore muscles, there is a session called "Massage for Better Health."

To complement the body, there are classes for the mind, including "Health and Healing through Visualization and Shamaninsm and Transpersonal Psychology" which is described as a ancient tradition of healing.

For information on these or other classes, call (313) 462-4448. Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty road between Six and Seven mile roads in Livonia.

Keep kids safe

The overwhelming majority of childhood injuries are preventable and 80 percent of bicycle-related injuries result from head injuries, according to Metro Detroit National Safe Kids.

To aid in this effort, Oakwood Healthcare System recently co-hosted "Safety in the Park" with the Livonia Family Y, Wayne County Parks, AAA of Michigan, D & D Bicycles and Garden City Hospital. The event was held in Hines Park in Westland.

In-line skating demonstrations, safety instructions, free helmets and 26 child immunizations were conducted during the fall event.

New offices

Allergy and Immunology Associates has opened a new office in Livonia at the Mission Health Medical Center on Seven Mile east of I-275. Available at the new clinic are the latest and most effective treatments for allergy and asthma sufferers.

"The first step to effectively treating your allergies is to develop a prescribed plan of attack," said Dr. Martin Hurwitz. "Determining what you are allergic to along wit what it takes to effectively treat that allergy . . . can mean the difference between suffering and comfort."

In addition to the new Livonia office, the group has offices in Novi, Chelsea and Ypsilanti. They can be reached at (313) 434-3007.

Anti-Ritalin effort

Parents Against Ritalin is hosting a seminar entitled "Natural Alternatives to Ritalin today from 7-9 p.m. at the Wayne County Community College, 21000 Northline in Taylor.

The group is dedicated to educating the public about natural health alternatives that are available for managing attention deficit disorder, because of potential side-effects of Ritalin. For information call (313) 675-0467.

Make eating for kids fun and nutritious

Parents should remember four things when they're trying to feed their children healthful foods: make it fun, fortified, fast and fat-reduced.

"Make sure your children get a good breakfast and it could be something very simple like fortified grain cereal with lower fat milk and orange juice and if they're on their way running out the door, make a toasted cheese sandwich, with whole grain bread and reduced-fat cheese," according to Alicia K. Taub, Garden City Hospital clinical dietitian manager.

Adding variety to menus is key.

Make snacks available that are ready to grab and are healthful, like fruits, yogurt, string cheese, turkey sticks, graham crackers, mini bagels with reduced-fat cream cheese or peanut butter, raisins, pre-cleaned and scrubbed vegetables, V-8 juice and whole grain crackers.

Get your calcium

Milk is important for the calcium and to help children grow. Toddlers under two need homogenized milk; however, older children can drink the reduced-fat offerings. Also, adolescent girls need to eat more calcium-rich foods needed for healthy bones throughout life, according to the U.S. Dietary Guidelines for Americans, printed in 1995.

"If parents can, they should try to be focusing on setting eating patterns while children are young to decrease risks for health problems later," Taub said, adding that diets should include lower fat dairy products, de-fatted foods, whole grains, dark green and orange vegetables.

The quest for a healthy household isn't easy if your child is a picky eater, but there are ways around that, too, according to Dr. Alita Rice, a pediatrician at the Mission Health Medical Center in Livonia.

"My advice is to try to give them the most well-balanced meals that you can," Rice said, adding that if all they want to eat is spaghetti or macaroni and cheese remember that those foods have nutrients, too.

Give them plenty of what they will eat and try to make that entree a healthy one.

"If they like hot dogs, try to get the turkey hot dogs," she added. "And if it seems like they're still not getting well-balanced meals I recommend they get a daily multi-vitamin."

When children are toddlers, Rice said, they often like to take part in making meals. Let meal time be fun, even for older children. Create faces with the foods on the plate or let the child make a design he or she chooses. Look for foods that you can serve together and make a theme for the meal, such as shapes, animals or colors. It can be a learning experience, too.

Schools get in the act

Parents aren't alone in trying to get healthy foods into children. School districts across the nation recently revamped what they offer and came up with a meal plan with less fat.

Beginning July 1, 1996, schools were required to meet standards set in the Dietary Guidelines for Americans, which emphasize the food guide pyramid with most of the food consisting of bread, cereal, rice and pasta; the next largest portions from fruits and vegetables; a smaller amount of dairy and the smallest intake from fats, oils and sweets, according to Verna Lee Hill, director of food and nutrition services for the Plymouth-Canton School District.

Changes in Plymouth-Canton began during the last school year because it was one of 12 pilot districts across the country to implement a Nutrient Standard Menu Planning.

The NuMenu requires a computer analysis of all foods and has specific nutritional targets for calories, protein, iron, calcium, vitamin A, and vitamin C. Total fat should be less than 30 percent of calories and saturated fat less than 10 percent of calories. The computer comes up with a list of nutrients an average student will receive from lunches weekly.

These changes are the most dramatic since school cafeterias began offering lunches 50 years ago after it was learned that men going into the Army were failing their physical, because of nutritional deficiency.

"There was a real nutritional need in the United States and (school lunches) satisfied needs of children for years," Hill said.

"And during those years we learned a lot about nutrition. We learned that the school lunch was high in fat. With the new program we have definite targets that we try to meet."

The result has been a variety of healthy entrees, like chicken stir fry, tamale pie, grilled chicken breast sandwiches, a new vegetarian lasagna and pasta salad.

"The turkey sandwich has always been a favorite one and it's a healthy one," Hill said. "The big change is that we no longer have to have the two meat equivalent requirement, which means we can have vegetarian entrees and that can really reduce the fat in a meal."

New portions

Increasing the portion sizes of fruits and vegetables is another big change in school meals.

Parents who are concerned their child isn't getting enough nutrients at school and home can turn to professionals for help. Taub said Garden City Hospital, for instance, offers advice from nutritionists who will review diets with families. The problems vary, maybe the child has gained a lot of weight, lost a lot of weight or has become vegetarian.

"In the last year we had two cases where teens decided they wanted to become vegetarians," Taub said. "The mothers were concerned their daughters weren't having an adequate diet."

All patients in the nutrition outpatient clinic must be referred by written physician prescriptions.

Appointments are then made for a consultation with patients and their parents.

"We find out what they're eating and it gives us a better idea of what's going on in their lives," Taub said, adding that if a child is gaining a lot of weight he or she is encouraged to exercise as opposed to dieting. With normal growth, weight should become proportionate with height.

Nutritionists don't encourage children who are overweight to go on a weight loss diet, because they're still growing and need energy from their food.

"Usually the cause of them being overweight is that they're not active enough," she added.

Chrysler dealers

Chrysler Corporation established a series of pages on the Web in September for most of its dealers.

"We're seeing about 40,000 visitors a month to the Chrysler corporate web sites. Every indication is that many of them are good sales prospects who already are interested in our products," said E. Thomas Pappert, vice president for Sales and Service.

"The corporate sites already help car, truck and minivan shoppers find nearby dealers. Now they'll also be able to link directly to a web page for a specific dealer to find showroom and service hours, location maps, phone numbers and department managers' names."

Chrysler will create web pages for about 97 percent of its 4,600 U.S. dealers. The dealer web sites will be linked to Chrysler's corporate web pages.

Three generations celebrate the arts

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

You could say the arts run in Phyllis Hochlowski's blood. The 74-year old Plymouth watercolorist, along with her daughter Jana Conger, and granddaughter Alicia Conger, will display their paintings and clay works at the sixth annual Celebration of the Arts Nov. 9 in Northville. It's very rare for three generations of a family to exhibit in the same show.

"Actually there's four generations of artists in our family. Father could draw anything and mother was a watercolorist. We have at least six poets and nine artists in the family," said Phyllis Hochlowski, who seems more concerned with having younger generations of the family showcased rather than herself. She sits at the dining room table wading through a pile of newspaper clippings about her three daughters and grandchildren, proudly displaying each as she recognizes their accomplishments.

In the family: Phyllis Hochlowski is one of three generations of a Plymouth family exhibiting work in the Celebration of the Arts show.

Daughter Denise Lorenz teaches art in Texas. Alicia is a clay artist although she earned a degree in communications from the University of Michigan. While backpacking her way across Europe, she lived and taught English in Spain and Paris. In 1990, she returned to the states to become part of the Teach for America program modeled after the Peace Corps. After teaching at an elementary school in Los Angeles for three years, she decided to return to school to study art at the Instituto Allende in Mexico where primitive kick wheels and hand-built kilns took her back to simpler times.

"It was difficult as a bilingual teacher working with 38 students and nine year olds who brought semi-automatic handguns to school," said Alicia Conger who feels safer in her present job teaching English at the federal prison in Milan.

"Most of my art influence came from home. The store we went to most often was Frank's. We were always making something whether it was clothespins or apple head dolls. Growing up in a family that's artistic, we did a lot of shows together."

Alicia primarily creates sculptural spheres of hand-built clay. She frequently texturizes the surfaces by pushing pine needles, powdered glass, copper, sand, dirt, and newspapers into the clay. Her functional work consists of fountains and chimes. What sets her apart from other ceramic artists is the fact Alicia only uses clear glazes. She obtains the earthen colors by using colored clay. Her work ranges in price from $22 for chimes to $370 for a fountain.

Jana Conger will bring watercolors from her African animal series to the show, according to Hochlowski. A resident of Brooklyn in the Irish Hills region of Michigan, Jana attended Plymouth schools. She specializes in wildlife art. In 1992, her large-scale painting of Japanese Cranes was chosen to be displayed with works by internationally known wildlife artists Robert Bateman and Carl Brenders in the "Birds in Art" exhibit at the Leigh Yawkey Woodson Art Museum in Wausau, Wisconsin. Her contemporary paintings have also been shown at the Buffalo Museum of Science in New York; Carnegie Mellon Museum, Pennsylvania; High Desert Museum, Oregon, and the Sotetsu Gallery, Japan.

A member of Three Cities Art Club, Hochlowski began painting after becoming a widow. She has studied watercolor with Sharon Dillenbeck at the Plymouth Cultural Center for 11 years. Her framed and unframed florals of water lilies and lotus will be priced between $25 and $120.

"I spend more money on art than I make," said Hochlowski, who is proud of her family's history as well. She was born in one of the first homes built in Plymouth in 1835 by John Kellog. Her grandfather was Dr. Samuel Campbell.

More than 70 artists and crafters will take part in the Celebration of the Arts show to benefit New Morning School, a prekindergarten through eighth grade parent cooperative in Plymouth.

Among the local exhibitors are Marianne Akers of Livonia with her soft sculptured Santas, angels and elves; Diana Licht, Plymouth, children's and ladies' handmade apparel; Yvonne Staples, Livonia, fabric painted dolls and jewelry; Lorrie Love, Farmington Hills, pottery; Corrine Perez-Garcia, Northville, custom 14k and 18k jewelry, and Sue Walton, Bloomfield Hills, handwoven coats, jackets and scarves.

"I'm really excited about the diversity of the artists participating in the show. It truly is a celebration of the arts. We have everything from paper Christmas tree ornaments to dolls, boxes, glass, baskets, and fantasy mobiles" said show co-chair Leslie Stolaruk.

Animal spirit: Jana Conger captures wildlife in contemporary watercolors. Her work has been exhibited in national museums.

Orchestras feature classical guitarists

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Guitar is an instrument most people associate with folk or rock music, not classical. The Moors introduced the guitar into Spain in the 13th century, and the lute, a musical relative, was the most popular instrument between 1400 and 1700.

Classical works for these instruments are just as old, and will be performed by outstanding guest artists at concerts to be presented by the Livonia Symphony Chamber Orchestra on Friday, Nov. 15, and the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra on Saturday, Nov. 16.

Bach wrote his "Prelude in C Major," for lute, it is one of the works to be performed by guest guitarist Victor Sakalauskas with the Livonia Chamber Music Orchestra on Nov. 15.

Internationally renowned guitarist Philip Dent Candelaria, joins the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra for a concert with a Spanish flair, reminiscent of the early days the Moors, on Nov. 16. The Spanish guitar with five strings evolved in the 1500s becoming Spain's national musical instrument. Guitars today have six strings.

"This concert is for people who love guitar, flute and strings" said Carl Karoub, assistant conductor of the Livonia Symphony Orchestra. "Strings are basic to every piece on the program. There's a lot of variety. Nothing is too long. We're doing little movements — everything is brief, and to the point."

Sakalauskas began playing guitar at the age of 11. In 1985 he became interested in classical and flamenco guitar. Under the instruction of Helene Rottenberg, professor of guitar at Madonna University in Livonia, he completed a dual concentration degree in music management and classical guitar performance in May. He is a guitar instructor and solo performer in the metro Detroit area, and is pursuing a career as a concert artist. This marks his LSO debut.

The concert is the first of two chamber music concerts to be presented this season by the LSO. Music director Volodymyr Schesiuk will conduct the second on Jan. 24. Chamber music is a new component of this year's LSO season.

"Ensemble is the favorite way of musicians to perform," said Karoub. "There's only one person to a part. Thirteen musicians will be performing — strings, bass, horns, flutes and clarinet. A special feature is a segment of cello jazz featuring my son, Michael on cello, and Tom Bogardus on guitar."

Sakalauskas plays a supporting role in Bach's Suite in B Minor for flute and strings, which showcases LSO flutist Robynn Rhodes. Works by Mozart, Vivaldi, Beethoven and Haydn are also on the program.

Some of the most popular Spanish music ever created will be presented by the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra on Nov. 16 including "Camen, Suite No. 1" by Bizet; Ravel's "Rapsodie Espagnole," and "Capriccio Espagnol" by Rimsky-Korsakov. Candelaria will perform Rodrigo's "Concierto De Aranjuez."

Born in Connecticut, Candelaria lives in Ontario, Canada, and is a member of the music faculties of Cambrian College and Huntington University in Ontario. He is the winner of several national and international competitions, and has performed extensively in the U.S., Europe, the Caribbean and South America.

"This is really upbeat, fast, exciting music," said Bonnie Holyoak, executive director of the PSO about the concert program. "I love guitar music, and I think the audience will love this music, too."

Featured soloist: Guitarist Victor Sakalauskas will perform with the Livonia Symphony's Chamber Orchestra in the auditorium of the Civic Center Library on Nov. 15.

BY SUE SUCHYTA
SPECIAL WRITER

Trinity House Theatre in Livonia is presenting the compelling drama, "Speak No Evil" by local playwright Mary Lewis.

Lewis' script is frighteningly real, and will strike a nerve with anyone who has ever endured the emotional stress of living with an alcoholic. The conversations spill spontaneously off the charters' tongues, and the scenes overflow with tension and raw emotion. Lewis uses flashbacks very effectively to let the siblings recall the unhappiness that shaped their childhood and still haunts them.

The emotional story of a dysfunctional family, "Speak No Evil" sets the stage for the disjointed relationships with its surreal set of crooked furniture and fractured impressionistic portraits of the characters. Lloyd Vanden Brink's artistic insight stunningly establishes the theme of the show's broken lives.

Director Susan Vanden Brink brought the cast together in a wonderful ensemble effort. As four siblings gather for their abusive alcoholic father's funeral, they remember in flashbacks the events that darkened their childhood. Each character moved very convincingly between their child and adult states as they relived the events that formed their adult personalities.

Guy Snyder was convincingly frightening as the alcoholic father John, and pulled off the drunken scenes well without resorting to stereotype. Angelique Clouse carried the weight of the world on her frail shoulders as the weary, long-suffering wife and mother.

Drama: Elizabeth Ladd Lee and P.W. Henry star in "Speak No Evil" at Trinity House Theatre in Livonia.

The four siblings interacted very believably, arguing and fighting like real kids in families tend to do. Alexis Kresta gave a stunning performance as Carol, the youngest daughter, sexually abused by her father. Her grief, rage and fear was portrayed with an intensity that struck a strong emotional chord.

P.W. Henry and Elizabeth Ladd Lee turned in strong performances as the older brother and sister. Derek Swancut, as the youngest sibling, was best when portraying his child persona. He created a very believable and vulnerable Danny.

The lighting played a subtle yet important role, with dramatic red lighting during key sequences. The blue glow from the ever-present, intentionally mind-numbing TV was an important touch. The entr'acte of television theme songs was an ironic inclusion, with the "Leave It To Beaver" theme song celebrating a family the polar opposite of the dysfunctional Smiths.

Artistic endeavors offer respite from tragedy

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

Recently I received a letter strongly attesting to the therapeutic value of art. Nancy Walls Smith of Plymouth wrote to say when she lost her 21-year old son Jason to an unexpected death last November, drawing classes with Pam Grossman at the Plymouth Cultural Center provided support and temporary respite from the pain.

Grossmann will speak about learning to draw at a meeting of 3 Cities Art Club 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 12 at the Plymouth Township Hall, Ann Arbor Road and Lilley.

"It's very therapeutic. When I'm drawing or painting, I get in a state of mind that I'm so engrossed I lose myself in the creative process. When I'm drawing, I'm not thinking about my personal tragedy or grieving," said Nancy Walls Smith, who wrote the humorous "Off the Wall column" for The Observer Newspapers between 1977 and 1987.

Although Smith had taken classes and done celebrity portraits for several years, since last November she became more involved with art than ever before. To keep herself busy, she began taking watercolor classes with Kay Rowe in Plymouth and co-chaired the Farmington Artists Club show in October. Smith credits Grossmann with being more than a teacher, though.

"Pam is not only a dedicated artist, a patient and terrific teacher, but she has also become a very special friend. She's seen me through some very rough times and is being especially supportive," wrote Smith.

While Grossmann, who also teaches gifted children at Stepping Stones in Farmington Hills, does not consider herself a therapist, she believes artists are special people.

"I love the people that come to my art classes. Artists seem to have such a sensitivity to other people's suffering that I think people feel comfortable sharing their sufferings and talk about things they might not ever talk to their families about. Art is a wonderful common ground for people," said Grossmann of Livonia.

In addition to teaching drawing for the last 12 years, Grossmann does commissioned drawings in pencil, pen and ink, and pastel including group portraits of area high school sports teams. She recently completed this year's Christmas card for Schoolcraft College.

"I'm going to tell people at the meeting that if they've always wanted to draw, almost anyone can learn. The key is starting simply," said Grossmann. "For the painters, because I know the club is mostly painters, I'm going to say that learning to draw is not starting over."

The public is invited to attend the 3 Cities Art Club meeting at which Grossmann will speak and demonstrate drawing. Admission is free. For more information call Sue Argiroff, (313) 422-8106.

NOVEMBER ARTISTS

The Livonia Arts Commission is hosting two shows this month instead of three because city hall is decorated for the holidays.

Look for decorative bird houses and tea time furnishings by Cindy Anolick in the second floor showcases at the Civic Center Library through Nov. 23. A former Livonia resident, Anolick founded the interior birdhouse business named The Nesting Place with her mother Pat Watson in 1992. In the library's fine arts gallery, the mixed media/acrylic painted furniture of Patricia Groenenboom is featured until Nov. 28. Groenenboom is an instructor in the fine arts department at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, until 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

REDFORD ARTISTS TO SHOW

John Murphy and Walter Cole will exhibit their work in "Functional Elegance" Nov. 8-30 at Gallery FunctionArt, 21 North Saginaw in Pontiac.

The public is invited to an opening reception 7-10 p.m. Friday, Nov. 8.

Jewelry, vessels and furniture are the focus of this group show. Murphy is a ceramic artist who teaches at Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Cole turns wood on a lathe to create his works. For information call the gallery, (810) 333-0333.

Piper Laurie makes 'The Grass Harp' sing

JOHN MONAGHAN

How rough were things on the set of "The Grass Harp?" Director Charles Matthau will cautiously tell you about the money pulling out several times during the production. Co-star Joe Don Baker says that suits from the studio would fly in and cut the doughnuts in half.

'It was a difficult adaptation because I wanted the film to be poetic but not precious.'

Charles Matthau
'Grass Harp' director

Two years after shooting, the movie has finally hit the screen. And while it fails on many levels, it boasts an ensemble cast made in heaven: Walter Matthau, Jack Lemmon, Sissy Spacek, Mary Steenburgen, Nell Carter, Roddy McDowall, and especially Piper Laurie, who deserves an Oscar nomination for a performance she originally didn't think she could handle.

"Dolly is a character that reads great on the page," the actress said in Los Angeles recently. "I saw her as a literary character and not a real one and so most of my effort was devoted to not condescending to an audience and making her as real as possible."

Based on a novella by Truman Capote, "The Grass Harp" concerns a pair of sisters (Laurie and Sissy Spacek) who live together in a small Southern town in the 1940s. While elder sister Verena is controlling and business-minded, Dolly is more spiritual, earthy, and kindhearted, "more eccentric than ditzy," according to Laurie.

The movie offers one of Laurie's rare big screen performances. A busy contract player in the 1950s, the Detroit-born actress stayed off the screen between her groundbreaking performances in "The Hustler" (1961) and "Carrie" (1976). She has steered clear of most parts before filling in on "The Grass Harp" with only ten days notice. The part was originally slated for Joan Plowright.

The movie reunites Laurie with Sissy Spacek, the famous mother-daughter team in "Carrie." "She didn't want to be mean to me in 'The Grass Harp,' " Laurie laughed, "because her behavior to Dolly was so horrible; so I'd have to remind her what I did to her in 'Carrie.' "

When Verena's bullying goes too far, Dolly, nephew Collin (Edward Furlong of "Terminator 2") and housekeeper/friend Catherine (Nell Carter) head for their favorite getaway: a tree house. They have callers, some friendly like white-haired Judge Cool (Walter Matthau), some reluctantly bullying, like Joe Don Baker's chicken farmer sheriff.

Director Charlie Matthau secured rights to Capote's semi-autobiographical story shortly after graduating from film school at the University of Southern California. He hooked up with veteran screenwriter Stirling Silliphant, who served not only as writer but co-producer.

Coming-of-age saga: Collin Fenwick (Edward Furlong), Dolly Talbo (Piper Laurie) and Judge Cool (Walter Matthau) in "The Grass Harp."

"It was a difficult adaptation because I wanted the film to be poetic but not precious," Matthau noted. "I needed a delicate balance. The words are so beautiful, but a lot of that is in the narration and I didn't want too much narration in the film."

In some ways "The Grass Harp" succeeds. The music may swell a bit too much, the heartstrings might get tired from all that tugging, but John Alonzo's cinematography captures the atmosphere of lazy days and small Southern towns that Capote was so good at creating.

Matthau personally scouted locations before ending up in a small town just below Montgomery, Ala. "We went to Monroeville where the story actually takes place, where Capote grew up, and it has become too modern," Matthau said.

The script stretches a bit to get Jack Lemmon (as a fast-talking salesman) and Walter Matthau in a scene together since they never meet in the original story. He has them in a brief exchange in Roddy McDowall's barber shop just to rekindle that old "Odd Couple" chemistry.

Other changes in the story seem better justified, cleaning up what many see as "a weak third act," according to Matthau.

According to the story, the Grass Harp is the sound made by the souls that have left us as the wind whistles through the tall grass. While the movie's own power to resonate (or stay on screen) may be weak, Piper Laurie's performance may still be heard around Oscar-time.

Area singer gets national raves

The Detroit Music Awards' reigning "Best Acoustic Vocalist" has released an album that's bound to push her further into the spotlight.

Jan Krist has already received a rave review from Dirty Linen Magazine and Billboard Magazine's Bob Darden described "Curious" as "music that matters from an artist with a soul the size of the Pontiac Silverdome. She writes incredibly insightful lyrics. Her music lilts and sings and dances and lives. Her voice touches something deep inside me."

The nation is just now learning what Detroit-area residents already know – that Krist is a star on the rise.

Recording "Curious," the latest release on Nashville's Silent Planet Records, was a totally different experience for Krist. Her first two albums "Decapitated Society," which is going to be released under the name "Someone," and "Wing and a Prayer" were recorded with friends on a shoestring budget.

For this one Krist recruited producers Jim Dickinson (Ry Cooder, Texas Tornados, The Spin Doctors, Rolling Stones), and Newton Carter (Vigilantes of Love, Billy Pilgrim) to help her out.

"I actually had more than $2,000 to do a record with," said Krist, a Royal Oak resident. "The first two records I did really cheaply at home with all Detroit players on them. The third one I did in Georgia and I used people who play with Vigilantes of Love."

"I think it's like anything else. You can make a really fine folk record for a small amount of money and you don't have to worry about production as much, but if you want to involve other kinds of instrumentation and do more of a band-oriented record you really need good a better studio and you need good engineers," said Krist who considers herself to be more of a singer/songwriter than a folk musician.

Among the guest artists on the album are former Vigilantes David Labreyere on bass and Travis McNabb, who now plays with Better Than Ezra, on drums. "Curious" also features the work of keyboardist Randall Bramlett (Traffic, Steve Winwood, Sea Level), and engineer Don McCollister (Indigo Girls).

Like most artists, Krist began her career singing in bars "and things like that for a couple of year. I've been playing at the Ark and different coffeehouses and concert clubs for about six years." She moved on to showcase venues on the advice of a friend.

"An old friend of mine said to me that playing in a bar was like rearranging deck chairs on the Titanic, and I thought it was really true."

Krist captured the critics' hearts with her first record, "Decapitated Society," which was released in 1993. Billboard's Darden made it Critics' Choice for 1993. Her 1995 follow-up "Wing and a Prayer" got a spotlight review in the magazine. Part of her success is due to her vivid songwriting.

"I think that I think better on paper and so I've always had this habit of writing things out, journaling. Usually I'll just have one thought that kind of catches me if I'm listening to the radio or listening to the news – I listen to NPR (National Public Radio) quite a bit – or I'll be driving down the street and I'll see something that looks really odd," Krist explained.

"Like the other day I was listening to something and what the person said created an image in my mind of somebody casting, skipping their soul across the water like a pebble. So I'll get this one image in my head then I'll try to paint that out in words. Usually it's a very visual thing. I see an image in my mind and I try to relate that lyrically."

"Curious" is a much more hopeful album than the previous two, thanks in part, she said, to her recent marriage to Alan Finkbeiner, the drummer in her band.

"Falling in love" was certainly inspirational, she said. "Some of the songs like 'Mercy' is about that, and so are some of the other songs. This record is a little more hopeful than my other records were."

Jan Krist celebrates the release of "Curious" with performance 8 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 12, at The Ark, 316 S. Main St., Ann Arbor. Tickets are $9; $8 members, students, seniors. For more information, call (313) 761-1451.

Misc: Speaking of Better Than Ezra, McNabb and his band will perform at Clutch Cargo's, formerly the Sanctum, on Saturday, Nov. 9, in support of their major-label debut "Friction, Baby." Tickets for the all-ages show, which also features Satchel and James Hall, are $12.50 in advance. Doors open early at 5:30 p.m. The club is located at 65 E. Huron St. in Pontiac. For more information, call (810) 333-2368. ... Robert Bradley's Blackwater Surprise has hit the road with God Street Wine. The tour will take them to California, Utah, Colorado, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Missouri, Illinois, and Detroit's St. Andrew's Hall on Thursday, Nov. 14. For more information about the St. Andrew's show, call (313) 961-MELT.

If you have a question or comment for Christina Fuoco, you can write to her c/o The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft Road, Livonia, or via e-mail at cfuoco@aol.com. You can also leave a message for her by calling (313) 953-2047, mailbox 2130 on a Touch-Tone phone.

Celebrating release: The Detroit Music Awards' reigning "Best Acoustic Vocalist" Jan Krist celebrates the release of her latest CD "Curious" (Silent Planet).

"A FUNNY, FEEL-GOOD 10! You'll have a smile on your face and a tear in your eye at this happy, heart-warming family comedy that's heaven sent for the holiday season."

Livonia's Archie's plans major remodeling project

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Look for changes in the coming months at Archie's on Plymouth Road, a popular family restaurant in Livonia. "The last time we remodeled was 10 years ago," said Tom Palushaj of Farmington Hills, who with his brother George, a Livonia resident, has owned the restaurant since 1981. "A lot of franchises are coming to town. We're remodeling to stay competitive. When people go out to eat, they want ambiance."

There's no secret to the brothers' success – "We work very hard," said Tom. And they listen to their customers.

"We're always looking to improve," said Tom. "Anytime you think you're at the peak, that's when you have a problem. You have to stay on top of it."

Archie's will have a brand new look. It will be roomier; there will be new wall coverings, booths, and tables. The brothers are working with an interior decorator to help coordinate colors and other changes.

Architect Robert J. Tobin of Tobin Associates in Troy redesigned the exterior of the building to create a more upscale, urban contemporary look. The bathrooms will be remodeled. The parking lot was expanded, and the kitchen will be, too, making it possible for the restaurant to bake its own bread.

In February Archie's got a liquor license, but they still maintain a family atmosphere. There's a small service bar, and Archie's now offers draft and bottle beer and wines by the glass and carafe, but the emphasis remains where it's always been – on the food.

"We don't want to fight success," explained Tom. "Our menu will pretty much stay the same. We have permits to work during the winter months and hope to complete the renovations by August." Archie's will stay open while the work is in progress.

Everything is homemade with care. Regular customers know what daily dinner specials to expect – Monday is meatloaf, and stuffed peppers; Tuesdays, pepper steak and Baked Salisbury Steak; Wednesday, city chicken, tenderloin tips; Thursday, stuffed cabbage rolls; Friday, fish & chips and macaroni and cheese, to name a few. Luncheon specials are served 11 a.m . to 3 p.m.

"On Saturdays we make a Chicken Florentine that's out of this world," said Tom. "On Sundays we have Swiss Steak."

"We start making soups at 5 a.m.," said Tom. Chicken noodle and French Onion soup are on the menu every day; Other soups such as split pea and minestrone are offered during the week.

Whether it's breakfast, lunch or dinner, you're sure to find something to your liking on the menu at Archie's.

Fish & Chips are a big seller on Fridays. Archie's famous Fish & Chips is made with Icelandic cod. Pan fried fresh lake perch is also a popular item.

Steaks, roast chicken, and other American favorites are offered, along with Greek specialties – spinach pie, mousaka, souvlaki, and Italian favorites – spaghetti, mostaccioli, baked lasagna, and Veal Parmesan.

Prices are affordable: The most expensive item on the menu is a 14-ounce broiled T-Bone steak for $10.95. Entrees start at $5.99 for Southern-Style Fried Chicken and are served with choice of soup, salad, or cole slaw and bread basket.

Archie's is a family restaurant run by a family that enjoys working and being together. "We are very family oriented, and family means everything to us," said Tom, who works mostly behind the scenes in the kitchen with brothers Kola, Pasko and Mike. George works in the dining room making sure everything is running smoothly.

"I started working restaurants when I was 12," said Tom. "I even worked with Jeffrey Baldwin in the field. I learned in the kitchen. That's the best way to learn. Practice makes perfect. It's better than learning from books."

Wethersfield includes extras at base price

Several features that other builders normally offer as options are included at standard price at Wethersfield, an attached condominium community in Canton.

Those include air conditioning, a pair of skylights and a laundry room cabinet.

All units also include two-car, attached garage, first-floor laundry, oven, refrigerator, dishwasher and microwave oven in the kitchen, an upstairs loft area, plus a basement.

"We decided here to shoot the works, give them everything," said Curtis Kime, the Southfield-based builder. "If they have an appliance they want to bring with them, they can ... get money back."

Some 155 units, five to a building, are planned for the 30-acre site at Palmer and Haggerty.

Three floor plans are available.

Prices range from $133,990 for a two-bedroom unit with 1,450 square feet to $146,900 for a three bedroom of 1,475 square feet.

"We try to do a nice design, provide open spaces," Kime said. "I don't think this is as crowded as other places. We have about five units to an acre, others have 10."

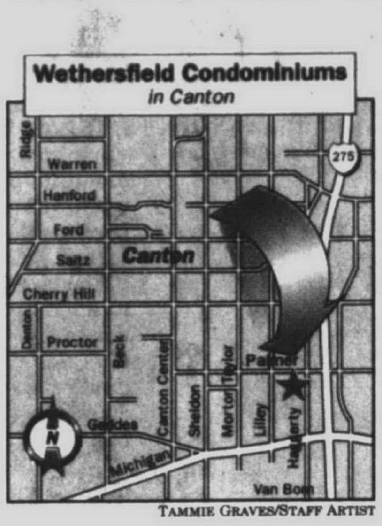
"You feel like it's country out here, but you're only five minutes from the expressway," said Linda Rix, sales manager. "There is a lot of wildlife around here. You have all the restaurants and shops you could want on Ford Road.

"People really like the site," she continued. "They comment a lot on the construction and the little items, things we do, other builders don't. Lights in the bedroom and skylights are standard – making good use and sense of the space we have."

"We just think we build good quality for the dollar," Kime said.

Models have been constructed of all three floor plans.

The Ashton, 1,475 square feet, situates the master suite with a shower and walk-in closet on the main floor.



TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

This plan also features a great room with sloped ceiling and kitchen/eating nook on the first floor.

Base price is $146,900.

The Newport, two bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths of 1,450 square feet, offers a den or formal dining room off the main foyer and an open great room and kitchen/nook across the back of the house.

The master bedroom with cathedral ceiling has a shower and walk-in closet. A second bedroom and a full bath with combination tub and shower also are upstairs.

Base price is $133,900.

The Chelsea, 1,450 square feet, shares several features of the Newport.

The main floor has a den/dining room option, family room and kitchen with island and eating nook. However, the stairway to the second floor is unobtrusively off the corner of the family room as opposed to the front door.

The upstairs is substantially different.

The master has a tub/shower combination and two wall closets. The second bedroom contains a shower, vanity and toilet within the room itself as opposed to a separate bathroom off the hallway.

The Chelsea can be had for $135,990 with a prime location fronting on one of three ponds on the property.

Popular options which most buyers include are fireplace ($3,200 for brick, $3,500 ceramic) and a deck ($2,600).

Wethersfield is serviced by city water and sewers. It's within the Plymouth-Canton school boundaries.

The property tax rate currently is $30.97 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $147,000 unit would pay about $2,275 in taxes the first year.

The monthly association fee, which includes water, trash collection, grass cutting and snow removal, is $90.

Marge and Paul Zaya bought a Chelsea in Wethersfield.

"My husband wants to retire real soon. He wants to be on water," Marge said. "I looked around at a lot of units. What we could afford, they were shacks.

"I happened to stop in here. I noticed the pond, ducks. I got my husband. We put down a deposit. We love it.

"We closed off the dining room into a den," Marge added. "I like the great room, the loft up there, the windows. We liked the way it looks on the outside. We like the look of all the brick."

Joan and Eugene Morrison moved into an Ashton after living in a house in Garden City for 23 years.

"The master on the main floor was the selling point for us," Joan said. "My husband's health isn't well.

"The location for us was good," she added. "I have an office in Livonia and Ann Arbor."

"It's very spacious, very open," Joan Morrison said of the unit in general. "It has three bedrooms, and I've converted one to an office. We have a deck. It overlooks the pond.

"They made our transition very easy," she said. "Also, we found we have great neighbors."

The sales office at Wethersfield, (313) 397-9492, is open 1-6 p.m. weekdays, 1-5:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, closed Thursdays.

Wethersfield offerings: Buyers at this condominium development in Canton get an attached garage, skylights and all major appliances for their purchase price.

FHA mortgages continue to be good deal

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

The Mortgage Timeline

In this segment of my column, I look back and compare mortgage interest rates and mortgage trends over the last 25 years. This week's Timeline question is: Which 27-month period had the most stable interest rates where the rate never went up or down more than one full percent during the whole period? Choices are: April 1971-June 1973; February 1976-April 1978 or May 1987-July 1989. (Answers appear in next week's column.)

Today's mortgage trend looks at how VA mortgages have changed. For years, VA set the interest rate and discount points that lenders charged to eligible veterans and also required the seller to pay the points. This has changed over the last few years to where the lender decides what the interest rate will be and what points are charged. if any. Now either the buyer or seller on a VA mortgage can pay the discount points.

To buy a new home:

FHA mortgages continue to be a viable option to home ownership. This is true even more since FHA guidelines have increased the amount you are allowed to mortgage. The maximum FHA mortgage (not sales price) in Oakland County has been increased to $134,900 and to $135,800 in Washtenaw county. The previous maximums were $124,000 in Oakland and $126,350 for Washtenaw. Wayne and Macomb remain at $116,850. Livingston is still at $126,350. I want to emphasize the word "mortgage amount" because some people confuse this with the sales price. This is important because the sales price get you looking at the correct price range of homes.

For example, recently, while interviewing new clients who were perfect for an FHA mortgage, they wanted me to figure out their maximum mortgage amount that they would qualify for under FHA. This would give the couple and their Realtor a price range to begin looking in. They happened to be looking in the Oakland County area. After the interview, I determined that their maximum mortgage was approximately $130,000. I told them that the sales price range this would translate to would be $135,000-$140,000. The new increase in FHA mortgage maximums came at the right time for them. They were putting down less than 5 percent, and the money they were using was a gift from their parents. This would not have worked under any other available conventional loan program. They had good jobs and good credit but just had not been able to save enough of their own money for the downpayment. The new increase will help more people to obtain a little nicer home. This could also allow them to stay in the home longer because they were able to get that little extra square footage or that extra bathroom.

Mortgage Timeline answer from last week:

Since 1984, the highest one-year adjustable rate was actually in July 1984, when the rate reached 12.25 percent, containing a 6-percent lifetime cap of 18.25 percent. After the 1980 election, the mortgage rates took their biggest increase the following year (since keeping track started in 1971). The rates had increased by more than 4 percent from 14.21 percent in November 1980 to a 30-year fixed rate of 18.45 percent in October 1981, the highest point to date since 1971.

Give your home, business an elegant look

The gingerbread trim, that gave a look of elegance and beauty to many turn-of-the-century homes and buildings, is now staging a nationwide comeback.

Victorian style trim, for both exterior and interior use, is once again adorning porches, outlining roofs, accenting hallways and supporting mantels. Lacy fretwork and intricate carvings, based upon 19th century designs, are even being used as wall or panel or cabinet door decoration.

Products readily available include doors, mantels, gable treatments, corbels, brackets, spandrel and balustrades and rails, gazebos, along with highly decorative moldings.

A complete source for authentic Victorian Millwork, including custom designing, is Cumberland Woodcraft Company, Inc., Post Office Drawer 609, Carlisle, PA 17013. A full color catalog, with over 175 color pictures and design ideas, along with a price list, is available for $5.

Futons make the most of space in stylish fashion

(MPS) – If it looks like a sofa and it feels like a sofa, then it must be a sofa, right?

Not necessarily. It could be the latest generation of futon furnishings. Today's upscale futon designs bear little resemblance to the futons of years past. What's new?

For starters, stylish new frames feature upholstered arms. The new designs combine a look often associated with traditional furniture with the convenience and flexibility of futon furnishings. Also new are futon covers inspired by the ever-popular slipcover. Designed to give furniture a fresh, casual look, the covers drape to the floor, hiding the front of the wooden frame. And, no matter what frame or futon cover you choose, coordinating accessories – including window coverings, lamp shades, and pillows of all sizes with trendy buttons and tassels – are a must.

"A style-conscious consumer is always on the lookout for things that are fashionable and functional," explains Katlean de Monchy, president, Can Do Tours, who has appeared on such shows as "CBS This Morning" and "Our Home" (Lifetime). "These new style choices will allow even more consumers to enjoy the many benefits of futons."

Ideal for making the most of your space, futon frames quickly and easily convert from sitting to sleeping places and back again. A den or home office that includes a futon instantly can be converted into a guest room. And, futon covers make redecorating a snap. If Junior spills juice at snack time or you want a decorating change for each new season, changing the futon cover will give any room a clean, fresh look.

"When it comes to their homes, people want pieces that can stand up to everyday use but will look good, too," says de Monchy. "Futon furnishings are a natural choice."

For a free brochure including more information on futon furnishings and tips on choosing the futon that is right for you, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Futon Association International, Dept. M2, P.O. Box 6548, Chico, CA 95927.

Winter warnings could be lifesavers

JOE GAGNON

Yesterdays drive home from Tawas, Mich., brought to mind some thoughts for this column. The ice I observed on the edges of ponds alongside the highway made me think of my young life being raised in northern Ontario. The four inches of snow which covered the trunk of a car passing me gave out a ring of a new Michigan winter season. I thought of the many happy times that people will enjoy this year and how some will not be so fortunate.

If I could just write a list of things to be on the lookout for, and if some of the readers could follow my warnings or advice, then my thoughts would not be wasted.

1. The period of time when accidents occur at an extreme rate is that first time it snows and freezes. We have been accustomed to summer driving and we fail to realize that our reflexes must change for winter use. Before you take off on that first day, why not drive around the neighborhood a few times to get the feel of things. The next time you're at the store, purchase a bag of kitty litter to use the next time you're stuck in a parking lot. It really does help create great traction when you throw a few handfuls under the wheels.

2. Shut off the water supply inside the house which leads to the outdoor spigots. You would be surprised at how much damage is reported each year by frozen pipes leading to the garden hose. The plumbing industry is kept very busy each winter taking care of these unnecessary freeze ups.

3. Clean out the clothes dryer vent line which directs the air to the outside. Make sure you are not using that plastic or tin foil vent line because it can be very dangerous. Take an old toothbrush and clean the hinges on the flapper door outside. When that little door fails to close all the way, there is a lot of cold air drawn into your laundry room. The end result is a waste of energy because the dryer drum is now ice cold and you add 10 minutes of operation to dry a load of clothes.

4. Use a candy thermometer and make sure the temperature of water in your washing machine is at 100 degrees when you set it for warm water wash. You are not going to wash properly unless it is and you can adjust the temperature by closing off the cold water faucet until it's just right. Remember, the cold water entering your house is much colder in winter than it is in summer.

5. When the weather forecast predicts temperatures below 0, open any and all cupboard doors which are around your sinks etc. This allows heat circulation in areas that might need it most.

6. To all my senior citizen friends and readers, I have a special winter warning or advice for you – How many of you will suffer the agony and pain of a broken hip this year. Agony is described in the dictionary as "a death struggle" and in all too many cases, that's exactly what it is for many. When my parents were alive, I made sure that they wore a pair of muck lugs that had enough thread to stop on an ice rink. You ladies out there who think you legs won't look nice because you are wearing a big pair of boots, remember this. It's better to be smiling standing up, than crying laying down.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor," available at area bookstores.

Divide plants and multiply benefits

MARTY FIGLEY

It's still not too late to divide some of the plants in your garden and by doing this job now, they will have time to establish themselves before really cold weather arrives. The plants will benefit from division; they will be rejuvenated and healthier, and excessive growth will be checked.

Don't divide the plants if the weather is extremely cold or wet. Those plants with fibrous roots, mat- and clump-forming rock garden plants, and clump-forming (stachys, chives) herbs and those with rhizomes (i.e. French tarragon) can be divided now. Wait until spring to divide irises, peonies, and poppies and other fleshy-rooted perennials.

If you have noticed fewer blooms, or if a plant has become woody and it looks as though it is dying in the center, or if it looks crowded, divide it.

Always discard diseased, damaged and old woody root parts and divide the remaining portion of the plant into several smaller ones.

Before putting the divided plants into the bed, clean up any weeds and improve the soil by adding compost or fertilizer as required. After firming the new plants into their desired location, water well and then wait for next year's growth for improved performance.

Use a fork to dig around the plants, being careful not to damage the roots, and set them aside. Cut through the woody crown with a spade or knife to separate the roots, then divide the plants into several sections by gently pulling them away from the main plant. Each section should have new shoots. Cut the old top growth away and replant the new sections.

Here are several tricks that may help. If a plant has matted-fibrous roots, such as Hemerocallis, use two forks back to back, placing them in the center of the plant and with a downward motion, prying them apart. Plants such as asters or Rudbeckia can be divided by separating single stems that grow at the edges of the crown and will have their own root system.

Replant the divisions as soon as possible so that they don't dry out. If, however, you won't be able to replant within two hours, dip the plants quickly in water and put them in a sealed plastic bag in a shady area.

Keep the soil evenly moist for the next several weeks as the new plants establish themselves. After the soil freezes, mulch these new divisions to prevent the roots from heaving during our cold winter weather.

Now while you're out in the brisk air, cut the perennials down leaving six inches of stem at the base. This will trap the snow and help to insulate the plant roots. Remove the remaining stems next spring.

Beautiful grasses and other plants with interesting shapes or seedheads can be left to provide winter interest, and then cut down when warm weather again arrives. Leave the foliage on the plants that aren't fully hardy and remove it also, in the spring.

Multi-stemmed shrubs can also be divided now by pushing a sharp spade down to sever the roots, which allows you to choose just how much needs to be divided. Another method is to dig the complete shrub and saw the roots apart before replanting. Study the shrubs carefully before cutting, so as to get the best-looking divisions.

The advantage of fall divisions is to give the plants plenty of time to generate more roots in autumn than in the spring when buds are opening and the shrubs' energy is focused on that phase.

Make decor both tasty and tasteful

NAOMI STONE LEVY

Where did this last year go? It is difficult to comprehend that another year has passed, and we are ready to plan for home holiday decor again. Do we get out all of our old trimmings and try to update them? Or shall we put on our thinking caps and dream up a new approach?

We have just finished with Halloween, and are tired of the pumpkin. The ever-present turkey isn't to be ignored. Cranberries have to be included. I often use Styrofoam forms as a base for decorations. A ball covered with multitudes of cranberries can be ornamental. These may be piled atop one another, or interspersed between gourds for other effects. Experiment! Somehow I relate better to one item, repeated again and again. Gourds are significant to the Thanksgiving holiday, and they are esthetic as well.

Thanksgiving is such a special family occasion that I tend to think "togetherness." The table centerpiece should be at once edible and decorative. If your table top is handsome, don't cover it. Or if you prefer a cloth, try to use a simple one, without a colored pattern. Placing a piece of mirror underneath will double the look.

Begin with four specimen pineapples. Stand one up on its end with the top intact. Spike onto its prongs some maraschino cherries. Cut off the tops of the other three and hollow each out, using the tops as further decoration. Group them around the first one. Heap up each inner with only one kind of fruit – such as watermelon in one, cantaloupe in the second and the cut-up pineapple in the third. The three colors will be wonderful. Use three shot glasses to hold colored toothpicks; set them between each pineapple, making it convenient to spear a piece of your favorite fruit. You can enhance the entire setting with lovely greens and palm leaves.

If you are going to serve buffet style you will want to set up small individual tables for "sit-down" eating. These could be places to group the gourds. A brass candlestick in each center will add a glow.

Additional holiday decorating with panache is in order. Visit an outdoor garden shop and find great greens that will be tasteful for both your indoor and outdoor schemes. Ropes of pine needles and cones and ribbons will be mesmerizing. Holly berries and their dark green foliage can be found. These are unparalleled in impact. Use them to advantage. In previous columns I have extolled the praises of brass candlesticks. In spite of being repetitive I encourage you to use as many as you can beg or borrow to add to your own. What a festive air! All of the preceding exude holiday charm.

Sunflower growers have a field day

BY MARTY FIGLEY
Special Writer

Another successful sunflower contest has come to an end and we are pleased to announce that 81 of you entered. We wish we could have visited with all of you, but time restrictions made that impossible. You are all winners in our eyes and we hope you enjoyed growing your sunflowers as much as we enjoyed sponsoring the contest.

At Home editor Mary Klemic and I visited the 12 finalists and now announce the winners.

Tallest sunflower: first place – 12 feet nine inches, Matthew Schriber, 8, of Livonia; second place – 12 feet five inches, John Shurge of Garden City; third place – 12 feet 1/2-inch, Susan Dyszynski of Rochester Hills.

Largest seedhead: first place – 17-1/2 inches, Pauline LeBrun of Westland; second place – 17 inches, Brian Spehar of Garden City; third place – 15-1/2 inches, Christine Koppy of Redford.

In addition to the winners, other sunflower growers were successful with tall plants and large seedheads. Some of the winners were contenders in both categories.

Kevin Dean Groth, 9-1/2, of Bloomfield Hills grew several sunflowers with the largest one 11 feet 9-1/2 inches tall. He also had one with a seedhead at 14 inches, which tied with that of Margaret Plummer of Farmington Hills, who also grew a plant 11 feet 6-1/4 inches tall. Christine Koppy grew many plants and the tallest was 11 feet 7-1/4 inches, while John Shurge had a seedhead that was 15 inches across.

Mary Randinitis' Dearborn sunflower had a seedhead that was 15 inches across. Carolyn Gansen's Livonia sunflower measured 14-3/4 inches, and Katie Olsen's of Rochester was 13-1/2 inches.

Matthew found his winning sunflower quite heavy and said he "didn't do anything special to grow it." John planted his second place sunflower near the air conditioner where distilled water watered it, fertilized with Vigoro 15-30-15 four times and mulched with grass clippings. He found a cardinal eating the seeds of the sunflower and cut it down; after we measured it he was going to put it back on a pole for the cardinal to enjoy.

"Plant something near a water spigot," John suggested to gardeners.

Susan planted the third place "Moonwalker," which, as well as growing tall, grew 11 small flowers, the largest being only about four inches.

"I used Milorganite two times and depended on whatever rain we had," she said.

Pauline's sunflower head was so heavy she used a bungee cord to attach it to the fence and roof. She used Miracle-Gro three times and watered regularly. After the plants sprouted she transplanted several or gave them away.

"I kept one to nurture," she said. "I'll give seeds to my children and their families to plant next year."

The Brian Spehar family enjoyed their sunflowers.

"I put mulched leaves on the ground in the fall and rototilled them in the spring," he said. "I planted them on the first of May and they grew with the corn."

The squirrels and birds attacked the seeds so he cut the head off the plant. Seeds will be saved for next year.

Christine and Jeff Koppy live next door to 1994's second place winners (the Cartiers), so thought they might have a chance in the contest. They planted a long row of sunflowers that made a wonderful privacy screen. They used Monstera-Grow, an organic fertilizer, two times and watered every day.

"It's the first time I've used organic fertilizer and boy, what a difference," he said.

Their two boys love to eat the seeds, as do the birds and squirrels who "are having a field day."

Kevin's sunflower experience began with an anticipated Monarch butterfly garden at Conant school. Students took the heads to a class contest to see which one had the most seeds.

"I watered when they needed it, when no rain came and it was exciting to watch them grow," Kevin said.

Several contestants started the seeds in preschool or kindergarten.

Honorable mention goes to Edgar and Maida Peabody of Westland, who discovered a determined sunflower that grew out of a crack in their cement driveway.

The plant grew to about eight feet tall and had from 50 to 60 blooms on it. Edgar said he feeds the birds both the black and the striped sunflower seeds, and doesn't know which kind produced the plant. The neighbors as well as the Peabodys have enjoyed the plant. The Peabodys said they were "going to leave it for the birds 'till frost or until something happens to it."

We are delighted with the enthusiasm of all the people who entered the contest. Those people we visited shared their winning strategies.

"I used Miracle-Gro" was repeated most often. "Fertilizer and TLC." "Water, water, water." "Compost helps." "A lot of sun." "Love." One contestant used "a handful of peat moss with each seed."

Although some of the sunflowers had begun to droop and seeds had been eaten, our winners agreed that our timing for the contest was just right. The plants were allowed to reach their full maturity and that is most important.

As promised, here is a cookie recipe using the kernels of the sunflower seeds:

SUNFLOWER CRISPIES
Makes three dozen
1/2 cup margarine or butter, softened
1/2 cup white sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/3 cup vegetable oil
1 egg
2 cups white flour
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/2 cup roasted, salted sunflower kernels
OPTIONAL: 1 teaspoon of cinnamon, or cardamon, or coriander

In medium mixing bowl, beat together first four ingredients. Add egg and beat well for two to three minutes. Sift together next three ingredients; stir into creamed mixture. Stir in sunflower kernels. Drop dough onto parchment lines or ungreased cookie sheet with teaspoon. Bake in preheated 375-degree oven for 10 to 12 minutes. The cookies will melt in your mouth.

Third place: Jeff and Christine Koppy of Redford show their sunflower seedhead that measured 15-1/2 inches.

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

For most of us 40 something (and up) – computers are not a comfortable tool. After all, we didn't grow up with major technology – we were the baby boomers ... love, peace, the Beatles, beaded headbands, and bell bottom pants. My highest form of technology was an 8-track tape deck (now there's an antique!) that sat proudly on the front seat of my parents car, ready to be loaded with the newest Lovin Spoonful's tape.

The kids of today, not only know how to easily use computers, the worldwide Internet is only a phone call and a 4-digit security code away. My soon to be 15-year-old son, can't believe his mother is so inept once she sits behind that keyboard (then there's his father the artist, who doesn't even know how to turn the thing on!). Of course not all adults are as computer challenged as I am. Internet, Cyberspace and Websites are everyday typical language – and why not jump on the proverbial computer bandwagon – it's fascinating!

The BIG Surf Cyber Cafe is a good indication of what is to come – located in downtown Birmingham, this cafe doesn't serve up the finest cuisine to be had (although you can carry in food, have a great cup of joe and add a delicious "sweet" to your tab), what they are serving up is a delightful environment equipped with state of the art computers (12 computers – Macs and Pentium pc's) with the ability to surf the net with high speed digital connections. This spot is great for meetings, parties, lunch or an evening of entertainment (on site-trainers available for assistance) – seats 40 comfortably. What a great spot to have a party – food can be catered in – no on site cooking. The BIG Surf Cyber Cafe is at 750 South Woodward – weekends open until midnight. Call to inquire at (810) 433-3135.

MYSTERY PUFF SANDWICHES

2/3 cup of all purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
2/3 cup water
5 1/3 tablespoons butter
4 large or extra large eggs
Non-stick cooking spray

In a small glass bowl, combine the flour and the salt.

In a large saucepan, bring the water and the butter to a rolling boil. As soon as the water reaches that rolling boil, add all of the flour-salt mixture - and mix well and steady with a wooden spoon. When the mixture pulls away from the saucepan and forms a ball (this should take approximately one minute), remove the dough mixture from the saucepan onto a cutting board to cool down.

Preheat the oven to 425 degrees F.

When the saucepan has cooled down, replace the dough - add 3 eggs, one at a time - beating well after each addition. With the fourth egg, break it into a cup, and beat it with a fork. Add this egg a teaspoon at a time until the dough mixture is to the consistency, that it will drop from a spoon.

Drop the dough mixture by full-tablespoons (medium sized mounds) onto a lightly sprayed cookie sheet - keep 1 1/2 inches apart.

Bake for 20 minutes, or until golden brown - remove from the oven and pierce each puff with a small sharp knife (to release the steam). Turn off your oven - return the puffs to the oven for 10 minutes.

Remove the completed puffs from the oven - let cool down.

For the filling:

The filling can be anything from simple tuna salad to a curried fish pate. Chicken-salad, egg salad laden with green olives, turkey salad, ham salad, a soft cheese laden with chopped veggies and/or smoked salmon, or even a vegetable-pasta salad would be delicious in these puffs.

When ready to fill - slice off the tops of each puff and fill generously with your desired filling.

Cooks note: These puffs (before filling) can be frozen, or stored in an airtight container.

BRITISH SPOTTED BUNS

Yield: 16 buns
4 teaspoons ground cinnamon
4 teaspoons ground mace
2 teaspoons ground allspice
1/2 teaspoon ground cloves

Basic Bun Ingredients:
1 pound bread flour, warmed (350 degree oven 6-8 min.)
1 teaspoon fine sea salt
2 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons bun spice
3/4 cup warm water
2 teaspoons fast rise yeast
2 large eggs, room temperature
1/4 cup softened unsalted butter or margarine
1/4 cup (or a bit more) currants or raisins

Glaze Ingredients:
1 egg, plus 1/4 teaspoor salt beaten
4 tablespoons apricot jam, heated and sieved

1. Sift the warm flour, sugar and spice into a large bowl. In a glass measuring cup, combine the warm water and yeast – stir to dissolve. Make a well in the flour mixture and add the yeast liquid, eggs, butter and dried fruit – place some of the flour over the liquid and let sit about 5 minutes (bubbles should appear).

2. Combine the ingredients and turn out onto a work surface. The dough will appear sticky – do not add extra flour. Rub hands with flour and knead dough in a rocking motion or process in a food processor until smooth.

3. When dough is smooth, place in a lightly oiled bowl – cover and let rise in a draft-free area for 1 1/2 hours or until doubled.

4. Turn dough out onto a floured board and press dough gently – do not knead. Break the dough off into golf ball sized pieces – shape into balls with your hands.

5. Line a cookie sheet with non-stick parchment and place the buns with the beaten egg glaze.

6. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees.

7. Place baking sheet with buns in a warm place and let rise again until double in size (about 1 hour).

8. Bake the buns for 20 minutes – remove from the oven and brush with boiling sieved apricot jam.

Cooks note: These buns are wonderful on their own – you can serve them with cream, cream cheese, butter (margarine), honey butter or nut butter if desired. Make sure you have plenty of coffee, tea, or hot cocoa.

When fire strikes, here's what to do

Q: A member of our family had extensive fire damage to their home and it has been an ongoing problem to figure out everything they need to do to get the necessary repairs done. I have also known others that have had other types of damage. Could you clarify the process and the steps the homeowner needs to take in this type of situation?

A: Many people are unaware of what they can expect when they find themselves in these situations. You need to know what to expect, your responsibilities and your rights.

What to expect: Insurance companies are corporations and are in business to make money. Expect your insurance company to handle the claim as a business transaction. Your insurance agent has absolutely nothing to do with your claim. He can direct you to your insurance company's claim center so you can report your claim. The insurance company will assign an adjuster to your claim and their job is to represent the insurance company and save them money by minimizing your claim as much as possible.

What insurance companies don't tell you is many policies have coverage for temporary housing, additional living expenses, replacement of your personal property and many such items most people would think of. Making sure you read your policy.

Your responsibilities: There are responsibilities that you must attend to before and during your insurance claim. The most important is to secure your home. Every insurance company requires that you secure your home against any future damage by weather and vandals. You must also keep your liability coverage on your home up to date. You will have to call your insurance company and report your claim. Try to find out who will be the adjuster for your claim and their telephone number. You should also ask for a claim number. This number will be your file number during the processing of your insurance claim.

You will have to meet with the insurance adjuster at your home. Your insurance adjuster should explain that it is your reponsibility to itemize your personal property that was damaged or destroyed by the peril.

Your rights: Yes, you have a number of significant rights when interacting with your insurance adjuster, and your insurance company and insurance adjuster are aware of them all.

The most important right is to have your home and personal property made whole again and not have the insurance adjuster try to minimize your loss.

You should never allow your insurance adjuster to write the primary estimate. Never give your adjuster the authority to "send you their contract" to write an estimate or begin work.

You have the right to fully understand the total scope of all reconstruction repairs that are being paid for.

Figurine represents Art Deco style

BY NANCY AND FRANK BOOS
Special Writers

Dear Nancy and Frank:
This 14-inch high figurine has been in my husband's family approximately 50 years. The body and base are bronze and the face, hands and feet are ivory. The base is inscribed "A. Gory."
Janet,
Bloomfield Hills

Dear Janet:

What you have is a category of sculpture called chryselephantine (bronze and ivory), which was made very popular during the period in art called Art Deco. Actually, this type of sculpture became synonymous with Art Deco, even though the form was a copy of the ancient classical Greek sculptures done in gold and ivory and sometimes precious stones.

More often than not, an art movement is merely a revival of a previous movement or style. Not so with Art Deco, which has its own distinctive look.

Many believed the Art Deco movement to be a repudiation of the short-lived Art Nouveau movement that preceded it. Not true. Art Deco was a natural transition from Art Nouveau, which was considered by some to be too fancy, fussy and with too much superfluous ornamentation, and Modernism, which held the tenet that function should precede form. Art Deco was the bridge between these two concepts.

Deco moved away from Nouveau by eliminating much of the superfluous elements that weren't relevant to the intrinsic beauty of the design. This resulted in Art Deco being highly recognizable by its angularity and stylization, or representational treatment, of its subject matter, while still maintaining a certain playfulness. The artists of this period seemed to especially enjoy stylized women, flowers and fawns.

The name Art Deco doesn't have any special meaning. It merely came from the Exposition des Arts Decoratifs et Industrials Modernes that took place in Paris in 1925, where the work of the international designers in this style was displayed. Although most people think of the Art Deco period as covering the years between the World Wars, it actually reached its zenith at that exhibition.

Although most of the great artists of this period worked in Paris and Berlin, you'll be surprised to realize how many of those names you recognize: Louis Icart (magazine and fashion print artist), Asprey & Co. (London jewelers), Black, Starr & Frost (New York jewelers), Boucheron, Frederick Carder (founder of Steuben Glass), the Cartier family and Coco Chanel (what women doesn't know those names?), Erte (designer for the Folies Bergeres), Maija Grotell (head of the design department at Cranbrook Academy of Art), Carl Milles (head of sculpture at Cranbrook Academy of Art), Tiffany & Co. (which began as a stationer and dry goods store) and the Famous furniture designer gives seminar at Gorman's

Style is everything.

"Especially when it comes to furniture design and construction," says internationally renowned designer M. Fillmore Harty.

The right choice can help create an intimate environment or can encourage activity. Harty, a Cranbrook Academy of Art graduate and a former Bloomfield Hills resident, will give a free seminar at Gorman's Design Studio in Southfield 1 p.m. Saturday.

Harty will discuss furniture as an art form and how living in a contemporary environment is compatible with today's lifestyles.

"It is consistently stimulating and exciting to develop products that are to be used in the intimacy of one's home and be exposed to the euphorias and crises that pass in this space," said Harty.

Born and raised in Dearborn, Harty's Preview designs are one of a kind. Harty believes his work is an art form that reflects lifestyle trends of the day. His designs are multidimensional and lure people to sit, snuggle and just relax. These characteristics may come as a surprise to consumers who think sofas are only made for sitting.

"Consumers should choose furniture upholstery and design based on their lifestyle needs," said Harty. "One sofa might be useful as a luxurious stretch out space, and another, a sumptuous space to read the Sunday newspaper."

Famous designer: M. Fillmore Hardy

Harty is the head designer for the Preview Furniture Corp. Harty has consulted on industrial projects and was previously with the Ford Motor Co., Lincoln Interior Design Studio. A graduate of Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, NY, Harty devotes his time exclusively to furniture design.

Saarinen family (furniture, textile and architectural designers at Cranbrook Academy of Art), to name just a few.

Your piece is by the French artist, A. Gori (spelled with an I or a Y), and is entitled "Kimono." An illustration of it can be found in Harold Berman's book, "Bronzes, Sculptors and Founders," illustration 1879. Your figure is somewhat atypical of the more elaborate, high style Art Deco sculptures we've come to know. Also, it appears to have some condition problems on one arm and hand in that it appears discolored. In good condition, this piece would bring about $1,400 to $1,800 at an auction.

Nancy and Frank Boos are with the Frank H. Boos Gallery, an appraisal firm and auction house at 420 Enterprise Court in Bloomfield Hills that has been in the auction business for more than 30 years. Do you have an item you would like to know about? SMALL CHANGE

Some kitchen designers like the challenge of designing smaller kitchens because the space restriction forces their clients to decide what is really important. Granted, some small kitchens require more floor space as part of the remodeling project. Others may only require a redesign with more specific-use cabinetry. The kitchen should be designed around the manner in which it is actually used every day. That is the definition of an efficient and functional kitchen.

by Jeff Beuchelaere, V.P. De Giulio Ind.

The kitchen is the most important room in the home. In addition to being an area where you cook and eat, it serves as a gathering place for the entire family. Regardless of the size of your kitchen, DEGIULIO INDUSTRIES can create a room that is beautiful and efficient.

Realtor PACs defend American Dream

BY NORMAN PRADY
SPECIAL WRITER

The pathway to the American Dream, according to Rebecca Williamson's map, begins in a family room, passes under bowls of chowder and trays of Bloody Marys, intersects community service, then heads on into politics.

For Williamson, 36, the chairwoman of a Realtor political action committee (R/PAC), that dream is centered around home ownership. "We're exercising a voice," Williamson said of the R/PAC's work. "We lobby for property rights, the things that protect ownership."

With 12 years of waiting tables and washing dishes behind her, she has found that her life has evolved from serving soup to "doing a gallant thing that benefits the public."

As head of the Western Wayne Oakland County Association of Realtors R/PAC, Williamson would like to see all of the 2,400 members of her association contributing at least the recommended $33 annually for the R/PAC's support of candidates and issues. She said she's about halfway there.

Williamson's dedication to causes gallant comes, she said, from a childhood filled with a parent-given awareness of the community-strengthening value of helping neighbors. It was a focus that took her, in 1989 at age 29, to a four-year term on the Walled Lake city council. "I was 'the kid'," she said, describing how some people labeled her.

Now, it's a focus that continues and puts her on the Walled Lake zoning board of appeals, the downtown development authority, and formerly put her on the Walled Lake building authority committee and the Oakland County Road and Bike Path committee. "I've always had that goal: to make the world better. And I guess the political arena is the place to do it."

She also holds major posts with Michigan Association of Realtors (MAR), the state organization to which her local association and others like it belong. Her work there has been in fund-raising, legislative relations, taxation issues, license law, and public education.

"I keep voting records, said Jack Walker, MAR vice president. "That's one of the determining factors in giving financial support or endorsement."

Bill Bonsky, chairman of the Birmingham Bloomfield Rochester South Oakland R/PAC, said, "Are we buying votes? With any direct donation to a public office candidate, the intent is to get someone who can help you.

"If it appears you're helping them buy their way into office, that's the nature of politics. That's part of the American system."

Bonsky, a sales agent with Century 21 Associates, Rochester, said the R/PAC's goal is to maintain property values. To support statewide efforts, "the state (association) expects us to contribute our fair share – $36,000 – which works out to about $15 for each of our (2,400 active) members."

Dennis LaLone, chairman of the North Oakland County Board of Realtors R/PAC, said, "The Realtors association is really the only group out there that is involved in property rights issues and protection of those rights."

As an example, La Lone cites the "takings" issue, which is the devaluing of property as the result of a new regulation. This might result, he explained, from the rezoning of a property resulting in limitation of its use or the type of structure permitted on it.

"We're not opposed to woodlands or wetlands" regulations, but "they can sometimes get too stringent, go overboard and devalue a piece of property."

LaLone, a Realtor with Max Broock Realtors in Clarkston, said that his R/PAC holds candidate interviews – as do other R/PACs – to determine which potential officeholders will be supportive of the members' views. An R/PAC can give up to $2,500 to a candidate for the state house of representatives and up to $5,000 to a state senatorial or federal office candidate, he said.

Williamson, who hopes to finish college before her daughter graduates from high school, wants to study real estate law. Her current position as a sales associate with Max Broock Realtors in West Bloomfield followed her entrance into the home-selling business at the invitation of some of her lunch-time regulars during her table-waiting days at Nifty Norman's in Walled Lake.

The regulars, a group of real estate brokers, would speak to Williamson around the nachos and cocktails she was serving them. "'What are you doing with your life?' they'd ask me."

They told her that they thought she had an ideal personality for their kind of work. Before long, she left "my last restaurant job" and, in 1988, began a new career with the diners' company, from which she has since moved on.

Soon after starting in real estate, she got involved with the R/PAC. She became chairwoman almost three years ago. She knows, she said, that "somebody's always going to question our motives."

To build support in her association, she and her group make presentations to members at their offices. "We try to educate them that this is insurance for their business – to make sure the conditions we're working in are good for us and for the homeowner."

She points to the need to strengthen the real estate licensing law relative to education and enforcement. More-effective policing is needed to protect against the forging of contracts and the embezzlement of purchase deposits, she said.

The R/PAC doesn't get involved with issues not directly related to property rights, she said.

A 3.7-grade-point student at Walled Lake Western High School, she praises the accomplishments of Krysten, 14, who carries the same average.

Working hard on her own program of home ownership, Williamson is close to paying off a vacant lot in Commerce where she plans to build a house. When Krysten goes off to college – possibly the University of Michigan to become a pediatrician – Williamson might "adopt older kids who don't have a home," she said.

"That's farfetched. I talk about it all the time. My friends think I'm nuts."

But what's nuts to the kid with the ideal personality who's had major leadership positions and $24 million in real estate sales in her first eight years in the business?

Anti kick-back laws are spreading nationwide

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I have a condominium in Florida and our association has had problems with a contractor and its manager. I understand that Florida has adopted a statute in regard to "kick backs" in competitive bidding. Do you have any information about that?

A. In 1991, Florida Statute 718 (the Florida Condominium Act) was amended to deal with the issue of preventing the practice of vendors bribing officers and directors of management companies to secure available contracts. In 1994 in New York City, 82 indictments were handed down by a grand jury against various property managers and management firms performing community association management in New York City.

It is expected that the New York City experience will lead New York and many other states to introduce legislation similar to that in Florida which provide a penalty for property managers and management firms accepting any compensation in exchange for the awarding of contracts.

Q. I read a recent Real Estate Query that responded to an inquiry from a rental property owner about cheap legal services. I have represented tenants over a good part of my legal career, which gives me a good perspective of both sides of the transaction.

Landlords who have neglected to comply with various statutes governing landlord/tenant relationships have often lamented that they simply don't know the law, which implies they should be excused from knowing the law.

My response is that anyone in the business of renting residential property ought to know the laws pertaining to that business.

A. As you point out, you usually get what you pay for. There are no free lunches, and one who engages in commercial transactions such as a residential real estate property transaction should be cognizant of the legal ramifications of what they do from whatever perspective they may be positioned.

Anyone who contemplates entering into a landlord/tenant relationship or any other type of legal obligation should consult with an experienced and knowledgeable attorney who can provide the insight and avoid costly errors.

Ceramic tiles are a beautiful accent in many old homes. Whether decorative or plain, the richness of this material commonly lends an air of grace and charm to old entranceway floors, baths and fireplaces.

Like everything else in this world, some of these tiles may become damaged over time and need replacement. In most cases the answer isn't as easy as a trip to the local home center or tile store. The difficulty in finding matches for old hand-painted, printed or carved tiles is obvious. Differences in the way tiles were made years ago make most of today's mass-produced tiles inappropriate replacements for even plain field tiles.

Color variations were common in the glaze of many old tiles. Two glaze variations that were typical of tiles produced 50 years ago are picture framing and crazing or crackle glazing. Picture framing occurs when the glaze puddles around the edges of the tile, outlining or framing it. The latter situation appears when the glaze doesn't actually fit the body of the tile but shrinks at different rates, causing cracks to occur in its face. Today, the pair would be considered color flaws.

Fortunately, both can be reproduced by some of the custom tile studios catering to this type of work. The first step in this process is sending the studio a good sample piece of the tile you're trying to replace. A good quality photo can help if you can only send a section of tile instead of an entire undamaged piece.

Tile reproduction is a costly process, the major expense being the research and development for the glaze and clay body. Much trial and error is involved here, and the experts depend on their past experiences to guide them. Choosing a glaze color is not like choosing a paint color. What you see is not what you get. The unfired state of glaze is nothing like its fired state. Finding the right match of glaze and clay body is a slow process. Expect to pay between $150 to $300 for this work, unless the shop you choose has already developed a matching glaze for a past job and has this information in its files.

Once the color match is developed, the next step is creating the template or mold. Depending on how intricate or carved the tile is, you can pay anywhere from $100 on up for this work. Matching hand-painted tiles runs from $25 to $100 each. Of course, pricing is not a static figure. Each situation is unique.

A less expensive alternative is to retile the entire area, whether it's a fireplace, foyer or bath. Some tile companies offer a line of historic designs that will blend in with your old-home decor.

If you're interested in tile history, you might want to contact The Tile Heritage Foundation, P.O. Box 1850, Healdsburg, Calif. 95448. This is a nonprofit, member-supported organization for research and preservation. As such, it has a network of tile identifiers across the country that is able to establish where a tile came from and what type of tile it is. If you want to learn more about this part of your old house, all they need from you is a good quality photograph of the tile and a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

Yes, there are housing bargains

BY JOHN CUNIFF
AP BUSINESS ANALYST

NEW YORK (AP) _ You don't have to live in Rockford or Minneapolis or Kansas City in order to get a great buy on a house, although your chances of doing so in these cities is probably greater than in most places.

You can stay right where you are and pick up bargains, no matter what the surveys indicate.

Such as the housing association study that showed Rockford, second largest city in Illinois, to have the most affordable housing market in America, a tweak ahead of Elkhart, Ind., and Des Moines, Iowa.

In Rockford, according to the National Association of Home Builders, 87.1 percent of that area's median-income families could afford the median-priced house. That's 29.3 percentage points higher than the national average.

But not everyone wants to live in Rockford in spite of its college, its basic industries such as Sundstrand and Clarcor and, among other things, its 80-mile proximity to Chicago over a superhighway.

Nor in Minneapolis or Kansas City, the only markets of more than a million residents in the top 25, despite their livability, cultural attractions, professional sports teams and agglomeration of top corporations.

No matter that studies show Americans have a high degree of geographical mobility, and that millions view a home as a place to live for just seven years or so. Most of them probably want to stay in their own hometown, where they also can find bargains. Such as:

– A two-family house. Owning one may be the most sensible thing young couples can do to establish themselves financially. The message is repeated again and again by those who have done it, but too often it isn't heeded.

The possibilities, it seems, are more obvious to immigrants than to their offspring. Two-unit houses aren't socially chic in a culture of appearances, but they can be more financially rewarding than hi-tech stocks.

– The fix-up house. Market forces dictate that such houses sell for less than their potential value. Experience shows that wise improvements can raise the value of these houses more – often much more – than the cost of making the improvements.

They are available in all neighborhoods, including the best. But the values are especially impressive in neighborhoods where research and foresight indicate imminent rejuvenation. Fortunes have been made in this manner.

– The add-on house. Depending on lot size and local building regulations, many small houses can be expanded to meet needs as they develop. Why buy a 3-bedroom house before you need three bedrooms? Instead, buy small and add on.

There is nothing new about this technique. To some extent, what's new is that builders are more aware of such a market and design houses with expansion in mind.

– Factory-built homes. They've improved greatly, and in some respects are much better constructed than on-site or stick-built houses. Yes, there is a saving, even after costs of land, foundation, site improvement and utilities.

There may be, unfortunately, problems in siting such houses because of local building regulations, some unchanged from the days of "mobile homes." These houses aren't mobile, but they may still be viewed that way.

These are just some of the possibilities. They don't just pop out of the real estate advertisements; you have to look around, and perhaps view 100 houses before you can be certain of values in a particular neighborhood.

And a reminder: No matter where you live or wish to live, there are good houses available for less than the median. By definition, in fact, half the houses to be bought in any areas are for less than the median price.

Need morespace? Finish basement

Ever wish your home had more space, but think the cost of an addition will overwhelm you?

Well, you may be pleasantly surprised. There's a practical, affordable solution: finish your basement.

According to a survey of remodeling contractors, finishing a basement is one of the most inexpensive ways to add more space to a home. It is far less costly than an addition, and a proven way to increase the value of your home.

Also, because basement space is flexible space, you can easily customize it to meet your family's needs. Depending on the desired use of the new area, a basement can be converted into a variety of livable spaces including a family room, home office, home theater, extra bedroom, children's room or fitness room. And, as your needs change, it's easy to modify basement space.

Regardless of whether you transform the unfinished space yourself, hire a contractor to do it, or decide to do a little of each, the design, planning and finishing process lets you express your creativity while accomplishing your goal of affordably increasing living space.

When planning the space, make sure there's enough headroom. Interior designers at Armstrong World Industries say most codes require a minimum of 7 1/2 feet from floor to ceiling.

Additional information on ceilings for use in finished basements is available from Armstrong. Write to Consumer Response Center, Armstrong World Industries, P.O. Box 3210, Lancaster, PA 17604 or call 800 233 3823 and ask for a copy of "Residential Ceilings."

HOW TO DECIDE WHEN TO SELL
by...
NANCY AUSTIN

I am a Senior Citizen. My father who is 90, says he is not. He says he has entered the "Age of Wisdom". In his wisdom, he has decided to remain in his home. He cooks, cleans, gardens, drives, visits and has me for dinner once a week. He is also updating his house for when the day comes that his wise decision is to sell. I have been his gentle guide, because, not only am I his daughter, but I am a Realtor. In honor of my father's wisdom, I have decided to help Seniors by making available a Free Report which answers your questions: How to Decide When To Sell. Enter the age of wisdom now, and send for your Free Report.
