Police plan tight controls for cruisers

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A larger police presence and more stringent traffic control devices are planned Friday and Saturday along Main Street in downtown Plymouth to deal with cruising problems.

As many as 12 officers, four more than usual, will monitor for trespassing, loitering, minors in possession of alcoholic beverages and public consumption of alcohol — all common occurrences this summer.

"A lot of this is weather related. It's so hot you've got to get out of the house," said Paul Sincock, assistant to the city manager. "It's late-night activity. It doesn't start until about 10:30 and runs until about midnight.

"It hasn't gotten out of control yet," he added.

City residents might want to do some advance planning to avoid getting caught in traffic snarls on Main this weekend.

AS HAS BEEN the case in recent weeks, left turns will be prohibited from southbound Main to Ann Arbor Road and to eastbound Penniman from both directions on Main, Sincock said.

Also, right turns probably won't be allowed from westbound Ann Arbor Road to northbound Main as traffic volumes increase during the night, Sincock said.

Barricades that have blocked access from Main to Pier 1 Imports, Cobbler Shoes and Real Estate One also will be placed at approaches to Farmer Jack and Ye Olde Barber Shoppe, Sincock said.

The goal is to keep young people from hanging out in those lots.

"We're looking at other options available to us like parking restrictions," Sincock added.

EIGHTY-ONE tickets, including 22 for trespassing and 16 for alcohol-related offenses, were issued last weekend on Main Street. The 81 is the most handed out in any weekend this year.

"The hot, humid weather is certainly a big draw for a lot of people," Sincock said of downtown walkers and drivers with no particular destination in mind.

"Again, we've been dealing with what's out there," said Police Chief Richard Myers. "We don't set out Friday to target a specific offense. We look for general violations and enforce whatever's out there."

Traffic was heavy last weekend but never became gridlocked, the chief added.

Both Myers and Sincock expect things to quiet down when school resumes in a few weeks.

"Typically, that's been the trend in the past," Myers said.

As of Tuesday, there were no plans to implement "the zone" — one lane of traffic in each direction on Main separated by construction barrels — to prompt cruisers to find somewhere else to go, Sincock said.

The zone, costly to implement due to DPW overtime, could be erected before the summer is over, Sincock conceded.

That's what it took last year to resolve cruising-related problems.

Schools set activity fees

The days of free after-school activities are over in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

Because of reduced revenues, school board members Monday approved, 6-0, a policy requiring students to pay to participate in athletics, cheerleading, debate, drama, forensics, marching band and pompon. Trustee E.J. McClendon was absent.

Cost for the activities will be $50 for high school students and $30 for middle school students.

"We don't like the idea of charging to participate," said Superintendent John Hoben.

"But without funds, it is either charge for participation or cut some of these activities. We felt that all the activities were important to some students, so the participation fee is the only logical answer," Hoben said.

Based on the policy, some students enrolled in activities for credit will not be charged, while other students participating for reasons other than credit will be charged a fee.

A fee will be charged when:

- The activity takes place after school.
- A stipend is paid to the activity's director.
- There is no requirement that the student participate as an extension of the regular classroom.
- There is no requirement for a student to be taking a specific class to participate in the activity.
- A student may be admitted to the activity through a skill or proficiency test or upon recommendation of the activity director.

Fees for fall sports (boys football, soccer, cross country and golf, and girls tennis, swimming, cross country and basketball), marching band, cheerleading and pompons will be collected at the high schools when schedules are picked up beginning Monday.

Family business celebrates 50 years

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Jerry Loiselle's bicycle business had outgrown the family's garage. It was 1938 and the 15-year-old entrepreneur needed larger quarters.

Not many Detroit businessmen were expanding their businesses during the Great Depression. So the landlord at the Wilson Dairy Co. couldn't quite believe Loiselle was for real.

"I had to bring my mother down to Wilson Dairy to prove it was legitimate," said Loiselle during a recent time-out at his Plymouth store.

Loiselle and his mom talked the landlord into renting space at Grand River near Wyoming for $30 a month. That didn't include heat, light or telephone costs.

"IN THE mornings, I walked with my wagon to buy a dozen coal packs that I'd burn in the coal stove," said Loiselle, celebrating his 50th year in business.

"I was selling used and reconditioned bikes and repairing bikes. I had to finish my last year (at McKenzie) high school, so I went to night school.

"I don't know what people thought. I just knew I was going to do it."

Loiselle's Detroit store, Jerry's Bicycles, operated until five years ago when a for-sale sign went up.

Loiselle's business has grown to include stores in Livonia, Birmingham, Dearborn Heights and Plymouth. Plans call for another store to open "eventually."

THE BIKE BUSINESS was Loiselle's second successful business endeavor.

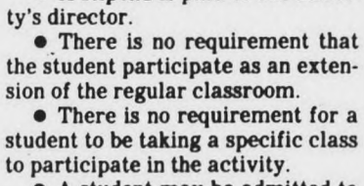

As a kid, he started a Detroit Times paper route with 27 daily customers and 32 Sunday customers.

Colleges threatened by state money chief if tuition hikes stick

By Peggy Aulino
staff writer

The state's chief financial officer lashed out at state universities for raising tuitions and threatened state cutbacks in funding if the practice continued.

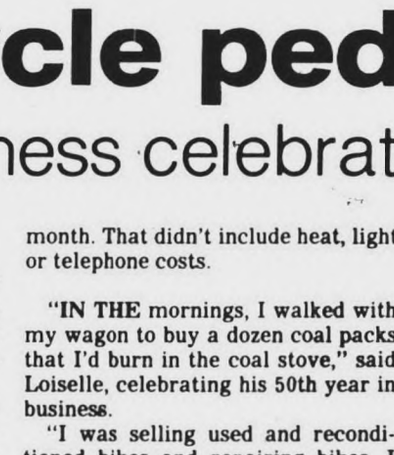

State treasurer Robert Bowman made his remarks Tuesday while on the media circuit to promote the Michigan Education Trust, a program to aid students in paying college tuition costs.

He referred specifically to Oakland University's decision the night before to rescind a 9.6-percent increase. Even so, the Rochester university's tuition will increase by nearly 10 percent this year.

"There's going to be three or four more that roll back," Bowman said during a two-hour interview with Observer & Eccentric reporters and editors. "They all will roll back or we'll be recommending to the governor that their budgets be vetoed to remind them that they can take this autonomy too far. We're all part of the same system here."

Bowman also said that the popularity of the Michigan Education Trust (MET), evidenced by over 82,000 applications in one week earlier this month, will help pressure colleges to keep a lid on tuition increases.

He also said that many critics of Michigan's prepaid college tuition plan are financial planners who don't understand the program and who fear the loss of potential business.

Building plans change

By Doug Funke

A building that a developer last year had hoped would house offices for all nonprofit organizations and service clubs in the Plymouth community is about to become a banquet hall.

Financial arrangements apparently didn't materialize so that the former Agape Christian Center at Main and Amelia could be developed as envisioned by owners James and Kal Jabara.

Nick Ristich, operator of the Cozy Cafe in the Forest Place Mall for the last 6½ years, instead will run a banquet hall/catering business there

"My route grew to where I had 450 daily customers and over 500 customers on Sunday. The station manager said I couldn't do it, and I said, 'Yes, I can,' " said Loiselle.

"I'd hire a kid to bring three different wagons loaded with papers to three different spots. When I'd get there, there'd be the papers. All I had to do was deliver them."

By the time Loiselle was 15, he'd won trips to the Indy 500, Niagara Falls and Philadelphia.

"MY PAPER route taught me a variety of valuable business lessons how to service customers, how to handle money and how to follow through with what you promise," said Loiselle, past president of the Plymouth Chamber of Commerce and Plymouth's Businessman of the Year in 1977.

Little did Loiselle suspect that his hobby, working on fellow newsboys' bikes, would lead to his life's work.

Or his family's.

For 46 years, Loiselle has been married to the former Phyllis Karaschin.

"When we first got married until we started raising a family, Phyllis came down and helped out at the store. Even after that she'd come down. The kids would spend part of the time in the playpen," said Loiselle, who enjoys golf and cycling in Clearwater, Fla., where he spends winters.

Expansion wasn't so much a business move as it was a way for the family to get involved, said Loiselle, a past president of the National Business Dealers Association.

"Our children all took an interest in the business. And the only way we could figure to keep them all involved and not step on each other's toes is what caused our expansion in the first place," said the father of four.

Larry Loiselle is president of Jerry's Bicycles. Dan Loiselle is vice president. Valerie Loiselle Scofield is treasurer and secretary. Accountant Ron Loiselle handles the finances.

LOISELLE NOTICES that unlike in the past "when bikes were thought of as a play thing, people are getting to appreciate the value of exercise, getting out and seeing the land from a bicycle seat."

What advice does the 67-year-old Loiselle have for today's young entrepreneurs?

"I'd say a person should get the best education he or she can possibly get," said the Lakeland resident. "You have to learn to balance a budget and mix that with determination. Don't be afraid of making mistakes. And take a positive attitude."

Loiselle says he's borrowed a few precepts from Norman Vincent Peale.

"Believe in yourself. That's nothing new, is it? Expect the best and get it. Don't believe in defeat. Break the worry habit."

As for getting along on the job with family members, Loiselle said it requires "give and take, just like married life. I will say you have to learn how to arbitrate. Parents have to be understanding and so do the children."

All in all, life's been pretty good to the Loiselles.

"It's been very rewarding. We're happy our children are with us," he said.

rensics will be collected during the school year.

Except for ninth-grade athletics, middle school activity fees will be collected at middle schools at designated times after school starts.

In activities involving a selection process, fees will be collected only after participants are decided upon.

FEES ARE non-refundable and provide no guarantee that a student will participate in contests or events, said Richard Egli, district community relations director.

There'll be a maximum cost per year for each student of $60 at the middle school and $100 at the high school. There also is a maximum cost per family of $90 per year at the middle school and $150 per year at the high school regardless of the number of participants or activities.

The largest amount any family will owe will be $150 per year.

Checks should be made payable to Plymouth-Canton Community Schools and should include student's identification number. Fees are being collected by the district business office.

Banquet hall planned

dubbed The Plymouth House.

Ristich, leasing the 14,500-square-foot building from the Jabaras, said he plans to exercise an option to buy the property.

"WE'RE OPENING up in November," Ristich said. "We're accepting bookings now for the holidays and next year."

The main ballroom will seat about 300, two smaller rooms about 110 each, he said. One of the smaller rooms can be opened into the main ballroom to accommodate more than 400 guests.

"The ballroom is done for the main part. We're working on the kitchen now," Ristich said.

As many as 75 part-time jobs could be available when the business takes off, Ristich projected.

"There will be jobs for dishwasher, jobs for watching the lot, jobs for cleaning up. We're definitely giving business to kids in the community first. We haven't accepted applications yet. We will shortly," he said.

Ristich said his family decided to operate a banquet hall while looking for a house in Plymouth.

"THERE'S DEFINITELY a need for it. Most facilities are booked two years out. There's business for everybody," he said.

Last year, James Jabara outlined a proposal in which the brothers would sell the building to a nonprofit holding company which in turn would lease to other nonprofits and community service clubs.

He also expected to raise money for the down payment and renovations.

Neither James nor Kal Jabara was available for comment earlier this week.

"For one reason or another, they just couldn't get the money together," said K.C. Mueller, a real estate agent who brought Ristich and the Jabaras together.

"Unfortunately, a lot of people who made pledges either had a change of heart or a change of plans," she said. "I know Jim was very disappointed.

"They're just trying to find the best possible use of the building. If one doesn't work, we go on to the next one."

Lightning makes a striking appearance

A hair salon/upper flat on Farmer Street apparently struck by lightning early Monday morning sustained damage estimated at $6,000.

No one inside the house at the time and none of the firefighters who responded to the emergency was injured, said Al Matthews, city of Plymouth fire chief.

The fire department receive the alarm at 1:04 a.m. and remained on the scene for almost 2½ hours.

"It (lightning) hit the corner of the second story," Matthews said. "Basically, the fire was within the interior walls. The fire was in three different locations.

"From what I understand, a CEMS unit was in the area. A crew member saw smoke and fire coming out of the house and alerted the residents," he said.

Raymond Simon, who operates Simon Sez salon on the lower level, said he anticipated reopening for business Wednesday. He said his shop sustained only smoke damage.

Downed wires and false alarms spawned by a spectacular display of lightning kept firefighters and police officers hopping throughout the early-morning hours Monday.

For the second time in recent weeks Matthews called on all available full-time and part-paid firefighters to report for duty. About 20 responded, he said.

"They were out on wires down all night long," Matthews said.

A telephone pole on Penniman between Auburn and Sunset caught fire at about 10 a.m. Monday. It eventually toppled in the afternoon taking down a primary line and several secondary wires.

Plymouth Township firefighters made 11 runs between 11:26 p.m. Sunday and 2:21 a.m. Monday — all for downed wires or what turned out to be false alarms, said Chuck Van Vleck, administrative assistant to Chief Larry Groth.

Attendance policy revised

A school attendance policy was approved by a 4-2 vote at a special meeting of the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education Monday.

The policy was revised in the wake of cutbacks made necessary by declining district revenues.

Dissenting were trustees Barbara Graham and Roland Thomas. Trustee E.J. McClendon was absent.

According to the policy:

- Parents won't be called about their children's absences by attendance officers. Nor will parents be able to call school personnel regarding attendance.
- Students won't be dropped from classes for violating attendance policy.
- The awarding of academic credit will be left solely to teachers, based on students' performance in meeting class requirements.
- There will be disciplinary consequences for excessive absences, "leading to administrative intervention, suspension and . . . expulsion. These consequences will be administered in cases of unruliness, insubordination and persistent disobedience rather than attendance per se."
- Teachers will be encouraged "to discuss, monitor and intervene with students about attendance," preferably after the third absence, or sooner.
- Counselor involvement "will be established as an intervention step upon teacher referral," preferably after no more than six absences.
- Ten absences will be considered excessive, requiring home contact by the student's area coordinator.

Land contract rejected — again

A land contract offer of $440,000 to buy Plymouth's abandoned 48-acre water well field in Northville Township was turned down Monday by the city commission.

Ironically, the bid was a combined offer from two principals who sued the city when neither's offer was accepted on its own several months ago.

The lawsuits subsequently were withdrawn.

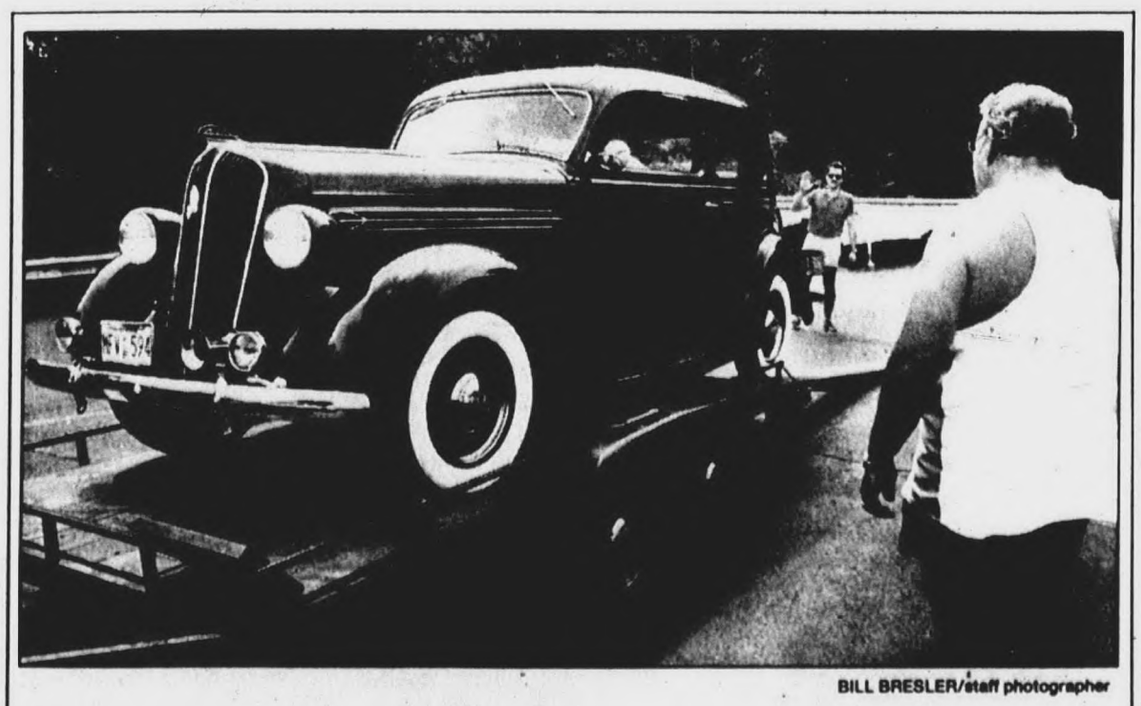

A majority of the city commission objected to terms proposed by Fairwood West II and Carrollton Arms, especially:

- Deletion of an "as-is" condition clause regarding the property.
- Recision of the deal and loss of a $22,000 deposit if the developers decided they couldn't develop the property after a 120-day inspection period.

With interest, the city could have earned about $532,000 over five years had the offer been accepted.

The well field, off Beck between Five and Six Mile, was closed in the early 1970s when Plymouth connected to Detroit's water system.

The city has been trying to unload the property for years.

Collector deals in dreams

By Tim Smith
staff writer

Almost every American boy dreams about playing in the major leagues. That dream includes swapping pocket change for wax-sealed packs of baseball cards and emulating his favorite player's batting stance in the backyard.

Chuck Scrivener has lived the American dream.

Not only did the 40-year-old Southfield resident collect cards and imitate big-leaguers as he grew up, he also played major league baseball — for the Detroit Tigers from 1975-77.

And in 1988, Chuck Scrivener helps today's youngsters keep that dream alive, selling baseball cards at Livonia's The Old Ball Park, a sports memorabilia store he manages.

While not dealing memories at the store, Scrivener relaxes with his wife, Barbara, in their Berg-Civic Center area condominium, where the music-loving former infielder is stockpiling a record collection. Baseball, however, remains an integral part of his life.

STEVE FECHT/staff photographer

Most baseball fans covet power hitters — not utility players — when it comes to buying cards, says ex-Tiger infielder and Southfield resident Chuck Scrivener. Among some of the store's more easy-to-find items is Scrivener's '77 card, which sells for 50 cents.

"IT SEEMS NOW like it was somebody else who did that, playing in Yankee Stadium before 53,000 (fans), playing in all the big league parks," said the unassuming, 5-foot 9-inch Scrivener. "I can't believe it was me."

But the utility shortstop and second baseman did share fields with greats such as Lolich, Horton, Fidrych and his personal favorite, Brooks Robinson. He stepped into the limelight after a seven-year climb through the minor leagues.

As proof, an autographed plaque from his Tiger days hangs on a wall inside The Old Ball Park. "People come in here almost every day, see the picture by the register and say, 'Is that you?' It makes me feel good."

Also available at the store are two Scrivener cards printed by Topps in the late '70s, which are known in the business as "commons" and which sell for something like 50 cents each.

That the realization of his boyhood dream turned out to be short-lived and somewhat ordinary (.190 lifetime batting average in 145 games) doesn't seem to bother the down-to-earth Scrivener, who in March left a sales career for The Old Ball Park.

"IT WAS A GOOD experience, one that I would be glad to do again," Scrivener said during a lull inside his store. "I met a lot of nice people, stayed in nice hotels and flew in big jet planes.

"As long as I live, I don't think I'll experience anything as enjoyable or satisfying as playing major league baseball."

Scrivener is low-key and realistic enough to joke about his puny batting average. He knows it probably didn't inspire many kids to be backyard Scrivener idols or to rush to the store for packs of cards that might include him.

"One of my employees marked my rookie card for $320 and put it in the display case. But we didn't get any offers," Scrivener said with a chuckle. "I don't understand it."

Lack of fame and fanfare aside, Scrivener still has his share of special memories.

His first game was in Tiger Stadium in September 1975 against the Cleveland Indians.

THE VIRGINIA NATIVE batted leadoff against Jim Bibby. After a gallant effort, he struck out swinging. "I fouled a couple of pitches to the screen."

About a week later in Milwaukee, Scrivener entered the hit column, with a line drive single to right-center against Pete Broberg. He waited until mid-'76 to crack his first homer — a three-run shot — against Cleveland's Tom Buskey.

But not all the memories were good. He was released by Detroit after the '78 season, which was spent in the minors.

Toronto subsequently signed him for 1979, but Scrivener tore a knee up during a charity basketball game. The injury, for all practical purposes, ended his career.

After baseball, Scrivener became a salesman for two sporting goods outfits in the area.

In 1981, while working at Hermans Sporting Goods in Novi, Scrivener met Mike Leahy, owner of The Old Ball Park.

"HE WAS IN there with his kids," Scrivener said. "He asked me if I'd be interested in working for him then. But I told him I was happy doing what I was doing."

Seven years later, Scrivener and Leahy finally became a team.

"I'm comfortable with the surroundings," Scrivener said. "The people here are sports-minded. I just relate well to people who like sports."

Scrivener said he is not comfortable, however, with adults who shower too much attention on him because of his one-time occupation.

"I don't like having people think a lot of me just because I played baseball," he said without bitterness. "That didn't make me any more different or special. It was just what I did best. Sometimes people go overboard because you're an athlete."

THOUGH HAPPY with his return to a baseball environment, Scrivener said he doesn't go "overboard" himself on the sport.

Other interests include softball, tennis and racquetball — and collecting rock and roll recordings.

"I have a lot of 45s from as far back as the '50s, maybe 1,500 of them," Scrivener said, listing the Beach Boys and Beatles as the artists he's collected the most. "And I have a couple hundred albums."

The former infielder said music is probably the only subject he and Barbara don't exactly agree on. "My wife enjoys jazz."

If so, that's a pretty good record itself.

Critics are not informed, says Bowman youngster's age. The state invests that money, and the child's tuition is guaranteed at any of Michigan's four-year colleges or community colleges.

The program has been hailed as a way of ensuring affordable college education for thousands of Michigan youngsters. But detractors have questioned both the state's assumptions on investments and tuition increases and also the trustworthiness of the trust's guarantee.

"I don't see where the trust can be self-supporting," said Mark D. Stenberg, a registered investment adviser with Mutual Service Corp. in Southfield.

"I see a picture 15 years down the line. The trust fund is broke and you've got parents picketing the state capital building saying, 'You promised,' " Stenberg said.

Although the education trust legislation does not obligate the general fund to cover fund shortfalls, Stenberg sees a state legislature pressured to use money from taxpayers, including those not enrolled in the program, as a bailout because politicians "don't want to go back to their districts and have to explain why the state lied" to their constituents.

BOWMAN STRONGLY contests arguments from critics who say the trust fund cannot safely earn enough money to keep pace with tuitions increases.

"There was double-digit inflation for the first 3 years of those 10 years," Bowman said of the timespan cited by critics. "I looked at a 20-year period of 5-6 percent (annual tuition increases) that still includes 3 years of inflation that this country has never seen before."

He said he feels the fund is prudently conservative by projecting annual tuition increases of 7.3 percent, although he feels the increase won't be that high.

Even though he thinks a state bailout is highly unlikely, Bowman says it would be easily justified.

"If the state needs to bail this out and does bail it out, I don't apologize to any taxpayers," he said.

"We are bailing out the school system every year," he said, referring to the $1.2 billion the legislature sent Michigan colleges this year. He pointed out that taxpayers who don't have school-age children still contribute to education through their taxes.

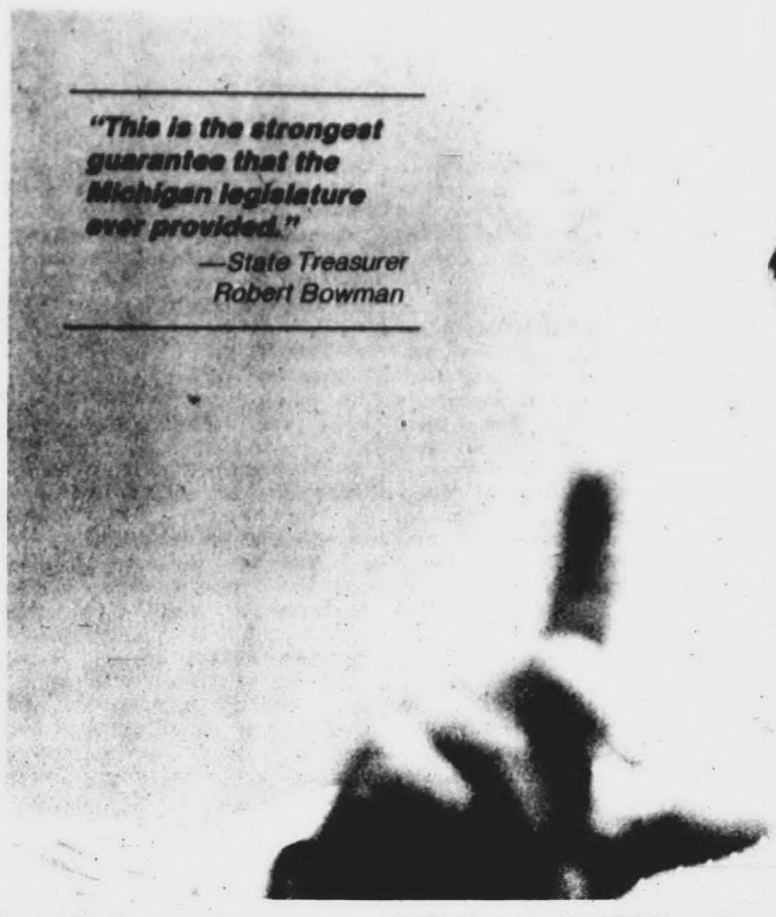

THE COMPARISON is distressing to Stenberg.

"It concerns me that the state would choose to make some special bailout money available only to the trust participants, not directly to the college because then they are not subsidizing the schools — they are subsidizing a select group of parents who chose to get involved in a program years earlier," Stenberg said. "The price of education should be the same whether or not somebody chose to enroll in a voluntary state program."

At any rate, Stenberg says it is misleading to say that the tuition is guaranteed.

"There is no guarantee that the trust will pay tuition," he said. "The only guarantee is that if the trust cannot pay tuition, proceeds will be given proportionately" to those who invested in the program.

"This is the strongest guarantee that the Michigan legislature ever provided."
—State Treasurer Robert Bowman

"We all know that a guarantee is as good as the entity guaranteeing it," Bowman retorts. "This is the strongest guarantee that the Michigan legislature ever provided."

Bowman said he's heard conflicting arguments as to whether the MET will artificially inflate or artificially deflate tuition costs.

"My sense is that the truth, as always, lies in the middle," he said. "I think what we will probably see in 10 years . . . is that tuition levels will be about the same across all schools, which means (the University of) Michigan's going to go up more slowly then the cheaper schools. We will get to a system like California or New York where the same dollar buys the same amount of credits and where you go to school isn't dependent on the size of your pocketbook but on what kind of grades you got."

CRITICISM OF the fund has been coming from those who make a living by telling people how to invest money, according to Bowman, who says some financial advisers fear the loss of $80 million in commissions over 10 years.

"Financial advisers say this is a bad deal because they don't want the competition," he said. "This is money out of their pocket."

Said Bowman: "The world is full of conflicts of interest, including the one that they (state officials) have. I don't think there are a lot of people out there that can give you a totally unbiased opinion."

Stenberg, who said he has advised some of his clients to enroll in the fund, said Bowman was wrongly accusing financial advisers of worrying about commissions. For the "vast majority," he said, "it will not hurt them at all."

MET contracts will be mailed by Labor Day

Here are some questions and answers about the Michigan Education Trust.

The state has an arrangement with Michigan saving and loan institutions. The rates "should be quite low" because "the MET will insure the loan" through an S&L, Bowman said. He has seen rates range from 8.5 to 15 percent.

Q. What can applicants to the Michigan Education Trust expect to see happen next?

A. Applicants will soon be sent a contract, which they must sign and return to the state Treasurer's office before the end of the year. The contracts "will be in the mail no later than Labor Day," according to state Treasurer Robert Bowman.

Q. Can applicants still opt not to not participate in the MET?

A. Yes, but the $25 application fee is non-refundable.

Q. How much does it cost to enroll a child in the MET?

A. It varies. If the child is a newborn, participants will pay $1,689 for each year of schooling. The amount increases with the age of the child. The cost for a 5-year-old, for example, is $1,822; a 12-year-old's fee would be $2,160.

Q. Do participants have to sign up for four years of tuition coverage?

A. No. Contracts can last from one to four years.

Q. What if a child is on the verge of entering college now?

A. High school juniors and seniors can participate, but they must pay the current tuition rate. However, that rate would be frozen for them for the course of the contract. So if tuition goes up while they're in school, they wouldn't pay an increase.

Q. Do the same amounts hold if the parents expect the child to enroll in a community college?

A. No. A flat fee of $1,104 per year was set for community colleges, regardless of the student's age.

Q. Do participants have to hand over a lump sum?

A. Participants can either send the full amount by using personal savings or they can obtain a loan and pay in installments.

Q. Will the state provide loans for admission into the MET?

A. No, but the state has an arrangement with Michigan saving and loan institutions. The rates "should be quite low" because "the MET will insure the loan" through an S&L, Bowman said.

Q. How low is "quite low?"

A. So far, the lowest rate Bowman has seen is 8.5 percent. He has seen a high of 15 percent, and the average has been about 9.5 percent.

Q. How can participants get information on various S&L loan rates?

A. The state will include with the contract a list of participating S&Ls, their MET loan interest rates and their phone numbers.

Q. What if a participant wants to get a bank or credit union loan?

A. That's perfectly acceptable, but the interest rates may be higher.

Q. What about taxes?

A. Participants can deduct MET payments on their state income tax returns.

Q. What about tax accrued on interest earned by the fund?

A. The state must pay that tax. The cost of that expense has been figured into the enrollment cost, Bowman said.

Q. Are students taxed when they receive the tuition funds?

A. Yes. Bowman said if the standard deduction doesn't increase and the trust is still treated as unearned income by the time the child enters college, he or she can expect to pay $300 to $400 a year in taxes.

Q. What if the youngster decides to go to an out-of-state college?

A. In that case, the student would receive the average tuition of Michigan public schools.

Q. If the youngster decides not to go to college, will a refund be given?

A. Yes, a refund equivalent to the tuition at the least expensive Michigan college.

Q. Is the refund given in a lump sum?

A. No. It's paid in four annual installments.

Q. Can a sibling use the trust instead of the youngster for which it was originally intended?

A. Yes. METs are transferrable to immediate family members. That includes: brothers and sisters and stepbrothers and stepsisters of the beneficiary and the spouses, children, stepchildren, adopted children, grandchildren, nieces and nephews of the MET purchaser.

Q. Does that hold if the child dies?

A. Yes. A transfer or a refund would be given in that case.

Q. Will this year's rates prevail the next time the state offers admission to the MET?

A. Most probably not.

Q. How much will they increase?

A. No one knows yet. The actuaries who monitor the MET will decide that.

Q. When will the MET take applications again?

A. That's another matter to be decided by the actuaries. Bowman said the state's goal is to take applications once a year.

Pursell could get top spot in Bush administration

By Tim Richard
staff writer

NEW ORLEANS — Others in the Michigan delegation are talking about it, even if Carl Pursell won't.

What if Pursell, 2nd District congressman for 12 years, joins a George Bush Administration, perhaps as budget director, perhaps in a top Education or Transportation department slot?

"I've got to look at November," said Pursell, 55, who is being challenged by the $250,000-plus campaign of Democrat Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor.

"I can't afford to be distracted. I've seen that mistake happen too many times," said the Plymouth veteran of the Wayne County Commission, state Senate and Congress.

AT A DELEGATION breakfast, on the steaming streets, in the Fairmont Hotel bar, the talk persists.

Pursell is close to Bush, not only because the vice president was one of his predecessors as first baseman of the House Republican baseball team but personally and politically.

Pursell was a 1979 supporter of Bush for president, introduced him around Michigan in 1980 when he won the last presidential primary, and had Bush over to his home last winter for a fund-raiser.

To close associates, Pursell has said the only reason he would leave Congress voluntarily would be to work for Bush. At the convention, Pursell, an at-large alternate for Bush, is doing political chores for the nominee.

In Congress, Pursell has advanced "rust belt" ideas on transportation and education despite the western orientation of the Reagan White House.

"Do we have the next Dave Stockman?" said one 2nd District Republican over a drink.

"I'll take it," Pursell laughed back. Stockman, of St. Joseph, was Reagan's budget director from 1981 to 1985. But by Michigan standards, Stockman was a maverick — the only member of the state's 21-member congressional delegation to oppose the 1979 Chrysler bailout.

"I LOVE my work," said Pursell, a member of the House Appropriations Committee and second-ranking Republican on the subcommittee on labor, education, health and human services.

"I've got three secretaries reporting to my subcommittee. Bush will need me there.

"I'm deputy whip. I have good leadership possibilities. I have great support from my colleagues. My health is the best it has been in 10 years.

"I want to stay in Congress and do an excellent job.

"Some of the Ann Arbor folks have encouraged me (to seek a place in a Bush administration). I don't know why they want me to move on," he said with a laugh.

BUT PURSELL knows exactly why Ann Arborites wouldn't mind seeing him move up.

For most of Michigan's 150 years as a state, the 2nd District seat practically "belonged" to an Ann Arborite. Pursell won it in 1976 after Marv Esch of Ann Arbor left to run for the U.S. Senate.

A 2nd District Republican who asked to remain anonymous predicted someone from the Ann Arbor area would run for the seat if Pursell wins a seventh term and vacates it to work for Bush. "You're the second person to ask me about it today," said the Ann Arborite in a street corner interview.

Two possibilities: Washtenaw Sheriff Ron Scheibel and state Rep. Margaret O'Connor, the latter one of the most conservative members of the Legislature.

Other Republican prospects: Sens. R. Robert Geake of Northville and Nick Smith of Hillsdale County. Smith reportedly takes a strong interest in 2nd District politics.

THE SPRAWLING district was designed in 1982 as a "safe" Republican seat. But Pursell's margin slipped from 69 percent in the Reagan landslide year of 1984 to 59 percent in the Lucas gubernatorial debacle of 1986.

It's the reason state Sen. Pollack thinks she can overtake him this year. "The Almanac of American Politics," a biennial reference work by Barone and Ujifusa, still calls the 2nd "a solid seat" for Pursell.

In the early 1980s, Democrats targeted the 5th District around Grand Rapids but gave up after moderate Republican Paul Henry rolled up growing margins.

At Monday morning's delegation caucus, Chuck Yob, 5th District chairman, offered to hold a fund-raiser for Pursell to counter the out-of-state feminist money Pollack is raising.

Pursell indicated he probably will take Yob up on the proposal.

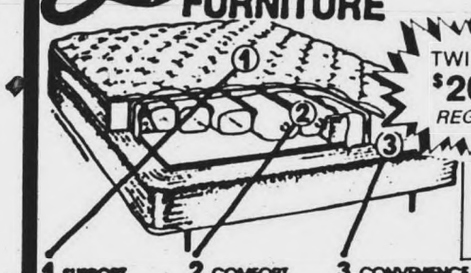

Pursell was a 1979 supporter of Bush for president, introduced him around Michigan in 1980 when he won the last presidential primary, and had Bush over to his home last winter for a fund-raiser.

Men, if you're about to turn 18, it's time to register with Selective Service at any U.S. Post Office.

It's quick. It's easy. And it's the law.

Quayle unknown to local delegates

By Tim Richard

NEW ORLEANS — Although Michigan Republican party people didn't know much about Dan Quayle before George Bush asked the Indiana senator to be his vice presidential running mate Tuesday, they are enthusiastic about the selection.

Here's what some of the western Wayne County delegates had to say about the selection this week.

Art Sippola, at-large delegate from Livonia and Kemp supporter: "I just heard of him in the last two or three weeks. With all the cameras on him (Tuesday morning), I thought something was up.

"He'll sell pretty well in Livonia. He's a youthful candidate. His track record on feminine issues is very good. He may help in the Midwest and some to the farm states. I know so little about him that I hope there are no skeletons in his closet."

Dan Piercecchi, 2nd District chairman and Bush delegate from Livonia: "I knew just his name. I'm not acquainted at all with his background. I was surprised (at Bush's choice). I was told 1,700 people signed forms endorsing Jack Kemp."

Ed Haroutunian, 17th Congressional District Bush delegate from Detroit: "I don't know that much about him."

Elaine Donnelly, non-voting delegate from Livonia and Jack Kemp supporter: "I don't know that much about him. I was very much impressed this morning (with his speech to the Michigan delegation). He's conservative. He supports what Reagan supports. He supports what Jack Kemp supports." She said Quayle will do well in Livonia "because Livonia has benefited from Reagan's policies — a boom area."

Jeff Nelson, 15th Congressional District Robertson delegate and Canton Township resident: "I heard about him a while ago, two years. He's a conservative senator, good on social issues, on key defense committees. I've never heard him speak, but I'm favorably inclined."

Dorothy Primac, Livonia resident and Robertson alternate from the 15th Congressional District: "I don't really know much about him. I heard him speak, and he sounds real enthusiastic."

Joanne Blausey, Westland resident, Robertson alternate from the 15th Congressional District: "It's the first I had ever seen him (Tuesday morning). His speech, appearance, demeanor — I was quite surprised. I expected a more well-known person. You hardly ever hear about him. He's young, looks sharp."

IT MAY BE significant that, except for U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell, only the two collegians could rattle off J. Danforth Quayle's biography while seasoned delegates drew a blank.

Pursell, 2nd District congressman from Plymouth, has worked with Quayle.

"He's my classmate, class of '76," said Pursell, referring to the year they were elected to the U.S. House of Representatives.

"If I were to sum up his philosophy in two words, they would be 'family' and 'freedom.' He's very family oriented.

"He co-sponsored the Job Partnership Training Act — the old CETA — which went through my (House) committee. Dan did a terrific job nationally.

"He goes home to his state every weekend, same as I do. He has no negatives I know of.

Art Sippola: A man on the button

NEW ORLEANS — Art Sippola has a no-lose business proposition. And all the while, he's having fun.

"I've made these personalized buttons for all the delegates," said Sippola, 53, of Livonia. He was offering them for sale for $3 to the 77 Michigan delegates to the Republican National Convention. As of Tuesday morning, he had sold more than half.

"If the delegates don't buy the rest, button collectors will," said the Comerica bank vice president.

SIPPOLA OUGHT to know about political button collectors' tastes. He owns 2,000 to 3,000 of them. On this trip alone, he has added "80 or 90." When a guy is having fun, he doesn't keep track of numbers.

Favorite 1988 acquisition: "Dukakis will do the job of 3 men." Under the lettering is a picture of the Three Stooges.

Other favorites: "Agnew for Governor" (Maryland, 1966), "McGovern-Eagleton" (briefly, the Democratic ticket in 1972), and McKinley for President (1900).

A longtime Republican worker, Sippola supported Jack Kemp for president but broke with the "Kamikaze" faction which went down in flames with the Robertson supporters early this year.

EASY GOING and soft spoken, Sippola and wife Peg are making a long vacation of this week's national convention.

"We made this a major vacation. I don't like flying, so we drove down. We toured a plantation near Natchez, drove down to Nashville and Memphis, saw the Grand Ol' Opry and Elvis' place," he said.

And on the way home, they will detour to visit friends in Atlanta.

Whether his man Kemp is tapped for vice president or not, Art Sippola has himself a no-lose proposition.

Healthy outlook

Olympic participants go for gold in golden years

By Tim Smith
staff writer

Physical fitness is the best prescription for senior citizens, said 63-year-old Joan Jasin, who competed this week in the Michigan Senior Olympics in Southfield.

"This is better than taking pills," said Jasin, a Canton resident who began jogging and swimming a few years ago after it was diagnosed she had a skipped heartbeat. At the Southfield Civic Center pool Monday, she earned first-place medals in both the 50-meter backstroke and breast stroke.

"You don't have time to sit around and think about your aches and pains," said Jasin about the benefits of exercise. "Actually, I think you have less of them."

Another senior Olympian, 64-year-old former Southfield resident Jack Hipple, said physical activity "helps me feel much better about myself, both physically and mentally."

Hipple was among 500 seniors who came to Southfield for two days of competition in the high heat and humidity Monday and Tuesday. He tried his hand at a number of events, including a basketball free-throw contest, golf putting, softball and track.

THE EXTREME, 90-degree-plus conditions did not seem to bother Hipple and several others who were interviewed.

"I just try to pace myself. I don't overexert myself," said Grand Rapids' Ray Winkler, 59, who added that the heat did not hamper his performance in a softball tournament.

As a precaution, medical personnel from Providence Hospital were on hand. Canopies gave seniors shady places to rest during and between events, while plenty of water and lemonade were available.

Oakland County Parks also offered free shuttle service between the Senior Olympics sites, which included the civic center, Southfield High and Lawrence Institute of Technology.

Because of the expected August heat, Hipple said he trained in hot weather. "It's important to practice in the conditions you'll be facing during the events."

"I can see where it would affect some people by them not being used to it," Hipple said.

SENIOR OLYMPICS chairwoman Marye Miller agreed that acclimation is important, especially for older athletes.

"If there are seniors who haven't been out in the summer, the heat would have a definite impact on them," Miller said. "One thing I will credit them with. They know what they can and can't do."

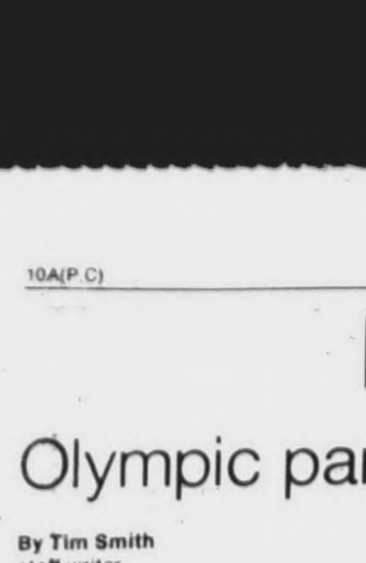

Toledo's John Boesenhofer, 73, said the competition "seems to be keeping me young for my age," but winning and losing aren't the only reasons for entering the Senior Olympics.

The athletic events provide retirees with a gathering point, a place to renew old friendships or make new ones.

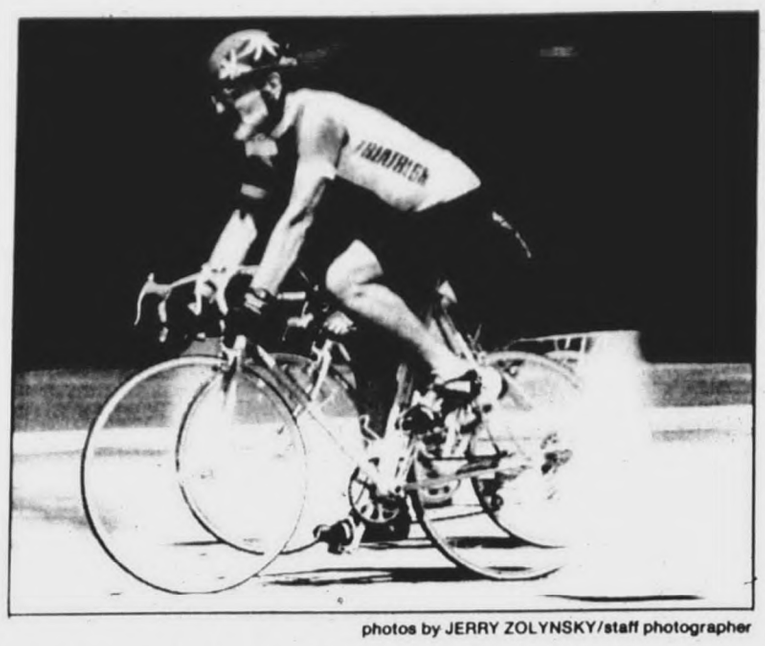

"I like the events and the people," said Canton resident Rose Augugliaro, 58, who took gold medals in both three and five-mile bicycle races Monday. "It's competition but a lot of fun."

Canton's Jasin said she enters the Senior Olympics for the camaraderie. "This is my third or fourth year. It's nice to see the same people again."

WINKLER AGREED. "This gives us an opportunity to get out and make friends and to enjoy each other's company. We can get some good exercise, but not be too serious about it."

While others sing the national anthem, Ray De Palma of Lum, Mich., runs through the crowd at the Southfield Civic Center carrying the Olympic Torch during opening ceremonies of the Senior Olympics.

He deals with bitterness quietly

By Tim Richard
staff writer

NEW ORLEANS — Mike Legg is here. He's quietly bitter. And he will get home early from the Republican National Convention with a non-voting delegate's credentials for his 16-year scrapbook.

"I go to bed at night thinking about Mike Dukakis as president, so it's easy to get fired up about George Bush for president. But the internal party stuff — those wars are far from being over yet," said Legg, who is on his way out as chairman of the 2nd Congressional District Republican organization.

"The moderates have taken over. I won't be district chair again. The long-term picture is regaining control two years from now."

'I go to bed at night thinking about Mike Dukakis as president, so it's easy to get fired up about George Bush for president. But the internal party stuff — those wars are far from being over yet.'

— Michael Legg
out-going chair
2nd District COP

LEGG IS the prototype of what other Republicans call the "Kamikaze Kempies" — supporters of Jack Kemp for president who formed a conservative coalition with the newcomers supporting TV evangelist Pat Robertson.

From September through December, there was a bloody battle over party rules during which a moderate group of Kemp backers, led by Sen. Richard Posthumus and the Anuzis brothers backed the George Bush position.

The Robertson and Legg faction of the Kemp corps held their own rump state convention, but the Bush group won three court tests and control of the national delegation.

For a long while, Legg's group threatened a credentials fight at the national convention. But late in July, the GOP's two wings cut a deal in which four Kemp delegates and a Bush delegate voluntarily resigned to make way for five Robertson backers.

"Most of them are pretty happy," said Posthumus of Kent County. "About 30 Kemp-Robertson people became honorary delegates. We've tried to accommodate them, but you can't please everybody."

CERTAINLY NOT Mike Legg.

"This is the first time I've been on the winning team and had it stolen from me," said the lawyer from Northville Township.

Reflecting on the politics with a long cigar, Legg said he didn't go through with the credentials challenge because it was "not relevant" to the presidential nomination, which Bush had sewn up.

Robertson people made a strong showing in the 2nd in the precinct delegate elections of 1986, and this year "we were about even, from the petition filings," Legg said.

"But they had 58 of our petitions thrown out on technicalities. If we'd won all the contested seats, we could still not have won control.

"What they (moderates) did was take a group of people who were on their way out the door (Legg and the Robertson folks) and kick them between the shoulder blades.

"I'M A GUY who's been involved in Livonia and Western Wayne politics for over 15 years. Over those years, I've contributed a whole lot of money to people like Sen. Bob Geake (of Northville). And he sends a post card, direct mail, to every voter in my precinct telling 'em to vote for someone else."

Moderates also distributed cards at the polls opposing the conservative coalition. "I don't know if (Congressman) Carl Pursell knew his name was going to be on that. Congressman (Bill) Schuette (of Midland) told me he didn't know his name was going to be on that. Headlee didn't know his name was on it. (House minority leader Paul) Hillegonds didn't know his name was on it . . . (GOP vice CHair) Larraine Thomas . . . (national committee woman Ronna Romney . . .

"I didn't see how it strengthens the party to kick you when you're on your way out the door. It's the only way you can look at it."

Feelings became so bitter that, when time came to patch up differences, Legg found the Bush leader, state Senate Majority Leader John Engler of Mount Pleasant, wouldn't return his phone calls. The compromise was negotiated by Robertson leaders Terry Gilsanen, Lori Packer and Harry Veryser.

"I didn't want to nix the deal," said Legg. "But I didn't want to sign my own death warrant."

CREW

Independence is key for group

A CREW HAS been created to take a critical look at the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools.

This CREW — Community Researching Educational Workings — received its charge from the school board Monday night.

Now that the group has become an official entity, it's time to get to work to capitalize on educational strengths in the district and overcome weaknesses.

When their work is done, the committee will make recommendations to the school board and work on developing an action plan to make the necessary changes.

This effort should remain free from interference from the current school board or administration.

In order for the community to believe anything CREW discovers about the school system, it must limit its connection with elected and appointed educational officials.

Residents of the community have already voiced their opinion about the way the current board and administration is handling finances through four negative votes on property tax increase requests.

ANY CLOSE TIES with the current administration during the length of this study will give the appearance of a rubber-stamp organization, especially if it comes to the conclusion additional tax dollars are needed to improve education.

If that is the finding, CREW's stance will be more credible to the community if they reach that conclusion independently.

One only needs to look to nearby Detroit to see how not to establish an independent committee.

Did anyone think the Mayor Coleman Young's casino gambling commission would come up with any other conclusion than in favor of legalized gambling? Voters saw through that attempt and voted against gambling.

In order for the community to believe anything CREW discovers about the school system, it must limit its connection with elected and appointed educational officials.

The same situation could occur locally.

That's why remaining independent is so important.

Fortunately, the committee realizes that.

"IT WAS made very clear we would work with the board, not for the board," said Annette Remsburg, chairwoman.

It will also help if the committee reaches out to the entire community, especially those not actively involved in the school system.

Since the majority of residents do not have children in school, their voice is extremely important and often unheard.

Again, the committee has taken that into account with plans to include a variety of residents in the group.

Even though this is early in the process, everything looks good. The committee has a core group of about a dozen people with two dozen more ready to serve on subcommittees.

A consultant has been working with the group to develop a scientific survey on a wide variety of topics in the district.

The committee has until the end of the 1988-89 school year to come up with its recommendations.

But based on what has occurred so far, CREW looks like its headed in the right direction.

Leadership

Needed now for tax reform

WE'VE WAITED long enough.

The state needs a plan to reform its school financing program — now.

The state government, after several attempts, has shown it is impotent to deal with this crucial issue.

The governor should appoint a person of public note with impeccable credentials to get this issue off dead center.

This person should lead a work group to study the sticky issue and make a recommendation the governor should fight with all his political power to see implemented.

Appointing a respected person to recommend unpopular solutions to political problems is a ploy that works quite well under our system.

Let's use it. The risks are too great not to.

WHEN IT comes to K-12 education in Michigan, taxpayers must either be willing to pay now with a more equitable financing system or pay later with a gun in their backs.

Unfortunately, we've waited on state government for several years in hopes it would get its act together and sort out the property tax mess. It hasn't, and prospects look dim that it will any time soon.

Meanwhile, as our children begin another school year, both our educational system and the system to finance it continue to deteriorate.

The legislature and the governor's office have been unable to muster the courage to develop a program with the political sophistication to pass the public litmus test of support.

The legislature and the governor's office have been unable to muster the courage to develop a program with the political sophistication to pass the public litmus test of support.

In short, both branches have done an incredibly bad job when it comes to this most important issue. While some lawmakers have introduced legislation to deal with the challenge, the governor's office and majority of legislators have remained nearly silent.

This both puzzles and disappoints us. Like most other taxpayers, we expect more from our elected officials. And although the issue is a difficult one, we do expect them to offer the state's taxpayers some kind of alternatives on which to say yea or nay.

That's leadership.

BUT OUR state leaders misunderstand the issue.

Illiteracy, both cultural and educational, is the problem. Wiping it out is the solution.

A tax structure that addresses fairness and equity is a step toward solving the problem. But more, we need a massive state program to combat illiteracy, a deficiency that perpetuates unemployment, higher crime rates, clogged court dockets, crowded prisons and a drug culture that threatens the existence of the system under which we survive.

We need to stop arguing about how much it will cost and look to how much a new system will save our society in the decades to come.

The governor has demonstrated courage in the past by increasing taxes to pay off the debt. We need this courage again to restore vitality to the school system which will, in turn, pay back society a thousand fold.

Appoint a person of statewide renown, and let's get on with educating our children.

Parents must monitor state education tickets

Tim Richard

"Now, for instance, you got Feldman for treasurer. That's perfect. Them people know how to handle money, y'know what I mean? Then you got Salvatory for district attorney — to keep an eye on Feldman. . . . Then you got a Mick — O'Reilly — to make sure the graft is equally distributed. And you get Nelson, an American, to make the rest of them look respectable."

That's ticket balancing by Archie Bunker, America's favorite bigot on "All in the Family."

It's no joke. In Michigan, the Democratic Party balances its education ticket that way — four men, four women, one Hispanic, a black or two, and maybe someone from the Upper Peninsula.

Republicans look for respectable professional people who maybe have been active in the alumni associations.

Usually the candidates for the six education posts — University of Michigan, Michigan State and Wayne State — rise or fall with the fortunes of the party that nominated them. Except for the teachers unions, no one much cares about them.

Until Aug. 5.

IF I WERE a parent or grandparent who had plunked down $6,700 in the Michigan Education Trust for a newborn's college tuition, I would protect my investment.

I'd spend an extra $50 a year by participating in a political party and supporting candidates pledged to hold down tuition costs.

I'd run for precinct delegate in 1990 (it's too late this year, although there may be vacancies to which you can be appointed at a district convention). And I would try to become a delegate to the state convention. It's not difficult.

The state convention is where the ticket is balanced, as Archie Bunker indicated.

But it's no longer appropriate to balance the ticket by gender, ethnic group and union affiliation. There are some honest-to-goodness issues.

SURE, 82,500 kids have been signed up for the MET. The trust fund will earn interest and will cover the kids' college tuitions when they reach 18.

That is, if the university boards don't raise tuitions faster than MET can earn interest and dividends.

But my middle-class neighbors and colleagues have been asking dozens of questions about whether MET can work. "What will happen if —" their questions begin.

Is it safe to invest in MET? Yes, if people safeguard MET by political action.

This year there will be 165,000 parents and maybe more grandparents who have a vested interest in limiting tuition increases. Next year there may be 330,000; then nearly 500,000 by 1990.

That's a formidable bloc of sophisticated voters. Unlike the American Association of Retired People, the social services providers and the paving contractors, this bloc isn't out for favors. It's protecting its investment in its kids.

A POLITICIAN serving on a university board must learn it's safer wrestling a she-bear with cubs than crossing those parents and grandparents by voting double-digit tuition hikes.

Every legislator must get several dozen individually written letters asking them to vote for appropriations that will let colleges keep pace with enrollment and inflation so that tuitions won't have to be raised.

The Democratic State Convention is Aug. 28 in Detroit's Cobo Hall. Republicans meet there Sept. 10. Sessions are open to the public.

How will the university board candidates be nominated? Archie Bunker's way? Or the parent-investors' way?

Teens cannot just disappear

To the editor:

I read, with interest your article on "cruiser tickets" in the Aug. 4 issue. The kids I know that got tickets for $205 just stepped on the parking lot for one minute to get into a friend's car that they were supposed to meet at Taco Bell where they were going to eat.

The person driving knew nothing about the gestapo tactics used on Main Street since he lives 150 miles away. All kids got tickets. They would've been gone in a minute. The "No Trespassing" sign was a little sign that he didn't see. This is not an isolated incident. I've heard quite a few similar stories, including my neighbor's son.

As the mother of three teenagers, I called city hall, the police department, the cultural center, the department of recreation and anywhere else I could think of to find somewhere the kids could go to meet without getting into trouble. There doesn't seem to be anywhere.

I realize there were problems and it got out of hand in Plymouth for awhile, but I think this is extreme. These kids are threatened with a criminal record for stepping on a parking lot in their hometown.

When my kids go to the Penn, I worry it will let out before I get there to pick them up and they might get tickets.

I'm glad the ice festival doesn't attract mainly teens because I'm positive they'd cancel it. The "cruising" on Main Street during that time is horrible! I can't get to any stores in the area and that's during business hours — not at 11 at night. (When the kids cruise.)

I realize there are trouble makers in all age groups, but it seems in the Plymouth Community, all teenagers are viewed as bad and they're supposed to disappear.

This is a lot of people's opinion who have teenagers around Plymouth.

Spelling reform not possible

To the editor:

Charles Kleber undoubtedly means well when he writes that "our country" should begin a program to reform the "irrational, inconsistent and difficult-to-learn" spelling of English words.

Unfortunately such a notion is even more irrational than the spelling of many of our words.

First of all, the movers and shakers in Canada and Australia, not to mention England can be expected to react negatively to any changes that we might propose. After all, the U.S. is just one of many, many countries in which English is either the "national" or the predominant language. Indeed, English is often and rightly cited as the main "international" language in this confusing world.

And how would new generations read the "old spelling"? Probably the way that our youngsters (decline to) read Shakespeare and Chaucer. Or would Kleber suggest that we republish millions of books and articles with the innovations that he envisions?

Kleber is correct that "other countries have already reformed or simplified their spelling." A little investigation, however, will reveal that this is possible only when the language is mainly spoken only in one country, such as Hungary, or when such changes are dictated from "on high" by the leaders of a totalitarian country, such as Albania.

Finally, the mighty Chicago Tribune tried for many years to encourage the simplified spelling of a very limited number of English words but finally abandoned the effort as hopeless.

Extended family reveals flaw in English language

Fred DeLano

All I'm asking you mothers and fathers is the question of how you refer to the mother and father of the kid who married your kid — academically, that is, and not after the old man has had a few hoots too many.

THERE IS a flaw in the American language that I hadn't thought about in a long time until sitting in Marie and Ace Cudillo's back yard at Romeo last month. I described it in the following words in an Observer column (it was before we merged with the Eccentric chain) which was published Aug. 11, 1971.

"As far as I know, there is no word which all by itself describes the relationship between the parents of the bride and the parents of the groom.

"If I confuse you, all I'm asking you mothers and fathers is the question of how you refer to the mother and father of the kid who married your kid — academically, that is, and not after the old man has had a few hoots to many.

"IF I'M NOT mistaken, the Russians have such a word — and because I pronounce it better than I spell it, I will present it as 'SWAH-hah.' In other words, I can refer to Marie and Ace by that term."

Their daughter, Sharon, had married my first-born son, David, and in 1971 Sharon came back from California to visit her parents in Romeo, bringing her 25-month-old daughter, Tracy DeLana, with her. David had died tragically in a California car accident.

The Cudillos were my first "swah-hah" but now I am similarly connected with the Smiths of Oscoda, whose son, John, married our daughter, Betty, and to the Pollocks of Missouri, whose daughter, Debb, married our son, Bob.

Granddaughter Tracy, whom I haven't seen in 17 years, now is a sophomore at the University of Southern California, and the wallet-size picture given by Marie shows that she is a true beauty. Someday I hope she'll meet grandson David Smith, her cousin who will reach the age of 28 months this coming Monday and who is equally beautiful in a rugged, energetic sort of way.

AN INTERESTING dividend of the recent visit to the three-acre Cudillo spread on the northern edge of Romeo was that it acquainted me for the first time with a Wayne State University alumni organization known as the Gas House Gang, several of their members being present for what apparently is an annual Cudillo soiree.

Once upon a time, the Gas House Gang had official status on the campus and held it for about 40 years. In 1920, when the group was formed, the school was known as Detroit Junior College. Later it became Detroit City College, and finally WSU. Basically, the "gang" was the varsity letterman's club, and in an informal way still fills that niche.

Ace qualified because he was an outstanding football halfback there in the '30s before teaching and coaching for at least 30 years at Cass Tech.

Ken Cotter, Adam Widlak, Bill Van Fleet, Tom Roberts, Al Nagy, Bert Nieman, George (Shorty) Sherman and Johnny Dodge, the noted former restaurateur, were among those who answered the roll call on the day in question at the Cudillo ranch. I was sorry such members as Tom Adams, Bill Prew and Paul Pentecost all were out of town and couldn't make it.

PENTECOST, RETIRED and living a quiet Birmingham life after many years of public relations service to the university, has since unearthed the original, official minutes book of the organization and has loaned it to me. Page One is dated Oct. 2, 1920, and starts:

"The purposes of this organization shall be: A) That this gang of men support this college to the utmost, every activity, and anything that is in any way connected with the college; B) We are absolutely opposed to any mode of dress which is unbecoming a real man; C) That we do our best to attain a high grade of scolarship (sic)."

Circa 1960 it was Article IV in their constitution, according to Pentecost, which led to the loss of administrative recognition, for it stated bluntly that qualification for membership included the provision, "must be male, white, and duly enrolled in any department of the college."

Barred because the group discriminates, the Gas House Gang has survived informally as a bunch of people with the best interests of the university at heart — as witness the many fund-raising efforts of Adams, for one — and as old grads they gather for lunch once a month, reminisce about the old days, show pictures of their own grandchildren, and joke about their golf scores.

You can find them on third Wednesdays at the Dakota Inn.

Single, childless, but bullish on tuition plan

Rich Perlberg

Bowman, the treasurer for the State of Michigan, is a star in this state.

THE FAMILY sits around the dinner table. Looking at their youngest child's favorite University of Michigan T-shirt, the parents mentally tell themselves that it is time to tell their children of a stark reality — for this family, some universities are financially out of reach.

Bob Bowman doesn't like the picture.

"The only thing that should stand between a child and a university should be the child's (ability)," he says.

Bowman, the treasurer for the State of Michigan, is a star in this state. He is a bright, young, aggressive man who makes you realize that you can't remember the name of many previous state treasurers.

Bowman is also a good interview. Fueled apparently by Coca-Cola — he brings along his own jumbo cup of Coke to an 8:30 a.m. appointment, a prudent move since his hosts only have Pepsi to offer — Bowman is an unabashed, intense and forceful proponent of the state's new prepaid college tuition plan called the Michigan Education Trust.

AT FIRST glance, it is an odd cloak for him to wear. A financial talent, he is for the moment foregoing certain Wall Street fortunes for lower paying public service. Single and childless, his passions are directed to a program embraced by the parents of the state.

He has struck a nerve. In a five-day span earlier this month, 82,495 people applied for enrollment in the Michigan Education Trust.

This is not a something-for-nothing plan. Participants must pay a minimum of about $6,700 (depending on the child's age) which is paid in a lump sum or financed with monthly payments to a lending institution. In return, the child's tuition is guaranteed at any state college or university. The program does not address other major costs such as room and board, or textbooks.

The widespread interest in the fund — the state had projected only about 5,000 applicants for the first year — demonstrates both the parental desire for their children to attend college and their concern about tuition costs. The 82,000-plus applications came without a dime being spent on advertising.

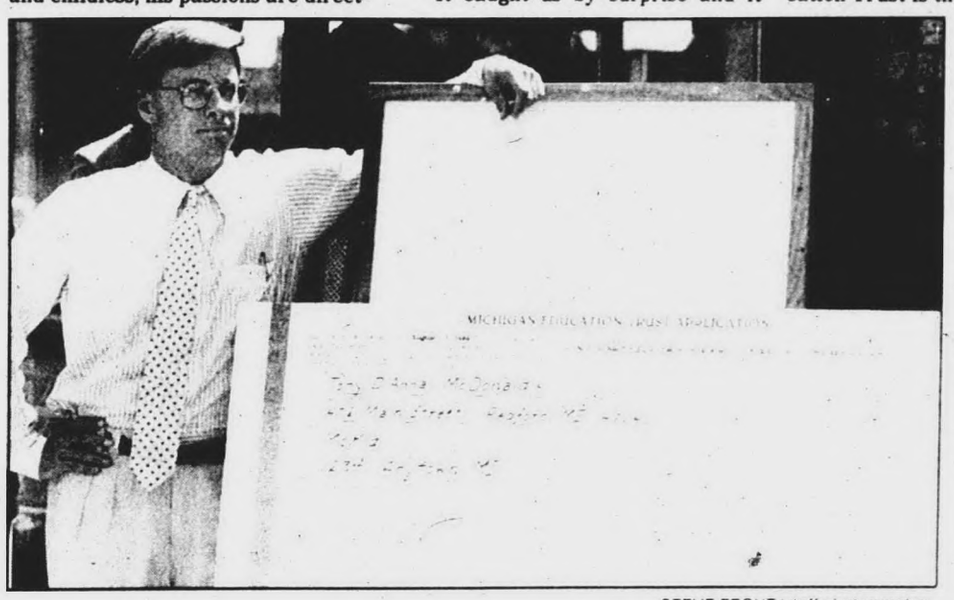

"It caught us by surprise and it shouldn't have," said Bowman, who stresses the obvious: Adequate education no longer is served by K-12 learning; at least two to four years of college is necessary.

THE MICHIGAN Education Trust has its critics. Some say the guarantee has holes; others believe the fund cannot earn enough to keep pace with tuition increases.

Bowman, a pretty genial man, admittedly gets "huffy" at such talk. Financial consultants may be worried more about losing $80 million in commissions, he suggests." Critics should do some homework before slamming a program 2½ years in the making, he says.

The fact is, he maintains, the state has given his trust a better guarantee than any other fund in Michigan. That's as it should be, he adds, since education is the cornerstone of Michigan's future.

To Bowman, his treasured Coke notwithstanding, the Michigan Education Trust is the real thing.

Canton resident Melissa McLaughlin is secretary of the Canton Historical Society. She also serves as vice chairwoman for the Canton Historic District Commission.

By Julie Brown
staff writer

AT age 31, Melissa McLaughlin hasn't lived through all that much history.

Even so, history's a subject McLaughlin that interests her. She serves as vice chairwoman for the Canton Historic District Commission and as secretary for the Canton Historical Society.

Sometimes, people are surprised that McLaughlin is as active as she is in the Canton Historical Society; they assume that society members must be older than their early 30s.

"I've had that reaction," she said. Historical society members don't have to be older, she said. They just need to be interested in history and in the cultural aspects of their community.

McLaughlin, a Canton resident, was appointed by the township supervisor to serve on the Canton Historic District Commission. The commission administers historic preservation in Canton Township. McLaughlin has served on the commission since the early 1980s. "I'm in for a few more years," she said.

McLAUGHLIN WAS active in the Canton Historical Society for about a year in the late 1970s. In 1982, she returned to volunteering with the society.

"I volunteered for something, I don't know what it was. I haven't been able to go home since," she said with a smile.

McLaughlin wanted to put her family's home on the list of historic sites in Canton "to protect it after all the work we did." Her interest in local history got a boost from that.

McLaughlin and her husband, John, have put a great deal of time and effort into fixing up their home. Restoration is probably too technical a term to describe their work, she said, but they have refurbished the home.

She believes their Canton Township home was built between 1850 and 1860. When they bought the house, it was in rough shape. It had been converted into a double flat and rented for a number of years.

"It's been a lot of work, but it's been a lot of fun too. We enjoy it."

A few years ago, McLaughlin was asked by Lillian Hauk if she would like to serve on the Canton Historic District Commission. Hauk, a Canton resident, gave McLaughlin's name to James Poole, Canton Township supervisor.

"I've been there ever since," McLaughlin said.

HER TIES to this area go back a number of years. McLaughlin grew up in Canton, graduating from Plymouth Salem High School in 1975. Her family lived out in the country, although McLaughlin's father was a businessman rather than a farmer.

McLaughlin earned a bachelor's degree in special education from Eastern Michigan University in 1978. She never taught school, however. When she graduated from college, teaching jobs were hard to find.

Many Michigan school districts were laying off teachers in the late 1970s. McLaughlin realized she would have to move to another part of the country if she wanted to find a teaching job.

"I didn't want to move out of state, so I never taught."

Instead, McLaughlin went to work at the First of America Bank in downtown Plymouth. She worked there from 1979 to 1986.

At the bank, McLaughlin started out as an accounting clerk. She moved from there to a job in the bank's personnel office.

When her son was born, McLaughlin decided to stay at home. She wanted to be able to spend time with her son, and also wanted more time to work with the historical society.

"I just felt that I couldn't do both as well as I wanted to." She and her husband, John, have one son, 2½-year-old Ian.

McLAUGHLIN DOES much of her work with the historical society while Ian attends nursery school. The society is a volunteer organization. Among other activities, its members operate the Canton Historical Museum, at Canton Center and Proctor roads.

McLaughlin and other historical society members have been busy in recent weeks preparing for the society's annual ice cream social/arts and crafts fair. That event, a fund-raising project, was Aug. 13-14 at the museum.

She and fellow members of the Canton Historic District Commission are excited about plans taking shape for a historical village in Canton.

That village is to be at Cherry Hill and Ridge roads. Canton Township trustees recently authorized the historic commission to proceed in seeking bids for moving and renovating the Bartlett-Travis farm house.

Renovation of the Cherry Hill School, also at that site, is under way; township trustees recently approved a bid to complete another phase of that project. Commission members hope to move the Hough School, now at Old Haggerty and

Friendship's a benefit of coordinator's job

Although she is the senior citizens coordinator for the city of Plymouth, Carol Donnelly also enjoys working with children.

"I've always been told I was good working with all ages of people," said the Plymouth Township resident, who has been senior citizens coordinator since 1981.

"I like working with kids too. I like being liked and so do they. Kids are great."

Donnelly's own children are just about grown. She doesn't have any grandchildren yet.

"Right now, I really like to fuss over little kids," she said.

Donnelly will someday be an indulgent grandmother.

"I will spoil every one that comes along," she said with a laugh.

DONNELLY WORKS for the city of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Department, and is based at the Plymouth Cultural Center. The programs she supervises are for Plymouth seniors, but also include Plymouth Township residents and those from other neighboring communities.

"All of our travel programs serve neighboring communities," she said.

Some Detroiters go on those trips with friends or relatives from Plymouth.

DONNELLY HAS seen programming for seniors change with the times.

"Programming is really changing from what it was 10 years ago," she said.

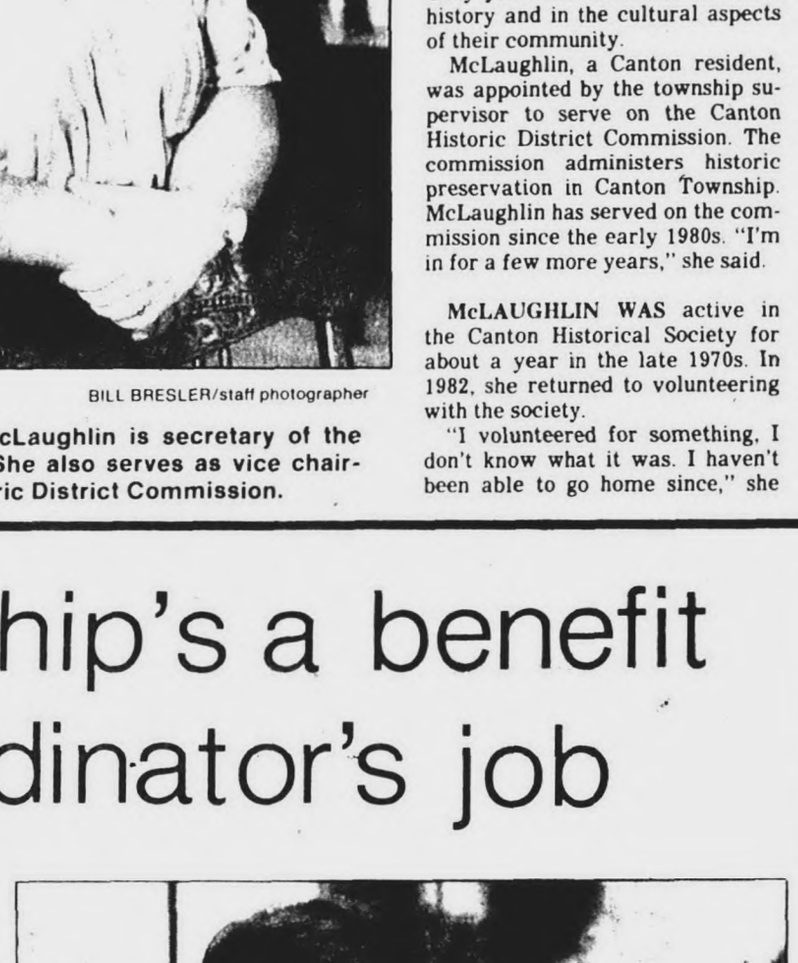

The younger retirees, ages 55 to 60 or so, don't have the same interests that older seniors do. The needs are different, Donnelly said.

The younger retirees are more active and often more well-educated. Many love to travel.

"So programming is changing," Donnelly said.

The younger seniors enjoy such activities as golf, baseball and volleyball. Often, the men are looking for athletic activities that are more competitive.

IN THE 1970s, Donnelly started working part time at the skate shop at the Plymouth Cultural Center. She then managed the skate shop for a number of years. When the job of senior citizens coordinator became available, Donnelly was asked if she would be interested.

Carol Donnelly is senior citizens coordinator for the city of Plymouth. The Plymouth Township resident has held that job since 1981.

At that time, Donnelly, a 1960 graduate of St. Theresa's High School in Detroit, didn't have specific qualifications for the job.

Donnelly, did, however have plenty of experience working and living with people. She and her husband, Michael, have six children.

Michael Donnelly is an electrician, working for Howard Electric in Detroit. The couple's youngest child is a senior at Plymouth Salem High School; the oldest, 25, is a graduate of Northern Michigan University.

DONNELLY'S JOB as senior citizens coordinator started out as three days per week, and later became a full-time job. She also works on other Parks and Recreation Department programs, including the youth soccer program.

Donnelly became involved when her children were in the soccer program.

"I'm not really an athlete to speak of," she said.

Her husband and children have been involved in sports.

The Farmington Falcons, a group of Special Olympics athletes, were incorrectly identified in the Thursday, Aug. 11, Observer as being from the Farmington Training Center. The athletes are from the South Oakland Skills Center at Farmington High School.

"I enjoy watching."

She enjoys attending her children's games and meets.

DONNELLY HAS seen parents' attitudes change over the years. Parents who have children in sports aren't always as well-behaved as they could be. Some are rowdy and engage in name-calling at athletic events.

"Let the children play their own game," is Donnelly's advice for parents. "Don't try to run it for them."

It is important to let a child be himself or herself, Donnelly said. Children need to be allowed to pick their own activities, rather than being pushed into something they don't care for.

"Mine were involved in a lot of things," Donnelly said.

If the Donnelly children signed up for an activity, such as an arts and crafts class, they had to finish that activity. They weren't required to sign up for the class again, but had to give it a fair chance.

"You have to do it that way," Donnelly said.

Donnelly's own upbringing and that of her husband were similar, with the parents involved in their children's activities.

WHEN CAROL Donnelly started working at the Plymouth Cultural Center, her children were involved in skating. Her son played hockey; the couple's five daughters were involved in figure skating at different times. Although Donnelly enjoyed her work, she also found the extra income came in handy to help cover expenses.

Raising six children has been, and still is, a challenge for Donnelly. But she has enjoyed the time she spent caring for her children.

"And I really had fun," she said.

She recently visited her daughter in Connecticut, traveling there with another daughter.

"Now that they're adults, you can do more with them," Donnelly said.

She enjoys no longer being the "mean old mom."

"You're just a good friend of theirs," she said.

DONNELLY HAS found living in the Plymouth community has helped her in her work. She has been able to develop close friendships with some of the local seniors.

"So it's been kind of nice for me," she said.

She enjoys being a part of the seniors' lives. Some see her almost as a granddaughter.

The Donnelly family has lived in Plymouth Township for 17 years, having moved from the city of Detroit. Donnelly has seen the area change during that time. When the family moved out here, the area west of Sheldon Road was farmland. It is now all subdivisions.

The Donnelly children were active in the 4-H Club program in their younger days. These days, not as many local children are involved in 4-H.

Donnelly is looking forward to continuing as senior citizens coordinator for Plymouth.

"I wouldn't mind retiring from this job 10 or 20 years down the road," she said.

Warren roads, to the village as well. A living farm could someday be based at the site, McLaughlin said, along with other historic structures.

"We haven't got a name for it yet," she said of the historical village.

CANTON TOWNSHIP trustees have supported the commission's efforts, she said. State Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, has agreed to help the commission obtain state grant money for the project. Although the project will be costly, it's also worthwhile.

"It's just such a good idea, it's hard to vote no against it."

McLaughlin said she believes it is important for people to have a sense of where they have come from.

"I think it's of paramount importance, I really do." Having some knowledge of our history helps to preserve values and mores, she added.

This area was for many years primarily an agrarian society, she said. It included a number of self-sustaining farms. Those farm families made only occasional trips to town for such items as coffee, sugar and bolts of fabric.

It's easy for children — and even adults — to think this area was always just as it is now. In fact, the area was very different as recently as 50 years ago, McLaughlin said. People need to understand that.

Music

Sweet sounds abound at park

By Julie Brown
staff writer

When Karen Chapin was planning a musical performance in Plymouth, songs related to trains were logical choices.

"I just figured trains mean so much to Plymouth."

Chapin performed Wednesday, Aug. 10, during a "Music in the Park" concert held in downtown Plymouth's Kellogg Park. The noon-concert series is sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

In planning her musical performance, Chapin, a lifelong Plymouth resident, talked with her husband about what songs to sing. They came up with a number of songs related to summer travel and modes of transportation.

Among the songs she sang was "City of New Orleans," originally performed by Arlo Guthrie. Chapin also performed Gordon Lightfoot's "Canadian Railroad Trilogy" during the concert.

"I did a lot of Gordon Lightfoot songs. My son likes them." Chapin also likes Gordon Lightfoot's music.

DURING THE concert, Chapin sang and played the guitar. She also played the banjo.

The concert was Chapin's first in the "Music in the Park" series. Chapin teaches music, but doesn't do much performing these days.

"I liked that. It's fun," she said after the concert. Even the heat wasn't too bad during the concert.

Chapin enjoyed her recent performance so much that she forgot she was being paid for her time and talents. She also teaches guitar at home during the summer. Chapin knows it has been a good lesson if she forgets to ask for the check.

Chapin — no relation to the late musician Harry Chapin — is a music teacher at Our Lady of Good Counsel School in Plymouth. She teaches first through eighth grades, and has been at that school for 5½ years.

Several years ago, Chapin taught in the Plymouth school district. She spent five years as a music teacher, mostly at Miller Elementary School and also at Isbister and Smith elementary schools.

'If they don't like something, they'll let you know. They're very open about it.'
— Karen Chapin, music teacher

Chapin, a Plymouth High School graduate, received a bachelor's degree in music from the University of Michigan in 1971. She and her husband, Clark, have one son, 9-year-old Bill.

CHAPIN HAD the support of many fans during her concert in Kellogg Park, including her in-laws and parents, her sister and family, Chapin's son, Our Lady of Good Counsel students and others.

"It makes it easy," she said. "You look around and find a few friendly faces."

Members of the First Presbyterian Church of Plymouth also were at the concert. Chapin is a member of that church and is director of the middle school choir. She sings in the adult choir and plays in the bell choir at the church.

Performing in Kellogg Park for an audience made up mostly of adults was enjoyable for Chapin. At Our Lady of Good Counsel School, she works mostly on children's music, although the older students are capable of doing more advanced work.

"The adults don't get up and run around" during a performance, she said.

In her music classes, Chapin encourages students to move to the beat of the music and even to dance. She doesn't want chaos in her classroom, but encouraging students to move to the music enters into their ability to play musical instruments.

Chapin has also found that adult audiences tend to be more polite. They are not as direct as children are in evaluating a performance.

"If they don't like something, they'll let you know. They're very open about it."

in the Park" series, sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

This summer's final concert is from noon to 1 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 24. At that concert, performer Ronnie J will sing and play the guitar. The weekly concert series began June 22.

"I think it's been very well-attended," said Lois Gilmore, chairwoman for the arts council's summer concert series. "Of course, it's hot, but people come anyway."

The weekly concerts appeal to people of all ages, she said. Young mothers with children attend the concerts, as do senior citizens and business people.

In planning the concert series, PCAC staffers and volunteers try to include a variety of music, said Gilmore, a Plymouth resident.

She is a piano teacher and knows many area musicians. Local musicians are considered first. Among the performers are winners of the PCAC's student competitions.

The Arnoldt Williams Music Store in Canton is also a source of musical talent, Gilmore said. Many of the musicians have performed in "Music in the Park" concerts in previous years.

"I enjoy doing it. I think it's really a nice service to the community." It is beneficial to expose children to a variety of music, she said.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Among those enjoying the "Music in the Park" concert are Wava Hanna (left), Linda Hensley and her daughter Samantha, and Cecil Hanna. The summer concerts, sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council, draw many people to Kellogg Park.

Ismaili Muslim sect leader blesses first U.S. mosque

By Bob Sklar
staff writer

The spiritual leader of 1 million Ismaili Muslims recently prayed for rain and peace in blessing a new mosque in Farmington Hills. It is the first Dawoodi Bohra prayer hall in the Western Hemisphere.

After hearing about the U.S. drought, Dr. Syedna Mohammed Burhanuddin of Bombay, India, said through an interpreter, "I prayed for rain."

His Holiness, as followers call him, shared a moment with the press before a daily afternoon prayer service. Worshipers at the five daily prayer services face East, toward the holy city of Mecca in Saudi Arabia.

A spry 75 and a self-proclaimed ambassador of peace, His Holiness also prayed for continued American prosperity and for "all people who live in this country to live happily and peacefully."

The 3,000 Dawoodi Bohra followers who live in the United States "are very happy and are living in comfort," he said.

Farmington Hills was chosen for the Dawoodi Bohra's first mosque in the Western Hemisphere because of the religious sect's concentration of followers within five miles of the city.

About 1,300 Dawoodi Bohra followers from Los Angeles, Houston, Dallas, Chicago, New York, Toronto, London, Ohio, Sri Lanka and the United Arab Emirates attended the recent blessing of the 4,800-square-foot mosque.

"THIS IS special," said Livonia resident Shaikh Nooruddin Yamani, president of the 35-family congregation.

"His Holiness resembles Mecca for us," said follower Dawood Diwan of Los Angeles. "You can compare his visit to that of the Pope."

"What people desire is closeness," said Dr. Shabbir Shakir of Bakersfield, Calif. "We want to be close to him. That's the first doctrine of our belief."

The wood, brick and clay mosque on Orchard Lake Road near Eight Mile, is divided into two sections — the masjid (prayer hall) and the shanan (multipurpose room).

His Holiness, sporting a long white beard and dressed in traditional garb, the libasul-anwer and topi (hat), sat in a white brocade chair with a pillow underfoot as he blessed followers. He gave each follower a white handkerchief. Special visitors received a wool prayer shawl.

This marks His Holiness' third visit to the United States. He blessed the ground for the new mosque in Farmington Hills during his last visit in 1986.

Considered a small sect of the Muslim religion, Dawoodi Bohra beliefs are based on the teachings of Fatemi imams 885 years ago. A Fatemi imam founded Cairo, Egypt, in 969 A.D.

HIS HOLINESS was raised and taught in the Fatemi philosophy of literature, art and economics. He followed his father as a leader of the sect and is the religion's 52nd imam in the Fatemi tradition.

He holds a doctor of theology degree from Aligarh Muslim University in India and a doctor of Islamic sciences degree from Al Azhar University in Egypt.

His sect prides itself on allegiance to discipline, education, tolerance, generosity, piety, moral values, patriotism and law and order.

Palaces should be for public, not private moral perspectives

Rev. Lloyd Buss

It's supposed to be part of the American dream. The Palace. Promoted as an entertainment center, featuring state-of-the-art facilities, the Palace is being presented as the fans' dream place.

Constructed with private capital, the Palace seeks to facilitate that return of investment that matches opportunity with ambition. The owners were convinced they could make money for themselves by providing this means of entertainment for the public.

The Palace caters to the elite. John Ciszewiski, vice president for corporate sales, was quoted in the news media that the suite holders are "what made this building possible."

Suite holders are the ones who spend from $30,000 to $120,000 a year for a suite, with a minimum signup for three years. Suite holders also enjoy a designated turning lane on to Lapeer Road (paid for by suite holders?), a private entrance and a restaurant open only to suite holders on event nights.

A COALITION of labor unions has protested the absence of union workers in the Palace's labor force. They are charging the Palace with paying substandard wages and offering poor benefits.

Bill Newton, director of human resources at the Palace, was quoted as saying that "management has not discriminated against unions and that wages and benefits are competitive with other Detroit area entertainment centers."

"A union stagehand making $13 an hour at Cobo Arena would make $2-3 less at the Palace," he also said.

So much for competitive wages.

THE PALACE is a few miles north of the Silverdome. The Silverdome is still being supported with a special grant from the state of Michigan to make ends meet. Both the Palace and the Silverdone are in Auburn Hills, with easy access to I-75.

Auburn Hills wraps itself around the eastern and northern edges of Pontiac.

Pontiac has watched its economic base erode over the past several decades. The automotive factories that provided a solid base of employment for years have moved out. Per capita income is much lower than the per capita income of Oakland County.

Median cost (translate that as worth) of housing is nearly two-thirds less than for the rest of the county. Pontiac's unemployment rate is higher than in most other cities in Michigan and under-employment is a common experience.

WHY ARE we so often surprised when the moral, emotional, mental and psychological fabric of our society is found wanting and the experience of daily life is a nightmare instead of the American dream?

Why are we so often surprised or disappointed when private gain is desired over public good?

Why are we so often disappointed that the quality of public life does not match our expectations?

Palaces have always been associated with elitism. They were designed for private use and not to serve the public good.

THE AMERICAN dream needs something more than Palaces. The American dream needs to unfold a hope and a path for life in a community that lives responsibly for one another.

The Rev. Lloyd Buss is pastor of Abiding Presence Lutheran Church in Rochester Hills.

Halboth family tradition to continue on Sunday

A tradition will continue Sunday, Aug. 21, at Grace Lutheran Church in Redford, when Vicar Timothy P. Halboth occupies the pulpit at the 9:15 and 11 a.m. services.

He will represent the third generation of Halboths to preach at Grace Lutheran Church, following in the footsteps of his grandfather, who was pastor from 1945 until 1971 and his father, Victor Halboth Jr., who has been pastor of the church since 1957.

His father will conduct the liturgy at both services and his brother, Dr. Mark Halboth of Livonia, will serve as one of the elders.

A graduate of Redford Union High School and a 1985 graduate of Concordia Lutheran College in Ann Arbor, he recently completed his internship at Ascension Lutheran Church in Torrence, Calif.

He will return to Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, Mo., where he is enrolled in his eighth and final year of ministerial study.

Do gerontologists think people live to age of 200?

A. Jolayne Farrell

Dear Jo:
I have a couple of questions for you. The first — what is the difference between the terms life expectancy and life span. The second — do gerontologists envision man living for say — 200 years or more.

Mr. F.D.,
Faithful Reader

Dear Mr. D.:
The terms differ.

Life expectancy refers to the average number of years of life expected for an individual in a given population.

Life span is the maximum number of years of life possible for a species.

Your second question is quite thought provoking.

Researchers in fields related to gerontology have found ways to increase both the life expectancy and life span in animals. But, so far, with humans it is somewhat different.

There has been a great deal of success in the last hundred years in increasing the life expectancy of people living in developed countries such as ours. The credit goes to major improvements in nutrition, health care, sanitation and housing.

Life expectancy has risen from 46 to 71 years for males and from 48 to 78 for females since the turn of the century. More people are living to old age now than ever before in recorded history.

The life span for humans has remained fixed at about 115 years for all or recorded history.

Although the prospect of increasing the life span of humans is exciting, I doubt if we will see it change in our lifetime.

The present focus of aging research is directed toward the prevention and treatment of disease and health promotion and maintenance so that the quality of life will improve for all members of society.

Dear Jo:
I am 76 years old and live on my own. I don't mind my age except for a few "little" inconveniences I have. For example, I seem to always have a dry mouth. Is this just something we have to put up with when we get old?

Mrs. E.B.,
Michigan Senior Citizen

Dear Mrs. B.:
With aging there is a slight decrease in the production of saliva. The amount of dryness is usually negligible and more older people do not find it a problem.

A dry mouth becomes a problem when it's associated with the taking of both prescription and over-the-counter drugs. More than 200 medications, including antihistamines, decongestants, diuretics and drugs used to treat Parkinson's disease, ulcers and cancer can cause a dry mouth.

Other causes of the problem are smoking, drinking alcoholic and caffeinated beverages and eating spicy foods.

You should discuss your concern with both your doctor and your dentist because treatment of a dry mouth depends on the cause.

The treatment may be as simple as increasing your daily water consumption or using an oral rinse regularly. Sometimes an artificial saliva is prescribed.

Saliva is essential for good oral health. Neglecting a dry mouth can lead to oral tissue breakdown, tooth decay, gum disease and poor fitting dentures.

State Bar supports proposed ATV rule

The 26,000-member State Bar of Michigan has added its name to a growing list of concerned groups supporting state legislation to regulate the use of all-terrain vehicles.

At its July meeting, the State Bar's 27-member Board of commissioners, the Bar's governing body, voted to "actively support" Senate Bill 708, which calls for a 16-year age limit on ATV drivers, mandatory helmet use and eye protection.

The bill was introduced this spring by Sen. John J.H. Schwarz of Battle Creek.

The age restriction would affect drivers only on public land. On private land. The bill has no age restriction, but calls for parental supervision. If enacted, the law also would punish ATV drivers under the influence of alcohol or drugs the same as on-road vehicle drivers.

"This makes it nearly unanimous," said Dr. Fred W. Bryant, president of the 11,000-member Michigan State Medical Society. "It seems nearly every concerned group is backing this bill to protect our children. The only group against it is the Michigan Motorcycle Dealers' Association."

MMDA president Ron Sangster has indicated his group will continue to fight the bill as long as it has the age restriction.

By Alan Ferrara and Dan Boyce

Getting ahead financially is an achievable goal for most people if careful planning is done. Unfortunately, financial planning is often put off until some unspecified later date. This month's profiled family, Roger and Jenny Lyle, have no such problem.

Roger and Jenny are only in their mid-20s and have been married a little more than a year. They rent an apartment in Troy and would like to buy a house as soon as possible. They have started a savings account for this goal and have accumulated $5,400 thus far.

Roger is an architect earning $31,000 per year; Jenny works as a nurse with a yearly income of $22,000. They are very careful to add $500 each month to their house purchase savings account. They plan to have children two to three years in the future.

BESIDES THE savings account earmarked for the house, they have two automobiles and a coin collection Roger started years ago. Their debts include a $2,000 auto loan, a student loan from Roger's schooling, and several outstanding credit card balances. The credit card debt increased substantially in April when they found that they owed additional income tax of $1,500.

This condition of being 'house poor' can be a major impediment to reaching other financial goals.

They write, "We have been reading your column with interest. We wonder whether we are managing our money well and would appreciate any comments on a more effective use of our savings."

We applaud their discipline in saving the $500 per month on a regular basis. This habit will form the basis of a solid long-term financial picture.

They should take steps to reduce the credit card debt. The interest rate on such debt is very high, and deductibility of this interest is being quickly phased out. We suggest they get rid of this expensive debt.

On the other hand, the student loan has a relatively low interest rate and should be paid off as slowly as possible. Apply only the minimum monthly payment to this loan.

Based upon their current withholding rates, we calculate that they will again face an income tax bill next April because they have few deductions. Moreover, they may be subject to a penalty for underwithholding, since they will not meet either of the following criteria for "penalty proofing" their withholding.

TO GUARD against penalties, they must withhold at least 90 percent of the tax due for the year, or alternatively they must have an amount withheld which is equal to last year's tax liability. They should adjust their withholding to meet one of these criteria.

As we've noted in previous columns, a will is an important legal document to obtain. Until they have children, simple wills will probably be an adequate estate plan for the Lyles. Perhaps even the simple Michigan Statutory Wills would provide an adequate stop-gap measure for them.

We also note their lack of renters' insurance. This is a significant oversight on their part. If there were fire or other major loss, they would find their other goals set back significantly. We suggest a renters' insurance policy with a replacement cost rider.

Also, Roger should consider putting his coin collection into a safety deposit box or adding a personal property floater to this renters' policy as a specific item of coverage in his policy. Most policies have "inside limits" or maximum coverage of $500-$1,000 on items of unusual value. This includes items such as coins, currency, musical instruments, furs, art, etc.

Their house savings account is held in a regular bank passbook savings account. We would recommend that they keep this money in a money market fund. This increases the interest earned on the account, and it keeps the money available at any time without penalty. These accounts also are not subject to any fluctuations in value, as would be the case with some other investments.

ROGER HAS access to an employer savings plan (not a 401K) on the first 5 percent of his income. For every after-tax dollar Roger puts in, his employer would match 80 cents. This amount is immediately vested and available. Roger has not joined this plan because he sees it as decreasing their ability to save for the house. He doesn't want this money tied up until retirement.

We suggest he rethink his position on this savings plan. He can withdraw money from the plan at any time, as long as he is willing to pay the income tax and the 10-percent penalty on his earnings and the company contribution. Because the 80-percent company contribution more then offsets any tax liability he would incur, this fund could be an effective way to help build their house purchase fund. He might also be able to borrow his balance from this plan and avoid tax consequences altogether.

When they buy the house, they should not be overly aggressive in picking the largest house they can possibly afford. This condition of being "house poor" can be a major impediment to their reaching other financial goals.

Granted, some people have done well even though they have stretched their finances to the limit in buying a house, but more often than not, other goals are perpetually put on the back burner due to the cash flow demands of a large house.

There is also the possibility that Jenny may want to stay home for a period of time when they have children. If they are encumbered with a large mortgage, they may not have this option. They can always "trade up" to a larger house later on as circumstances allow.

Travelers' aid: offices on call

By Mary Rodrique
staff writer

Everywhere Office Network is to business travelers what resort hotels are to vacationers — a one-stop service providing business offices from coast to coast.

Need a computer? No problem. Could a legal secretary be of help? EON can summon one from its data base. How about an interpreter? That can be arranged, too.

EON hopes to offer its clients everything needed to conduct business successfully away from the home office, right down to the secretary and a pot of coffee.

"We provide a professional environment for professional people to conduct business," said Claudia Alexander, co-founder of EON.

EON HAS BEEN headquartered in the Livonia AmeriCenter since June 30. Incorporated last February, EON's three partners immediately began working on creating a nationwide network of member offices in cities like Miami, Atlanta, Chicago and Denver — industrial and business centers that attract a preponderance of business travelers.

Member offices are under contract to make office space and services available on an as-needed basis. Some member offices may have just a few suites for rent. Others have a full cadre of office space.

Another bonus — space can be reserved through a travel agent the same way an airline or car rental is booked.

ALEXANDER, WITH partners Cynthia Stajos and Sharon Stankovich, feel like pioneers in a field they hope will take the corporate world by storm.

"This is a brand-new concept, bringing together three successful business entities: the travel agent, the business traveler and the office," Alexander said.

While many hotel chains offer business travelers special perks, including use of office equipment, EON's founders said they are the first independent company to offer business travelers temporary offices away from home.

The founders are relying on travel agents to help sell their product. Offering the travel agent "at least 12-percent commission at a time when hotels and airlines are cutting commission" should guarantee their service is at least pitched to prospective clients when travel plans are booked, they said.

BEST FRIENDS Alexander of Union Lake and Stajos of West Bloomfield began dreaming up the concept 2½ years ago. They poured over travel statistics from the government and airlines. Their business brochure quotes a figure of 200 million women and men traveling for business each year. The market seemed ripe for EON.

"I've wanted to go into business for years," said Alexander, who has a background in real estate and sales management.

Working together with a consultant, they were paired with Stankovich, a Canton Township resident with a financial management background. The trio clicked instantly, she said.

THE MEMBERSHIP drive to attract businesses into the shared office network is officially over for now.

"We could go as high as 400 (members) by September," Stajos said.

"We've got all of Michigan covered, and Miami, Fort Lauderdale, Phoenix, Atlanta, Washington D.C., north Virginia, Minnesota and Chicago."

Future target cities are Boston, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Although overtures were made in at least one city, EON doesn't accept exclusive contracts with a particular office because "we can't limit ourselves. We're working together for mutual benefit," according to Alexander.

SOME MEMBERS of the network have legal secretaries, interpreters and legal libraries available. All special amenities are on file in EON's computer data bank, so clients can be matched to their needs.

EON is a better alternative than conducting business in hotel suites for a number of reasons, the partners said.

"Hotels can be an expensive alternative," Alexander said.

"For instance, an MCI affiliate had a major presentation in Dallas. A 10-page paper had to be typed

THEY ASK whether they should buy personally owned life insurance. Through their employers, Roger has $50,000 and Jenny has $22,000 in coverage. They note that they were each self-supporting prior to marriage and, if pressed, each could manage on their own.

Unless they are concerned about future insurability, we don't see any need for additional insurance at this time. However, they should review this when they buy their house and again when they have children.

Jenny has no disability insurance coverage at the hospital where she works. In many respects, a long-term disability could be more financially devastating than her death, as there could be ongoing care costs.

They should protect against this serious financial loss by buying a personal disability policy on Jenny. A non-cancellable, guaranteed-renewable contract with a cost-of-living increase feature is recommended.

Roger and Jenny have shown the ability to follow through on building assets for their major financial objectives. This discipline will stand them in good stead over the long haul. By following the recommendations, we believe they will be in a better position to become financially secure and meet their goals as rapidly as possible.

fast. The hotel charged $150 for the service. And the corporation paid that amount," she said incredulously.

EON rates vary from $13.50 to $25 an hour, depending on location and services rendered.

"At two hours — maximum it would take for a word processor — for the job at our top rate, it would cost only $50," Alexander said. "That's a lot of wasted money, and the hotel didn't have time to correct the mistakes."

"The IRS started cracking down recently on what could be allowed as a business deduction while on the road," Stajos said. "In our offices, with desk, phone and office equipment, the expenses are a full write-off."

THEY SEE another advantage over hotels.

"As a woman, I don't like conducting seminars in a hotel room," Stajos said. "It puts both business men and women in a position they might not feel comfortable with. Our network puts them in a completely professional environment."

AmeriCenters, Livonia, is part of that network. The women proudly show off the facilities to a visitor. A new building adjacent to the I-275 expressway at Six Mile, each office has a large window. Units come furnished or unfurnished. Big and small conference rooms, a copying center, a secretarial pool, a complete kitchen and tight security are featured.

AmeriCenters in Troy, Southfield and Bloomfield Hills are also part of EON. Also in the metro Detroit area are the Somerset and the Plymouth Executive Suites.

THE WOMEN pride themselves in allowing only businesses they personally feel comfortable with to be members of the network. Small office buildings and large commercial enterprises are members. All seem to offer the latest business technology.

Still in the process of launching EON (Aug. 1 marked the first day a client was placed in a facility), the trio find 15-hour workdays aren't unusual. And weekends are also spent at the office catching up on paperwork. They haven't taken a paycheck in 15 weeks, Stajos said.

"We're basically starving women," she said. "We've put everything we have into this and more. Every good success story begins with putting it on the line and waiting."

EON has neither advertised nor issued a press release yet.

But, "We have had phenomenal response from around the country," Alexander said. "People want us to go international already.

"We are thrilled."

One program in the works is a frequent-user plan for corporate travelers who will receive perks and special incentives for frequent use of EON.

More information can be obtained by calling EON at 591-7235.

Even Japanese autos are running into flak

Dan McCosh

Like some old country-western song, a bad day for an auto executive these days is getting to work early and finding Mike Wallace waiting for you in your office.

Well-publicized safety investigations have derailed some of the most popular cars on the market before their time.

Starting with the early Corvairs, through the most recent episodes with the Audi 5000 and the Suzuki Samurai, the public seems to have developed a certain sensitivity to cars suspected of rolling over or arbitrarily converting a two-car garage into three.

THE SAFETY movement that began in the 1960s with the publication of Ralph Nader's "Unsafe at Any Speed" has left us with a new Washington bureaucracy, vastly improved automobiles as the sciences of crashworthiness and impact injury progress, and a highly sensitized public that demands safer cars.

Or does it?

While I'm not particularly sympathetic with the hand-wringing that goes on when a genuine safety problem turns off the car-buying public, I've also noted that some cars that never had a problem get caught up in a kind of blanket hysteria. Also, a lot of large-scale safety-related issues never seem to affect a car's popularity at all.

Sales of the Pinto, for example, one of several then-new subcompacts with insufficient protection for the gas tank in rear-impact collisions, never seemed to be affected much by the huge amount of negative publicity.

The Corvair, on the other hand, which was completely re-engineered to improve its handling, never managed to recover confidence in the showroom.

LIKEWISE, the severe structural rust problems that plagued most Japanese cars imported in the early 1970s didn't put a dent in the flood of Asian imports — unlike Fiat, which completely withdrew from the United States after it suffered problems similar to Toyota's.

Now comes the Audi 5000, which saw sales plummet after a "60 Minutes" program publicizing the high percentage of Audis involved in sudden acceleration. But that doesn't explain why people stopped buying Audis with manual transmissions — a configuration that makes it logically impossible for a sudden acceleration problem to occur.

A DECADE OR so ago, I would have said the answer seemed to be in the level of acceptability of certain makes and model cars by liberal political groups that were backing safety and consumer legislation.

Attacking a GM car held a kind of giant-killer connotation, while the Japanese were protected by a kind of halo effect that might have had something to do with the Beatles' fascination with Zen mysticism. Well — maybe that was what was at work in California, anyway.

For whatever reason, liberals seem to have preferred cars from western Europe, and more recently Japanese makes. This penchant persists more or less independently from the quality of the cars themselves but closely parallels a preference for foreign fashion of all kinds.

WITHOUT BELABORING the point, it's occurred to me that the basic liberal support for consumer movements means that such issues as auto safety weren't likely to make a frontal assault on such liberal symbols as certain foreign cars.

There was another, less visible issue at hand as well — the difficulty of suing a foreign-based corporation compared to suing a U.S.-based one. That also seems to be changing.

Today, the mantle of immunity from serious consumer issues long held by liberal-image cars seems to have collapsed. The shock at Audi headquarters thus was even more profound, as the emotional rejection of what had been the ultimate yuppie car compounded sales and marketing problems.

Likewise, the Japanese, now solidly entrenched in middle America, find few Americans harbor David-and-Goliath sympathies with their national industry anymore.

THE AUTO industry has generally come a long way from the days when problems such as engines flying off motor mounts and other carnage that could have been prevented by taking a serious look at safety-related engineering were brushed under the bed.

But in the complex world of marketing, there are more safety-related minefields than ever.

Age affects financial perception finances and you

Part I

Financial counseling typically consists of a combination of services — financial or tax planning, income tax prepartion and estate planning. The International Association for Financial Planning recently gathered some valuable information in a 1987 survey of nearly 300 large industrial and service organizations.

The first group of answers presents attitudes of higher income Americans 35 and younger. The second group summarizes the attitudes of Americans younger than 55.

Next week: More on Financial Planning Attitudes.

Sid Mittra is a professor of management at Oakland University and proprietor of Coordinated Financial Planning.

Attitudes of Americans with household incomes higher than $50,000

35 and younger

1. Long-term financial goals? The under-35 age group express concerns this year about four long-term financial planning goals — "retirement" (27 percent), "building up their savings" (19 percent), "gaining financial independence" (17 percent) and "providing for children's education" (16 percent).

2. Financial crossroads? More than one-half (56 percent) say "U.S. economy stands at a financial crossroads," compared to 50 percent of higher-income older Americans and 51 percent of higher-income Americans 35-54.

3. American dream still alive? Almost 20 percent of Americans under 35 no longer buy the traditional American dream that "if you work hard enough you can achieve financial independence" in this country; 25 percent of higher-income Americans over 55 agree.

4. Future generations in bad shape? Almost 4 in 10 feel future generations are going to be worse off financially.

5. Concerned about retirement funds? Four in ten are concerned about outliving their retirement money, 53 percent more concerned than higher-income Americans over 55 (26 percent).

6. Paying expenses and having money left over? Americans under 35 are the most likely of the different age groups to express short-term optimism, with more than half (59 percent) saying it's easier now, to "pay expenses and have money left over."

7. Obstacles to achieving long-term goals? Americans under 35 cite the nature of the economy (19 percent) and possibility of losing a job (12 percent) as two obstacles standing in the way of achieving their long-term financial goals, whereas older Americans over 55 cite health worries (17 percent) and the economy (17 percent).

8. Top household economic and financial concerns? Americans under 35 cite inflation as their top concern, 18 percent more often than the 35-54 group and 30 percent more than plus-55 group. Paying back mortgages is also a top concern, cited over 1½ more times than the 34-54 group.

9. Republicans or Democrats? More than one-half (57 percent) pick Republicans (14 percent more than those over 55 and 32.5 percent more than 35-54-year-olds) as the political party best able to solve the nation's economic problems.

Older than 55

1. Long-term financial goals? Older Americans volunteer "saving for retirement" (39 percent) and "living comfortably" (10 percent) again this year as their top two long-term financial goals. Americans over 55 cite retirement 44 percent more often than Americans under 35 (27 percent) and 11 percent more than Americans 35-54 (35 percent).

2. Financial crossroads? Five in ten (50 percent) say our "economy today stands at a financial crossroads," 11 percent less than Americans under 35.

3. American dream still alive? Almost 25 percent no longer buy the traditional American dream that "if you work hard enough you can achieve financial independence" in this country, about the same as Americans 35-54 and 26 percent more than Americans under 35.

4. Future generations in bad shape? One-third feel future generations are going to be worse off financially. Older Americans, however, say this 17 percent less than Americans 35-54 and 15 percent less than the Americans under 35.

5. Concerned about retirement funds? While Americans over 55 are the least concerned of all age groups about achieving such long-term goals as retirement, fully 1 in 4 is "somewhat concerned" (21 percent) or "very concerned" (5 percent).

6. Paying expenses and having money left over? Although 4 in 10 older Americans say it's "easier to pay expenses and have something left over" (39 percent), they say it's "harder" 57 percent more often than respondents under 35.

7. Obstacles to achieving long-term goals? Poor health and the possibility of sickness (17 percent) and the nature of the economy (17 percent) are cited more often.

8. Top household economic and financial concerns? "Taxes" (17 percent), followed by "inflation/high cost of living" (10 percent).

9. Republicans or Democrats? This age segment favors Republicans over Democrats by more than a 2 to 1 margin (50 percent Republicans/22 percent Democrats).

Paul Stookey:

Folk music's message is what's behind the song

Paul Stookey (left), Mary Travers and Peter Yarrow comprise the hit singing trio Peter, Paul and Mary, coming Saturday to the Meadow Brook Music Festival. The group first found fame in the 1960s.

Peter, Paul and Mary will perform at 8 p.m. Saturday at Meadow Brook's Baldwin Pavilion on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For further information (only lawn tickets are still available), call the box office at 377-2010.

By Victor E. Swanson
special writer

'When folk becomes popular, it's because people are looking for integrity and content . . . If it happens to be entertaining, so much the better.'

— Paul Stookey

PAUL STOOKEY — he's the Paul in Peter, Paul and Mary — talked about folk music and the trio's upcoming Meadow Brook Music Festival concert, in a recent phone interview from Maine.

"I think the odd thing about folk is that while its style may become popular, I think folk is systematic of a deeper thirst," Stookey said in slow, deliberate style. He was soft-spoken for the entire interview.

"When folk becomes popular, it's because people are looking for integrity and content . . . If it happens to be entertaining, so much the better. But essentially I think they're looking for substance."

He talked about "ethics," "absolutes" and "constancy" in folk music. And he mentioned how folk music transcends time because, "It is concerned about those elements of human beings that transcend time."

FOR MORE than a quarter of a century, Stookey and his friends, Peter Yarrow and Mary Travers, have been singing the music that transcends time.

"We know how privileged we (Yarrow, Mary and I) have been to have embarked upon the road of folk music," Stookey said.

"Basically, it demands of the performer an alignment of his commitment . . . If you're going to sing music in this idiom that expresses the human concern and compassion, then everything lines up here, your politics line up here, your generosity outside of the strict confines of performing, any altruism in your life."

AS MIGHT be expected, the concert at Meadow Brook will cover human concerns and politics, such as the issue of apartheid in South Africa.

About one-third of the concert will feature new material — or new material for Peter, Paul and Mary — and about half of that new material will be solo material.

The group is going to perform a Bob Dylan song, "I Shall be Released."

"And we're doing a song that was written in the '40s called — at that time it was called 'Little Mr. Bilbao,' " Stookey said. "There was a senator in the Congress who was quite a bigot . . . We've changed the title to 'Little Mr. Bigot' and are doing a somewhat updated version of it."

MUCH OF THE presentation will consist of old favorites, such as material from the group's most recent album, "No Easy Walk."

"I think the only gap in the program that I'm feeling personally — I'm going to see if I can't come up with something to fill it in myself — is the environment. I don't think it's being represented on the program as well as it has in the past."

Today, Stookey and the others are always busy.

Stookey called Yarrow "always the activist" and said that Yarrow is busy with his causes.

"He began or helped to create a folk festival in Texas called the Kerrville Folk Festival, from which he just returned, after celebrating his 50th birthday."

Stookey is busy with several projects, such as a new album called "Bigger Than Live."

"I have a new album coming out this fall with a group called Bodyworks that I travel with . . . We call it 'techno-folk,' because it's essentially high-teched draped around an acoustic guitar," he said.

HIS PET project is a computer bulletin board for people between the ages of 6 and 20. He helps run it and is helping expand it. Currently, people with computers can reach the bulletin board by calling 1-207-374-5161.

As a group, Peter, Paul and Mary will have a Christmas-Hanukkah special on PBS in November. And recently, their first album was remixed and reissued on compact disc.

About himself as he is today, Stookey said, "I'm probably more tolerant. I think people as they get older become more tolerant, more mellow. And yet there's some people who would laugh and say, 'Hey, if Stookey got any more mellow, he'd fall asleep.' "

He laughed and then added, "And I am not — although I have been known to be — quick-witted or humorous. I really am not . . . fast on my feet. And this pace off the coast of Maine suits me just fine."

Stookey was talking from a converted hen house, which used to house some 20,000 chickens.

The building now has four offices, two full apartments, a recording studio, a small theater, and a radio station (WERU), which inspired a song that Travers will sing at Meadow Brook.

"I PROBABLY would describe myself as a . . . basically, rural kind of person, who finds himself, because of the nature of his talents, in the midst of a urban challenge and responding."

Stookey has three daughters. On the fourth of next month he and his wife will celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

Of his parents, he said, "Dad gets around a little slower than he wants to. I'm afraid that the putting green is as close as he gets to golf now. Mom still paints."

STOOKEY DOESN'T have any family living in metropolitan Detroit now, but when he was a teenager, his family lived in Birmingham.

When he is in town for the Meadow Brook concert, he hopes to see an old friend, Dave Dixon, the Detroit-area radio personality, with whom he wrote some songs in New York in the 1960s. Remember "Rock and Roll Music"? That song may be performed at the concert.

Reflecting on his life, Stookey said, "And I think if I want to be remembered as anything, it would be that I was — an encouragement. I'd be pretty satisfied."

'Grease' slick but hearing difficult

Performances of "Grease" continue at 8 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 20, at Smith Theatre on the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills. For ticket information all 471-7700.

The 1950s' rock 'n' roll musical, "Grease," is fast doing for that era what songs and stories about speak easys and flappers did for the Roaring Twenties. It may not tell the whole story, of course, but it makes for interesting entertainment.

"Grease" celebrates the coming of age of high school students — which means it may go on forever, since there is an endless supply of eager young performers to tell us about Rydell High.

The latest production is being staged as part of the Summer Arts Program at the Orchard Ridge Campus of Oakland Community College. It's a lively, generally well-paced show — with one major flaw. It's difficult to hear many of the lead singers.

The dancing is particularly good. It's zesty, and creatively staged by director/choreographer Annette Bergasse. The high-energy number, "Greased Lighting," was so infectious that on opening night, a bird (some thought it was a bat) flew in from the wings and darted among the dancers — much to the delight of the audience.

THE STORY is about a greaser, Danny Zuko, and a goody-goody girl, Sandy Dumbrowski, and the high jinks we all remember — ranging from record hops to rumbles and trying to arrange a date with a certain amount of cool, at the Burger Palace.

Christopher Combs gives his Danny about the right mixture of cockiness and vulnerability. Tammy Jex's Sandy is the epitome of sweetness and everything nice, until the final riveting scene, when she does a total change to a vamping, strutting bombshell.

Josh Bergasse is blessed with stage presence and personality. His "Rock 'N' Roll Party Queen" number with Ryan Quinn is deftly done.

Others turning in notable performances are Howard Freeman (who knows how to deliver a comedic line) as the guy who thinks all the chicks adore him and Vivake "Sonny" Mandel who is very expressive with a certain "Bowzer" quality to his voice.

One of the few with a strong, stage, singing voice is Sherry Domstein, and she uses it to good advantage as Rizzo, the fast and aggressive member of the Pink Ladies.

Two members of the Summer Arts Program staff take turns on stage — Coordinator Bev Versele, who scores as a demanding, scolding teacher, and Assistant Director Tony Lord, who donned shades for his role of Jonny Casino and belted out "Born to Hand Jive" with gusto.

Lighting and costumes complement the show's style, as does the almost-life-size 1957 Chevy convertible. Nice touch.

Bob Weibel of Westland is a free-lance writer, who has spent more than 25 years in community theater as a director, designer and performer.

Veteran players give rise to Canton hopes

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Mike Morgan, the parent, was one of the Plymouth Canton girls soccer team's most vocal supporters when it won the Class A championship last spring.

His daughter, Erin, was a member of the team, but Morgan's exhortations didn't end there.

Mike Morgan, the coach, begins his fifth year directing the Canton boys team, and he agrees two state titles for the same family in one year would be nice.

"She bought a shirt for me that says: State champs, Canton," Morgan said. "The girls did a real nice job, and we'd sure like to double up on it."

But nobody — least of all the coach — is yet predicting the Chiefs will do likewise this fall. However, it is a believable prospect given the experienced team Canton will field.

Jerry Staszel is one of many veteran players on the team.

THE CHIEFS had their share of graduation losses from last year's 6-10-2 squad, but they return more than nucleus of talent. Plus, with the area being a soccer hotbed, Morgan thinks Canton is ready to reap a bountiful harvest this year, particularly.

"Every one of the guys playing on the varsity will have played in a select program," Morgan said. "These guys are 12-months-a-year soccer players.

"Some have traveled all over the United States, some have been in Europe. We've never had this much experience on the field."

Furthermore, 60 boys turned out for the start of fall practice Monday. Morgan will keep 18 on the varsity, and another 18 will play at the junior varsity level, meaning nearly half will be cut.

At the start of practice, Morgan knew he had 10 or 11 players sure to make the varsity, an indication of the kind of solid ballclub the Chiefs expect to have.

Despite a record below .500, Canton had a good team last year, but it appeared to be snakebitten when, after outshooting the opposition by wide margins, it lost a number of close games.

"A WINNING attitude has a lot to do with it," Morgan said. "These guys have been after me since last winter when they were playing indoor soccer.

"They're happy, they're enthused, and that's half the battle. The next step is finding the right combinations and making them work."

Canton is well-stocked with midfielders. Seniors Jeff Tutor and Rick Menary and juniors Rick McFeely and Chris Kilpelainen are notable players. McFeely suffered a broken leg playing against Plymouth Salem in the third game and missed the rest of the 1987 season.

In addition, freshman Kerry Zavagnin, who returned from Europe with his select team in time for the start of workouts, was already known to Morgan and expected to make the varsity.

A welcome addition is junior Eric Miller, who transferred from Redford Catholic Central a year ago but had to sit out the '87 season.

"ANOTHER TEAM will be hard pressed to go after one guy," Morgan said. "We'll have a field full of dangerous players.

"I can go down the whole list of guys who've got it together in this

Lauer survives heat to win O&E event

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Golf's a game offering a multitude of challenges. A golfer must consider his own attributes and liabilities, then calculate how to attack every course, every hole, every shot. When playing in a tournament, there's another element to deal with — the opposition.

All of those components took a back seat to another factor at Saturday's Observer & Eccentric/Whispering Willows womens golf tournament. The oppressive heat (in the mid-90s) pushed its way to center stage, ruining players' concentration en route.

"I was tired," said Ann Lauer of Birmingham after completing the 18-hole endurance test. "I was definitely tired. You couldn't pay me to go out there again."

LAUER'S RELUCTANCE had a reason. She finished the tournament with a bogey, bogey and a double-bogey over the last three holes.

And yet, it was Lauer's heat that wilted the opposition long before those final holes. While her chief adversaries — 1987 champ Erica Zonder of Farmington Hills and Trish Waldecker of Livonia — struggled starting the back nine at Livonia's Whispering Willows, Lauer was on fire.

She carded birdies on the 10th and 12th holes and had pars on the 11th, 13th, 14th and 15th to open up a nine-stroke advantage, a bulge far too great to lose even with her rather weak finish.

The victory was Lauer's third (the others were in 1983 and 1986). She shot a 77 and, even though she double-bogeyed 18 while Zonder birdied for a three-stroke swing, Lauer still won by five strokes.

"I WAS pretty happy with the way I played — except the last three holes," said Lauer. "Jeff (Hague, who caddied for her) said I was up eight going into the last hole. I told him after I wish he hadn't said that."

Not that it really mattered, except in the margin of victory. Zonder, who just graduated from North Farmington and is bound for the University of Michigan on a golf scholarship, played well from tee to green — but once there, she faltered. Zonder never did find her putting stroke.

"My putting was a little inconsistent today," she said wryly. "I was hitting my drives and irons well. I had short birdie putts, I just didn't make them.

"I'm encouraged. Once I get my short game together, I'll be fine."

By her own estimate, Zonder three-putted three times and four-putted once. Six times she had a 10-foot putt for birdie. She made one (on 18).

IT BECAME evident it would not be Zonder's day after Lauer's birdie at 12. It came after Lauer's drive on the 317-yard, par-four dogleg to the left carried into the trees on the right side of the fairway. On her second shot, Lauer hit a tree on her follow through and the ball ended up 20 feet to the left of the green.

Making par from there would have suited Lauer. Instead, she chipped in for birdie. Zonder, who hit her tee shot short and past the trees on the right of the fairway, two-putted from 20 feet for a bogey.

"That was great," said Lauer of her birdie chip. "It was the highlight of my day. I knew I had it then."

Zonder sensed the victory was slipping away, too. Before stepping onto the tee at 13, she said, "If (Lauer) wants to chip in for birdie on every hole, fine. I'd rather have her beat me than have me shoot eight or nine (every hole)."

AS IT TURNED out, it was a combination of both that secured Lauer's third O&E title. Her 39 after nine holes put her in front by three over Zonder and four over Waldecker. Lauer birdied the 460-yard par-five 10th while Zonder parred and Waldecker bogeyed.

At the par-four 11th, a treacherously fast green cost Zonder and Waldecker. Lauer managed to two-putt from the fringe 25 feet away while Waldecker hit two poor chips and two-putted for a bogey. Zonder, meanwhile, was on Individual goals remain on Jurek's grid agenda

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

New season, new goals.

In Scott Jurek's first four years as a member of Eastern Michigan University's football team (he was redshirted in 1984), the goals were clear-cut: win the Mid-American Conference crown and the California Bowl, and prove the Hurons belonged.

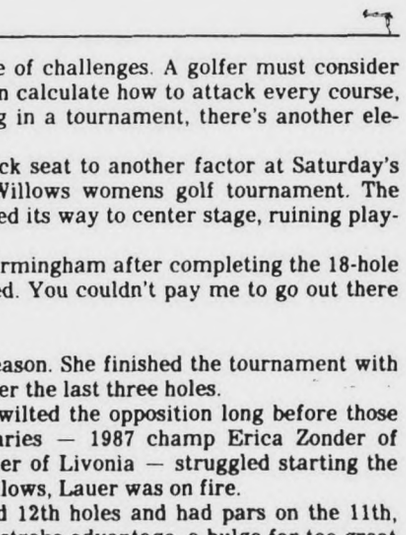

It was just before Jurek's first year at EMU that the other MAC members tried to boot the Hurons out of the league. Eight-straight losing seasons, coupled with the inevitable poor attendance, led to their near ouster.

That changed last year. EMU survived and, in December, it was the Hurons who saved the MAC. Embarrassing losses in three consecutive California Bowls had sparked talk of ending the automatic pairing of the MAC champion versus the Pacific Coast Athletic Association (now Big West) winner.

EMU ended such chatter by shocking 17-point favorite San Jose State. After years of agony, the Hurons were football heroes and MAC saviors.

"I've got so much pride in this place," said Jurek at Saturday's media day, "it's unbelievable."

THE SUCCESSES of '87 are history now. Jurek, a 6-1½, 225-pound inside linebacker from Plymouth Salem, is not. He still has another year of football eligibility. And while many of the goals that carried him through his first three seasons have been realized, others remain.

Scott Jurek
EMU veteran linebacker

Although many of his team's goals were accomplished last year, Jurek's personal goals were not. "Last year I worked my butt off in (preseason) camp," he said. "Through the first half of the season I played well, but I struggled through the middle. Then I played well at the end.

"My goal this year is to be consistent throughout the season. I'm going to bust my butt in camp to win a starting spot."

At inside linebacker, success can be easily tracked in tackles. Jurek was sixth on the team with 55; he also had one interception. He started five games.

Those totals may seem unimpressive, but they're not considering coach Jim Harkema's platoon system. Four or five players will shuttle into the two inside spots. "Any linebacker is going to have to be super to hold a starting spot throughout the year," said Jurek.

HE WOULDN'T mind such status. "I'd rather be playing all the time. But I think (the platoon system) has been a big plus for us as a team," said Jurek. "There's a lot of competition, which is good. It keeps me working hard."

The hard conditioning work that accompanies the preseason is, for the first time in Jurek's collegiate career, relished. Last season's success is one reason for his change in approach; his being a senior is another.

"A few years ago, I'd be in the middle of camp and I'd say to myself, 'Get me out of here.' Now, I

Betty Smith of Plymouth shot an 86 to win the first flight championship in the annual O&E tournament.

Former men's champ on lucky roll

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

If the Observer & Eccentric mens golf tournament goes to a playoff, one past champion should be the heavy favorite.

John Van Vleck of Farmington Hills has won titles in 1976, '77 and '83, and the way he's playing this summer, there's reason to believe he might win again. Not that Van Vleck is playing all that well, but luck can be just as important a deciding factor.

"I haven't been playing that outstanding," admitted Van Vleck. "It's not that I'm winning these tournaments. I just keep squeaking them out."

What Van Vleck has "squeaked out" is more than remarkable. It proves the value of luck. He has been involved in four important tournament playoffs, and he has come away a winner — of sorts — all four times.

THE LATEST was Aug. 8 in the U.S. Amateur qualifier. Van Vleck shot a 72 at Western Country Club in Redford, then drove to Meadowbrook Country Club in Northville and shot a 75. He no sooner finished his second round when he was notified he would have to return to Western for a playoff.

This was no ordinary playoff. Six others, including such state golfing stalwarts as Josh Mondry (from Birmingham), Pete Green (from Franklin) and John Morgan, were all vying for a chance to play in the U.S. Amateur. On the fourth playoff hole, Van Vleck sank a 30-foot putt to earn the last spot available.

He leaves for Hot Springs, Va., this weekend. The tournament, which will be played at the Homestead, begins Wednesday.

"For me, this is like getting to the World Series," said Van Vleck. "Sure, you'd like to win, but getting there is the thing. The work is done, this is fun."

HIS QUALIFYING should have come as no surprise. Earlier this summer at the Golf Association of Michigan qualifier at West Bloomfield's Wabeek Country Club, Van Vleck shot an 80 and found himself in another playoff. Four extra holes later, he had qualified for the GAM (at the GAM tournament, he shot 80-75 and missed the cut).

The Michigan Open qualifier at Salem Hills in Northville provided another setting for a miracle. With two holes to play, Van Vleck figured a strong finish might get him into the tournament. He got two birdies for a 77 that landed him the final qualifying spot. In the Open (played at The Bear in Acme), Van Vleck was 10th among amateurs.

Want more? How about the Michigan Amateur qualifier, played at the Country Club of Lansing. Van Vleck knocked in a 30-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to get into a playoff for one of three spots still open. Nineteen others were also vying for a berth. Van Vleck's birdie on the fifth hole got him the last spot.

"When I've gotten close to making it or not making it, the ball's gone in the hole," Van Vleck, who holds the O&E tournament record (70-68/138), said.

SAME FORMULA worked, though not quite as well, at the U.S. Open qualifier at Toledo's Inverness Country Club. Van Vleck shot 77-75 and got into a five-man playoff. He ended up as the first alternate, but didn't go.

There were some other "minor" miracles for Van Vleck, too. In Michigan Medal play at Detroit Golf Club, he dropped in a hole-in-one on the 71st hole, and at the Syron Tournament at Pontiac Country Club he strung together five birdies to card a 30 on the back nine.

"If it weren't such a quirky type of thing," said Van Vleck of his incredible streak.

So what would top off a summer like this? "It sure would be nice to win the Observer the last time I play in it," he said, referring to the Sept. 17-18 tournament. Van Vleck is moving to Brighton, outside the O&E's coverage area, next spring and won't be eligible to play the O&E again.

Which, considering his recent hot streak, probably won't bother too many of the challengers for the O&E title.

'For me, (the U.S. Amateur) is like getting to the World Series. Sure, you'd like to win, but getting there is the thing. The work is done; this is fun.' — John Van Vleck, ex-O & E golf champ the green in two — then four-putted for a six.

Heading into 12, Lauer's lead had burgeoned from three to six strokes over Zonder. After 12, it was eight.

Still, Zonder had a chance to make a run. At the 305-yard par-four 13th, her drive was perfect, just 20 yards short of the green. She chipped to within nine feet — then missed the birdie putt. The 370-yard par-four 14th was more of the same: great drive, pitch to within four-feet — then two putts for par.

WALDECKER WAS having more problems reaching the green than either of her top opponents. She failed to make par on holes 10 through 15 and finished nine strokes back with an 86, tying Vicki Hickman of Farmington Hills for third.

Kellianne Nagy of Plymouth earned low net honors in championship flight with a 72 (actual score of 87 minus her 15 handicap).

In first flight, Betty Smith of Plymouth turned in a solid round, carding an 86 to capture top honors. Deb Horning of Birmingham finished second with an 88, while Katharine Hunter of West Bloomfield won low net with a 71 (90 minus 19).

In second flight, Pamela Hirst of Farmington Hills was best with a 101. Susan Lane of Westland placed second with a 102.

A total of just 22 golfers competed, the smallest turnout in the history of he women's O&E tournament.

Holzer Ford wins NABF crown

Tom Holzer Ford of Farmington Hills brought home a national championship Sunday, winning the National Amateur Baseball Federation's College World Series in Youngstown, Ohio.

The tournament culminated with Holzer Ford slanking the Clark Griffiths Rebels of Falls Church, Va., in the rubber match of their tournament rivalry.

Holzer Ford opened with a 4-3 victory over the Rebels but later after beating the Kettering Yankees of Dayton, Ohio, in its second game lost to the Virginia ballclub, 11-10.

In the final Holzer Ford posted a 5-0 shutout behind the three-hit pitching of Brett Loomis, the most dominant pitcher in the tournament.

Loomis went five innings and struck out seven before he was relieved by Steve Hirschman after developing a sore arm. Hirschman held the Rebels to two hits over the final two innings.

HOLZER FORD scored single runs in the second, third and fifth innings and added two for insurance in the finale. Rick Tavormina was 2-for-5 and drove in two runs, and Steve Rudelic also had two hits.

Keith Dutkiewicz, who played center field for Holzer Ford, was named the NABF most valuable hitter after batting .545 in four games. Rudelic was a defensive honorable mention for his play in left field.

baseball

Loomis, Dutkiewicz, who went 9-for-17 overall, Rudelic and Chris Kloc were placed on the all-tournament team.

In the opening game, Rudelic scored the winning run against the Rebels in the top of the ninth. With two outs, he singled and went to second on a passed ball. Rudelic moved up on a bunt and raced home when the relay got by the first baseman.

Holzer had scored earlier on a pair of two-out singles by Dutkiewicz and Paul Newitt and Tavormina's groundout. Dutkiewicz was 3-for-3, Rudelic and Ritter 2-for-4.

Winning pitcher Tom Cotter struck out seven and didn't walk anybody during 4⅓ innings of sparkling relief. He closed the game by getting the first batters on strikeouts and the fourth on a popout.

Loomis had two back-to-back home runs in the second game. Only walks (4) of the game gave the Rebels a 3-1 lead in the fifth.

With 15 hits in the second game, Holzer Ford held a 5-1 lead after one inning and went to claim a 10-5 victory. The Yankees had 13 hits but made four errors.

Dan Hilliard paced the offense with a 4-for-5 game that included two RBI. Dutkiewicz belted a solo homer, also had two RBI and went 3-for-5.

Hirschman keyed the first inning with a two-run single, Rudelic was 2-for-3 with one RBI and Newitt batted 2-for-5.

Kloc was the starting and winning pitcher, scattering nine hits over five innings. He struck out six and walked none. Hirschman finished up, striking out two and also refusing to issue a walk.

Then came Holzer Ford's only loss in third game, which was decided by Derek Hacopian's three-run homer during a five-run eighth that gave the Rebels an 11-9 advantage.

HOLZER FORD, however, outhit the Virginians 14-8 and was led by Tavormina, who was 3-for-5. Ritter and Dutkiewicz had two hits apiece, and Newitt chalked up three RBI.

Holzer Ford led 10-6 until the eighth inning, and Cotter, who followed starter Mike Salach and reliever Hilliard in the eighth, took the loss.

Bob Peterson manages Holzer Ford, which completed its fourth year in the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League. Other members of the team are Scott Peterson, Bill Bragg, Andy Fairman, Bob Tatro, George Hampton, Chris Willerer, Chris Hansen, Bill Barber and Stuart Hirschman.

game. Hopefully, we'll be fun to watch this year."

Defense, where the Chiefs lost Dan Nashlon, Jim Hadde and Doug Sobolak to graduation, is the biggest question mark. Senior Jamey Nesbitt, the sweeper, was the only sure starter on defense when practice opened.

Due to the added need on defense, some of the forwards may end up as defenders, Morgan said. Shawn Mack and Tom Yack, both of whom played JV ball, could help fill the holes.

"We're going to have ball-handling up and down the field," he said. "We've always tried to play a control game; it's just that we have a better chance at it this time."

The Chiefs also return two experienced goalkeepers in seniors Marty Adamian and Brian L'Heureux. Both played considerably last season.

"NEITHER HAS taken a dominant role, but it's early," Morgan said. "Both have been working hard in the offseason.

"The guys have confidence in them and that's helps."

Following a five-team scrimmage on Friday, Aug. 26, against defending Class A champ East Lansing, Troy Athens, Kalamazoo Central and Traverse City, the Chiefs open the season Saturday, Sept. 3, against Grand Blanc, the state runnerup, in the annual Plymouth Tournament.

"Our immediate goal is to get the division championship back," said Morgan, who coached the Chiefs to Western Division titles in 1984-85.

"Our second goal is to win the league, what the heck, everybody's is. And you always like to do well in the state tournament."

More information on the menstrual cycle

Dear Myrna. I found your recent column on menstrual cycles very informative. I appreciated the information on cancer and its relationships to young girls. Can you give me more info on exercising and the menstrual cycle? Thanks.

Laurie Lovett

Well, let's talk about exercise and the menstrual cycle.

It may very well be that the latest cure for premenstrual syndrome is exercise. In a recent study at Ball State University in Indiana, research showed that when sedentary women walked or jogged 30 to 40 minutes per day, four times per week, for four months, PMS symptoms decreased 64 percent.

The physical fitness of this group also improved and fat was reduced 2 percent. In many other studies, evidence indicates that moderate exercise is necessary to maintain bone strength. It is that old osteoporosis fight. Moderate exercise can be five to six days a week, alternating hard days and easy days of intensity

It is not good to exercise to the point of menstrual cessation, called amenorrhea. Some female long distance runners who have ceased menstruating are at risk for premature osteoporosis (a brittle bone disease).

Another thought . . . women who are post-menopausal (usually over 50 years old) with moderate exercise can improve their cardiovascular function. Low intensity walking or beginner, low-impact exercise class is just as effective as high intensity exercise in improving the physical fitness of women and also men.

More and more studies are being made on women and their menstrual exercise. I think it has been proven that exercise will keep us "young."

What do you think?

(Myrna Partrich, co-owner of The Workout Company Inc. of Bloomfield Township, will answer any questions readers may have regarding exercise. Send your letter to: Sports Department, Myrna Partrich, 1225 Bowers, Birmingham 48012.)

keep thinking this is the last time I'll be doing this on a football field. It's my last year of playing football, my last time going through camp."

"We lost almost everyone from that team and everybody said we'd go something like 4-5 my senior year. We had a line that averaged about 160 pounds, but we went 8-1 again."

Jurek sees similarities. "This is a good group," he said of his current teammates. "We work hard and we work well together."

They'll have to, to match last year's success.

And, of course, a whole new set of team goals must be faced. The offense, in particular, must be rebuilt. "We lost a lot of offensive linemen, our top running back (Gary Patton) and our quarterback (Ron Adams)," noted Jurek. "So we don't have a lot of experience at those positions."

WHICH MEANS more pressure on the defense. "We'll have to carry (the offense) for a while," Jurek said. "Yeah, it puts a little pressure on us. But we just have to go out and play."

And, in Jurek's own playing history, the situation is not without precedent.

"I compare this season to my senior year at Salem (in 1983). When I was a junior, we had one of the best teams in the state but we lost to (eventual state champion Farmington) Harrison in that (Western Lakes) championship game and finished 8-1.

STEEL SHOT. The controversy continues.

When the United States Fish and Wildlife Service announced several years ago that waterfowl hunters across the nation would be required by law to use steel shot by the year 1991, panic and outrage set in.

The ballistics of steel shot didn't come close to comparing with the ballistics of a comparable lead-loaded shot. And, for this less efficient shotgun shell, waterfowlers were paying $8-$10 more per box.

But the reasoning behind the regulation was understandable. Much of the lead shot that missed its target and fell into the water and wetlands often ended up in the digestive tracts of ducks and geese. This eventually resulted to lead poisoning.

So, to reduce the mortality of waterfowl due to lead poisoning, the Mississippi Flyway Commission proposed the steel shot regulation in the early 1970s. Other flyway commission's soon followed until the entire nation was put on a timetable to meet steel shot regulations.

MICHIGAN'S TIMETABLE is now rounding the corner. Certain areas of the state have been under the steel shot regulations since 1977. This year, however, waterfowl hunters across the Lower Peninsula are required to use only steel shot. The Upper Peninsula will fall under the steel shot regulation next year.

"The ultimate goal (of the Flyway Commission) is to eliminate the threat of lead poisoning in all waterfowl," said Jerry Martz, Wetlands and Waterfowl Specialist with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources. "Steel shot takes some getting use to, but the current shells are much better than they were when they first came out. The pattern is much tighter (than lead shot), and usually shorter, but if you use a modified choke you'll be all right. The steel shot shells produced today are very efficient. You just have to get used to them."

THE CONTROVERSY today doesn't surround the use of steel shot but rather the enforcement of the new laws.

"It was quite a controversial topic in the early days of the steel shot program," explained Leonard Mannaussa, a board member of the Michigan Duck Hunters Tournament and an active member of Ducks Unlimited. "Back then, the (steel shot) shells were very expensive and they weren't as accurate as lead. Now the price has come down a little and the shells are better quality. If it satisfies a group of people that's OK. People said there was a problem so we pacified them to an extent.

"But what I don't understand is the way they enforce the law. A pheasant hunter can hunt a wetlands area and use all the lead shot he wants. That shot still falls to the ground and water. But if a waterfowler goes to the same wetland and gets caught in possession of just one (lead shotgun shell) he'll get a $25 fine. There's no consistency there. If they want to ban lead shot then they should ban it completely."

MANNAUSSA ALSO contends there are other serious problems that need to be ironed out.

"There are other things that kill ducks a lot more than lead (poisoning)," Mannaussa explained. "Sea Gulls. We call them flying rats. I've seen them many times attack ducklings, fly way up in the sky with them and drop them until they die. I've seen them destroy entire (duck) nests. They eat out of dumpsters and garbage cans and there's no telling what they bring into the marshes. In Canada (Sea Gull problems) are so bad they let you shoot them.

"If you go out hunting today you better bring your law books with you, too," continued Mannaussa. "It's so complicated, you don't know what you can hunt from one day to another. There are more problems with the regulations than anything else. When you bring your gun up to shoot you say, 'should I shoot or shouldn't I.' You know there is a duck out there but you don't know if you can shoot it."

I AGREE with Mannaussa. Waterfowl hunting regulations should be simplified. It's too confusing, especially if you only hunt ducks a couple of times a year. Now, I admit I don't go duck hunting each and every season, but the times I have gone I've been confused over what I can and can't shoot. I've even considered bringing a calculator to keep track of my daily points. And the regulations are getting even more complex.

For instance, understanding the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service guidelines for hunting Pintail this year is about as complex as figuring out your income tax return. The duck season runs Oct. 15-Nov. 10 and Nov. 25-27. (It's been reduced to 30 days this season because of the problems ducks have had surviving the drought.) For the first eight days of the season you can take one hen or one drake per day. For the middle 16 days of the season you can't shoot a Pintail, but for the final six days of the season you can shoot two drakes a day.

If that's not complicated I don't know what is. I almost had the point system figured out but now I have to count days to see if a bird is legal or not.

Again, I admit I'm not a dedicated duck hunter, but if things remain as complex as they are I don't know if I'll ever figure out the regulations enough to become one.

Skilled employee overcomes customers' rudeness

Mary DiPaolo

Every so often, I get into what my husband terms the "shopping mode." I make the rounds at various strip centers, downtown shopping districts and regional malls literally to shop until I drop.

Regardless of what I have or haven't found to buy, it seems that I always discover something new about people in the process.

For so long, many have focused attention on what business owners, sales management and staff personnel do or don't do right in their attempt to create and maintain good customer relations.

But what about customers' responsibility? No one likes having to interact with rude, inconsiderate and demanding customers.

After a recent outing to Westland Mall, I was once again reminded of the difficult job many salespeople face in serving the customers nobody wants.

SHALINI CANNOT be more than 19 and yet is a seasoned pro when it comes to handling a steady stream of less-than-ideal customers. We met last week when I was walking through Hudson's, and she offered me a free makeup demonstration.

After she began her work, we were interrupted by a mother/daughter team who wanted to buy some merchandise.

Although I was slightly annoyed by the intrusion, I became even more annoyed at the way these two women behaved. You'd think that Shalini set the prices by the way she was berated about "how expensive" everything was.

You'd also think that mom had major insecurity problems by the other, equally inappropriate comments.

After they left, the "purple eye shadow" lady appeared on the scene. She sat down in front of the display and demanded some (you got it) purple eyeshadow. As Shalini patiently attempted to serve this customer, the woman became increasingly agitated.

"No, that's not what I want. It's too dark . . . it's too light."

After several minutes, I calmly directed her to another part of the store where additional shadows were on display. She barked an "I know" at me before walking off abruptly.

Retirement income can be increased

today's investor

Thomas E. O'Hara

of the National Association of Investors Corp.

I have a problem balancing my income to my growing expenses. I have been retired five years, and I thought I had a good income when I retired, but my expenses keep creeping up, and I can see how, in three or four more years I'm going to have to curtail my way of living if I don't increase my income.

I have a pension from my employer, and I have Social Security. I have a $50,000 annuity, and I have $400,000 in one-year CDs.

One of my problems is that the earnings rate on my CDs has come down. I've recently been getting 6¾ percent. Would you have any suggestions for me? I am concerned about safety.

Your current emphasis seems to have been strongly on safety, and there is nothing wrong with that. One thing you might do is keep just $100,000 of your CDs in one-year certificates and put the balance in longer-term certificates. This would raise your rate of return.

The only problem with such an investment, however, is there would be no continuing increase in earnings, and when they have to be renewed, there is no telling whether the interest rate would be higher or lower.

ANOTHER THING you could do is put quite a bit of that money in good-quality long-term corporate bonds. That would increase your rate of return and would probably extend the time period for the higher rate of return you would obtain.

If you can live with a little less safety, I would suggest you start to move about $200,000 into some good grade utilities with a good return and prospects of both an increasing dividend and some appreciation.

I am sending you a copy of Better Investing, which has a stock selection each month called "High Yield and Progress," which is especially choosen for retirees. The idea is to provide a stock that not only pays a good current dividend but also seems to have prospects of that dividend being increased regularly and the price of the stock also advancing.

THE STOCK this month seems like one that should meet your need. It is Indiana Energy Inc. It distributes gas in northern Indiana to individuals, commercial and industrial customers and also transports gas for others through its pipeline facilities.

The stock recently sold for $30 ¼. It pays $2.14 annually for a yield of 7 percent. Some analysts estimate it will earn $3.40 in 1988 compared with $2.58 last year.

The Value Line service estimates that in five years the company will have increased earnings to $4 a share, and its price might increase to between 35 and 45.

There is more risk in that company than in your CDs but the chance for an increase in income at a rate equal to or greater than inflation is good. Spreading a portion of your money over five or six companies with the same investment characteristics just might solve your problem.

Hearing set on control of jail

A hearing has been set for Aug. 29 on the motion filed Tuesday by county executive Edward McNamara for control of the county jail.

McNamara filed the motion Tuesday before Wayne County Circuit Judge Richard Kaufman. It asks that control of the jail be taken from Sheriff Robert Ficano and given to a jail administrator for a period of not less than one year.

McNamara alleges conditions in the jail are as poor as they were in 1971, when overcrowding sparked an inmate lawsuit. He also asserts that Ficano's budget is fraught with overruns.

Ficano has said the move amounts to a power play and that the McNamara administration instituted tight controls on his budget.

Fence art — Integration of strength and beauty

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

What does it take to turn a wrought-iron fence into an outstanding work of art?

One basic ingredient is a patron with an appreciation for art and an understanding of the creative process. Another is an imaginative, highly skilled artist such as Gary Griffin, head of Cranbrook Academy of Art metalsmithing department.

Griffin has been working for several months on an 80-foot fence that will run in front of several residences and define an inner courtyard and gardens.

Over the years he has done some striking garden gates that reflect the owner's interest in gardening, but this is his first of this length.

GRIFFIN USED the gardens and lawn beyond the fence as a artistic point of reference. The vertical structure in the double doors of the gate, each 30 inches by 6 feet 8, is hollyhocks, complete with blossoms, leaves and seed pods.

Flanking the gate doors are panels of roses growing up a trellis. Five panels of grasses are separated by narrow panels suggesting the mortar line of brick. Along the bottom of each are narrow horizontal panels with designs of what is below ground — stones beneath the grasses and roots beneath the plants.

The corresponding thin horizontal framing panels at the top represent the sky, with zigzags and ribbons for lightning and clouds.

THE DECORATIVE elements, typical of Griffin's work, are the superstructure as well. He fashions them to look light, almost fragile while they are the main weight-bearing elements.

"The grasses are phenomenal in strength. Each is a sheared piece of 16-gauge steel. All the edges are ground thin, so there's a play between the edge and the surface," he said.

Each piece has a vertical bend in the center, as actual blades of grass have. Each of the grass panels is 4-by-10 feet long and weighs (a surprisingly light) 175 pounds, he said.

The sky design is basically a series of triangles and consequently are very strong, as are the circles, representing stones at the bottom.

BUT IN addition to the cleverly engineered and fashioned basic design elements are the small but highly important elements such as the leaves, flowers, buds and seed pods.

Like real plants, Griffin's plants have larger leaves at the bottom and smaller ones at the top. Anyone who knows a hollyhock knows that it may have blossoms up and down the tall stem, pods that have dumped their seeds, pods that are about to open and some tightly shut.

Patterns, first in paper, then in aluminum, were made for each — roses were made in three parts, seed pods in two.

"The reason we use aluminum is that it's a lot easier to cut from and it's faster too," Griffin said.

He picked up one of the leaves, still flat and unshaped.

"There are seven different sizes of leaves and you have to vary the thickness. Metal has no life when it comes to you, you have to give it that."

Once cut, each leaf and blossom still has to be worked and shaped and the veins incised until it becomes a small, attractive, three-dimensional sculpture before it is welded into place. In art of this quality, as in nature, each small item has its own identity and does not come from a production line.

PARTS OF the project are in three or four different studios and stages.

"It's really exciting to build this project," Griffin said. "It's an exceptionally laborious piece in terms of time and labor, but it's exciting because the client understands creativity . . . it's really wonderful when someone appreciates this kind of work."

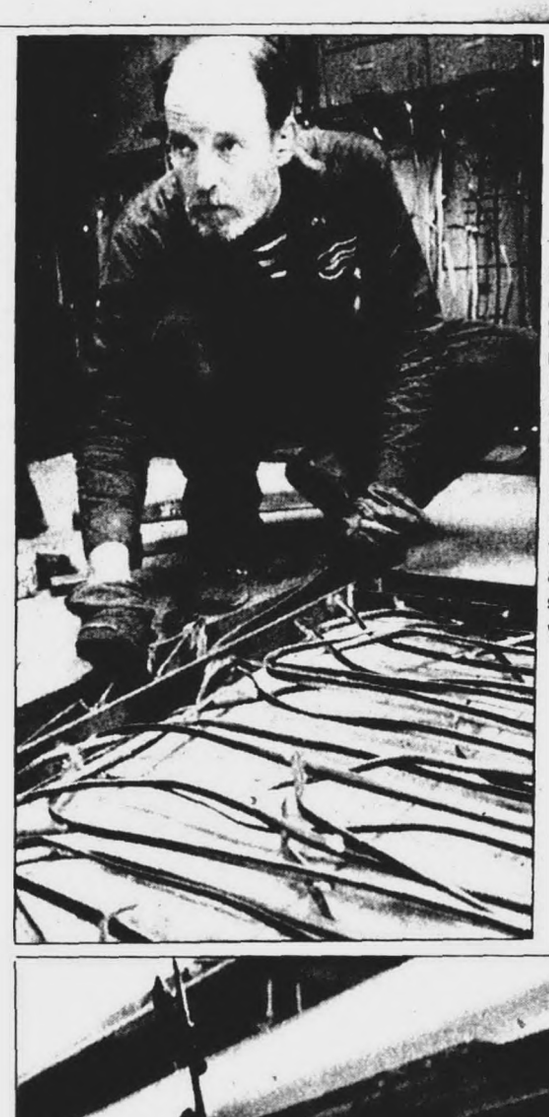

In addition to the model, which is expected for a commission of this magnitude, Griffin made a full-size sampler piece of a hollyhock, the brick and the grasses.

"These," he said, "give me a working record, something to fool around with and adjust before they're put in place."

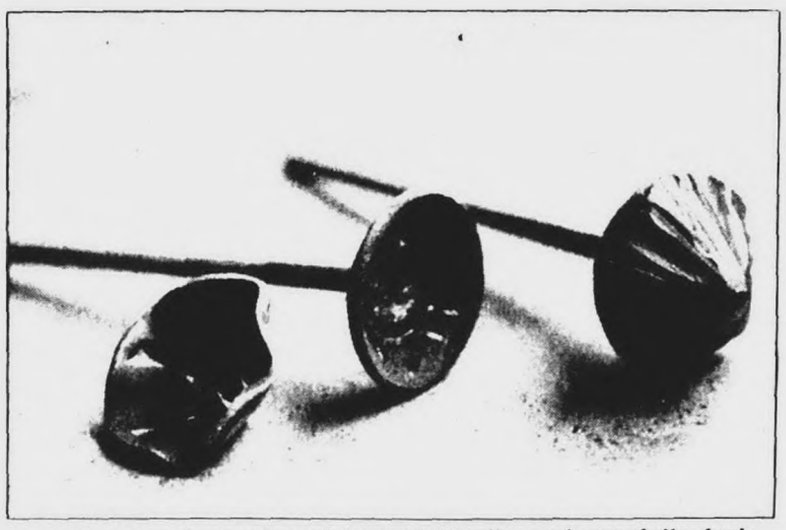

He predicted the fence would take more than four months to make, working full time.

Griffin came to Cranbrook in the fall of 1984 to head the metalsmithing department. His work has been shown at Yaw Gallery of Birmingham as well as in national exhibitions.

Model of the fence (above) shows the hollyhock gate, the rose trellis and brick panels and one of the five grass sections. At left, in the metal smithing studios, Gary Griffin adjusts the lighting detail above one of the sections he is working on.

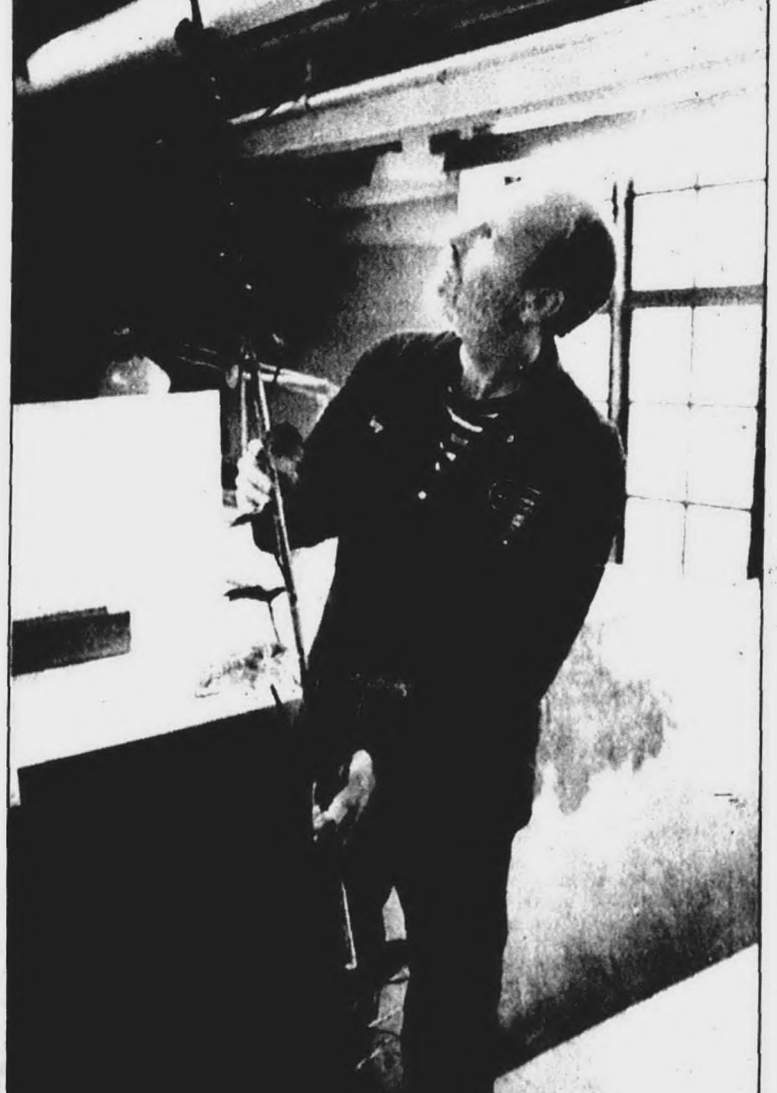

Each hollyhock seed pod is individually and carefully fashioned. The one at right is still closed.

Roses too are made in several parts, shaped, put together and polished.

Grinding, like welding, is an important part of the construction and must be done often and with great care.

Gary Griffin holds a hollyhock that was made as a sampler piece, so he could test it and see how it would behave before he did his final work.

Monte Nagler

I have always loved photographing in the forest. No better place exists to get truly lost in your photography than among the splendor of trees and woods.

Forests have personalities of their own that can change quickly and dramatically. Fog and mist will produce a mood in your photographs quite different from that of a bright, sunny day.

The same stand of trees will obviously convey different feelings when etched by a blanket of snow or enveloped in a rainbow of fall leaves.

Trees and forests are ever changing and you and your camera have a tremendous opportunity to record these magic moments.

HERE ARE some tips to help you make better photographs in the forest.

For composition, concentrate in one of two areas — patterns or a dominant point. I have found that patterns of trees work well in a picture such as an even row of aspens contrasted against the dark interior of the forest. A dominant point of interest can be an unusually shaped tree, a grouping of foliage on a branch, or a predominant tree trunk in the foreground framing trees behind.

Forest pictures are often effective because of what is excluded. Notice in the photo shown here the severe cropping of the tops of the trees. More impact is obtained in this way.

AS ALWAYS, pay close attention to depth-of-field. Most likely, you'll want everything sharp from front to back, so be sure to use a small aperture along with your depth-of-field scale on the lens barrel. And because it's darker in the woods, using a small aperture (necessitating a longer shutter speed for correct exposure) will most likely require a tripod.

Forests provide many other photo opportunities. Look closely and you'll see a pattern of moss on a fallen log, a patch of intimate wildflowers or a cluster of fallen leaves. Or how about that delicate stream winding through the forest, tumbling over rocks making miniature waterfalls?

Try looking straight up at towering trees through a wide angle lens. The trees will appear to converge, producing a truly striking picture.

You've heard the expression, "You can't see the forest for the trees." In your photography, you'll easily see the forest through the trees — and capture it all on film, too.

Morning mist provided a dramatic atmosphere and careful framing with a dominant point, produced Monte Nagler's mood filled photograph.

Early days of American poster art recalled

The American art poster, born in 1893, was designed to promote magazine sales. The poster immediately became a "hot" item among collectors.

This is the period surveyed in "American Posters of the "Gay Nineties" at Detroit Institute of Arts. Approximately 90 original posters and magazine covers from the museum's permanent collection are on display through Sunday, Sept. 18, in the Schwartz Graphic Arts Galleries.

Edward Penfield, the young director of Harper's art department, designed this first popular poster.

THE BOLD SIMPLICITY of Penfield's design revolutionized the art of the poster and commercial design in America. Soon other publishers were employing young artists to design posters and covers for their periodicals. In addition to Penfield's work, the images of Will H. Bradley were particularly influential.

Referred to as the American Beardsley, Bradley distilled the current artistic styles of England, most notably the work of the Arts and Crafts Movement. Penfield, on the other hand, drew from the French humor and design sensibility of Bonnard, Vuillard, and Toulouse-Lautrec.

To accommodate public demand, publishers announced that the posters could be purchased directly from the firm or would be included as a bonus to subscribers. As early as 1895, exhibitions of the new American art posters took place — including one in Detroit's Hotel Cadillac organized by the Women's Exchange and Decorative Arts Society of Detroit.

By 1899, the craze was over. Many small publishing houses went out of business as economical photomechanical processes replaced the commercial relief and lithographic techniques for the production of posters and covers.

Penfield continued to produce monthly posters for Harper's until August of 1899.

THE POPULAR poster-collecting fad dissipated as quickly as it had begun, but the artists' work had endured. Their innovative designs set new standards for future decades.

Along with Bradley and Penfield, artists represented in the exhibition include Elisha Brown Bird, Claude Fayette Bragdon, William L. Carqueville, Joseph Christian Leyendecker, Florence Lundborg, Blanche McManus, Maxfield Parrish, Ethel Reed, Louis John Rhead, Henry Mortika Rosenberg, Rob Wagner and Charles Herbert Woodbury.

The exhibit is open during regular museum hours, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Sunday.

Board has duty to owners

condo queries

Robert M. Meisner

Q. I am sick and tired of putting up with our association who refuses to spend money on necessary items such as landscaping and building improvements. The association board, which is comprised of affluent individuals, say that we should be big enough to spend our own money in regard to some of these common area problems since that is the "gentlemenly thing to do." What is your response?

A. The board of directors, besides being sexist, may also have a poor command of what their legal responsibilities are in regard to running the association. The fact that they feel that there are not enough moneys available does not necessarily mean that they have a right to abdicate their responsibilities of maintenance. They have the inherant power to raise the assessments so that the condominium association is properly maintained. If the condominium is in any so-called affluent area, that is even more reason why the board should be ensuring that the maintenance levels of care and responsibility are suitable to the expectations of the homeowners.

Q. We are buying a house and are concerned about ensuring that the premises are turned over in good condition. We are going to have the house inspected but want to protect ourselves between the time of the inspection and closing. What can be done?

A. Be sure that your purchase agreement contains a provision that the seller must maintain the premises in good condition, that he will ensure that everything is in working and operable order at the time of the closing and that the house is turned over in "broom clean condition." You should also provide for a provision in the purchase agreement that allows you to inspect the premises immediately before closing. With these protections and a possible escrowing of moneys in the event that the condition of the premises changes, that should protect your interests; however, you should consult with an attorney for further regards.

Vintage cars theme of stamp society show

The 102nd annual convention of the American Philatelic Society and Stampshow '88 is scheduled Aug. 25-28 at Cobo Hall. It's the first time in almost 30 years that the Motor City has been host of the show, and appropriately, cars are a central theme.

Opening ceremonies Thursday, Aug. 25, will include the release of five new stamps led by a dedication from Postmaster General Anthony Frank. The stamps will feature five different designs of classic cars: the 1928 Locomobile, 1929 Pierce Arrow, 1931 Cord, 1932 Packard and a 1935 Duesenberg. Also on exhibit will be actual vintage cars on loan from private collectors.

The automotive theme will be reflected in the postal cancel for the show. The cancel depicts a 1910 vintage automobile and a variation on the seal of the American Philatelic Society. It will be used to service Stampshow '88 souvenir cards and cachets.

STAMPSHOW IS recognized as the largest annual stamp exhibition in the country. Stamp dealers, publishers and government agencies from the U.S., Canada, England and Europe will make up the bourse. More than 100 dealers from 20 states and abroad will be featured.

The show is open to the public, and admission is $2 a day; $6.50 for a four day pass. Attendance is expected to be an all time high for Stampshow '88, the 12th show sponsored by APS.

Lectures on forgeries and frauds are traditionally popular topics but recently the computers in philately seminar has drawn the largest crowds for a single presentation. Discussions of elementary philately are always crowd pleasers.

Over 500 frames of philatelic material will be displayed by exhibitors. The Grand Award winners from 34 accredited shows will exhibit their collections in the World Series of Philately, hoping to be crowned "Champion of Champions" at the show. Other exhibitors may compete in the open competition to be held at the same time.

The largest annual exhibition of philatelic literature will be the third competitive exhibit held at the stamp show. Authors, publishers and editors of recent philatelic material will display their work in the literature competition.

JURORS WILL be responsible for viewing and judging over 7,000 pages of stamps in the open competition and the World Series of Philately and numerous books, periodicals, articles and other publications.

On Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 26-28, a special section of the hall will be open to stamp collectors age 14 or less. Electric stamp identification boards, stamp card games, stamp design kits and free packets of loose stamps will provide entertainment for the young collectors.

Steve Ivy Philatelic Auctions will conduct the official auction for the APS. Over 1,100 mail and floor bidders participated in the 1987 APS auction held at Stampshow '87 in Boston. Prices realized from that auction totalled almost $2 million.

The West Suburban, Ferndale, Birmingham, Detroit, Ann Arbor, Mt. Clemens and Windsor stamp clubs will act as volunteer helpers for the show.

artifacts
David Messing

Remember fall, winter and spring? Do you remember needing a jacket? I vaguely recall cool air blowing in the wind instead of through the vents of an air conditioner.

I sweat bullets doing anything out of doors. I cleaned the garage and caught myself fondly staring at my snow blower. I am sick of summer.

I'm not built for it. I'm six feet four inches tall, two hundred and well, let's just say over two hundred pounds, and — worst of all — the humidity makes my beard go curly. I wonder if thin people are hot in this weather?

Even my swimming pool has eased into the 90s. Our dogometer has gone off several times a day. What is a dogometer? That is Tiffany, our standard poodle. When Tiffany entered her golden years (13 or 14 years old) she stopped coming into the pool.

BUT IF IT'S really sticky hot, she'll climb up on the deck and hint for us to get out her float so she can take a dip. We always say "Boy it must be hot if Tif wants in the pool." And we've been saying that all summer, several times a day.

Last week we decided to take our families to Boblo Island. The temperature on the island reached 106. How do I know? The nurse told me as she held ice bags on my neck and wrists.

I got a sun-burned head and became overheated. Mumblin' through a wet washcloth on my face I said to the nurse "This is so embarassing. I hope I'm the 50th person in here today. That way I won't feel so stupid."

She said, "Hey, with the humidity out there, your skin is reacting to 112 degrees, and I wish 50 was all we had in here today." So you see, I really am sick of summer.

BUT DO YOU, as an artist, ever say "I'm sick of this picture." Sometimes there are good reasons for being sick of a picture. Maybe your perspective is off, the anatomy incorrect or perhaps you overmixed your colors creating a study in mud.

These are times when you should be sick of your artwork, and the best thing you can do is pitch it. It is true that we can hold onto our mistakes to help remind us of our error, but often it is too upsetting to see them, and the pain of failure is often easily recalled.

The time not to throw away a picture you are tired of is when the picture has some merit. We artists often confuse fatigue with failure.

The longer you work on a piece, the more tired you become and the more susceptible you become to the "moody blues." If you become tired of working on a picture, then take a long break — maybe a month or so.

WHEN YOU SOMEDAY resurrect the piece, you may be surprised that it was the work of the art that tired you and not the piece of art, however unfinished it may be.

You see, it requires a tremendous amount of energy to start a picture. Even finishing a picture requires a tremendous amount of you.

But often the middle stage of a work of art is simply laborious. I always call this work stage the middle two feet in hooking a four foot rug.

Just because charity begins at home doesn't mean it should end there.

Nobody is suggesting that we should solve the problems of the world at the expense of our own families.

But, when we give less to charitable causes than we spend on frozen dinners and designer jeans, something is out of balance.

Suppose that, instead of the one or two percent most of us are giving now, we all raised our contribution level to five percent. Based on current income figures, we'd generate more than $175 billion for the causes we say we care about. The homeless. The environment. Religion. And the arts. Just to name a few.

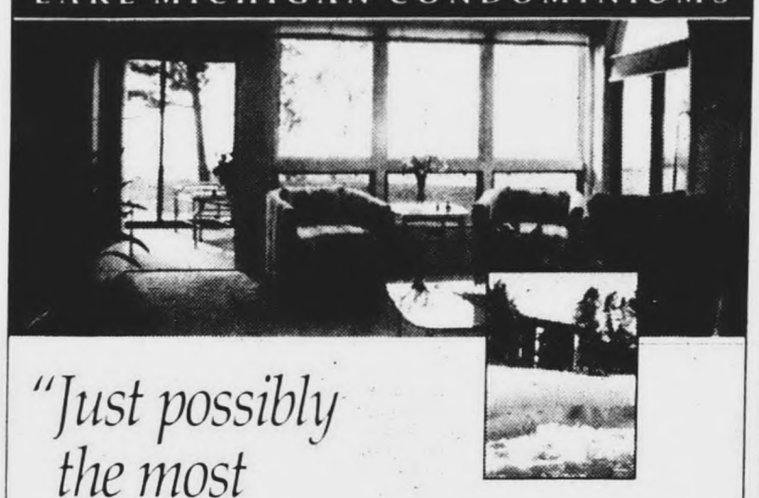

So look at your own giving. And see if you can't find a way to do just a little more.

That minor change in your family budget could be the start of some major changes in your family's world.

What you get back is immeasurable.

But if you want enough property for a horse, some privacy, out-buildings, & an inground pool, 5 miles from 12 Oaks, with an atypical 3-4 bedroom ranch, set back a few hundred ft. from the road on rolling land with mature trees, then maybe, maybe our house has all the right stuff for you. Franklin Park Towers

"During my first week at Franklin Park Towers, I found my apartment spacious, the service excellent and ... my neighbor, Dave."

"It didn't take long to feel at home at Franklin Park. My apartment is bigger than most I had looked at, and the Southfield location is close to shopping, entertainment and major highways. After the boxes were unpacked and most everything put away, it was off to the fitness center that's where I met Dave!"

AUTUMN CHIC

Credits

RANDY BORST

Four days down on the farm brought a passel of new friends including petting farm staffers Jim Fitzsimmons (left), Lillian Crandall and John Forshee along with Rosie the cow, Honey the sow and Newfoundlands Duchess and Domino, to mention a few.

[illegible] suggested Domino's Farms.

[illegible] We packed it out [illegible] that was it an utterly [illegible] farming setting that [illegible] more than any [illegible] we could think of. [illegible] was an [illegible] space for them. We made a [illegible] passel of new friends in our four days down on the farm that began early in the morning [illegible] minutes before the [illegible] were even up.

By assignment end two of our very favorite pals were Duchess and Duchess, a couple of gorgeous (and well behaved) Newfoundlands who stole our hearts the minute they came charging up to us. Also, we couldn't help noting how fashionwise they looked with their bright bandana-red neckerchiefs against their black and white coats.

There were a gaggles and flocks of others as well. You'll see them here and there in many of the photos.

But they're only half the friendship story, the other half focuses on the three people who are in charge of the petting farm who pitched in in more ways than one to help us out: Jim Fitzsimmons, Lillian Crandall and John Forshee.

Our thanks go also to Domino's Farms community relations staff for its cooperation during the shoot, especially for the use of several classic vehicles from the facility's old car museum. One, a 1948 Studebaker truck, appears on the cover.

Photographers for this special section, appearing today in all 12 Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, were Dan Dean and Randy Borst. Duane Burleson and Steve Fecht. The cover design was created by Glenna Merillat, creative services director.

Fashion writer, coordinator was Rustie Shand.

Advertising coordinators were Audrey Root and Jill Hayes.

As with any special section, if you have any questions, call me at 591-2300, Ext. 313.

Marie McGee
special sections editor

CHIC! and elegance are back again

TIMES ARE changing. Chic is back, replacing frippery and froufrou with subtle newness that is often familiar but never boring.

The new chic may still be short but not tarty, shaped but not skin-tight, and colors are muted or vibrant but not neon-blinding. The stars of the new chic are:

- Chemise dresses
- Capes
- Pants for day
- Skirtpants for evening
- Knees, topped or covered
- Coats — toppers or ankle grazing
- Shoes with shaped heels, newest in suede
- Hats, wide-brimmed for day
- Matte legs for day, still

Reliable standbys such as a sleek clutch, kid gloves, a smashing scarf or a general shawl add to the season. And bring out your very best jewelry — anything goes especially if it's real and most of all, chic.

Groups of lapel pins look new again and by all means wear ropes and chains and mix them with pearl and crystal.

And while you're ferreting in the closet for forgotten classics, bring out the blazers, the plaids and the tweeds. They're all stars again too.

The new chic seems to signal that conspicuous consumption is fading along with the '80s and that we're heading toward a new quard — quasi-conservatism that blends good taste with fashion awareness. Let's hope so, for heaven's sake.

A five-color leather, alligator embossed handbag, $235. Green suede, shaped heel pump by Petra, $145. Purple suede, spiral sculpted heel by Petra, $145. Heavy gold Chanel chain with dog tag, $190. Jacobson's.

HERE'S how Fall Chic shapes up from the fashion retailer's point of view.

At Saks Fifth Avenue, Troy store fashion coordinator Cheryl Hall predicts:

"It's going to be a rich fall — rich colors, rich fabrics, rich looks. Imperial purple. Oriental spices and East Indian gemstone colors will flatter the finest of fabrics. Tapestry prints, passementerie, embroidery, soutache and other such trappings of royalty will adorn the collars, cuffs and shoulders of the season's elite, but, for the most part, with a spare, subdued style as in a little goes a long way."

"Proportions are princely," she continues, "short over long or long over short. Evening is elegance in princess taffeta ballgowns with sequins and beading at one end of the spectrum and British "dandies" in perfectly tailored, ascot evening suits at the other end. There are also queenly columns in velvet and wool crepe for more understated yet equally impressive entrances and exits."

"The strongest trend for fall is color for both men and women. Key colors are red, purple, and emerald green.

"Suited looks for women are most important, with long or short, shaped jackets. Skirt lengths hover around the knee or slide down to mid-calf, depending on the appropriateness and the work environment. Pant suits emerge as very important again.

The new suited look for women requires a pocket square or lapel pin.

For men, the news is double-breasted patterned suits worn with crisp white shirts or sophisticated stripes and small patterned ties, especially dots.

At Bonwit Teller, the focus is elegant luxe upsale fashion, says Missy Tomonaco, director of fashion merchandising.

"There's a focus on refined, pulled-together looks with jackets as the pivotal pieces. Pants surface with legs either straight, wide or full but definitely softer for both day and night.

Suede stars in accessories in bright colors extending to suede flowers and belts. Romantic blouses and white cotton shirts are of major importance.

Dresses are key to the season in chemise, trapeze or coat shapes. In fabrics, surface interest and patterns play for all hours.

"Menswear focuses on lots of texture in everything including shirts, sweaters and trousers. There is a new sophistication for men with an emphasis on European design."
