Proposed expansion prompts reaction

Plymouth Township officials and Wedgewood Condominium owners want some assurances if Kroger builds a larger store at Ann Arbor and Sheldon roads.

The one way to get those assurances is for the planning commission and township board to deny a request to rezone two pieces of property of 2.28 acres from multiple family residential to general commercial.

That would likely prompt a lawsuit from Paul Dietz, owner of Plymouth Square Apartments, who wants to sell the land for the expansion of the shopping center and Kroger, Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy told Wedgewood residents Monday night.

Such a lawsuit, considered "friendly" litigation, would likely prompt a consent judgment, which would allow township officials and those involved with the proposed Kroger expansion to contract with each other over restrictions and improvements to the shopping center, McCarthy said.

Jim Anulewicz, public services director, told residents that the township doesn't want a westward expansion of commercial on Ann Arbor Road.

The proposal offered by Kroger in April calls for building a new 58,472-square-foot store that would stand where three apartment buildings at Plymouth Square are now. It would face west and the existing Kroger at just under 30,000 square feet would be demolished.

The remaining buildings in the center, as well as Big Boy restaurant would remain.

"They put together this plan and we didn't like it. We sent them back," McCarthy said.

Since a public hearing in April, township officials have been working with Kroger representatives to develop a plan that improves the center and takes into consideration the already congested traffic both on Ann Arbor and Sheldon roads, as well as within the shopping center, McCarthy said.

Planning commissioners tabled the rezoning request in April, pending further review because the existing shopping center is already under a consent judgment.

"Kroger is going to have to do something," said Jim Anulewicz, public services director, referring to competition from larger stores such as Hiller's.

McCarthy added: "Kroger is looking at what they can do to keep it a viable competitor."

With a consent judgment, McCarthy continued, a win-win situation could result with Kroger becoming competitive, while the township could have an improved center and traffic circulation

Bike patrol starts downtown

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND

What has two wheels and flies off curbs, up and down steps and around corners?

It's the Plymouth Police Department's new bike patrol, four fully sworn officers sporting new blue and silver uniforms riding specially equipped mountain bikes.

"We're taking police officers out of cars and putting them in the public," said Sgt. Steven Hundersmarck, who heads the bike patrol. He added that the patrol was designed after national models.

In addition to Hundersmarck, the bike patrol consists of officers Joseph Kahanec, Ronald Kaminski and Jennifer Bandli. There are plans to add more officers.

Hundersmarck said Plymouth is the perfect setting for a bike patrol because of its central business district, close-knit housing, and the number of events that draw people to the downtown area.

"There's no place I can't get to on a bike," he said.

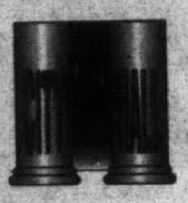
DPW merger likely

■ A joint city and township municipal services department is a possibility, according to recent budget discussions.



BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

The merger of the Plymouth city and township municipal services departments could happen this year.

That's what the city administration said in a May 15 report on budget issues, presented to city commissioners.

"It appears feasible that if the cost-sharing and transition issues can be resolved that this merger could occur by the end of calendar 1997," the report stated.

"The concept under discussion involves the assumption of township municipal services department responsibilities by the city MSD, the transfer of township MSD employees to the city, and the operation of all services out of the city MSD facility," the report continued.

But Plymouth Township Director of Public Services James Anulewicz and city Municipal Services Director Paul Sincock said it was too early to say where a joint department would be located.

The two sides say they have no cost estimates on potential savings as yet, as there has been only one joint meeting on the subject.

"At this stage the city and the township have tried to look at what the functions and services provided by the city and township DPW are, to see if there is any way we can jointly improve services and reduce costs," Anulewicz said. "We're just gathering information on both sides."

Rosemary Harvey, township finance director, said at the first meeting the functions of each department were reviewed. "They (city) have a larger department and they're doing things like vehicle maintenance and road repair," she said.

Going stag suits seniors

BY DIANE HANSON
SPECIAL WRITER

The spinning ball splashed a rainbow of light on the tuxedoed and evening-gowned Salem and Canton High School seniors congested on the huge dance floor at Burton Manor in Livonia Friday evening.

The annual combined senior prom drew hundreds of couples and a fair share of singles...yes, singles. Going stag has shed the stigma for these young adults of the 1990s.

"It's the senior prom and you can only go once," said Salem senior Krystin Durrer. Dressed in a dazzling red-sequined evening gown, she admitted, "There's no way I would not have come. I'm glad I came."

For Durrer, being without a boyfriend at the time was no reason for missing such a significant event in her life. "Why not go just because you don't have a date? It's your senior prom. You should go and have fun," she said.

Having a good time with her best friends was top on Durrer's list and she knew how to do it in style. She traveled to the prom with her friends and their dates in a white stretch limousine. The evening's festivities included dinner and

Plymouth struts its finest for visitors

■ Plymouth Mayor Ron Loiselle presented Frankenmuth Mayor Gary Rupprecht with a tapestry depicting premier Plymouth landmarks.

City of Frankenmuth officials saw lots of unfamiliar sites on Monday as they toured Plymouth for Mayor's Exchange Day.

But one item on the lunch menu at the Plymouth Cultural Center was very familiar - chicken.

More than a dozen Frankenmuth officials and spouses toured Plymouth's downtown, talked with Plymouth city officials about parking problems, visited the new arts council building, the museum and the American Blind & Wallpaper factory.

Plymouth Mayor Ron Loiselle presented Frankenmuth Mayor Gary Rupprecht with a tapestry depicting premier Plymouth landmarks, including the Wilcox House, The Gathering and Plymouth City Hall.

He even presented Rupprecht with a check for one day's Plymouth mayoral pay - $3.

That's even less than Frankenmuth city council people make, as they volunteer their time.

"Plymouth is like an oasis in Wayne County," Rupprecht said. "You ought to be commended for the work you've done."

The Frankenmuth mayor praised the appearance of the city, noting the scores of tulips planted downtown and the finished streetscape

Some main areas of savings would include equipment purchases. "If you have to buy a vactor it costs hundreds and thousands of dollars, street sweepers are very expensive," Harvey said.

Both sides scheduled a second meeting on the issue for this week. "We are moving forward with the analysis," Anulewicz said.

Asked if layoffs could result from joining the two departments, Harvey said, "We're not looking at that, we're looking at obvious equipment savings. We're trying to figure out what staff level requirements would be."

"We're looking at it as cost savings; increasing service more than anything. We're not looking at reducing costs by reducing personnel," Anulewicz said.

Could the merger boost the level of services for residents? "I think that's one of the very large issues, we're looking at increasing services here," Anulewicz said.

"For example, the township does not provide any grinding up of tree branches," Anulewicz said.

A merging of the city and township municipal services departments suggests the wood chipper owned by the city - and the vactor that sucks fallen leaves - would be used in the township as well as the city.

sively use the bike patrol in areas where there has been reported crime problems. Officers will strictly enforce underage alcohol and tobacco violations, disorderly person crimes and in-line skating and skateboarding violations.

Kaminski said most of the complaints from the business community concern juvenile problems, especially the in-line skaters and skateboarders.

"It's much more effective to go after them on a bicycle than on foot. We're hard to spot, unless we are on top," he said.

"It's easier to sneak up," said Bandli, a first-year officer who described herself as the "rookie rookie of the department."

Bandli said bike patrolling appeals to her "because of the physical fitness, and it will be a good public relations deal, good community policing."

Businesses welcome the extra security. David Haupt, manager of Repeat the Beat, located across from Kellogg Park, said: "On Friday and Saturday nights in the park we've ended up with some punks and even some grown ups stolling over from the Box Bar. It (the extra patrols) makes the kids who work here feel more secure."

Haupt said the officers currently on foot patrol often stop in to talk with his employees.

The bike patrol's budget of $5,000 covered the purchase of four police-model mountain bikes and two uniforms for each of the officers. The bikes are equipped with rear saddle bags and a flashing red light on the back.

The officers, chosen because they were "motivated," completed an intensive, 32-hour police mountain bike course through the Ann Arbor Police Department. In addition to honing their shooting skills and passing a written test, their training included:

- learning how to roll off a bike
- riding up and down stairs
- completing an obstacle course
- night riding
- dismounting

"It was quite demanding. It was about the toughest training school I've been through," said Kaminski, already an avid biker. He said the officers had to ride in a circle within a 10--foot-square without loosing their balance.

"We were the first class of officers that made it all the way through," he added.

Bike patrol officers will be equipped with radio, ticket books, side arms, flashlights, mace and a collapsible baton. The word "POLICE" will be prominently displayed on the front and back of their uniforms.

The patrol will be in effect 24 hours a day, seven days a week, according to Hundersmarck. He said the officers will be on their bikes as soon as the weather cooperates.

Gone fishing

Hundreds of trout draw the young and not-so-young

BY CHERYL VATCHER
SPECIAL WRITER

Eight-hundred rainbow trout were released into the Middle Rouge River as eager children lined the river banks with fishing poles hoping to catch at least one of the fish.

The event was the Wayne County Parks and Vietnam Veterans of American Plymouth-Canton Chapter 528 second annual Fishing Derby Saturday at the Hines Park Waterford Bend Picnic area. The derby also was sponsored by the Wayne County Parks Department and Northville Recreation Department.

"This is my first fishing derby. I have had a couple of bites, but no fish. I decided to come today because my unle wanted us to fish here," said Amy Grignon, 13.

Another youngster who was happy to be fishing at the derby was 8-year-old Tricia Schwartz. She was accompanied by her dad, John, and her grandmother who was bringing her good luck.

"I enjoy fishing. I caught my fish in about an hour," Tricia said.

Andrew Messer, 8, was having a bit of a problem at the river bend. "My pole keeps getting snagged,"he said.

His mom, Barb Messer, said that they didn't come to the derby last year, and that they would stay until we catch three or four fish, or until they lose all of their hooks.

In the morning the fishing contest was held 8-10 a.m. and after the contest was over, the adults and children could fish together. The youngsters got the chance to catch the allotted amount of fish.

One improvement for the participants at the second annual fishing derby was the amount of fish available to try and catch. Last year, there were only 400 fish available and this year, the amount was doubled.

Jim Dorey, member of Chapter 528, said that the area was a lot different than it was last year.

"A lot of the brown spots that were on the grounds are gone, as well as a lot of brush that was alongside the river," he said.

Greg Huddas of Chapter 528 said that the chapter donated $2,000 to make Saturday's event possible.

Many chapter member participated to help the children bait hooks, give them words of encouragement and then to find a winner in the derby, and weigh and measure the fish.

Aaron Bigger won the Golden Rule trophy for the biggest fish in the derby, 8-12 years age category. Other winners were Michel Messing, heaviest fish; Morgan Byrd, longest fish; Mitchel Maloney, lightest fish; Curtin Kaufman, shortest fish; all in the 4 years and younger category. In the 5-7 year categoy, winners were: Jessica Hett, lightest; Leah Hett, shortest; Brian Cari, longest; Jimmy Davis, heaviest. In the 8-12 age category, Joe Campo, lightest; Aaron Bigger, longest; John Fritz, shorterst; Rachel Hall, heaviest.

Tessie Pitses of Wayne County Parks was pleased with the turnout.

"I am rally pleased about how it turned out. VVA 528 gave us money to do this. They were here in full force today. We couldn't ask for a better partnership for this," she said.

Don Dignon of Chapter 528 said that a lot of people who came last year to the Derby were back and that they were glad the chapter was involved again.

"It was really wonderful to see so many members of the community come out and have fun with their kids," said Dennis Shrewsbury, former chapter president.

POLICE-FIRE NEWS

Still a mystery

The Wayne County Medical Examiner "has got some ideas but nothing solid," said Plymouth Township Police Det. David Hayes, on the human skeletal remains found May 10 in a township field near some railroad tracks.

Hayes said the medical examiner was to confer with an anthropologist on the remains in the next three weeks to a month, adding the man found rolled in a carpet was likely dead several years.

Clothing found with the remains included socks with "USA '80" on them.

Police said they were seeking to contact an investigator who looked into the deaths of two men found in August 1980 in a van parked at the Sheldon Road Ford Motor Co. Plant. They said a source familiar with the case recalled the two victims had been found rolled in a carpet.

The two men, of Inkster and Allen Park, died of gunshot wounds. Police said they have no evidence of how the man found May 10 died.

Crash survivor

A 24-year-old Farmington Hills man was thrown Monday from his rolling 1996 Toyota on southbound I-275 just north of Plymouth Road, and was taken to St. Mary's Hospital where he was listed in fair condition.

The man was cited for not wearing a seat belt, according to the Michigan State Police who investigated the 11:34 a.m. crash.

Witnesses told police the man was thrown from his car after losing control of the vehicle which crossed three lanes of traffic after a failed attempt to pass a camper in the left lane at 90 miles per hour, state police said.

No other vehicles were struck and no other injuries were reported.

Hey neighbor

When the resident of a condominium on Princeton Court in Plymouth Township noticed the structure was on fire at 3:15 a.m. Saturday, he just ran next door for help- to Plymouth Community Fire Department station No. 2.

Fire Chicf Larry Groth said the fire started in a wall heater unit that malfunctioned. The man, the lone occupant of the condo, escaped uninjured.

Groth said the fire at the attached condo was extinguished in about 15 minutes, and fire fighters remained on the scene for an hour-and-a-half.

Cablecast meetings on tap

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Probably later this year, Plymouth city residents will be able to watch video-taped city commission meetings on local cable TV.

City officials last year approved renovations for a video production room off of the second floor city commission chambers at Plymouth City Hall. But while that room has been ready for use for several months, video equipment has yet to be installed.

"The reason we haven't proceeded with the camera equipment is we are waiting for details from Canton and Continental (MediaOne)," said City Manager Steve Walters.

Among items to be coordinated are schedules on taping, taking the video to MediaOne's Canton office for broadcast, and deciding when broadcasts would be. "Canton has the playback equipment at their studio with a direct line feed to Continental (MediaOne) and then to Ameritech (cable)," he said.

"We'll be producing video tapes of our meetings and take them to Canton Township. Continental (MediaOne) has agreed to provide staff support to pop the tapes in players," Walters said.

Walters said the meetings won't be on live TV, as the video room is not wired to handle a live feed. "That was a decision made when the cable franchise was negotiated, it was going to cost a lot of money."

Besides putting city commission meetings on TV, the city administration also plans to make greater use of cable by airing notices of community events, changes in trash pickup schedules, and more.

The city's cable TV consultant firm is putting together a list of equipment needed for the video room. Walters said once the list is put together bids will be taken, and it will take a few weeks to install equipment.

"We're probably looking into the fall," he said.

Some features of the broadcasts being discussed include having people's names written on the screen as they speak, titles, and zoom-in camera shots. Plans call for three cameras filming the meetings.

Walters said the equipment could be used for other purposes, including public service spots and other programs. The Plymouth administration is able to pay for equipment from an $80,000 federal grant.

Walters said some basic rules of filming a government meeting, to avoid charges of favoring one side or issue over another, include no close-ups of people not talking. "You don't intentionally turn to somebody yawning or sleeping," he said.

Plymouth Township trustee meetings were video taped and shown on local cable TV in the early '90s, but not presently. Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy was unavailable for comment on whether the meetings would return to local TV.

New Prompt Care Area

My Emergency.
My Health.
My Hospital.

"St. Mary Hospital's Emergency Center now provides the convenience of Prompt Care."

My daughter fell off the jungle gym a couple of weeks ago and broke her arm. I'm so glad we chose St. Mary Hospital's Emergency Center, where she was treated in the new Prompt Care area. We didn't know it, but Carly also hit her head. The doctors — board certified in emergency medicine — were able to detect her minor concussion in time to prevent further damage.

St. Mary Hospital's Emergency Center has dedicated x-ray equipment and a casting room where Carly's arm was taken care of quickly. While waiting, we appreciated the private Prompt Care area which shielded us from other people's emergencies. And, the staff was professional, kind and compassionate.

It was also comforting to know that if Carly's injury was more serious, or she needed to be admitted, we were already at our hospital of choice. Close to home.

Convenience in an emergency. That's why St. Mary Hospital is our hospital.

St. Mary Hospital's Emergency Center is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Prompt Care hours are 1 p.m. to 11 p.m. every day.

dancing, the best part for Durrer being the dancing. Durrer said that the girls and the guys "dance in a big circle. Nobody really dances together."

Indeed, except for the slow dances, it was difficult to determine who was dancing with whom in the sea of gyrating teens. Just moving to the music, surrounded by friends appeared to be the best part of the last high school dance for these seniors.

Salem senior John Samsonow didn't have any trouble joining in the dancing and festivities with his friends but confessed, "I almost didn't come basically because I didn't have a date."

An altercation with his intended prom date resulted in his solo appearance at the "Enchanted Evening" themed ball. But it was "too special of a dance" for Samsonow to miss, he said, so he rented a white tuxedo with tails to make his dashing appearance at the gala. Samsonow admitted that he enjoys dressing up in a tux and only regretted that he didn't complete the outfit with a top hat and cane.

"It is fun," Samsonow said of the prom activities. "I was surprised. I thought I would be moping around and I'm not."

Moping around was not even part of the picture for Canton senior Sandy Metz "because it's a lot of fun just coming with your friends," she said. Metz and a group of her friends all decided to go stag together. She particularly enjoyed the dinner and dancing with her circle of companions.

Metz has developed her own philosophy that she doesn't mind passing on to next year's seniors: "This is a once in a lifetime event," she said. "You're never going to be able to go to senior prom again. You're never going to be a senior again. So, you might as well take the chance while you have it. Grab it! Grab a friend and say you're coming!"

Free etching for cars is available

Vehicle owners can help make their cars and trucks less attractive to thieves with free etching at Westland Center 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday, May 28.

The Western Wayne Auto Theft Team is sponsoring the program to etch Vehicle Identification Numbers on the glass of cars, trucks, motor homes and boats.

"It helps deter theft. We find few auto thieves will replace the glass on a car. It's a big job," said Michigan State Police Lt. David Gentry of the Auto Theft Team. "It helps us identify the vehicles. Some insurance companies will give a discount for etching."

Students from the Livonia Career and Technical Center will be assisting officers with the etching program. The etching will take six or seven minutes, Gentry said, using a smaller size type that isn't overly obvious.

"We can do three or four cars at a time, first come-first serve," said Gentry, adding registration or titles need to be shown for the vehicles that are to be etched.

Restoring the Rouge

Project needs more public involvement

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Thirty years ago nobody thought twice about lighting up a cigarette and smoking it at city hall or in other public places.

Today smoking has been banned or restricted in public buildings.

Public perceptions change, and Jim Murray believes the public's perception of the Rouge River resembles a 1990s version of what transpired with the 1960s problem of smoking.

People need to be informed about the river, just as they learned about the dangers of smoking, Murray said.

"People are learning the value of the Rouge River," said Murray, director of Wayne County's Department of Environment. "You have to be able to educate people and that's how you correct a problem to benefit society."

Murray was one of several state, local and federal officials who gathered Monday at the University of Michigan-Dearborn to turn another page on the $1 billion Rouge River National Wet Weather Project — the first federally-funded urban river restoration project.

Murray believes an educated public can tackle the Rouge's problems ranging from downspouts connected improperly from homes to sewer systems — sending stormwater and contributing to the stormwater runoff — to failed septic systems in the Rouge River watershed, even in long developed areas in Detroit. Those systems send contaminants into the river.

"We literally have thousands of failed septic tanks in the Rouge River watershed," Murray said. Those tanks have a failure rate of 20 to 25 percent, Murray said.

Congress concerned

Two representatives from Michigan's Congressional delegation expressed concerns about continued federal funding for the project. Neither said the project was in jeopardy, but money remains tight in Washington.

U.S. Rep. John Dingell, D-Dearborn, who helped obtain $400 million in 1991 for the project, and U.S. Rep. Joe Knollenberg, R-Birmingham, whose district includes Redford Township and part of Livonia, believe it will be more difficult than in previous years to obtain more funds.

Knollenberg sits on the House Appropriations Committee. He expects that committee will send final appropriations to the full House in June.

"It's become difficult to compete for money in Washington," Knollenberg said.

Road repair: Complex issue now

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Q. Can you – or anybody – explain simply why the debate over fixing roads has become so complicated?

A. We'll try. There are three elements:

- More money. This breaks down into a) higher fuel and weight taxes, b) other savings from the budget and c) more federal aid.
- Shifting control of 23,000 miles of county and municipal roads to the state, more than tripling the Department of Transportation's jurisdiction to 33,000 miles.
- Auto insurance – requiring drivers to buy less, if they wish, in order to pay for higher fuel taxes.

Q. Any predictions on the tax question?

A. Yes. Up. Details depend on what deal is struck between the governor, Senate and House; between Democrats and Republicans. It's a money question, and money always can be compromised.

In the House, look for most of the 70 representatives who can't run in 1998 because of term limits to provide the bulk of the yes votes, leaving the first- and second-termers to vote no. That's what happened with the Proposal A tax increases of 1994.

Q. Gov. John Engler campaigns on "Promises made, promises kept." Did he ever promise to take over 23,000 miles of local roads?

A. No, not in 1990, not in 1994. Neither did any legislators. In fact, shifting control of local roads to the state never has been an issue in any circle.

Actually, legislative pressure has been in the other direction – returning county roads and county money to townships, as proposed by Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton, to the consternation of the Wayne County administration.

Q. So why raise the state control question now?

A. Politics. The effect has been to focus bad attention onto county and municipal road people, the ones who have been agitating for higher fuel taxes.

Engler certainly has shifted 180 degrees from his pre-1995 advocacy of local budgeting by school districts. On roads, Engler is a statist.

Q. Is there any merit to Engler's proposal to shift control of roads?

A. Sen. Douglas Carl, R-Macomb, says there is, and he chairs the Senate Transportation Committee. "Drivers don't care about jurisdictional disputes and about the 13 different classifications of roads. They care about safe roads," he said on a WXYZ-TV "Spotlight" program Sunday.

Sen. Jim Berryman, D-Adrian, opposes it. A former mayor, Berryman said, "If the governor is going tie his whole proposal to a takeover of local roads, the issue is dead. No. 1, neither the governor nor the Legislature has the credibility to take over another 23,000 miles.

"No. 2, it's a horrible idea. It raises questions about street

Plymouth woman injured in Redford bus accident

BY BILL CASPER AND JEFF COUNTS
STAFF WRITERS

Michael Wafer, 8, had finished a full day at Addams Elementary School in Redford and was headed home on Tuesday as usual in a yellow school bus.

The weather was nice outside and he was planning to play. But that all changed when the bus collided with a Jeep Cherokee, driven by a Plymouth woman who is pregnant.

"It was crazy. Everybody was crying," said Michael.

However, there were no serious injuries reported.All other injuries to students and the woman were very minor, Redford police Sgt. Scott McLeay said. The students complained of bumping their heads on bus seats and of sore necks, he said.

The bus driver, Irene Hindermeien, 53, of Redford Township also was taken to a hospital with very minor injuries, McLeay said.

The Jeep driver, Nancy McCausland, 32, of Plymouth, also was taken to a hospital with a minor injury, McLeay said. She may have a minor facial cut after striking the steering wheel, he said.

"I understand she is about eight months pregnant and a main concern was to check her unborn child at the hospital," McLeay said. "I talked to her husband (Wednesday) and he told me that both she and the baby are fine."

McCausland was alone in the Jeep, McLeay said.

Sam Saad saw the accident from his office at Roma Foods.

"I ran over there and tried to get her out of the Jeep. She was pregnant. We couldn't get her out," said Saad.

The bus was traveling south on Inkster Road, south of Schoolcraft, shortly before 4 p.m. as traffic was backed up due to a train crossing the road, McLeay said. While traffic was stopped on southbound Inkster, motorists allowed McCausland to exit a business driveway on the west side of Inkster to turn north, he said.

She crossed two southbound lanes of Inkster between the stopped traffic into the center, left-turn lane, where the bus driver was traveling south, McLeay said. Apparently, neither driver saw the other initially, but Hindermeien belatedly swerved the bus into the second northbound lane of Inkster in an attempt to avoid hitting the Jeep, he said.

Based on the damage to both vehicles, it doesn't appear either driver was moving very fast, McLeay said. Drinking was not involved, he said. Police determined both drivers were at fault and officers issued traffic tickets to each of them, McLeay said.

AmeriCorps recruits local applicants

AmeriCorps, the national service program, is recruiting thousands of men and women to serve in community-based programs and help fulfill the goals of the recent President's Summit for America's Future.

The deadline for most applications is June 15.

AmeriCorps offers citizens age 18 and older opportunities to serve full-time for one or two years with local non-profits and national organizations throughout the country — programs that will work toward the Summit's goal of providing 2 million at-risk youth with basic conditions they need for success by the year 2000.

AmeriCorps members will help local service organizations access the major institutional, corporate and private commitments of resources and volunteers that were made at the Summit in Philadelphia. AmeriCorps members also are needed to help recruit and organize 1 million tutors call for by the America Reads initiative to ensure that all children can read by the time they reach third grade.

Two AmeriCorps programs seek recruits immediately: AmeriCorps*VISTA (Volunteers in Service to America) needs people — especially college graduates and people with significant experience and skills — to serve with local organizations in disadvantaged communities.

About 1,000 people age 18 to 24 also are sought to begin serving this summer and fall in AmeriCorps*NCCC (The National Civilian Community Corps), a 10-month, full-time residential program with campuses located in Denver, San Diego, Perry Point, Md., and Charleston, S.C.

Anyone interested in serving in AmeriCorps may call toll-free: 1-800-942-2677 or visit AmeriCorps' Worldwide Web site at www.cns.gov.

openings, curb cuts, municipal rights-of-way; you have rights-of-way easements that the municipalities receive revenues from. Who's going to be responsible? Are locals going to have to go to the state every time they want to dig?

"I like local control."

Q. Say, isn't there some chance that public employees' unions are a target?

A. Some Democrats are muttering that. Counties' and big cities' road agencies are unionized. Engler proposes competitive bids for maintenance contracts, with counties and cities free to bid against private construction companies for state jobs.

The biggest fight will be state versus local control, an issue of principle. Compromise will be much tougher on the tax question.

Engler is making it a tie-bar issue – no more road money without a shift of control.

Republican Carl said it won't be any cheaper except to the extent that competitive bidding is introduced. Democrat Berryman argues counties have lower administrative costs, hence are more efficient, than the state.

Q. Any details about which miles of county and local roads Engler has his eye on?

A. No. Rep. Tom Kelly, D-Wayne, who serves on the House Appropriations subcommittee on transportation, said there's no bill drafted, as of last week.

Q. This insurance issue – ah, it looks as if the only way I can blunt the blow of higher fuel taxes is to cut my own insurance coverage. Are they serious?

A. Maybe not. Unlike the road control issue, the insurance isn't tie-barred to fuel taxes.

The insurance issue may "fall off the table," as labor negotiators say.

Doug Ross, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate, says Engler is favoring his buddies in the insurance industry.

Larry Owen, East Lansing lawyer, says Engler is favoring auto insurers. "Linking this phony insurance scheme to a gas tax is John Engler's way of confusing consumers who just want their roads fixed," he said.

Ron Steffens, president and CEO of AAA Michigan, the state's largest auto insurer, laughs at the suggestion insurers would benefit. "Our company would see its premiums reduced by $100 million," he said, adding the governor's plan would bring Michigan closer to a purer no-fault system.

Steffens noted Engler isn't tie-barring his insurance proposal to the road issue though the governor will push both simultaneously.

Q. Everyone in Michigan knows, and many tourists here know, that big trucks are breaking up our roads – those 11-axle, 42-wheel monsters...

A. Everyone but the MDOT engineers and some politicians. Michigan's truck weight limit is 160,000 pounds, while most other states limit trucks to 80,000 pounds.

Democrat Berryman said his bills would set an 80,000-pound limit. Republican Carl said weight-per-axle is more important.

AAA's Steffens says one monster truck does as much damage as 9,600 passenger vehicles.

Southeastern Michigan's freeze-thaw cycles are an important factor. When the ground freezes permanently for the entire winter, the road bed is solid. But where the ground freezes and thaws unevenly, the road base is uneven, and pavement damages (alias "potholes) result. The winter of 1996-7 saw an unusual amount of freezing and thawing.

Rather than limiting truck weights, Engler proposes raising commercial truck fees by $38 million, about a 7.5 percent increase over the current $500 million a year.

The answer to the truck question may lie in the lobbying strength of the trucking industry and Teamsters Union rather than in principles of civil engineering.

to keep active roles in maintaining the river in clearing logjams and sweeping streets to manage the stormwater flow and runoff, said Tim Henry, associate director for watershed and community environmental protection for the Environmental Protection Agency's Region V. That is necessary because of the "variability" of storm water flow, Henry said.

But the EPA and federal courts want to encourage, rather than mandate, community activity, Henry added.

Communities can work with federal agencies and courts with the voluntary storm water general permits, without the federal government issuing any mandates.

"The voluntary part is where the communities work together on watershed management," Henry said.

Henry said sites sampled by students from local high schools in the Rouge Education Project helped obtain a cross section of samples to test water quality, while making students aware of the river's water quality problems.

That "holistic modeling" and how various watershed management options help engineers and scientists gauge the effectiveness of various strategies. U.S. District Judge John Feikens said the main theme in balancing the Clean Water Act and community development needs was maintaining a "sustainable development."

"It means the development meets the need of the present without compromising the future generations and their needs," Feikens said.

Feikens suggested a geographic information system was needed to use as a data base for the project and it must be expanded for the entire watershed. That system could outline contaminant statistics, water quality and flows throughout the watershed.

Basins operating

Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara said $400 million has been spent on the Rouge project. Ten retention basins will treat 60 million gallons of stormwater. Within the past year three retention basins began operations to process overflows after heavy rainstorms. Six more basins will be built by the year's end.

Another $5 million was given to local communities for 40 local demonstration projects in communities.

The Rouge Program also is focusing on a $10 million restoration of Newburgh Lake to remove polychlorinated biphenyls, restore the lake and restock it with game fish.

"Each step we take enhances the positive impact on southeast Michigan," McNamara said.

Another official said local units of government were willing to help solve problems if residents can be assured that efforts are "effective, affordable and implementable."

"Everyone wants clean water but how do we pay for it?" asked John Amberger, executive director of Southeast Michigan Council of Governments. "It's something we never fully understood as we embarked on this (project)."

Show stewardship

State Sen. Loren Bennett, R-Canton, who chairs the Senate Natural Resources and Environmental Affairs Committee, said he was concerned about the financing and management of those finances.

"My fear is if we are not excellent stewards of resources that the taxpayers are willing to give to us, we will lose public support of what we're trying to do, and what we must do," Bennett said. "That dollar given to us must give us a dollar value."

Bennett was concerned about turf battles between various levels of government and development on new property. He was encouraged by redevelopment in urban areas.

State Rep. Robert Brown, D-Dearborn Heights, whose district includes part of Redford Township, said he hoped his son could take his children fishing, canoeing, or in what Brown called a "heck of a dream," swimming.

Residents want improvements

BY JOANNE MALISZEWSKI
STAFF WRITER

Wedgewood Condominiums owners aren't likely to forget that they were promised in the last 1980s that commercial would expand no further west than it is now along Ann Arbor Road.

Despite that promise - related to construction of the nearby Pinehurst offices, some of the residents who attended a meeting with Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy and Jim Anulewicz, public services director, Monday night, said they would like to review plans for the proposed new Kroger as the process moves along. McCarthy agreed.

"I think we would all like a new store," a resident said. "But I'd like it where it's zoned now."

Residents expressed concern about traffic on Ann Arbor Road and fear that a larger Kroger will only make the congestion worse.

One condo resident asked about reducing speed on the thoroughfare. "Maybe people will use the expressway insteadof using Ann Arbor Road as an expressway."

Residents said they are concerned that even with a possible binding consent agreement for the proposed project that commercial one day will creep further westward.

"I think people would like something a little more concrete," said a resident.

Yet another condo owner expressed concern for residents, primarily senior citizens, who live in the Plymouth Square Apartments and who will be finding new homes if three of the buildings are demolished to make way for a new Kroger. He also expressed concern about doing something that makes a better use of the property the shopping center now sits on.

"I would ask the supervisor and board members to turn this down and ask the owner and Kroger to sit down and improve the center," he said. "I don't think we need to keep building up that corner."

Still other residents expressed concern ab the value of their condominiums and the fact that those who live in two-story buildings will be able to see over any brick walls that would be built to buffer the center.

Resident Fred Vernon, who is opposed to the expansion of the center, said he spoke with other businesses in the center who told him they were unaware of new plans for expansion.

But Anulewicz said that property owners were informed of the April public hearing and invited to comment.

"I can't control Kroger. I can't control the apartment complex," Anulewicz said, adding property owners have the right to negotiate their deals before approaching the township.

McCarthy named for Taubman fellowship

Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy has been named the 1997 recipient of The Taubman Co. Fellowship for Executive Excellence.

As Taubman Fellow, she will participate in Harvard University's Program for Senior Executives in State and Local Governments in July.

The program is offered by the John F. Kennedy School of Government. A Southeast Michigan Council of Governments committee chose McCarthy.

The Taubman Fellowship is designed to support the development of effective leadership in local government and the region.

McCarthy has served as Plymouth Townsh'p supervisor since 1992. She represents Wayne County townships on SEMCOG's executive committee. She holds a bachelor's degree from Madonna University and a master of health services administration degree from the University of Michigan.

McCarthy also works with the Conference of Western Wayne, the Wayne County Supervisors Association and the Wayne County chapter of the Michigan Townships Association.

The Bloomfield Hills-based Taubman Co. is involved in urban and suburban retail and mixed-use projects nationwide and manages 20 regional retail developments. The fellowship includes tuition, room and board at Harvard.

and more landscaping.

Anulewicz told residents that some concessions already have been discussed such as closing the most eastern entrance to Big Boy and reducing the expansion west into open space next to the restaurant.

"We want to see this as a pilot revitalizing program to set the tone for the rest of Ann Arbor Road," Anulewicz said, adding the desire for brick walls and improved landscaping such as at Plymouth Stamping also on Ann Arbor Road.

Hiller's new store at Five Mile and Haggerty is an example of the type of construction and amenities preferred by township officials.

"We have said that the only way we will consider it is if we have the same construction here and it should continue to the other buildings (in the center)," Anulewicz said.

Mary Kay Kellas, president of the condo association, told Anulewicz and Keen McCarthy they had been promised some eight years ago there would be no more westward encroachment of commercial.

"There would be no more expansion of commercial. I agree with that," Anulewicz said.

The shopping center will remain buffered by a church on the south side and multiple housing on the west side. "This is being squared off," Anulewicz said, referring to the commercial package.

At the April public hearing, condo residents expressed concern about commercial expansion, as well as increased traffic along an already congested Ann Arbor road and within the shopping center.

Monday night they asked what would happen if years from now Dietz decides to sell or demolish all the apartment buildings for more commecial use.

"That changes the rules. We're talking about taking that whole buffer and changing the rules. You are not removing the buffer. You are moving into it," Anulewicz said.

He assured residents that concerns, such as possible demolition of the remaining apartment buildings, as well as landscaping, closing of curb cuts or entrances to the shopping center and other items, may be included in a binding consent agreement.

renovation. Frankenmuth officials are planning a streetscape improvement project of their own, to begin this fall.

"It kind of makes us excited to go back and get started with our construction," Rupprecht said.

Over lunch, Frankenmuth Department of Public Works Superintendent Randy Braeutigam told his Plymouth counterpart, Municipal Services Director Paul Sincock, of the clean-up work his department had to tackle after a tornado struck Frankenmuth June 21 last year. "We had the (tree) chipper going for weeks," Braeutigam said.

Braeutigam added that he was already getting calls from downtown Frankenmuth merchants concerned about disruptions to business from planned street and sidewalk work. "Have somebody always available to answer questions," Sincock said.

Gary Rupprecht
—Frankenmuth mayor

As fitting for Mayor Exchange Day, Loiselle asked Rupprecht if there was anything he wanted to do, as Plymouth mayor for a day.

But City Manager Steve Walters cautioned Rupprecht, "We're at our (tax) millage maximum."

The Frankenmuth mayor also praised the city's program by which residents can buy through the city uniform yard lighting lanterns. "I thought that was kind of a neat idea," he said.

Plymouth city officials were to tour Frankenmuth today. Planned stops included lunch at Zehnder's, a tour of Bronner's, and dinner at the Bavarian Inn.

County drain contract draws fire from commissioners

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

WAYNE COUNTY COMMISSION

Wayne County commissioners nearly battled to a draw Thursday over a $1.4 million construction contract that eventually went to a contractor from Macomb County.

Angelo Iafrate, a contractor from Warren, received the bid, but it wasn't until commissioners debated the merits of awarding a contract of that size to a non-Wayne County firm. Iafrate was the lowest of five bidders who met specifications.

A contingent of Detroit commissioners voted against the contract. Commissioner Bernard Parker, D-Detroit, wanted to "send a message" that Wayne County subcontractors should be hired and encourage the contractor to hire Wayne County and/or minority-owned firms for subcontractual work in the Sexton-Kilfoil Drain improvement project in Allen Park.

"There's nothing to say that the subcontractors have to be outside of Wayne County," Parker said.

But Commissioner Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia, disagreed with "protectionism at any level of government."

McCotter argued Wayne County would not obtain the lowest bids if it started limiting contracts to Wayne County firms. If county governments in Macomb, Oakland and Wayne counties restricted contracts to their home counties, in the end "the taxpayers are getting hurt," McCotter said.

Chairman Ricardo Solomon concurred with Parker's belief that Wayne County or minority firms would not be subcontracted by a Macomb contractor. Hugh MacDonald, chief of staff for the Wayne County Department of Public Services, said the contractor still needed to obtain more subcontractors.

McCotter said the county needed to be careful in walking a fine line between "encouragement and a mandate."

"We can be held legally liable for contracts rejected for illegal reasons," McCotter said.

After Parker responded that the commission was allowed to reject that bid or any other bid the majority so desired, McCotter warned that any comments made at the meeting were a part of public record that could be used in legal arguments in lawsuits against Wayne County.

At first six of 14 commissioners voted to award the contract. McCotter, Vice Chair Kay Beard, D-Westland; Commissioners Bruce Patterson, R-Canton; Edward Boike, D-Taylor; William O'Neil, D-Allen Park, and Chris Cavanagh, D-Grosse Pointe voted to approve the contract to Iafrate.

Seven opposed, including Solomon, Parker, Vice Chair Pro Tem Edna Bell, and other Detroit Democrats Robert Blackwell, George Cushingberry, Ken Cockrel and Jewel Ware.

Commissioner Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, was absent.

Commissioners then debated over what to do next with the contract.

It was suggested the contract be sent to a committee. Solomon said he wanted to meet with Parker and the contractor to encourage that Wayne County firms should be used, then he would place the item on the next agenda for emergency approval.

But McCotter said the contractor had a profit incentive to keep subcontracting costs low. Downriver residents were also Wayne County taxpayers, he said, and it was the commission's "duty" to act on their behalf.

Beard said the item was already properly bid, and the county had received lowest bids that met the criteria.

A vote to send the item to committee was rejected, 8-6, with Blackwell and Hubbard joining the remaining suburban commissioners to reject that action.

Hubbard then moved for commissioners to reconsider the item, to which Cushingberry objected, saying the rules called for it to be deferred to the next meeting.

But the commission's attorney Ben Washburn said the reconsideration bid "was appropriate."

Several commissioners pointed out that no Wayne County firms had responded to the original bids, and that the contract that was awarded to the low firm that responded.

Commissioners approved the contract, 8-5, with Blackwell and Hubbard joining the six other commissioners to approve the contract. Cushingberry left the room and did not vote.

SC class tells how to plan special events

"Putting on events, especially in today's world, must be approached as if the event were a business," said Mike Watts, event planner extraordinaire and executive director of the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Watts will teach the Schoolcraft College class The Great Event in two three-hour sessions beginning Thursday, June 19.

"You need a marketing plan, a business plan and reasonable goals," Watts said. "In this class, I will teach how to do an up-front analysis of event planning so that people don't spend months trying to accomplish something and still not meet their goals. Having all good intentions does not determine success."

Watts' class is designed to teach sound planning and project management strategies whether the event is a seminar, conference, retreat or fund-raiser. Participants will learn to plan an event which is on time, on budget and presented with no major problems.

Watts, president of Watts-Up, Inc., also is the executive director of the Motor City Music Awards, and coordinates the Budweiser Downtown Hoedown.

The class fee is $52. For information or to register, call (313) 462-4448.

Schoolcraft College is located at 18600 Haggerty Road, between Six Mile and Seven Mile roads, just west of I-275.

Rivers to hold meeting on environment, toxic waste

U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers, D-13th District, will be holding an Environmental Task Force meeting on Wednesday, May 28, from 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the U.S. Department of Interior — Great Lakes Center, 1451 Green Road, in Ann Arbor.

Among the topics discussed will be the disposal of waste with high levels of polychlorinated biphenyls (PCB) contamination. An expert on environmental justice from the University of Michigan's School of Natural Resources and Environment and a scientist from the Great Lakes Science Center will join the meeting as guest speakers.

State board mission headed for compromise

AP – State Board of Education members appear to be heading toward a compromise over a revised mission statement that will avoid a minority filibuster.

It would allow the board in June to repeal its 1995 mission statement, drafted by Clark Durant, R-Grosse Pointe, and replace it with a statement noting the Michigan Constitution lays out the board's role.

"The constitution clearly states the mission of the board is leadership and general supervision of all public education. . . That's all we need," said board president Kathleen Straus at the May 15 meeting in Lansing.

Straus, D-Detroit, negotiated behind the scenes with Durant to work out the deal. Durant's original mission statement laid heavy emphasis on religion and parents' rights. Durant and Gary Wolfram, R-Hillsdale, threatened to filibuster in order to block a vote on the new statement.

■ In other action, the board warned legislators that imposing a moratorium on the reporting of results of the High School Proficiency Test on diplomas and school transcripts would cause an administrative nightmare.

Straus said the board had spent more time than she intended on the new statement, but it was important to repeal the Durant vision statement. "If we dropped it and ignored it, it's still on the books. We don't think it should be on the books," she said.

In other action, the board warned legislators that imposing a moratorium on the reporting of results of the High School Proficiency Test on diplomas and school transcripts would cause an administrative nightmare.

A Senate-passed measure would bar schools from using the terms "proficient," "novice" and "not yet novice" on diplomas and transcripts of students graduating this spring.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Art Ellis said the measure may not be signed in time for schools to notify parents that they may opt to have the tests results shown on their students' transcripts.

The proficiency tests, given in 11th grade, cover reading, writing, science and math. Many parents have objected that the term "novice" would harm their children's chances of being admitted to college.

Since Broadband is about to change your life, we thought you might like to know what it is. Perhaps we should begin with what Broadband isn't. It's not another bit of techno-hype about some brave new world that will arrive sometime in the next millennium. The fact is Broadband is here. Today. And its power is already changing the lives of those who are connected to it. Much like water, gas and electricity, Broadband is about to become one of your home's most vital connections. When these utilities first came to our homes, they fundamentally changed the way we lived. Our lives were made easier. We had more time to pursue our dreams. We believe Broadband will have that kind of impact. ⊙ So what is Broadband? Simply put, it's a wire with enormous capacity, a wire with two-way capabilities. A wire that can do more than we can conceive of today. The wire you now think of as bringing you cable TV is being transformed into something that can literally bring you the future. Broadband will give your computer the power to be as entertaining as your TV. Your TV will become as smart as your computer. And you will be able to communicate in ways you never imagined.

⊙ How is this being done? By building new fiber-optic networks, we are enabling Broadband to reach its full potential. What that means is some pretty amazing changes in the way people are doing things. In communities around Boston, Detroit and Jacksonville, where our networks are already in place, Broadband is allowing people to download from the Internet up to 50 times faster, providing the fastest Internet connection to the home. This supersonic speed is radically changing the way people use the Net. Now instead of racing to get to the library before it closes, your kids can hang out at home and race from the Louvre to the Smithsonian, downloading masterpieces in a matter of milliseconds. ⊙ Who is leading the way? The irrefutable power of Broadband led to the creation of a new kind of company. We are MediaOne. We are an organization formed by the union of a visionary communications company, U S WEST Media Group, and a state-of-the-art entertainment provider, Continental Cablevision. MediaOne is defining an entirely new industry – Broadband services. We are a company committed to the communities we serve. As we put in place our Broadband networks, we are making it our responsibility to wire your children's schools. Because at MediaOne, we believe that every student should have the opportunity to benefit from Broadband.

⊙ Each of us will take advantage of its power in our own unique way.

Eight million homes will know the power of Broadband. In the next two years we will connect over 1000 communities across America. Once you're connected, you'll no longer have to spend hours zipping around town doing errands. You can spend Saturday mornings with your feet up, accomplishing the same things by zipping around your keyboard. When your daughter gets married, you can show your relatives on the other side of the world exactly what they missed, because Broadband's unique two-way capabilities will let you send home movies through your computer as well as receive them. And you'll do it all at a speed you never imagined possible. Broadband will give you local sports, news and weather on command. And once you're hooked up, you may never take another trip to your video store, because our digital TV service will bring you all the sports, movies and entertainment you want. No one will remain untouched by Broadband. It has the power to make all of our lives just a bit easier, a bit more fun.

⊙ This is the way the future will arrive. MediaOne has invested a great deal in Broadband because we believe this is the way our children and our world will move forward. Broadband is the way we will work. This is the way we will play. This is the way we will learn. Now and in the next generation, this is the way our inspiration will arrive.

Turnaround

True winners deserve honors

As the academic year winds to a halt, we all take time to honor those who have achieved high honors throughout the course of their scholastic careers.

These are the students whose names will or have always appeared in print for their achievements. And let's not forget the students who are equally honored for their athletic abilities.

And then there's another group of kids whose achievements are just as great for the distance they have traveled. Unfortunately, these are the students who are often overlooked.

Thankfully, however, a relatively new program sponsored by Super Bowl Lanes in Canton, Continental Cable and the Plymouth-Canton Community Business Education Partnership has come on the scene to give credit where credit is due.

Twenty-nine elementary, middle and high school students were recognized with the 1997 Turnaround Achievement Awards.

Effort, perseverance and commitment are the key words and attitudes heralded by the awards programs.

These youths deserve accolades because they have conquered obstacles that can thwart many life-experienced adults.

The Turnaround awardees have fought to overcome the obstacles in their lives to make improvements and to achieve. Some of the obstacles are as tenacious as poor attitudes and behavior, as well as substance abuse and family problems.

Students who were honored recently in the second annual Turnaround Achievement Awards thanked family, teachers and friends for helping pull them out of the depths and create positive change.

But let's give credit where credit is due. No one can make you change except yourself. And for that alone, these students deserve exceptional recognition. Change is difficult. When you're young and without the tools, resources and sensibilities to know you're on a wrong road, change can often be insurmountable.

Yet these students have managed to either bring up their grades, kick a substance abuse problem, get a grasp on personal and family problems and achieve a future for themselves.

We applaud the sponsors – Super Bowl Lanes, Continental Cable and Business-Education partnership – for this most necessary and heartwarming program, and we encourage its continuation.

The Turnaround achievers have not only set a new direction for themselves, but have shown their peers and perhaps even family members how to persevere, make the effort and remain committed to their goals.

Congratulations and good luck!

Reflect on Memorial Day

■ The day was known as Decoration Day until 1882 when the name was changed to Memorial Day and soldiers who had died in all wars were honored. It was, admittedly, a somber day, but that was the point.

Come Monday, millions of Americans will observe their own personal rites of spring. Many (weather permitting, of course) will fire up the backyard grill, others will use the day to get their tomato and pepper plants into the ground and homeowners who follow the EMIL formula will treat their lawns to the second fertilizer application of the year.

The occasion is Memorial Day or, more accurately, Memorial Day Observed. But most of the modern "observances" are a far cry from those envisioned by Union General John A. Logan when he issued General Order No. 11 in 1868:

"The 30th of May, 1868, is designated for the purpose of strewing with flowers or otherwise decorating the graves of comrades who died in defense of their country during the late rebellion ...

"In this observance no form or ceremony is prescribed, but posts and comrades will in their own way arrange such fitting services and testimonials of respect as circumstances may permit."

The day was known as Decoration Day until 1882 when the name was changed to Memorial Day and soldiers who had died in all wars were honored. It was, admittedly, a somber day, but that was the point.

Just when that point was lost is not clear, but it probably has something to do with a declaration by President Richard Nixon in 1971 designating the last Monday in May as Memorial Day, thereby guaranteeing everyone a three-day weekend. And who wants to spend three days being somber?

In any case, when you're throwing the ribs on the grill or getting the boat ready for the lake, take a moment to reflect on what Memorial Day is really about. It's the least you can do.

Let's not trivialize stalking

■ Geake's amendment allows a prosecutor the discretion of evaluating a situation before prosecuting.

Stalking is a serious problem.

No one should have to be victimized by a stalker, especially not children. Stalking has often led to serious assault and even murder.

The Michigan Senate last week passed a bill to protect children by increasing the penalty for stalking and aggravated stalking if a victim were less than 18 years of age at any time he or she was harassed by a stalker. The bill, authored by Sen. Art Miller Jr., would make stalking a minor a felony punishable by up to five years imprisonment and a maximum fine of $10,000. Aggravated stalking of a minor would be punishable by up to 20 years imprisonment and a maximum fine of $20,000.

We support this legislation, but we also commend Sen. Robert Geake for adding a common sense amendment. Geake's amendment provides that the stalker be two or more years older than the victim. Geake rightly argues that teen-agers frequently engage in telephone bickering when their relationships go wrong. The participants in a normal teenage romance gone sour should not be threatened with felony prosecution.

Geake's amendment allows a prosecutor the discretion of evaluating a situation before prosecuting.

Stalking is a serious matter that shouldn't be trivialized by foolish prosecution.

'A fast one'

The school board knows they pulled a fast one on the school election and they will probably get their way.

I would warn them to forget passing the next millage election when they need more operating money. In a couple of years with the promise to teachers of a yearly increase etc., they will be using 91 percent of the revenue for teachers salaries and benefits.

The busses and computers they bought with 25-year bonds will need replacement in a few years so another request will be made for more millage. It doesn't look to me that there is any end for more school millage.

The voters will remember the attitude the school board had on this election. I don't mind paying more in taxes when the majority pass the millage but I hate to keep paying more taxes when only 23 percent are running the show.

I would like to answer the writer who thinks the township was wrong in turning down abatements. The township has location, location, location for industry.

Industry makes money by being next to the expressways that go in four different directions, not in a corn field 50 miles from nowhere. A very successful friend taught me that lesson years ago. Industry will build regardless of abatements.

In Northville Township, OIS received $70 million from the federal government and the state of Michigan and then had the nerve to ask for an abatement and received it. Davidson, one of the richest men in Michigan, can give Israel and the University of Michigan $25 million each, and that is wonderful. But who makes up the difference? The property owners.

When Johnson Controls built the second plant, they did not say that they would go someplace else if they didn't get an abatement. The township board bent over backward. They are a very successful company.

The school board thinks they are pretty smart today so lots of luck on your future millage requests.

MEAP test

The purpose of this letter is to convey our concerns regarding the timing and appropriateness of the MEAP test for elementary children.

The timing of the fourth grade reading and math test is inappropriate because many children in the autumn of fourth grade are still in the concrete stage of learning. In this stage, children need repeated hands-on experiences and activity-based lessons to be able to apply what they have learned. When teachers deviate from this type of instruction and assessment, children show many stress-related symptoms.

According to the preeminent cognitive psychologist of our time, Jean Piaget, the concrete stage of development extends from ages seven-11 or 12. During this stage, children's thoughts are limited by their actual experiences. They are only beginning to pay attention to more than one idea at a time. They are not yet capable of dealing with abstractions or inferences.

Elementary school children are excellent observational scientists, but they are not yet able to go from a general principle to an anticipated outcome (like going from a theory to a hypothesis). The MEAP is asking children to do just this.

Many of the MEAP questions for reading are not found in the text. The children have to apply prior knowledge to the reading selection - a difficult task for children at this age. Prior knowledge comes from information and experiences in life. Schools do not control life beyond the classroom and the range of experiences is often great.

Children come from different types of backgrounds and have a variety of experiences. Some of the factors that affect a school's MEAP results are divorce, substance abuse, attention deficit disorders and uprooted, transitory families. These are not excuses, they are factors of reality. Is it possible that the test is culturally biased?

Another issue of concern is the discrepancy between Michigan's new definition of reading and the MEAP. The new definition states:

Reading is a process which enables us to make sense of print. When we read, we use what we already know, combined with the print we see, to make sense of what we read. Reading is about making meaning. It is not about saying words. Reading does not occur unless the reader understands what has been read.

In our classrooms, instruction and assessment are based on this excellent definition of reading. The MEAP reduces reading to an isolated passage and a list of multiple choice answers. This is not constructive or meaningful.

We are not objecting to appropriate well-timed assessment tools. But the MEAP does not fit either of these criteria. We are looking for an instrument that evaluates each individual's progress and strengths.

This instrument would have a meaningful context and would fit our population of children. Then assessment would be closely linked to the reality of the active learning environments that we foster in our classrooms.

POINTS OF VIEW

Domestic violence awareness needed

The recent articles in the Plymouth Observer regarding domestic violence are certainly a reflection of increased public awareness brought about by the media and very public O.J. Simpson trials.

Domestic violence is a serious problem in our society with predominantly male defendants. However, female on male violence is neither miniscule nor without serious consequences.

State police figures for 1995 report male victims in 45 percent of domestic homicides, 32 percent of aggravated assaults and 18 percent of simple assaults. These statistics strongly suggest that female on male domestic violence is much greater than the 5 percent commonly reported by women's groups. Recognizing that female on male domestic violence is significant does not negate nor dilute the seriousness or magnitude of the male on female domestic violence problem.

The articles also quote comments by several police officers such as "taking the complaint out of her hands" and "protecting women from boyfriends and husband." These quotes serve to foster the stereotype of the male aggressor. In particular, these comments indicate a prejudice against the male by the officers who are interested in carrying out a pro-arrest policy – a policy that dictates that police must determine who is at fault and who is the aggressor.

ANDREW KOPYSTYNSKY

Limited comment was reported regarding false arrest reports to gain leverage in custody or divorce proceedings. There was no comment regarding false reports to deflect responsibility for initiating physical violence. In a basically he said-she said scenario with no physical evidence or witness, there is a prejudice against the male. Allegations are easily made. The state takes over the prosecution. If the defendant chooses to contest the charge, even successfully passing a polygraph unequivocally is of no help since this is not admissible in a criminal assault trial.

The costs to the defendant are significant regardless of the final outcome. Even though a substantial number of these cases are dropped or found not guilty, there are serious social, professional and financial repercussions to these defendants. There are no repercussions in the domestic violence statutes for false allegations. It would be naive in the extreme to suggest that this male prejudice and the lack of legal consequences are not used to gain advantage.

The 1994 amendments do address some deficiencies in the domestic violence statutes. Legal consequences for false allegations would go a long way toward reducing the incidence of manipulation of the legal system for personal gain. Increased awareness of the general public especially the police, attorneys, judges and female prosecutors of both sides of the domestic violence problem would certainly help to make the judicial system impartial.

Andrew Kopystynsky is a physician who lives in Plymouth.

Lax laws leave deadwood on voter rolls

Finally, a prominent Democrat has weighed into the fray over Michigan's lax voter registration laws.

Mark Grebner is an East Lansing attorney, political consultant and Democratic member of the Ingham County Board of Commissioners. I enjoy his irreverent bumper stickers: "No worse than the rest" and "He may be a fool, but he's our fool."

Grebner's recent speech to the Lansing chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists was quoted at length in Bill Ballenger's Inside Michigan Politics newsletter. Grebner blistered my media brethren and sisteren for shallow election coverage, then turned to a favorite topic of mine, the alleged poor voter turnout statistics:

"Often the statistic is utter crap ... There are 6.6 million registered voters in the state. Unfortunately, two million of them are dead ... or they've moved out of the state ... or they're duplicates.

"And so you people report that there's a 61 percent turnout or a 48 percent turnout ... 37 percent of the people who didn't vote, though, aren't here."

Grebner estimated the actual turnout of live voters at 83-84 percent in 1996 and 91-92 percent in 1992.

His firm investigated a Detroit judicial race in which a petition circulator apparently took "voter" names off a TV screen – a baseball roster and a TV cast. The circulator, who filed about 150 petitions, signed as "Louis Robinson" and "Lewis Robinson."

There was no such person, but there was a Louella Robinson with "suspiciously similar handwriting." Five Louella Robinsons were registered to vote, all with the same birth date, all with the same handwriting. "It wasn't her fault in this case – she only votes once," Grebner said.

The problem is that under Democratic legislative and judicial influence, Michigan can't clean out its "deadwood." The theory is that Democratic voters are so stupid they vote only in presidential elections every four years and ignore the gubernatorial, legislative, city, school board, and millage elections in between.

■ ...Names of voters who have died or moved must be kept on the rolls for eons.

So the remedy is that names of voters who have died or moved must be kept on the rolls for eons. In addition, the federal "motor voter" law (vetoed by George Bush in '92 but signed by Bill Clinton in '93) prevents local clerks from canceling the registrations of inactive voters.

Result: Each year 10 percent of voters who no longer live in the area swell the voter lists. Grebner figures 37 percent are deadwood.

The Republican Legislature, in its 1996 lame duck session, sought to curb possible fraud with a law requiring voters to show photo IDs. "The possibility for fraud is out there," said Rep. Bob Brakenridge, GOP guru on voting questions.

Attorney General Frank Kelley, a Democrat, ruled the photo ID law is a burden that violates the U.S. Constitution ("equal protection of the laws"). Kelley said such restrictive measures aren't needed because "Michigan already prevents voter fraud by less drastic means."

Kelley is wrong, of course. And he obviously hasn't read the chapter on voter fraud in Sabato and Simpson's 1996 book, "Dirty Little Secrets: The Pervasiveness of Corruption in American Politics."

Nevertheless, Democratic lawmakers still buy what Grebner calls the "crap" statistics and want to encourage even greater turnout by conducting mail elections. The House has passed a bill by Rep. Agnes Dobronski, D-Dearborn, to allow anyone to vote by absentee in any election – no fibs about being ill or out of town.

Secretary of State Candice Miller argues, with much logic, that Michigan won't be ready for mail-in elections until a statewide computer system, due in a couple of years, can discard the deadwood registrations.

It makes one wonder: If we have fraud in collecting petition signatures, if we have a circulator registered to vote in five locations, if we have two million non-existent registered voters, might not there be Chicago-style fraud at the polls that so far has gone undetected?

Tim Richard reports on the local implications of state and regional events.

English language unites heterogeneous country

We had some visitors recently from Toronto. At dinner one night, talk turned to the separatist movement that failed by an eyelash to take the (French-speaking) Province of Quebec out of the (bilingual by law, English-speaking by fact) Canadian nation. Some representative quotes:

"In the bars in Quebec City, they call you an 'English dog' if they decide you're not a francophone (French speaker).

"By law in Quebec, all signs are in French. All the English-speaking business and professional people are moving out."

"If the vote had succeeded, I suppose we'd have had to call out the army. There's no way we're going to break up our country."

Here in Michigan, just over the border from Canada, it's a little unsettling to hear otherwise calm and reasonable people speak casually about calling out the army. But it's a perfect example of how incendiary ethnic and language politics can become, even in a country as superficially phlegmatic in character and mostly homogeneous in race as Canada.

Now think about how explosive such politics can be in a country as heterogeneous as our own – a country with an immigration law that through unintended consequence by 2050 will produce this demographic mix:

- Less than half European-descended whites.
- 25 percent Hispanic.
- 12 percent African American.
- The rest a mix of Asians, Native Americans and people of mixed race.

Uniquely in the world, America is culture that is built not on a shared history but on a promised future. The American Dream – if you work hard and play by the rules, you and your family will become more prosperous than ever before in your genetic history – is still alive and kicking.

"We've never had this kind of diversity before," says Loyola University sociologist Philip Lyden, "and neither has anybody else. The big question of the next century is, what kind of society is America going to be?"

"The country's going to balkanized," predicts William Frey, the respected director of the University of Michigan's Population Studies Center.

The parts of the country most affected will be the West and the Northeast, with the Midwest least impacted. According to the U. S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, from 1991-96, more than 89,000 immigrants moved to Michigan. In a representative sample, they came from: Iraq (8,882); India (7,674); Mexico (6,118); former Soviet Union (5,437); Canada (5,392); China (4,396); Vietnam (3,843); Poland (3,240). Quite a mix.

PHILIP POWER

■ The clash between what we have been and what we are becoming is the most intense in our schools ...

It's not surprising to see notices in Japanese in Auburn Hills, grocery stores featuring Indian food in Farmington and Arab markets in Dearborn.

The clash between what we have been and what we are becoming is the most intense in our schools, still struggling to help make Americans out of successive waves of immigrants and still flopping between compassion and realism.

Some advocates argue passionately that teaching kids who speak little English in their native language preserves the integrity of their cultures and gives them a needed lift toward fluency in English. Some years ago, this line of thought went so far in Ann Arbor (where else?) that some black parents sued the school district to require "Black English" ("Ebonics," in recent terms) be taught to black kids.

I can't agree. Sure, we ought to give kids who can't speak English a helping hand while they're learning. But to do anything more is just going to hurt them. At the end of the day, they'll have to learn English in order to participate fully in the society to which they (or their parents) wanted willingly to come.

The one thing that unites this country that is more heterogeneous than any other in history is the English language. Doing anything to reduce this common bond is to play with fire.

Deadlines don't go with power surges

My computer, the one that sits upstairs in our den, the one I always write my column on, fried this week. So I made do. There was no other way.

And because the computer's death occurred just before my deadline, time was short. I had to write, begin over again, wherever and whenever. So I began in the family room.

I sat on the floor on the carpet, amid the children and toys and the usual clutter and chaos. The first draft A.C. (After Computer) was drafted in broad daylight in the middle of the morning. The three youngest children were about. And one of those children (5-year-old Joe) was a few feet away, lying on the couch, recovering from the hydrocele surgery he had undergone the day before. Hydrocele surgery? Don't ask. Believe me, if you know, you know. If you don't, you don't want to know. And in 10 years, if you see Joe, don't mention it, OK? Thanks!

Anyway, while drafting and crafting the week's column, my children asked questions. About Legos and toy train tracks and Etch-A-Sketch shaker-eraser noises. And they made requests, quite ordinary requests, but a lot of them, and they needed everything and anything done right now, RIGHT NOW! That made drafting and crafting in broad daylight rather difficult.

Over the years, I've found that writing the "Family Room" is more efficiently done in the middle of the night, when all question-askers, request-makers and thing-needers are asleep. The light burns softly in my den and the computer glows green into the wee hours and my work gets done. And when Friday morning comes, that's deadline time, the "Family Room" takes a very brief, yet efficient journey to the newspaper office electronically, via e-mail. Right from my den, right from my computer to some computer at the newspaper office. Click, whir, just like that.

But there can be no more clocking, whirring, just-like-thatting and no tapping on the keys in the middle of the night up in my den because our fairly new computer, our fairly new monitor and our fairly new printer – all of them – in one fell swoop, became fairly dead. A brief, yet intense, power surge murdered the three victims. They

Collector unravels vintage clothing's history

■ More than 20 years ago, Beth Turza was introduced to the world of vintage clothing. Today, her penchant for collecting antique garments has become much more.

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Beth Turza credits men with her affection for antique clothing.

The first taught her about and helped her to understand period clothing. The second, her husband, spawned her interest to collect as the result of his "living history" hobby.

It all dates back to 1976, when clothing was plentiful and close to home. Now, under the moniker of "A Touch of Past," she teaches 19th century millinery classes and is a collections researcher, period clothing lecturer and historical clothing consultant.

"Clothing was more plentiful back then," said the Canton resident. "When I started collecting, I'd go to the second-hand stores and thrift shops. Now, pieces are few and far between."

According to Turza, who has worked with the historical costume collection at the Dearborn Historical Museum and as a volunteer at Henry Ford Museum, Britain's Queen Victoria lent her name to the period which spanned the more than 60 years (1837-1901) she reigned. Her coronation at the age of 19 marked the dawn of a new era. In the U.S., women were looking to Europe for fashion inspiration.

"The designers in Europe would depict the latest fashions in illustrations in periodicals," Turza said. "Periodicals here, like Goode's, would copy them and call them Americanized.

"Women had to depend on periodicals for the patterns, but they were not to scale. And the sewing machine was invented in 1846, but you didn't see it for home use until the 1860s."

In the 1830s, women's dresses had a subdued shoulder line, with leg-of-mutton sleeves and high waistlines. Hair was worn high with curls at the side of the head and hats were on the large side.

While that was a gay and carefree time, the 1840s was a time of great change. By then, Queen Victoria had married Prince Albert and had many children. Women's clothing was very demure and had a confined look. They wore a long corset, and their dresses had tight fitting sleeves. Hair was worn parted in the middle and slicked down with hair oils.

The next decade was a somewhat freer period for women. Pagoda sleeves belled out at the elbow, steel-caged crinolines or hoops replaced layers of petticoats and plaids were very fashionable.

The styles of the early 1860s mirrored the Civil War, bringing out the military look. Intricate braid work, brass buttons, very small hoops and a very fitted look were hallmarks of the time.

But by 1868-69, long trains were popular and women began to use skirt supporters to hook up their skirts. And by the 1870s, dresses sported bustles to handle the extra material.

"The men would say that there was no need for a street sweeper, the women do a good job," Turza told her audience.

The mermaid look took over the late 1870s. Dresses were so fitted that women couldn't lift their legs to get into a buggy, but by the 1880s, bustles were back. Designers also mixed velvets with wool and created bonnets to match outfits.

Then came the Gay '90s. The shirtwaist was big and woolen jackets were worn with skirts.

"Women were feeling more independent," said Turza. "They worked and needed dresses that were more professional looking. Hats were worn and bonnets were gone completely."

And by the time Victoria died in 1901, the Gibson Girl look with a flat front on a fitted skirt and a puff front on blouses was the trend.

Because clothing was costly and time-consuming to make, it was not disposable. In most cases, garments were restyled to suit the times. And to remove stains or oils, they would use cornstarch or go to the chemist to get appropriate chemicals.

Among the pieces of her collection Turza showed off an 1880s wedding suit, machine made by a professional. White in color, it feature half inch appliqued silk ribbon on each scallop. It is so tiny, it won't fit on a her size 6 dress form.

"I think it's a size 1 or a size 3; it has a 19-inch waist," she said. "Women would start corseting at age 8, so the ribs wouldn't have a way to expand."

White wedding dresses were fashionable with wealthier women, but for the general public, brown or dark green dresses were more in style.

She also pointed out that white and black artifacts tend to crop up than colored outfits. One explana-

Seniors give gardens TLC

BY KIMBERLY A. MORTSON
STAFF WRITER

You can take the boy out of the country, but you can never take the country out of the boy, says John Woodcock, a 90-year-old gardener and longtime member of the Wayne County Senior Citizens Gardening Association.

Woodcock is one of approximately 150 Wayne County elders who maintain a 50-by-50-foot garden plot at the old Eloise Hospital site off Henry Ruff Road, south of Michigan Avenue in Westland.

The program first blossomed in 1973 with six gardeners. The following year, more than 40 plots of land were tended to by senior citizens who harvested produce such as corn, watermelon, tomatoes, cabbage, squash and even tobacco.

Woodcock, an active gardener since the program's inception, said reaping the benefits of his labor isn't the main reason he continues to garden, "it's mostly a fun thing."

The Wayne resident and his 60-year-old son, Max Woodcock, care for one plot that yields tomatoes, corn, beans, radishes and lettuce, among other things.

Woodcock said he and his son give most of their produce away to family and friends like many other gardeners.

"I remember this one guy that would set up a 4-by-8-foot table of produce and have more than 12 varieties of vegetables," said Frank Rembisz, director of Wayne County Office on Aging. "He even raised tobacco."

Rembisz's office established a license with Ford Land Development, a division of Ford Motor Company, owner of the 15-acre site in addition to surrounding properties, to use the property for $1 a year through the year 2000.

The land was previously owned by the county which operated a greenhouse south of Michigan Avenue between Henry Ruff and Merriman. In 1993, however, vandals allegedly set fire to the structure and an adjacent barn, erected in 1837, containing thousands of dollars worth of farming equipment, tools and supplies. The greenhouse was destroyed and the Wayne County Senior Citizens Garden & Greenhouse Association was left without a place for the program.

The aging department then coordinated efforts between the association and the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency (WCRESA) to locate in a portion of another greenhouse off Venoy Road adjacent to the WCRESA administrative building and Oakwood Hospital Annapolis Center-Wayne.

A group effort

Seniors Jean Barr and Mima Brawner now oversee the daily operations of the greenhouse with an extended staff of volunteers who propagate and sell annuals, perennials, vegetables, bedding and house plants year-round.

Barr and Brawner are not county employees, but serve the community through a Title 5 federal grant from the National Association of Hispanic Elders.

According to the Garden City senior, the garden association flourished in the late 1980s when the community garden was declared the Largest in the World by the Guinness Book of World Records in 1988 and again in 1990.

Rembisz said at the peak of the programs membership, more than 450 gardeners cultivated "more than one million square feet" of land.

Today, the garden association offers seniors the opportunity to utilize greenhouse facilities, nurture a garden and socialize through luncheons, recreation activities and other events at the county greenhouse facility.

"We do some of it all here," said Barr.

Barr, 71, is the only master gardener in the association who received certification in 1983 through Michigan State University's Cooperative Extension Center.

Born and raised on a 16,000-acre farm in rural West Virginia, Barr's parents made farming their livelihood, inspiring her love of gardening.

"I'm not a fancy gardener," said Barr. "I grow beans and vegetables. I don't know what I would do with myself if I didn't come here everyday though."

More than camaraderie

Barr is not unlike most of the garden association membership who enjoy the camaraderie as much as they do the activity of cultivating a garden. Many of the seniors blanch and can their vegetables to carry them through the winter months when produce becomes less available and more expensive.

The two elderly women who manage greenhouse affairs say the sale of annuals, house plants, vegetables and garden plots provide the main source of funding that keep the greenhouse and garden association thriving. Barr estimates approximately $7,000-8,000 is raised annually through year-round sales of everything from marigolds and tomato plants to ferns and holiday poinsettias.

"We used to dig out plants and flowers from our own yards," said Barr. "We now propagate our own varieties and buy plugs – we don't raise things from seeds anymore."

Barr said her master gardener certification has been very beneficial to the continued betterment of the greenhouse through her extensive knowledge of chemicals and fertilizers.

"I provide quite a bit of information to gardeners who call or come in with questions," said Barr, "and if I don't know the answer I refer to many of the books I have. I even had to pass a test in forestry to receive certification."

With the recent rain showers and occasional nighttime frosts, garden plots have gone unplowed because they are too moist.

The association anticipates gardeners can begin work by the end of May after plots are tilled and staked off.

The greenhouse, located off Venoy Road between Michigan Avenue and Van Born Road, is currently open 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The public is welcome to purchase vegetables, annuals and perennials (begonias, dusty miller, tomatoes, peppers, geraniums, petunias, impatiens, etc.) with proceeds benefiting the Wayne County Senior Citizens Garden & Greenhouse Association.

If you would like more information about garden plots, call the greenhouse at, 467-1540. The cost is $15 per plot, and individuals must be Wayne County residents who are 55 years and older.

Successful gardening means starting at the bottom

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Jodi Cook gladly tells you she enjoys what she does for a living. Armed with a degree in horticulture, she happily gets her hands dirty working with perennial plants.

Greenhouse grower for Brainer's Greenhouse in Wixom, she has the real dirt on gardening .

According to Cook, a former nursery manager and grower in Plymouth, successful gardening starts with a good foundation ... dirt. Good dirt sustains growth and provides water and nutrients.

"Starting from the bottom up is the key," she said. "Good dirt should be light and crumble and fall apart in your hand. It should have food water absorption and an availability of nutrients."

But for the most part, Mother Nature doesn't give every gardener good dirt. Some are bestowed with clay soil, heaviest and thickest of dirt which is hard to penetrate and change. While it is very fertile and has nutrients, it lacks the movement of oxygen and water.

However, some gardeners deal with sandy soil that's "great for digging and weeding and easy for plants to root in, but the water and nutrients move through it fast," and some are blessed with loam soil.

"It has clay, sand, silt and nutrients, it drains well and it has oxygen flowing through it," Cook explained. "It's a gardener's delight."

The only way of improving clay and sandy soils is the addition of organic matter like compost, humus, peat moss, manure and leaf mold, and inorganic materials like gypsum, vermiculite and sand.

According to Cook, compost materials loosen clay soil and improve drainage, while humus improves its aeration, allowing water to move easier. Manure also loosens clay and improves drainage, with leaf mold offering a source of nutrients and improvement of soil structure.

Of the inorganic additives, gypsum helps create large soil clumps than clay, while the sand improves aeration and drainage problems.

Mixing in organic materials can add texture and volume to sandy soil and contain nutrients (compost and manure) and help retain water and soluble nutrients (humus). Peat moss helps absorb water and add water retention ability and leaf mold provides a source of nutrients and improves soil structure. Adding vermiculite also improves aeration and moisture retention, Cook said.

Mulches like shredded newspaper, grass clippings and shredded bark also give gardeners an edge.

"They do help with evaporation and soil temperature," Cook explained. "Mulches keep the soil cool in the summer and warm in the fall. They also give a finishing touch and make a garden stand out."

But she cautioned about using bark which is a "nitrogen lover." Nitrogen encourages leaf and stem growth and helps green up plants, but bark tends to take away nitrogen from plants as it breaks down.

Once the soil is ready for planting, the next task a gardener faces is understanding what partial sun and partial shade means in reference to plants.

"You almost need a degree to figure it out," said Cook. "Most plants are sun loving. Sun and temperature are the keys to most plants."

According to Cook. full sun is six hours of direct sunlight between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. while light shade or partially sunny is six hours of filtered sun. Partial or semi shade is four-six hours of sun with partial shade, and full or dense shade is less than four hours of sunlight with heavy shade.

Perennial ferns take to densely shaded areas as do some hostas, and fuschia are "great for shaded areas," Cook said. Among the sun lovers are the bearded iris, which can also do well in semi shade, day lilies, sedum, which is a drought-resistant perennial, and bleeding heart.

While Cook's list of annuals includes sun-loving salvia, geraniums and flowering kale, growers have come out with many new varieties of differing heights.

"You can almost set the moods for gardens with annuals," she said. "Their intense colors can bring a burst of energy to any garden."

Some tips on selecting plants

Knowing what plants go where can translate into a beautiful flower garden, according to Jodi Cook.

If you're working in a sunny area, she recommends such annuals as corn poppy, dusty miller, salvia, marigolds, petunias, geraniums and ageratum or such perennials as baby's breath, black-eyed Susan, blanket flower, butterfly weed, catmint, coreopsis, purple coneflower and yarrow.

Annuals favoring shady areas include forget-me-nots, New Guinea impatiens and begonias, while on the perennial side are bleeding heart, hosta, Japanese primrose, lady's mantle and the Japanese painted, maidenhair, ostrich and lady ferns.

For annuals partial to either sun or shade, there's flowering tobacco, pansies, sweet alyssum, New Guinea impatiens and begonias as well as such perennials as coral bells, campanula, goatsbeard, hardy geranium, Japanese anemone and monkshood to name a few.

When it comes to planning your floral display, flowers that bloom from mid-May through mid-June include bleeding hearts, delphinium, iris magnifica, oriental poppy and peonies, she said.

The mid-summer (late June through July) include astlibes, bee balm, daylilies (try Stella D'oro), early blooming white phlox, hollyhock, hollyhock mallow, Asian lilies and snakeroot.

The late summer (July through early September) flowering plants include asters, fall blooming anemones, global thistle, Harrington's pink aster, Japanese iris, late lilies and daylilies, monkshood, pink and white phlox. tiger lily and white begonia.

hum not, whir not, respond not, they ARE not. But deadlines don't care.

So, pen and paper during busy, noisy afternoons. And transcription to a begged, borrowed laptop computer during the cold, quiet, dead hours from midnight to 6 a.m. Then back to its rightful owner goes the laptop to do its rightful work in its rightful office many miles up the road. I'm left with a disk. So off to Kinko's before the sun and the children are up. And so in the light of day, I continue my race with time all the while making time for my now-awake askers, requesters and needers.

And so it goes with deadlines. Ask anyone in the newspaper business.

You know, it's ironic. I was just explaining the business about deadlines to some 75 sixth-graders just last week. It was Career Day at the middle school and I was one of the invited speakers. I told them, emphasized to them, the critical nature of a newspaper deadline. One boy asked, "What happens if you don't meet a deadline?"

I shook my head. "It means you don't get in and it very well could mean that's it, the end, kiddo, you're finished." I explained how the printing presses run regardless – they wait for no one – and that's that. You can't stop the march of time of the presses.

Miss your deadline? Too bad. You can't compromise or argue with a deadline. Deadlines don't accept excuses, good or lame. Even if the excuse is labor and childbirth. In meeting a Friday deadline once upon a time ago, on a cold February night last year, my baby was born. Steven, you recall, was born AFTER the deadline was met, but before the hospital was reached.

Meeting deadlines. Some days it's harder than others.

Another thing about meeting deadlines, it's one of those tasks in life that only seems to get noticed when it's NOT done. Kind of like keeping a house clean.

The computer meltdown this week is definitely not a good situation. It's going to be a hurdle. For quite awhile. But only a hurdle, not a wall. Sure, it's 4:37 a.m. on deadline day right now, the household will be stirring about in a little more than one hour and the day will have begun. And, yes, mine never really ended. But in the scheme of things, that's a hurdle.

Deadlines, dead computers, pffft. You know what, with family about (whether softly sleeping or very noisy awake) these things can be gotten around. One way or another, they can be gotten around.

disposable. In most cases, garments were restyled to suit the times. And to remove stains or oils, they would use cornstarch or go to the chemist to get appropriate chemicals.

Among the pieces of her collection Turza showed off an 1880s wedding suit, machine made by a professional. White in color, it feature half inch appliqued silk ribbon on each scallop. It is so tiny, it won't fit on a her size 6 dress form.

"I think it's a size 1 or a size 3; it has a 19-inch waist," she said. "Women would start corseting at age 8, so the ribs wouldn't have a way to expand."

White wedding dresses were fashionable with wealthier women, but for the general public, brown or dark green dresses were more in style.

She also pointed out that white and black artifacts tend to crop up than colored outfits. One explanation is that women tended to hang onto their wedding trousseau and a lot of the burial garments.

Her collection also includes such lucky finds as a fan from the Civil War still in its original box and a bustle made with steel springs that collapsed when a woman sat down.

A re-enactor, Turza does several periods and finds the Civil War to be the most difficult.

"My body aches at the end of the day because of the weight of the clothing," she said.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
1997-98 PROPOSED CITY BUDGET

Notice is hereby given that a public hearing will be held on Monday, June 2, 1997, at 7:00 P.M. in the Commission Chamber at City Hall, 201 S. Main Street, for the purpose of discussing and receiving public comments on the proposed 1997-98 City Budget.

PROPOSED 1997 CITY MILLAGE RATES: The property tax millage rates proposed to be levied to support the proposed budget will be a subject of this hearing. The following statements are provided concerning the 1997 proposed millage levies for the City of Plymouth:

The 1997 tax rate for City operating millage is proposed to be 11.76 mills, which is the same as the 1996 operating tax rate. The City Commission has the authority under the City Charter to set the operating millage rate within the maximum allowed rate of 11.76 mills, as adjusted by the Headlee millage roll-back formula.

The 1997 tax rate for debt service millage to fund a portion of the debt service requirements for the 1997 General Obligation Bond issue is proposed to be 1.88 mills which is a new millage rate for 1997.

The 1997 tax rate for City solid waste and recycling millage is proposed to be 1.25 mills, which is the same as the 1996 tax rate.

The total City millage for all purposes is proposed to be 14.89 mills for 1997, which is 1.88 mills higher than the 1996 total City tax rate of 13.01 mills.

EQUALIZATION FACTORS: Wayne County established a tentative 1997 equalization factor of 1.0704 for residential classes of property and a factor of 1.00 for commercial and industrial classes of property. Since the City has increased assessments for the residential class 1997 by the proposed factor, all 1997 equalization factors will be set at 1.00.

STATE CAPITOL CAPSULES

Plates for all vets

A bill allowing any U.S. military veteran to buy a special vehicle license plate is on its way to Gov. John Engler's desk for signing.

House Bill 4202, which would become law as soon as it is signed, would apply to 200,000 peacetime veterans. Currently, Michigan sells commemorative plates to veterans of various wars, including National Guard members.

"So many of our soldiers, such as those in Bosnia, are serving peacetime roles. Those soldiers deserve the same recognition every other soldier receives for their services to the nation," said Rep. Paul Baade, D-Muskegon, the sponsor.

A veteran seeking a special late would pay a $5 service charge. The application must be accompanied by any proof that he or she was in any branch of the armed services.

An amendment to provide entirely free plate to wounded veterans who had received the Purple Heart was removed in the Senate.

No to hybrids

State legislators drop 3,000 bills into the hopper in a two-year session of the Michigan Legislature, but few have received the fanfare given to Rep. Gerald Law's three-bill package to ban private ownership of wolf-dogs and other exotic pets.

Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, Michigan Humane Society chief Gary Tiscornia, Beth (the Wolf Lady) Duman, actress Tippi Hedren, the mother of a 5-year-old who was killed in 1989 by a hybrid-wolf and others crowded a Captiol conference room to launch the bills sponsored by Law, R-Plymouth.

Hybrid wolf-dogs are more dangerous than wolves because they are more unpredictable and have less fear of humans, according to the Michigan and American Veterinary Medical associations.

"Eleven children have already been killed nationally by wolf-type 'pets,'" said Duman, a Howell resident and formerly of White Lake Township. In the 1970s she toured many schools with her timber wolf, Nahanni. She now is regional coordinator for the North American Wildlife Park Foundation of Battle Ground, Ind.

Law said his bills would allow persons who already own an exotic animal to keep them, providing minimum standards of care and housing are met and licenses paid for.

The bills also will apply to exotic and native wild cats, bears and primates.

No to cigarettes

Both chambers of the Legislature are considering bills restricting cigarettes:

■ Senate Bills 341, 445-455 and 461 would ban billboard advertising for cigarettes. SB 341 is sponsored by Loren Bennett, R-Canton. It's part of a package aimed at removing billboards from "scenic" and "heritage" routes.

Sheriff offers boat safety tips

Many people think their boat or personal watercraft is a big toy.

But that "toy" can hurt you if not used with safety in mind, emphasizes Sheriff Robert Ficano, especially with boating season just around the corner.

The most important thing you can do, according to sheriff's department officials, is to have the proper safety equipment aboard your vessel.

This includes:

■ Coast Guard approved life jackets,

■ ventilation equipment and a backfire flame arrester for inboard motors,

■ a Coast Guard approved fire extinguisher,

■ a sound-producing device in case boaters are stranded or in need of emergency help,

■ navigation lights (required on vessels over 16 feet),

■ visual distress lights (flares),

■ an anchor with extra line,

■ an oar or paddle, and

■ a manual bailer or pump.

Other safe-boating tips include keeping abreast of weather conditions – sudden shifts in wind, lightning and sudden choppy waters may indicate a storm.

Carry a portable radio to monitor weather conditions. Bring extra gear that may be needed in an emergency, including matches in a waterproof container, extra batteries, a map of your location, a first aid kit, sun tan lotion and extra batteries. Put these items in a watertight pouch or container that floats.

Never go boating without telling someone where you are headed, and how long you anticipate you anticipate you'll be gone. And don't drink and drive while boating – remember — drunk boating laws are just as stringent as drunk driving laws.

Many of these tips can be learned simply by taking a safe boating course offered in your area.

MDA holds camps for special kids

The Muscular Dystrophy Association will hold two special week-long summer camps for children from the metro Detroit area with neuromuscular disorders.

Operating in the Detroit area since 1956, the MDA summer camp is one of the oldest camps for children with disabilities in the country.

The camp will be staffed by a complete medical staff and over 100 volunteers from the Detroit area. These volunteers make possible an experience that the kids say is "better than Christmas."

Activities include swimming, wheelchair baseball, sidecar rides with members of the Harley Davidson owners group.

The camps are scheduled on June 15-21 and June 22-28 with special VIP days scheduled for June 18 and 25.

Macker champs

The Wildcats, all from Plymouth, were crowned champions in their age bracket at the Battle Creek Gus Macker 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament last weekend.

The Wildcats went 5-0 in winning the title, including a 13-9 victory over the Pretenders in the championship game.

Team members are Dawn Allen, Rachel Hofner, Kristen Thomas and Jenna Van Wagoner. The team is coached by Waine Thomas.

A Quest for players

The Canton Quest, currently an under-14 girls soccer team, is looking for players for this fall, when it makes the jump to under-15 play.

The Quest is considered one of the top five teams in the state. It is coached by Stephen Glover, an Olympic Development Program coach with national and Michigan coaching licenses.

For more tryout details, call Glover at (313) 331-4182.

Chiefs baseball camp

The Plymouth Canton baseball coaching staff and players will sponsor the Canton Chiefs Baseball Camp for boys 7-14 years old, from 9:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m. June 16-20 at Canton's varsity field.

The camp will include five days of group and individual instruction in all phases of the game: throwing, hitting, fielding, pitching, base-running and more.

Cost is $85. For late registrants, cost is $90. A free T-shirt and lunches are included; baseball hats can be purchased for $10.

The camp is limited to 150 players, so early registration is advised. Registration forms are available at Canton Sports and at the Trading Post.

Chiefs nip Rocks in OT

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

Plymouth Salem soccer coach Doug Landefeld explained it best.

"Unfortunately, that's the way most games are won or lost — not on spectacular goals."

Landefeld's Salem team had just played one of its best games of the season, to no avail. For the second time in as many meetings this season, Plymouth Canton battled back from a one-goal deficit, scoring to tie the game in the waning minutes of regulation.

But this was a state tournament game, and state tournament games don't end in ties. With 11:22 elapsed in the first sudden-death overtime period, the Chiefs got the game-winning goal from Emily Stachura for a 2-1 victory in a state district semifinal Wednesday at CEP.

Salem finishes its season with an 8-6-3 record; Canton carries a 13-1-2 mark into Friday's district final against Ann Arbor Pioneer, which will be at 7 p.m. at Ann Arbor Huron HS.

The game-winner was knocked in by Stachura after Salem's freshman keeper, Jenny Fitchett, collided with one of her defenders while chasing a loose ball. They went down and the ball ended up bounding out to Stachura, who tucked it into the corner.

As Landefeld said, not the prettiest goal, but a big one nonetheless.

Throughout the first half of Wednesday's match, Salem controlled play. The Rocks' pressure paid off just 8:30 into the game when Missy Simons' corner kick reached Lisa Bacyinski, who was positioned right in front of the Canton net.

Bacyinski's header rebounded off the crossbar, but it came directly back to her, and she made no mistake with her second chance, finishing it for a 1-0 Salem lead.

Up, then down: Salem's Jenny Storm (left) and Canton's Cheron Rice tangle while going for the ball. Like the momentum, possession wasn't easy to maintain for either side.

The Rocks made that one-goal advantage stand for the next 63 minutes of playing time. Canton seemed to struggle offensively for much of it — until the final 10 minutes of regulation.

"I know we played a whole lot better in the second half than we did in the first," said Chiefs' coach Don Smith. "We couldn't put two passes together.

"But it's a game of momentum. Luckily, we had it going into the overtime."

Canton had it because its pressure finally started to wear out Salem's young defenders. "To Canton's credit, they picked things up," said Landefeld. "And we just kind of ran out of gas at the end."

It could be said fortune played a role in both Canton goals. The tying marker came with just 7:48 left in regulation; Jennell Cobor rolled a shot that deflected off a Salem defender and got past Fitchett.

The goal had the kind of effect one would expect: Canton was ignited, Salem deflated. Both teams had other scoring opportunities, throughout the match, but Canton keeper Kristin Lukasik and Fitchett each made solid saves.

But there's no doubt that entering OT, the Chiefs were riding a high tide of momentum.

So ended another in a long line of Canton-vs.-Salem nail-biters. It should be noted that the two teams have met in the district tournament for the last three seasons; in '95, Salem won 2-1 and ended up in the Class A state final.

Last year, Canton beat the Rocks 2-0 and went on to win the state championship.

So where will this year's winner end up?

Canton claims crown

SOFTBALL

Plymouth Canton showed a lot of championship mettle in the Western Lakes Activities Association softball title game. But Farmington displayed a little, too.

Canton scored three runs in the fifth and two in the sixth Wednesday to break open a tight game and cruise to an 8-2 victory that brought the Chiefs the WLAA softball crown.

But Farmington showed some grit as well, battling back from a 2-0 deficit with a pair of runs in the bottom of the fourth to force Canton to dig deep to get the win.

"That was a big inning," Falcons coach Jerry Osborne said. "We did it all with two outs. The girls showed some heart.

"But give Canton a lot of credit. They came back with three in the fifth, and I think that took the wind out of our sails."

Gretchen Hudson and Alana Heikkinen were evenly matched through four innings, but Canton's firepower at the plate prevailed.

"This was one of our goals since the beginning of the season," Canton coach Jim Arnold said. "Our kids played together.

"We have a tendency to come on real late in a game. I don't know how many times we've done that."

Canton will take a 28-5 record into its district tournament opener Tuesday at Livonia Ladywood.

Farmington (18-10) opens at Founders Park on Tuesday against Farmington Hills Mercy.

Hudson struck out six, allowed four hits, hit a batter but didn't walk anybody. Her only anxious moments came in the fourth.

Heikkinen doubled near the line in left with two out and scored on a single to center by Trisha Krause, who was chased in when Heather Martin laced a triple near the line in right.

That turned out to be the Falcons' last hit of the game.

Right on the heels of its regional conquest, Westland John Glenn also proved Tuesday it has the best boys track team in the Western Lakes Activities Association.

The Rockets built and early lead and held off Farmington Hills Harrison, 132 to 117.8 points, to win the coveted title at Livonia Churchill. Defending champion Plymouth Salem was third with 113. See statistical summary on C2.

Ironically, it was Harrison's first loss of any kind this season, dual or invitational. Harrison was coming off a victory Saturday at Class A regional at West Bloomfield, while Glenn was the Redford Union regional champion.

"It was a complete team performance all the way through," said Glenn coach Jess Shough. "All the way down the line it was

Salem stops South Lyon

SOCCER

The Class A state soccer tournament opened Monday with district play, and Plymouth Salem wasted no time in advancing, scoring four times in the first half en route to a 6-1 victory over host South Lyon.

Three different Rocks scored two goals apiece, as Salem built a 4-1 lead by the intermission.

Kristina Senfuch, Jenny Storm and Mia Sarkesian were two-goal scorers for the Rocks. Salem outshot South Lyon, 20-5.

Canton 8, A.A. Huron 0: Plymouth Canton made Ann Arbor Huron's stay as host of this state district tournament a short one, routing the River Rats in Monday's opener at Huron.

The defending Class A state champions scored twice in the first half before pulling away in the second. Kristin Lukasik was in goal for the shutout.

Melissa Marzolf and Lisa Reissenweber each put in two goals for the Chiefs. Jennell Cobor, Cheron Rice and Jill Rahnert added one goal apiece.

Stevenson 2, Mercy 0: Little has stopped Livonia Stevenson thus far this season. Not mud and certainly not Farmington Hills Mercy.

The Spartans scored a goal in each half Tuesday to defeat the Marlins in their district opener played at Mercy.

Visiting Stevenson (15-0-2) got a first-half goal from Sara Wittrock off an assist by Allison Campbell. In the second half, Campbell scored from Becky Peterson.

"It was sloppy," Stevenson Coach Jim Kimble said. "The grass was not cut. There were puddles.

"We played poorly. We didn't play well. The game was choppy and ther was no flow to it. And we played flat.

"Melissa Jacobs, our senior co-captain, played her best game of the year. She was a bright spot."

Jenny Barker got the shutout against Mercy, which finished 12-5, although she only faced four shots. Stevenson was held to 12 shots.

Churchill 7, Wayne 0: Crystal Wright notched her eighth shutout, but it would have been hard not to. She didn't face any shots on goal.

Churchill completely dominated the state district tournament match, played at Westland John Glenn, and rolled up 43 shots.

"The field is fairly small," Chargers' Coach Chad Campau said, "but we were able to pass the ball around, maintain possesion and give ourselves a lot of goal-scoring opportunities.

"I was able to give everybody playing time, even the girls pulled up from the junior varsity. It was a nice game for us."

Churchill played at Dearborn on Wednesday in its second district tournament match.

Andrea Will, who also had an assist, and Kersten Conklin each scored two goals for Churchill. Andrea Galindo scored a goal and added an assist while both Terri Owens and Lizz Szkrybalo each scored once.

Stacey Supanich collected three assists and Jamie Scott had one assist.

The victory improved Churchill to 10-3-4 this season.

Chiefs make it to state

TRACK

Plymouth Canton's Kevin Keil should make plans to head for Rockford.

The Canton discus standout finished second at the Class A regionals last week with a throw of 145 feet, 1 inch to qualify for the state meet in Rockford.

The Chiefs finished with 16 points. Westland John Glenn won the meet with 78 points; Plymouth Salem was third with 57 points.

Canton had several bright spots.

In the 100-meter dash, Dave Koshizawa finished fifth in a time of 11.2 (he ran an 11.0 in the semifinals). Shaun Moore ran a personal best time of 10:13.4 to take sixth in the 3,200 run.

Also turning in a strong performance was Jason Meagrow, who took fourth in the long jump with a leap of 20, 2 1/4.

Canton's 3,200 relay team of Moore, Jon Page, Adam DeGiorgio and Steve Blossom was sixth with a season-best time of 8:22.1.

Rocks' hitters bash Glenn

SOFTBALL

Plymouth Salem's softball team built a 9-1 lead, but had to hang on to beat Westland John Glenn 12-10 Monday.

The game was played at Salem because Glenn's field was in poor condition. The Rockets were the home team.

Salem led 9-1 going into the bottom of the third. Glenn scored six runs in the third and another in the fourth to trim the Rocks' lead to 9-8, but a three-run fifth clinched it for Salem.

Shannon Coultas and Becky Esper paced the Rocks' attack. Coultas had two hits and drove in three runs, including a two-run triple; Esper had two hits and scored four runs.

Carah Best contributed a two-run single, giving her three RBI for the game, and Karen Prosyk had two hits.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

Title bound

Chris Gilles-Mott, a 1984 Plymouth Salem HS graduate, collected the 11th U.S. Tennis Association title of her career when she defeated Ashley Ashba of Sacramento, Calif., 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 in the finals of the USTA Indoor Women's 25 Singles Tournament Saturday in Homewood, Ill.

Earlier in the tournament, Gilles-Mott beat Karen Fox of Oak Lawn, Ill., 6-1, 6-2 in the semifinals, and Natasha Koprivica of Dekalb, Ill., 6-0, 6-0 in the quarters.

On June 3, Gilles-Mott will be officially presented as the Sports Women of the Year for the greater Madison (Wisc.) area by the Hall of Fame Club.

More for Holmes

It's become perfectly clear the past few weeks: As long as University of Michigan's softball team stays alive, Kelly Holmes will be pulling down honors.

That's because Holmes, the senior pitcher from Plymouth Canton HS, is the reason the Wolverines are in the NCAA College Softball World Series. They open their run for the NCAA title in Oklahoma City at 6 p.m. (CDT) against Big Ten nemesis Iowa.

Holmes, who has already been named to the all-Big Ten team and was the conference's pitcher of the year, guided U-M to the NCAA Region 6 championship — earning the Region's Most Valuable Player award.

Holmes pitched all four regional games for U-M, played at U-M, beating Cleveland State 1-0 last Friday and Central Michigan 3-1 Saturday, before losing 3-1 to the Chippewas Sunday. She bounced back to beat CMU for the title 4-0 Sunday.

In her 29 innings on the mound, Holmes recorded a 0.48 earned run average, going 3-1. For the season, she is now 32-6 with a 1.00 ERA and 11 shutouts. She has 75 career victories, most by any U-M pitcher.

Hockey sign-up

The Plymouth Rockets (over 20) and Silver Sticks (over 40) hockey leagues are now accepting registrations for their summer leagues.

For registration forms, call John Wilson at (810) 471-0658.

Sand volleyball

The Liberty Fest Sand Volleyball Tournament, sponsored by the Canton Parks and Recreation Services, will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday, June 22 at the Heritage Park sand volleyball court, located behind softball field No. 2.

Cost for the co-ed tournament is $30 per team; there are no residency requirements. Price includes T-shirts for all participants and an award to the winning team.

Registration deadline is June 12. Call (313) 397-5110 for further details.

Marlins slice through league rivals to gain title

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

What's the difference between members of the Farmington Hills Mercy girls track team and their coach, Gary Servais?

Opposing teams in Tuesday's Catholic League Meet wished they could run with the Marlins, while none of the coaches would want to run with the free-spirited Servais.

Servais showed up at the new Livonia Ladywood track wearing his now-customary Green Bay Packers' Cheese Head to go with his long sideburns and pony tail.

He stood out in the crowd while the Marlins made others take notice, dominating start to finish with a first-place total of 180.5 points. The only real race was for second place as defending champion Livonia Ladywood prevailed there with 85 points to edge third-place Harper Woods Regina (80.5) and fourth-place Dearborn Divine Child (78).

GIRLS TRACK

During the victory celebration the Marlins may have wrecked Servais' hair, dousing him with an ice bucket, but the Cheese Head went unscathed.

Remember, it's made of sponge.

"It's so him," said Mercy's Kristin Gustafson. "He's not really a hippy. He's just unique. He doesn't care what anyone thinks of him. Most think he's obnoxious, but we like him."

Marlins' junior Jackie Segue, who won the 800 meter run in 2:29.49, took second in the 1,600 (5:36.24) and was a member of the winning 1600 and 3200 relays, also likes the look.

"It's 'The bomb,' " she said, using a teenage term. "Before we used to have the 'Marlin Bus' stand out. Now we have the boring yellow one, but we have coach's Cheese Head."

An administrator said it best when looking from a distance at Servais, who was engaged in a rules meeting.

"That gives new meaning to 'Mickey Mouse operation,' " the man laughed.

Despite his appearance, Servais runs a tight ship, refusing to let his runners remain on the team if they go to Florida for Easter Break.

He said this may be his second-best team behind the 1990 Marlins who won the Catholic League and regional titles and placed at the Class A state meet.

"It was a total team effort," he said. "We had a one, two and three in the discus, one three and five in the shot. We had multiple placings in a lot of events. it feels good to have the championship back at Mercy."

How dominant were the Marlins? Take their points in the shot put, discus, 400 and 1600 events, have them forfeit the other 12 events, and they still finish with 74 points, which would put them in title contention.

Ladywood coach Rod Sorenson can't believe this is the team the Blazers beat in a dual meet earlier this year.

"That's the team we expected to see earlier," Sorenson said. "Mercy's loaded with talent and Gary seemed to have the formula to get the best out of them today."

Shawntika Farr was a double winner for the Marlins, earning first in the shot put (36 feet, 1 1/2 inches) and discus (109-7). A thrower named Farr, how fitting.

The Marlins finished with 18 points in the shot put and a perfect 24 in the discus.

Ce Ce Johnson was able to finish third (31-4 3/4) and Kathy Telford fifth (30-1) in the shot. Jennifer Brazeal took second in the discus (103-1) and Telford third (102-10) to complete a sweep there.

Joining Farr as a double winner was Angka Morris, who took first in the 100 meter dash (12.66) and first in the 400 dash (59.68). Teammate Rhashida Rudolph was her closest competition in the 400, taking second place (1:01.73) to give the Marlins 18 points in that event.

The lone remaining individual first place by a Marlin went to Natalie Grondin, who cleared 5-0 in the high jump.

Morris led off and Seague anchored the winning 1,600 relay that finished in 4:12.73. Joining them were Nicole Carter and Rudolph. Segue led off the winning 3,200 relay and was joined by Christina Andriola, Erin Thomas and Alyssa Burnisky, to win in 10:13.

The 400 meter relay of Kendall Carey, Breanna Watson, Kelly O'Brien and Katie McGraw, all underclass runners, took Ladywood's only first (51.74). The Blazers scored 14 points in the 800 as Nicole Garrett (2:30.30) and Jackie Urbanczyk (2:30.70) were second and third, respectively.

Jessica Hayden was second in the 3,200 run (12:22.82) and fourth in the 1,600 run (5:40.17). The Blazers also placed second in both the 1,600 and 3,200 relays.

Shamrocks rule in Catholic League

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

By staying home over Easter vacation, Detroit Catholic Central senior Brian Teefey saved his parents some money and also may have proved he's a wise investment for the Wayne State football program.

This is a financial planner in the making.

Teefey, who played defensive end for the Shamrocks' football team, signed a national letter of intent earlier this spring to attend WSU where he will play either defensive back or linebacker for the Tartars.

Teefey, 6 feet, 205 pounds, showed the speed the Tartars' are impressed with at Tuesday's Catholic League Boys Track Meet at Livonia Ladywood, leading the Shamrocks to their fifth championship in the last eight years.

CC finished with 127 points, followed by Orchard Lake St. Mary (102) and Warren DeLaSalle (92). See statistics, C2.

Teefey, who started the day with a false start and a disqualification in the 100 meter dash, won the 200 dash in 22.78 seconds and the 400 dash in 49.89.

BOYS TRACK

He also anchored the 1,600 relay team that took second in 3:30.59 to finish the meet strong.

To think, none of this would have been possible had Teefey chose to go to Florida over Spring Break like several of his teammates. The rule coach Tony Magni has had since he took over the track program in 1990 remains the same: If you go to Florida, you will not compete for the track team.

"I've been running varsity track since my freshman year and I though it would have been pointless not to run my senior year," said Teefey, who has the rest of the summer to work on his tan. "I could have went. Everyone wanted me to go."

Magni knows his crede may be archaic, but he wants to thank seniors Brian Douglas, Chris Laney, John Faunce, Ron Batog, Dan Danic, Dan Dominguez, John Griffin, Chris Koss, Richie Kostrzewski, Matt LaVaute, Cortny Robison, Ryan Schrieber, Craig Skalski and Charlie Bolognino for following through.

"I just told the kids who stayed around they'll remember this the rest of their life," Magni said. "They can go on Spring Break in college. They can go with their wife and kids when they get married.

"Teefey could have lost his focus after the 100 but he didn't. He's by far the one we've counted on all year."

Other CC firsts went to Douglas, who won the shot put with a throw of 50 feet, 5 1/4 inches, and Dave Popiel, who cleared 6-5 to win the high jump.

The 3200 relay team of Laney, Skalski, Faunce and Wayne Brigee also took first (8:16).

Griffin said the performance was some redemption for the Shamrocks, who finished fifth in the Observerland Relays and seventh at the Class A regional, both uncharacteristically low.

"We weren't really concerned with the regional because we knew we couldn't win it. We just wanted to get some state cuts," Griffin said. "This is kind of like our own backyard and we wanted to win this. We were not picked to win it all."

The Shamrocks clinched the victory when they picked up 18 points in the second-to-last event, the 3,200 run, as Griffin (10:01.93), Danic (10:15.19) and Joe Hubert (10:16.03) finished second, third and fourth respectively.

Danic was a surprise, or was he?

"I told him he can be in the top three or four, 'You've got to run your race,' " Magni said. "He did it against DeLaSalle (in a dual meet victory) and he did it today."

St. Mary won four individual events and the 800 relay to lead most of the way.

Receiving first place finishes were Brad Parker, discus (151-9), Larry Batista, long jump (20-9 1/2), Torrence Craddieth, 100 meter hurdles (15.09) and Ty Washington, 100 dash (11.15). Craddieth, Rico Epps, Larry Clark and Ty Washington combined to win the 800 relay (1:31.64).

Birmingham Brother Rice finished a distant sixth with 25 points, but the Warriors' Ben Evans was first in the 3200 run (9:42.91).

though, as the Chiefs avenged a loss to Farmington a couple of weeks ago when Hudson was unable to pitch.

"They have a good ballclub," Arnold said. "They've come a long way. Their coach has done one heckuva job."

The Chiefs wasted one out before retaliating. Tara Biro led off with a single and stole second. Angela Litwin singled through short and beat it to second as Biro held at third.

Elizabeth Elsner ripped a double to right center to break the tie, and she scored on a single through the hole by Jenny Sikora.

Nikki Kovachevich scratched out an infield single to start the sixth and reached second on a passed ball. She was sacrificed to third by Sarah Freels, and Erica Hancz doubled to left center to hike the lead to 6-2. One out later, Biro singled to left to make it 7-2.

Elsner doubled and scored on a two-out single off Heikkinen's glove by Kovachevich in the seventh.

"Obviously, we're disappointed," Osborne said. "Usually, we're a better hitting team. But this game I thought the best team won."

Osborne noted Canton's 10-4 edge in seniors showed. The Falcons also started four freshmen.

Heikkinen walked one batter and struck out four but was touched for 13 hits, three by Biro plus two apiece by Litwin, Elsner, Sikora and Kovachevich.

Sikora also singled home the game's first run in the opening inning. The Chiefs added a run in the fourth on a two-out error.

"Biro is a great leadoff hitter," Arnold said. "She puts the ball in play for us. The kid is a great all-round athlete."

The Chiefs played like the champions they became by winning the game.

a total team effort."

Glenn only took three firsts — David Jarrett in the long jump, 21 feet, 9 1/2 inches; Tim Moore in the high jump, 6-1; and Harden James in the 100-meter dash, a meet record 10.9.

"The relays were not as solid as we liked because of injuries," Shough said. "We made some changes and still came through.

"You have a kid like Joe Wojtowicz come through in the 1,600 (fourth place) and the 800 (fifth). And Harden ran super, even though he had a knee problem. The field events put us there. A guy like Mike Samples (second in the shot put and discus) came through even though he has been 100 percent the last couple of weeks.

"And Tim Moore did an excellent job in the high jump, as did Mike Phillips (third). And our pole vaulters got in there, too. Bill Cummings scored points for us (seventh) and he just learned to vault. Our field events put us there."

Harrison was missing one of its top relay runners, sprinter Jerrard Johnson, who was suffered from a sore leg.

The Hawks, Observerland Relay champs, managed to three firsts, two by senior thrower Nick Shaieb, who swept the shot put (53-6) and discus (161-0). Harrison's 800 relay team of Keith Battle, Chris Knox, Kevin Woods and Jamie Seals also won in 1:32.9.

But the Hawks could not overcome Glenn's big lead coming out of the field events.

"John Glenn has a very complete team," Harrison coach John Reed said. "They didn't have a good day at Observerland in the field events. And today we had a couple of things that didn't go our way.

"But we're not hanging our heads. We've had a great season. It's the best team we've ever had. You can't win them all, but you can try. It just wasn't our day."

Reed said there were two big surprises in the meet.

"Nick Shaieb winning the shot put and discus isn't done too often in our conference meet," he said. "And I was surprised with Salem. When it's a big meet, they're well prepared."

The Rocks rode the long legs of 6-foot-4 junior Ian Searcy, who won the 1,600 (4:30.1), 800 (2:00.6) and teamed up with Andy Briggs, Kevin Conte and Mark Sheehan to win the 1,600 relay (3:31.3).

The 1,600 run was one of the night's most competitive races.

It featured Searcy, Observerland and RU regional champ Nathan Jerome of Churchill, RU regional runner-up Josh Burt and 3,200 winner and regional champ Rob Block of Livonia Stevenson.

"I just tried to stick with the leaders and kick it at the end," Searcy said. "I knew I was running against a lot of good runners, all of whom would do a good job. It was pretty hard, especially when you're running by yourself on the first lap and can't see everyone behind you."

And the night would not have been complete without a couple of record breakers.

Northville's Tony Clemens equalled his preliminary time of 22.4 to win the 200.

And Livonia Franklin's Paul Terek broke the pole vault record, clearing a meet-record 15-9. He was unable to surpass his season-best of 16-1, but came back to win the 400 in 51.4 after taking a second in the long jump.

"I wish I had trained a little more for the 400 — I'm hurting," said Terek, who had only run the event three times this year. "My coach (Dale Lee) came up with the idea of going to the 400 because in the 200, I would have had to run three races in the preliminaries.

"I was just hoping to have a good time. I tried to push as hard as I could. Sprint the first 100 or 150 and pick it up again on the back turn. Then I tried to push as hard as I could on the straighaway."

Other meet winners included Ryan Kearney in the 110 hurdles (15.1); Salem's Rob Hawley, who nosed out Kearney in the 300 hurdles (40.8); Walled Lake Central in the 3,200 relay (8:23.6) and Walled Lake Western in the 400 relay (44.4).

Universal design fits all people

Q: We are in our mid 70s and have decided to stay in our home permanently. We also have a disabled son that lives with us. When we began looking into a kitchen remodel, our contractor suggested several design ideas that might help us all to live a bit easier. Do you have any information on this?

A. The following definition of universal design and ideas for remodeling the kitchen were written by Mary Jo Peterson, a certified kitchen/bath designer and educator with expertise in universal design.

Traditionally, the built environment has been designed for an idealized, able-bodied, non-elderly adult. Since that description fits less than 15 percent of our population, the result is environ-

Home Comfort is an inside job. That's why it makes sense to call Bergstrom's, a third generation company serving Metro Detroit since 1957. Since a central air conditioner is a major investment, we'll help you make an informed decision on which model unit to purchase. Our estimator will balance your comfort needs with your financial concerns.

An air conditioner's SEER value, or Seasonable Energy Efficiency Ratio, is a measure of how efficiently an air conditioner uses electricity. This rating is similar in nature to the miles-per-gallon rating for cars, and provides a way for you to judge which models will be more economical to use. Most older air conditioners fall in the 6-8 SEER range, whereas newer models rate in the 10-16 SEER range. In the summer, this commonly translates to a 30% savings on electric bills. Bergstrom's offers free estimates on new installations! For more information speak with a representative at Bergstrom's Inc. Plumbing and Heating.

Ribbeting attention

Croaked up: Rudy Ribbet, a motion-activated frog, greets with a "ribbet, ribbet" all who cross its path. This friendly faux amphibian makes a great conversation starter, security device, poolside companion or garden decor. It also may be used to guard bird feeders, as its croak frightens squirrels away. Available for $16.98 at English Gardens' four locations, including the West Bloomfield store at 6370 Orchard Lake Road. Call (810) 851-7506.

Gift of time

Brass tacks: Clock manufacturer Howard Miller® of Zeeland, Mich., offers these suggestions for Father's Day gifts. The stately Vermae is a handsome polished brass-tone alarm clock accented with a green marble pattern and a flight of decorative bars that ascend the sides. It stands 6-1/2 inches high. The brushed, polished brass-tone numeral ring bears black numerals and brass hands. Other features include a full-felt bottom to protect fine desks, and quartz, battery-operated alarm movement. The Shipmate is a satin, gold-tone finished alarm clock. It stands 5-1/4 inches high and features two polished brass-tone feet that support the clock as well as an enclosed hook and loop strip to keep it in place. The circular spun brass tone dial features colorful numeral pennants and black hands. For more information or to find a store near you, call (616) 772-9131.

Going buggy

Intriguing insects: Most children, whether future entomologists or not, are fascinated by catching and examining bugs in jars. The bug found in each of these old-fashioned Mason jars is actually a 100-percent, preshrunk cotton T-shirt bearing the image of a green beetle, ladybug, grasshopper or frog. Youngsters may wish to wear the silkscreened T-shirt while using the jar, which includes a mesh-screened lid, to catch and observe the real thing. The Bug-In-A-Jar T-shirts are available in children's sizes small, medium and large, and retail for $19.98 each. Available at English Gardens' four locations, including the West Bloomfield store at 6370 Orchard Lake Road. Call (810) 851-7506.

Change of pace

Uncommon cents: Sock away those extra pennies with MacKenzie-Childs' new "La Choosette" sock coin purse. The cotton/ramie-lined sock comes in assorted bright colors for $14 each. Available at the houseware collection from ments, including kitchens and bathrooms, which create handicaps and barriers for the rest of us. We are being pressed to examine the basic assumptions we have used in design, particularly in high function areas like the kitchen and bath. The result is design that breaks the traditional mold and is more flexible and adaptable. It is accessible to or useable by all people, regardless of age, size or physical ability, as much as possible. This is universal design.

Some ideas for designing a kitchen include:

■ Concentrate the work triangle at it limits needless space. Consider clear floor space and traffic flow when planning islands. Choose non-skid floors.

■ Use easily accessed storage of all supplies and utensils. Plan drawers, roll-outs, lazy susans or corner swing-out shelves. Limit cabinet door sizes to 18 inches and consider bifold doors to lessen interference with clear floorspace. You may want to consider touch latch cabinet doors to eliminate the need to grasp knobs or pulls. This is especially hard on arthritic hands.

■ Plan pullout work counters placed at lower than 36-inch couner height to accommodate people who are shorter or who sit to work. Design for long spans of continuous countertop to allow for sliding items on counter as opposed to having to carry them from center to center. Design contrasting or raised countertop edges to cue people with visual impairments.

■ Design a back or garage pantry and recycling center to eliminate the need to carry bulky items great distances.

Lobbyists kill appliance repair bill

BY JOE GAGNON
Special Writer

This column you're reading today is the toughest I've had to write since I started with this newspaper two years ago next month. I get up at 5 on Monday mornings to do the job. This morning I didn't feel like getting up.

I've just finished reading a copy of last week's column and boy was I excited about the prospect of a new law being passed through the House last week in Lansing. The Appliance Repair Act, I was sure, would be voted on and finally would be state law in Michigan.

Folks, it didn't pass and was short six votes of a majority. When I found this out Thursday, I actually cried. I was so disappointed and frustrated and angry with the system that I actually thought about running for government office until I realized that I'm still carrying a

Designers harmonize to noteworthy effect

BY MARY KLEMIC
At Home Editor

Styles of various rooms in the Detroit Symphony Designers Showhouse put a special emphasis on symphony. Like different segments of a musical composition, the rooms in the house at 892 Boston Blvd. in Detroit's Boston-Edison District are distinct, each harmonious on its own, yet come together as a unified work.

There is the pianissimo of the soft tones of such areas as the breakfast room by Sharon Holton of Plymouth. There is the forte of vibrancy and boldness of such spaces as the card room by Randie Federman of Troy and the exercise room by Yvette Metz of Troy.

They are just three of the area interior designers who conducted themselves with distinction in decorating the 30+-room mansion, which is open to the public through Sunday, June 8.

The cozy breakfast room by Holton of Sharon Holton Interiors is pink and delicate. The cloth on the round table is gathered by large tassels, and smaller tassels are on the chairs. A string of glass beads is draped around the chandelier, which matches the pattern adorning the domed ceiling. Flowers make signatures in a centerpiece, paintings and the eight-sided carpet.

P.K. Fields of P.K. Fields Interiors of Plymouth followed a monochromatic scheme in a bedroom design.

Curtains hang in clusters from the metal canopy bed. There is a primitive touch in the carpet pattern, a sense of adventure that is carried into the adjoining bathroom. There Fields placed a leopard skin shade, greenery and a Lila Kadaj painting in deep colors.

Federman of Maxwell Ross Associates in Michigan Design Center conveys a fun mood in her decor for the basement card room.

She converted a closet into a walk-in humidor, and clad baseboards in copper. Vintage signs, a tiger-stripe area rug angled under the small round table in the center and a border rug featuring military designs are among the features of the room.

Metz, of Yvette Marie Interiors, gave a workout to bright colors in the exercise room, also in the basement. Pipes are painted green, yellow, red, aqua and black. A tropical scene is painted on one wall, across from the window by the hot tub. Blue and yellow towels are among the details that continue the primary (color) objective.

Many tones

Georgia Katsaros of Georgia & Associates of Birmingham fashioned a debutante's room with flowing white drapes and a large ornate mirror that stands on the floor.

The master bedroom and bathroom are by Donna Stevens, Gloria Tellis and Mario Kocaj of Hudson's Interior Design Studio of Southfield. The bedroom features a faux marble trim along the perimeter, and box patterns in the carpeting, bedspread and upholstery. Its blue and tan tones blend well with the rich shades in the Pewabic tile in the bathroom.

Tom Verwest of T.V.I. Interiors of Bloomfield Hills played it cool and contemporary in designing a bedroom.

Here silver-gray drapes hang from steel rods in the ceiling. Included in the room are a pewter-color, silk bedspread, upon which rest large steel balls; a contemporary steel and glass art work on the bureau; curving steel tables and chair by area artist Stephen Kosinski; and a headboard of steel and mirror that resembles a building. The corners of the ceilings bear a pattern in a darker shade.

In the living room by Kasey Werner-Gierson of Scott Shuptrine Studio of Design of Troy, set under an ornately painted ceiling, a swirling, leafy pattern runs in the upholstery of a sofa, a table base, an area rug and scrollwork in doors. Red ribbons hold up drapes.

The drawing room by Dan Clancy of Perlmutter-Freiwald of Franklin is lush with Oriental and floral designs in the window treatment and throw pillows. The dining room by Paul Feiten of Paul Feiten Interiors of Lathrup Village is warm with a gentle shade on the walls and a dining set that is a replica of a set owned by the Duke of Wellington.

Many tones are struck throughout the house: in the office by Roy Allen Hankis of Roy Allen Hankis Interiors of Troy with its use of black and cream; in the conservatory by Laura Burt and Linda Bruce of Curiosity Shop of Franklin, with the carpeting painted to match the floral ceiling design, and a globe light hanging like a giant earring.

The house, built in 1923, was originally owned by Edward Fisher, one of the seven brothers who developed the Fisher Body Co. Its present owners are Andrew and Dorothy McLemore, owners of A-MAC Sales and Builders Co. Inc.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday, closed Mondays except Memorial Day. Tickets are $15 each at the door, $12 each for groups of 15 or more. Light luncheon, boutique and garden shop available. The showhouse is a project of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall Volunteer Council to benefit DSOH. Call (313) 962-1000, Ext. 285.

Green Card and I wasn't born in this great country.

The way it was explained to me on Thursday indicates that the bill had plenty of support and co-sponsors and should fly through the House hearings with no problem. State. Rep. Lyn Bankes and I had presented plenty of evidence to indicate that many consumers are ripped off by the unethical service companies in the appliance industry. It wasn't hard for anybody to understand why the Appliance Repair Act needed to become law and the sooner the better.

At the last moment, a national organization deposited a letter on each Republican lawmaker's desk which asked that they oppose the act. This lobbying group, which publishes how the legislators vote in Lansing, must carry a lot of weight. In the previous committee hearing they made it known that their members who belong to the appliance repair industry don't want government intervention in their business. I wonder who their members are, seeing as how they won't reveal their names unless we go through the Freedom of Information Act.I think it's a crying shame that some of our state representative can't vote on an issue based on their own convictions but instead do so with thoughts of pleasing a lobbying group instead of the people they represent.

In an exchange of views on my radio show a few months ago, the head of this lobbying group made statements that he could not be ripped off by a service company and couldn't understand how consumers can be so stupid as to let it happen to them. This gave me a pretty good idea as to how an organization which represents business in Lansing and Washington think about the buying public. We are nothing but dummies and they who represent some of the unethical are the smart guys. It will be another 18 months before my friend Lyn Bankes can reintroduce this bill in Lansing. I will try again but mean time you as a consumer have to be on guard.

Knock on wood on floor choices

By Naomi Stone Levy
Special Writer

I always have favorites! My favorite flooring is wood.

There is no substitute for the real thing. All of the modern alternatives are wonderful. Vinyl has its own merit, whatever the pattern or design. In a less-expensive version we find Congoleum or linoleum. But give me wood.

There are so many choices it boggles the mind. The least expensive is oak strip, prefinished.

Oak strip comes in a standard width and non-selective graining. It gets better when the grains are more closely matched, eliminating the wild boards. It is also available in a narrower strip, with more likened grains.

Sanding said floors – and custom finishing them from natural through a spectrum of colors – to suit the job in hand only adds to the beauty.

Having explored strip floors we begin with patterns. Strip flooring can be cut and installed in a herringbone design. The pieces can be cut in varied lengths, making the herringbone adjustable in size.

Yet again, we may select a finish color resonating great taste. Random width flooring has a more provincial feeling, and is improved when pegged.

There are nine-inch squares of wood that can be placed square, but are much more exceptional when laid on the diagonal. These are available prefinished, and are least costly that way, but again can be sanded and custom toned.

Ask your wood flooring company about Fountainbleau and Marie Antoinette patterns. We are now discussing the creme de la creme, and without doubt unparalleled in effect.

EXHIBIT CAPTURES UNFORGETTABLE

ELEPHANTS!

BY NORMAN PRADY
SPECIAL WRITER

How far do you think it is from Africa's "banks of the great gray-green greasy Limpopo River, all set about with fever-trees" to Bloomfield Hills?

Well, you can go to either place to find out how the elephant got its trunk. At the African river, you'll spiritually meet "The Elephant's Child," a Rudyard Kipling character who was filled with "satiable curiosity" and poked around the river bank because he wanted to know what the crocodile had for dinner.

According to Kipling's "Just So Stories," elephants of that time had short noses. But after the Elephant's Child stuck his where it didn't belong, the tug-of-war to free it from the croc's clenched jaw gave elephants ever after the stretched trunk we now see them use to pick up treats and tree trunks.

If you'd like to learn a more scientific theory, you'll want to gather up those you know to be filled with "satiable curiosity" and head for "Elephants! 40 Million Years of Evolution," a traveling exhibit, produced by Potomac Museum Group, filling 5,000 square feet of the Cranbrook Institute of Science with skeletons, full-size models, artifacts, and fossils from May 31 through Sept. 1.

To go with the exhibit, the museum created Elephant Lab, which "encourages cross-generational and group interactions." This means that papa can take all his grandchildren and together they can do some scientific fiddling.

Among the adventures in the lab, visitors can make rubbings of elephant teeth, try on a pair of "soft sculpture" elephant ears, and climb atop a platform for an elephant-eye view of the world, presumably a close-up of Oklahoma corn on "Oh What a Beautiful Morning," when the stalks got eye high."

Two computer workstations give visitors the chance to explore endangered species and African mammals. There are hands-on science tables, a puppet station, and map game.

Personalized tours will be offered by a character actor alternately portraying a field researcher and exhibit preparer who engages visitors through a story-telling approach. Elephant videos – a variety of programs produced by National Geographic, the BBC, and Eyewitness will be shown continuously in a small theater providing visitors a place to "sit for a spell" while investigating elephants.

"Elephants! 40 Million Years of Evolution"

When: Saturday, May 31 to Monday, Sept. 1.
Where: Cranbrook Institute of Science, 1221 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills, main campus. Main campus entrance west off of Woodward between Long Lake and Lone Pine Roads.

Admission: Adults $7; children ages 3-17 and seniors 60 and older, $4; children under 3, free. Call (810) 645-3200 or (810) 645-3209 for a complete listing of events.

- "Elephants: A Mammoth Spectacular" – Friday, May 30, summer fund-raiser that kicks off this exhibit. Evening features live rhythmic drumming and jazzy musical entertainment. Feast on a jungle of delicacies from gourmet to zany. Proceeds support science education. Tickets start at $60 per person, call (810) 645-3228 for details.

Ancient creature: (Above) Amebelodon, which means "shovel dart tooth," roamed North America and Asia 11-15 million years ago. (Below) Replicas of dwarf elephants on display at "Elephants! 40 Million Years of Evolution."

"The appeal of elephants," said Dr. Daniel Fisher, a University of Michigan paleontologist, derives in part from their personalities: "Kind, gentle, but complex. They are amazing animals."

The bromidic notion that elephants never forget, apparently has basis in fact. Fisher includes it as a factor of their mental ability. "Very intelligent," he says.

Asked to compare elephants to shepherd dogs and retrievers, generally considered some of the brightest of the world's four-footers, Fisher rates elephants smarter than the smartest dogs.

"Elephants!" explores a number of themes such as the origins and natural history of the elephant family, similarities and differences between elephants and their relatives, the first human encounters with elephants during the Ice Age, impact of human and elephant interaction throughout history, elephant social and familial behavior, and the outlook for elephant populations today.

Of course, if you'd like to stay home and study elephants, you can just go out to your backyard and start digging.

However, Michigan's elephants weren't actually elephants. What we had were mastodons and mammoths, which along with some other creatures get the general label of elephant, more an adjective than a noun, the tall citizen with the floppy, flappy ears we know today as elephant is a distinctly separate animal, which currently resides only in Africa and Asia.

If you lived say 28 million years ago and wanted to have a cabin in Michigan's elephant country, that would have been just about anywhere in the southern half of the lower peninsula. Remains of mastodons have been discovered just miles up Woodward from the Institute.

Fisher says that the area currently has 240 recorded elephant sites, and that it's likely more will continually be found.

"We receive a report from someone who's been, for instance, digging a pond and they run into big bones and realize that there was something there that wasn't a horse or a cow."

"Elephants!" features some of these native bones. Interpretative materials explain the history of mastodons in Michigan.

Armed with shovels and a spirit to know how life was lived 10,000 and more years ago, Fisher and other scientists probe for the big bones, sometimes a few feet below the surface, sometimes tens of feet deeper.

"It's very exciting," Fisher says of the digging, which can result in extensive knowledge of the animals' lives and times around Michigan towns: for example, Jackson, where two digs are ongoing, one south and one west of the city.

Bones can answer many questions, Fisher says, including how long they've been there, plus the age and sex of the animal they're from, the climate it lived in, the season in which it died, and even the status of its health during its life.

What the bones can't tell us with any certainty is why there no longer are any elephants in the Americas. It's believed that they got here the same way humans did: across the prehistoric Bering Straits land bridge from present-day Siberia to Alaska. But where did they disappear to? And when and why?

"There are two principal explanations," Fisher says, "two main concepts in a battle of ideas. One is that the change of climate after the last ice age was somehow too much for these animals to deal with. The other idea is that hunting by humans made them go extinct. Both ideas are viable."

But why didn't African and Asian elephants become extinct at the end of the ice age?

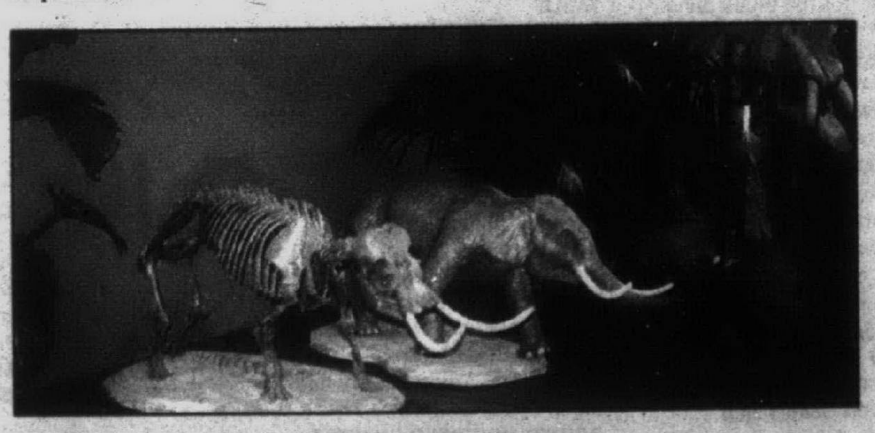
"Folks who favor the climate-change idea," Fisher says, "say, well, the climate change in Africa and Asia wasn't as dramatic."

Visitors to "Elephants!" will find learning opportunities thundering about the museum like a herd of you-know-whats. If you want to learn some fundamental elephant, go to the exhibit at Cranbrook. While there's some driving to do, and a fee to get in, the information will likely be more reliable and the challenges fewer than when Christopher Robin, Winnie-the-Pooh, and Piglet set out to meet a Heffalump.

Have you "Herd?"

While many seventh-graders might already know a lot of this stuff, some people, even those with college degrees, can learn at the exhibit:

- Elephants are herbivores, and hungry herbivores at that. They stroll through the fast-food forest each day ingesting as much as 330 pounds of grass, roots, leaves, tree branches, tree bark, and fruit. They wash it down with more than 17 gallons of water.
- No sweating occurs through an elephant's thick skin. Mutually applied mud packs help reduce heat.
- Tusks are both tool and weapon. And an elephant can be right- or left-tusked. The most-used, or master tusk will be shorter and rounded from its more active life.
- Grandma is head of the main family group, which includes her daughters and their daughters, and perhaps their daughters. The boys are tolerated while they're toddlers, sent away when they become annoying teenagers, and are welcomed back when they're old enough to help make more elephants.
- The differences between today's Asian and African elephants are many. A handy clue to identify the difference is that, helpfully for us, the African's ears are shaped like Africa and the Asian's ears are shaped like Asia. Also, African's backs curve down, Asian's curve up.



MUSIC

Klezmer Fusion Band celebrates Jewish life

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

Neil Alexander expresses joy and humor through music, but there's a spiritual side too.

"We do authentic klezmer music," said vocalist/guitarist Neil Alexander of Ann Arbor, founder of the "Klezmer Fusion Band," performing May 31 at a benefit concert/silent auction hosted by Congregation Shir Tikvah at the Shotwell-Gustafson Pavilion off of Adams Road on the Oakland University campus in Rochester. "We are a band that celebrates Jewish life."

Most of their gigs are private such as bar mitvahs, weddings, and anniversaries. "We play 30 to 40 gigs a year," said Alexander, a physician-researcher on the faculty of the University of Michigan Medical School. What makes his band different is the way they "fuse" Old World melodies with ones from the New World.

Some songs are original compositions in Hebrew or English, others are wacky and fun. "We do a song 'Under the Wedding Canopy,' to the beat of "Under the Boardwalk," he explained.

Dan Maslanka, a drummer who owns Pro Percussion Center in Plymouth with drummer, Michael Abbate, has played with Alexander's group for a year.

"Neil will take some folk songs and do them with modern day music. He blends traditional folk songs with modern rhythms. I have a good time working with him, and his core of talented musicians. It's very listenable. He takes old folk songs you heard as a kid, and gives them a different beat."

Alexander's mission is to "play Jewish celebratory music in all forms – klezmer moves people he said."

His music is derived from three traditional sources – Yiddish/klezmer (including folk and theater music); Israeli/Hebrew (including contemporary, folk and dance tunes), and religious (music from Chabad/Hassidic, liturgical, and biblical sources.)

The music gets its old world sound from the instrumentation – clarinet, mandolin, or acoustic guitar, backed by a "professional jazz rhythm section" – keyboards, bass and drums. Some of it has a 'danceable' feel

"We're contemporary, but with Jewish content," said

Garcia, Lumet sing the 'blues' in police drama

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
SPECIAL WRITER

I'm not a fan of the critically-acclaimed police dramas that dot the television landscape. But the few episodes of "Homicide" and "NYPD Blue" that I have caught are a heck of a lot better than "Night Falls on Manhattan," Sidney Lumet's new film about corruption in the New York police department.

Andy Garcia plays Sean Casey, a former policeman whose nights of law school land him a grunt job in the district attorney's office. When his policeman father (Ian Holm) is gunned down by a notorious drug dealer, he's enlisted to prosecute the shooter.

Soon he gets his own shot at the DA job, realizing that the dealer's apparent desperation plea of police conspiracy was actually the truth.

"Is Washington the only one during the trial who wasn't lying?" he asks in desperation, determined to bust crooked cops, no matter who is implicated.

He discovers that law enforcement is not necessarily about truth, justice, and the American way. According to his predecessor (Ron Liebman), it's about cutting deals and making sure you end up with a little more than you gave.

In "Night Falls on Manhattan" Garcia is called upon to be Pacino, not surprising since the movie is written and directed by Sidney Lumet. The veteran filmmaker gave Pacino some of his earliest high-profile roles in "Serpico" and "Dog Day Afternoon." The only problem is: Garcia isn't much of an actor. He's passable in supporting parts, but he's stiff and lacks the charisma to carry such a soul-searching role as this.

I was actually with "Night Falls on Manhattan" to a point. The movie cleverly opens with a montage showing Casey, like countless others in his department, struggling through his case load. It's an interesting part of the criminal justice system rarely seen on the screen, big or small.

Things start to go downhill shortly after Richard Dreyfuss arrives. He plays an Allen Dershowitz-style defense attorney named Sam Vigoda who tries to get his client off with courtroom histrionics.

Later he's in a steam room confessing to Casey that deep down he wants to see justice done. His daughter, we learn, was the victim of a drug overdose and he faults the police who turn a blind eye to drugs for a little extra money in their pockets.

Then Casey gets involved with a sexy member of Vigoda's legal team (Lena Olin). The question arises whether she's really in love with him or just snooping around for dirt. But this relationship, like the rest in the film, is handled so weakly that we couldn't care less.

As the elder Casey, Ian Holm continues to distance himself from the picky little Englishman parts that made him famous on two continents. He's all right during his courtroom testimony but otherwise seems out of place.

Lumet has either seen too many cop shows or not enough. He avoids the irritating hand-held look that has been their signature, yet fails to capture their heart and razor sharp performances. Simply put: Why spend seven dollars when you can see the same material handled better and for free?

John Monaghan welcomes your calls and comments. To leave John a voice mail message, dial (313) 953-2047, mailbox 1866.

Drama: A controversial, high profile criminal case tests the idealism of unseasoned district attorney Sean Casy (Andy Garcia, right) and the honor of his father, veteran policeman Liam Casey (Ian Holm) in "Night Falls on Manhattan."

Alexander. We'll take a very traditional melody, and the rhythm section will give it some oomph that it might not have had!"

Latin rhythms, jazz, Caribbean and rock and roll are also "fused" into traditional rhythms. "We'll do a Yiddish tango or samba, create our own version of a song to give it a Latin feel or a Jazz feel."

"People find it moving, soulful," said Alexander whose group is recording a CD due out later this year.

Alexander is joined by klezmer and classical clarinetist Ralph Katz; and vocalist Nan Nelson who plays balalaika, mandolin and guitar. The rhythm section includes local professional jazz players and participants in various ensembles including bassist Keith Malinowski, keyboardist Stephanie Ozer, and Maslanka.

You might not see him, but Maslanka will be performing with the orchestra at the Fisher Theatre in "Man of La Mancha," which runs June 3-22, and stars Robert Goulet. Call (313) 872-1000 for ticket information, or (810) 645-6666 to charge tickets.

The theme of Congregation Shir Tikvah's ninth annual auction is "...and the beat goes on."

"It is in recognition of Shir Tikvah's indomitable spirit both in its annual fund-raising efforts and its ability to flourish and grow for over 14 years despite its lack of a permanent home," said Janet Schenk, publicity chairperson. "We are in the process of building, and hope to be in our permanent home in Troy at the corner of Wattles and Northfield Parkway by December."

The ninth annual silent auction, which includes vacations, a sailing trip, jewelry, restaurant certificates, and sports memorabilia begins at 6:30 p.m., followed by the concert at 7:30 p.m. Other featured items in the auction are Beanie Baby Baskets, a signed Joe Dumars shirt, a signed Steve Yzerman hockey puck, and Frank Lloyd Wright etched glass art work.

Light munches will be available throughout the evening with dessert being served after the concert. Tickets begin at $25. Depending on the amount, people who purchase tickets priced at $150 or more will receive an invitation to a pre-glow of either appetizers or dinner catered by Bristoni's Ristorante in Rochester Hills. Call (810) 619-9669 for ticket information.

Fans of klezmer music won't want to miss "The World of Sholom Aleichem" playing at the Jewish Community Center, 6600 West Maple, West Bloomfield through June 1. Clarinetist Matt Pitt has created a score for the production. He performs on stage, and helps set the mood for the production, based on the stories of Sholom Aleichem and I.L. Peretz. Call (810) 788-2900 for show times, and ticket information.

Third Blind Eye creates album 'to swim around in'

CHRISTINA FUOCO

Third Eye Blind singer Stephan Jenkins is confident that his alternative rock band's self-titled debut is a great record.

"You know those records you used to listen to when you were 14? You put the Cure on your headphones, turned out the lights and got in bed and listened to the whole record. You got inside it and swam around. I feel like we made one of those records," Jenkins said during a recent phone conversation from Vancouver.

"It's got some catchy tunes," he added about his record. "I like a lot of music but a lot of the stuff that's out right now is vile."

The San Francisco band was originally going to open for Brit poppers James at Clutch Cargo's in Pontiac on Thursday, May 29. James canceled its tour but Third Eye Blind will headline a show at the Mill Street Entry below Clutch Cargo's the same night.

At a glance it seems that the James-Third Eye Blind show was a compatible line-up because Third Eye Blind's quirky first single "Semi-Charmed Life" carries the enthusiasm found in many Brit pop bands.

Jenkins would beg to differ.

"I don't think that we're a slant on Brit pop. I feel like our music is much more visceral. It has sort of an American more muscular mentality to it than the Brit pop thing. There's some stuff that I like. Supergrass is my favorite Brit band," Jenkins said.

"But there's something about that stuff that's disposable to me. It's sort of designed to be that way. Blur is very entertaining but it seems like they're almost set up to have a short shelf life."

Jenkins explained that most of the songs on the lyrically dark album are about loss. The catchy pop tune "Semi-Charmed Life" tells the story of a relationship gone sour due to speed addiction. "Jumper," a dour acoustic number, was based on a homosexual friend of the band's manager who killed himself after being diagnosed with AIDS.

"The story was so utterly crushing that it was sort of resonating with me because I think that I've never been faced with that kind of rejection or that kind of confusion or terror," Jenkins.

"We all have skeletons, the sort of things that we fear and that we're ashamed about from the past. That was sort of the inciting moment to write that song. For me, at some point I think I said, 'This is who I am and I'm flawed. That's it and that's cool.' There's something liberating about that."

Other lyrics are about car accidents, anti-depressants, and jealousy. The happiest song on the album "I Want You" includes the line "bones weeping in the grave."

"We make the music we make because we're excited about," Jenkins said. "It's not in order to get a response. It's real to us."

Third Eye Blind with special guest Coward performs Thursday, May 29, Mill Street Entry below Clutch Cargo's, 65 E. Huron, Pontiac. Doors open at 8 p.m. Tickets are $8 in advance; $10 at the door for the all-ages show. Refunds for the James/Third Eye Blind show are available at point of purchase. For more information, call (810) 333-2362.

Long lead time needed for arts TV show

BACKSTAGE PASS

ANN DELISI

I can't think of a more exciting place than the Metro Detroit area to do a visual and performing arts show like Backstage Pass. Sure, that sounds like hype – why not New York or L.A.? But everyone knows the vibes from those cities. (Who hasn't seen a comic in front of fake brick wall milking the wacky differences between the East and West coasts? The Detroit art scene offers that palpable sense of discovery you can only get from an expanding market.

Just look at the listing in this section. There's a ton of stuff happening. And more seems to be going on every week. It's exciting! It's stimulating! It's ... daunting. How in the world does Channel 56 fit all that into a half hour TV show?

Well, we don't. They're two entirely different mediums – you can spread out the weekend entertainment listings and peruse for hours with a warm cup of steam in your hands. Try that with a TV and you're likely to inadvertently scald Sam Donaldson. So how do we select the four or so events to feature each week on Backstage Pass?

First, you need a lot of lead time. (This according to our crack team of producers, who like to give me the impression that TV production takes all the calculus, contingency analysis and logistical aplomb of a NASA launch, only with more voodoo.) So while you want to have convenient newspaper listings in use in planning your weekend right before the weekend you're planning, for TV we need more notice. So, at the production's outset, said Crack Producers got on the horn to every venue they could think of to get on their fax, mail and e-mail distribution lists. (The address is Backstage Pass@wtvs.pbs.org)

So now the show's producers get a ton of information about arts events way in advance. (They're a good group to ask what's happening two months from now, but ask them what they're doing tonight and they freak.) Now what?

This gets tricky. There are legitimate areas of gray: You always want to give a new act a break, but you don't want to get suckered into booking a flash in the pan. You love the idea of showing respect to the tested veterans, but you don't want to look stale or too risk-averse ...

So our Crack Producers (isn't that a felony?) took a page out of one of those itt-bitty books you see next to gas station cash registers with titles like P.S.: Everything in Life's Little Rule Book I Learned in Kindergarten and chucked the self-doubting negativity.

The essential element of that team is our stunning roster of on-camera segment hosts. They're the ones in the trenches of the arts communities, be it theater, dance, visual arts, or music – classical, jazz, blues, pop, world beat – you name it. They're the ones with all the chops, all the scars, all the love for what they do. And they clue us into who's hot, who's taking risks, who we should be introducing to you.

Take the lineup for tonight's show: it was one of our music hosts, W. Kim Heron of the popular WDET program Destination Out! who told us about bassist Rodney Whitaker, a Detroit jazzman who's been living and gigging in New York for the last 10 years, but is now pulling together a Detroit-based quintet. We'll hear an in-studio performance. Host Gary Anderson, artistic director of Detroit's renowned Plowshares Theater, informed us that Detroit's own Mosaic Youth Theatre was recently the hit of the World Festival in Europe, and helped arrange a staging of a scene from their production What Fools These Mortals Be! in the Channel 56 studio. Our overnight rave scene correspondent Odell Nails investigated the booming Cocktail Culture and will show us what it's all about. And our own David Rau, curator of education at the Cranbrook Art Museum, will give us all the scoop on influential ceramist John Parker Glick.

You can see the final product every Thursday on Channel 56 at 7:30 p.m., rebroadcast on Friday at 11:30 p.m. Enjoy the show, and get out there.

DINING

'Wally & Al's Magic Platter offers a warm welcome

BY LEANNE ROGERS
STAFF WRITER

Regular customers at Wally & Al's Magic Platter like to make themselves at home in the restaurant. That's reflected by the decorations on the walls.

"All the pictures on the wall came from customers," said Wally Bazzi, who owns the restaurant with his brother Al.

There are pictures of clowns – some of whom are customers – as well as an Elvis clock and a portrait of Elizabeth Taylor.

"The customers put up decorations for Christmas and other holidays. No one asked them, they just do it. It's like a family place for them," said Bazzi.

Traditional American food is featured on the menu with pork chops and broiled chicken breast sandwiches among the most popular items, according to Bazzi. Spaghetti and Greek items are also featured. Breakfast is available anytime with specials offered daily including Sundays.

The highest-priced menu item is a New York Strip steak at $9.95. A typical special offered recently was meatloaf with potato and vegetable for $4.50. Dinners comes with all-you-can-eat soup.

"I make the soup early so it's available at lunch. Everything is homemade," said Bazzi, who does most of the cooking at the restaurant.

With everything being made fresh, Bazzi said he can cook to meet special requests with menu items. "I don't put too much salt in the food. The customers can use the salt themselves," he commented. "We have a lot of low-calorie dressings and syrup."

Before opening their restaurant about a year ago, the Bazzi brothers had worked about nine years at the Magic Meal Restaurant on Ford Road until it was destroyed by fire.

Waitress Ida Fouse had worked 29 years at different incarnations of the restaurant that ended as the Magic Meal. Now she is working at the Magic Platter where she continues friendly banter with customers.

"We get a lot of customers from Burger and other schools. People enjoy our food," said Fouse. "They like to harass me. Wally and Al used to think they were mad at me when they would kid around."

Mail carrier Ann Logan stops by for lunch once or twice a week. "The food is tasty and the prices are good," she said. "I usually get vegetable soup with a lunch special. I like Ida the waitress."

In the past, restaurants at this location have been hampered by limited parking. Bazzi has acquired space for additional parking north of the restaurant off Merriman.

"All of the parking is back behind the apartment building (adjacent to the restaurant). A lot of people walk from St. Raphael Church on Sundays," Bazzi said.

The attire is casual at the Magic Platter and kids are always welcome. "They love the fish tank and will hang out there to watch the fish," Bazzi said. "We have some books for them to read."

The restaurant doesn't currently have a liquor license. Bazzi said he plans to soon add a juice bar that will offer freshly made fruit and vegetable juices.

The Magic Platter can also accommodate groups for meetings with reservations requested.

Plan move to new home before the summer rush

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

The offer has been accepted, all the paperwork completed and you're ready to relocate to a new address. Or are you?

How are you going to get your things from Point A to Point B – a professional moving company or a crew of family, friends and a rental fueled by pizza and beer?

When's moving day? Who's going to pack? What are you going to take?

Details, details, details.

Planning your work, then working your plan can send you smoothly down the Yellow Brick Road.

"You probably want to start talking with a firm about a month before you're ready to move," said Paul Solberg, operations manager for Reliable Moving & Storage in Canton.

"Our industry is busiest at the end of June, July and August," Solberg said. "Probably half of the people and more move those three months of the summer. No matter how many trucks are available, it's never enough to move those three weeks of the year."

"Customers could get better service, better crews and more timely response if they could move at other than the last week of the month," said Bill Phelps, general manager for Palmer Moving & Storage in Troy.

Figure on spending $60-75 per hour for a professional crew of two on weekdays and upwards of $90-$100 per hour on Saturdays.

"One of the things we run into is a lot of people want to move into or out of a residence the same day they close," Solberg said.

"They have the closing at 10, the movers out at 10:30 or 11. The closing doesn't go smoothly or ends up being postponed. They end up having to pay for stuff to stay on the truck an extra day either at origination or destination."

So don't schedule a move on the day you finalize your real estate transaction. Don't schedule farewell or welcoming parties on the day of the move, either.

"Movers will need your assistance to make sure furniture is placed properly," Phelps said. "Each time you're distracted or have to leave the house ... those cause unnecessary delays."

And delays mean money.

If you have young children or pets, let grandma, another relative or friends entertain them off premises for the day.

"Directing movers and keeping an eye on kids at the same time can be very stressful," Solberg said.

Potentially dangerous, too, he added.

"When a big truck stops in front of the house, the first thing they (kids) want to do is climb into the truck," Solberg said.

Tony Lanzilotti, manager for Two Men and a Truck in Southfield, advises families to "put a knapsack together" with things they'll need immediately that might not be readily available at the new address.

That might include snack foods, soap, toothbrush, shampoo, towels, and a change of clothes.

Schedule disconnect and connect of gas, electricity, telephone and cable TV one or two weeks prior to the move and complete a change-of-address form at the post office a week in advance, Lanzilotti added.

As for packing, box as much as you can, including clothes. Clearly label all boxes.

"Boxes need lids and need to be sealed tight because everything has to be stacked in the truck," Phelps said.

"One tip we give is maybe leave china and fragile breakables for the mover to pack," Solberg said.

Major appliance should be disconnected before movers arrive.

"A lot of times computers are still hooked up," Phelps said. "They have to be disassembled." VCRs, too.

Also, make sure what you're packing really needs to go. "We've had people move wood piles," Solberg said. "When you take what it costs to move a wood pile, is it really important?"

Garage sales will get rid of unwanted items and provide some extra spending cash.

If you're young, ambitious and cost-conscious, consider moving yourself.

Ryder Transportation Services charges $60 per day plus 45 cents per mile for a 15-foot truck, $90 per day plus 45 cents per mile for a 24-footer. A dolly, $10, and furniture pads, $10 per dozen, are extra.

"Heavy items you want to pack between axles, which usually means in front of the cargo area," said Jeff Curtis, rental representative for Ryder in Livonia. "You want to utilize as much space as possible."

Remove dresser drawers with clothes inside, haul out the dresser, then reinsert the drawers in the dresser on the truck. Remove legs from tables.

"Pack gradually," Curtis said. "You want to start packing early on so when you get to the day before the move, you don't need 20 more boxes."

Lock-ins, Part II

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

This is the second column on the topic of mortgage lock-ins. See the Editor's note at the end if you'd like to look up the first part, which ran in last week's Observer & Eccentric.

What options are available for setting the mortgage terms?

Lenders may offer different options in establishing the interest rate and points that you will be charged, such as:

Locked-in interest rate – locked-in points. This option may be considered a true lock-in because your mortgage terms should not increase above the interest rate and points you've agreed on even if market conditions change.

Locked-in interest rate – floating points. If interest rates drop during the lock-in period, the points also may fall. If they rise, the points may also increase. Even if you float your points, your lender may allow you to lock-in the points at some time before settlement at whatever level is then current. If you float your points and market interest rates increase by the time of the settlement, the lender may charge a greater number of points for a loan at the rate you've locked in. In this case, the benefit you might have had by locking in your rate may be lost because you" have to pay more in up-front costs.

Floating interest rate – floating points. Under this option, the lender lets you lock in the interest rate and the points at some time after application but before settlement. If you think that rates will remain level or even go down, you may want to wait on locking-in a particular rate and points. If rates go up, you should expect to be charged the higher rate.

How long are lock-ins valid?

Usually, the lender will promise to hold a certain interest rate and number of points for a given number of days, and to get these terms you must settle on the loan within the time period. Lock-ins of 30 to 60 days are common. But some lenders may offer a lock-ion for only a short period of time (for example, seven days after your loan is approved) while some others might offer longer lock-ins (up to 120 days). Lenders that charge a lock-in fee may charge a higher fee for the longer lock-in period. Usually, the longer the period, the greater the fee.

The lock-in period should be long enough to allow for settlement, and any other contingencies imposed by the lender, before the lock-in expires. Before deciding on the length of the lock-in to ask for, you should find out the average time for processing loans in your area and ask your lender to estimate (in writing, if possible) the time needed to process your loan. You'll also want to take into account any factors that might delay your settlement. These may include delays that you can anticipate in providing materials about your financial condition and, in case you are buying a new house, unanticipated construction delays. Finally, ask

Reasonable owner will win out when using lake property

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I am a riparian owner of land on Lake — in the Lower Peninsula. Please tell me what limitations are placed upon me and my neighbors in regard to the use of the lake and its water.

A. Use of the water by riparian owners of inland lakes is governed by the principals of reasonableness. Thus, where there are several riparian owners on an inland lake, they may use the surface of the whole lake for boating, swimming, fishing and other similar riparian rights as long as they do not interfere with the reasonable use of the waters by other riparian owners.

Obviously, the definition of reasonable use depends upon the facts of each case. there is a three-prong test, however, for determining reasonableness. They are:

1. Attention should be given to the size, character and natural state of the water course.

2. Consideration should be given to the type and purpose of the uses proposed and their effect on the water course.

3. A court will balance the benefit that would result for the proposed user with an injury to other riparian owners. But, if we discussed all the interpretations the court has made, we would fill up the rest of the newspaper. A lawyer can give you more information if you have a specific problem.

Midwest houses lead price increases

WASHINGTON (AP) – Gains in home prices outpaced inflation over the year that ended in March, with the biggest increases reported in the Midwest and South.

Nationally, the median price of existing homes rose 4 percent to $119,400 – meaning half sold for more and half for less, the National Association of Realtors said.

In the Midwest, the median price jumped 5.6 percent to $102,000, double the 2.8 percent inflation rate over the period.

Housing markets in the Northeast were more sluggish, with the median rising 2.2 percent to $141,700. In the West, the median increased 3.1 percent to $153,700.

"In the Midwest, manufacturing is doing well and when the (local) economy is doing well, the housing market will do pretty well too," said economist Kim Kennedy of Cahners Economics in Newton, Mass.

Nationally, home prices should continue to advance faster than inflation in the next year, though not quite as much as 4 percent, Kennedy and other analysts said. That should support continued strength in consumer spending.

"Clearly it's a major positive for consumers' confidence that their homes are appreciating and that they have a solid investment in addition to any gains they may have made in mutual funds," said economist Lynn Reaser of Barnett Banks Inc. in Jacksonville, Fla.

The three markets with the biggest price gains were Greenville, S.C., up 15.8 percent to $111,100; Mobile, Ala., up 13.3 percent to $89,400; and Aurora, Ill., up 11.9 percent to $147,100.

The solid gains in the South partly reflect the long-term demographic trend of people moving from the Northeast to the South and West, Reaser said.

But prices declined in 31 of the 131 metropolitan areas surveyed by the real estate trade group. Values fell 13.9 percent in Bradenton, Fla., to $86,500; 7.9 percent in Gary, Ind., to $88,100; ard 5.4 percent in Honolulu to $313,800.

Reaser said Bradenton's housing market is healthy and the drop in the median price probably reflected a shift in the mix of sales toward smaller homes.

"Basically, it's just some return to a more normal level," she said. "But if you just looked at the headline, you'd think it was in trouble."

Honolulu, still the nation's priciest market despite the decline, has been hurt by a decline in tourism and investment from Japan, she said.

However, in the second most expensive market, San Francisco, the median price rose 7.5 percent to $271,100, reflecting the booming computer and high tech industries. But the median fell 1.7 percent in Los Angeles to $169,200.

for a lock-in with as few contingencies as possible.

What happens if the lock-in period expires?

If you don't settle within the lock-in period, you might lose the interest rate and the number of points you had locked in. This could happen if there are delays in processing whether they are caused by you, other involved in the settlement process or he lender. For example, you loan approval could be delayed if the lender has to wait for any documents from you or from others such as employers, appraisers, termite inspectors, builders, and individuals selling the home. On occasion, lenders are themselves the cause of processing delays, particularly when loan demand is heavy. This sometimes happens when interest rates fall suddenly.

If your lock-in expires, most lenders will offer the loan based on the prevailing interest rate and points. If market conditions have caused interest rates to rise, most lenders will charge you more for your loan. One reason why some lenders may be unable to offer the lock-in rate after the period expires is that they can lo longer sell the loan to investors at the lock-in rate. (When lenders lock in loan terms for borrowers, they often have an agreement with investors to buy these loans based on the lock-in terms. That agreement may expire around the same time that the lock-in expires and the lender may be unable to afford to offer the same terms if market rates have increased.) Lenders that intend to keep the loans they make may have more flexibility in those cases where settlement is not reached before the lock-in expires.

How can you speed up the approval of the loan?

While the lender has the greatest role in how fast your loan application is processed, there are certain things you can do to speed up its approval. Try to find out what documentation the lender will require from you and bring it with you when you apply for a loan. This may help to get your application process moving more quickly.

When you first meet with your lender, be sure to bring the following documents:

- The purchase contract for the house.
- Your bank account numbers, the address of your bank branch and your latest bank statement, plus pay stubs, W-2 forms, or other proof of employment and salary, to help the lender check your finances.
- If you are self-employed, balance sheets, tax returns for two-three previous years, and other information about your business.
- Information about debts, including loan and credit card account numbers and the names and addresses of your creditors.
- Evidence of your mortgage or rental payments, such as canceled checks.
- Certificate of Eligibility from the VA if you want a VA-guaranteed loan. Your lender may be able to help you obtain this.

Be sure to respond promptly to your lender's requests for information while your loan is being processed. It is also a good idea to call the lender and real estate agent from time to time.

By calling occasionally, you can check on the status of your application and offer to help contact others such as employers who may need to provide documents and other information for your loan..

It is also helpful to keep notes on your conversations with the lender.

Tips enhance independence, reduce in-home accidents

You can make changes to your home that are not obvious but will make life easier for older Americans. For many older Americans, independent living is essential to happiness.

Nevertheless, issues surrounding safety and the ability to handle day-to-day tasks are often a concern for both seniors and their families.

Good news: minor enhancements to the home environment may be just what the doctor ordered. This may be a good time to think about ways to redesign the home with safety, comfort and convenience in mind.

The following steps may enhance a senior's capacity to live independently and comfortably.

"While no one likes to think about getting older, the realities of aging cannot be ignored," said Terry McGowan, executive director of SeniorLink, a Massachusetts-based national eldercare resource and referral program for seniors and their families.

"Shelves too high to reach. A bath tub to difficult to step into. A stairwell to steep to climb. While the solution often is simple, too many times an accident is needed to prompt a change." SeniorLink offers the following home remodeling tips to enhance an older person's independence and reduce in-home accidents.

- Use levered door handles instead of door knobs.
- Replace the conventional two-handled faucets with a single lever style faucet.
- Increase lighting – both number of fixtures and wattage.
- Replace traditional lamps with touch lamps to eliminate the need to reach for often hard-to-maneuver switches and knobs.
- Make sure that there is a light switch at both the bottom and top of the stairs.
- Install nightlights that turn on automatically once a room is dark.
- Add a second railing along the stairs if one does not already exist and make sure that the railing extends beyond the bottom stair.
- Lower kitchen cabinets or keep a "reach" bar on hand to avoid the need for step stools.
- Keep the floor space uncluttered. For instance, move the kitchen garbage barrel under the sink.
- Install hand rails and grab bars – not just in bathrooms.
- Mark all tops and bottoms of stairwells with bright paint or tape.
- Replace tub showers with walk-in stall showers large enough for wheelchair access.
- Replace the shower head with a hand-held model so that showers can be taken sitting down.
- Add built-in benches in shower.
- Transform a first-floor study and bathroom into the master bedroom and bathroom.
- If the master bedroom remains on the second floor, move the laundry room to the second floor.
- Remove all throw rugs and replace potentially slippery hard wood floors with wall-to-wall carpet.

SeniorLink's goal is to promote optimal health and independent living by bridging the gap between seniors and their families and the array of services available to them.

SeniorLink offers comprehensive assessments, on-going education and tailored recommendations for a $52 annual membership fee.

One membership covers all immediate family members on an unlimited basis each year.

Add steps to any swimming pool

Easy entry and exit is now easy and affordable in residential swimming pools without built-in stairs by using Ez Steps, U.S. Patent No. 4,599,835. These 4-Tread drop-in steps have an adjustable top adapter step which fits various pool wall heights in above-ground and inground swimming pools.

Special edging, along the bottom and the sides, serves to guard against pool bottom damage. A unique built-in, concealed ballast container prevents the stair from "floating."

Ez Steps are made from pure white structural polyethylene with a UV stabilizer. Its unique design allows the steps to be shipped "knocked down" in a carton with easy at-home assembly and installation. Two models are available. Both have tread widths of 35 inches. One model offers an adjustable height of 48 inches to 51 inches for above-ground pools; the other model has an adjustable height range of 42 inches to 45 inches for inground pools. With this flexibility, Ez Steps can be quickly fitted to nearly all existing residential swimming pools.

The unit also includes two stainless steel handrails especially designed for use with Ez Steps.

Ez Steps are marketed by Quaker Plastic Corp. and sold through a national network of wholesale distributors. Contact any local pool dealer/builder for additional information or write: Ez Steps, P.O. Box 2647-A, York, PA 17405.

Landscape to fight plant stress

BY JAMES E. WALTERS
FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

In landscape watering, the goal should be to keep plants from stress.

Longtime gardeners constantly practice looking at a plant for signs of stress and what may be causing it. This requires close attention to not only the plants but also to soil and weather conditions.

A few basic practices smooth the problem. Realize that watering requirements change as a plant grows, and there is a need to water accordingly.

It also helps to group plants according to their water requirements. Place together trees, shrubs and flowers that have high or low requirements. This will help keep them from being over- or under-watered. While not always possible, such grouping should be the leading objective.

Soil salts are water soluble, so deep watering is worth a try whenever a plant seems in trouble. A long, slow watering moves the salts below the roots.

Soil-salt damage often appears much like the injury resulting from abnormally low rainfall or drought. Growth is stunted. There can be yellowing leaves, leaf burn, leaf drop, branch dieback.

Be sure that the symptoms aren't caused by excess water. Determine moisture depth by how easily a long screwdriver or narrow rod goes into the ground. It will be hard to push into dry soil.

While signs of wilting are bad news, they can be caused by too much water or too little.

Established plants can tolerate some wilting and probably won't die from lack of water. They just won't grow very fast or look as well.

New plants and seedlings will need watering before they reach the stress stage. They become established through root growth and a good top-to-root balance. Some species take one to two years, or even more. Until you are sure they are established, give them close attention. Don't try to water on a fixed schedule.

With a newly purchased plant, the original advice is usually to water every couple of days after planting. The plant may look happy for months. But if such watering continues, it begins to wilt and drop leaves despite the attention lavished upon it. Actually, it is drowning from lack of soil oxygen. More water finishes it.

It is better to water every other day for the first couple of weeks and then reduce this to once or twice a week.

Light but daily watering will establish shallow root-systems subject to quick drying. Since a plant wilts if the roots don't have sufficient moisture, the deeper the roots go the less vulnerable the plant is to fluctuations at the soil surface and sudden drying.

Conditions vary, but start by assuming that one to two hours of slow soaking will wet the average soil to a depth of 2 feet and six to eight hours will reach 4 to 5 feet. In general, flowers root at least 1 foot deep; established shrubs 3-to-4-feet deep and most mature trees 5 feet or more.

Mulching is another good technique. Apply organic material to the soil surface to prevent drying, hold down weeds and keep temperatures cooler.

/an automatic irrigation system eliminates the need to drag garden hoses to various locations. Many gardeners find the convenience alone is worth the installation cost. But observe the system frequently while it is running to catch problems before they become serious.

Another good point to remember: roots don't seek water, they follow it. So they seldom will grow into dry soil.
