Bills, bills, bills

It was all in a week's work; forking out nearly half a million dollars to pay bills and make purchases.

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education has approved expenditures of $254,000 for property, liability and fleet insurance; $71,000 for dumpster service; $69,000 for soccer field lighting; $56,000 for lockers at West Middle School and Salem High School; $8,600 for magazine subscriptions for schools throughout the district; $8,775 to pave the play area at Field Elementary; and $6,400 for a computerized newsbank at the Canton High School media center.

Filling the position of Canton High School principal will add $60,000 to $72,800 to the payroll. And a new position, secretary to the recently established area coordinator's job at the high schools, will be filled at an undesignated amount.

Peal departing

The award-winning CEP Perspective is losing its adviser. Christopher Peal, journalism adviser and English teacher at Plymouth-Canton High School, is resigning to accept an administrative post with another school district.

"My four years with the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools have been extremely enjoyable ones," Peal said in a letter to Superintendent John Hoben. "Our professional staff and students are outstanding, and I count it a privilege to have been able to work and grow with them."

Teacher talk

An orientation for substitute teachers and those interested in becoming substitute teachers will be Wednesday, Aug. 15, in the Canton High School Library. The meeting will begin at 1:30 p.m.

Anyone who is currently certified to teach and interested in being a substitute teacher in the Plymouth-Canton Schools should call Grace Light at 451-3124 by Friday, Aug. 3, for more information.

Citizens an asset in check recovery

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Thanks to the round-the-clock efforts of federal reserve bank employees and conscientious citizens, the Detroit office of the federal reserve has recovered about 90 percent of the roughly 350,000 cancelled checks lost when a courier's plane crashed in a Plymouth Township field Monday.

The mid-air collision near M-14 and Beck Road took the lives of three men. See related story.

THE BULK of the checks landed on and around a house on North Territorial Road a few hundred yards from the crash site. There were reports of checks being found as far away as Ann Arbor.

"We've actually processed about 90 percent of the checks, and we still have a lot of loose checks lying around," said Brian Egan, customer services manager for the Detroit

No word on cause of fatal crash

National Transportation Safety Board investigators aren't saying much about their investigation into the crash of two small airplanes in Plymouth Township July 23, pending a release of findings on the crash in six to nine months.

The 9:35 a.m. collision of the two small airplanes caused the death of three men; Daniel Starr, 34, of Cedar Springs; Robert Gunn, 65, of Livonia; and Charles Nix, 55, of Detroit.

NTSB investigators arrived in Plymouth Township hours after the crash, to observe the wreckage and scan the area for debris.

The wreckage of both airplanes — a single-engine Piper Cherokee piloted by Nix with advanced flight instructor Gunn on board, and a twin-engine Piper Aerostar piloted by Starr carrying 300,000 canceled checks — was transported Tuesday to a Mettetal Airport hangar.

There, investigators examined the wreckage for clues to the cause of the crash.

"We get the data, and we pass it on to the NTSB in Washington (D.C.)," said crash investigator Frank Gattolin, who declined to speculate on why the crash occurred.

branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago.

"Of the approximately 350,000 checks involved, we're looking at having less than 5,000 checks unaccounted for."

Checks were returned by nearly 100 individuals from a wide area, Egan said.

"We had someone from the Scott Regional Correctional Facility call. Someone picked up some checks there." Checks also were returned from neighborhoods near Sheldon and Ann Arbor roads, and Five Mile and Beck Road.

"We've been sending letters to people we've gotten calls from, thank them," said Egan.

Account holders whose checks are missing needn't worry, he added.

"The check collection system has provisions for getting a photo copy of an item that gets lost. In the normal process, checks get lost. The bank that takes the checks in over the counter microfilms them. So we can go back and get a microfilm copy. It's very unlikely the persons affected won't have the check charged to their account."

IT'S ALSO unlikely unauthorized persons could access the accounts.

"There are a lot of security provisions. I don't think that just from an account number they would be able to do anything," said Egan. "It's not like having a carbon copy of a Visa card."

"With a check it's a little bit more difficult. There are requirements as to what a check has to look like and how on it. It's within the realm of possibility, but the odds are dramatically high. And the payoffs wouldn't be very good."

A staff of 15 people, mostly check processing and adjustment clerks, worked overtime every day last week and Saturday and Sunday to handle the emergency. Things are Mural to remain?

Cronyism cry tears through S'craft board

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Emotions are boiling over at Schoolcraft College, where one board member is charging another with "blatant cronyism" for trying to secure college legal work for a friend's law firm.

Trustee Jack Kirksey has accused board president Mary Breen and attorney Robert Law, a Breen family friend, of using "undue influence" in pressing other board members to make Law's firm the college's legal representative.

Citing evidence that Law's was the only firm considered for the job, Kirksey said the situation goes "well beyond the appearance of impropriety."

Kirksey called the situation "a blatant case of cronyism" in a three-page statement he distributed to the board at a study session Wednesday night.

"Trustee Breen and attorney Robert Law have had the exclusive opportunity to lobby the individual members of the board of trustees for a number of months," Kirksey said.

The board began discussing the issue last year, appointing an ad hoc study group to discuss legal services in October.

Kirksey indicated he was angry enough to consider resigning from the board over the issue.

KIRKSEY'S COMMENTS drew emotional responses from several other trustees.

Schools win 35 new classroom computers

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

This fall, teachers and students in Plymouth-Canton Community Schools will enjoy the spoils of a political football game won by Gov. James Blanchard.

Thirty-five elementary, middle and high school classrooms will be equipped with new Apple, IBM, Tandy and Zenith computers, compliments of the state.

Blanchard recently succeeded in convincing the state Board of Education to buy more than 8,000 computers for 456 school districts at a cost of $17.8 million.

BLANCHARD HAS been accused by Senate majority leader and GOP gubernatorial candidate John Engler and Republican members of the State Board of Education of rushing his "classrooms-of-tomorrow" scheme in order to use it as a campaign ploy in the Nov. 6 election.

The program will be financed through state bonding. The state has committed to pay $1.8 million toward it this year. But because future legislatures aren't committed to paying off the debt, Plymouth-Canton school board members are debating how to best finance the purchase. School districts would have to pay the cost if legislators renege in the future.

Thirty-five elementary, middle and high school classrooms will be equipped with new Apple, IBM, Tandy and Zenith computers, compliments of the state.

The board directed Superintendent John Hoben to tell the state that Plymouth-Canton will finance the computers through the state's bond. Trustees also asked Hoben to provide advice about the best way to pay for the computers.

"The question I have is whether that's the best financing decision we can make," said Trustee Roland Thomas.

"If we borrow the $75,000 from the state, we'd pay 7 1/2 percent interest. If it's done over five years, we'd end up paying $90,000. I think right now we're earning 8 to 8 1/2 percent interest."

In order to receive computers, teachers had to submit applications explaining how they would use them. More than 24,000 teachers from 468 districts applied. Approved were requests from 8,027 teachers in 456 districts.

Irish step-dancers to perform at festival

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Folks who enjoy entertainment at the Plymouth Fall Festival compliments of the O'Hare School of Irish Dance will be watching the only two national step dancing champions ever to come out of the state of Michigan.

One is instructor and school founder Tim O'Hare, who twice won the all-world title.

The other is 10-year-old Paul Cusick of Plymouth Township, who this month won the under-11 North-American step-dancing championship in Connecticut; and a trophy that's almost as tall as he is.

STEP-DANCING, originated centuries ago, is at the core of Irish culture.

Paul, and more than 1,000 dancers 7-26 years old, performed three dances in the North American championships July 6-8 before an audience of several thousand.

"Paul blew away the rest of the competition," said O'Hare, a Canton native who has taught more than 500 students in 10 years. "He really wants it. He works harder than anyone."

Paul and his teacher will be among at least 20 costumed dancers, both boys and girls, who'll perform in Kellogg Park at the city's fall extravaganza. They'll dance a combination of reels, treble jigs and hornpipes.

Omnicom tunes into complaints

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

After asking cable TV customers to report reception complaints to him, Plymouth city commissioner John Vos said, "We're perceiving an entirely different attitude" from Omnicom officials.

But Lisa Boland, Omnicom general manager, said, "The compliments outnumber the complaints — I think them (customers) for writing."

On July 23, Vos met with Boland, mayor pro tem Ralph (Jack) Gordon and Plymouth City Manager Kenyon Jaeger to discuss reception problems reported by more than 70 area residents.

"The meeting went well," Boland said. "There isn't a problem out there."

"They're getting on top of everything," Vos said last week, as Omnicom had already begun following up on complaints he reported earlier.

"There was a problem related to Channel 22 (broadcast Channel 2)

'Most of the citizens I talked to said that their (cable) complaints were either disregarded or ignored and they had just given up complaining.'

— John Vos
Plymouth city commissioner

which in some instances they are correcting and in other areas endeavoring to correct."

VOS SAID he and several of his west Plymouth neighbors had noticed a snowy picture on 22 — which, he said, isn't right when customers are paying for cable service.

"I have stayed at literally hundreds of hotels throughout the United States in large metropolitan areas as well as suburbs and I had never seen such fuzzy or distorted pictures before," Vos wrote in an earlier memo to Jaeger.

After asking Omnicom customers

if they had reception problems, "I was amazed by the number of complaints and amazed by the fact that so many of them were similar," Vos said.

SEVERAL OMNICOM customers who wrote Vos said that when they reported reception problems to Omnicom, they were wrongly told the problem was with the subscribers' TVs.

"Most of the citizens I talked to said that their complaints were either disregarded or ignored and they had just given up complaining," he said.

"We owed a duty to our taxpayers to see to it that Omnicom Cablevision was living up to the contract." The contract expires in 1994.

BOLAND SAID eight complaints from the city were passed on to her from Vos — about one-half of 1 percent of Omnicom subscribers in the city.

"We do not feel there is a service problem with cable television," Boland said. "If there are any concerns out there we're anxious to solve them."

Vos is seeking to re-establish a city cable committee.

"We need a sounding board for citizen complaints as well as a review board to determine if we should have competitive bidding for cablevision service when the contract is up for renewal," he said.

By that contract, the city has to notify Omnicom by July 1991 if officials intend to drop Omnicom in favor of another cable TV company.

Board erupts over charges of 'cronyism'

Breen said Law's firm — Law, Hemming, Essad & Polaczyk of Plymouth — was chosen because it was the best qualified local firm, not because of favoritism.

"The fact remains there's no other firm in the Schoolcraft district as qualified as this firm," Breen said.

At the study session, Breen angrily denied Kirksey's allegations of cronyism, especially his statement that Law headed her election campaign.

"My husband (Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen) was my campaign manager," she said.

Trustee Thaddeus McCotter alleged Kirksey's comments were prompted by a grudge over Law's alleged failure to support Kirksey's failed 1987 Livonia mayoral bid.

THOUGH EMOTIONS cooled — McCotter issued a public apology to Kirksey later in the study session — trustees appear divided on the attorney selection process.

Clear standards are needed, Kirksey said, to evaluate the college's current representative, Miller, Canfield, Paddock & Stone of Detroit, as well as any potential new representatives.

Trustee Harry Greenleaf agreed, saying the situation at least gives off "the appearance of impropriety." Greenleaf suggested the interview process begin again.

BUT TRUSTEE Wendell Smith, who headed the committee to study college legal services, said there is no need to consider other candidates.

Smith acknowledged that Law, Hemming was the only firm considered by the ad hoc committee.

"We asked trustees to come up with names of firms they wanted to see us interview and nobody came up with anybody else," Smith said.

The committee decided against inviting firms to make a presentation, either to the study group or full board, he said.

"We're small potatoes," he said. "We didn't want to waste people's time."

Several law firms were written off without interview, Smith said.

"They didn't appear to meet our needs."

THE Law, Hemming firm serves a number of communities, including Plymouth, Canton and Northville townships, as well as the Western Townships Utility Association.

Trustee Jeanne Stempien said she favored giving college business to Law, Hemming because it is a qualified local firm.

Law has been Schoolcraft College's lobbyist in Lansing for the past year. He earns an estimated $1,200 a month in the post, Breen said.

He is a former state legislator and aide to Wayne County commissioner Susan Heintz, R-Northville Township.

WHILE LAW was unavailable for comment last week, partner Jud Hemming said matters had been discussed at a meeting between the firm and the ad hoc study group.

"They asked us for an interview," Hemming said.

College officials, including president Richard McDowell, were present during the interview, Hemming said.

"When you're selecting professional services, it's more unique than just selecting contractors," Hemming said.

"We feel we are well qualified and we are local and the board apparently expressed a preference for a firm in its district."

Hemming said he, not Law, would be the college's legal counselor should trustees approve the firm.

BECAUSE THE Wednesday night meeting was a study session, trustees could not have approved Law, Hemming as the college's legal representative. They could do so, however, at the next board meeting Aug. 22.

Though not part of the ad hoc group, Stempien, also an attorney, said that a conversation with Law cleared up the concerns she had about the firm.

Kirksey, however, questioned why other firms weren't given an opportunity to speak with trustees.

COLLEGE LEGAL matters have been handled by Miller, Canfield, one of the Detroit area's largest law firms, for 19 years.

Several trustees, including Burley and Stempien, said they were dissatisfied with Miller, Canfield, over its handling of a contract for office development on Schoolcraft property.

"Miller, Canfield hasn't done the job... They've treated us second-rate," Burley said.

Stempien said she was "extremely dissatisfied" with Miller, Canfield because of what she termed "overcharging and poor performance."

She said she believed the firm often assigned two attorneys to provide counseling to situations when only one was necessary.

"It was not just one screw up but several screw ups," Stempien said.

Greenleaf, the board's senior member, said the land development incident was the only major dispute with the firm in its long relationship with the college. The dispute was resolved to the board's satisfaction, he said.

While the agreement calls for "on call" legal services, without a retainer, the college has spent an estimated $30,000 a year for legal services in recent years.

THE BOARD'S discussion of college legal services has a history of its own.

Legal services were to have been discussed at a June 27 meeting at Schoolcraft College-Radcliff, in Garden City, but the issue was pulled off the agenda in favor of discussing it at a study session before taking action.

Greenleaf asked Breen to remove it from the agenda and discuss it at a study session.

At that time, trustees considered holding the study session several weeks later in Traverse City — while all board members were attending a state conference for community college officials.

Though Smith's summer cottage was also a suggested site, it too was ruled out.

As Wednesday's study session concluded, McCotter suggested members should have met in closed session to keep their disagreements from being made public — though such a move would clearly violate the state's Open Meetings Act.

Breen, however, decided to change the site after discussing its potential violation of state Open Meetings Act with outside attorneys.

"I decided against going to Miller, Canfield," she said. "That would have cost us money."

clarification

The Plymouth Landing was inadvertently omitted from a recent story about Plymouth restaurants and their Wayne County Health Department inspections.

The Landing was given a score of 60 points of a possible 100 in an April inspection.

According to public health sanitarian Nancy Workman, The Landing's kitchen is "very clean. They have a lovely operation and a good chef who knows food-handling processes."

The Landing lost points because salad dressings were at improper temperatures and raw meat was stored on an upper rather than lower shelf. The restaurant needed weather stripping on the back door and a system to divert water should the sink back up, she said.

Candidate wants to give voters a choice

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Democratic state House candidate Dennis Shrewsbury says he's running "to give the voters a choice for a change instead of having the Republican opposition just walk in all the time."

The Plymouth lawyer is running unopposed in the Aug. 7 Democratic primary for the 36th district state House seat, now held by Rep. Gerald Law.

Shrewsbury calls the environment "the most important issue. We've got to be more aware of the world," Shrewsbury said. "The state should do more — we should all work to do more."

A lawyer since 1982, Shrewsbury has worked as a criminal fraud investigator for 10 years.

He noted that some are questioning the way schools are paid for in Michigan, through property tax assessments. "There's a big controversy if the property taxes should be changed — I'm not sure how to fund schools," Shrewsbury said.

"But as a society we all have to pay for all children even if they're not our own. Every day, I deal with people downtown who don't know how to read and can't tell you which direction is north or south.

"The thing is everybody has to be responsible for paying. We're all going to reap the benefits for an educated society or pay for more jails, more social workers, more judges," he continued.

"You've got to pay. You don't get anything free in this world," said Shrewsbury.

"Are we going to continue to tax ourselves indirectly through increased insurance rates and losses, or are we going to pay for it by trying to help solve the problems?" he asked.

Shrewsbury said that through his work in Detroit, he's noticed "A large percentage of all the crimes in the city of Detroit and Wayne County are connected with cocaine. The high use of cocaine by young under-educated people indicates to me a lack of education and a lack of personal responsibility for their own actions. They need to be punished but they need to be helped too.

On the issue of abortion, Shrewsbury is pro-choice, adding, "I'm not afraid to say it. I think it should be a woman's choice as to what she wants to do with her body."

Members of a local karate group showed their peers that they were among the best in the U.S.

An Isshinryu Karate class, taught by Plymouth Township resident Sam Santilli, won 28 trophies in the Grand National Tournament in Canton recently.

The tournament drew Isshinryu Karate specialists from Tennessee, Chicago, Philadelphia, New York, New Jersey, Florida and Massachusetts.

SANTILLI HAS taught Isshinryu Karate for the Canton Parks and Recreation Department for 15 years. His students range in age from 6 to 60 years, and class sizes vary between 15 and 40 students, said Santilli, 50. Isshinryu karate teaches self-defense. "It's mental as well as physical discipline," he said. "I get kids who are bad at home."

AMONG HIS success stories, Santilli said, is changing "D" students to C, B and A students.

"I make sure they're doing well in school and if they're not they have to go. I think it's important that they do both."

"I teach them mental discipline." Santilli has a masters sixth degree black belt.

The classes are taught 7:30-9 p.m. Monday and Thursday.

Boutique offers one-stop shopping

By Sue Mason
staff writer

Where can you go and get a haircut, shop for clothes, buy a few gifts and some cosmetics and only walk through one door?

A shopping mall? Nope. One of those super-duper we've-got-everything supermarkets? Nope. It's Glamour and Gifts.

In a small storefront on Rayburn, just east of Middlebelt Road, 12 crafters, an Avon distributor and a cosmetologist have put together a shop that has everything you need except something for dinner.

"We give people an opportunity to buy something very, very special," said Chris Malinowski of Livonia, who got the ball rolling.

Malinowski broke the mold more than a year ago by switching from in-home Avon sales to a retail setting, sharing the small shop with a weight loss program.

When the latter moved out, she remodeled the store and happened on the idea of adding crafters to the selection.

She found her first crafters by visiting flea markets and craft fairs and putting ads in the newspaper. Her offer of a month's rent for what it cost for weekend space at such a market was a big selling point.

"The first time I went out to a craft show, I went up to people who had a good product and a good price," she said. "Then I ran an ad in the paper and they came in. They found that the rent was like what it would be in one craft fair."

AT FIRST, Malinowski took a percentage of the sales, but eventually eliminated that, so the store now is run as a co-op. Each dealer works a minimum of two days a month and has a hand in making decisions about the shop.

Shoppers can order products by Avon, Home Interior, House of Lloyds and Tupperware, well known for their in-home sales programs, handmade clothing, costume jewelry, handmade quilts and baskets, woodcrafts, wooden banks, needlepoint and crocheted items, one-of-a-kind coffee mugs and silk floral arrangements.

Lisa Crumb of Canton Township got her start making Victorian bears a year ago while selling Home Interior products. She dresses up small bears and candle lamps to display with the different home decorating products at home parties.

Her husband made small wooden chairs for the bears, and when she started "doing better with the bears," Crumb decided to make a switch from craft shows to the storefront.

"People would ask me where I was going to be next, and I was also doing orders, so when I saw Chris and the shop, I knew this is where I would be forever," she said.

A former preschool teacher, Crumb enjoys working at the shop because she can bring her 3-year-old daughter Jaclyn to work with her. A small room has been fixed up so that the crafters can bring their children to work and avoid the cost of a baby sitter.

"SHE'LL TELL her friends they have to go because 'I have to go to work now,'" Crumb said.

Emma Egmore of West Bloomfield leans against the door jamb of her beauty shop and waits for her 11:30 a.m. appointment. She offers everything from a haircut for $10 to perms for $35 and highlighting for $25. In her 20s, Egmore likes working in the storefront.

"I like working for myself better than someone else," she said. "There are some days where I don't have to come in and others where they call me in. I'm busy mostly toward the end of the week."

Plymouth woman carries on family tradition with her art

By Amy Harmon
staff writer

Mary Ann Olson made herself comfortable in the tent-like area set aside for her at the Ann Arbor Summer Art Fair — as comfortable as the 90 degree weather and sporadic rain storms would allow.

The only Plymouth resident among the nearly 1,000 artists lining the streets of Ann Arbor, Olson is a veteran of the art fair.

This year Olson came prepared with two lawn chairs, a small table, a cooler and a large thermos, but the furniture didn't daunt the stream of people in the street from stopping, inspecting, discussing, and buying the pen and ink and water color drawings hanging on the walls.

THE FAIR, Olson said, has changed significantly since her first experience with it in 1971.

"It's much more professional now, and much more selective." Sponsored by the Michigan Guild of Artists and Artisans, the fair is open only to artists whose work has been submitted to and approved by a guild committee.

ARTISTIC TALENT runs in Olson's family.

"My grandfather and his three brothers were all artists. Then it skipped my mother's generation, but there are three of us cousins in my generation who are artists. My mother looked out for it with me," Olson said.

Her art lessons began when she was 9, and she's been drawing ever since.

Now a full-time art teacher at the Gabriel Richard High School, Olson doesn't get much time to produce her own work. "I work mostly in the summers," she said. I feel that being an art teacher, I should be involved with the arts."

The Ann Arbor fair helps her keep in touch with regular customers and collect new ones, Olson said.

"I TRY to do new things. I started out doing mostly fruits and vegetables," she said, pointing to a framed drawing on the back wall. "This year I have three themes: cats, the sea, and Indians."

Specializing in combining pen and ink with watercolor, Olson's art falls under the mixed media category in the Art Fair Guide.

"It's rather unique," she said, "I don't think anybody else does anything quite like this. I do my own matting and framing as well."

THE ART fair has its ups and downs, Olson said. She was in her booth from set-up time at 7:15 a.m. until 9:15 p.m. Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. On Saturday, the fair ended at 5 p.m.

"It's hard when it's slow and I'm sitting for a long time," she said, "but then someone comes in and buys something and I perk right up."

Being surrounded by so many artists at the fair, she says, encourages her in her own work. "I see other people's work and it inspires me to keep creating."

Board to consider office renovation

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Under a $1.9 million plan presented last week by Superintendent John Hoben, the Plymouth-Canton school district could renovate the board office at 454 S. Harvey at the same time an addition is built.

Architect Erick Carne will be ready to begin work on the addition two weeks after the board approves Hoben's plan or an alternate plan.

The project is to be financed with $925,000 approved for the expansion by voters in a 1986 bond issue. Plans had called for renovation at a later date of the existing building.

HOBEN SAID the district could finance the renovation by using $290,900 in interest; $278,000 from the capital improvement fund; $406,000 from the fund balance; $71,000 that became available when the new maintenance building came in under budget; and $11,000 in asphalt funds.

The financing method would avoid having to go to the voters for a bond, said Hoben.

The renovation is needed to enlarge offices, restructure halls, construct partitions, and to complete heating and duct work.

Board members, who will examine details of the plan at tonight's workshop, are leaning in favor of the proposal.

"It's a good idea; we may as well do it and get it over with," said Trustee Barbara Graham, adding that it would be advisable to accommodate employees in the addition while the renovation is under way.

"I think it's going to be a little difficult to house everyone during construction. This is the most compact building; it's crammed. Offices are like two-by-two closets," she said.

TRUSTEE ROLAND Thomas said, "Conceptually, I like the idea. I've been through two others like this (at Ford Motor where Thomas works).

"From a practical, conceptual point of view, it's good to do all at once.

"The philosophical question is, are we willing to take the money out of the general fund to do this?"

Thomas said he'll make up his mind once details are presented at tonight's workshop. The session is set for 7 p.m. at the Cherry Hill School.

Drunk driver arrested in crash

A man who told police he was drinking and fishing all day was involved in a traffic accident in front of the Plymouth police station about 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The 46-year-old Plymouth man lost control of his car and hit another car after his car was struck by a car driven by a woman who failed to yield while making a left turn at Main and Church.

The woman and her two children, aged 13 and 15, were transported to a local hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

The woman was ticketed and the Plymouth man was arrested.

At the scene was an off-duty Plymouth officer who tended to the injured passengers. The officer said he heard a crash, then saw the man's vehicle jump the curb, striking a red car that was stopped on Church. The man's blood-alcohol level was .20. A level of .10 is considered legally drunk in Michigan.

CAR-BASHING: A man who was fired from a business on Pearl Street is suspected of taking his anger out on a supervisor's car the morning of July 23. The woman's 1986 Honda had $800 worth of damage when someone used a "club or pipe-type weapon" to beat and dent the right front and hood of the car, according to police.

The employee, who had been a

temporary worker, had been observed hanging around the car.

WATCH GONE: A $12,000 Rolex gold wrist watch was discovered missing at 6:18 p.m. Wednesday from the master bedroom of a Plymouth Township house, as its owner was getting ready to go out for the evening.

The watch had a champagne tapestry dial and a small wrist band, the man told police.

Also missing was a $1,500 diamond and gold ring, according to the police report.

LAWN JOBS: Two homeowners on Hillcrest in Plymouth Township reported damage to their lawns early Wednesday, after someone had driven a car on their grass.

One homeowner reported $100 in damage to a 75- to 100-foot area of his lawn. Another reported $50 in damage to 50 feet of his lawn. The damage occurred between 11 p.m. Tuesday and 12:01 a.m. Wednesday, the report said.

RAFT TAKEN: A two-person survival raft was taken from a Plymouth Township garage by two youths on minibikes Wednesday, a Greenbriar homeowner told police.

The man told police two youths approached him and began asking questions at 2:25 p.m. He told police that after he went back inside his house, he became suspicious of the youths' intentions, then went back outside to see them riding away with the raft. The man described the youths as about 16 years old, of medium build and with short brown hair. One youth was about 5 feet 7 inches tall and the other 5 feet 8 inches tall, he told police.

FLAG DISAPPEARS: Flag-burning may be a big deal in Congress, but in Plymouth a more common occurrence is flags disappearing.

A flag and a pole topped with an eagle vanished from in front of a Plymouth woman's house sometime between July 16 and 23.

There are no known witnesses or suspects. Value is estimated at $60.

THANKS A LOT: A Canton man who was picking up children on Mill Street to go to church about 9:30 a.m. July 22 was bitten on the nose by a Dalmatian.

The man said it was an accident and filed a police report per his doctor's instructions.

THIRSTY THEVERY: Budweiser is a hit with someone around Plymouth who wears gray shorts. The owner of a Penniman Street party store reported that shortly after midnight July 22, a man in his early 20s and dressed in gray shorts and a light blue shirt grabbed two cases of Budweiser from the cooler and left in a light-colored car without paying.

Plymouth police were given a license plate number by the store owner, but had no luck tracking the suspect down.

The beer was worth $34.58.

The evening of July 19, the owner of the Mayflower Party Store reported that a young man who looked about 16 and wore gray shorts, a blue and white striped shirt and Top-siders took a case of Bud Dry without paying the $15.19 he owed.

A witness, the son of Plymouth Fire Chief Al Matthews, saw the suspect drive off in a white 1988 or 1989 Escort. The license plate was covered with a pair of yellow shorts. Darryl Matthews followed the suspect onto eastbound I-96, where he lost him.

DDA eyes downtown improvements, store on Amoco site

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

A downtown anchor store at the closed Amoco service station site?

The planning consultant hired by the city Downtown Development Authority and some authority members say they'd like to see such a store on the southeast corner of Main and Ann Arbor Trail.

The subject was raised at the DDA meeting July 19, as consultants from the planning firm Schervish Vogel Merz presented some preliminary plans for a revised downtown streetscape.

But DDA member Jack McKeon said city officials once tried to lure a Jacobson's store to the location more than 10 years ago but the company wasn't interested.

"We will never get an anchor store in downtown Plymouth — It will never happen," he said, as a major retailer would need to rent adjacent space to other retailers to help pay the rent — and this isn't possible at the relatively small location.

DDA Chairman Greg Goodman agreed but added, "I don't think it's a lost cause."

DDA member Fred Hill added, "We may have a major anchor there and we don't know it. It's called the Mayflower Meeting House and the Mayflower Motel."

Planning consultants Kent Anderson and Amy Schlemmu showed authority members drawings of proposed improvements to the look of the downtown business district.

Anderson described that downtown theme as colonial. "It is picked up in the residential areas" as well, he said.

To fit that theme, Anderson proposed English forecourt gardens — large, raised planters placed between some store and sidewalk areas carrying pedestrian traffic.

Such changes "would re-enhance Penniman as a pedestrian area and not a parking lot," he said.

The forecourt idea "happens to work historically with a theme we're trying to develop," he said.

Among other suggestions were wood benches along downtown streets, using Fralick as a possible traffic artery out of downtown to relieve traffic on Ann Arbor Trail where traffic lanes could be narrowed to increase sidewalk space, reversing traffic on Penniman, and creating a parking deck in the parking lot next to the library.

The architects are also scheduled to review lighting, garbage cans, signs and possible improvements in Kellogg Park.

Approval and implementation of such a plan is up to the city commission.

Step-dancers to perform

Paul, who'll be a fourth grader at Our Lady of Good Counsel Elementary in the fall, began competing at 6, a year after his first lesson. He finished second in regional competition in 1988 and 1989, and last year took sixth in the national contest.

BOXES OF MEDALS, trophies and engraved silver plates won at competitions in New York, Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, Illinois and Canada are creating a space problem on Nantucket Street.

"I need shelving bad," said Paul's mother, Maureen Cusick. "I'm running out of space."

Maureen Cusick took Paul to Ireland last spring where he entered world competition. Paul didn't place — a happening he says won't be repeated next year — but he won hearts just the same on the Emerald Isle.

"Paul met some of his great aunts and uncles and saw where both his grandparents were born," said Cusick. "We visited a cousin in Wexford. Her husband's uncle, a man about 85 years old, lived with them. He asked Paul to dance, and when he did, the man just sat there and cried. He was just happy to see this tradition being carried on."

Paul doesn't mind being on stage, except when people he knows are in the audience.

"I don't like performing in front of everyone I know when I wear my kilt," said Paul.

Celtic warriors wore kilts in battle, "but try telling that to the rest of the kids," laughed Mike O'Hare, a former regional step-dance champion who with his brother, Tim, runs the O'Hare School of Irish dance.

"When they get that, kids run with it."

BUTTERFLIES AREN'T a problem for Paul either — "He gives them all to me," says his mother.

At the North American competition, "I wasn't nervous. I thought I'd get in the top three," Paul said. "I was nervous when they gave the results."

Paul — whose sisters Katie, 14, and Sheila, 13, also dance — plays basketball and Little League baseball, studies violin and has as a paper route.

But he's in dance for the long haul.

"I want to be a teacher when I grow up. I'd like to watch some of my kids in my dancing school. And I can keep traveling," he said.

The rewards of dance go beyond trophies, traveling and making friends from other states and countries, say the O'Hares and Cusicks.

"I've seen kids come into lessons with their chins down and no self confidence," said Tim O'Hare. "They learn to dance, and you wouldn't know it was the same kid."

She sold her car to come to Michigan and supported herself for a year by doing quilting for other people. When she landed a full-time job, she gave up her quilting, but got back into it a few years ago.

"Most of the people here are housewives and are able to bring their kids with them," she said.

"This place is great because you're still able to work and have your kids with you."

Both shoppers and shopkeepers come from throughout Wayne and Oakland counties, but Malinowski believes she may be the store's "best customer."

To SIDS parents,
this is music to the ears.

Imagine you're a parent, checking on your baby in the middle of the night. You wait for the sound of breathing. A cry. A coo. Anything.

When SIDS (Sudden Infant Death Syndrome) takes a victim, there is only silence.

It's commonly known as "Crib Death." The death of a seemingly healthy baby for no apparent reason.

SIDS is the number one cause of death in infants from one week to one year old . . . causing more deaths than cystic fibrosis, childhood cancer and heart disease combined.

Over 7,000 babies each year.

This killer strikes quickly, quietly, with no warning. A SIDS baby dies within seconds, usually while he's sleeping. He suffers no pain. He doesn't cry out.

One of the most disturbing facts about SIDS is that there's no way to predict it. No way to prevent it. Not yet.

But there is hope. With your help we can find the cause and the cure.

Donations of your time and of your dollars will make a difference. You can help save a life. Then we can all hear the sweet sounds of a baby's cry.

MET to extend fall enrollment period

AP — Parents will have four weeks to sign up their children for Michigan's college tuition prepayment plan this fall, the Michigan Education Trust board decided Tuesday.

The MET application period will run from Oct. 15 to Nov. 9, said Treasurer Robert Bowman, who serves as chairman of the board. The past two enrollment periods were just a week long.

The program benefited from free publicity during 1988, its first application period, but got far less publicity last year and probably will get even less this year now that the novelty has worn off, he said.

"The thought is by lengthening it, it gives potential enrollees more time to hear about it, instead of just the one week, if something's going on in their life it could come and go and they wouldn't know about it," he said.

MET permits investors to pay for college tuition in advance at a discounted rate. That's because the earnings on the payments invested by the state are projected to grow to cover the cost of future tuition.

Payments vary based on the age of the child being enrolled, but last year it cost $7,664 to enroll a newborn for four years of college tuition.

Prices for the 1990 enrollment period will be set in about 30 days, once Michigan's colleges and universities set their tuition levels for next year, Bowman said.

More than 49,200 children have been enrolled in the program in its first two years, creating a fund of more than $349 million.

Bowman said the longer enrollment period is a step to a year-round enrollment period. Investors sometime may be able to buy MET contracts any time of the year, with different rates to cover the fall or the spring enrollment, he said.

Bowman said it's impossible to say how many will sign up this year, but plans to add monthly payment options and payroll deductions might boost participation this year.

OU staff, high tech firm identify computer virus

Oakland University officials and a Lake Orion high technology firm have collaborated to identify the insidious Jishi virus, an international virus introduced into America from India which infects computers.

The virus was discovered first at Sensor Developments Inc., in Lake Orion, and then found to be infecting two IBM computers in an OU engineering lab states George Dahlgren, OU vice provost.

Since the original problem was discovered, an additional 40 personal computers in OU's Dodge Hall of Engineering and one in Kresge Library were found to be contaminated, university officials say. The machines have been disinfecting as of July 25.

Dahlgren says the virus is activated by the computer's internal clock registering Jan. 5 and being restarted. When activated, the Jishi virus locks up the infected machine and displays the message "type happy birthday Jishi." The system stays locked until the message is typed. The virus is insidious in attacking stored documents in a random fashion, Dahlgren says. It also causes problems in reading from 1.2Mb diskettes.

The university's academic computing operations for IBM and Apple computers are now protected through association with off-campus specialists who are providing software capable of detecting and disinfecting infected computers.

The vice provost of the Rochester university says that any personal computer user concerned about a possible virus in his or her machine may call the computer lab at 313-370-HELP for assistance.

THE UNIVERSITY'S academic computing operations for IBM and Apple computers are now protected through association with off-campus specialists who are providing software capable of detecting and disinfecting infected computers.

The original problem was brought to OU's attention by Albert E. Brendel, president of Sensor Developments, Inc. The firm had a special program created to free up its infected computers.

Dahlgren said the university is concerned about the entire question of viruses and of copying problems concerning computer programs. "We are continuing our review of computer program use, copyright laws, and potential contamination of computers throughout the university community," he said.

The spread of the virus between Lake Orion and OU may have occurred by a university student taking a contaminated disk between the university, where he took courses, and the computer firm where he worked, Dahlgren said. The vice provost said there was no firm evidence as to whether the virus was picked up at OU and transmitted to Lake Orion or vice versa.

He explains the Jishi virus can be spread by any floppy disk and that a bad disk will spread the infection to any computer into which it is inserted.

Dahlgren said people could help stem the possible spread of Jishi and other viruses by making sure that they don't carry their floppy disks from home to work or from the office to home.

We Need Volunteers Who Love Happy Campers!

Sun Deer campers are happy campers and it's no wonder because most severely asthmatic kids are forced to spend their summers indoors. At Camp Sun Deer, asthmatic kids ages 9-12 participate in a variety of outdoor activities, but they can't do it without your help. The limitations and doubts they face can be diminished by a volunteer who cares. Your participation at Camp Sun Deer can make all the difference in an asthmatic child's summer.

Vegetables are perfect for stuffing

OH, YE with garden, take heed! The very best summer vegetables are those picked in their infancy — tiny, tender and still glistening with the fresh dew of morning.

But, as summer wears on, the garden patch seems to explode, sometimes producing faster than we can harvest.

But when you return from your vacation to find the inevitable zucchini that, in your absence, has grown to the size of a Volkswagen, look upon it as an opportunity to turn a liability into an asset with wonderful stuffed vegetable dishes.

Even those who don't toil to raise their own vegetables will always need to find uses for mature vegetables, since many farmers, choosing heft over flavor, wait to pick their crops until they have reached maximum growth.

By the end of summer, markets and kitchen gardens alike are flooded with vegetables that are perfect for stuffing.

Vegetables most adapted to stuffing are artichokes, cabbages, tomatoes, zucchini, peppers, onions, eggplant, turnips and mushrooms.

Many of these can be filled and cooked and served either hot or cold. Ah, but the most proficient by far is the lowly summer squash, which, because of its delicate flavor, is always ideal for stuffing.

ZUCCHINI, CROOKED neck, pattypan and acorn squash beg to be stuffed with the likes of a delicate poppyseed bread stuffing or, in contrast, a hearty stuffing comprised of chopped sausage, onion, garlic and tomato.

Even a subtle mixture of both could only benefit their obscure flavor.

Momma always prepared zucchini stuffed with a mixture of cottage cheese, parmesan, egg and pepper.

Combining the latter, she would whack the giant zucchini lengthwise with a kitchen weapon we as kids called "the machete."

Using a wooden spoon that sometimes doubled as a disciplinary tool, she would scoop out the seeds with one firm stroke, something that to this day she still accomplishes with skill.

Even though the filling was a simple mixture of dairy products — farmer's cheese, fresh grated Romano cheese, Amish brown eggs and fresh ground pepper — she still secretly proclaims her recipe to be the best (or so dad says.)

But that's OK, Momma's taste for the simple will never go out of style.

Momma not only excelled at stuffing zucchini, but could also stuff one mean pepper and an occasional onion.

The peppers weren't the typical Hungarian stuffed peppers baked beyond recognition in canned tomato juice.

Hers were first roasted to remove the bitter skins, then stuffed with a meatloaf type mixture comprised of ground beef, pork and veal.

I CAN remember watching her open one of those tiny cans of mushrooms in gravy, a can of french fried onion rings and a can of Campbell's condensed cream of celery soup.

Mix it all with a diced onion (with hands, of course), then scoop up just enough of the mixture to be stuffed into an awaiting green pepper shell.

Topped with just a splash of tomato juice, these stuffed peppers were right up there on the family's list of favorite requests when mealtime came around.

So if Mother Nature pulls a fast one on you and your garden, never underestimate what a little stuffing might do.

Don't forget to add "stuff it" to your vegetable repertoire of slice it, dice it, chop it, stir fry it, steam it, bake it, shake it, etc.

What might have been a reject can become a star — with stuffing.

Easy, elegant cakes

By Geri Rineschler
special writer

IT'S ALMOST August, and my best friend's birthday is around the corner. And, now that it's hot and humid, what kind of birthday cake can I prepare for a gourmet with a sophisticated palate? Certainly not one made from a mix, and certainly not one with lots of gooey buttercream or rich, melting chocolate.

Now that I've eliminated most of the standards, the choices are still many because cake baking is a long and varied tradition. As far back as ancient Egypt, 4,000 years ago, cakes were baked for special occasions including birthdays. In a tomb in Thebes, hieroglyphic drawings were found that showed men pulverizing grain and dates with huge stones, mixing batter and pouring it into long, narrow molds.

The Germans are credited with starting the tradition of making special cakes for birthdays. Their specialties are the napfkuchen, an all-butter cake, and a rectangular fruit stollen surrounded with candles. The Scandinavians prepare a towering confection made of graduated rings of pastry called kringle which is usually served during the winter with hot chocolate.

My favorite Italian birthday or special-occasion cake originated in Sicily. The base is made of pan di spagna, a sponge cake, and is filled with two different fillings. A vanilla or chocolate custard and sliced peaches filling is used for the first layer, and a traditional ricotta cheese, canoli mixture with chocolate shavings is used for the other. The cake is sprinkled with rum before filling and, once assembled, is covered with a whipped-cream frosting. And it's most likely the most fattening cake in existence.

ALTHOUGH THE typical American frosted layer cake may suit the occasion, a number of seemingly exotic creations can be designed using the same basic techniques and ingredients.

A truly special cake should look truly special. And while no one can expect to rival the cake-decorating abilities of a world famous pastry chef, there are many simple ways to make a cake look beautiful. A simple buttercream frosting or a melted white-chocolate glaze can cover a one- or two-layer cake quickly and elegantly.

LET THEM EAT CAKE

If you've never experimented with a pastry-decorating bag, baking a cake for a special cake is not the time to practice. Instead, improvise with colorful, fresh flowers, blossoms or herbs, making sure that those you use are edible. Roses, violets, violas, nasturtiums, day lilies, bachelor's button and lavender can all be used safely to decorate the tops of a cake or to cover the sides.

Sweet woodruff and thyme are two lacy herbs which add a graceful look to a cake when arranged along the bottom layer. Store fresh flowers in the refrigerator and decorate just before serving. To decorate a day ahead, use flower sinkers available from any local florist.

If you're not comfortable covering the sides of a cake or torte, consider using sliced almonds, shredded coconut or chopped nuts. Keep in mind that the garnish should blend somewhat with the flavors incorporated in the cake.

A SPECIAL cake doesn't have to be two layers. The cake featured in the photograph was made from a simple egg and flour base, flavored with lemon zest and Grand Marnier.

To achieve the floral shape, the batter was baked in a 10-inch round cake pan. After cooling the cake and removing it from the pan, I cut the flower design with a paring knife, following the outline of a 9-inch floral pastry ring.

But it's not essential to use a pastry ring to cut a cake into a decorative design. Any design can be traced onto a piece of parchment paper or tracing paper. Just center the pattern on top of the cake and cut with a boning knife or slicing knife, holding the blade perpendicular to the counter.

After glazing the cake, I covered the entire side of the one-layer cake with embossed ribbon which is the same width as the depth of the cake. The ribbon will adhere easily to the icing. Trim the ribbon after wrapping so that the two ends meet without overlapping.

For another festive look, add crystallized flowers in place of or in addition to the fresh flowers. It's a simple process, but the flowers must be made a day or two before using them. Violets are most often crystallized, but they only bloom in May and early June.

I PREFER crystallizing violas, which bloom all summer and are easier to work with because they have a larger surface. And they're more versatile because they come in a variety of colors.

Patience is the key to making any successful baked dessert. Good baking techniques and a good basic recipe are equally essential. Just a few helpful hints now will guarantee outstanding results.

Always preheat the oven for at least 15 minutes before baking. Check the oven temperature frequently, using a mercury thermometer. Oven thermostats often need to be recalibrated or adjusted. When a cake recipe specifies cake flour, replace two tablespoons of all purpose flour with two tablespoons of cornstarch per cupful. Always fold dry ingredients into the batter, using a large rubber spatula.

When buying cake pans, look for heavy aluminum ones with a dull finish. Pans should be filled no more than half full. To prepare the pan, grease with a shortening spray such as Baker's Joy or a solid vegetable shortening. Line the bottom of the pan with a round of parchment paper to prevent sticking, then grease again.

If you're not using a baking spray, lightly dust the pan with 1 tablespoon of flour. Shake and remove excess. After baking, test for doneness by inserting a metal skewer or toothpick in the center of the cake, it should come out clean.

Allow the cake to cool completely before frosting.

RECIPES

BASIC FOAMCAKE

5 large eggs
½ cup granulated sugar
the zest of 2 lemons or oranges
2 tablespoons Grand Marnier or other citrus liqueur or brandy
1 cup all purpose flour

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Generously grease two, 9-inch baking pans, line with parchment paper, grease again and dust with flour, shaking off excess. Beat eggs and sugar together in a mixer at high speed until the batter forms a ribbon. Sift ½ of flour over batter and fold with spatula. Continue folding by thirds, adding zest and Grand Marnier. Spoon batter into pans and bake in center of oven for 30 minutes. When done, cool in the pan on a baking rack. Invert and cool completely before frosting. Makes two 9-inch cakes.

WHITE CHOCOLATE CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

A simple frosting. Can be colored with a few drops of cream or liquid food coloring. Makes about 1 ½ cups.
3 oz. Swiss white chocolate (Tobler)
4 oz. cream cheese
¼ cup unsalted butter

Break chocolate pieces and melt in top of a double boiler with hot water, not boiling. Stir when chocolate begins to melt. Stir until smooth. Allow to cool. In mixer, beat cream cheese and butter together. Gradually add cooled chocolate. When smooth add a few drops of food coloring if desired. Beat again. This recipe makes enough to cover 1 layer such as the floral cake photographed. Recipe can easily be doubled or tripled for larger cakes.

Sarah's Autumn Layer Cake

A moist fresh-fruit cake once prepared as a birthday cake for a set of sophisticated two-year-olds.

1 cup apples, peeled and diced
1 cup pears, peeled and diced
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon ground allspice
¼ cup unsalted butter
¾ cup brown sugar

1 large egg
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. baking powder
1 ¾ cups sifted flour
½ cup chopped walnuts
½ cup dried currants
Garnish: 1 cup chilled whipping cream and ¼ cup sifted confectioners sugar

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9-inch cake pan with butter, then dust with flour, shaking off excess. Combine flour, baking powder, salt and spices and set aside. In electric mixer, cream butter and sugar until lightly colored, about 5 minutes. Beat in egg on high speed for 2-3 minutes. With a rubber spatula, fold in fruit, nuts and raisins. Bake for 30 minutes until golden brown. Allow to cool in pan 10 minutes, then invert and cool on a baking rack. At serving time, mix the whipping cream together until almost stiff. Pipe a border around the base of the cake and in the center or serve with dollops of whipping cream.

CRYSTALLIZED VIOLAS

18 fresh violas, rinsed and patted dry, stems left on ¼ cup fresh egg whites or frozen egg substitute, thawed
¼ cup superfine sugar or caster sugar (available in cake decorating or gourmet shops)

Lightly beat egg whites and coat each petal using a tiny brush. Dip the coated flower into the sugar, covering the petal completely. Allow to dry on a rack until sugar has hardened. When hard, remove stems and store in an airtight container in refrigerator.

Blueberry season is short but sweet

WILD BLUEBERRY season is here again, but it won't last long. So if you have the opportunity to go berry picking, don't let it pass by.

Blueberries are something special. Robert Frost referred to them as "a vision among thieves." Fortunately, they need not be stolen to be enjoyed. Modern cultivation has made them readily available in our food markets.

These store-bought berries are a beautiful powdery, gray-blue color. Sweet and plump, they are sometimes almost as big as marbles. I can't deny they are delicious, but they are a far cry from the little wild ones found on the plains by the Lumberman's Monument in Iosco County where I have picked them over the years.

When it comes to blueberries, nice things do really come in small packages. These Northern Michigan berries are tiny, only 1/4 inch in diameter, but they have a more intense flavor. They are really more purple than blue and are often called huckleberries.

MY GRANDMOTHER never failed to can 30 to 40 quarts of them a year. She believed that blueberry desserts, served year-round, would help to keep peace and harmony in your household.

I, too, believe there is something to this old superstition. It would be hard to work up enough anger to argue with anyone after eating an exquisite slice of blueberry pie, or a big chunk of Huckleberry Buckle.

My sister still "puts up" several quarts of berries every summer, either canning or freezing them, but I have never been able to do this.

When I pick wild berries I always eat as many as I put in the bucket. Then, when I get home, I cook and serve all sorts of wonderful blueberry delights, using up all my wild berries while they are fresh, never having enough left over for preserving.

The rest of the year, I use cultivated berries from the grocery store in my recipes to promote harmony or just make my friends and family happy.

One-half cup of blueberries contains just 42 calories, no sodium and no cholesterol. These berries are also an excellent source of vitamins A and C.

FRESH BLUEBERRIES are highly perishable at room temperature and should be kept in a cool, dry place. If you keep them in a refrigerator, be sure they are completely dry. Don't wash the berries until you are ready to use them. Damp berries will mold quickly.

To clean the fresh berries when you are ready to use them, spread them out on a cookie sheet and sort them. Don't be concerned if they aren't all the same color. Some may be much redder than others. They add the subtle flavor that makes them different from the cultivated ones.

After you have picked them over, put them in a large bucket or pan and cover them with cold water. The stems or leaves you may have missed while sorting them will float to the top, and you can easily skim them off. Drain the berries in a colander and dry them on paper towels.

The color of wild berries can be enhanced by altering the pH of the batter. Adding an acid, such as cream of tartar, will create a redder color, while an alkali, baking soda for example, will boost the blue.

Blueberries harmonize well with spices such as cinnamon, coriander, ginger and nutmeg.

Yogurt, sour cream, ricotta cheese, and cottage cheese all go well with blueberries.

AMERICAN INDIANS used these wild berries to flavor soups and stews. They cured their venison by pounding the berries into the meat before smoking it.

Teas made from blueberries or from the leaves of the plant were used for various medical purposes.

Historians tell us that dried wild blueberries were a gift from the Indians to the Pilgrims to be enjoyed at the first Thanksgiving dinner.

Here are a few of my own favorite recipes that work well with either cultured blueberries or wild huckleberries. I have not included such familiar ones as pies, muffins, pancakes and cobbles, because I am certain that you probably already have your own favorites (if not, call me and I'll share mine with you). Here instead I have chosen a few less familiar ones for you to try.

set the baking dish over medium heat. Add the marinade and bring to a boil, stirring and scraping up any browned bits in the pan. When the sauce is lightly thickened, pour it over the chicken and garnish with parsley and orange zest.

BLUEBERRY CHUTNEY

(added to plain yogurt this also makes a good salad dressing)
2 pounds (about 7 cups) of blueberries
1 1/2 cup wine vinegar
1 medium onion (peeled and finely chopped)
1/2 golden raisins
1/2 cup firmly packed, light brown sugar
2 teaspoons yellow mustard seed
1 tablespoon grated crystallized ginger
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
a pinch each of salt, ground nutmeg, and ground coriander
1/2 teaspoon dried, crushed red pepper

Place blueberries in a 4-quart saucepan and crush slightly with a wooden spoon.

Add remaining ingredients and bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring often. Boil steadily, stirring occasionally, for about 45 minutes. Chutney will be thick. Spoon into hot, sterilized half-pint jars and seal. Store for at least one month before serving.

CHILLED BLUEBERRY SOUP
1 cup fresh or frozen thawed blueberries
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup lemon juice

1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 cup red wine
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon ground coriander
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup plain yogurt

Puree blueberries in the blender until smooth. In a medium saucepan combine pureed berries, water, sugar, lemon juices and spices. Cover and simmer over low heat for 10 minutes. Whisk in remaining ingredients and blend until smooth. Chill for several hours before serving. Serves 4-6 people.

ONE-CRUST BLUEBERRY PIE

(with a variation of toppings)
1 baked pie shell
1 quart blueberries
1 1/2 tablespoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1 cup sugar
1/4 cup cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon salt

Wash and dry berries. Cook in covered saucepan with lemon rind and lemon juice for 5 minutes.

Mix sugar, cornstarch, and salt, and add to blueberries. Cook for 10 minutes, stirring often.

Cool and pour into pre-baked shell. When cold, top with one of the following toppings:

- Cream cheese (one 3 ounce package) whipped with about 2 tablespoons of cream.
- Cottage cheese beaten in blender until fluffy. If need be, add a bit of skimmed milk to thin to proper consistency. Sweeten with a sugar free sweetener.
- whipped cream or other whipped topping.

CANNING QUESTIONS

You say your jam won't jelly? Or the canning jars you just finished after hours of work, failed to seal?

Ask an expert by calling the Oakland County Food and Nutrition Hotline, or better yet bring your questions with you when you shop at either of the two Oakland Farmers' Markets this summer.

The Royal Oak Market is at 316 E. 11 Mile, Royal Oak, and the Pontiac Market is on Pontiac Lake Road, west of Telegraph. Nutritionists will be on hand at both markets to answer questions.

To reach the Food and Nutrition Hotline, call 858-0904 Monday-Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

COOKING DEMOS

Superior Fish Company of Royal Oak has planned two upcoming seafood cooking demonstrations by area chefs. Chef Tim Kowalec of Boodles will be featured on Saturday, Aug. 11 and Chef Donald Toderington of Midtown Cafe on Saturday, Sept. 8.

Both demonstrations will take place from 10 a.m. until noon. The chefs will prepare one of their popular seafood entrees and let the public sample it. They will also be on hand to answer questions. For more information, call 541-4632.

U-PICK FARMS

This summer, show your kids that strawberries don't really grow in green plastic baskets... that carrots come out of the ground with "hair"... and that their Halloween jack-o'-lantern was once a tiny bud on a wandering vine. Take them to one of Michigan's more than 300 U-

Pick farms or orchards for a day of fun and learning.

To help you get started on your expedition, the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA) has developed a handy pocket guide to Michigan's more than 300 farms and roadside markets.

The brochure, "In Michigan, Nothing's As Good As Homegrown," lists, by county, places where you and your family can pick or purchase Michigan fruits, vegetables, herbs, honey and wines.

To receive your free brochure, contact MDA at 1-800-877-PICK or write to MDA, Center for Agricultural Innovation and Development, P.O. Box 30017, Lansing, Michigan 48909.

MOMMA'S DAIRY STUFFED ZUCCHINI

1 cup cottage cheese
1 cup Parmesan cheese
2 eggs
black pepper to taste
1 large zucchini, split lengthwise, seeds removed Combine first 4 ingredients, mix well. Pour mixture into hollowed-out zucchini. Place on a nonstick baking sheet and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes, uncovered.

ONIONS STUFFED WITH WILD RICE AND SAUSAGE

1/2 cup wild rice
1 teaspoon salt
6 large yellow onions
1/2 cup butter
1 cup chopped mushrooms

1/2 cup bulk sausage
2 tablespoons fresh chopped parsley
1/2 teaspoon dried sage, crumbled salt and pepper to taste
beef or chicken broth

Wash rice in 3-4 changes of cold water and remove any foreign particles. Add salt to 3 cups boiling water. Gradually pour in rice so that water does not stop boiling. Reduce heat, cover and simmer, stirring occasionally with fork, until rice is tender and all water is absorbed, about 30-45 minutes.

Meanwhile, remove loose outer skins of onions without cutting off root or stem ends. Add onions to large pot of boiling water. Reduce heat and simmer 10 minutes. Drain and cool. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Generously butter a deep baking dish. With a sharp knife, cut out stem (top) of onion, leaving root intact. Remove any remaining skin from outside. Cut out center, leaving shell 1/4 inch thick. Set shells in baking dish. Chop remaining onion, reserve 1/2 cup.

Melt butter in a large skillet over medium heat. Add onion and mushrooms. Sauté until golden. Crumble sausage and add to skillet. Cook until sausage is browned. Transfer to bowl, add rice, parsley, sage, salt and pepper. Fill onions equally. Add enough broth to come halfway up the sides of the onions. Bake for 20 minutes. Spoon some of the broth over before serving.

Fresh herbs add flavor to grilled Cornish hens

Betsy Brethen

MARINATING, AN age-old technique for imparting flavor and tenderness, is a wonderful way to make use of the variety of fresh herbs and spices that are so readily available to cooks today.

Whether they are home-grown or store-bought, the heady scent of fresh herbs can live up any marinade and help turn a meal into something special and memorable.

This week's Winner Dinner, submitted by Marybeth Benham, makes good use of a combination of herbs that are added to a lemon-juice marinade for Cornish hens as well as to a Greek-style dressing that lightly covers small red potatoes.

Served with freshly picked ears of corn-on-the-cob and slices of vine-ripened tomatoes, this summer dinner takes advantage of the bounty of the season.

The mother of two small children, Benham has been cooking since she was 10 years old. Having worked as an attorney for eight years in Chicago before her children were born, she is now a home-based mom, and enjoys having more time to cook and create special meals for her family.

THAT'S NOT the only thing she creates, however. She also does a lot of heirloom sewing for her children, nieces and nephews, specializing in making exquisite portrait dresses and button-on suits.

Because this kind of sewing is done more in the South than it is in the Midwest, Benham orders her patterns from companies in Mississippi and Alabama. She recently completed a matching dress and suit for her daughter and son that turned out beautifully.

Made of green velvet, each outfit had an organdy collar with a chain of holly leaves shadow-stitched onto it, accented with randomly stitched French-knot red berries. She is already planning the dress she will make for her daughter's First Communion next year and has even contemplated "going professional" with her sewing career.

Obviously a woman of many talents and abilities, Benham never runs out of things to do. That is one reason she submitted the menu she did — because so much of it can be made in advance, it fits in perfectly with her busy life.

Lest we leave her husband out of the picture, Benham readily admits that he has a magic touch when it comes to grilling the Cornish hens. He is a surgery resident at Providence Hospital.

THANK YOU so much, Marybeth Benham, for sharing your herb-filled Winner Dinner with us. Congratulations on being our Winner Dinner Winner of the week and best of luck to you and your family.

On a final note, this will be the last Winner Dinner column until Monday, Sept. 3, which also happens to be Labor Day. It is truly hard to believe that the summer has gone by as quickly as it has.

Comfortable in the knowledge that you all have a wealth of dinners to choose from during the month of August, I'm hopeful that no one will suffer from Winner Dinner Withdrawal. Wishing you and your families a safe and happy remainder of the summer, I look forward to seeing you again in September!

And, should any of you hit the jackpot, so to speak, and serve a dinner during the month of August that is a hit with all family members, please don't hesitate to send it in.

Submit your recipes, to be considered for publication in this column or elsewhere, to: Winner

Dinner, P.O. Box 3503, Birmingham, Mich. 48012. All submissions become the property of the publisher. Each week's winner receives an apron with the words

Winner Dinner Winner on it. Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping, or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clipping in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

Recipes

LEMON AND HERBED MARINATED CORNISH HENS

- halved and sliced crosswise, 1/4 inch thick
- 3/4 cups Kalamata olives, pitted and slivered
- 1 unpeeled garlic clove
- 1 1/2 teaspoon fresh minced oregano
- 1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1/4 pound feta cheese
- 1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
- salt and pepper to taste

Simple but festive, this is a wonderful summer entree because the hens can be marinated in advance, with nothing more required of you than cooking them on the grill. You and your kitchen will both stay cool, calm and collected.

4 Cornish hens, 22-24 oz. each, backbones removed and discarded and patted dry

MARINADE

- 2 tablespoons fresh oregano
- 2 tablespoons fresh thyme
- 2 tablespoons fresh rosemary
- 4 cloves garlic

Since the herbs and garlic together in a food processor or chop finely by hand. In a large, self-sealing freezer bag, combine the mixture with the following:

- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
- 1/4 cup olive oil

Mix well and add hens to the marinade. Marinate overnight in the refrigerator. Grill hens outdoors, basting with the marinade. To check for doneness, prick the skin of the thighs and, when the juice runs clear, remove them from the grill. Discard any remaining marinade.

GREEK-STYLE POTATO SALAD

A refreshing variation of a tried-and-true summer favorite. You can use your microwave oven to cook the potatoes so as to not heat up the kitchen.

1 1/2 pounds small red potatoes,

In microwave, cook covered potatoes for about 4-5 minutes on high until just tender. If not tender enough, cook another 1-2 minutes on high or until they are done. Combine potatoes with olives and set aside. Boil garlic in a microwave-safe cup of water for 5 minutes. Combine garlic clove, vinegar, oil and oregano in blender or food processor and puree. Add feta cheese and blend well.

Pour dressing over potato mixture and toss, along with parsley, salt and pepper to taste. Serve at room temperature. If you have to chill it, bring to room temperature before serving. This recipe amply serves four.

CORN ON THE COB AND SLICED TOMATOES

These need no further explanation other than the local Farmers' Markets around town are bursting with ears and ears of freshly picked corn and plump, vine-ripened tomatoes. If you have never done so before, treat yourself and go visit the one closest to your home. You will be glad you did, as it promises to be a feast for all of your senses and will make you feel happy to be alive.

FRESH YOGURT OR SORBET

An easy dessert that requires nothing more of you than selecting a flavor and serving it in a dish. For an added touch, garnish with a sprig of fresh mint.

Many wines don't need to be aged

WINE IS a beverage to consume, not collect. Most wine is best when enjoyed young, when it is fresh and fruity. It complements food, aids relaxation and helps us appreciate life.

It never fails, however, that wine's ageability surfaces for discussion. People are concerned about how long wine will keep because they associate longevity with quality. The question is rhetorical, in a way, since most consumers buy wine on Friday and drink it on Saturday. So why worry about ageability?

Actually, it is the English who continue to promote the idea that somehow wine is better when it is old. Unless you purchase expensive wines, like first growth Bordeaux, grand cru Burgundy, or super deluxe Champagne, and have some experience judging longevity, you shouldn't worry about it.

Personally, we believe that it is far better to consume a wine too young than too old. If you have a bottle of wine that you have been saving for a special occasion, how will you know when to drink it? To judge longevity, you must taste the wine, and to taste it, you must open the bottle. There is your answer — drink it!

IF YOU have more than one bottle, then you have the option of drinking one to judge whether the remainder is ready to drink. How can you tell? Easy — if you like it, you should drink it. If you wait, you may be sorry. Once the wine is "over-the-hill," it's too late.

A California winemaker once told us, "There are two flavor peaks in the life of a wine — just before bottling and just after it is sold out."

Winemakers know that most people do not have wine cellars and that wine is not the stuff museums are made of. This is why producers all over the world, from Germany to Australia and France to California, are making wine that is ready to drink when it is released.

Most white table wine (dry, meal-time wine) should be consumed within three years of release. Even expensive, barrel-aged, chardonnays should be consumed within five years. That is our rule of thumb, three to five years for white wine.

Let's consider how chardonnay would have to be made in order to age gracefully beyond five years.

Grapes must be hand-harvested, in good condition, when cool, to reduce astringent components. Current knowledge suggests that the grapes should be either (a) pressed whole, (b) crushed and cooled, or (c) crushed and pressed immediately. If the grapes are lightly pressed without the aid of sulfur dioxide, astringent components extracted from the grape skins, seeds or stems will oxidize and precipitate before fermentation.

THIS MEANS that if clean, cool fruit is harvested and pressed without the use of an anti-oxidant, harsh compounds that are naturally found in grape skins will precipitate before it becomes wine.

focus on wine

Eleanor and Ray Heald

The next objectives are to protect the juice from air, minimize movement, keep the temperature low, and keep the wine in contact with the yeast lees (sur lie).

Following fermentation, the mass of yeast cells, which settle to the bottom of the barrel when all the sugar has been converted to alcohol and carbon dioxide, is known as the yeast lees. Yeast lees act as natural fining agents and help remove harsh phenols (tannins).

Winemaking goes through phases and experiences trends like any other craft. In the mid-1970s, skin contact was the "in" thing. This produced big, oily, rich wines that didn't age well.

"Wines with high tannin extract were very attractive the first year, but soon died," says Zelma Long, President of Simi Winery, Sonoma County. "Wines with low tannin were not as attractive the first year, but were great two-to-three years later."

HOW DO you choose a chardonnay that will age? Look for a wine that is pale in color with delicate mouthfeel and well-balanced with moderate acidity. High-acid wines taste thin; low-acid wines are rounder.

A common misconception is that French white Burgundies have high acidity, and will be long-lived. The bottom line: just because a wine tastes puckery doesn't mean it will age well.

The big lesson seems to be one stressed by everyone in the wine industry these days — wines are made in the vineyard. Good vineyard management, site location, producing a small crop and encouraging a controlled degree of vine stress all lend themselves to making ageable wines.

Ageable chardonnays are more expensive. "Regular chardonnays are meant for drinking upon release," explains Julia Intosca, winemaker at William Wheeler Winery in Sonoma County. "A wine meant for aging is labeled RESERVE."

WINE SELECTION OF THE WEEK

To compare a regular and reserve chardonnay from the same winery, we suggest the following pair.

1988 William Hill Winery Chardonnay, Silver Label ($12). Floral aromas with hints of melon, apple blossoms and honeysuckle. Solid fruit and acid on the palate. Medium finish.

1988 William Hill Winery Chardonnay, Gold Label Reserve ($20). This is a full blown, but not exaggerated chardonnay style. It showcases a rich, yummy butterscotch aroma that follows through on the palate with rich fruit, oak accents, and a velvety finish. This wine was barrel-fermented, completed malolactic fermentation, and was aged five months sur lie in one-third new French oak.

Grilled chicken and ziti salad

GRILLED CHICKEN AND ZITI SALAD

- 2 whole skinless boneless chicken breasts, halved (about 1 1/2 pounds)
- 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
- 1 pound ziti or other tubular pasta
- 2 large red bell peppers, cut into 1/2 pieces
- 2 1/2 cups thinly sliced celery
- 1 red onion, chopped (about 1 1/4 cups)
- 1 1/4 cups Kalamata or other brine-cured black olives, pitted and sliced thin
- 1/4 cup minced fresh dill
- 3 tablespoons white wine-vinegar
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
- 1/2 cup olive oil

over moderately high heat, or on a rack set 4 to 6 inches over glowing coals, grill the chicken breasts for 8 to 10 minutes on each side, or until they are springy to the touch, and transfer them to a dish. Sprinkle the chicken with lemon juice and let it cool. In a kettle of boiling salted water, boil the ziti until it is tender. In a colander, refresh the ziti under cold water and drain it well.

In a large bowl, toss together the ziti, the bell peppers, the celery, the onion, the olives and the dill. Remove the chicken from the dish, reserving the juices. Slice the chicken thin and add it to the ziti salad. To the juices in the dish add the vinegar, the mayonnaise, the mustard and salt and black pepper to taste. Whisk the mixture well and add the oil in a stream, whisking until the dressing is emulsified. Add the dressing to the salad, toss the salad well, and season it with salt and black pepper. Serves 8 to 10.

In an oiled, ridged grill pan heated

Her back yard is an orphanage for wildlife

By Joanne Maliszewski
staff writer

Beverly Cornell's back yard is a menagerie.

But it's not one of make believe. It's where baby orphaned wildlife stays for awhile.

There, they grow up, reap affection they might not otherwise have without their natural mothers, and learn the skills they'll need to enter nature in all its freedom and danger.

The Farmington Hills resident is licensed by the state Department of Natural Resources to care for orphaned baby wild animals.

In the past Redford residents have been among those who have brought wild animals to Cornell for care. About a year ago, a Redford resident who found a baby raccoon in need of care took it to Cornell.

On the average, Cornell gets three-to-15 calls daily, most from people she doesn't know, who call for advice about feeding and caring for wild animals and birds they have found.

"I limit myself on what I can take because I want to give quality care. I do a lot of reading of nature books. But there's so little written on wild animals. I put together some of my own ideas, some of the things I have learned," Cornell said.

WHEN THE Observer recently visited Cornell and her orphans, she received a call that a resident found a very tame pigeon in his yard.

He drove the bird to her house and a few phone calls later, Cornell discovered the homing pigeon, which had a band on its leg, belonged to a man in Livonia, seven miles away.

"The pigeon had been frightened by hawks and had gotten lost," Cornell said.

Despite the hard work and money put into caring for the wildlife, Cornell and her husband, Tom, have given the baby animals — raccoons, squirrels, Canadian geese, robins, — they never lose sight of the fact they are merely foster parents. They have to let the babies go.

"It's not fair to force us on them. It's not right to gear them to us," Cornell said, cuddling one of the three baby raccoons she's raising. "They are loving animals. But they are still your typical wild, ruffians."

For example, just by watching other geese, Cornell realized that she could gather seeds from cut grass for food for her baby Canadian goose, Thumper.

"She was booted out of her family

These feeding tips are for the birds

In the human world, food and water more often than not represent love and attention from the motherly sort. In the animal world, people's tendency to immediately give food and water can be dangerous and even fatal.

According to Beverly Cornell, who is licensed by the state Department of Natural Resources, here are some things you can and things you can't do, if you come across orphaned baby birds:

• Do not touch the bird until you are certain the mother is not returning. Move out of sight, if she hasn't returned after about two hours, then it's your turn.

• Feeding baby birds when they are cold and dehydrated, warm them by cupping them carefully in your hands or near your body. You can also place them in a lightly-covered box, placed near a light bulb or on a warm, not hot, heating pad.

• Unfeathered birds, which are a week-old or younger, should be kept at 85-90 degrees. Fully feathered birds can be kept in room temperatures.

• Feeding is the tough part. First, never give young birds water until they can drink from a container by themselves. And do not feed birds bread or milk.

• The type of feeding depends on whether the birds are insect-or seed-eating. Seed-eaters' bills are broader and thicker at the base. If you're not certain, however, assume the bird is an insect-eater and feed it accordingly to be safe.

• For insect-eaters, give them one cup, soaked 8-in-1 Mynah Bird Food, using bottled water to soak the food; 1 tbs. baby beef meat; 1 tbs. baby egg yolk; 3-4 drops bird vitamins and 1 1/2-tsp. ground egg shell.

• For seed-eaters, soak the same amount of bird food, plus the vitamins and egg shell, plus 1 tbs. hard-boiled egg and 1 tbs. ground sunflower seed.

• Baby birds should be fed every 45 minutes to an hour during daylight only. If the baby bird's neck develops a little pouch while feeding, don't be alarmed. That's where food goes when they are feeding.

because she couldn't keep up," Cornell said. Thumper has a deformed leg and uses her bent web foot as a rudder in the pond Cornell made for her in the yard.

Unlike the three raccoons — Larry, Curly and Mo — who will be released in the wild, as were the baby squirrels recently — Thumper will be released in Cornell's backyard in case she can't fly.

THE ANTICS of the baby raccoons, with their bandit faces, ringed-tails and leather glove-like paws, draw an audience to the Cornells.

To accommodate the neighbors and interested friends and other residents, the Cornells have set up a few lawn chairs in front of the raccoons' 10x16-foot pen.

Toothbrushes, balls, unbreakable kids' toys, a plastic picnic table and other assorted goodies keep the baby raccoons busy and tantalize their innate curiosity and skills. With a little push from Cornell, the raccoons have learned to dig for bugs.

"They're stinkers," Cornell said, while detaching them from visitors' shoes and clothes and fingers. "This is why people shouldn't keep them as pets. Their play gets rough."

Whenever there is a storm, Cornell's phone rings off the hook with calls from people who have found baby or injured birds. That's particularly true of people who live near the lakes and find birds, including ducks and geese, entangled in wires and anything else humans have left in their wake.

Dumar, the robin that Cornell raised from infancy and released into her backyard, still arrives once an hour for a feeding.

"In the rain, he flies in and goes and sits on the couch in the garage," she said.

Wanna be a star? Visit video studio at area mall this week

Anyone who wants to star in a movie, appear on a television commercial, dance like Michael Jackson or sing like Madonna will have a chance to do so Thursday through Sunday at Livonia Mall.

The opportunity is available through Fun Flicks, totally interactive video. Fun Flicks is the first of many activities scheduled at the mall during August.

12 alternatives to lashing out at your kid.

The next time everyday pressures build up to the point where you feel like lashing out—STOP! And try any of these simple alternatives.

You'll feel better . . . and so will your child.

1. Take a deep breath. And another. Then remember you are the adult . . .
2. Close your eyes and imagine you're hearing what your child is about to hear.
3. Press your lips together and count to 10. Or better yet, to 20.
4. Put your child in a time-out chair. (Remember the rule: one time-out minute for each year of age.)
5. Put yourself in a time-out chair. Think about why you are angry: Is it your child, or is your child simply a convenient target for your anger?
6. Phone a friend.
7. If someone can watch the children, go outside and take a walk.
8. Take a hot bath or splash cold water on your face.
9. Hug a pillow.
10. Turn on some music. Maybe even sing along.
11. Pick up a pencil and write down as many helpful words as you can think of. Save the list.
12. Write for prevention information: National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse, Box 2866L, Chicago, IL 60690.

Stop using words that hurt.

Try sampling fine cheese with friends

"THE ONLY way to learn about cheese is to eat it," said Ernest Oldmeadow, an English gourmet and authority on cheese.

Tasting and re-tasting fine cheeses is an excellent and agreeable way for anyone who enjoys good food to acquire an education in cheese. What your appetite with the many flavors and textures of the world of cheese available.

Looking for something new and fun to do at your next party? Try cheese-tasting with friends.

Guests will enjoy sampling a variety of fabulous cheeses attractively arranged on silver trays, serving platters, marble slabs, wooden boards or a leaf-and-flower-lined wicker place mat. Purchase several different kinds of cheese, make up an evaluation sheet for each person, and let them decide which is their favorite.

Look for characteristics like texture, smell, taste and color when evaluating them. Add a few crackers and fruit and perhaps some wine and you have the makings of a party.

VARIETY AND versatility are perfect words to describe cheese.

Look for characteristics like texture, smell, taste and color when evaluating them. Add a few crackers and fruit and perhaps some wine and you have the makings of a party.

Variety of shapes, textures and flavors in cheeses that range from very mild to very sharp offer something for everybody. When serving, use a wedge, a wheel or a brick of various colors of cheese.

Purchase two to four ounces of cheese per person if other food is being served. If it's a wine and cheese party or cocktail party, allow slightly more.

Cheese tastes best at room temperature. Let the hard varieties set out about an hour before serving. Brie and other soft types need only about 30 minutes to warm up.

Lois Thieleke

home economist, Cooperative Extension Service

When placing on the serving dish, make sure they are not overcrowded and avoid placing strong, pungent cheeses next to the delicately flavored ones.

Specialty cheeses need to be refrigerated soon after purchase. They should keep for several weeks, unopened, in the coldest part of the refrigerator. Most cheeses can be frozen for several months but, some of the hard cheeses tend to crumble after thawing.

BRICK, CHEDDAR, Edam, Gouda, Muenster, Port du Salut, Swiss, provolone, mozzarella and Camembert all freeze satisfactorily. Plan to use these in cooking.

To freeze, cut or grate into small portions that you can use quickly and wrap well. Defrost slowly in the refrigerator — rapid thawing makes cheese crumble even more.

Natural cheeses contains no preservatives and can develop surface mold. If this happens, cut the entire mold off to discard. The remaining cheese will still retain its full flavor and texture and be safe to eat.

Some natural cheeses are ripened (aged) to develop their characteristic flavor and textures. Mold-ripened cheeses, such as Bleu and Roquefort, are different. The mold is an important part of the cheese and is eaten.

After serving cheese, always rewrap tightly to prevent it from drying out or picking up odors from the refrigerator. Double-wrap strong pungent cheeses. If the cheese hardens due to exposure to air, grate or chop to use in a sauce, soup or salad.

A pasteurized process cheese is a blend of fresh and aged natural cheese and is convenient to use in cooking. American cheese is a good example. Pasteurized process cheese food is also a blend of cheeses. It does not add as much cheese flavor to other foods as natural or process cheese.

Pasteurized process cheese spread has even more moisture and less milk fat than process cheese food. A stabilizer is used to prevent separation to make it soft and spreadable at room temperature.

SERVE SEVERAL types of unseasoned crackers with the cheese. Avoid strongly flavored sour cream or onion type crackers. In tasting, you'll taste the cracker and not the cheese.

Flatbreads, water crackers or English biscuits complement cheese very nicely. Crusty breads also add interest. Besides the crackers, cheese goes beautifully with fruits. Grapes, strawberries, sliced apples, melon, pear and figs add color and are a refreshing contrast of tastes.

Caciocavallo, Cheshire, Edam, Gammelost, Gorgonzola, Gruyere, Mysost and Noekkelost, are just a few names that will roll off your tongue as you learn more about cheese. As the old saying goes, "A dinner without cheese is like a kiss without a squeeze." Need I say more?

SUBSTITUTES FOR ASPIRIN
 You may believe that you cannot take aspirin for your arthritis because the medication irritates the stomach. Newer formulations overcome this problem by incorporating a coating that prevents the tablet from dissolving in the stomach. Instead, the medicine is absorbed in the intestine whose lining is resistant to aspirin irritation. Some individuals suffer such toxicities as hives, cramps and shock which preclude aspirin use. If you are such a person, you are not shut out from the benefits that medication offers. A key element in aspirin is the chemical group "acetyl." Pharmacists can replace that group with other elements such as sodium or calcium. The result is a medication similar to aspirin, not quite as powerful, but definitely safe to use, even for individuals who go into shock if they take ordinary aspirin. These substitutes are of particular value to the elderly patient. The substitutes cause no irritation to the stomach, and mix well with the wide variety of medications that the elderly person may be taking. Their only side effect is to cause temporary deafness; taking one less tablet resolves this problem. Furthermore, these aspirin substitutes are relatively inexpensive, and therefore pose no burden to the elderly person's finances.

Mustangs make bid for world crown

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The Mid-America Mustangs head west today in search of fame — though their prospects don't include a fortune — in the softball world.

The girls under-15 travel slow-pitch team, composed mostly of western Wayne County players, will be satisfied with the title of world champions should the Mustangs win the nationwide tournament in Oklahoma City, Okla.

The team began the 1,100-mile, two-day journey this morning traveling in a caravan to the double-elimination event that starts Thursday and continues through Sunday.

The Mustangs finished 14th last year when 78 teams competed in Dearborn, and assistant coach Ron Movinski believes the 1990 ballclub, ranked among the top 20 in the country, could easily improve upon that.

"I think we've got a real good shot," he said of the team's title chances. "Our team doesn't quit. We've been behind and come back. We've been in the losers bracket and worked our way through it."

"WHEN THE girls go on the field they give 110 percent. We expect 100 percent, but they seem to give 100.

"With a little luck, I think our girls will be there, getting the right draws at the right time and working our way through the system. It's what you call crunch time."

The majority of the girls on the team come from the Plymouth and Canton communities, but there are players from Farmington Hills, Livonia, Westland and Garden City, too.

The 17-player roster consists of Canton's Stacy Movinski, Jenny Garvey, Stephanie Long, Lori Thomczek, Dani Mortiere, Sarah Rowe, Stacy Sinke and Tara Wasiaik; Plymouth's Britta Anderson, Cindy Lehnis and Kate Strahan; Westland's Stacey Fields and Jamie Cook; Livonia's Maureen Drabicki and Karen Jose; Garden City's Jenny Horosko and Farmington Hills' Michelle Bohnke.

Michigan will have other teams in the open tournament, but few can match the quality of the Mustangs. Any team that pays the entry fee can participate, but the marginal ones don't last long.

"The teams that don't rate end up getting blown out in the first two rounds," Movinski said.

THE MUSTANGS, however, expect to be around on the last day, still vying with teams like the Oklahoma squad that won it last year and the Pembroke (Fla.) Cardinals, who were the '89 runners-up.

Mid-America has gone to the world tournament every year since Ray Knickerbocker began managing the team in 1987, and the Mustangs travel first class wherever they go.

The Mustangs had supported themselves largely through fund-raisers such as car washes and candy sales in the past, leaving the parents to pick up the balance.

But this year the team published a yearbook, and the players sold $15,000 in advertising — more than enough to pay for the publication, cover the travel costs for a whole season and outfit each player with four uniforms.

In USSSA events, the Mustangs won the Canton NIT and state tournaments, were second in the Inter-Lakes, finished third at Milford and Clinton Valley and placed fifth in the Cincinnati Smokey Baker. The team was third in a ASA tourney in Hampton, Mass.

In addition to the tournaments, the Mustangs played in the Women's Class C League at Canton Softball Center. The team won only one of 17 games but gained valuable experience against the higher caliber competition.

"WE'RE TALKING women 18 to 35 who can bounce the ball a little farther than our girls," Movinski said, "and anything that gets over their heads usually goes for a triple or a home run."

"That's why we can be some competitive within our own age group. Nobody is going to hit a ball harder to these girls than a woman. If they can stop a rocket, they can stop a dribbler."

The Mustangs have been together since March, but preparation for this season actually began last August with tryouts. The team practiced until the second week in November, holding six-hour clinics every Sunday.

"We're very versatile this year," Movinski said. "Defensively, we can put at least three girls at any given position and not be hurt. Most can play two or three positions."

The Mustangs have three dependable pitchers, with Thomczek doing most of the work followed by Movinski and Drabicki. Even in girls slow-pitch, the art of pitching is important.

"It's very important to get the ball over the plate," Movinski said. "The first pitch has to be a strike if you want to be able to manipulate the batter. Then you can throw a short one or a deep one and make them go for bad pitches."

HOROSKO AND Lehnis are the top hitters with Mortiere, Jose and Bohnke providing solid support offensively. Jose has driven in close to 60 runs, and Horosko, who had three-plus hits in half of the state tournament games, and Lehnis are not far behind.

The usual starting lineup has Rowe playing catcher, Jose at first base, Garvey at second, Lehnis at shortstop, Anderson at third and Horosko, Mortiere, Bohnke and Cook in the outfield.

Looking to next year, the Mustangs expect to field another strong team, if not a better one, since Horosko, Mortiere and Thomczek are the only 15-year-old players on the team. Everybody else will be eligible to return.

In addition to coach Movinski, Knickerbocker is assisted by Bill Martin, Tom Walker, Larry Thomczek, Kathy Long and John Sinke.

Concealed I wins tourney warm-up

Concealed Security Systems I warmed up for post-season play Thursday by defeating Concealed Security II 14-0 in a game that featured former Detroit Tiger pitcher Milt Wilcox.

Wilcox, who started for Team II against the Little Caesars League champs, pitched four innings, giving up four runs on two hits in the first inning before shutting down Team I in the next three.

The first four batters to face Wilcox reached base on two hits, a walk and a hit batsman and each scored. Wilcox allowed only a second-inning single by Jeff Pendell after that. Shondell Currie and Paul Pirronello had the other hits.

Wilcox, who struck out four and walked one, has pitched only twice since the end of the Senior League season and wasn't in peak shape.

"No question he wasn't," Concealed I coach Lou Pirronello said. "But after the first few guys got hits he decided to get serious about it."

"He knew his role, and he wasn't out there to overpower people," assistant coach Mike George said. "The whole idea was he got to throw and the kids got to hit against him."

"He's not going to jeopardize his career by trying to throw the ball by people when he's not in shape."

Team I also got 10 runs on seven hits off reliever Mark Falvo. Pirronello was 3-for-3 with two doubles and a home run and had six RBI. Mike Malam hit a two-run homer.

Scott Kennedy, one of six who pitched for Concealed I, got the victory. In the Connie Mack district baseball tournament in Sterling Heights, Concealed II won its first two games Friday.

The Observerland-based team edged the Livonia Mustangs 2-1 in the opener and merciful Detroit Renaissance 8-0 in five innings in the second game.

Scott Niemiec, a tournament addition from the Plymouth Salem team, had two hits and scored both runs in the first game. Kevin Van Ord of Farmington drove in one run with a sacrifice fly.

Mike Campbell went the distance to earn the win. The Mustangs out-hit Concealed 8-5 but made three errors. Campbell struck out seven and walked one.

In the second game, Eric Nielson, another post-season pickup from Salem, pitched a four-hit victory. He struck out six and walked one.

Kyle Sinclair had two hits and scored a run for Concealed. Campbell, Eric Miller and Van Ord had one RBI apiece with a double, single and sacrifice fly, respectively.

The tournament continued through Sunday.

Milt Wilcox, former Detroit Tiger pitcher, took the mound Thursday night to pitch for the Concealed Security Systems II team at Capitol Park in Redford. The Concealed Security II squad, champion of the Little Caesars Connie Mack League, scored four runs off Wilcox and won the game 14-0.

Ex-Salem star Steiner decides issue

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Scott Steiner was the man of the hour, make that the nearly the second hour of Wednesday's Great Lakes Men's Soccer League semifinal playoff tussle at Livonia's Bicentennial Park.

After 90 minutes of regulation play and 22 minutes of overtime, Steiner scored the game's only goal as the Redford Marauders edged Livonia Paragon, 1-0, to advance to the GLMSL finals (set for 5 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 4 at Bicentennial).

Steiner, the former Plymouth Salem High star who went on to play at Schoolcraft College and Oakland University and now coaches at Garden City High, settled the issue when he knocked in a header from close range past Paragon goalie John Connolly.

The play, however, was set up on a rush down the right side by winger Robbie Ludwig, the Eastern Michigan University standout, who dribbled through a pair of Paragon defenders before unloading a shot.

Steiner, rushing in from his sweeper position, timed the ball, which seemed suspended in air, perfectly for the goal.

"Scott played real well, he came forward a lot," said Marauders coach Nick O'Shea. "He made a lot of runs out of the back. One thing he was doing well was intercepting the pass and carrying it right away."

LUDWIG, the Milford product, made the goal possible with what O'Shea called "a great run." Ludwig and teammate Steve Morrell (Plymouth Canton High and Penn State) put quite a bit of pressure on Paragon throughout the game with rushes down the right side.

"The Paragon defense started to get tired and they (Ludwig and Steiner) took advantage," said the Marauders coach. "We had five forwards switching off and on so we had fresh guys. All season long we haven't had that many subs."

Paragon came into the game confidently, having tied the Marauders once, but winning the GLMSL indoor season on points before beating its rival early in the regular season (1-0).

"We were planning to go to overtime, but were extremely tired," said Paragon coach Dan Duggan, whose team won the GLMSL regular season title. "We started walking instead of pushing it. We were missing three key forwards down the stretch, which hurt us some."

Both teams played cautiously throughout the match, witnessed by almost 400 fans. Head referee Phil Bryant and linesman

Steve Olson kept a tight watch on fouls, leading to a cleanly played match throughout.

PARAGON SUFFERED a key blow when starter Bobby Paul went down with an injury early in the game after being tackled from behind by Lars Richters.

But Paragon forwards Chris Crawford (going to Schoolcraft) and Scott Weiger (headed for Butler University) made several good rushes down the wing in the early stages, only to have the Marauders hang tough behind the steady play of Richters (ex-Livonia Stevenson High and Yale University) in

Davidson still waiting for national title

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

The odds are bound to favor Kori Davidson eventually in the finals of a national tennis tournament.

The Farmington Hills youth settled for second place a third time when she was runner-up in the USTA National Clay Court 16s tournament July 22 in Virginia Beach, Va.

Davidson, who will be a senior at Harrison High School in September, lost to powerful, 6-foot-1 Lindsay Davenport of LaJolla, Calif., in the championship match, 6-3, 6-3.

"I was confident I could win, but I got out there and she was really good," said Davidson, who previously was second in a pair of 14s events.

"The other times there was something I could have done to win, but this time there was nothing I could do. I played well; she played great."

GETTING TO the finals was a feat in itself since Davidson has played sparingly this year because of wrist and elbow injuries. That prevented her from playing in the Seventeen tournament in May where she was the No. 1 seed.

Davidson had played in only one major tournament prior to the Clay Court, but she did well at the Western Closed in Indianapolis, finishing third in the 18s bracket and losing to the top seed in three sets.

Her performance there qualified her for the Intersectional 16s this week in San Francisco and the USTA National 18s and National Grass Courts later this summer.

Davidson, who won't be 17 until

November, opted to play 16s even though she hadn't play in that division since last year. Without a ranking at the lower level, she still was seeded second.

"I wanted to play one more 16s tournament," she said. "When it's been in Virginia Beach, I really loved it. There was more pressure playing 16s, because it's my own age group."

The 18s tournament was played in Memphis, Tenn.

DAVIDSON LIVED up to her No. 2 seeding throughout the week with her strong baseline winners, but heat, fatigue and injuries took a toll late in the tournament.

In the last three days, she played 16 sets in 98-degree heat, which didn't seem to affect Davenport as much. Her down-the-line and cross-court shots seemed to hit every line, and she covered the entire surface well, according to Davidson.

"It was hot, but (Davenport) gets it all the time in California," Davidson said. "It wasn't that big a difference. It wasn't the reason I lost. Her size and power had a lot to do with it."

Davidson also reached the finals in doubles competition. Her original plan was to concentrate on winning the singles title, especially since the doubles partner she's had since she was 10, Amy Thiminello of Boston, was not there.

But she found it hard to say no when Mary Beth Novak of Kalamazoo asked her to play doubles.

Davidson "thought for sure we'd lose in the second round," but they wound up in the finals where they lost to Davenport and fellow Californian Ditta Huber, 6-3, 6-2.

IT WAS THE first national final for Novak, and Davidson didn't regret her decision to play doubles, too.

Davidson said she will have to develop a stronger serve if she's to win a national tournament and have the kind of future success she would like. She thought that deficiency held her back in Virginia Beach.

"It's terrible; it stinks," Davidson

Bowling returns to Good Ol' Days

THE GOOD OLD DAYS are here again. The Bowling Centers Association sponsors this annual promotion during the first weekend of August. Exact dates and times may vary from one house to another, so it is best to call ahead and find out exactly when they are running it in your local bowling center.

"Good Old Days" means bargain rates on the bowling lines and specials on hot dogs and/or refreshments. This is a great time to take the whole family out for some summertime bowling fun and at the same time hone your skills as you want to get back into the "groove" for the fall season.

At most of the locations, the event will start on Aug. 3 and run all day every day through the weekend.

Hot weather tip from John Fallows: "If you leave your bowling ball inside your car during the hot, sunny summery days, the heat can actually build up enough to damage your bowling ball. We can remember to bring it in the house during the winter, otherwise our fingers get frosted when we go to bowl."

The high temperatures can cause the outer shell material to expand from the heat and even affect the grip in the finger and thumb holes.

Fallows operates the pro shop at Country Lanes in Farmington Hills and if your ball gets ruined, he will be glad to sell you a new one.

In a way, the most interesting thing about bowling is the people. The game itself is very basic, the variable is the diversity of all the folks who bowl. I enjoy writing about all these accomplishments from youngsters and oldsters alike, the corner grocer, perhaps your next door neighbor.

So now I am adding a new feature to "Ten Pin Alley" when space is available. And that is to select one individual involved in bowling, and do a personality sketch on them. If you know of someone to write about, someone on the bowling scene, drop me a line at the sports department at the Observer & Eccentric.

This week's bowling personality is a PBA member and has bowled against the likes of Mark Roth and Earl Anthony. He is Arnie Goldman.

Goldman can be found where the "action" is. A smooth lefty, he has bowled with the best and in the '70s and early '80s he beat most of the pros when he was on the tour.

He was the first TV opponent of both Pete Weber and Dave Ferraro. Arnie grew up in Southfield, but didn't get started seriously bowling until his teen years. He later moved to Chicago, but is now back in the Detroit area.

He bowls in the Monday Trio at Country Lanes and usually stays late for the "Sweepers." He has had five PBA 300 games and seven PBA 600 series. Arnie offers this tip to other bowlers: "Learn how to study the ball reaction on the lanes. Watch the roll of the ball after you release it, and learn to be able to control the reaction of the ball. This can involve some trial and error with how you grip the ball, the way it is drilled and other variables including lane conditions. The more you can learn about ball reaction, the better you will perform on the lanes."

The Inter-Lodge Masonic League is looking for a few good men who would like to bowl Sunday mornings at Plum Hollow Lanes in Southfield. The league is open to any member in good standing of a Masonic Lodge. For information, call 422-1609.

The Scheafer Beer Michigan Majors Bowling Association held its monthly tournament at Thunderbowl on July 22. While Jim Teaser of Bay City took the top money with $1,600, the competitors from Observer & Eccentric towns made out nicely.

Ken Kosciak of Canton came in second, and took home $800. Chuck Morris of Garden City was sixth for a $350 prize, Nuzzio Marino, of Westland, seventh for

"If you leave your bowling ball inside your car during the hot, sunny summery days, the heat can actually build up enough to damage your bowling ball."

$300 and Rick Eiersmann, of Garden City, netted $280 in eighth place.

Also cashing in were: Dave Myers, Livonia (18th), Paul Graesser, Westland (21st), Doug Spicer, West Bloomfield (23rd), Fred Ramirez, Livonia (27th), Lee Snow, Farmington Hills (29th), Larry Franz, Redford (34th), Jon Reed, Redford (48th), and Eric Tulley, Livonia (50th). The next tournament will be held on Aug. 18-19 at Cherry Hill North Lanes in Clarkston and will be aired on PASS. For information on the Michigan majors, phone Ken Charrette at 775-2414.

Boyle wins another

Boyle Chevrolet rallied from a 2-0, seventh-inning deficit Wednesday to defeat Primo's 4-3 and stay alive in the Livonia Men's Modified Fast-Pitch Softball League playoffs.

After loading the bases on singles by Curt White, Rick Dreher and Tim Robinson, Doug Kirkpatrick hit a two-run single to tie the score in the bottom of the seventh.

Primo's took a 3-2 lead in the top of the eighth, but Boyle scored twice in the second half of the inning.

Following an error that allowed Brian Tiller to score the tying run, White was in the process of receiving an intentional pass when a pitch was thrown too close to let pass. White hit the ball over an outfielder's head to drive in Tim Bowden with the winning run.

Al White was the winning pitcher, allowing nine hits and one walk. Bowden, Curt White and Dave Brubaker had two hits apiece for Boyle.

In a game played earlier Wednesday, Boyle defeated Christ The King 9-4. Curt White pitched a seven-hitter and walked three.

Bowden, Kirkpatrick, Robinson, Jim Foster, Curt White and Mike Kesson had two hits each. Foster had three RBI, including a two-run triple, and Bowden two RBI. Kirkpatrick scored two runs.

Brubaker's grand slam helped Boyle defeat American Insurance 18-0 in the opening round of the playoffs Monday night.

Curt White pitched a one-hitter for Boyle, striking out two and walking three. Tim Gleason was the losing pitcher.

Foster hit a two-run single, and Kesson and Tiller added one RBI apiece.

Marathon training tips

A 12-week marathon training program begins Wednesday Tuesday night at 7 p.m. at Racquets Unlimited in Livonia.

The program is geared toward preparing would-be first-time marathoners for the Detroit Free Press International Marathon on Oct. 21.

Ben Tasich, owner of Racquets Unlimited, said that the program is not designed to turn a total couch potato into a marathoner. He said that those attending the free clinics should currently be running about 20-25 miles a week.

The series of clinics will be held every two weeks and will include guest speakers and a weekly training run. Speakers will include veteran marathoners — heading that list is Doug Kurtis, a former Livonia Stevenson prep star who set a world record last year by running 12 sub-2:30 marathons — shoe company representatives and sports physiologists.

Some classes will be held in Hines Park, said Tasich. "The program will be low-mileage compared to other training programs," he said. "We won't beat runners down with a lot of long runs or high-mileage weeks. We will get them in good enough shape to run their first marathon."

Though there is no fee, registration is requested so the store can provide enough refreshments after the runs. The sessions will also include raffles of running accessories. Call 464-3090 to register or for information. The store is at the southwest corner of Newburgh and Five Mile.

By the start of the second half and into the overtime, the momentum clearly began to shift toward the Marauders.

"Both teams were nervous I think and afraid to make mistakes," said O'Shea. "They (Paragon) had opportunities, but not on net."

Marauders goalie Brian O'Shea was hardly tested, making just four saves. Most of Paragon's shot sailed over the net.

With just under a minute left in the second 15-minute overtime, Paragon's Jason Cardasis missed a chance to tie it when he couldn't control a rebound with O'Shea out of position and a wide-open net.

"We started to play more tentative in the second half for some reason," said Duggan. "It was an up-and-down game. What it boiled down to was that they (the Marauders) finished the goal and we didn't. Weiger had a good first half, but in the second half we didn't get him the ball."

DESPITE THE LOSS, Connolly, a native of New Hampshire who attended Adrian College, sparked in goal.

"He's one of the top in our league," Duggan said. "He's only given up six goals in six games. He's been a savior."

Depth, long considered a strong suit for Paragon during their regular season run, may have been a bit overmatch. "With a summer league team it's going to be hit or miss on who's going to be there," O'Shea said. "But tonight we started the game with four good players on the bench. We had Chris Speen (Schoolcraft and OU), Bobby Neumann (coming back from an injury), Billy Friend (normally a starter) and Nick Hotchin (a Harvard product who lives in Farmington) who could all start."

Paragon's season, however, isn't quite finished. Paragon and the Marauders are both participating in the Michigan Cup, an open tournament held the last Sunday of each month.

The two teams could meet again on Aug. 26.

"Hopefully we'll get them in the next round of the Michigan Cup," Duggan said.

Duffy's Plumbing collegiate champ

By Brad Emons staff writer

The top seed has been determined for the Livonia Collegiate Baseball playoffs, but little else going into Sunday's (July 29) regular season finale.

Brent Hayward's first-inning homer started Duffy's Plumbing on its way to an 11-1 rout last week of host Ann Arbor Wendy's and its first-ever LCBL regular season title. Duffy's will open first-round action of the double-elimination playoffs at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at Livonia's Ford Field against the fourth place team. The second game of the double-header (at 8) pits the second and third place finishers.

But as of Friday, the playoffs standings were cloudy: Walter's (17-11-1), Hines Park Lincoln-Mercury (17-12). The winner of the LCBL playoffs advances to the All-American Amateur Baseball Association five-team regional, Aug. 8 in Zanesville, Ohio.

"I think it's fantastic after all these years," said veteran Duffy's coach Rey Fracassi. "To win, we overcame some serious injuries but the kids stuck together and helped each other out. I just hope we can keep it up."

Haywood slammed a three-run shot to give the league leaders a fast start.

Winning pitcher Bill Wicker went the distance, allowing five hits and two walks.

Haywood had two hits as did Steve Michelz, who added a pair of doubles and had two RBI.

Bill Flohr also had two RBI, while Todd Fracassi, Mike Kaczmarek, Lee Tappy and Rob Puckett knocked in one run apiece.

WALTER'S, meanwhile, muffed a chance to clinch second place Friday, blowing a 7-1 lead going into the final inning, falling 8-7 in eight innings to Little Caesars at Ford Field.

Caesars scored six times in the seventh and added the game-winner in the eighth when Tom Hill scored on a Walter's infield throwing error. Winning pitcher Jim Miller, who went the distance, singled in the game-tying run. Joe Ransley contributed two hits.

Damien Hull had two hits and two RBI in a losing cause. Anthony Chandler, who worked 7 1/2 innings, suffered the loss.

In the first game of the twin bill, Wendy's tripped Hines Park, 5-2.

On Wednesday, catcher Dan Niemiec, who keyed a six-run fourth, collected three hits and three RBI to spark Hines Park to an 11-8 win over Walter's.

Jason Gabel had a two-run triple and two-run single for Walter's. Reliever Derek Humphries earned the victory and Jeremy Krol the save. Bob Balloch took the loss.

FRACASSI SAID he will start Doug McGregor (6-3) in Wednesday's opener.

Also expected back is John Scheffka, who suffered a leg injury (17-inch gash) in a work-related accident.

"He has a 1.28 ERA, but he hasn't pitched for three weeks," said Fracassi. "We need him back as a long reliever because that's very important in nine-inning ballgames."

Duffy's, however, will be without the services of outfielder/DH Ted Shymanski, who suffered a broken leg while sliding into third.

Davidson runner-up in tournament said of her serve. "I felt like I was 8 years old out there. I don't know what's wrong. I changed my grip, but it just won't go in the court."

"It was a big factor, especially in the finals. (Davenport) is so strong. She hit winners off any of my serves."

Davidson, the reigning Class B singles champion, hopes to repeat that success while playing for Harrison School. She plans to continue her career at the collegiate level and ponder the possibility of a future on the pro circuit.

"I'm definitely going to college and play tennis," she said. "After a year or two, I might (turn pro) if I feel I'm ready for it. I'd love to (now) if I thought I could make it."

"I'm having so much fun in high school I don't want to give that up, and I'd never give up an education (in college) if I couldn't (succeed as a pro)."

"I'm playing in three little pro tournaments," she added. "I've done pretty well and if I keep doing well I'll play some satellites, but that won't be until after I graduate."

"Presumed Innocent," starring Harrison Ford, opens this week at area theaters. Did he or didn't he murder his lover? Street Scene film critic Dan Greenberg isn't telling. But he does give his overall opinion on the movie that was filmed partly in Detroit. For more on this and other releases, please turn to Page 2D.

Peter Markey takes "Pan-Pan" along for a ride in his 47-foot, three-supercharged engine, 3,300-horsepower, 17,000-pound Deep-V Apache Superboat.

By Pat Schutte
staff writer

Like many successful young professionals, Peter Markey has rewarded himself for the hard work he has laid down after graduating from Eastern Michigan University in 1973.

He's got a nice sports car, a new motorcycle and a boat.

The sports car and the motorcycle spend most of the time in Markey's garage in Farmington Hills. Worth more than the condo that wraps around it, Markey's Lamborghini Countache appreciates by the day and doesn't take too kindly to potholes.

And the Harley-Davidson? Well, it's 13 months old and hasn't been started yet.

Busy as he may be with the 24 Little Caesar's franchises he owns across the upper Midwest, Markey does find time to drive his boat. But you won't find him out cruising an Oakland County lake or trolling for fish on Lake St. Clair.

Nope. When Markey goes boating, he goes all out.

As the defending Offshore Professional Tour "Superboat Class" champion, Markey, 38, jets to such glamorous places as Monaco, Long Beach and Miami to meet with his crew and gun his 47-foot, three-supercharged engine, 3,300-horsepower, 17,000-pound Deep-V Apache Superboat (at speeds approaching 115 miles per hour) across the oceans and through the air.

IN A SPORT reserved for speed-freaks with lots of money, where did a guy who grew up around East Detroit and used to race his folks' cars on Gratiot ever get the idea that he wanted to be an offshore powerboat racer?

First off, understand that Markey's need for speed came from a lack of an outlet.

"I always loved motorcycles and my parents would never let me own one," said Markey, who now owns four. "I was also always into cars, and my goal since high school was to buy a Corvette as soon as I got out of college."

Markey got his first of several Corvettes soon after graduating from college and going to work for Mike Ilitch and the Little Caesar's organization.

After working for Ilitch for a number of years, Markey decided to go it on his own, and within a few years had opened several Little Caesar's franchises in Michigan. One of them was in Marquette, on the shores of Lake Superior.

"I really caught onto the powerboat thing by accident," Markey said. "I was living in Marquette and saw one of those Wellcraft Scarab boats (similar to the one in "Miami Vice") and became very interested in owning one."

Interest led to phone calls, then traveling, and by 1988 Markey connected with a Florida company and contracted them to build a 41-foot Apache offshore boat.

"It was actually a nice, but expensive ($250,000) party boat," said Markey. "In the first 30 days I owned it, even though it was brand new, I needed a full-time mechanic to keep it running. A beautiful boat, but not any fun for me."

SO MARKEY went back to the guy in Ft. Lauderdale who sold him the boat and told him that he wasn't too pleased with it.

"I told him that the boat drew too much attention and was costing me a grand to fix it whenever I ran it," Markey said.

MOVING PICTURES

'Innocent' overcomes flaws

Some films are, for the most part, so well done that audiences are willing to overlook significant flaws when they do crop up. "Presumed Innocent" (B+, R, 125 minutes) is one such film.

Acting, photography, editing, direction — all excellent. What have we missed? The plot! Glad it's nothing serious — and in a certain sense that's true in this case because the film stands as an engrossing, thoughtful, entertaining two hours despite major flaws in the story.

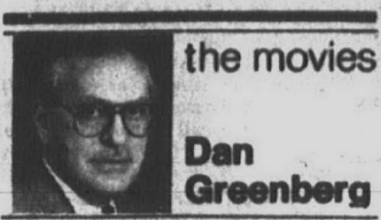

Strangely enough, it's a good story, one which cynically analyzes the nature of our contemporary legal and political systems and the personalities who operate those systems.

Rusty Sabich (Harrison Ford) is the chief deputy assistant prosecutor in a major, unnamed metropolitan community. The fact that it was filmed in Detroit and features views of the Ren Cen and the Old Wayne County Court House has nothing to do with the story.

Raymond Horgan (Brian Dennehy), the prosecuting attorney currently running for re-election, relies heavily on his number one assistant, Rusty. Horgan's competition is Nico Della Guardia (Tom Mardirosian) whose sidekick, Tommy Molto (Joe Grifasi), is an assistant prosecutor who departs his job rather unceremoniously during the election campaign. Why is never explained clearly.

Meanwhile, Rusty's wife Barbara (Bonnie Bedelia) is out in the suburbs keeping house and working on her doctoral degree in mathematics. Rusty often works late and plays house with a colleague, the lovely assistant prosecutor Carolyn Polhemus (Greta Acacchi), who is on the make in every sense of the term.

Fairly near the beginning of "Presumed Innocent," Carolyn is the victim of a brutal sex slaying and Rusty is charged with her death. He hires noted attorney, Sandy Stern (Raul Julia), to defend him.

Here things get pretty murky. Carolyn had been working on a bribery case when she was killed — her speciality was sex crimes and child abuse cases. Although the principals of that bribery case figure significantly in the story, the bribery — and more important the reasons behind it getting "fixed" — are not all that clear. Nor is it ever explained why Horgan perjures himself. Some of the autopsy and evidence reporting also needs clarification. But most difficult to swallow: How can an extremely clever person perpetrate a complex crime, carry away a major clue and leave it lying around to be discovered? That, and a number of other plot elements, just don't wash.

Despite such significant plot flaws, a superb cast, excellent directing, fine editing and good photography combine to override those problems and produce an exciting, motion picture. The film is R-rated but contains some pretty explicit discussion of sexual matters — even for that rating category.

"Problem Child" (PG) is all about a suburban couple, Ben and Flo (John Ritter and Amy Yasbeck), who are having trouble conceiving a child of their own. They turn to the Brutus Orphanage, whose management is only too pleased to get rid of a mischievous little creep, Junior (Michael Oliver), who is particularly adept at causing trouble. Even though he's only seven, he's been returned to the Orphanage 30 times.

That plot summary has potential but lacking a critics' screening, check it out at your own risk. Good luck!

Bernhard great in small doses

By John Monaghan
special writer

Her one-woman show had an extended run off-Broadway and now the film adaptation of "Without You I'm Nothing" arrives at the Maple Theatre, showcasing all the things to love and hate about Sandra Bernhard.

A native of Flint, Bernhard has garnered considerable success as a New York performance artist and stand-up comedienne. Her film debut as a crazed fan in "The King of Comedy" (1983) proved her a talented character actress.

And in small doses, she's quite wonderful. Her full lips, angular face and sinewy body are those of the urban survivor. But Bernhard can barely carry a tune — let alone a whole show — and all of her New York sarcasm and bitterness grows grating long before 90 minutes are up.

The movie "Without You I'm Nothing" finds Sandra, her ego soaring after the success of her show, returning to Los Angeles. Here, amidst the trappings of a smoke-filled, late-night jazz club, she will return to her roots.

AS IT TURNS out, Bernhard is simply a warm-up act for a Madonna-like stripper (the emcee keeps calling her Sarah Bernhardt). The primarily black audience watches her with slight interest but absolutely no reaction.

The audience for the film may react similarly. Bernhard has a unique way of drawing you in and putting you off at the same time. Her choice of music is excellent, however, as she charts the decades and takes on representative personas.

In her lampoon of the late 1960s, Burt Bacharach music plays in the background. Sandra becomes the perfect "Cosmo girl" with mini-skirt

Despite the terrible ways the Vietnam conflict reared the fabric of American culture, it took less than 20 years for that war to become a popular subject for films for all sorts ranging from "Coming Home" (1978) to "Rambo" (1982) with "The Deer Hunter" (1978) and "Platoon" (1986) somewhere in between.

But 43 years after the House Un-

American Activities Committee began its investigation of communism in Hollywood, only six films have appeared dealing with the tragic cost of McCarthyism in human lives and creativity.

While the number who suffered in Hollywood doesn't approach the human toll of Vietnam, that in no way diminishes the suffering of writers, technicians and performers in the late '40s and early '50s. Nor does it lessen the importance of their story and our need for constant vigilance against un- or under-supervised government.

But Hollywood of that period was so terribly divided against itself that few films have appeared dealing with that painful rendering of what everyone always pretended was Hollywood's happy house.

All six that have been produced are available on video cassette, al-

What's an advertiser to do?

Ad rates in the News and Free Press are up. Circulation is down. Yet, hundreds of thousands of eager, affluent consumers in the Detroit suburbs need to know what you sell. What should you do?

1. Trust the right numbers.

The Detroit News and Free Press' own figures show suburban circulation of both the dailies and Sunday newspaper is down.

At the same time, SPRING's network of 39 Detroit suburban newspapers offers a solid, stable circulation of 530,000. (That represents more than one million readers!) What's more, all SPRING newspapers are audited by either ABC or CAC.

2. Put your money where it counts.

Even using the DNAs un-audited figures, SPRING delivers Detroit's suburban market at a lower cost per inch and a lower cost per thousand than either the News or the Free Press.

In short, your advertising dollar will pack a bigger punch when you place your ad in SPRING

3. Switch to SPRING.

STREET BEATS

Chris Newberg, Renee Paquette, Dave Sapienza and Brad Schrage make up the Vudu Hippies, an up-and-coming band in the area.

Getting hip

Vudu Hippies perfect spellbound sound

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

With the Vudu Hippies, wide-eyed innocence has turned into well-focused stares of determination.

In other words, the quartet has gotten its act together. Although they've been together for two years, Vudu Hippies were swimming in the abyss of the local music scene. Then two things happened — the band got a manager and a lead singer.

The manager would come later, but the lead vocalist was under their noses all along. The sweet, crystalline vocals of Renee Paquette has Vudu Hippies strumming down a path of areawide recognition. Originally, Paquette was brought on board so the group could enter a high school band competition at the Birmingham Community House. She was still in high school, attending Birmingham Marian at the time.

"We discovered she was a helluva lot better singer than Chris (Newberg) was," said Dave Sapienza, bass player of the group.

So noted in the Vudu Hippies' first tape, "Smarties," which is available at local record outlets. The band has a tailor-made college sound, complete with jangly guitars and catchy melodies.

AND WHILE the band has ma-

'She's (lead vocalist Renee Paquette) the only one who tries to be herself. She doesn't come out dressed up like Stevie Nicks or anything like that.'

— Chris Newberg
Vudu Hippies

tured considerably, the Vudu Hippies haven't digressed into rampant cynicism.

Songs on "Smarties" still reflect idealism in love ("I Can Almost Feel You Kiss Me") and a better way of life ("Shadows on the Shore").

Yet it's the band's engaging beat that has people buzzing and dancing. In the past few months, the Vudu Hippies have been performing a Herculean schedule of local dates.

On a given night, Vudu Hippies can be seen at the collegiate crest-floors of Rick's Cafe and the Blind Pig in Ann Arbor or in the working class district of Hamtramck venues like The Pub or Paycheck's.

And, on this night, the band looks a bit out of place at the east side hard rocking haunt New York New York.

Most of that can be attributed to the fresh-faced lead vocalist, whose previous experience was singing at weddings, funerals and theatrical events at school.

"I really had no clue I would be singing lead," said Paquette, 18, who attends Eastern Michigan University. "... It was scary. I'm used to singing in front of large masses of people. It was difficult singing behind the band. It's much louder."

BAND MEMBERS credit Paquette for changing the direction of the group. Instead of writing songs to fit an image, they are geared towards her vocals.

Groups fronted by female vocalist is a growing trend, especially locally.

"She's the only one who tries to be herself," Newberg said. "She doesn't come out dressed up like Stevie Nicks or anything like that." She agrees.

"My voice, my style. ... I don't know anyone who sings like me."

sang. Her band mates came to the rescue.

"They're like my bodyguards," she said. Bodyguards, perhaps, but they are grateful ones at that. There was a time band members were ready to give up.

"We sucked," said drummer Brad Schrage, 21, of Bloomfield Hills.

Vudu Hippies were given an added boost when they hooked up with manager Brian O'Keefe, who is a Birmingham-based attorney.

O'Keefe was eating lunch with a colleague at Sammy's Deli in Birmingham when the two were joking about O'Keefe managing the Butthole Surfers. He doesn't, of course.

But Newberg overheard the conversation and had the band's tape on O'Keefe's desk by 8 a.m. the next morning.

With a manager, the group has been playing all over the area and gaining confidence in the process. Though hardly fun, Newberg looks back on those early days as a learning experience.

"We learned how to be realistic," he said. "You get to a place like The Ritz and you envision a packed place with lit parking and security. Then you get there and the bar's empty."

JUMP FOR JOY

— Koko Taylor

Koko Taylor is nothing if not dependable. Queen of blues shouters, high priestess of gravelly voiced boogie, Taylor is not known for subtly in song. She is a big woman with a vocal style to match.

I once saw and heard the Chicago-based Taylor shake the walls of a college town bar. She was all dressed up and ready to play. She works hard. She gives an audience its money worth.

Probably the best known of contemporary female blues singers, she is a regular performer at blues festivals around the country. She is on the road a lot, and almost died in a tour bus accident a few years back.

"Jump for Joy" (Alligator), is a solid recording. On it, she chronicles, in her own gritty style, no good men, no good women (to a lesser extent) and love gone bad, all much explored blues themes.

Taylor and her four-piece band are joined by a horn section that adds a big sound to match plenty of snappy lines.

She sings a duet with bluesman Lonnie Brooks, in which Brooks greets her: "Koko Taylor, my good friend/ I'm glad to see you/ I'm broke again."

She adopts a tough attitude in her songs toward men, who constantly betray her and generally don't measure up. In "The Eyes Don't Lie," she takes on the role of judge and jury and advises the defendant, her lover, "Perry Mason ain't got nothin' on me."

More appealing are the upbeat title track, which celebrates a house party and is led by a roving bass line, and a slow ballad called "Time Will Tell." Taylor mellows a bit in the latter to sing about a relationship that appears to be "over at last."

One surprise among the 10 songs is "Hey Baby," recorded in the 1970s by Ted Nugent. Taylor's version does not suffer in comparison.

NOBODY'S CHILD - THE ROMANIAN ANGEL APPEAL — Various Artists

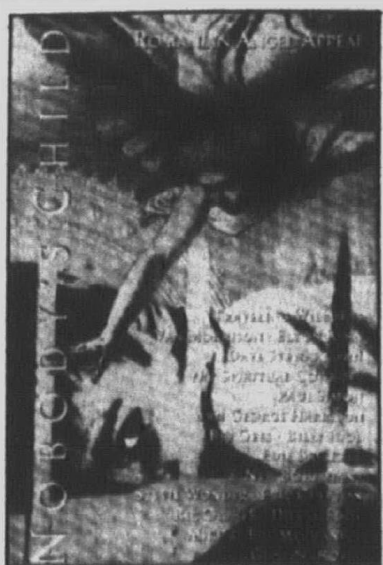

A prominent rocker once said musicians do the job of politicians when it comes to bettering the world. To offer more proof, "Nobody's Child - The Romanian Angel Appeal," a new benefit LP for Romanian orphans afflicted with AIDS, is just the latest in a long string of similar projects.

The harmonica-punctuated title track by the Traveling Wilburys is a simplistic country-rock ditty with a complex message — "No mommy's kisses and no daddy's smiles. Nobody wants them, they're nobody's child."

Incidentally, the Wilburys altered the lyrics of the original — recorded in 1961 by Tony Sheridan and the Beatles — to better reflect the plight of the orphans the LP hopes to assist.

From there, the 14-song Warner Bros. album (a Ringo Starr bonus track appears on the CD version) winds through a mixture of new songs recorded for the effort as well as studio outtakes and various musical leftovers. One of the latter is Mike and the Mechanics' "Ain't That Peculiar," taken from an appearance on the David Letterman talk show.

Although the potpourri of artists on "Nobody's Child" causes it to fall flat occasionally, taken as a whole the set works.

Particularly effective, besides the Wilburys track, are Elton John's "Medicine Man," Dave Stewart's "This Week" and the hard-rocking "Civil War" by Guns N' Roses, which closes out the LP.

An intriguing selection was an acoustical 1976 version of "Homebound" by Paul Simon and George Harrison, from "Saturday Night Live."

While their performance is acceptable, except for a clumsy spot or two, efforts to clean up the 14-year-old tune for this package unfortunately missed the mark. It suffers from noticeable tape hiss.

CHARMED LIFE

— Billy Idol

The scowling one is back. But first, a word to the wise. The hypists at Idol's record company, Chrysalis, are touting this one as a new side of the grown-up punkster, who cut his musical teeth in the thick of the UK punk movement in the late '70s as a member of Generation X.

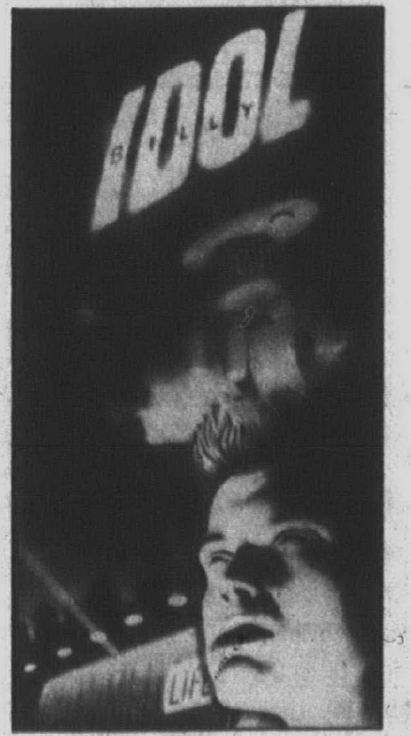

The newness is provided courtesy of new guitarist Mark Younger-Smith — the replacement for longtime Idol comrade Steve Stevens, who has left to pursue solo pastures with the Atomic Playboys.

Younger-Smith is reputed to be another in the long tradition of Texas blues guitar heroes, following the footsteps of the Vaughan brothers (among others).

If you listen to this album, you will have no idea what the high-paid hypsters are talking about. Younger-Smith hardly appears to be the powerhouse he is rumored to be, and the album barely scratches the surface of any bluesy grooves.

In other words, nothing new here. However, Idol and long-time producer Keith Forsey do manage to put together an album that has enough decent rock'n'roll to keep the legion of Idol worshippers satisfied.

The 11 tracks on "Charmed Life" are a veritable rock'n'roll roller-coaster of the above average and mediocre.

"Pumping on Steel" has potential as a future single, and has its share of the ever-popular Idol lyric "OOOOOWWWW!" "Prodigal Blues" is as close as the album comes to a ballad and features Younger-Smith's best guitar work. "Cradle of Love," the current single and part of the "Adventures of Ford Fairlane" soundtrack, is as good a track as anything Idol has done since the "Rebel Yell" days.

It was then that the salesman asked Markey if he had ever thought of offshore powerboat racing.

Since Markey was accustomed to making the trip from the Detroit area to Marquette in around four hours (at 70 miles per hour, it usually takes around seven hours to make the same trip) in his Lamborghini, the idea of legally traveling as fast as you can appealed to him, not to mention to his attorney and driving record.

Investing an extra $50,000 to $75,000 to rig his boat to make it race-ready, Markey ran his first offshore race in Sarasota, Fla., in June 1988. In September 1988, he entered the World Championships in Key West, Fla., and took two firsts and brought the overall Sportsman D Class American Powerboat Association world championship title back to Michigan.

Even though the $5,000 he won for capturing the title "didn't even pay for my gas on the weekend," Markey was revved-up about his new hobby.

"I got hooked."

OVER THE winter months Markey and his crew built a 47-foot Deep-V Apache Superboat that Markey calls "pure race from the ground up."

The boat has three supercharged marine engines at 1,100 horsepower each, a carbon fiber body, the same material used in the B-2 Stealth bomber, that keeps the boat at a relatively light 17,000 pounds and a bright pink (Markey refers to it as "raspberry") paint job with "Pan-Pan" himself sprawled over the top of the boat like he was flying right along with Markey and his crew.

Last season, the Little Caesars Pizza boat took second in the overall standings and a first in the world championships, competing against other offshore race enthusiasts such as "Miami Vice's" Don Johnson, Kurt "Overboard" Russell and Chuck "Missing in Action" Norris.

This season, Markey and his fellow drivers have split their ties with the APBA and formed their own racing association, known as the Offshore Professional Tour Inc., in hopes of gaining more media attention and support.

Currently, Markey is in fourth place in the Offshore Professional Tour Inc., standings with 1,403 points. He trails Popeyes Diet Coke owned by Al Copeland Enterprises, who's in third with 1,482 points.

INXS, a boat owned by John Gehret, is in first place with 1,843 points.

The tour will make a stop on the Detroit River Saturday, Aug. 4, with network coverage and 45 boats. It will be the first race of its kind in Detroit in recent years.

Although Markey is the driver of the boat, it actually takes two other people to operate it. One is the throttleman, Tres Martin, who is in charge of the boat's gauges and maintains the boat's altitude over the waves.

"TRES PUTS the whole boat together... period," Markey said.

Along with the driver and the throttleman, the boat operates with a navigator, "more or less a celebrity position" because the boat now races closer to the shore for better television coverage.

"We'd like to get Ted Nugent or Bob Seger to navigate for us in Detroit," he said.

So what is it like to drive one of these checkered flag-seeking water missiles? Hold onto your life preserver as Markey takes you for a ride of sorts.

"It's different than traveling in a regular speedboat in that you're standing up at all times," he said. "Then, I guess I'd have to compare it to downhill skiing with the leg action and to riding a motorcycle at high speeds with the feeling of the wind in your face."

"And while you can't hear anything but the motors (if the guy next to you says something, you see his mouth move and hear the motors), your body is taking a hell of a pounding from the nine-ton boat over 1.5 hours."

College may be best choice after all

Dear Barbara,
I'm graduating from high school. My mother suggested that I write this letter.

I want to be a furniture builder and I would like to find an apprenticeship doing that right after graduation. They say that I can't count on furniture making as a steady income and that with a college degree, I will be employable in many situations.

I am anxious to get started in the field that excites me. I do not want to put off what I am eager to do for any length of time. Do you have an opinion on this?

Mark

Dear Mark,
What is not possible to include in a letter is how much natural skill and talent you have. This information would be important in making an informed decision.

A knowledgeable piano teacher will know immediately which students should pursue a career and which ones should not. Do you have teachers who could help you in that way?

You did not include in your letter how deeply you have investigated the availability of master cabinet makers under whom you could serve an apprenticeship. This knowledge is necessary for an informed opinion.

Recognizing how little I know about your situation, I would take an educated guess that you should go to a college that develops innate talent. It is the person doing the work that shines through the piece he is working on and although it will take patience, a college education won't stop you from being great, but will enhance all that you make.

As you become a person of greater depth and breath, your work will reflect it. Your excitement about your field is a real plus. If you are able to transfer it to your own inner development as well as to the actual physical labor, you will be deriving its full benefit.

I do want to compliment you for listening to your mother and writing this letter. It shows a good relationship with her and an open mind.

though the two documentaries may be hard to come by at your local rental racks.

The 1976 "Hollywood on Trial" (color and black and white, 105 minutes), narrated by John Huston, is the better of the two with Huston's excellent introductory montage setting the scene for the '47 HUAC hearings.

FOOTAGE FROM those hearings includes Ronald Reagan as president of the Screen Actors Guild. Reagan also appears in a '75 interview as governor of California, commenting on those proceedings. Extensive interviews with the Hollywood 10 are at the core of this film.

Some of the hearings' footage also was used in "Legacy of the Hollywood Blacklist" (1985, color and black and white, 60 minutes), narrated by Burt Lancaster and featuring the wives and children of the Hollywood 10, describing the impact of the communist witch-hunt.

In that period, the Constitution was turned upside-down and people were guilty until they could prove their innocence — if charges were ever brought. Often they just couldn't find work because of the Blacklist which everyone denied existed.

Three of the four dramatic, narrative films on the subject have been available for some time. The first of these, "The Way We Were" (1973, color, 118 minutes) stars Barbra Streisand and Robert Redford in a Sydney Pollack-directed story that spans the social activism of the '30s, the tensions of wartime '40s and the social fear during the HUAC hearings.

Woody Allen's "The Front" (1976, color, 94 minutes) detailed the radicalizing of a Broadway bookie who was fronting for a black-listed friend.

LESS SUCCESSFUL, "The House on Carroll Street" (1988, color, 100 minutes) starred Kelly McGillis and Jeff Daniels in a story of an editor's (McGillis) suffering because she refused to name names before a congressional committee.

Given the importance of the Constitutional issues — the Hollywood 10 went to jail for a year in support of the First Amendment — it is a shame that the BBC and HBO got together with a major cast to do such a poor job on the sixth and latest film on this topic, "Fellow Traveller" (1990, color, 97 minutes).

Screen writer Asa Kaufman (Ron Silver) leaves his wife Joan (Katherine Borowitz) and their three children behind and flees to England before the House Un-American Activities Committee can subpoena him. His best friend, actor Clifford Byrne (Hart Bochner), commits suicide. The three of them, along with a British gal, Susan Aitchison (Imogen Stubbs), had been great friends in the "good ole days."

Unfortunately, when those good old days occurred is obscured by a convoluted and confusing series of flashbacks which include the four of them playing on the beach in what apparently is the late '30s. The identified sequences are in 1943, 1947 and 1954 as well as Asa's rather graphic sexual dreams about his childhood discovery of his mother in the attic having sex with an FBI agent.

WHILE THERE'S nothing wrong with that kind of structure, it has an obligation to flow smoothly so that audiences are aware of what's happening. Such is not the case here, not by a long shot.

Prince with "Little Red Corvette" and we wonder — does she really worship the guy or is she being sarcastic again? One thing is for certain, even Prince's eyes would widen at Bernhard's surprise conclusion.

"Without You I'm Nothing" doesn't benefit from the extra bits that Bernhard and director John Boskovich toss in. There are ponderous interviews with a name-dropping actor friend and glimpses of a young black woman (apparently Bernhard's alter ego) going through the routine of her day.

Tom Waits failed similarly with his movie "Big Time." If a performer is talented enough to carry an entire film, padding only gets in the way. Perhaps Bernhard is trying to further spread out those bits that make her so fascinating.

Life's a beach

Summer fun includes weekend getaways at the park or beach, but skin experts warn of the dangers of overexposure to the sun. Summer shade seekers have an alternative to sunscreen — a beach cabana to protect sensitive skin, perishable picnic baskets and the cooler. Sharper Image at Twelve Oaks and Somerset malls carries the portable beach cabana that easily transforms from a convenient shoulder bag carrying case to an 88-by-42-by-45-inch colorful beach canopy. The deluxe sun cabana is made of tear- and water-resistant nylon, weighs only five pounds and includes a privacy curtain. Affordably priced at $69.

Roadrunner stays ahead on laugh track

By Shirlee Rose Iden
staff writer

What makes Geechy Guy run? Well, for one thing "road running" allows the 26-year-old comic to eat regularly. "No doubt of it," he said, "road work pays the rent."

Presently, a resident of Marina Del Rey, Calif., the comic takes to the highways, airways and the nation's clubs on a part time basis and brings his "no central theme" humor to improvisational clubs around Los Angeles as a "regular."

Geechy Guy is the name he has chosen and he stays with it, opting not to reveal the name given him when he was born at Pontiac General Hospital in 1964.

"Geechy Guy is Japanese for crazy," he quipped. "The story goes that my real name is Flip Wilson, but I had to change it to get into the union."

With an eye trained on making it big, Geechy Guy doesn't dwell on finances too much as long as he has money for the rent and enough pop tarts to sustain him.

"I've always had one goal and that's to be famous and I do what I do because I like it," he admitted.

Growing up in Rochester, the comic turned to show business as early as age 6 when he worked at mastering magic tricks. Later, he added other features to his act.

"BY AGE 12, I was juggling, by high school I was writing comedy, and at age 19 did my first comedy club with juggling," he said. "I didn't much like school or studying. Madonna went to Adams High across town, but I was graduated from Rochester High (1982).

"Fortunately, my family has been supportive of my comedy career. My Mom still lives in Rochester and keeps a scrapbook."

A few years ago, he became a full-time comic and since then has moved from Rochester to San Francisco and now south to Marina Del Rey.

"The night I moved into my new apartment in Marina Del Rey, I was robbed of everything I owned," he said. "Even comics get to cry sometimes."

Presently, a bachelor, Geechy Guy said "being single is one of the sacrifices you make for being in show business."

Describing his humor, the comic said he has been compared to Steven Wright.

"I'm very deadpan, very cerebral like, one time I got drunk on rum cake and the only thing that sobered me up was eating coffee cake."

Guy enjoys writing his own material and then presenting it for the moment of truth before live audiences. He feels as though his career is on an upward trend, that his timing and material have improved since he embarked full time into comedy.

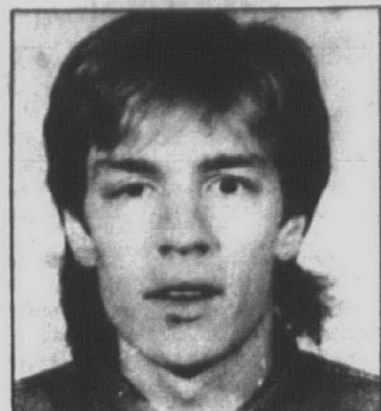

Colleagues label Geechy Guy "somewhere in the middle between filthy to squeaky clean."

before 6,000 people" that was a "total high."

On the road to fame, Geechy Guy was among the winners in last year's "Star Search" and will return to defend his celebrity status soon. Before that he is looking forward to "coming home" for an appearance at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle.

"I'm looking forward to that because it's home," the comic said. "One of my dreams is to play Meadow Brook because I used to work there and I graduated from high school on that stage. And Pine Knob is my criteria for the top."

"Please tell everyone to come out and see me. It's exciting to see hundreds of people in a hall coming just to see me."

Geechy Guy, who grew up in Rochester, has been taking his deadpan style of humor on the road lately. He returns home for an engagement Wednesday through Saturday at Mark Ridley's Comedy Castle.

Geechy Guy will perform at the Comedy Castle Tuesday through Saturday, July 31-Aug. 4. For information call 542-9900.

Brothers get board with old wood

By Greg Kowalski
staff writer

There's a charm in rich, old wood that makes it attractive — and valuable.

So valuable that brothers Stephen and Ted Toth hope to build an international business out of old wood.

Their products are mantelpieces, chairs, tabletops, floors and any piece of furniture that can be fashioned from wood.

Their source of raw material is the nearly 30,000 old barns that dot the countryside in the Midwest.

These usually crumbling relics from a past era look like decayed hulks to most of us. But the Toths see beneath the grimy, weathered surface of the old wood. Over the years, the sap that existed in the original trees crystallized, Ted Toth explained. When it's cut and treated with tung oil, "you end up with the most beautiful wood you can get," he said.

Working out of their carpenter's shop in Hamburg, a small community just north of Ann Arbor, the Toths hope to expand their business to an international level.

"We've got hundreds of barns we can get for free," Ted said. Most of their owners let the Toths have the wood in exchange for tearing down the old barn. Each barn renders 50 to 300 tons of wood.

The best wood, Ted said, comes from barns built before 1850. The wood came from Michigan's virgin forests, most of which have long since been cut.

THE OLD WOOD is still solid and has a richness of grain that can't be matched in wood available today from lumberyards, Ted said. Adding to the texture of the lumber are the marks left by the axes used to hand hew the wood. By the middle of the last century, circular saws and wire nails made hand hewing and the use of wood pegs for binding obsolete.

Barns from the latter part of the last century also render beautiful wood. But this wood often poses special problems the Toths had to learn to overcome.

The planks are littered with nails, bolts and buckshot that will nearly instantly ruin a saw blade.

"But we have found a way to cut between the nails," Ted said. Remaining bits of metal that do show are dubbed "sparklers" by the Toths and give their own special character to the wood.

Depending on the piece, the wood sells for $25 to $50 a foot. But unusual pieces, such as a black walnut beam, bring up to $200 a foot.

"It's the best wood there is," Stephen said.

It's luxurious and durable, and incidentally, fumigated and cleaned before processing.

Working out of their carpenter's shop in Hamburg, a small community just north of Ann Arbor, the Toths hope to expand their business to an international level.

The Toths began their business in 1974 after their father was asked by a developer to raze some barns on a stretch of land near their home. After some near-disasterous experiences where their efforts almost caused the barns to collapse on them, the Toths devised a method of barn demolition using a crane. Since then, they've leveled about 400 barns.

AND WITH thousands more old barns as potential sources of wood, "we need to export (our products)," Ted said. "There's just too much wood here."

The brothers have shipped products to builders on the West Coast and New York, but say they feel they have barely tapped the market.

"We can do new construction or refitting," Ted said. Aside from the beauty and durability of the wood, it holds another charm. Each piece is a bit of Americana, although sanitized, epoxied and converted into a use that the original cutter never dreamed.

The Toths took a personal satisfaction in their work because they feel that they are in a way preserving the barns, which otherwise would rot away or be burned.

Both are concerned about the destruction of America's forest and, in their small way, are preserving trees by recycling wood.

While the Toths have set an ambitious goal of going international, they face the business realities of today. And so far, profits have been minimal. Their products are just catching on with the public.

In response, the Toths have begun an energetic marketing plan. They've started showing their work at area shopping malls and at trade shows.

"We need to be where people can see us," Ted said.

And they're confident that it's only a matter of time before their business really takes off.

For more information, contact the Toth Brothers of Hamburg at 6544 Riverdale Dr., P.O. Box 306, Hamburg 48139, or call (313) 231-9017.

The barn is harder to find

By Greg Kowalski
staff writer

Barns are not unique to this country, but their rugged charm reflects the American pioneer spirit.

Practical yet aesthetic, barns have been a part of our landscape since colonial times. But in recent years, barns have begun to disappear.

Factory farms have replaced many of the family farms that easily were identified by the classic red barn and its silo. And a new method of bailing hay in a round form that sheds water allows it to be left outside without rotting.

So most barns have been abandoned and allowed to slowly decay. It's been a boon for artists who find the disintegrating barns to be colorful subject matter. And barns are a solid source of material for entrepreneurs like Ted and Stephen Toth, who convert the wood from old barns into furniture.

Original barn-builders had no such ideals.

Barns first appeared in the early 17th century as an outgrowth of covered storage pits for barley. The word barn comes from the Old English word "bere (barley)" and "arern (place)."

When barns came to America, they were expanded into storage and stable complexes. The variety, shaped by local customs and available building material, is astonishing.

In New England, barns up to five stories tall have been built. Farmers in the Great Lakes region, where limestone is readily available, used stones as construction material.

Northern woods also supplied logs for logbarn construction.

And prairie barns were designed to withstand the Midwest's high winds. In fact, the traditional angled shape we identify with barns was adapted from that styling.

And barns come in a variety of shapes. Some are round, designed for storing grain or hay at the center and for housing livestock and equipment toward the outside.

Barns have been ingeniously adapted for hillside use, with one floor level at the top of the hill and the lower floor neatly meeting the foot of the hill.

The only things the barns can't seem to adapt to are the times that make them obsolete.

Ted Toth works away.

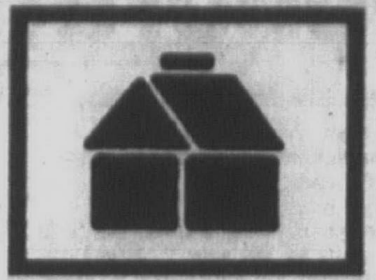

Ted Toth squares up a notch in an old beam that is in place in the ceiling of the home's dining room.

Stephen Toth uses tung oil to give a sheen to the barnwood beams in the kitchen of the home, being built by Richard Adams Russell Inc. of Ann Arbor.

Historic home quickly hooked them

By Joan Boram
special writer

MICHELLE STRAIT describes herself as a typical product of the suburbs. She had never thought there was any reason to leave her home in Lathrup Village for downtown Detroit, and it certainly never occurred to her that she would live in the city.

Michelle, an administrative manager at William Beaumont Hospital-Royal Oak, and husband Doug Strait were on the verge of building a new home in Novi. Then, in 1982, she went on a historic Indian Village tour, and, as the French say, there occurred a "coup de foudre" — overwhelming love at first sight.

"I had no idea that such wonderful places existed," she said. "And I couldn't see enough of them. Doug and I went on tours of elegant old neighborhoods, such as Palmer Woods and Boston-Edison, and when we ran out of tours, we just drove around and gawked at traditional architecture by ourselves."

In 1986, the Straits bought the vintage-1910, neo-Georgian house on Seminole that they occupy today — a simple statement, but an arduous enterprise.

Together, the Straits stripped, sanded and stained the floors in all three stories of the 4,500-square-foot house before moving in Thanksgiving weekend, 1986. They slept on a mattress the first few months, to avoid having to move furniture as they stripped wallpaper and repaired plaster and painted walls. They even sandblasted and repainted the "curley queued," old, iron radiators.

"EVEN WITH all the work ahead of us, we knew we were going to love it," Michelle said. "Our neighbors helped us move in, and were interested in our restoration work. Many of them had had similar projects in their own homes, and they offered suggestions based on their experiences. We were a part of the community from the first day."

The house was built for William B. Mayo, chief engineer at Henry Ford's Highland Park Plant. (Mayo also was one of the founders of Hupp Motor Car Co. and American Airlines.) The original automatic carwash in the garage still works! At one time, Hupp had his own gasoline pump in the garage. During World War II, he generously kept his neighbors supplied with gasoline.

It's a given that houses such as the Straits aren't being built any more, but there are a few amenities that nobody would even dream of in these modern times.

● Such as: A "trunk room" on the third floor. For storing — trunks! But there are no electrical outlets in the room. After all, why would anybody want to see their trunks after dark?

● Such as: A bell under the table to summon servants. "I've rung and rung that bell," Michelle said, "but no servant ever appears. I'd even settle for a ghost of servants past!"

● Such as: A huge, walk-in cedar closet; a Pewabic tile fireplace; and a carriage house apartment with living quarters, including a formal dining room, two bedrooms and a large living room.

ONE OF the great features of the house is the abundance of natural light. Don Cress of the Jacobson's interior design department has made the most of the light in his design scheme for the living room.

oriental-inspired accessories and lots of fresh flowers from the nearby Eastern Market. Sunlight streams in through the windows. The adjacent sun room is bathed in a soft glow that radiates into the living room. It's a room that smiles and beckons you to relax and enjoy.

Morris, the 18-pound marmelade cat, and Gucci, the Himalyan, saunter through. Morris finds a place under the glass coffee table where he can eavesdrop, but Gucci's favorite spot is the window sill in the paneled library, where he can watch the passing parade.

As with any house, the work is never done. The Straits are restoring the garden, neglected for years. ("First you rent a Rototiller") Doug Strait plans to rebuild the cory garden room ("The wood is rotted") as soon as he has time.

YOU'D THINK that owning their own restoration project would have cured the Straits of their passion for old homes, but just the opposite has happened.

"We each travel as part of our job," said Doug, with Electronic Data Systems. "And when we have a minute to look around, we head for the historic district of whatever city we happen to be in."

"When Michelle was in New Orleans, she stayed an extra day just to tour the garden district there. We get a lot of ideas for our home and garden, and owners of historic homes love to compare notes."

"We've found, too, that the price of homes here in the village is much more reasonable than in almost any other comparable district in the United States."

Decorative stenciling brightens homes

By Janice Tiger-Kramer
special writer

AN ART form that has evolved for centuries — decorating everything from shrines and religious robes to rural American interiors — is making a spectacular addition to contemporary and traditional homes.

Decorative stenciling, which experienced a renaissance during the country's bicentennial, is now undergoing a second revival. Crafters are creating custom stencils to match or complement everything from fabric and wallcoverings to oriental rugs and art collections.

"Stenciling is more than a simple folk art today," said Cathy Napple, a custom stenciler whose Northville home is highlighted with one-of-a-kind stenciled borders and painted accents. "It's an art form that can be adapted to complement any interior, from country to contemporary. There's more to it than geese and pineapples."

How has this once-primitive art form maintained its approval rating over the years, emerging as a popular decorating technique in the 1990s? Stenciling, the art of applying paint over a perforated plate to decorate walls, floors, furniture, rugs and other items, responds to the changes in our lifestyle, Napple said.

Stenciled borders and other painted designs personalize a room. Colors can be customized and the design can be intricate or pristine, depending on the interior of the home and the homeowner's taste.

NAPPLE ALSO credits the current popularity of stenciling to a renewed interest in the hand-painted look in general. Marbleizing is currently a popular painting technique that gives the wall a textured look; sponging is another method that gives the surface an illusion of depth.

Since many people are buying and even designing custom homes today, they are more specific about how they want to decorate. While paint for stenciling can match fabric and rugs, for example, a border can duplicate a favorite accessory in the room — a painting or porcelain vase.

"Stenciling gives you a look you simply cannot find in wallpaper books," Napple said.

Besides providing that unique look required by many homeowners, stenciling allows flexibility. While most wallcoverings are 20 to 27 inches wide, stenciling can begin and end wherever you choose — over a doorway, under a window sill or wrapped around a fireplace.

Stenciling is generally less expensive than the cost of wallpaper with installation, and stenciling is easy to remove — you simply repaint the wall. And many homeowners say it is the custom stenciling that brought potential buyers back for a second look, Napple said.

A HOME MAKER and mother, Napple first tried stenciling in 1983 because she wanted a different look for her son's room.

After examining illustrations of pre-cut stencils, she carefully cut pictures of trains, boats and airplanes from a coloring book, increased the picture size on a photocopy machine and created her first stencil. The result was a colorful border that delighted her son, Eric, and peaked her interest in this popular craft.

Try out these work-related timesavers

THIS IS the last of my month-long series on timesaving tips. Today's ideas are work-related:

S.J. writes, "Always have something waiting to do when you are put on hold on the telephone. I used to have filing perpetually stacked on my desk before I decided to use my holding time to put papers away properly. Even if I only get one paper filed, that's an improvement. I'm amazed to find my filing is always caught up now."

"I used to make trips to the copy machine a hundred times a day, but now I've put a 'Copies' folder in the Hot File on my desk and collect several before making a trip. Not only does this save multiple trips, I have fewer chances of getting distracted along the way."

"Also, I've finally disciplined myself to slit open all my mail first, before taking anything out of the envelope. It doesn't take much extra time to pick up the opener and lay it down each time,

but finding the device sometimes does! I've also learned the value of keeping a good, sharp opener. If it doesn't work well, it's useless, but a good opener does save time." Thanks S.J.

Now let's hear from T.P.W.: "I do three things which all sound as if they take more time instead of less, but they save me lots of time in the long run:

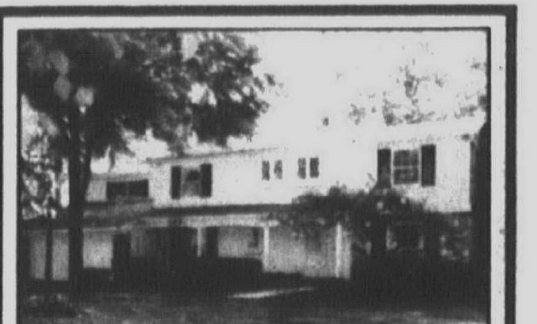

"I back up my computer regularly. It takes time to back it up, but if I don't, I'd never be able to resurrect all that information once I lost it. If you don't know how to back it up, take the time to look in your DOS manual and find out. It's essential!"

"About mid-afternoon, I get groggy feeling and accomplish very little. I've learned to become aware of this wasted period and force myself to move around a little bit. I've learned to save up items for delivery to other parts of the building. Sometimes I go into the coffee room, an empty office or restroom and do some quick stretching exercises or calisthenics if no one is around, or even just sit at my desk and do some simple isometric exercises (tightening and releasing various muscles). By restoring circulation through my body and my brain, I become more alert again in just a few minutes."

"I used to be a poor delegator because it would take too long to explain to someone else how to do something, and besides, I felt I could do most jobs better

Like other beginning stencilers, she decorated her own home and the homes of friends.

"When a friend of a friend called to have stenciling done, I knew there was a market for my work," Napple said.

So she started Stenciled Expressions, creating her designs in a basement workshop or at the kitchen table when she wasn't busy with 8-year-old Eric's sports and other after-school activities. Her husband, Harry, often helps by double-checking calculations to make sure stencils are properly centered and matched at corners.

NAPPLE DRAWS or traces the design to be stenciled, then enlarges the drawing on the copier. She then traces the enlargement onto Mylar (the plastic material from which stencils are made) and cuts out the pattern with a razor knife to create the plate.

This precise work generally takes two to five hours, plus several trips to a customer's home where color selection is made. She uses a light touch for painting, saving heavier strokes for shading.

"I don't want the stencil to look like it's laying on the wall," Napple said. "I want the stencil to be a part of the wall."

Napple's recent projects include a model home in Green Valley subdivision at Nine Mile and Halsted in Farmington Hills. She designed a whimsical clothes line, with pastel clothing flapping in the breeze, to decorate a spacious laundry room in the custom contemporary home. The rear entry includes a colorful stencil trailing down the corners to coordinate the kitchen wallcoverings.

NAPPLE'S MOST challenging work is the focal point of a charming Northville home. The foyer is stenciled with nearly 100 feet of vertical vines, each including a basket filled with colorful flowers.

Her most difficult project highlights a Livonia home, where she perched on an eight-foot ladder for hours stenciling 100 feet of vines around the room and down a cathedral ceiling.

This self-taught artist, who only dabbled in craft work before she began stenciling, said each job is a tremendous satisfaction.

"I always stand back to examine a finished project and say, 'This is fun.' Each project is something new... It's wonderful doing something you enjoy."

Cathy Napple designed this whimsical clothesline custom stencil to decorate a spacious laundry room in a custom, contemporary Farmington Hills home.

Where would Her Majesty live in Birmingham? At Buckingham, naturally.

She'd love the royal park across the street. She'd dote on the spacious two-bedroom apartment with fresh new interiors from the most modern appliances to the best lighting fixtures to designer carpeting to contemporary verticals. She'd like the uncommon amount of room and royal way the service staff treats her. After all, a person's home ought to be their palace.

'Smart' technology still seeking pioneers

Houses will be wired "smart," but new home buyers will have to wait a couple of years to reap the benefits if projections of the National Association of Home Builders pan out.

A wiring system consisting of two cables carrying electrical current, telephone lines and fiber optics will meet at individual receptacle outlets, presenting a host of new lifestyle opportunities for homeowners.

"They fall into areas of safety, security, comfort, convenience, entertainment and energy management," said Ken Geremia, spokesman for Smart House.

But there's more to Smart House than just wiring.

New flexible corrugated stainless steel gas tubing will open the door to an array of portable gas appliances for homeowners.

Smart House is a consortium of the National Association of Home Builders, utilities, manufacturers of building supplies and appliance manufacturers. The concept was spawned in HAHB's National Research Center in 1984.

"Essentially, it . . . enables total home automation," Geremia said.

"IF YOU were to go to bed at night and had forgotten to do several things, you can flip a switch and enter a command to flick off lights, lock doors, turn back the thermostat and arm the alarm system," he said.

"If the phone rang, it (system) might shut down the volume on the vacuum cleaner or stereo so you can listen," Geremia added.

Roy Maly, residential development specialist for Detroit Edison, gave other examples.

"You can program so they (kids) can't turn on the range, TV or VCR. You may have a stereo system in the house and portable speakers you can move around and just plug into any outlet."

Other possibilities abound.

Ranges could be turned off and on from a car phone. Dishwashers could be programmed to operate during non-peak electric and water use hours.

THE INITIAL cost projected by Geremia for the wiring, switches, outlets and controllers is $7,500, plus an additional several hundred dollars for gas tubing. But he and others expect that the price will decrease as the system is refined and more home buyers order it.

When will all this happen here?

The Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan, Edison and Wake-Pratt, a Troy builder, will join forces to build a demonstration model in the spring of 1992, according to a tentative timetable provided by Maly.

Upwards of two dozen builders will get materials and the go-ahead from BASM to pre-wire Smart-Houses next spring.

All of those houses will go on-line and general production should begin a couple of months after the demonstration model opens.

Donald Pratt, a vice president at Wake-Pratt, said his colleagues in the building industry here aren't exactly jumping over each other to get on the bandwagon.

"I THINK it's going to be a wait-and-see situation. No one likes to be the pioneer," he said.

"People resist change. It took months just to get the national electrical code changed to allow this system. It's a slow process to get something this monumental off the ground," Pratt said.

"The most important factor is people who design homes, subcontractors . . . builders, themselves, inspectors . . . all of the people involved have to become acquainted with products and trained in their proper use," Geremia said.

Wiring and appliance manufacturers, who would have to adapt their wares to the wiring, also are taking a cautious approach.

SMART-COMPATIBLE appliances probably will cost more, but Geremia said he doesn't know exactly how much.

A gradual introduction of the system will whet appetites among consumers, those involved with Smart House agree.

"I really feel once the public finds out what this system will accomplish, make lifestyle easier, they will want it," Maly said.

Hedges block driver's view, but county is not responsible

I suffered a personal injury while driving my car in a cooperative because of a failure to remove a hedge that obstructed my view. It is my firm belief that the county road commission had a duty to trim the cooperative, to trim the hedge which resulted in my injuries.

Do I have a case against the cooperative, and do I have a case against the county?

You do have a case against the cooperative if you can establish negligence. You do not have a case against the county road commission.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney specializing in condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

You are invited to submit topics about condominiums that you would like to see discussed in this column by writing Robert M. Meisner a 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Birmingham 48010. This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

The county road commission has no duty to trim or cause the property owner to trim the hedge in your case because the liability of the county road commission extends only to the improved portion of the highway designed for vehicular traffic.

Accordingly, neither street lighting nor vegetation growing on private property adjacent to a road can be classified as part of the improved portion of the highway designed for vehicular traffic.

On the other hand, the cooperative association has a responsibility to maintain its property and to the extent that it has been negligent in doing so, which resulted in the injury sustained by you, you may have a claim for relief and damages.

GARAGE SALE

HOW TO DO A LITTLE BUSINESS ON YOUR OWN...

Holding a garage sale is a fun way to do a little business on your own . . . but it takes a bit of planning.

Like you'll want to decide what to sell and how much to charge for each item . . . and then you'll need price tags so other people will know what you're charging.

And you'll have to be able to make change for all your customers . . . so that means you should have lots of one dollar bills and an assortment of coins.

Then you'll want to advertise your sale to attract that crowd. You can do it with a sign or signs in your neighborhood . . . but you'll want a bigger crowd than that . . . so you'll run an ad in Classified which tells the time and place of your sale to a host of potential buyers.

Have fun with your little business adventure!

Pick up your free Garage Sale folder in our office when you place your ad! (Contains two signs, two arrows, a handy ledger, 14 tips for a successful sale and nine tips for a successful ad)
