Road facility on tap in township

■ Plymouth Township officials aren't too crazy about the idea, but Wayne County officials have proposed a new road maintenance facility at M-14 and Sheldon that would include a 50-foot salt dome.

BY KURT KUBAN

Wayne County has proposed building a $6 million road maintenance facility in Plymouth Township on Sheldon Road near M-14 to replace the aging Phoenix Yard facility on Northville Road and Hines Drive.

Plans for the new facility, which will be built on a 10-acre triangular property at the northeast intersection of Sheldon and M-14 near the freeway ramp, will include a large garage and 51-foot tall salt dome, according to John Roach, a spokesman for the county's public services department.

The county has already submitted plans for the new facility to Plymouth Township officials.

"We're letting the Plymouth Township folks look at what we're proposing. We want their input before we move forward. Everything is contingent on getting approval from the township," Roach said.

Township officials have not been very receptive to the idea of building the new facility at that location, however.

"Our initial reaction was negative. This is a prime area in Wayne County. I'm not sure this kind of facility is compatible with what our plans are for that part of the township," said Jim Anulewicz, the township's director of public services.

Plymouth Township Supervisor Steve Mann said he has several concerns about the proposed facility. His biggest worry is that it will be an eyesore, particularly because of the salt dome, which will hold up to 8,000 tons of salt.

"It's obvious the county needs more room and a larger facility, but I'm not convinced this is the best place for it. But if that's where it is going to be built, we want to make sure it is as

Enrichment program helps kids prepare

BY TONY BRUSCATO

Whether it be for enrichment or at-risk students, summer school is thriving in the Plymouth-Canton school district.

More than 2,000 students, or nearly 15 percent of the district's 16,500 student population, are involved in some way when it comes to summertime classes at any of the district's school buildings. That includes elementary, middle and high school classes, swimming lessons and drivers education, among the many programs the school district offers.

"We have to be more creative at looking at what children need on a year-round basis," said Jane VanSteenis, principal at Bird Elementary in Plymouth Township, who runs her own summer program for at-risk students with the help of $6,000 in at-risk funding. "They won't lose ground from where they were in June. We talk with kids about jump-starting for the next school year. The at-risk students tend to be the kids who benefit from year-round school."

Pursell denies support of candidate

BY TONY BRUSCATO

Former U.S. Congressman Carl Pursell of Plymouth Township insists a letter which suggests he's endorsing Tom Prose in the Plymouth city commission race is a fabrication.

Pursell, whose son Phil is among 11 candidates vying for four open seats in the Aug. 7 primary, told the Observer that campaign literature being mailed by Prose is not an endorsement written by him.

"The letterhead is stationery I used during my campaign years ago. And the signature block is one I used. But I never wrote that letter. The endorsement isn't mine," said Pursell adamantly.

"I've been around politics for more than 30 years, and I've seen a lot of campaigns come and go," he added. "However, in all my public career I've never seen a candidate violate ethics conduct like this. I think he (Prose) should apologize to the voters of Plymouth and to me."

The nine-paragraph letter with Carl Pursell's signature said "Tom Prose is one of the most outstanding young leaders to emerge in Plymouth ... has a genuine concern for other people ... I'm impressed with his positions on the issues ... he is an excellent candidate who deserves your support."

Prose said the letter is one of three pieces of literature recently mailed to voters in Plymouth. A pamphlet, which shows a younger Prose with a mustache, is a campaign piece from eight years ago when Prose ran for city commission. There's also a cover letter signed by Tom Prose.

"It seems like only yesterday that I was campaigning with former Congressman Carl Pursell and former Plymouth mayors Bob Jones and Doug Miller. They were each active in my campaign as we worked to establish strong priorities for the community. Interestingly enough those same campaign issues from eight years ago are some of the same issues facing Plymouth now," began Prose's letter.

"The point I was trying to bring out

Marching band gets new director

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

The Plymouth-Canton Marching Band, one of the top programs in the country, has a new director.

The hiring of Clayton Wachholz, a teaching assistant at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, is expected to be approved by the Board of Education at its Aug. 14 meeting. He's being recommended by the hiring committee at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park to replace David McGrath, who left for personal and professional reasons and will teach at Walled Lake Central.

"I know the history of excellence of the marching band and the current program," Wachholz, 33, said from New Orleans, where he is on tour with a drum and bugle corps squad from Madison, Wisc. "Usually when you go to a program, you have to pick up the pieces. I look forward to being in a program that is used to achieving high honors."

Wachholz spent last year as a teaching assistant at the University of Wisconsin pursuing his masters degree in conducting. He said it's likely he'll finish his studies at the University of Michigan while teaching at Plymouth-Canton.

His last high school position was band director at Charles B. Whitnall High School in Greenfield, Wisc., a suburb of Milwaukee, where he taught for two years.

"I'm a strong band conductor, I have a lot of experience with marching bands, and have experience with a world renown drum and bugle corps," said Wachholz. "I think I bring a diverse background and leadership abilities."

At Whitnall High School, Wachholz taught two concert bands, a jazz studies class and a chamber orchestra. The marching band, with 165 students, finished first and third in state competition under his leadership.

Wachholz has taught in public schools for six years, and toured the U.S., England and Japan for 10 years with the drum and bugle corps.

Wachholz said he learned of the position from Amy Boerma, who teaches concert, varsity and symphony bands at The Park. Wachholz said he interviewed July 18 and was hired the next day.

"Mr. Wachholz has all the qualities we are looking for to continue our tradition of excellence for both our day bands and the marching band," said Mary Kay

Sides meet to iron out details of Isbister plan

BY KURT KUBAN
STAFF WRITER
kkuban@oe.homecomm.net

Plymouth Township officials plan to meet this week with representatives from Plymouth-Canton Schools to determine how to pay for a joint recreation project at Isbister Elementary.

According to Jim Anulewicz, the township's director of public services, the township has developed a plan for the school that includes new basketball courts, landscaped areas with numerous trees, and drainage improvements. The school's ball field will also be improved.

Please see ISBISTER, A3

Anulewicz said the plan was designed by a committee including himself, township engineers, Ken Jacobs, the district's director of support services, Isbister principal Lee Harrison, teachers, members of the school's Parent Teacher Organization, and even two students.

Most of the members of that committee will meet this week to determine how the project will be paid for. The township is expected to pay the majority of the cost.

Anulewicz wouldn't discuss the project's cost, because there is only a "rough estimate" at this point.

"After our meeting this week, we will have the cost nailed down," he said.

The township has $350,000 budgeted to improve the recreational facilities at all seven Plymouth-Canton schools within the township, as a way to increase recreational opportunities for residents. The plans also call for planting more trees and creating landscaped areas to improve the aesthetics of the areas.

■ 'Our goal is to have neighborhood park sites with schools on them.'

Jim Anulewicz
—Plymouth Township

"We now have school sites in our neighborhoods. Our goal is to have neighborhood park sites with schools on them," Anulewicz said. "The educational needs of our children are first and foremost, and the sites will serve those needs. But once the children are gone, you will now have a place that enhances the neighborhood and offers a place for children to play and families to gather."

The other schools in the plan include Pioneer and West middle schools, as well as Allen, Bird, Farrand and Fiegel elementary schools.

Isbister was chosen as the pilot project because it offers easy access to neighboring residences, and has as an active Parent Teacher Organization that has already raised money for the improvements.

The plan was first announced back in February, but ran into snags because Isbister is one of the schools the district may expand in the future. Township officials didn't want to improve the recreational facilities, only to see the school expand on top of them.

So the township designed the project with the expansion in mind.

"We believe there are still a number of things we can do without substantial loss if there is future expansion. We don't want to get into the discussions of expansion, because that is an issue for the school district. However, if they do expand, it would have to be to the south and the west. Most of our planned improvements are on the east side of the school," Anulewicz said.

Pitching in: Neighbors and friends gathered last weekend to construct this playscape, part of a $25,000 effort at Garden Club Park in Plymouth. Similar efforts took place at Jaycee Park (below).

Nearly 200 people helped build the playground structures at Garden Club and Jaycee parks in Plymouth.

The day-long work July 21 had civic groups and individuals digging, lifting and hammering much of the day to construct the playscapes.

"It was a fun day, and the play structure will help create a community feel for the young parents and children in the neighborhood," said Anthony Guilliom, who lives near Jaycee Park. "Every time we walk by the park, we'll have a sense of pride and ownership."

Barry Simescu of Plymouth donated his time and expertise.

"I helped build a playscape once before, so I had some experience to pass on," said Simescu. "It's a great project and was a good opportunity to help out."

The playscape at Jaycee Park cost the city $45,000, while the play equipment at the smaller Garden Club Park cost $25,000.

"It certainly is a nice addition to the park," said Maureen Armstrong, Garden Club past president. "I was impressed with the cooperation of all the groups involved in putting it together."

Armstrong said the Garden Club is planning a ribbon cutting ceremony in the near future.

"The projects were tremendously successful and got the community really involved," said City Manager Paul Sincock. "There are still a couple of little things to finish, and we hope they will be ready for the kids next week."

County from page A1

aesthetically pleasing as possible, so our residents don't have to deal with an eyesore," he said.

As an alternative to the site, Mann, who has plans to build a new municipal complex including a public services department near the corner of Haggerty and Ann Arbor roads, said he proposed the county take over the township's current DPW yard on Port Street once the move is made. County officials balked at the idea because the facility has too much office space.

Mann is also concerned what will happen to the Phoenix Yard facility once it is abandoned.

"What is going to happen to Phoenix Yard? It can't be left in the condition it is now," he said.

County Commissioner Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, has plans for the facility, which was once a parts factory owned by Henry Ford. Bankes is trying to raise funds to turn the building into a museum honoring female factory workers.

"The Phoenix Plant was the very first factory in the world where women were allowed to work. What we hope to do is turn the place into a museum and honor the history and significance of the plant," she said.

Although she doesn't know how much money it will take to transform the facility into something similar to the Nankin Mills museum in Westland, Bankes said she has found the county to be cooperative and receptive to her idea. She said she is in the beginning phase of a national fund-raising effort that will target women's groups.

"We have a commitment from Wayne County that it will remove the contaminated soil from the site and return the building to the way it was when it was a factory. At that point, we will begin turning it into a museum. So far, I have not encountered any hurdles other than having to raise the money. It's a long trip, but I'm not discouraged at all," she said. "We turned Nankin Mills into a beautiful museum, so we have a model and know it can be done."

Roach said the proposed maintenance facility will benefit the township because the county will be able to provide better road service.

"The good news about the facility is that we will be able to store all our trucks inside the garage, which will be a much cleaner and attractive environment than we now have at the Phoenix Yard, where all the trucks are parked outside. Because the vehicles will be inside, they will be more reliable when they are needed, especially when it comes to clearing snow in the winter," he said.

Frey, assistant principal at Canton High School. "We are excited he will be coming here."

Wachholz said he'll meet with staff Aug. 4, and with students at the start of mini-camp Aug. 8. However, he will leave to compete in the Drum Corps International World Championship in Buffalo, N.Y., before returning in mid-August.

"The band has been rehearsing all summer, so I will be coming in to learn the system," said Wachholz. "It should go off without a hitch."

Wachholz said he's not aware of the reasons for the departure of McGrath, which included the lack of help in the music department.

"Band directors usually work more hours than they get paid," he said.

Connie Moore, president of the Plymouth-Canton Music Boosters Association, is pleased to have a new band director hired before classes begin.

"He's personable and excited to be coming here," she said. "I think the kids will really like him."

Schoolcraft board to talk development

BY TIM SMITH
STAFF WRITER
tsmith@oe.homecomm.net

Property on the south portion of Schoolcraft College could soon be developed, with four architectural firms scheduled to meet with the board of trustees on Wednesday, Aug. 1.

But Chairwoman Carol Strom said there is no guarantee any project will get the green light and – no matter what – board members won't permit skyscrapers to tower above the campus.

One of the first issues to be tackled by this year's board is how to develop a 45-acre parcel of property on the south end of campus. Strom said the hope is for a project to approximate the success of the Seven Mile Crossing, a retail-office development on Schoolcraft-owned property.

"What we're looking for is something similar, something that will benefit the college and community and something that will fit," Strom explained. "One thing we're pretty firm on is we don't want high rises on campus, and we need to make sure it's developed appropriately.

"We have to make sure we're careful about what we do with our property. We're a public trust."

Scheduled to be interviewed during the special meeting beginning 6:30 p.m. Aug. 1 are: DeMattia Group & Village Green Companies; Hines; Lincoln Property Co.; Walkon/Etkin Partnership. Strom said each firm will be interviewed for 45 minutes.

Summer school from page A1

VanSteenis said after the first summer program at Bird three years ago, she and her staff noticed a difference in the state MEAP scores for those students. It's a program she doesn't want to give up.

"I like that it helps me get ready for the third grade," said Sera Petrillo, 8, who was studying a sheet of math problems. "When I'm in third grade, it will be much easier for me."

For three hours a day, two days a week, students at Bird work on math, reading, writing and computers.

"We do a lot of fun things to keep them interested," said Amy Olvera, an Allen Elementary teacher who works with students and computers. "They don't complain about coming. In fact, some parents say their children look forward to it."

At Discovery Middle School in Canton, Cheryl Klee runs a summer academy for sixth, seventh and eighth graders.

"I like to run it more like an enrichment program, although there are some who are at risk and need help getting to the next level," she said. "We center everything we do around three major themes ... sixth grade is ecology, seventh is space, and eighth is endangered species."

Unlike the structure of everyday classes, most of the summer camps are more laid back.

"We have a more relaxed dress code for both students and teachers, and we plan an ice cream social at the end when they present their final projects," said Klee.

Klee said success doesn't necessarily come down to how much a student learns in a three-week period.

"I'm not going to make a tremendous difference in 14 days when it comes to math mechanics or learning science," she said. "But I can make a difference in their self-esteem. It's wonderful to see them blossom. That I can see in 14 days.

"Any time they can go to a camp, to the library or on an educational field trip in the summer, it helps them keep up their skills so when they get back in August they won't feel like they've lost it all," she added.

"I always wanted to know what black holes were like, and I wanted to know how long stars burn, and I can learn about the Milky Way, which is the galaxy next to us," explained Ashley Scott, 13, of Canton, who was preparing a Power Point presentation on space for her final project.

Many parents like the idea of keeping their kids educationally sharp throughout the summer. Some don't even have to beg their children to go to summer classes.

"You'd think he wouldn't want to come, but he really looks forward to it," said Janet Masty of Canton about her son Andrew, 11.

was that the issues addressed eight years ago are almost identical to the issues in today's campaign," Prose told the Observer. "The issues haven't been dealt with, and its time for new leadership.

"Carl Pursell was my campaign manager eight years ago," he added. "I consider him a friend. I know he has had health problems the last several years. I wish him the best."

Carl Pursell said there are two reasons to support his theory the letter is a hoax.

"That was my campaign letterhead, but I always had 'the committee to elect Carl Pursell' on it, which is missing. And, there's no date on the letter," he added. "I never wrote anything for him. I think he took blank stationery and made this up."

Pursell said he hasn't talked to Prose in more than a year, and if he was going to support any candidate, it would be his son, Phil.

"Whether I like the guy (Prose) or not, why should I endorse him?" said Pursell. "Phil is running, and I haven't even written anything for him (Phil)."

Pursell said he was a supporter of Prose eight years ago, but that doesn't mean he supports him now.

"I helped him out and tried to get him started in politics," said Pursell. "But, I withdrew when I ran for the Senate, so I didn't finish his campaign."

Prose said he believes his cover letter clearly indicates he was referring to an endorsement eight years ago, although the letter allegedly written by Pursell is undated.

"To my knowledge, he (Pursell) never withdrew his support from me," said Prose, who notes he found several boxes of the letters. "If he's embarrassed about supporting me eight years ago, so be it."

Pursell said he also didn't write the endorsement in Prose's campaign pamphlet eight years ago, which is being circulated in the latest mailing.

"We've had some good, healthy campaigns, but never a dishonest campaign," said Pursell. "They must think Phil is one of the front-runners. But, you run your own campaign. You don't attack your opponent."

Phil Pursell said he feels badly that his father has been dragged into the political wars of Plymouth.

"This is chicanery at its worst, but I suppose it's part of the game and I'll have to accept it and move on," he said. "I'm confident the people of Plymouth will do right by the city in August (the primary) and November (the general election.)"

■ Doug Miller, whose endorsement was part of Prose's campaign literature eight years ago, said circumstances then were much different than they are today.

"He has not asked me for an endorsement this time, and I haven't provided one," said Miller. "Quite frankly, I'd have some concerns.

"He's got a $100 million lawsuit against the city, which I see as a potential conflict," added Miller. "And, he's the owner of a newspaper which is used for his personal goals and objectives, not the benefit of the community."

POLICE BLOTTER

Pellet shooter targets residents

A number of Plymouth Township residents have contacted township police about being victimized by someone shooting pellets during the past several weeks.

Most of the incidents took place on the west side of town.

According to police reports, a man was driving in the vicinity of Ann Arbor and Beck roads on the evening of July 22, when something hit his windshield causing "a spider-like crack." Although the man didn't see anyone in the area, he told police officers he thought someone shot a pellet at it.

On the same day, a resident of the 13000 block of Grant Drive reported to police that someone damaged the side of his home with either a pellet or BB gun.

On July 21, a female resident of the 9000 block of Manton reported to police that the back window of her Ford Aerostar was shattered during the evening hours. The vehicle was parked on the street in front of her home.

The damage appeared to be caused by a pellet or BB.

Another woman told police she was driving her Chrysler van in the area of Ann Arbor and Ridge roads July 13, when she heard a loud noise and realized an unknown object shattered her passenger side window.

Employee suspected of embezzlement

A manager of the CVS located at 1400 Sheldon reported to township police that an undisclosed amount of cash and instant lottery tickets were stolen from a company safe in the early morning hours of July 23.

The manager told police officials he believes a night employee at the store may be responsible for the theft. He said she was the only employee on duty with access to the safe.

Two bags containing an unknown amount of dimes and quarters and an unknown amount of instant lottery tickets were missing from the safe.

Police have tried to contact the employee but have been unsuccessful.

SEMCOG rapid transit plan calls for expanded bus system

A transit plan calling for rapid-transit service in 12 Southeast Michigan corridors has been released by SEMCOG, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

The draft plan, "Improving Transit in Southeast Michigan: A Framework for Action," is estimated to invest $2 billion over the next 25 years, with an additional $200 million annually in operating costs.

The plan incorporates extensive public input and SEMCOG's expert research and technical analysis. The proposed transit system seeks to provide a balance of viable options. The plan lays out the framework for a three-tiered transit system – adding a currently missing rapid-transit component on 12 corridors in the region (tier one); and expanding and upgrading existing bus (tier two); and community transit (tier three) services.

In addition to new and expanded service in Macomb, Oakland, and Wayne Counties, the plan also connects all seven counties by including regional links to the Cities of Ann Arbor, Howell, Port Huron, and Monroe, and recommends several features to enhance transit, including improved safety, rapid-transit stations, improved physical accessibility, easy-to-understand information, and increased use of technology.

SEMCOG Executive Director, Paul Tait is one of many regional leaders who believes the time is right for improved transit in Southeast Michigan.

"Between 1953 and 1997, eight transit plans were developed for Southeast Michigan, and went nowhere," Tait said. "Too often, the past plans sat on the shelf because they were unrealistic, so we've been very deliberative in the process, building consensus from the start and involving the public, business, and government leaders as much as we can.

Plan summary: A magazine style transit plan is available from SEMCOG.

This plan balances our desires with fiscal reality. We believe the region is ready to move forward."

The plan recommends bus-rapid transit as the most effective, flexible, and affordable mode for the 12 rapid-transit corridors – 8 Mile, Big Beaver/Metro Parkway, Fort Street, Grand River, Gratiot, Greenfield, Jefferson, M-59, Michigan Ave., Telegraph, Van Dyke and Woodward Ave.

Bus-rapid transit has also been studied by the Metropolitan Affairs Coalition (MAC) and is supported by the Detroit Regional Chamber and others – lending it extensive support in both the private and public sectors. Dubbed "SpeedLink," the MAC study envisions a train-like service running on rubber tires in dedicated lanes, with passenger boarding stations and many other features and amenities of light rail.

Because it is less expensive than light rail, it is possible to implement the entire proposed 12-corridor SpeedLink network for the cost of a couple of light rail lines. SEMCOG's plan document also includes:

- a history of transit in Southeast Michigan;
- a comparison of Southeast Michigan's transit services to those of other metropolitan areas;
- input received from the public and various stakeholders;
- recommendations for 12 initial, rapid-transit corridors and improvements to existing transit services; and next steps.

Along with the plan, SEMCOG is releasing a document summary which conveys the key points of the report in an easy-to-read, magazine-style format.

A series of public meetings will be held throughout the region to receive comments from the public about the plan. Local times and locations are:

- City of Detroit: 7-8:30 p.m., Monday, Aug. 13, in Cobo Conference Center, Room M-230.
- Wayne County: 4:30-6 p.m., Monday, Aug. 13, in Wayne Regional Educational Service Agency, 33500 Van Born Road, Wayne 48184-0807; 734-334-1300.

The complete plan, and plan summary, are available in PDF on SEMCOG's Web site, www.semcog.org or by contacting SEMCOG Information Services (313) 961-4266.

HEEL PAIN CAN BE SOLVED

The most common cause of heel pain is incorrect foot movement during walking or running. This can place to much stress on the heel bone and the soft tissues that attach to it. Muscle and bone problems can be inherited, External causes such as heel injury or bruising, poorly fitted or worn-out shoes, and excessive weight also play a role. The incorrect movement of the foot can be corrected with an orthotic device.

Kids on Campus

Program makes learning fun

By Tim Smith
Staff Writer
tsmith@oe.homecomm.net

Children might be on their summer break from school, but that doesn't mean they are steering clear of the classroom.

For proof, look no further than Schoolcraft College, where the Kids on Campus program is bridging the learning calendar gap with a mix of courses that are innovative, artistic or flat-out fun.

Consider two completely different sessions taking place Monday afternoon, at opposite ends of a hallway in the Forum building.

At one end, kids in the Suitcase Art session worked indoors rather than out in the 92-degree heat. The course itinerary includes going out on campus grounds to create landscape drawings. On this day, things would be less scenic but artistic just the same. Instructor Laureen Smith and classroom assistant David Pizzimenti, 16, helped the group of seven early elementary school students create a mural of colorful handprints – their own.

Standing around a table, Avinash, Brianna, Christopher, Eli, Eliot, Inessa and Maria glued their "hands" onto the large sheet of yellow construction paper. Those complemented the sky, ground, trees and rainbow drawn onto the mural by Smith, who holds degrees in fine arts and art therapy.

SPOTLIGHT ON SCHOOLCRAFT

Shades of green

"I hope that they can look at their environment a little bit differently and learn a little bit about trees and plants, flowers, weather and everything that makes up their landscape," Smith said, while the youngsters slapped dabs of paint onto the paper. "Every leaf isn't the same color of green. So this (class) makes them very aware of different things they might look at every day but not really see."

The learning environment was a bit different down in the Music on the Computer session, taught by musician, producer and writer John Feliks, now in his sixth year teaching continuing education courses at Schoolcraft.

"Day One is totally hectic," said Feliks, detailing that students in the filled-to-capacity two-week class would approximate different instrumental sounds via computer and even create multi-tracked, digital musical compositions of a professional quality.

Described as a beginner course, the idea of using sophisticated technology to learn musical instruments is a natural one for a generation "raised on computers," noted Feliks.

The course also helps "level the playing field" in terms of musical prowess.

"Even if you're not a real proficient musician, you can still record and edit, much like a word processing program, until everything sounds great," Feliks said. "With computers, any approach you want to take to music you can."

For several of the middle school-age youngsters in Feliks' lab, the opportunity to learn how to create and edit multi-tracked electronic music compositions proved enticing, for a variety of reasons.

Northville's Laura Valencia, 12, noted how technology and music are two of her top interests and the class enables her to combine them.

"I enjoy working with computers and doing the piano," said 12-year-old Luke Rizik of Northville. "I thought it'd be great to create a masterpiece on my hard drive."

Ana Kotsogiannis, 11, of Farmington Hills signed up because she likes technology, while 14-year-old Inkster resident Ira Todman is looking to enhance skills he's already gleaned from messing around with music software programs at home.

Meanwhile, if making pictures or computerized music wasn't someone's cup of tea, they could sign up for courses to study wildlife and insects, create ceramics, write and illustrate books, learn the intricacies of chess or perhaps hone study skills in time for the coming school year.

Combo

The wide array of eye-opening courses and activities again is proving to be popular: About 1,260 youngsters of all ages are taking part in this summer's Kids on Campus program, divided into a pair of two-week sessions.

To draw them to the Livonia campus, metro area school districts received promotional mailings about the program, as did residences and libraries, said Kids on Campus coordinator Michelle Goyette of Schoolcraft's Continuing Education Services.

"It's a combination of education and exposing students to things that they might not be exposed to in schools, like this (computer music) lab," Goyette explained. "And it's also fun."

Crucial to the program's success, of course, is having enough qualified instructors to teach the courses, which generally range from $89 to $109 per session. Goyette said the college recruits certified instructors or those specializing in a particular area of expertise.

According to Goyette, kids who sign up for the Schoolcraft offerings should expect something different, unique – and, most of the time, not served up in local school district summer programs.

"Most of our (Kids on Campus) teachers are from the local school districts," Goyette said. "And they know what's being offered, so we don't duplicate."

CCW critics get ready to launch second petition drive

By Mike Malott
HomeTown News Service
mmalott@homecomm.net

Less than a month after Michigan's new Carry Concealed Weapons law went into effect, opponents are getting ready to launch their second attempt to put it up for a vote in November 2002 on a law passed by the Legislature in December.

Members of the People Who Care About Kids committee are now drafting the wording of the initiative legislation in the hopes of putting petitions on the street sometime in August, said David Fink, Oakland County coordinator for the group.

An initiative is being tried because the state Supreme Court ruled against a referendum, which would have allowed residents to vote on the law before it took effect. The court said a referendum couldn't be used when a law contains an appropriation. The committee is accepting comments on how the petitions should be written. Anyone interested in giving suggestions on the wording can call Fink at his office, at (248) 851-4111.

"One of the great things about initiative legislation is that we can select the best aspects of the law and keep those while throwing out the bad things that the Legislature did," Fink said. "For example, there is a requirement for training. We'll leave that. They raised the age (required to get a CCW permit) from 18 to 21. We'll leave that. And we will leave in the gun-free zones, although we are probably going to expand them to include additional facilities."

New version

Initiative legislation allows the petition circulators to propose an entirely new version of the law, which then goes on the ballot for a yes or no vote of all Michigan residents.

Having lobbied to get the current law in place and sued to prevent a referendum, the Michigan United Conservation Clubs wants the new law left exactly as it is, said Dennis Knapp, resource policy director for the MUCC.

The new law, which went into effect July 1, mandates county gun boards to issue CCW permits to all applicants who meet the criteria – that they are age 21, have taken the necessary training, have a clean criminal record and no history of mental illness.

People Who Care About Kids is just as adamant about giving discretion back to local gun boards.

"The 'shall issue' wording absolutely must go," he said. "The reason it is essential to take those two words out is that they invite court challenges. They invite too much involvement from judges. With 'shall issue' in the law, it is too easy for a judge to use his judgment to replace the opinion of local law enforcement."

Demonstrate need

Fink wants to add a requirement for applicants to "demonstrate a need."

That's no more acceptable to the MUCC than changing the 'shall issue' wording.

"Under the previous law, they used a demonstration of need standard, and the problem is that it is subjective and it was not being applied evenly in all counties across the state," Knapp said.

"Some could very clearly show a need and were turned down anyway because those counties only gave permits to former police officers. Some of those included threats on their lives, and they were rejected because of a policy. The system was broken."

Fink said he is confident his group will be able to get 242,000 signatures needed, within the required 180 days, to put the question on the ballot. Last time around, for the referendum attempt, they gathered 260,000 signatures in 90 days. Fink said he has 3,800 volunteers ready to circulate petitions.

And he said the group is growing in reaction to the state Supreme Court's decision.

"There is a real sense of outrage over the disenfranchisement of voters. There is an outrage that the Supreme Court and Legislature have taken away a constitutional power, reserved for the people for very special situations, in a very technical ruling ... that the Supreme Court has said the Legislature can decide when our power of referendum applies."

On the other hand, MUCC supporters were equally happy with the Supreme Court decision.

Knapp declined to say whether his group would actively campaign in 2002 in support of the new CCW law.

County offers Hines Drive Hotline

Motorists on Hines Drive now have a simple and convenient way of avoiding those frustrating flooding closures.

All motorists have to do, anytime from anywhere, is to call the Wayne County's new Hines Drive Hotline at (866) 66-HINES for up to the minute information on the status of the increasingly popular commuter route. The call is toll-free.

"Like many others, I've been caught off guard by the barricades and grumbled that there has to be a way to avoid this," said County Executive Edward McNamara. "Now there is. This new hotline will be a great public service to those who use Hines Drive on a regular basis to get to and from work, or to one of our wonderful recreation areas."

When someone calls the new hotline they will be greeted by a brief recorded message reminding them that the Hines area lies in a natural floodplain and will flood periodically. They then will be given the option of hearing recorded information on the current open or closed status of the road due to flooding, or a schedule of upcoming Wayne County Parks events that will cause the closure of a portion of Hines Drive.

Since Wayne County converted this sprawling, otherwise useless floodplain into a 17.5-mile long chain of public parks in the 1930s and '40s, motorists have been met with unexpected road closures after heavy rainfalls. Since the area originally was used primarily for recreational purposes, public inconvenience was minimal. In recent years, however, more commuters have discovered Hines Drive, with its few stoplights and intersections, as an alternative to I-96 and other surface roads. As a result, traffic volumes have increased over the years to 15,000 vehicles per day on some sections of the two-lane road.

Today, residents from Northville, Plymouth, Livonia and other western Wayne County communities use Hines Drive as their primary route to places like Ford Motor Co., AAA of Michigan or Visteon in Dearborn.

In addition to the unpredictable closures of Hines Drive from flooding, sections of the road also will be closed from time to time for certain Wayne County Parks System programs and events. Information on scheduled event-related closures also will be available by calling the Hines Drive hotline.

Whalers tune in 1310

The Plymouth Whalers are teaming up with Fox Sports Radio, AM-1310 the X, to broadcast all of the Ontario Hockey League team's games this coming season.

"This is a great move for our organization and one we think will benefit the team and our fans," Whalers director of marketing Dean Seaver said. "Over the past couple years we have seen our fan base continue to grow and the need to find a station with a stronger signal was something we wanted to address.

"Fox Sports Radio provided the perfect fit for us. We think our fans will be very pleased with the improvement in radio broadcasts this year."

The first broadcast will be the Whalers' season-opener in Windsor on Sept. 13, beginning with a pre-game show at 7:15 p.m., 15 minutes before game time. Plymouth opens at home Sept. 15 against Erie at 7:30 p.m.

The Whalers had been heard on WSDS 1480 the past four seasons.

Pete Krupsky remains as the team's play-by-play announcer with Nick Gismondi as color commentator.

The L-Town Spoons II took first place in the under-17 division of the University of Michigan Micro Shootout, a 3-on-3 soccer tournament, on July 21.

The Spoons consisted of Jamie Shooks, former Churchill student, plus Charger seniors Shawn Greenleaf, Cory Muniga and Lawrence Topple.

The team finished 5-0 in the shootout.

Two area athletes who compete for Eastern Michigan University — Keith Falk (Livonia) and Emily Meier (Plymouth) — were among 120 Eagle student-athletes to make the Mid-American Conference Honor Roll for the 2000-01 academic year, leading the conference.

Falk, a sophomore swimmer, carried a 3.59 grade-point average. His major is undecided.

Meier, a senior member of the women's soccer team, carried 3.56 GPA in Teacher Education.

At the conclusion of each season, the MAC releases an honor roll for each sport. In order to be eligible, a student-athlete must obtain a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher and earn a letter for the current seasons.

Goins' hoop life in Spain falls mainly with his game

BY BRAD EMONS

Tony Goins believed he had a lot of basketball left in him, but not for $275 a week playing for Rapid City (S.D.) in the International Basketball Association.

"That wasn't even after taxes, either," said Goins, Wayne State's all-time leading scorer who starred as a high school player at Westland John Glenn. "I had to bite the bullet. I went home, tried to keep working hard on my game and hoped things would eventually work out."

At 25, Goins got another basketball break, but this time it was overseas.

One of his two agents, Mick Sandhu of Novi, enabled Goins to sign a contract in the Spanish Professional Basketball League's Second Division.

The pay, significantly better, also included a free apartment and use of a car.

The 6-foot-6, 215-pound Goins made the most of his opportunity averaging 19 points and five rebounds for Gandia Basketball Club, located in a suburb of Valencia, a tourist area off the Mediterranean coast.

Midway through the year he suffered a broken toe, but played through it. He earned an All-Star berth, scoring 15 points in 18 minutes against players from the first division.

Goins stepped up his game in a first-round playoff series loss for sixth-place Gandia, averaging 33 points, including a season-high of 41 (on 10 three-pointers).

Things weren't all peaches and cream, however.

There was the language barrier, not to mention making the adjustment to the food and the Spanish culture.

"They sweep the streets, they mop the sidewalks and it seems like there's a holiday every other day," Goins said. "I asked my teammates to tell me when the next holiday was because there was so many."

During preseason camp the team practiced three hours away from Valencia. His apartment was not ready and he was housed in a tiny hotel room.

Homesickness set in quickly.

"It was more like a cell, I had a TV, but I might as well been looking at blank channels because I didn't understand a word of Spanish at the time," Goins said. "Two or three nights I practically cried myself to sleep. I called my mom and told it how rough it was, but she didn't want to hear any of it.

Caseys bridging generation gap

Reunion puts Ken, 68, back on the mound

BY BRAD EMONS
SPORTS WRITER
bemons@oe.homecomm.net

It was significant and noteworthy.

Three generations of Caseys stepped on the field together Wednesday night for Michigan Indians in a Plymouth Modified League men's softball game at Massey Field.

But the center of attention was 68-year-old Ken Casey, who worked an inning off the mound in a playoff game against Task King.

Behind the plate was longtime batterymate Larry, who also happens to be Ken's son. Playing second base was 18-year-old grandson Shawn, a recent graduate of Livonia Stevenson High School.

The score didn't matter — 13-1 in favor of Task King — because Ken Casey was able to throw again, only if it was for an inning.

He was touched up for three runs, but in his defense, two errors were committed.

"I dropped down into the crouch, dad threw the riseball and we worked all the same sequences of pitches we had learned together over those 17 and 18 years," said Larry, now 44. "He practiced the last couple of weeks for this. It was like riding a bike. He hit the spots like he never left. Maybe he didn't have the velocity, but still had the movement and control.

"It was a lot of fun."

The appearance marked seven decades on the mound for Ken, who began his career as a fast-pitch hurler under the tutelage of his uncle during the late 1940s when he was a teenager in the Detroit-based church leagues.

That puts him right there as the Gordie Howe of men's softball.

"When Gordie (with the Detroit Vipers) came back I'm sure it had special meaning for him and I certainly admired what he had done," Ken said. "That was the thing that drove us to do it.

"The Lord puts us in places for a good reason and the guys from the league were very gracious. But they didn't take it easy on me either."

Ken's only piece of advice to his grandson Shawn, who played football and baseball at Stevenson, was "stay loose and don't let me down."

Shawn knew it was a special moment, as well, for himself.

"I could see he (Ken) was excited to do it," said the former Stevenson quarterback who will attend Michigan State

WYAA's Bud down, but not quite out

BRAD EMONS

Bud Somerville is a guy who gives back to the community.

As a volunteer for the Westland Youth Athletic Association, Somerville works countless hours, wears many hats and wears them well.

He's currently secretary of the WYAA and coaches the freshman Comets football team. He also serves as secretary of the Westland John Glenn High School football boosters.

The 45-year-old Somerville deserves a lot of thank yous for his work with youth sports over the years, but now he'd like to thank all the people who have kept him going the last few months.

Until recently, getting out of bed had been a struggle for Somerville. Following knee surgery 10 years ago, Somerville has been suffering severe bouts of gout.

Things got so bad that he spent two weeks in intensive care at Annapolis Hospital. With his kidneys shutting down and blood pressure dangerously low, Somerville lost nearly 40 pounds.

He tried to return to work July 2, but he was back in St. Mary's Mercy Hospital suffering from a blood clot.

Two more weeks off from his job as a stacker operator at Packaging Corp. of America in Plymouth, Somerville wondered if things would ever get back to normal.

Such an active individual, Somerville's dobber got down and medical bills became tight. He contemplated selling some of his sports memorabilia to meet his needs.

"I hate to do it, but I have learned that I should not sweat the little things," Somerville said. "I don't take the little things for granted. This is the scariest thing I've had to get through."

But on Thursday night at Central City Park, Somerville was back to some normalcy, scoring a Pony League game between the Westland Sting and the South Farmington Red Sox.

"I was sitting in my chair and figuring score, it was excellent again," he said.

With the help of his [illegible] Joseph Weiss of Livonia, who drained both of his knees, Somerville was also able to return to work this week and walk again.

"I'm trying to change my diet, I'll take my medicine and keep my fingers crossed," he said. "This year has been such a rollercoaster, lots of ups, but plenty of downs.

"It's been painful, but I'm trying to make a comeback. I've tried to change my diet. I was a Pepsi addict, but I haven't had one since May 3rd when I went into the hospital."

Somerville wants to acknowledge all the people who have tried to keep his spirits up while going through this difficult ordeal.

WYAA Operations Vice-President Keith Dunkley called regularly, along with Steve Rinaldi, Todd and Cheryl DeLong, Glenn Varsity coach Chuck Gordon and many of the Westland Baseball organization, just to name a few.

HOCKEY LEAGUE

Championshp final: Lakers vs. Warriors

Boston hosted a little extra time for the playoff championship game in the Metro Summer Hockey League.

Overtime, it seems, is part of the MSHL regular-season champion Lakers' game plan.

The [illegible] qualified for tonight's league championship game with a 7-6, double-overtime victory Thursday night over the No. 4 Huskies in a tournament semifinal game at Suburban Training Center in Farmington Hills.

The Lakers entered the semifinals, of course, with an overtime victory over the Spartans.

Their opponent in the 7 p.m. championship game will be the sixth-seeded Warriors, who were 6-4 winners over the No. 7 Bulldogs in the other MSHL semifinal match.

The Huskies held a 6-3 lead after two periods Thursday, but the comeback started 57 seconds into the third period on a goal by Jim Wheaton (Plymouth), his second of the game.

Bryan Marshall (Livonia) drew the Lakers within a goal at 9:09, Wheaton assisting, and 67 seconds later the score was tied because Tony Keshishian (Plymouth) scored, Steve Sharp drawing the key assist.

Scoring is a big part of summer hockey, but defense still rules in the clutch and the Lakers tightened things up after regulation.

They were rewarded just 39 seconds from the end of the second overtime when Mike Vigilante scored to end the struggle. Scot Curtin (Redford) assisted on the game-winner.

Curtin and Nick Jardine scored the other Laker goals with Marshall and Curtin getting two assists in the game.

John Picklo started in goal for the Lakers, with Lanny Jardine coming in at 7:53 of the second period and playing out the game.

Aaron Kiilunen scored twice for the Huskies, with Joe Kondratek (Canton), Trent Deavettila, B.J. Gaylord and Mark R. Pietila scoring one goal apiece.

Kondratek, Gaylord and John Pietila had two assists each. Travis Miller started in goal for the Huskies and was replaced by Rick Marnon (Canton) at 7:53 of the second period.

The Warriors got two goals each from John Schultz (Canton), Joe Moreau (Farmington Hills) and Brandon Kaleniecki (Livonia) Thursday night, plus singles from Dave Moss (Livonia) and Chris Morelli (Livonia) in brushing aside the Bulldogs. Moreau's second went into an empty net with 57 seconds to play.

Kaleniecki also had two assists. Joseph Rutherford started in goal for the Warriors with Mark Lavender (Farmington Hills) coming in at 7:11 of the second period.

The Warriors built up a 6-3 lead after two periods.

Jason Basile, Ian Smith, Dan Cook (Livonia) and Matt York scored for the Bulldogs, whose Troy Milam had two assists along with Basile.

Dan Dobrowski was the starting goaltender for the Bulldogs, and Matt Swanson came in at 9:26 of the second to finish up.

PLAYOFF ROUNDUP

•LAKERS 5, SPARTANS 4 (OT): Mike Vigilante's goal 50 seconds from the end of overtime let the top-seeded Lakers slip into the MSHL semifinals.

Vigilante converted from Brian Jardine on Wednesday night at the Suburban Training Center in Farmington to keep the Lakers alive.

The Spartans got a goal from Steve 'Brudzewski 31 seconds into the third period to create a 4-4 tie. Brudzewski had his team's first goal and added an assist.

Chris Powroznick (Redford) scored the Spartans' other two goals. Jacob Archer (Livonia) went the distance in goal.

Brian Jardine scored twice for the regular season champion Lakers, who started Lanny Jardine in goal and replaced him with Picklo at 9:18 of the second period.

Marshall (Livonia) and John Vigilante also scored for the Lakers, who trailed 2-1and 3-2 in the first period before taking a 4-3 lead after two. Sean Smith (Livonia) and Mike Vigilante each had two assists.

•HUSKIES 5, BRONCOS 4: Third-period goals by John Pietila and Bill Kiilunen gave the Huskies enough of a margin to withstand a late charge by the Broncos in a quarterfinal game Wednesday night.

Pietila's goal eight seconds into the last period broke a 3-3 tie that had existed since Gaylord had scored with 3:48 left in the second period.

Kiilunen's tally made it 5-3, which proved to be just enough as Keith Townsend scored three minutes later for the Broncos.

Trent and Josh Deavettila also scored for the Huskies, whose Marnon and Miller evenly split the playing time in goal.

Vic Decina (Canton), who had two assists, scored a goal for the Broncos, who had Bobby Pruchnik (Livonia) in the nets the whole way. Nick Smyth and John Fritz (Plymouth) also had goals for the Broncos.

Bulldogs ousted in tourney

The Livonia Bulldogs made it to the championship round of the Continental Amateur Baseball Association (CABA) World Series for high school age players at Euclid (Ohio) High School before being eliminated Tuesday by top seed Upper Deck of Miami (Fla.), 8-0, after falling to the Rochester (Mich.) Yankees, 7-1.

Jeff Schulz (Redford Catholic Central) led the Bulldogs in tournament play with six hits, while Eddie Conz (Redford CC) and Jim Mancuso (University of Detroit-Jesuit) added five apiece.

Conz homered twice, while Matt Humenay (Livonia Churchill) and Dan Ross (Livonia Stevenson) had one each.

Matt Marsack (Livonia Stevenson), Conz and Humenay each collected three RBI.

Rounding out the Bulldogs' summer squad: Jeff Niemiec and Sean Sugrue, both of CC; Gary Zielke, Stevenson; Seth Baldwin, Livonia Franklin; Kevin Lamb, West Bloomfield; Matt Chabot and Chris Cerchie, Tecumseh, Ontario.

SANDLOT BASEBALL

The Bulldogs are coached by Butch Conz, Rick Marsack, Joe Schulz and Lou Willoughby.

Livonia Travel wrapup

Livonia Travel's 10-and-under baseball team recently completed a successful season by finishing 3-1 in each of its final two tournaments.

In last weekend's Brighton Youth Baseball Tournament, Livonia Travel started with a 7-5 victory over Dexter before falling 6-3 to the Battle Creek Heat followed by wins over Grand Blanc (8-6) and the North Farmington-West Bloomfield Panthers (15-3).

Members of Livonia Travel include: Michael Basner, Tim Buchanan, Steve Harding, Robert Kleismit, T.J. McAteer, Joseph McCullough, Joey Nelson, Sean Root, Wade and Wyatt Stahl, Jimmy Tyler, Keene Weekley and Brian Wyer.

The coaching staff includes Mike Buchanan, Randy Weekley and Chip Wyer.

In the opener of the Firecracker Classic last weekend in Sterling Heights, Livonia Travel bounced back to beat the Troy Tigers (8-5), Pinckney Pirates (10-2) and the Rochester Braves (8-4).

Team Pepsi, local little leagues become partners

By Paul Beaudry
Staff Writer
pbeaudry@oe.homecomm.net

Most youth athletic organizations operate on a shoestring budget and look for ways to milk every last penny out of their dollars.

Several area programs found help for their baseball and softball budgets this year from Pepsi – not in money received, but in extras for the program.

"I think it's kind of cool of them to do this," said Duane Wozniak, baseball commissioner of the Livonia Junior Athletic League. "I think everybody's pretty happy with it. Some of the things they give us help us and others we probably wouldn't ordinarily have."

Through its Team Pepsi program, Pepsi gave about 50 youth organizations in southeast Michigan – including four in the Observerland area – things like scorebooks, coolers, coupons for pop and ice, prizes for kids and the opportunity to win more prizes. Of course, it's a win-win deal because Pepsi then has the opportunity to sell more of its product.

"Pepsi spent about $500,000 in southeast Michigan this season," said Michelle Naughton of Edelman Public Relations Worldwide. "It's a first-come, first-serve type of deal. Whoever signs up, signs up and they receive the benefits."

What each team received was a cooler for many of its teams as well as scorebooks. They also got discount coupons for pop and ice at Speedway as well as things for the players, such as trading card holders, coupons for photo enlargements and more.

"We gave ours to the baseball and softball teams from 7-to-12-years old," said Garden City Youth Athletic Association commissioner Ken Kibit. "They did more last year, from T-Ball on up. This year, we did it for 26 baseball teams and 17 softball teams. T-Ball was bummed because they didn't get included this time, but they understood."

Pepsi also came out to various parks throughout the season to see if their generosity was being used. If a Pepsi spotter came out and saw a team using the coolers and had signs up in the park, the kids received prizes like batting gloves and other baubles.

"You never knew when they were going to come out," said Westland Youth Athletic Association vice president Keith DeMolay. "Each manager was supposed to have them at every game, because you never knew when they were going to come out and take a picture and give out prizes. Fortunately, when they came out to visit us, we had it out.

"It's been a good deal for us, because we haven't had to buy scorebooks in two years."

Team pictures were submitted to Pepsi and lucky teams received the opportunity to qualify for free tickets to certain Detroit Tigers games.

Not every group that had the opportunity took advantage of the program. The North Central Redford Little League was in the program in 2000, but declined to participate this year.

"They gave us the coolers and scorebooks and all, which was great," said NCRLL president Cary Berwick. "But we had problems with our concessions and with them delivering the product at that level. It wasn't with the teams getting the pop, but getting the pop to the concession stand. It worked out better for us this year getting the pop donated to us from 'Your Better Market.' It's a great program and they were nice about it, but things just didn't work out."

For most of the leagues, however, things worked out just fine.

"A lot of that is extras that we wouldn't give and the parents would buy anyway – like the pop or the coolers," said Wozniak, whose group has 92 youth baseball and softball teams. "It might not save the league money, but it did save the parents a lot. But from Pepsi's perspective, it probably worked out. They're targeting the younger group and figure that they'd get people drinking Pepsi at an early age."

mer Western Illinois player Carlos Martinez, a native of the Dominican Republic who played on Indian Hills' national junior college championship team.

"I put the pressure on myself in the preseason and it seemed everybody was against me — they were going to bring it at me because I was the American," Goins recalls. "It was a growing process and later those guys became all my buddies. I had to learn to get along with them because they were my teammates."

Games could get pretty intense, even in the second division.

"The crowds get a little crazy," Goins said. "We had four or five thousand one night and you can bring in anything in that you want — they'd throw things because you can bring in bottles. It also gets really smoky.

"One time I fouled out and I thought the refs weren't going to get out of there in one piece. They had to form a line of protection, a tunnel for them to get off the court.

"You love to play at home and hate to play on the road."

With only one game per week and only 1 1/2 hour-practices per day, Goins had an abundance of free time.

When he ventured outside his two-bedroom apartment, Goins would either shoot baskets at the beach, work out at the gym, watch videos or drive around town.

"I watched the same American (movie) videos day after day," he said.

To pass the time away, Goins stayed in close contact with his girlfriend — former Wayne State cager Terra Truvillion, a Detroit Cass Tech graduate now teaching first grade in the Detroit Public Schools.

The two got on a calling card plan (with free minutes) and often talked the night away.

"Sometimes we were on the phone it seemed for six hours," Goins said. "She kept me going."

Truvillion even visited Goins twice during season, once over Thanksgiving and once in February.

"Tony was telling me how great the weather was, but when I was there it was cold and it rained five or six straight days," Truvillion said.

Meanwhile, Spanish cuisine didn't exactly whet Goins' appetite, but he turned another potential negative into a positive.

"I took all the fat off, I stayed slim and I was eating healthy," he said. "No French fries over there, but they eat a lot of pasta and bread. When they were eating octopus and buffalo, I tried to stay with bacon, ham and chicken."

It didn't hurt that the team's owner runs over 80 restaurants throughout Spain. And when his car broke down, the owner provided use of a Jaguar and then a BMW.

The checks came in on time and the team took care of his agent's fee. He got first-class treatment from the club.

His goal is to earn an invitation some day to an NBA camp.

"Better defense, better ballhandling and jumping more on my jump shot and not being a lazy jumper," Goins lists as his points for improvement. "The competition in the isn't a good as it is in the states, but it's it gives you a chance to prove yourself as a player."

This summer, he's staying in shape playing with NBA and players in pro foreign leagues at both St. Cecilia and Wayne County Community College.

Goins is going somewhere abroad next month, but he is not sure where. He is considering returning to play in Spain, but may opt for Argentina or France.

One thing he'll try and secure in his next contract is a satellite dish.

"Got to have one," Goins said.

Casey clan from page B1

in the fall. "It was really cool because it's not every day you can play with your grandfather."

In 1969, Larry began as Ken's catcher at age 13 and the father-son duo became church league fastpitch batterymates until 1977 when the modified leagues took off.

Ken eventually worked his way into the highly competitive Plymouth and Livonia modified circuits where he dueled with area pitching legends Al and Curt White, along with Curtis Richards.

Over the years, the father-son battery played in numerous league championship games, along with local and national tournaments. They even beat the famed King (Eddie Feigner) and his Court one evening.

The Casey battery continued for nearly 21 years when Ken's back and knee problems knocked him out of the game in 1990 at age 57.

"It was special to allow an old turkey like me to come out one more time to pitch," Ken said. "And it was very rewarding to throw to my son because he's always been a good defensive catcher. He's somebody I consider as good as anybody when it comes to defense."

Larry, meanwhile, has no plans of stopping anytime soon as a backstop. His brand new knee braces have given him new life.

"I'll go probably another 10 years," said Larry, who is a director for human resources in product development at Visteon.

Three of the players on this night had played with or batted against Casey before he retired. Several others, including umpires, ex-players and fans of the Plymouth Modified League, showed up for Casey's appearance.

"There's sort of a community togetherness in the modified league and I'm grateful they liked me enough not to interfere," Ken said. "I saw a lot of the guys there. It was really nice."

Ken retired from Ford Motor, Co. as an engineer in 1996, but remains active in the Ward Presbyterian Church choir. He misses his old barbershop quartet group, but has sung the national anthem on several occasions at Tiger Stadium and now Comerica Park.

He was scheduled to sing the anthem Saturday night prior to the Tigers-Indians game.

"I used to sing at a lot of weddings, but now it's more funerals," Ken quips.

Wednesday's gig at Massey Field certainly bridged the generation gap.

And nothing else could compare for the Casey family of Livonia — only if it was one inning of one game.

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

'Cigars' no fly-by-night operation

Periodically during the spring and summer this year I have seen what Roger Tory Peterson calls "flying cigars," better known as chimney swifts.

They can be inconspicuous birds that fly overhead unnoticed except for a high pitched chatter.

They get the description "flying cigar" from their body shape. It reminded early ornithologists of a half smoked cigar shape, gently rounded at one end, the head, and squared off at the burnt end, the tail.

Their characteristic body shape is interrupted by a pair of stiff, narrow wings that are the same color as the body. Chimney swift coloration is what you would expect from an animal that spends time in chimneys, they are dark, sooty colored.

A chimney swift may also go unnoticed because its size. They are only 5½ inches long. Most of their day is spent high in the sky catching insects. Their stiff wings and shallow wing beat allow them to change direction quickly in order to pursue rapidly flying insects.

Swifts would have a hard time taking flight if they landed on the ground, so they must remain flying most of the time. Their feet are so small, that if they landed on the ground, they would be useless in providing any push to propel the bird into the air.

Even basic necessities must be accomplished while flying. Food gathering, drinking, bathing, courtship, gathering of nest material and even copulation occurs while flying. A European swift was discovered to spend the night high in the sky.

Chimney swifts in southeastern Michigan usually spend their nights in a chimney — no great surprise. They not only rest in a chimney, they build their nest on the wall of a chimney.

Most swifts have a sticky saliva which is used as an adhesive to attach small sticks they collected as nest material.

A half circle nest is attached to the wall of a chimney and then four to five white eggs about the size of a Tic-Tac are placed in the nest. Both sexes incubate the eggs for about 20 days.

Often a group of swifts will nest in the same chimney. In the morning they leave as a group to search for insects to feed their young. One swift examined had 600 insects balled up in its throat ready to take to its young.

One researcher estimated that a single swift probably flew 560 miles in one day searching for insects. Their incessant flying, often at 80 miles per hour, their migration to South America in fall and return to North American in spring, coupled with a long life span (nine years), resulted in an estimation that a single swift could fly as many as 1,350,000 miles in its lifetime.

Just as nesting swifts leave their chimney at about the same time, they also enter the chimney as a group. Birds will often circle the chimney for a period of time around sunset waiting for all the birds to arrive. Once they have all arrived, they begin to stream down into the chimney.

A researcher looked down into the chimney to see what it looked like. He noticed several birds fluttering to the center of the shaft and then returning to the wall.

Because it was dark inside the chimney he could not determine what they were doing. So he went to the bottom to look up into the opening. When he looked up from the bottom, the answer to his question hit him right in the forehead.

Birds of the colony kindly fluttered to the center of the chimney to defecate so they would not soil their neighbors on the wall below.

Pretty hospitable for a bird!

Avoid the pitfalls of dehydration

The dog days of summer are here.

With them come hot, humid weather and the perfect time for outdoor activities, summer sports and fall conditioning.

But athletes beware. Hope for fun summer sports and conditioning activities can quickly evaporate in the hot summer sun if athletes do not properly hydrate themselves before, during and after a workout.

Without proper hydration the body can lose water and essential elements and run the risk of kidney problems or even death.

To help athletes avoid the risks of dehydration, physicians at the University of Michigan Health System's Medsport are advising summer athletes to drink large amounts of water during their workouts.

They also urge athletes to know and recognize the signs of dehydration and begin to prepare their body for its heavy summer fluid needs by drinking extra water during cooler times of the year.

"Athletes can get seriously dehydrated, especially during the warm summer months and also in August when the intensity of workouts seem to increase prior to playing fall sports," said Dr. Edward Wojtys, Medical Director of Medsport and a U-M team physician for the last 16 years.

"If you do enough work in any type of weather you can get dehydrated, but when temperatures are in excess of 75- or 80 degrees and humidity is in the same range, it's easier to become seriously dehydrated."

The key, Wojtys said, is to prevent dehydration before it even begins by drinking plenty of fluids before, during and after a workout.

But in any case, athletes also should be aware of what are and are not signs of dehydration.

Although thirst may seem like it would be a sign of dehydration, Wojtys says it may not always be the case. That lack of a thirsty feeling, in fact, poses a greater problem because it is a time when the body needs fluid the most.

Hydration for football: High school coaches know players need a plentiful amount of water during two-a-day drills to cope with the hot and humid dog days of August and September.

But when the body does need fluids, there are other signs as well. The true signs of dehydration include an uneasy feeling and a noticeable decrease in energy and performance levels. Some athletes also may develop a headache and feel achy if their body is running low on fluids.

If those fluids are not replenished at the first signs of dehydration, the body temperature can rise causing its cooling mechanism, perspiration, to slow down or stop and the athlete to pass out. If this occurs, the athlete should be taken off the field and evaluated by a trainer or physician immediately.

"Once dehydration starts, the deterioration can be quick making it difficult to treat," said Wojtys.

The best way to prevent that from happening is to continuously drink fluids throughout any workout, especially when heat and humidity are on the rise causing the athlete to sweat more and deplete the body of fluids and salts.

That advice is particularly important for young athletes who are working to lose weight before their sports season starts through physical conditioning and running.

It's important for those athletes to monitor their body weight before and after their workouts to avoid dehydration.

Because much of that weight loss is fluid, and if it's not properly replenished and the athlete continues to work out, it can be fatal," said Wojtys.

"It's not unusual for an athlete who's 160 or 180 pounds to lose five or more pounds during a workout," said Wojtys. "We would hope that by the next morning, after having an opportunity to drink fluids and eat a healthy dinner, that most of that weight would be regained.

"It's the athlete who goes back out the next day and hasn't regained that fluid who's really placing himself at risk."

Coaches and parents of summer athletes also need to be aware of the dangers of dehydration and supply their athletes with plenty of fluids during games and workouts.

Wojtys suggests that coaches provide several breaks every hour and remove any athlete from the field who is exhibiting signs of dehydration and who have nausea or have vomited.

"You can't drink too much water when you're young – your kidneys are designed to be able to handle that amount of fluid," said Wojtys. "So if anything, we should force fluids on young athletes and have them drink as much as possible."

But drinking all of that extra fluid in the summer can sometimes make an athlete feel sluggish or bloated. Wojtys recommends building up that extra hydration during cooler months, before they actually need them, to get used to the heavier fluid load.

And to stay hydrated before, during and after a workout, athletes should drink water or a balanced salt solution like Gatorade.

A balanced salt solution will work to not only meet the body's water requirements, but it will also provide it with the essential elements that are lost during perspiration.

But if a Gatorade-like substance is not available, Wojtys suggests drinking water instead and avoiding any type of soft drink or juice drink.

Although balanced salt solutions will replenish fluids and elements lost while working out, young athletes should not use salt tablets to achieve the same outcome.

Redford's Franz pulls off senior title

TEN PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

When Sparky Anderson said "Winning beats losing," Larry Franz of Redford must have been listening.

This outstanding senior bowler has done a lot of winning throughout his career, his latest at Garden Lanes in Garden City.

He took home $750 in first-place money in the recent Great Lakes Senior Bowling Association (GLSBA) monthly tournament a few weeks ago.

High qualifier for the event was Fred McClain of nearby Allen Park with a 1472, followed by Vic Portolaitin with 1445.

Franz's run to the title started with a win over Waterford's Joe Fitzsimmons, 244-202. His next victim was Dennis Bergendorf of Frankfort, 245-190, with Roland Snodgrass of Roseville falling next, 247-158.

At this point Franz would have qualified for the GLSBA's 'Stepladder Award' by bowling one pin better in each game. He was unable to do so.

The final match pitted Franz against Gary Mitchell of East China, which the Redford resident won, 224-213.

This was the first GLSBA title for this red hot Redford bowler.

Franz has been one of the top performers in the Men's All-Star leagues and has been one of the better local tournament bowlers for a lot of years.

Other locals who cashed: Bill Haynes of Rochester Hills and Ken O'Brien of Troy.

The GLSBA is one way for better senior bowlers (50 and over) to compete against others the same age.

They offer monthly tournaments in which the prize fee is 100 percent returned to the winning entrants. They bowl in different centers each time, all in the Southeast Michigan area.

For more GLSBA information, call Director Ed Malinowski, at (734)-522-9315 in Livonia.

•One of the local dailies has just completed a study of Detroit's top twenty athletes of all time.

How did it miss Joe Norris?

This Detroiter was one of the All-time greats in the sport of bowling. He put Detroit on the map as bowling's world capitol by captaining and leading the great beer company teams, particularly Stroh's, as the dominant teams of the 1930s, '40s and '50s.

He has been inducted into eight Halls-of-Fame including Detroit and Michigan, holds the all-time pinfall record in 71 years of competing in the ABC Tournament, was the youngest person to bowl a 300 game at the time and also the oldest at the time when he did so at age 86.

Norris also represented the United States against Germany in conjunction with the 1936 Berlin Olympics.

His career spanned eight decades and he was still bowling competitively until he fell ill and passed away earlier this year at the age of 93.

His name has become legend, with many events and awards named after him. His passing prompted many articles in the bowling and sport magazines as well as newspapers around the nation.

When the top twenty athletes are listed, how could they miss on one of the greatest of all?

•The 65th Annual John P. Gavie Memorial Tournament is slated for 7 p.m. Monday, Aug. 20, at Thunderbowl Lanes.

This is the bowling season kick-off and a special get-together evening for bowling afficionados.

It is a social event as much as a tournament.

There will be souvenirs for all contestants. Be sure to get your entry in, as it usually fills the big house.

It is a team entry event, so get your team together, or form one now. If you have bowled in it last year, your entry will be in the mail, or call Dick Smith at (810)975-0166.

You can also email chiprs@flash.net or call Frank Gavie at (810) 773-1544.

Arts organizations give youngsters cultural passport

Darlene Dreyer loves her job as executive director of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra. In addition to promoting one of the finest community orchestras in the area, she has the opportunity to influence the next generation by instituting programs such as Passport to the Arts & Culture.

Dreyer came up with the idea after attending an American Symphony Orchestra League conference in Boston last year. It was there she learned of a similar program that bands together cultural institutions within a 60 mile radius of Utica, N.Y.

Dreyer thought, why not here? Before long she involved Jennifer Tobin and Stella Greene of the Plymouth Community Arts Council and Beth Stewart of the Plymouth Historical Museum. They applied for and received a $14,400 cultural project grant from the Michigan Council for Arts and Cultural Affairs then began planning the program.

- 2 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 5, at Heritage Park off Canton Center Road behind the Canton Administration Building, south of Cherry Hill

Call (734) 451-2112 for more information

Passport to the arts

Students receive passports, which are then stamped after each trip to a concert, museum or arts classroom. After earning so many stamps in their passports, they receive prizes. Dreyer believes Passport to the Arts & Culture encourages students to learn more about the arts by attending events such as the two upcoming concerts which kick off the program. The 15-member Canton Chamber Orchestra of the Plymouth Symphony performs Friday, Aug. 3, in Kellogg Park in Plymouth, and Sunday, Aug. 5, at Heritage Park in Canton. Both are free.

Amphibian art: Katherine Lou and Carley Zimmerman designed this mascot for the Passport to the Arts & Culture program.

Passports will not be available until the first day of class for the 17,000 children in the Plymouth Canton school district, but students can sign up for credit at the concerts.

"It's not just a concert but a dramatic reading and there will be people in historic dress," said Dreyer. "It's more of an event. The symphony will have its own activity center for kids to make their own instruments or top hats. And the arts council will have a display of drawings by students from Isbister Elementary.

"The program is to build an awareness of cultural activities in our community among young people and of course that has a ripple effect on their parents."

Beth Stewart believes the program will grow as time goes on. Canton Project Arts is already involved as a result of the chamber orchestra playing in Heritage Park. Both Canton Township and Project Arts provided monetary support for the concert.

"It's a joint effort," said Dick Dionne, president of Canton Project Arts. "We're forging a relationship between the CPA and other groups with these events."

"Next year we hope to open it up to choruses and other groups," added

DSO prepares young musicians to perform like professionals

Rodney Whitaker doesn't mince words as he stands in front of the Detroit Symphony Civic Jazz Orchestra laying down a stream of advice. It took him years of practice to earn his position as bass player for the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra in New York City – and it all started here in Detroit.

Working with young jazz students at the DSO's Summer Institute is coming full circle for Whitaker, who played with the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra from 1984 to 1987 and now directs the DSO's Civic Jazz Strings. He doesn't mean to make rehearsing any more difficult than it already is, but believes musicians who intend to play professionally need to develop "a good work ethic." The Institute's two-weeks of intense musical training helps prepare students for the stage.

Long summer day: Brian Coates of Southfield rehearses with the Civic Jazz Orchestra at the DSO Summer Institute.

Do your homework

"Don't come to rehearsal learning the part," Whitaker tells students attending the institute at Oakland University in Rochester. "You have to have the kind of integrity to practice your parts before rehearsal. I'm not trying to come down hard on you. I'm pretty tame compared to my conductor at Interlochen."

"Even when it's just a rehearsal, play like it's a performance."

Section by section Whitaker works with students in the three-hour morning jazz session. He encourages the saxophonists in the front row to "take time to listen to the trumpets, bass and drums, the rhythm section." This is valuable advice for high school students preparing to become professionals like Whitaker.

"Don't tap your feet, listen to the drums as your time, listen to how it's constructed," said Whitaker, who is also a music professor at Michigan State University.

"Try to get rid of the harsh tone like you're playing in a marching band. That won't work for jazz. Play more with a singing quality instead of marching band."

Ben Purcell was trying to do just that. A senior at Cranbrook High School in Bloomfield Hills, Purcell began playing bass three years ago. This was his first week rehearsing with the Civic Jazz Orchestra.

Grooving

"I learned a lot of stuff like how to groove with the instruments, listening to the instruments as an extension of the rhythm section," said Purcell of

DSO trains youth for musical future

It's been a roller coaster of a week for Daisy Newman, director of education for the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. The amount of students attending the Summer Institute at Oakland University has nearly doubled since last year.

The increase meant Newman must locate and assign more rooms for young musicians to rehearse and study. The two week intensive music training camp attracts classical and jazz students ranging in age from 12 to 25.

"We had 65 the first summer, 80 students last year, 150 this year. We've expanded beyond the university's expectations," said Newman, who's working with Summer Institute Director Charles Burke of Canton to provide an Interlochen-style experience for music students in the area.

"We're very excited. The program is important because it gives the DSO the opportunity to change the lives of young people through

BOOKS

Children's book illustrations not just for kids

BY LANA MINI

When it comes to art, there is truly something for everyone, of all ages, to enjoy.

Soft beauty in a home can be created with paintings by Monet. Bursts of bold color can enhance a hallway with the addition of a Van Gogh print. And, for something light-hearted and fun, to truly bring out the youth in all of us, are artists like Dr. Seuss or Jane Dyer which are suitable for any room.

The Elizabeth Stone Gallery at 536 N. Woodward in Birmingham specializes in children's book illustrations from the classics to the up-and-coming.

This summer kids can relieve themselves from the heat at the gallery where they can read children's books, look through the stuffed animal collection and enjoy the artwork.

The gallery exhibits original artwork as well as limited edition prints from illustrators throughout the world.

The most popular book by far?

Thidwide and the kind-hearted moose.

And Guess how much I love you? by Sam McBratney and illustrated by Anita Jeram.

The most popular characters portrayed in artwork for sale?

"Parents are just as enthused as the children are when they come (to the gallery)," Stone said. "Grandparents go toward Peanuts characters, parents to Curious George, women toward fairies and men also love Peanuts."

Kids favorites

As for kids, well they love it all — especially mice and pigs.

Original artwork and reproductions from every character imaginable, ranging from $12 to more than $1500 are available.

At the gallery, parents want to own the artwork as much as the kids do. Stone said one Southern woman owns all the artwork from an entire Dr. Seuss book which she hung along the hallway of her grand colonial home.

"The artwork evokes memories, they are handsomely drawn with vivid colors and sweet or fun images," Stone said. "I'm always busy here, locating prints requested by customers, creating birthday and shower gift packages. There's always something new."

The gallery boasts its uniqueness as one of the few in the country that cater to this specific niche. Stone only knows of one other, in LA, that is so dedicated to the world of children's book art.

And, the artists who create the books become Stone's friends. Artist Jane Dyer, whose stunning, colorful work is shown throughout the gallery, is one of Stone's favorite creators and a best-selling artist.

Upcoming events

On Saturday August 11, at 10:30 a.m. the gallery will host a one

Stewart. "We're getting the kids involved already. Five-hundred kids drew designs for the mascot for the Passport program and we have high school kids designing the passports. We wanted to have kids designing because kids know what other kids like."

A Web site, currently in the works, will allow children as well as adults to access information about the concerts, arts classes and museum exhibits planned by the four arts and cultural organizations. But in the meantime, Stewart is relying on the media to announce events such as the grand re-opening of the Plymouth Historical Museum 2-5 p.m. Sunday, July 29.

Due to the generosity of Margaret Dunning, the museum has added 10,000 square feet to the existing building.

"We're past the panic stage and into the I-think-we-can-do-it stage," said Stewart early last week. "We'll have a neat exhibit of doll houses and miniatures, teeny miniatures by Norm Walker, and miniature work by Plymouth architect David Reitzel that includes historical buildings and the museum."

The museum's newest acquisition, a 16-room Victorian dollhouse created by McLean Ambrose, features miniatures by Plymouth artist Judy Shellhass. A former instructor of miniature furniture design at Greenfield Village, Shellhass will exhibit an exact reproduction of Lincoln's White House bed. Although it's not part of the permanent collection which goes on display in February it will give visitors a taste for the memorabilia in the upcoming passport event.

The Plymouth Symphony's February concert, "American Portraits and Places," ties in with the Lincoln exhibit and once again includes middle school students playing the first movement of Dvorak's New World Symphony alongside PSO members. Students attending the concert and exhibit will be able to receive stamps in their passports.

"We want to get kids more interested in artistic and historic things going on in their community, to reach the largest number of kids and keep the idea in front of them of the opportunities available in their own back yards," said Stewart.

Rochester Hills. "Rodney taught me a different way of grooving to each."

The opportunity to work with professional musicians like Whitaker is one of the reasons Kris Johnson joined Civic Jazz as a trumpeter. Marcus Belgrave, who directs the group, brings in world-class jazz musicians like Whitaker all season long. A graduate of Southfield Lathrup High School, Johnson is looking forward to studying with Whitaker at Michigan State University this fall.

"I like working with guest directors such as Wycliffe Gordon and Delfeayo Marsalis," said Johnson. "Every time it gives you a different perspective. It's really inspiring."

Delfeayo Marsalis enjoys showing young musicians like Johnson how "to line up the tempo." He flew in from New Orleans especially to prepare students for performances at the Birmingham Jazzfest and Detroit Science Center (4 p.m. Sunday, July 29). Marsalis knows the importance of studying jazz at a young age. If not for the opportunity to learn from seasoned musicians such as his father, Ellis, and brothers, Wynton and Branford, he might not be touring Europe and Japan with Elvin Jones in fall.

Marsalis began playing trombone in sixth grade and by age 19 was touring Europe with Ray Charles, who'd come to town looking for a trombone player.

"I love it," said Marsalis, who left Friday morning just before Whitaker took over the Civic Jazz rehearsal. Marsalis was headed back to New Orleans. In two weeks his musical, featuring actors ages 9-19, opens at the Uptown Music Theatre and there were a lot of last minute details to wrap up.

"Most of the musicians who grew up in New Orleans learned from the older musicians," Marsalis said. "I feel honored to work with older and younger musicians. The music is very important. Young people are looking for direction in so many areas not just in music. Jazz provides another option other than MTV.

"The younger you're exposed to music the more your mind is open to accepting new ideas. As we get older, it gets harder," Marsalis said.

Marcus Belgrave began working with youth in a jazz program at Oakland University in 1973 because, like Marsalis and Whitaker, he believes young musicians must be trained to carry on the tradition of jazz. By 1975, Belgrave instituted the Jazz Development Workshop for students that continued into the 1980s in Detroit.

But studies only take students so far. In order to perfect their technique, young musicians must perform. In March 2000, Belgrave, within a month of taking over as director of the newly formed Civic Jazz Orchestra, had its members playing in front of audiences.

"It's important for the legacy to continue," said Belgrave, legendary for his trumpet playing on the Detroit jazz scene. "They can look at it on film, but how it's put together they don't know.

"Music is a human thing. This generation is familiar with electronics, but they don't know the inflections and sounds they can get out of the instruments, or how to form their individual sound, develop your own voice but also play in concert with other sounds."

From September to May, Belgrave teaches students in the Civic Jazz Orchestra how to play as a group. While he's sorry to see the Summer Institute end, Belgrave can't wait for Civic Jazz rehearsals to begin in fall. He's preparing to recruit several musicians to replace two-thirds of the saxophonists as well as other instrumentalists who are leaving for college.

Unfortunately an invitation to perform at the Ford Detroit International Jazz Festival Aug. 31 to Sept. 3 in Hart Festival had to be turned down. But Belgrave hopes with an influx of new musicians to play next year.

"I look for sincerity and desire to play the instruments in a qualitative manner; that they plan to make music a career in some way," said Belgrave. "I want them to get some kind of concept of the music of Duke Ellington, Billy Strayhorn, Thad Jones, Stan Kenton and other jazz masters.

"Jazz is a part of America that needs to be preserved, and this music is part of the Swing Era. We need to preserve as much of our heritage as we can. It's our American heritage."

Wendy Popko an illustrator, artist and muralist will paint pictures that accompany the story. Children ages 5-10 are welcome. Reservations required. Parents can drop off their children at the gallery, or stay with them.

It just might give you a chance to read your favorite childhood story book all over again.

The Great Good Book Friends is a new 'club' where adults can discuss the great readings of children's literature with other adults. Stone, a former children's librarian of Brookside School Cranbrook will introduce new books to the adult group. Fee is $35 for four meetings Sept 10, Oct. 8, Nov. 12 and Dec. 10. # Future from page C1 to change the lives of young people through music by providing increased training and an opportunity to walk and talk with the great artists of the world."

Offering students the opportunity to work with world-class musicians is what sets the Summer Institute apart from other music camps. For eight hours a day, Monday through Friday, DSO musicians such as Ramon Parcells (West Bloomfied), Marshall Hutchinson (Farmington Hills) and Felix Resnick, who also conducts the Birmingham Bloomfield Symphony Orchestra, work alongside students in orchestra and chamber ensembles. Other guest instructors, Marcus Belgrave, Rodney Whitaker and Delfeayo Marsalis, rehearse the Detroit Symphony Civic Jazz Orchestra.

It also allows qualifying junior and senior high school students to receive college credit for completion of the Institute's course work in music theory and history.

"What's very interesting is that it's a different experience for each child," said Newman. "For the shy ones it's an opportunity to express themselves in a safe educational environment. The extroverts are seduced into helping the shy ones so it improves the humanity of all the children."

Burke knows firsthand how important it is to provide young people with educational experiences like the Summer Institute. From September to May, he conducts the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra as well as the Civic Sinfonia. The youth training ensembles nurture the talents of musicians from middle school to high school age.

"It's been wonderful," said Burke as he took a break between sessions. "I'm excited about the jazz studies we added this summer.

"Jazz is a very important component of music and the only true American art form. With the emergence of the Civic Jazz Orchestra we wanted students to get the wealth of experience of Marcus Belgrave, Rodney Whitaker, Delfeayo Marsalis. It's about time world class musicians worked with Civic Jazz members as well as the orchestra.

"And I'm really looking forward to next season. Delfeayo is writing a piece for us for orchestra and jazz orchestra combined. His older brother, Wynton, crossed that barrier when he did this with the New York Philharmonic and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra. It will be performed at the end of the 2001-2002 season at Orchestra Hall," Burke said.

But music lovers don't have to wait until then to hear the Detroit Symphony Civic Orchestra and Civic Jazz. The orchestra performs at noon today in Varner Recital Hall on the campus of Oakland University in Rochester; Civic Jazz at 4 p.m. at the Detroit Science Center.

† Competitive pricing information was obtained directly from banks through diligent effort during the week of April 16, 2001. For illustrative purposes, accounts with minimum balance requirements or no per check charges were assumed to average 40 checks per month; accounts without minimum balance requirements and with per check charges were assumed to average 20 checks per month. All accounts were assumed to have four in-office deposits, four non-automated telephone inquiries, four automated teller machine transactions, four automated clearing house transactions, and four point of sale transactions per month. The price of checks was assumed to be $11 for 200. Some banks pay higher interest rates on larger balances; some banks allow minimum balance requirements to be met with alternative, linked, or combined balances. Some banks have annual fee alternatives. Some banks may have introductory offers including a first order of checks free or discounted; comparisons are for on-going costs. Some banks have regional pricing; some bank holding companies have multiple banks with individual prices but nearly identical names; prices shown are for banks in some First Federal of Michigan branch areas. Prices shown are for the checking service, although some banks may include other services in their checking prices. Compared accounts are standard checking accounts (canceled checks or check images returned) without regulatory limitations on the number of checks which may be written. All savings figures are annualized.

Love blossoms again in 'Dangling on a String'

Dangling on a String by Gloria Dunbar

SterlingHouse Publisher Inc., Pittsburgh, Pa., 2001, $11.95

■ Tina and Bruce are African-American. Tina's parents – Rachel and Byron Lewis, and Bruce's parents – Dan and Maggie Scott, were not oppressed, lived in good neighborhoods, and as Gloria Dunbar writes were 'aggressive, educated, talented, goal oriented, and driven to accomplish a stable and comfortable lifestyle.'

I confess, I love a good romance novel. Especially when it's about a woman who gets a second chance at love. Being a widow I can relate to that, even though I'm not in a rush to find another husband.

Set in Detroit, Gloria Dunbar's Dangling on a String is about a woman who meets the man who could be "Mister Right" in high school, but chooses to marry a guy who turns out to be "Mister Wrong."

Admit it ladies, you've had this experience. You know the guy. He's shy, dresses funny, the other kids make fun of him, and your mother loves him. He's nice enough, a good study partner, but not someone you'd want to go to the prom with.

Mister Successful

Flash forward to your 10 year high school reunion. He's the lawyer, the dentist, Mister Successful, making big bucks, living in an exclusive neighborhood, and driving a sports car.

That's kind of the premise in Dangling on a String. Tina Lewis and Bruce Scott are introduced by their parents in high school. They become friends, but not boyfriend and girlfriend. Tina's best friend Cassandra even wonders what Tina sees in Bruce.

After graduating, Tina goes to the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Bruce to Harvard. She falls in love with Johnny, graduates with a bachelor of business administration degree, and gets a good job at Michigan Bell Telephone Company in Detroit. Johnny, who also graduated from the University of Michigan, works at an accounting firm. They get married, and have a child, Lynette. Tina continues working, and advances in her career. Johnny isn't as successful. Discontent leads to domestic violence, and divorce. Still, Johnny honors his commitment, and pays child support. Lynette, like her mother, graduates from the University of Michigan.

Successful lawyer

Bruce graduates from Harvard Law School and builds a successful law practice in California. His marriage to Marilyn ends in divorce. He supports their son, Chuck, who lives in Boston with his mother.

Bruce and Tina date other people after they divorce, but wonder about each other. Tina was Bruce's first love, but she pushed him away – wanting to be just friends. They keep in touch over the years, and Tina calls him while she's in Las Vegas visiting her friend Charmaine after Lynette graduates from college.

The outcome is predictable, and the style of the book – flashbacks between the past and present, can be a little annoying, but there's a lot to like about Dangling on a String.

Tina and Bruce are African-American. Tina's parents – Rachel and Byron Lewis, and Bruce's parents – Dan and Maggie Scott, were not oppressed, lived in good neighborhoods, and as Dunbar writes were "aggressive, educated, talented, goal oriented, and driven to accomplish a stable and comfortable lifestyle."

Rachel and Byron Lewis, and their daughter Tina, Dan and Maggie Scott, and their son Bruce, were among the handful of African American families living in the Detroit Palmer Woods Community in the 1960s.

Tina and Bruce are excellent students, they fit in, even though they're in the minority at Milford High School where 75 percent of the student body goes on to college after graduating.

For those of us who grew in metro Detroit, one of the most racially divided regions of the U.S., Dangling on a String is an education in differences, which is exactly what Dunbar, who did some of her research at Southfield-Lathrup High School, intended.

Premium on education

"African Americans," she writes, "are no different than other groups who put a premium on education, cherish family, love affectionately and live life to the fullest."

The Lewis' and Scotts are such people. They want what's best for their kids, and raise them to value education.

Dangling on a String is a good read, a book you'll have trouble putting down. It's also a reminder that black and white aren't always what they seem.

■ In this new twist to the Cinderella story, we get a glimpse of how Cinderella ended up with her dysfunctional family. Maura Donovan of Farmington Hills is delightful as the long-suffering but patient pint-sized Cinderella.

BY SUE SUCHYTA
SPECIAL WRITER

Are you ready to see the Cinderella story in a whole new light? "That Seventies Cindy" is a laugh-out-loud musical with an upbeat score, high energy dance numbers, and dozens of colorful young actors filling the stage with energy and enthusiasm.

Written by Lisa Andres of Livonia, "That Seventies Cindy" tells the story behind the story, with tongue firmly planted in check. With satirical swipes at the Brady Bunch, Saturday Night Fever and platform shoes, the show creates happily ever after with a disco beat.

Allison Barsamian lights up the stage as the eternally optimistic Cinderella. Her sweet, but strong voice, radiant smile, and strong stage presence, anchors the talented cast. She is a delightful foil to the wicked stepmother, played by Guildling mainstay Brooke Andres of Livonia. Brooke, who originated the Cinderella role six years ago, takes obvious delight in applying her talents to the role of the nasty Harolda.

Brooke's timing and comic talent is evident, and she leads her trio of daughters with verve.

Trippin' trio

The stepsisters, played by Courtney Cagnon of Wayne, Caitlin Donovan of Farmington Hills, and Courtney McKenna of Farmington Hills, are a trippin' trio of pratfalls and quick humor. Aptly named Mary, Mo and Shirley, they embody the comic tradition of the Three Stooges with a feminine twist. The gags are fast and funny from classic one-liners to physical humor that will leave your sides weak with laughter.

Narrators

The ever-present Guildling narrators, Don Andres of Livonia and Joe Donovan of Farmington Hills, add to the 1970s flavor with a running barrage of jokes as Rowan and Martin of Laugh-In fame. They tie scenes together, and provide a light-hearted link to the many flashbacks.

In this new twist to the Cinderella story, we get a glimpse of how Cinderella ended up with her dysfunctional family. Maura Donovan of Farmington Hills is delightful as the long-suffering but patient pint-sized Cinderella. The under-age trio, played by Carolyn Lusch of Redford, Lauracindy Plague of Canton and Molly Donovan of Farmington Hills are as funny as their older alter-egos, filling the stage with wicked enthusiasm and nasty pranks.

At the heart of any Cinderella story, of course, is the Prince and the shoe.

Andres takes it to comic levels with the Prince identifying Cindy by the smell of her feet. Played by Paul Luoma of Farmington Hills, the Prince delivers his lines with clever timing and finesse.

The shoe comedy is further perpetuated by Royal Shoe Salesman Archie Fallen and his wife Cornella, delightfully played by Bill Beumel of Livonia, and Andrea Hoglen of Plymouth. The King and Queen, played by Nick Andres of Livonia and Corinne Fine of Canton, entertain audiences with their comedic cameos. Ashley Ostrowski's gum-snapping, ditzy delivery as the royal page is delivered with bouncy energy.

Another actress of note is the youngest Cinderella, played by Tessa Valentini of Livonia.

Colorful and fun

Kim Donovan's costumes are colorful and fun. The set, modeled after the Laugh-In show easily facilitates the many rapid scene changes. The unexpected sound bites, from the Godfather's entry music to the flashback music cues add to the fun.

Fall fashion action

Saks kicks off season with Badgley Mischka

STAFF PHOTOS BY JERRY ZOLYNSKY

Rich and grand: The Badgley Mischka fall 2001 collection closed with a series of signature evening gowns.

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
STAFF WRITER
nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

Motown doesn't pretend to be a fashion mecca, but as summer fades and fall approaches, the style scene in metropolitan Detroit gets downright kinetic.

Fash Bash, which will be presented by Marshall Field's (formerly Hudson's), is slated for Friday, August 10 at the Fox Theatre in Detroit. This year, actress and former model Brooke Shields will host the Founders Junior Council event to benefit the Detroit Institute of Arts. Marshall Field's will feature designer ready-to-wear apparel.

Also on its way is Saks Fifth Avenue's annual Mode Du Concours runway show and luncheon. Slated for Friday, August 3 at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester Hills, the event is one of many held during the week of the Concours d' Elegance car show. This year, Saks will present Elie Tahari's fall 2001 collection under an outdoor tent on the scenic grounds of Meadow Brook Hall.

As in past years, Saks' annual fall fashion show at the Detroit Institute of Arts opened the season's runway show frenzy.

Held July 17, the event showcased the latest Badgley Mischka collection and gave local fashion followers their first look at fall style trends.

The standout feature of the collection by designers Mark Badgley and James Mischka was color. But we're not talking about the splashy shades that were so abundant this past spring and summer.

On the contrary, a palette of dark, rich and refined tones – chocolate, burgundy, taupe, black, red and mocha – brought an earthy, practical sophistication to the collection.

The finale of the show, which featured the designers' signature gowns, navigated the landscape of the color grey.

From silver to teal-tinted grey to grey-with-a-blush, the segment endowed what is often considered a dull color with complexity and range.

Silhouettes struck an understated tone, too.

Pleated skirts, ruffles and fur collars – all reminders of the recent focus on lady-like dressing – were conservative and pared down, dodging bourgeois decadence in favor of subtle femininity.

If anything, the combination of composed color and design at work in the collection conjured up Victorian themes. Ironically enough, these same characteristics hinted at bohemia in other ensembles.

It's hard to believe that such dark composure could follow several seasons of bright colors and a summer of splashy graphics and bold prints.

But the Badgley Mischka collection speaks right to the heart of fall fashion trends; ready or not, the mood is understated, earnest and even somber.

No wonder black is back in vogue.

Skirt shapes: A pleated leather skirt was one of several leather pieces in the collection.

Birmingham shopping district creates web site

Downtown Birmingham Principal Shopping District recently announced it will launch a web site aimed at helping both shoppers and prospective business tenants.

The site, which will give more than 700 merchants an on-line presence, will be located at www.enjoybirmingham.com starting Sept. 1.

Speedlink, a Pontiac-based Internet services provider, created the seven-page web site. The site will include a merchant/business search page and a special events page listing activities taking place in downtown Birmingham.

Another page will allow brokers and prospective tenants to obtain information about available properties, including the square footage and price-per-square-foot for each open location.

Beautiful: Kayakers enjoy the magnificent waters during a trip to Lake Superior in northern Ontario.

Call of the wild beckons kayaker to Lake Superior

JON SCHECTER
SPECIAL WRITER

■ An expert kayaker I am not; none of our small group, except for the guides were. But you do not need to be a pro to go on a guided wilderness adventure.

Tracks of a lone wolf in moist sand were the first things I saw after wiggling out of my sea kayak cockpit in a most undignified manner and stumbling ashore onto an uninhabited forested island in northern Ontario.

Wilderness guides Cindy and Kate were amused by my grub-like contortions of emergence that delivered me from choppy waters to terra firma. Politely, they refrained from comment. Me, the babbling naturalist, now a wilderness sea kayak client, near speechless with pleasure in the wilds of Ontario's Lake Superior Archipelago.

Although only a few hours paddle from our starting point, the century old Rossport Inn, and 200 kilometers from Thunder Bay, as far as I was concerned, I was light years from Detroit.

I felt like hugging my guides, but remained restrained. Well, for a while.

"This is great!" is all I could manage to mumble as I knelt in sand and placed my hand over a fresh wolf print, near moose tracks mind you, and inhaled air sweet with spruce and cedar scent. In an hour camp was set, celebratory coffee consumed.

An expert kayaker I am not; none of our small group, except for the guides were. But you do not need to be a pro to go on a guided wilderness adventure if you select outfitters with care.

Lest you wonder, previous kayaking or canoeing experience is a great asset and you should be in good physical shape, for northern Ontario, no matter how easy it may be to reach by air, is wilderness, and wilderness and cold Lake Superior can be unforgiving. Be honest when you book a journey and you'll have the best time.

At that moment of first wolf track encounter I realized that if you want to feel the excitement of kayaking in the greatest body of Canadian freshwater that snuggles up to Michigan, then you'll do well to contact what the Ontario Tourism Industry calls an "Inbound Receptive Tour Operator for Outdoor Adventure and Eco-Tourism for Northern Ontario."

Follow this little hint – you really should – and you will be immersed in an experience that extends beyond the paddle's splash. A world awash with a rainbow of rocks and human and natural history unlike any park you might find at home beckons.

Sea kayaking, using long sleek craft that are 16 to 18 feet long and designed for oceans and the Great Lakes, unlike shorter recreational kayaks, is the door of discovery for this great archipelago.

Keeping promises

Blue Loon Adventures, an eco-tourism organizer that works closely with Tourism Thunder Bay, kept promises. All of them. Everything Blue Loon managing director Tanya Wheeler promised during e-mail planning stages came true among the islands of dreams.

Tanya is also a skilled and respected wildlife biologist. Her contacts allow for true adventures. Red-necked grebe observations, meteorite impact sites and woodland caribou can be on kayak itineraries.

Or how about encounters with First Nation communities? This was not a "just get your paddle wet" excursion.

Kayaking along the northern fringe of the Great Lakes, a system that holds a fifth of the world's supply of fresh water, presents a rugged, yet intimate look at the constant battle between the land and the water.

During the Precambrian era, towering mountain ranges rose up as the Earth's crust buckled and formed what is now the northern border of our biggest Great Lake, Superior. And that is where you paddle; through rocky arches, dip into sea caves millions of years old and just perhaps forget about cell phones.

Kayaking is the perfect way for the "waterside" look at these spectacular glacially scrapped peaks of rugged beauty, impossible to view trailside, where pioneering bright orange lichens cling to barren rocks.

Senior guide Kate Freeman explained how gulls perched on rocks added natural nutrients to the process. But it's hard to pay attention when Bald Eagle soars over evidence of tremendous upheavals and fierce storms.

Just beyond the dramatic shoreline lies the boreal forest that cradles much of the 3,800 kilometer long Great Lakes Heritage Coast, a magnificent region focused on ecosystem protection and made up of Crown land, provincial parks, protected areas and conservation reserves, and has the involvement of 24 First Nation communities.

A land of black bear, moose, aromatic cedar woods, trembling aspen that dance to the lightest breeze, beaver and bobcat. Some say cougars stalk the woods. And I know ravens and spirits watch all travelers.

Eco-travel is education

Morning coffee with my ever-smiling guide Cindy Collins, who turned out to be a fellow outdoor recreation major, gleaned me a survival tidbit in the unlikely event of a black bear attack.

Fight back hard!

According to a wilderness first-aid guide, if you play dead a hungry black bear will "just begin to eat you." But keep in mind black bears are usually content with blueberries and fat grubs. Sea kayakers are not preferred entrées.

Loons were welcomed companions. These magnificent birds of the north that can submerge like a submarine by controlling their buoyancy were spectacular during daylight hours. But dusk brings magic and at the moment of dusk loons become shadowy ghosts of wildness.

Incredibly clear secluded bays provided front-row seating to watch the fiery orange sun extinguish herself in Lake Superior. And when the loons sang on our final night, and their haunting melody drifted through that mystical curtain of darkness, I know my eyes were wet with moisture that had nothing to do with the veil of evening island fog.

Northern Ontario is a sweet temptress, even if you never hear the howl of a wolf.

FOCUS ON WINE

RAY & ELEANOR HEALD

Italian varietals favored at Napa's Luna Vineyards

Napa Valley's Luna (Italian for moon) Vineyards is the brain child of Mike Moone (former Beringer CEO) and George Vare.

Created to specialize in Cal-Itals (Italian varietals grown in California), Luna is an unparalleled winemaking story.

After replanting an old chardonnay vineyard to pinot grigio, and contracting reliable sources for sangiovese, former Newton Vineyards winemaker, John Kongsgaard was hired to make the wines. But he wanted to make merlot, as well as pinot grigio and sangiovese, that Moone and Vare had in mind. Before getting started, they agreed to add merlot as the third varietal in the Luna line up. After all, merlot is grown in Italy too.

"We're making Cal-Itals because we like them," Vare emphasized. "The last thing we wanted to do was to try and sell another cabernet sauvignon or chardonnay. There are already so many great bottles of these wines in the market. Our challenge is to make great Italian varietals. Besides, the fastest growing restaurant business in the U.S. is the neighborhood Italian restaurant."

Wine Picks

■ Pick of the pack: 1999 Falling Star Merlot-Malbec $5. An amazing wine at this price. A delicious light red for summer. You've got to try it.

■ Big reds: 1999 Ferrari-Carano Alexander Valley Bordeaux blend of all five Bordeaux varieties. 1998 Signorello Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon $48 deserves an additional five years of bottle aging. 1997 Rodney Strong Alden Vineyards Cabernet Sauvignon $30 is classic. 1999 Terrazas Cabernet Sauvignon $17 is the best we've tasted from Argentina.

■ Drink me now cabernets: 1999 Haywood $10; 2000 Vina Tarapaca Chile $9; and 1999 Canyon Road $8.

■ Don't neglect to collect for future wine pleasure: 1998 Chateau de Pez Saint-Estephe $30 and 1998 Haut-Beausejour Saint-Estephe $24 are well-priced, cellar-worthy Bordeaux wines.

Pinot Grigio

In 1995, Luna had the largest single planting of pinot grigio in North Coast California, but needed to decide on the style. This grape is also called pinot gris and makes superb wines in France's Alsace region.

Research was needed. So the "Luna-tics" visited Alsace and Italy. While they thought highly of Alsace pinot gris, they knew they could not make wines in the Alsace style because the terroir of Alsace and Napa Valley are so different.

Next they visited Italy's Alto Adige, a region with a much colder climate than the Napa Valley, so no model was discovered. They were most impressed with the wines in Friuli, a region of northeastern Italy bordering Slovenia.

When you first pour the Luna Pinot Grigio or a good one from Friuli, you may be startled by the pale pink-copper color. Although considered a white grape variety, when fully ripe the berries have a pinkish-gray color and thus the French name pinot gris (gray pinot). When harvested, the crushed grapes are left in contact with the juice giving it color.

Sangiovese

Taking to the road again, Tuscany was Luna's role model for sangiovese.

"Our best visits were with hands-on people who are continually conducting experiments," Kongsgaard remarked. "We spent more than half our time in the vineyard."

Problems with sangiovese are enormous because it tends to grow like a Mediterranean weed. "When we admired a particular chianti, we learned that yields at harvest were very low, grown in the rocky soil of the best hillside vineyards," Kongsgaard explained. "We're attempting a similar vineyard model on the most impoverished soils, located in vine-

Savory recipes packed with protein - minus cholesterol

BY LANA MINI
STAFF WRITER

GO EGGLESS

Salmonella. Food poisoning. High cholesterol. Those are words sometimes associated with eggs and it seems health officials are constantly telling how to cook the food properly so we don't become sick.

Here's a thought shared by vegans: if a food must be cooked to be safe for consumption, maybe we shouldn't eat it at all.

Whether it's fear of salmonella, the desire for improved health with lower cholesterol foods or for ethical reasons of wanting to avoid food from those dark, over-crowded, small-caged chicken and hen farms ... we can skip eating eggs, but still enjoy the favorite recipes that call for the bird embryos.

Today's marketplace has created alternatives to everything that is fattening or high in cholesterol — including eggs.

Mike Buday, a strict vegan who consumes no animal products or by-products whatsoever, opened Buday's Tasty Health in Berkley just to specialize in vegan and vegetarian foods. One of his favorite products is that which replaces eggs.

"I went vegan and stopped eating eggs 10 years ago and never looked back," Buday said. "There are so many alternatives to eggs that are healthier and just as tasty."

Buday's deli is packed with eggless foods like eggless egg salad, chocolate brownies, eggless French toast, raw almond and date bars, eggless and dairyless ice cream, fake turkey sandwiches and strawberry fruit smoothies.

Love scrambled eggs? You can make it with soft, protein-packed tofu, turmeric, garlic, salt and pepper, chopped onion and mushroom sautéed together for about 20 minutes.

Crave summer egg salad? Soft mashed tofu again, with turmeric, dill, lime and celery is a delicious substitute.

How about the need for eggs in good, old-fashioned chocolate brownies?

That's simple. Just use a half mashed banana for each egg needed. Or avoid the added banana flavor with an egg-free substitute called Energ-G brand egg-Replacer. It's one of Buday's most popular products.

The boxed eggless egg replacer uses potato starch as its prime ingredient and can be used in cakes, pies, cookies, meringues, and more. At less than $5 per box, it literally lasts for months. It can be used in almost any egg dish imaginable, he said.

Buday creates elaborate and simple dishes in his store deli with ingredients pulled right off the store shelves.

"The hardest part is getting people to try it (eggless dishes)," he said. "Once they do, they always love it."

From Ener-G brand Egg Replacer to tofu to pre-packaged pancake mixes without eggs, Buday said he carries the vegan products because of the increasing demand for it.

"People want delicious healthy food — food that didn't bring harm to an animal or to the environment."

In some vegetarian and vegan recipes (like cake and muffin), eggs are used as a leavening agent to make the dish rise. One replacement idea is a teaspoon of baking powder to do the trick or the Egg Replacer. In other recipes, eggs act as a binder to hold the recipe together. In cookie and brownie recipes, use banana for the egg, or the Egg Replacer. Applesauce also makes a great egg substitute and adds nice flavor.

In most other vegetarian recipes that need

Perfect: *The chocolate brownies and raw almond and date bar were also made without eggs by Mike Buday. Almond milk was substituted for cow's milk. Applesauce was used as an egg replacer. # Authors guide shoppers through Detroit's Eastern Market

BY KEELY KALESKI-WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER
kwygonik@oe.homecomm.net

It started out as casual dinner conversation and turned into an event – a shopping expedition to Detroit's Eastern Market followed by an evening of cooking.

Lois Johnson, who co-authored "Detroit's Eastern Market: A Farmers Market Shopping and Cooking Guide" with Margaret Thomas, was the inspiration.

She and her husband, Christopher, a history professor at Wayne State University, recently had dinner with my friends Kathy and Mike, who live in Livonia. Christopher was Mike's graduate student adviser, and they've kept in touch.

"Keely, Lois made this delicious appetizer with yogurt cheese. It's featured in her book. Have you seen it?"

I hadn't, so while Mike grilled steaks, Kathy went inside to get the book. Before long, we were passing it around the table, looking at the recipes, and planning our next dinner party.

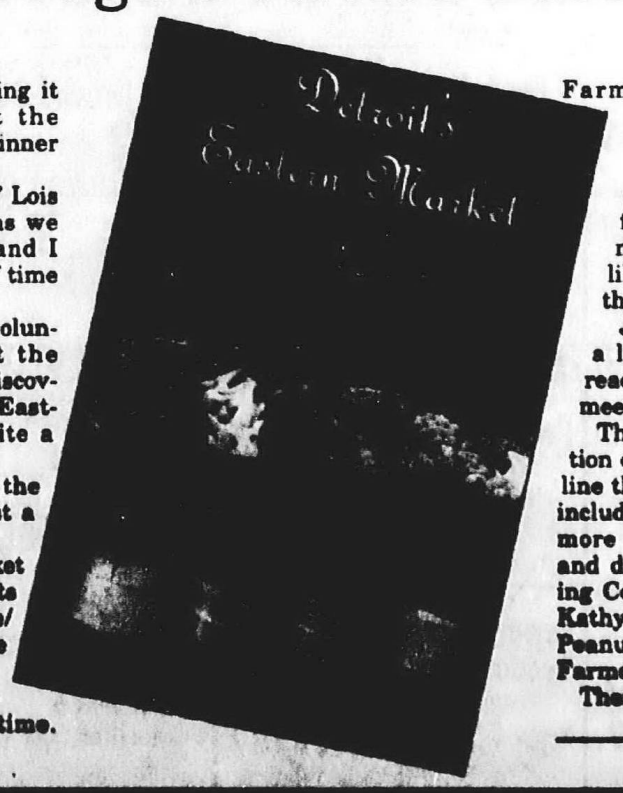
"I'm always planning a menu," Lois said with a smile in her voice as we talked about the menu Kathy and I planned. "I like to know ahead of time what I'm cooking."

She and Margaret met while volunteering in gallery services at the Detroit Institute of Arts. They discovered a mutual love for Detroit's Eastern Market, and decided to write a book together.

"It focuses on the people and the products," Lois said. "There's just a thumbnail history."

Fans of Detroit's Eastern Market will be surprised to learn that its the largest open-air wholesale/retail market of its kind in the United States.

If you've never shopped at Eastern Market, this is the perfect time.



Farmer stalls are brimming with picked in the morning fruits and veggies.

"I've always gone to markets," said Lois. "I like the quality and freshness of the food. It's the most important part of cooking. I like talking to the people who grow the food I eat."

Johnson and Thomas interviewed a lot of people at the market, and reading their book is a good way to meet them.

Their guide starts with a description of the shops and restaurants that line the periphery of the market sheds including R. Hirt Jr. Co., which offers more than 300 varieties of imported and domestic cheese, Gabriel Importing Co., which sells the yogurt cheese Kathy loves, Rafal Spice Co., the Rocky Peanut Co., Butcher's Saloon, and the Farmers Restaurant.

binding, just substitute a potato, sweet potato, or 1/2 cup mashed banana per egg.

For quiche that uses eggs for both moisture and binding, substitute silken tofu for the eggs. Silken tofu is so soft and creamy, you can nearly liquefy it in a blender.

Today's health conscious stores carry eggless cake mixes, pancake mixes, frozen pierogi and non-egg mayo. The following are recipes contain ingredients that are easy to find at grocery stores or specialty stores like Buday's Tasty Health (on the northwest corner of Woodward and 12 Mile Road).

EGGLESS EGG SALAD

- 1 pound soft (not silken) tofu, squeezed and mashed
- 2 teaspoons turmeric
- 2 clove garlic, diced

- Kale, steamed and chopped
- 1 onion, chopped
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Dash cayenne pepper

Squeeze excess water from tofu by gently cupping it in your hands, in two separate pieces, as the water drains. Then, in large bowl, mash soft tofu with a fork until it looks like mashed or broken ricotta cheese. Stir in turmeric with a fork. Add salt and pepper, cayenne and garlic. Stir in lemon juice. Add vegetables. Let chill. (For those who like egg salad with mayonnaise, try eggless mayonaisse such as Vegenaise.)

In a hurry? Grab these snacks

This summer, pack some wholesome, nutritious snacks for the ride and satisfy their appetites while keeping them healthy. Fruits and vegetables in season make ideal snacks – and are a smart way to help reach the five daily servings recommended for optimum health.

If you worry about your car getting messy from juicy fresh fruit, try other nutritious alternatives, such as whole-grain crackers and cereals.

Vegetables also make great snacks. Carry plenty of cut-up celery, carrots, broccoli and zucchini for a crunchy snack that keeps the appetite at bay until the next meal. You can cut up the vegetables yourself or buy plastic bags of prewashed, precut vegetables. Instead of relying on sugary desserts, offer wholewheat bagels, crackers, or rice cakes.

Dried fruits make fine snacks to take along in car rides because they are bite-size and packed with vitamins, minerals, phytochemicals and dietary fiber. Most supermarkets sell a large variety of dried fruits, from the old standby, raisins, to papaya and mango. Many are sold in bulk, providing a budget-conscious way to keep them on hand.

Although dried fruit is low in fat and cholesterol, watch out for their calories. Depending on the serving size, dried fruit has as many, if not more, calories than many cookies. By mixing them with nuts or cereal, or both, you can add interesting texture. Portion out snacks into individual plastic bags to take along so you can control serving sizes and calories.

Muesli – a mix of cereal, nuts and fruit – can make a healthful snack, but many commercial versions are high in sweeteners. To make your own, combine dried fruit with a favorite whole-grain cereal, almonds and cinnamon. Well-planned snacks are an important part of our diet and can account for a significant amount of our nutritional needs. Prepare to hit the road with this "Happy Trails" snack in your pack, then sit and enjoy the ride.

'HAPPY TRAILS' MIX

- 2 1/2 cups chopped mixed dried fruits, e.g. apples, apricots, peaches, cherries, cranberries, papayas, pineapples
- 1 cup raisins
- 1/2 cup chopped almonds
- 1/4 cup chopped pecans
- 1/4 cup sunflower or pumpkin seeds
- 3 cups whole-grain breakfast cereal, preferably with no added sweeteners

In large bowl, mix ingredients until well combined. Portion out into 1/2-cup individual servings to store in re-sealable plastic bags. Makes 7 1/2 cups or 15 1/2-cup servings.

Nutritional information per serving: 161 calories, 5 g. fat (less than 1 g. saturated fat), 29 g. carbohydrate, 3 g. protein, 4 g. dietary fiber, 48 mg. sodium.

yards around the rim of the Napa Valley."

A Kongsgaard winemaking technique that is not a chianti model is to co-ferment sangiovese with 15 percent merlot. Is this the plan for the future?

"We've got syrah planted and used five percent in both the 1997 and 1998 sangiovese, along with ten percent merlot," Kongsgaard answered. "But I can assure you, we won't use an aggressive varietal like cabernet sauvignon. The key for a great sangiovese is to have a blending variety that is full-bodied, highly pigmented, but not aggressively aromatic."

Here are more of them:

■ 2000 Luna Pinot Grigio $18. We love pinot grigio with color and this one has a beautiful pale pink/copper color. It resembles the best from Italy's Friuli region with generous fruit and broad palate expression. A very balanced wine with a gentle palate lushness.

■ 1999 Luna Sangiovese $18. A beefy sangiovese. There is only one way to get this intensity and that is low yield. Ripe and flavorful with a good spine, it's delicious. Peerless among California sangioveses.

■ 1998 Luna Merlot $28, blended with under 20 percent cabernet sauvignon is simply delicious and bests bottlings at twice the price. Dark cherry and chocolate aromas are mirrored on the palate in this wine, aged in French oak barrels for nearly two years. Intensity of the underlying fruit portends a long-lived wine.

including Don Schneider of Plymouth, known as the "pineapple man" or "mushroom man," depending on who you talk to. He operates the Lux Produce stall 201 in Shed 2, named for his maternalgrandfather, Morris Lux, and is also known for the lampworked and blown glass beads, vases, and other items he creates at his Plymouth studio. His grandfather started the stall at Eastern Market after emigrating from Russia, and Schneider is the fourth generation of his family to work there.

Alan Bzenko of Rochester sells honey in Shed 2. He started in 1940 and also sells honey candy and a hand-rolled beeswax candles.

Shopping at Detroit's Eastern Market requires a little planning, but it's worth it.

"We leave our house about 8 a.m.," said Johnson, explaining her Saturday market shopping strategy. "It usually takes about three or four hours. We take I-75 to the Mack exit. I turn right on Rivard and look for a place to park on the edge of the market. We try to park close enough so we can unload a couple of times."

Johnson takes along a few cloth shopping bags, a cooler, and a jar filled with water to hold the fresh flowers she usually buys.

"We usually work our way through the sheds first and buy coming back so we don't have as much to carry and can get the best prices. We also go to Hirt's, Rafal's and Rocky's, then stop for lunch."

The book includes recipes, which reflect foods sold at the market, and suggested menus.

Cole slaw has international flair

BY DANA JACOBI
SPECIAL WRITER

We associate cole slaw with hearty foods that have North European roots, so it's apt that its name derives from the Dutch kool sla. Yet this salad's main ingredient, cabbage, originated in the east Mediterranean, where it was quite popular in ancient Rome and Greece.

Carried north and west by Rome's imperial armies, it has traditionally been served, from Russia to Ireland, in robust soups boiled to a soggy mass, or pungently pickled as sauerkraut.

Cole slaw is an appealing way to serve this feisty cruciferous vegetable, so rich in the antioxidants and indoles that help reduce cancer risk. Served raw, it also retains more water-soluble nutrients, including vitamin C.

Traditionally, cole slaw is shredded cabbage swimming in a sharp-sweet, creamy dressing loaded with mayonnaise and sugar. But more recently, the influence of newly-introduced ingredients from around the globe have inspired dozens of new versions that capitalize on everything from succulent Napa cabbage to Asian roasted sesame oil and smoky chipotle chiles.

Using a variety of cabbages to make cole slaw adds interest and nutritional benefits. Napa cabbage, which resembles a tall, pale head of romaine lettuce standing firmly at attention, is crisp, succulent and milder tasting. Like Savoy, it is a good source of beta-carotene and provides more calcium than other cabbages.

Crunchy Slaw has everything you like in a classic cole slaw, and then some. Its base of Napa cabbage is crisp and refreshing. Pineapple adds a tart-sweet tang. The creamy dressing of yogurt with mayonnaise reduces fat and cholesterol – an extra benefit everyone loves.

Refresh with oranges

BY DANA JACOBI
SPECIAL WRITER

The word orangeade sparks reveries of orange pressé, a classic cooler from France. As much a ritual as a drink, it starts with fresh-squeezed juice half filling a slender glass holding a long-handled, slim spoon. On the waiter's tray next to the glass stood a short, rotund bottle of sparkling water and a silver-topped glass sugar shaker.

To make this drink, the pulpy juice is extracted from oranges, usually ones from Jaffa, a tart variety rarely seen in this country. The aromatic oil extracted from the skin during the brusque pressing adds a refreshing, faintly sharp counterpart to the sugar used to sweeten the juice. As sparkling water is poured in a glass holding the juice, a fine mist dances up, cooling your face while the mixture fizzes. Avoiding an overflow rush of golden foam at this critical moment requires practice and precision.

Orangeade also brings to mind a revivifying Shaker elixir. A religious group founded in the 18th century, the Shakers lived in communities where farming and hand-crafted goods were as important as their spirituality. The Shakers are famous for the elegantly spare furniture they designed and made. Cookbooks sharing their recipes reveal that they were skilled at using herbs both for flavoring and in tonics.

ORANGEADE WITH HERBS

- 3 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh rosemary
- 1 cup coarsely chopped mint leaves
- 1 bay leaf
- 1/3 cup sugar
- 1 can (6 ounces) orange juice concentrate
- 3 cups regular (or diet) gingerale
- Juice of 2 limes
- Ice cubes
- 4 sprigs mint, for garnish
- 4 sprigs rosemary, for garnish

Place rosemary, mint and bay leaf in medium saucepan. Add 1 cup water. Bring to boil over medium heat. Cover, reduce heat and simmer 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Steep 20 minutes. Strain off liquid into small bowl. Mix in sugar. Pour hot herb syrup into large pitcher. Sir in juice concentrate, gingerale and lime juice.

Half-fill 4 large glasses with ice cubes. Pour in orangeade mixture. Garnish each glass with mint and rosemary sprigs. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Mosquitos carrying West Nile Virus pose health risk

BY ALICE ASHMORE
STAFF WRITER
aashmore@oe.homecomm.net

A recent dry spell has reduced the local mosquito population, but Wayne County Health officials are still concerned that a dangerous and deadly disease spread by the insect could make its way into the area.

While Michigan has had no reports of the West Nile Virus, local health officials are taking precautions.

"I think it is probably a matter of time before it gets here. This started on the East Coast and tends to be headed westward. We're trying to be prepared," said Steve Tackitt, director of the Environmental Division of the Wayne County Department of Public Health.

According to the United States Centers for Disease Control, as of September 2000, the West Nile virus has been documented in Connecticut, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia.

Birds act as a host for the virus, and bird migration is spreading the disease, Tackitt said.

"Although we don't want to alarm people, we do need a plan of action for potential problems that may occur through mosquito transmission," said Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk, Wayne County medical director.

"Late last year, nearby Essex County in the Windsor, Canada area, had a scare when a dead bird was found and testing indicated that there might be West Nile Virus in the bird. Lab results were inconclusive, but it is a matter of time before it comes this way," Lawrenchuk said.

Watching and waiting

"Michigan is being very pro-active and prepared. We have excellent surveillance activity in place," said Sandra Collins, public health information coordinator for Wayne County.

The first recognized outbreak of the West Nile virus, a mosquito-borne disease that originated in Africa in 1937, was reported in New York state in 1999, Tackitt said.

The outbreak killed seven people and sickened 62 others in New York. In 2000, 21 human cases and two deaths were reported, Tackitt said.

Humans and animals become infected by a bite from an infected mosquito.

The West Nile virus can cause encephalitis (an inflammation of the brain) and meningitis (inflammation of the lining of the brain and spinal cord), Tackitt said.

Wayne County is now trapping mosquitos and testing them for the virus.

"About three weeks ago, we began mosquito monitoring," Tackitt said. "We have a continuing plan of surveillance and live trapping."

The collected mosquitos are frozen and sent to a lab under the direction of the Michigan Department of Community Health. So far, no infected mosquitos have been found, Tackitt said.

■ 'Although we don't want to alarm people, we do need a plan of action for potential problems that may occur through mosquito transmission.'

— Dr. Donald Lawrenchuk
Wayne County medical director

The county is also keeping an eye on the crow population for signs of the virus.

"The West Nile Virus seems to thrive in the crow population versus other birds," Tackitt said. "The crows act a host for the virus – the mosquito is the vector (mode of transmission)."

The public can help if they see a dead crow.

"If it is a fresh kill, there is an 800 number to call. An ID number and location is issued," Tackitt said.

An animal control officer is then dispatched to pick up the remains. Dead crows can be reported by calling (888) 668-0869.

"Michigan State University is doing an analysis of the crows. I believe we have sent in 10 birds and have not had any test positive," Tackitt said.

To be used for testing purposes, the bird has to have been dead less than 48 hours, Collins said.

If the bird has been dead for more than two days, it should be disposed of while wearing gloves and placed in a plastic garbage bag, she said.

The virus is not known to be spread from person to person, but there is a potential risk associated with the handling of dead animals, according to information provided by the Michigan Department of Public Health.

"Any tools used to handle the bird should be disinfected," Collins said.

Prevention

The Wayne County Department of Public Health is encouraging residents to take precautions against mosquito bites, and to prevent mosquito breeding.

"I think what is really important is prevention information," Collins said.

She encouraged people to be vigilant about standing water. "If you have outside pet bowls and bird baths, make sure you change the water every three or four days."

Collins said that clogged gutters and standing water on pool covers are also prime mosquito breeding areas.

Even a child's tire swing can provide a home for breeding mosquitos. "You should drill a hole in the bottom of the tire to allow water to drain," she said.

Residents should also clean and chlorinate swimming pools, outdoor hot tubs and saunas on a regular basis. If not in use they should be emptied and covered.

"We're looking for a disruption in the breeding cycle," Tackitt said.

He encouraged people to avoid mosquitos whenever possible.

"You want to avoid standing water and marshy areas and take the proper precautions."

Those measures include wearing long sleeves and long pants, whenever possible, and using an insect repellent.

The Department of Health also recommends using a repellent containing permethrin or DEET. An effective repellent will contain 35 percent DEET.

The American Academy of Pediatrics recommends products with a DEET content of 10 percent or lower for children. Products containing DEET should not be used on infants, according to information from the Department of Health.

Repellent should be applied on exposed skin and clothing, and should be washed-off after coming indoors.

"As much as possible, stay inside when mosquito activity is heavy – dawn, dusk and early evening. Just be aware," Tackitt said.

West Nile symptoms

According to the Wayne County Department of Public Health, "Many individuals infected with the virus do not become ill, and in most individuals infections are mild."

The incubation for the virus is usually three to 12 days,

"The people we are most concerned about are people over 50, and those with compromised immune systems. They have the highest risk of severe disease," Collins said.

Milder symptoms of the West Nile Virus are: Slight fever, headache, rash, body aches and swollen glands.

Severe symptoms may include a high fever, stiff neck, confusion, coma, tremors, muscle weakness, paralysis and death.

"In more severe cases, intensive supportive therapy is needed," she said.

So far, residents of Wayne County seem to be taking the possibility of the West Nile Virus in stride.

"We've had some people call, but we stress there is no reason to panic," Collins said.

New warnings for hormone therapy patients with heart disease

The American Heart Association recently advised physicians against prescribing hormone replacement therapy (HRT) for the sole purpose of preventing heart attacks and strokes in women who already have cardiovascular disease, according to recommendations published in the most recent edition of Circulation: Journal of the American Heart Association.

The new position is based on recent scientific studies about the role of HRT in reducing the risk of coronary heart disease in postmenopausal women.

For postmenopausal women who have had a heart attack or stroke, the guidelines recommend that HRT not be initiated for secondary prevention. This recommendation is based, in part, on the results of the Heart and Estrogen Replacement Study (HERS), a large-scale study found that no benefit of HRT among women with heart disease.

For preventing a first heart attack or stroke, the association recommends reducing risk factors, such as high cholesterol and blood pressure, through lifestyle modifications and if needed, with medications to improve cholesterol profiles and lower elevated blood pressure. Pending the results of ongoing studies, the guidelines recommend that the decision on HRT use be based primarily on on-heart related benefits and risks.

For those women with diagnosed cardiovascular disease, who are undergoing long term hormone replacement therapy, the decision to continue or stop HRT should be based on established noncoronary benefits and risks, as well as patient preference.

Clarify position

Because the data on HRT has been unclear, many physicians have asked the American Heart Association to clarify its position on HRT says Lori Mosca, M.D., Ph.D., lead author of the American Heart Association's Science Advisory, titled, "Hormone Replacement Therapy and Cardiovascular Disease." She is director of preventive cardiology at New York Presbyterian Hospital of Columbia and Cornell universities.

"For many years, cardiologists and other health care providers who take care of women have assumed that HRT protects the heart," said Mosca. "At this time there is no sufficient evidence to make that claim — our purpose is to clarify the role of hormones in heart disease prevention."

■ NEW RESEARCH STUDY

The statement concludes that for healthy women there is neither a compelling reason to initiate HRT for the sole purpose of primary coronary heart disease prevention, nor a compelling reason to discontinue it if she is doing well with therapy.

For now, women and their physicians should shift their attention to lifestyle changes such as smoking cessation, weight loss and physical activity that are known to reduce the risk of cardiovascular diseases (CVD). Also, treatments like cholesterol-lowering drugs and blood pressure medication are proven to protect against CVD and are underutilized in women.

Cardiovascular diseases, which include heart attack and stroke, are the leading causes of death in women. After menopause, CVD risk rises sharply.

age 50, the decision whether or not to use hormone replacement therapy is a difficult one. These guidelines should help physicians guide patients to the most effective therapies to lower an individual's risk of cardiovascular disease."

According to Mosca, the established benefits of HRT for the treatment of menopausal symptoms, such as hot flashes, and the prevention of osteoporosis, must be weighed against the risks for blood clots, gallbladder disease and a possible increased risk of breast cancer.

"The new guidelines recommend essentially taking HRT out of the risk-benefit equation for women who have already had a heart attack or stroke," said Mosca. "For postmenopausal women without heart disease, we do not suggest that HRT be taken completely out of the equation. We state that heart disease prevention should not be used as the sole purpose of therapy. It can weigh in.o the decision, it just shouldn't drive the decision for women without heart disease.

"The prevailing wisdom for decades has been that hormones protect the heart," Mosca says. "This is based on quite reasonable assumptions. Compared to men, women have a delayed onset of heart disease by about 10 years. It has been assumed that this protection has been afforded to women because they have estrogen and men don't."

In addition, epidemiological studies have indicated that HRT reduces heart attacks in healthy women. However, because women who are prescribed HRT are often healthier than those who are not, these studies cannot be considered definitive because women are not randomly assigned to treatment.

Two large, randomized studies of healthy women designed to avoid those biases — the Women's Health Initiative, sponsored by the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, and the WISDOM trial in Europe — are expected to report results in five to eight years. "Those studies will provide more definitive answers about HRT for prevention of heart disease in healthy women," said Mosca.

Magazine names U-M hospital in top 10 best hospital

The University of Michigan Health System has once again taken its place among America's top 10 hospitals, according to an annual ranking released today by U.S. News & World Report magazine. It is the only health care system in Michigan to make the top 10 list of "Best Hospitals."

UMHS ranked seventh this year, up from 12th in 2000. Only 15 hospitals make the prestigious U.S. News & World Report Honor Roll.

In the various medical specialties, UMHS was ranked high in almost every category, placing in the top 15 for 15 of the 17 areas examined. Three specialties were in the top 10- ear, nose and throat, geriatrics and hormonal disorders, which includes endocrinology and diabetes.

"This honor reflects the commitment of every U-M Health System employee to bring our patients the best care and the latest medical technologies available," says Gilbert S. Omenn, M.D., Ph.D., U-M executive vice president for medial affairs and chief executive officer of the U-M Health System.

"We are all proud of this No. 7 ranking which highlights the national recognition of our clinical care programs that are strengthened by our outstanding research and educational mission."

Prestigious honor

This is one of a series of recent honors for the U-M Health System. In 2000, the U-M Medical School was ranked the 10th nationally in grants from the National Institutes of Health and, in March, tied for ninth in the U.S. News & World Report's rankings of the 10 best research-oriented medical schools in the country. In January, the C.S. Mott Children's Hospital was ranked ninth in the nation by Child magazine. Also recently, M-CARE, the U-M Health System's managed care organization, was given a rating of "excellent" by the National Committee for Quality Assurance.

Several factors were considered in compiling the U.S. News & World Report rankings including reputation among board-certified specialists, mortality statistics, nursing care, level of medical technology and procedure volume. Overall, 1,878 of the nations 6,116 hospitals met the magazine's eligibility requirements. Ultimately, 168 centers are represented in the rankings.

Specialties making the biggest gains were neurology and neurosurgery which was 24th in 2000 and now ranks 14th, kidney disease which jumped from 24th in 2000 to 11th this year, orthopedics which ranked 20th in 2000 and 11th in 2001, and urology which placed 23rd in 2000 and now is 14th. Pediatrics and cardiology/heart surgery made the rankings for the first time in several years, listed at 22nd and 26th, respectively.

U-M rankings (overall) for previous years were: 12th in 2000; 9th in 1999; 12th in 1998; 10th in 1997; and 15th in 1996.

Expect trees, wetlands at Woodlake Estates

Woodlake Estates: This colonial, 3,200 square feet, features four bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths and access to a private lake.

Woodlake Estates, a platted community of just nine lots at the end of the Sheringham Woods subdivision in Independence Township, is well named.

All of the lots are touched by wetlands and mature oak trees. Four front on Gulick Lake, a private, no-motor boat body of water.

Residents of all nine home sites will have access to the lake with a path to small park. Most lots are just under an acre in size, with a couple exceeding two acres.

"This is an exclusive, high-end community," said Paul Silverman, developer/ builder there and namesake of a three-generation building family in town.

Woodlake Estates is north off Maybee Road west of Sashabaw.

"Wildlife here is beautiful," Silverman said. "We have blue heron. We have deer. I like to think this is typical of a first-class development. As the developer/ builder, there's no reason for it not to be. When done, this little area of the world is done.

"It's secluded, natural beauty. There's no doubt who your neighbors are."

Near, yet far

Hank Hogan, affiliated with Max Broock Realtors, Clarkston, is the sales rep for Woodlake Estates.

"It's a very short distance off the expressway, far enough away so you don't get noise," he said. "Everyone knows Clarkston is the best school district in north Oakland County."

Silverman says he's a custom builder who will go to extremes to please customers.

He said he's built 20 new homes over the years in such far-flung places as Waterford and Ypsilanti. Woodlake Estates is his first community of any size.

"If someone want to modify an existing plan or do a full-blown custom house ... I can do that," Silverman said. "With me, it's full contact with Paul Silverman. I oversee everything with my name on it."

Lots of goodies

The model at Woodlake Estates, a 3,200-square-foot colonial with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths, carries a price of $499,900, which includes the lot.

Silverman also plans to build two spec homes, each a story-and-a-half of 3,600 square feet with four bedrooms and 3-1/2 baths. Prices of those homes, which include different exterior elevations and lot, are $574,990 and $650,990.

All Silverman homes in Woodlake Estates will include at base price three-car garage, air conditioning, fireplace, basement and high energy-efficient furnace and water heater.

All homes will include separate tub and shower in the master; microwave, dishwasher, cooktop, oven and island with granite countertop in the kitchen; concrete basement walls poured to look like brick; and a basement well window.

Wood flooring is in the foyer, hallway and kitchen/ nook, ceramic in the upstairs baths, vinyl in the laundry and carpeting throughout.

Brick, cultured stone, Hardiplank (cement) siding and shake siding are possible exterior materials. Dimensional shingles are standard.

About the model

The model features a living room, dining area, kitchen/ nook with island and a family room with two-story ceiling and eight large windows. There's a large pass-through wall between the kitchen/ nook and family room.

The master upstairs contains a cathedral ceiling, separate changing/ dressing area, two walk-in closets and a two-sink vanity.

Three other bedrooms are up. One shares a jack-and-jill bath with the hallway.

Woodlake Estates is served by the Clarkston municipal water system and sewers. It's within Clarkston school boundaries. There are no sidewalks.

The property tax rate is $29.48 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $600,000 home there would pay about $8,850 the first year.

The monthly/ annual association fee hasn't yet been established.

Mike and Ellen Comos, along with children Zachary, Gabriel and Emily, have moved into a story-and-a-half.

"We looked at the lot, location, the house itself, especially the exterior design, and that kept us coming back to the home in Woodlake Estates," Mike said.

"Paul Silverman is a very accommodating builder. We had some changes. He took care of it. He's responsive."

Reglazing single-pane windows 1, 2, 3

BY POPULAR MECHANICS FOR AP SPECIAL FEATURES

All single-pane windows need reglazing periodically. Replacing cracked putty will save energy and prevent rot from invading your windows.

Of course, the job will be hastened if you happen to have a broken window or two.

Start your glazing project by removing any screen, storm or combination window that might be in place.

Then look to the most deteriorated strip of putty and start chipping it away with a rigid, chisel-edge putty knife. Old, rock-hard putty may first require heat to soften it. Use an electric heat gun, rather than a torch to reduce the risk of fire.

Once the putty is out, remove the half-dozen glazier's points that lock the pane against the sash frame. These will either be diamond-shaped metal points or formed metal clips. Use a needle-nose pliers or screwdriver to unseat them.

To remove the glass, go indoors and press evenly against the bottom of the pane. When the glass is pushed just past the bottom rail of the sash, go outside, grasp the pane (with heavy gloves) and pull down steadily.

Because glass is usually seated firmly in a slot in the top rail of the sash, you may need to twist it a bit until it breaks free. If the pane is broken, remove the loose pieces first.

When the glass pulls free, brush the L-shaped recess with a wire brush and wipe away loose particles. Then use a utility knife to pry the remaining putty from the top slot of the sash.

To install new glass, slide the pane from below into its upper slot and gently press the bottom against the sash. If the pane won't slide into its recess at the bottom, slip a putty knife into the recess and gently pry the glass until it clears the recess edge.

Then secure the pane with glazier's points. Two points per side and bottom will do. Press the points into the frame with a screwdriver or a putty knife.

Install a bead of putty all around the window. Soften the putty, if necessary, before using it by rolling a glob of it in your hands. Smooth the putty by drawing a clean knife along the joint. Carefully trim away any excess when finished.

Paint the glazing after a few hours.

Don't worry about getting paint on the glass. Overpainting makes painting easier and also helps seal the joint. The paint dries in a few hours, so just scrape the glass clean with a single edge razor blade.

Bedrooms close, yet spaced for privacy per plan

The rooflines and brick accents across the face of the Chapin enhance the eye appeal of this medium-sized home.

Numerous windows, including a bay in the living room, provide immense curb appeal. The garage is on the front but faces the side, ideal for a curved driveway.

The entry to the Chapin is vaulted with a skylight overhead bathing the area in solar light.

A built-in bookshelf is directly opposite the front door while an archway on the right leads to the living room and a smaller arched doorway leads to the vaulted family room.

The living room has a gas fireplace on the right side, adding warmth to the room, as does the bay window.

Beyond through another archway is the formal dining room. It has large windows on two sides, providing an abundance of light. The dining room is separated from the kitchen with a pocket door.

The kitchen, nook and family room are all vaulted and form one big room. There is an island work center in the middle of the kitchen, with a pantry in the corner adjacent to the dining room. The nook sets in a bayed window area.

The family room, open and spacious, has a corner gas fireplace along with sliding doors that open onto the rear deck.

Convenient to the family room as well as the bedrooms is full bath with a tub. The linen closet for the rooms is located in the hall area. The master suite occupies the left rear corner, with a private bath and large walk-in closet. The master bath has twin sinks, an oversized shower, with the closet tucked behind a pocket door.

The other two bedrooms are across the face of the Chapin behind the garage with the utility room separating them. Each has a wall closet and a large window for light. The utility room has the washer and dryer, along with a storage closet.

Access to the garage is through this room.

At 2,084 square feet, the Chapin is an ideal home for the family with younger children.

The bedrooms are close yet spaced for privacy. There is a lot of open living area for the family to share, along with separate areas for guests to be entertained.

Look around to contain energy expenses

Is there no end in sight to the energy bill blues? The average heating bill for homes heated by natural gas was over $1,000 last winter.

Don't think you're off the hook when summer rolls around and you turn on the air conditioner.

Fight back. Perform an energy audit on your home.

"A home energy audit can pinpoint areas in your home that waste energy and cost you money," says Richard Roll, president of American Homeowners Association (AHA) . "You can hire a professional to audit your home, or do it yourself if you have a little time."

If you think the utility company is to blame for inflated energy bills, you could be only half right. Here's the painful truth: Up to 50 percent of the average utility bill is wasted by consumers.

Call your utility company and request an energy audit. You might get a freebie.

Begin your own audit by checking the level of insulation, especially if your home is older and you haven't done any insulating. Only 20 percent of homes built before 1980 were well insulated.

Look at exterior and basement walls, ceilings, floors, crawl spaces and your attic. A poorly insulated attic is a major culprit for losing heat in winter and retaining heat during the summer.

Next, find any holes or cracks in your walls and ceilings, and around windows, doors, lights, plumbing fixtures, switches, and electrical outlets. These holes can leak air into or out of your home. Seal them with weatherstripping or caulk.

And be sure you're not blowing all the warm air up the chimney. Keep fireplace dampers closed when not in use, and consider purchasing a glass enclosure to make your fireplace more efficient.

Also, properly maintain your appliances and heating and cooling systems to save money on your monthly utility bills.

Finally, examine how you light your home. Look for ways to use natural daylight to reduce your use of electric lights, and replace incandescent bulbs and fixtures with fluorescent lamps.

MEYERS ON MORTGAGES

LOOKING FOR A HOME?
DO YOUR HOMEWORK

by GARY S. MEYERS

Instead of looking for the perfect home, try looking for the right one. It's a lot easier to find – and it's better for you.

This week, The Meyers Report helps you track down your first – or your next – house. We'll show you how to start looking, where to go, and what you need to know before you step out the front door.

As interest rates continue to tumble, more and more people are taking the plunge into a new home. The experience can be one of life's most rewarding, or it can be a painful, disappointing exercise. It all depends on what you're looking for.

"It's easy to find the perfect home," said Ruth Conterio, a broker associate at Koenig and Strey GMAC Realtors. "It's easy if you have unlimited resources and you don't have to worry about where the property is. The rest of us have to have realistic expectations, especially first-time homebuyers who will probably move several more times before they buy their last home."

While many homebuyers start their search with the notion that the perfect home is out there for them, it's better to find the home that suits your needs for the next few years.

"Your needs are going to change," said Conterio. "Your lifestyle can change, you get more kids, any number of things can happen, so don't try to buy the perfect home the first time."

Conterio recommended a step-by-step approach to shopping for a home. The goal is to bring your search in line with requirements such as budget, and personal and professional needs. Once the field is narrowed, you can start indulging your emotional needs for a home.

Find out what you can afford. "The first thing I ask people who come to me looking for a home is 'Have you spoken with a lender yet?'" Conterio said. "Finding out what you can afford is the key. Many people start looking for houses with unrealistic ideas. They see huge, beautiful homes, maybe even the 'perfect' home, only to find that they can't get the financing."

Lenders offer a variety of tools for you to find out just what your purchasing power is. Armed with that information, you can begin to narrow your choices from among the homes you know you can afford.

Conterio added that many lenders have online mortgage calculators to help get buyers started. Pre-approval is also an important part of this process, and can help save time when it comes to firming up the financing.

Select a location – "This is the number one priority for most people when they're looking," said Conterio. "You may want to be close to a certain school, or to your job, or you may want to be near the city or out in the country. Do your homework and look at all the considerations."

One of the best ways to learn about communities, especially in a large metropolitan area, is through guides published regularly by mortgage affiliations such as the Premier Lenders group. These guides provide comparisons of the various communities in an area based on factors such as income, quality of life, schools, and average home values. They can be invaluable if you have specific needs in mind and want to find the best match in location.

Choose a realtor – "I think this is on the same level with 'location' in many ways," said Conterio. "Many people will find a house they like, either when they're out looking or on the Internet, and they'll make a connection with the realtor who's handling the property. Many times, however, a buyer will select a realtor when they first start looking, and in these cases the realtor can start looking out for a buyer's best interests, especially when it comes to negotiating sale or finding those homes that no one else can locate."

Conterio added that it's important to find a realtor with whom you can work. "Talk to someone whose personality is like your own," she said, "and see if they have someone they like working with. Most of my clients have come from their friends' recommendations."

Conterio said that even in the age of Internet home searches, a realtor can still be a homebuyer's greatest ally.

"A realtor will often lead you to their website," she said, "but they'll also get you in on houses that haven't been listed yet and keep you in the pipeline. They can help you deal with the seller's realtor as well, and help you get a better deal for you money."

Inspect wisely – Once you start looking at homes, don't just look at the number of rooms or the design. Take a good, hard look at practical items like the condition of the interior and exterior, modifications you'll need to make, such as electrical upgrades or cosmetic repairs, and the condition of fixtures and appliances that are included in the house. However, don't let one bad apple spoil the house.

Conterio warns that many buyers miss out because they focus too much on things that can be fixed.

"People tend to overestimate the cost of replacing a stove, for example," she said. "They may think there's not much light coming in because of heavy curtains or blinds, or they may simply not have a vision of a what a room can be like when it's furnished."

She added that most rooms look smaller when they are empty, and recommended that buyers bring measurements with which they are comfortable, and compare using a tape measure.

"One thing you can ask the realtor to do," she said, "is show you a similar room in another house that is furnished, if you can't imagine what it will look like."

In addition, check out the house and neighborhood at different times of the day and week. If you have children, visit the neighborhood after school on a weekday.

"With a good realtor, in today's market," said Conterio, "you should be able to find the right house for your needs in just three trips or so. It won't be perfect, but it will be the right one."

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"REALTORS ADVERTISE FOR EACH PRICE RANGE"

Every seller would like his or her home advertised by the Realtor each week that it is on the market. Classified advertising is an important tool that can attract an interested buyer. Your Realtor can be effective in finding your buyer by not necessarily inserting your property in the newspaper each week as long as a home representative of your style, location and price range is run regularly.

PULLING POWER

Realtors have learned a lot about the local buyers in your community and are quite aware of which ads pull in the most phone calls. In order to find your buyer, Realtors must attract your buyer with the property that will get them to make the call. The property that will pull may or may not be your house. Although this is a difficult thing to accept, it is usually true. Whenever you hire a professional, you should rely on the advise and experience of that professional in his or her chosen field.

DETERMINING A BUYER'S NEEDS

Once the phone call comes into the real estate office, the salesperson on duty explains the features of the house in the ad. He or she also begins asking the caller various questions about the buyer's present situation. Does the buyer now own a home or will this be the buyer's first home purchase? Has the buyer sold his or her house? What area and price range does the caller prefer? With this information, the agent can determine how to proceed.

It is not unusual for a person to call on a house that is not appropriate to the caller's needs or price range. It is also true that ads often attract the perfect buyer who, upon seeing the house, buys it with no hesitation.

ADVICE: If your price range and style are being advertised, your Realtor is promoting your property.

Give cracked patio new life as deck anchor

BY JAMES AND MORRIS CAREY FOR AP NEWSFEATURES

■ Replacement is an alternative you might not want to consider. Breaking out a large concrete patio can take days and is grueling work. Also, consider the cost of the jackhammer, concrete saw, dump fees and replacement cost.

Using concrete makes for a great patio.

Concrete takes irregularity out of the grade and produces an interesting and easy-to-maintain surface. It can be tooled as a surface drain to distribute water away from the home.

It is relatively inexpensive and can be formed and poured in a weekend. And, a concrete slab can last a lifetime.

Unfortunately, concrete is brittle and sometimes cracks, becoming a tripping hazard and an eyesore. Even a cracked, ugly concrete slab can be useful.

Filling cracks with a high-quality polyurethane caulking compound won't necessarily make it look better, but it can help to prevent further heaving and will definitely aid in proper watershed.

Replacement is an alternative you might not want to consider. Breaking out a large concrete patio can take days and is grueling work. Also, consider the cost of the jackhammer, concrete saw, dump fees and replacement cost.

There is an alternative you might not have thought of – leave that ugly old patio right where it is and use it as a foundation for a beautiful new wood deck.

All you have to do is attach strips of wood (support strips, nailing strips, furr strips – call them what you like) to the concrete and apply the decking to the strips of wood.

A couple characteristics

There is a condition regarding this procedure. A step down must exist between the floor of your home and your patio. A distance of six inches or more is plenty of room to do what we suggest.

It is important for the top of the finished deck to be slightly lower than the floor inside your home. An inch or so is all that is needed. This precaution will do much to keep leaves and wash-water spray outside – away from your fine carpet, vinyl, hardwood or other flooring finish.

The heaving concrete patio probably won't stop shifting, but chances are the problem won't telescope through to the surface of the new wood deck.

Wood is substantially more flexible than concrete. Where even the slightest ground movement can sometimes show as a radical variation in concrete, wood simply stretches, bends and flexes.

The strips of wood that are attached to the concrete should be either a pressure-treated specie, or cedar or redwood. In our experience, pressure-treated material seems to last the longest when in regular contact with moisture.

There are a couple of alternatives when it comes to affixing the strips to the concrete – powder-actuated pins, and lag bolts and shields.

In the case of the latter, holes are drilled through the wood strips and into the concrete at 2- to 4-foot intervals along each board. Lag shields are driven into the holes in the concrete.

The lag bolts traverse through the holes in the wood strips and into the lag shields in the concrete. As a lag bolt is screwed in, the shield spreads – holding both the bolt and the wood strip tightly in place. For this you will need a high-quality carbide-tipped concrete drill, a good drill motor and elbow grease.

Hard work ahead

Drilling holes in concrete isn't rocket science, but it is physically tiring. Be prepared to work hard.

Using powder-actuated pins is easier, but does require some special skills. Here, a stud gun is used to fire special nails through wood and into concrete.

The process is not physically tiring, is relatively inexpensive and can be done in a short time. For a medium-size project, all the pins necessary can be driven in less time than it takes to drill two or three holes for lag shields.

The problem with powder-actuated pins lies within the "gun" part. Stud guns are dangerous and need to be handled with caution. Have the person at the rental store provide a thorough briefing on how the tool is used.

You should also experience using the tool to drive one or two pins before leaving the rental establishment. If the store proprietor won't agree to this condition, go elsewhere.

Placement of the support strips is important. They should be parallel and the space between them equidistant. Two-by-four deck boards can span a distance of about two feet, whereas 2x6 deck boards work well up to as much as four feet.

Big boards better

The choice is yours. We like the 2-by-6 size because fewer boards are required to cover the surface. This means easier logistics, fewer attachments per given area – and best of all – fewer support strips are required.

The support strips should be placed so as not to impede drainage. You don't want to build a dam. Ponding water can prematurely damage the support system, not to mention that still ponds breed mosquitoes.

The deck boards are laid perpendicular to the support strips and can be attached with nails or the deckmaster-style fastener that provides an invisible connection.

Finally, when attaching the deck boards, it is important to stagger the joints at every course. Staggering joints adds strength and looks better.

Even a down economy needs public relations

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

In good times and bad, companies need to get their name before the public. According to Don Tanner, a partner in Marx Layne & Co., that's what makes public relations firms "recession proof."

"A company has to find ways to stand out from its competition, and that's what public relations is about," Tanner said.

The recent downturn in the economy hasn't affected Marx Layne, a full-service marketing and public relations firm in Farmington Hills. Tanner said the company is still hiring, still looking for "top people."

But, not all public relations firms have been unscathed.

"Where some firms got into trouble was they decided to focus on the dot.com world. It looked like a gravy train, the pot at the end of the rainbow. When the dot.coms got into trouble, do did they," Tanner said.

But Marx Layne has a broad range of clients with a variety of communication needs.

The company was founded in 1987 by Fred Marx and Michael Layne.

Among their 100 clients are Northwest Airlines, Kroger, Volkswagen, Audi, Motor City Casino, Verizon and Comcast.

JOB SEARCH

GEORGE HAYES

Q. After 25 years in the field, I am in a career rut. But, I can't think of anything specifically that I would rather be doing. More accurately, I can't think of another occupation that could get me excited enough to start all over, climb the ladder again and take a financial hit. Any thoughts?

A. Many mid-career people contemplating where they are in life feel a little disappointed. Some are quietly guilty about not having become "more" or having realized only a modest level of career satisfaction.

Career consultants seem to imply that people who don't make radical changes to realign their work with their interests have deep character flaws. They lack the courage or initiative to make their lives more meaningful. Job search gurus are supposed to psych you up for the fight. It's only the fear of the unknown. Now, get off your duff and restructure your life!

Hmmm. It seems to me that there might be some pretty understandable reasons for becoming resigned to a vocational fate that is no better than OK – particularly when the dough is good.

First, we have obligations that are far more important than personal job satisfaction. For most of us, responsibilities grow with age and success. Quite rightly, we become more risk conscious and less willing to jeopardize the welfare of others just because the luster has faded from our career.

Next, the clock is ticking. If I become a veterinarian, I'll spend four more years in school, three subsequent years as a junior cage scrubber, nine years building my own practice and then I'll with the firm for seven years and was named the third partner three years ago.

"I came out of radio, and I never looked at working in the media as something I could hang my hat on and have a secure, rewarding career," Tanner said.

While public relations jobs may be more secure than working in the media, they still require a variety of skills and an ability to handle stress.

Tanner described some of the qualities sought in a public relations account executive: "Someone that first and foremost has good judgment; someone who can write; someone who understands media and media relations; someone who is detail oriented; someone who can handle a wide range of situations, who is flexible, who can juggle a lot of balls and handle stress."

Although public relations is often about getting the "good news" out about a client's service or product, there are times when a public relations representative has to deal with controversial issues or fast breaking problems. They are expected to advise top executives on how to deal with media questions.

"Everyday is different," Tanner said. "You might make a list of 10 things to do in a day and somedays you finish them all and other days you only finish a few. You plan events, position a client when a breaking news story happens, write press releases, work with a graphic artist on a brochure or work on a website. Or you might be handling a crisis situation that will change your whole day."

Tanner said a good public relations rep is available to clients 24 hours a day, seven days a week. He said it's important to read as much as possible about the client's business and understand the client's business.

The flood of new technology has had an impact on the public relations business. The Internet and cable television have created scores of new outlets for a client's message. Public relations firms are also big users of e-mail to connect with the media.

Still, for all the changes in communication, personality is still a key to good public relations. Tanner said a good PR rep has to combine several traits, "I think someone who is positive, outgoing, someone that's serious about their work but not too serious that they can't take it all in stride. You have good days and bad days. Some days go great and some are very stressful."

Tanner suggests that students take a lot of English and speech classes in addition to the usual public relations courses. He strongly advises students to become interns with a PR firm or radio or television station.

He suggests anyone who is interested in doing a career switch to public relations do a lot of research, call someone who works in the field and shadow a PR rep.

The financial rewards can be substantial. Tanner said a beginning public relations representative might make in the mid 20s but after a few years, a rep can make in the six figures.

be 412 years old. I might recoup my money in the year 2214, but by then, all animal organs will be easily replaced with parts made by General Motors and distributed by McDonald's.

Finally we tend to run out of psychic gas. So many aspects of business – or at least those things that we might be qualified to do – seem to be mere variations on themes that we are already familiar with. Kind of been there and done that. It's hard to get excited.

In addition, there is a great fear that, having gone through a painful transition, we would eventually find ourselves in yet another rut.

So here's the plan. Boil the career slowly. Unless you are just miserable, look for opportunities to make small alterations, not big ones. Find just a little more happiness – don't go for ecstatic.

Stretch, don't jump. Think evolution, not revolution.

FLOWER POWER RETURNS!

A new generation falls in love with the bug

BY GREG ZYLA
© AUTOWIRE.NET

Our test drive this week is Volkswagen's New Beetle GLS, a design the German car builder re-introduced to waiting consumers back in 1998. Although the car's exterior evokes a DejaVu experience linked to the original, rear-engined "buzzer" we grew to love, it's actually a safe, [illegible] different and well-built version. The result is a Beetle that not only supersedes the original in all ways, it can be downright fast, too.

Known as the "people's car," the Beetle was designed by Ferdinand Porsche during the World War II years as an answer to requests for affordability and economy. The Beetle caught on in America after an inauspicious debut in 1949, and by the 1960s became an icon of the "Flower Children" in its many shapes and sizes.

Along with the Micro Bus and sportier sibling Karman Ghia, Volkswagen's Beetle firmly entrenched on consumer minds the advantage of thinking "small" and enjoying good times with economy and reliability as main advantages.

After a hiatus caused by the car not meeting American safety standards in the 1970s, the Beetle disappeared from U.S. showrooms in 1979. However, today more than 40,000 per annum of the "old Beetles" are produced in Pueblo, Mexico, right along side the new version.

The new Beetle is similar to the original model only in outward design. The new Beetles are built on the highly respected Golf chassis platform, offering excellent handling, great comfort factors for a small wheelbase car and a good deal of engine pep. There's a long list of standard features, excellent fuel economy and safety features that far outweigh many competing smaller cars.

Add the GLS's base price of only $[illegible], and Volkswagen has a real winner on its hands.

We're not going to spend much time describing the outward characteristics of the Beetle since every car enthusiast knows what the car looks like. It's the interior that receives very high grades, with more than ample head room, front and side-airbags for front passengers, easy to read gauges, driver and passenger seat height adjusters, four cup holders, great seat comfort and a remote anti-theft locking system.

The cockpit is well done overall, and for whatever reason, the pleasant sounding engine "buzz" we heard from the old Beetle somehow comes through in the new model, too.

Other standards include four-wheel disc brakes with anti-lock, power [illegible] air conditioning, independent suspension, and a full-size spa[illegible] Throw in the standard six-speaker AM/FM Cassette sound sy[illegible] power windows, cruise control and a host of other standard f[illegible] and the consumer can literally buy a new Beetle with no opti[illegible] feel like they've got a fully optioned vehicle.

On the road, precision, power and comfort greet the driver and passengers. The standard 2.0-liter, 115-horsepower 4- cylinder is more than adequate, offering enough torque throughout the power band. Optional engines include a 1.8-liter Turbocharged 150-horsepower design and a 48-miler per gallon Turbo Direct Injection diesel. Cost for the GLS 1.8 Turbo is $19,000 base, while the Turbo diesel (GLS TDI badge) will run $17,900 in its base form.

The mileage estimates from the standard 2.0 are 24 in the city and 31 on the highway.

The biggest change from the original Beetle version is the fact that the motor is now in front, as are the drive wheels. Overall, the Beetle receives an "A" for mechanicals and small car crash safety.

Our lime green metallic test Beetle came equipped with only two options: nice looking alloy wheels ($310) and a cold weather package ($150) which adds heated seats. The final price, including destination, came in at $17,835.

Finally, we must add that a 2001 New Beetle can be purchased from a low of only $14,900 for the base GL model, which is delivered [illegible] the power windows and door locks, keyless entry and cruise control. Other than that, it's still the same, trusty new Beetle in nearly every aspect.

This car may not be for everyone, but if the design captures your fancy, you'll receive a "Grade A" car with excellent reliability and resale value that is a lot of fun to drive.

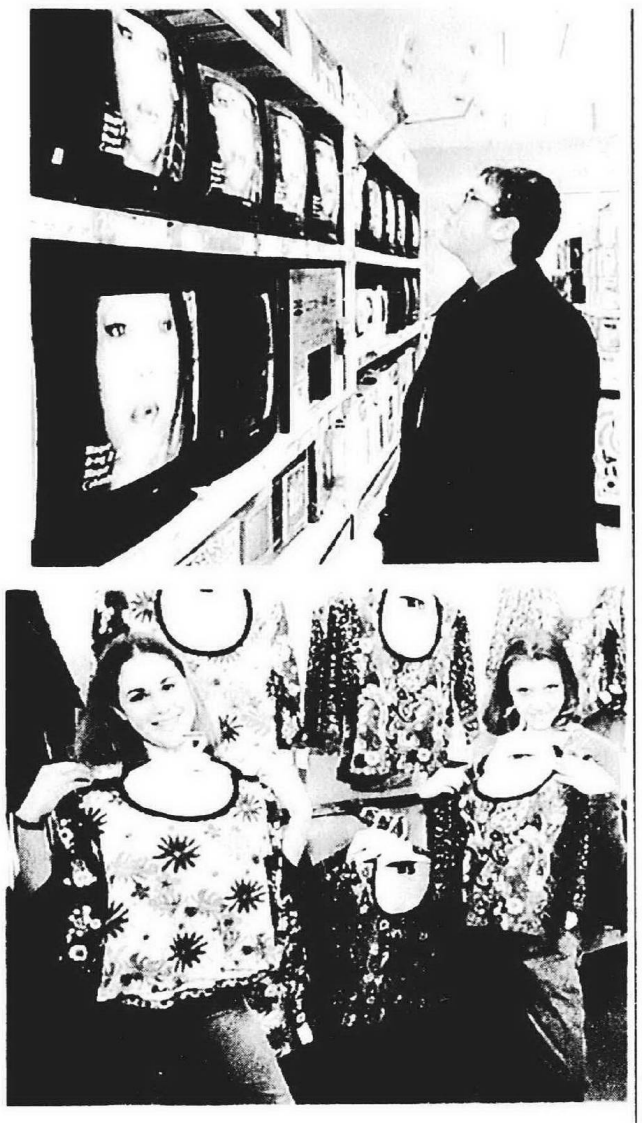
DELIVER YOUR HOMETOWN NEWSPAPER. EARN MONEY. WIN PRIZES.



The guys and gals you see here are Observer & Eccentric carriers. They're picking out some cool prizes for doing a good job delivering their hometown newspaper.

They all deliver Observer or Eccentric newspapers every Sunday morning and Thursday afternoon to homes in their neighborhoods.

It only takes them a few hours twice each week and throughout the year they have a lot of chances to win—and earn— some really great prizes.

We're looking more young people to join our great carrier team.

So, moms and dads, if you have a son or daughter 10 years or older, who would like a route, just call one of the numbers below.

Your child will learn responsibility, how to manage records, how to meet the public and a number of basic business skills—but don't tell your child that, talk about the cool prizes and let the character-building take care of itself.

And, if you'd like to get out of the house for a few hours each week and join our growing adult carrier force, we'd welcome your call.

Either way, an Observer or Eccentric carrier route can be a fun job at any age.
