Neighbors to challenge Roe Street ruling

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

A program which places former drug and alcohol abusers in a Plymouth neighborhood does not violate city codes, city officials say.

But an attorney representing longtime neighborhood residents suggests they'll seek changes in the city zoning code to make transient stays in residential areas illegal.

Personalized Nursing Light House "has altered its program to conform to the requirements of the city of Plymouth," according to a statement from the substance abuse aftercare program.

The program in October began placing participants in an apartment complex at 303 Roe St.

That alarmed some neighbors, who said the former substance abusers posed a possible threat to their safety and belongings.

City officials then investigated the program participants' living quarters at the apartments. They determined the city code was being violated when Light House posted curfews and other rules there.

But after Light House removed rule postings at the apartment complex, the program "is not in violation of our city code," city attorney Ron Lowe told city commissioners and audience members attending the Dec. 3 city commission meeting.

At a meeting tentatively scheduled for 7:30 p.m. today at city hall, planning commissioners are to continue a review of zoning codes.

Douglas Miller, planning commission vice-chairman, said, "It's a public hearing. We'll be happy to hear their (Roe Street residents') suggestions and consider those."

Before proposed changes in the zoning code are adopted, the planning commission "in early 1991" will present the revisions to the city commission, Miller said.

The commission is charged with final approval of proposed changes.

Responding to residents' concerns brought before the city commission in November, police stepped up patrols of Roe Street.

But police and residents have reported no problems, and citing this, police have scaled back patrols.

Mettetal Airport issues up for discussion tonight

The controversy over the future of Mettetal Airport in Canton is scheduled for a full airing tonight.

A public information meeting has been scheduled for 8 p.m. at the city cultural center.

City Manager Gordon Jaeger will moderate the meeting. Elected municipal officials in Plymouth and Plymouth Township have been invited, along with representatives from the Michigan Department of Transportation, state Bureau of Aeronautics and the Federal Aviation Administration, and a group opposing government involvement in running the airport.

Jaeger said the meeting will provide information to city commissioners before the Dec. 17 vote on whether to join the airport authority touted by Plymouth Township trustees.

The representatives of the state and federal agencies "will enunciate the interest of their agencies in the preservation of Mettetal Airport," said Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen. He is seeking creation of an airport authority to buy and run Mettetal.

Jaeger said the meeting will provide information for elected officials, and provide "an opportunity for the public to express views" on the future of the airport.

Groups can help local food drive

Plans are under way for the seventh annual "Baskets Filled With Love" food drive for the Salvation Army.

Omnicom Cable and the Plymouth Rotary are co-sponsors of the food drive that lasts until Dec. 14.

The program guarantees food for the less fortunate in the community and exemplifies the Rotary motto: "Service Above Self," said Russ Hoisington, coordinator of the Rotary's food drive.

Schools, churches and businesses are being contacted by the Rotary and asked to accept a "Love Box" to collect canned goods.

Depending on the type of establishment, there are a number of ways in which this can be accomplished. Some will ask employees, students or the congregation to donate. Others will display the box and poster as a drop-off site for the general community. Service organizations such as the Rotary will be asking their members to donate at their meetings.

The program is successful because people care, said Lt. Jeffrey Beachum of the Plymouth Salvation Army.

Maria Holmes, community affairs and program director for Omnicom, has been involved with the food drive since it began in 1984.

For more information on the program, contact the Salvation Army at 459-5464.

Woman hopes court will free brother from prison

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

As her brother serves his eighth year in a California prison on a murder conviction, a local woman awaits a judge's decision that could free him.

"He seemed real hopeful that the arguments are going to stand real firm in federal court," said Betty Brandon of Plymouth Township.

Her brother, P.F. Lazor, was sentenced in 1983 to 17-years-to-life in Santa Clara County, Calif. in the shooting death of John Allred.

KATHRYN DeVOLI, a paralegal in Paso Robles, Calif., has organized court challenges to the conviction.

"An unscrupulous district attorney falsified evidence on the record in order to convict PF," DeVoli said.

On Nov. 28, Devoli filed before federal Judge Spencer Williams a rebuttal of a California assistant attorney general's Nov. 14 response to the judge's April 15 order. That order directed the state of California to show cause as to why Lazor should remain in prison.

"I'm very hopeful," Brandon said. "I feel the most hopeful that I ever have about his situation."

Brandon — who with her brother grew up in a rural area between Northville and South Lyon — said the first four years he was in prison "were a nightmare."

"I'd wake up in cold sweats worried about what someone might do to him in prison, the injustice of it all," she said.

She and her family have spent thousands of dollars, she said, in efforts to get Lazor out of prison. Those efforts have included trips to California.

In 1975, Lazor, then 21, printed a book of poetry titled "Unsung Memories," and made the rounds of local newspapers including the Plymouth Observer to seek publicity for the book.

FOUR YEARS LATER, inspired by the movie "The Buddy Holly Story," Lazor launched a singing career as "Buddy Holly Jr." and toured with a band performing Holly's songs.

But on Jan. 10, 1983, while living in Los Gatos in northern California,

Robert DeMattia: "No one was here, it was just cornfields."

Builder saw opportunity in cornfields

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

When Robert DeMattia considered building his first industrial park near M-14 in Plymouth Township, the common wisdom said Oakland County was the better place to go.

"No one was here, it was just cornfields," said DeMattia, 46, a Farmington native who moved his headquarters from Southfield to Plymouth Township. "They thought everybody wanted to go in the northern corridor."

"I COULD SEE the area of M-14, I-275 and I-96, the proximity to Ann Arbor and Detroit, the proximity to the airport, a very stable local government. It's a great place to live," he said.

His developments have ranged from warehouses to buildings for laboratories where the temperature can't deviate more than half a degree amidst elaborate containment areas and filtering systems.

Since 1977, DeMattia has developed four industrial parks in the Plymouth Township M-14 corridor. And amid talk of an economic downturn in Michigan and the country — DeMattia said he noticed such a downturn in the first six months of the year — the area's premiere developer of industrial parks said further R.A. DeMattia Co. development in the township "could always be in the offing."

Public speculation on one development — a new stadium for the Detroit Tigers — suggests the team could favor a western Wayne County site for a new stadium — possibly Plymouth Township.

A possibly suitable area for a stadium is the site of the former St. John's Seminary, on 175 acres at Five Mile and Sheldon. The owner, the Archdicese of Detorit, has signed an agreement to sell the property, but won't name the buyer.

he shot Allred in self-defense, DeVoli said.

Mark Hames, who tried the case as a Santa Clara County deputy district attorney, offers a different version.

"They never got along," said Hames, ever since Allred began staying in a room in the house Lazor was managing, for owner Paul Garnier — Allred's uncle.

Hames said Garnier eventually told Lazor to leave the property, but he returned unlawfully. Excerps from Lazor's day planner book included entries that read "dictator Garnier" and "get dictator" — evidence that Lazor was obsessive about Garnier, and planned to kill him — but killed his nephew Allred instead, Hames said.

"The jury had no problem convicting him," Hames added.

"He pulled out every rotten trick in the book to convict PF," Devoli said.

Lazor, she said, had a deal with Garnier to buy the house, then move it to another location and sell it, as he had with other houses.

Garnier arranged to have Allred stay at the house, where Lazor had been living and renting rooms to medical students.

But Allred, whom Devoli described as homosexual and a drug user, was antagonistic to Lazor. On Jan. 10, while readying the house to be moved, Lazor "heard Allred screaming outside the door. PF said, 'Just a minute, I'm getting some of my stuff,' " Devoli said.

"There was a crashing at the door and there's John Allred, holding something like an automatic weapon in his hand," Devoli said. Meanwhile, Lazor had just returned from target shooting, and his gun was among the last items to be moved from the house. Lazor fired a shot at Allred, and when he didn't go down, thought the gun had misfired as it had before and fired three more times.

LAZOR, SHE SAID, then went next door to phone police, telling them, "I just shot someone in self defense."

The day-planner book entry, which states "dictator Garnier" and "Get dictator" are references to a dictating machine Lazor planned to buy, Devoli said. She said pretrial transcripts show the complete day-planner book entry read, "Dictator, G.E. service center."

Lazor is housed in a medium security prison in Vacaville in northern California.

"There were some things that should have brought out in the trial," said Devoli, who alleges defense attorney Wesley Schroeder failed to adequately defend Lazor.

Should the judge find for Lazor, Devoli said that either a new trial would be scheduled or the state would decline to try him again.

"All in all things are progressing pretty well," she said.

Developer saw opportunity where others saw cornfields

DeMattia, noting that Tigers owner Tom Monaghan is active in the Catholic church, speculated that Monaghan could be interested in the site. "I'm sure the owner of the Tigers doesn't have any ties to the Catholic Church," he said, adding a wry smile.

"I BELIEVE THAT a stadium should be downtown. It's a symbol of Detroit, it's a great place," DeMattia said.

If a stadium were to be built in the township, "There would be a lot of traffic," he said. He talked of a scenario of fans leaving such a stadium at rush hour after a day game, as employees leave the industrial parks he's built along the M-14 corridor: "I don't think that would be much fun."

On the walls of his office in the Metro West Industrial Park off of Sheldon north of M-14 are photos signed with greetings from Ronald Reagan, U.S. Rep. Carl Pursell and Vice President Dan Quayle. Asked if he favors Republican politicians over Democrats, DeMattia smiled, adding, "Anyone who's elected."

"I believe that business leaders have to support and be activist in politics," DeMattia said. He's joined state government-organized trips to Japan to seek business for southeast Michigan, and is active with the state department of commerce.

"Detroit has to be strong for the suburbs," he said. Asked if he's considered industrial park developments in the city, DeMattia said he has, but declined to elaborate.

DeMattia, a married father of three grown daughters who lives in Northville, said he rises at 3:45 a.m. and works out for half an hour before leaving for work. He conducts two staff meetings per week at 6 a.m., works with sales staff and oversees a total staff of 75. He leaves the office around 7 p.m.

ASKED HOW HE'S successful at gaining clients for his developments, he declines to elaborate, saying only that the firm uses a broad marketing approach.

Over a 10-year period, DeMattia and two other developers plan a 930-acre development in Northville Township called Huntington Falls, to include 1,200 housing units, a golf course and other recreation facilities.

"Our marketing studies show that people like to maximize their stay with their families," he said, and get from where they live to recreation sites with "minimal travel time."

While civic leaders in Livonia have lamented some businesses leaving their city for Plymouth Township — where tax breaks are offered to those businesses — DeMattia defends the practice as good for southeast Michigan.

"Tax abatement is offered nationwide, we're offering that to every foreigner that comes in — every domestic firm should have the same opportunity," he said.

"What we don't want is someone leaving Michigan," he said. "People don't move for tax breaks," he said. "It's a huge cost" for a firm to relocate.

"Sometimes we're very parochial," DeMattia said, suggesting that while a firm might relocate from Livonia to Plymouth Township, "They eat in the same restaurants."

DOES TALK OF a recession worry him? "For the last 14 years, I wake up every morning worrying about what the economy's going to do."

"Our clients find it harder to get money right now for lending," he said.

DeMattia said most of his area industrial parks are 90 percent occupied, which he suggests is an ideal rate, as some space is left for potential clients.

DeMattia said he's proud of the appearance of his industrial parks. "You don't see anything lying around, do you?" he asks, adding a staff person is responsible for maintaining that appearance.

Of the current troop deployment in the Middle East, which could have economic implications, DeMattia said, "I'm not saying we shouldn't be there."

But he recalls his service as an Army captain in Vietnam in 1969-70, saying, "To this day, I don't know what I was doing. I wasn't defending the United States."

Commissioners OK city budget

A budget-balancing plan devised to make up a $300,000 deficit, much of it carried over from the 1989-90 city budget, was approved by city commissioners Dec. 3.

A rise in rates charged to the city to dump garbage since September 1989 was a main contributor to the deficit, city officials said.

While the revised fiscal year 1990-91 budget shows a surplus of $64,000, Mayor Dennis Bila suggested nearly all that amount would go for raises for non-union city employees.

Highlights of the measures to reduce the budget included:

- Raising city cemetery grave-opening and -closing fees charged to non-residents from $425-$475 to $700, based on average charges levied by private cemeteries. Resident rates will rise from $325-$360 to $425-$470.
- Fee increases for men's and women's softball, women's basketball, hockey ice rentals and for rental of the arts and crafts room and card room.
- Cutting $30,000 by delaying repairs to some city buildings.
- Cutting $47,000 from the police department budget through lower estimates of sick time pay, delaying equipment purchases and reducing other expenses.

Mettetal Airport issues to get full airing tonight

Last summer, Canton trustees rejected a plan to buy the airport. In August, Breen began investigating a plan to form an airport authority to buy the airport with state and federal money.

The plan, according to state and local officials, would leave Plymouth Township and other communities who could join the authority free from lawsuits over operations. Also, no locally collected tax money would go toward running the airport under the plan.

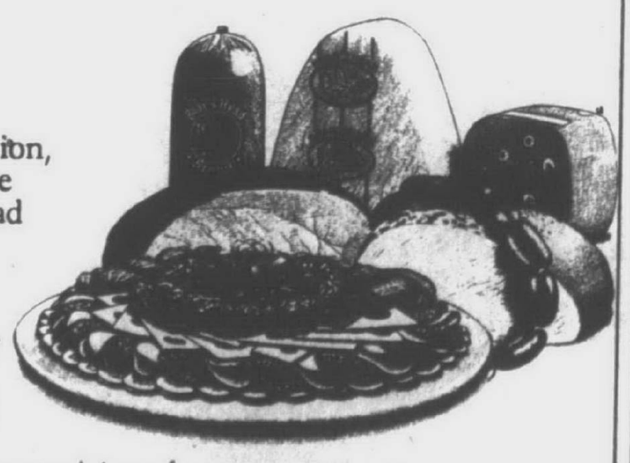

City of Plymouth officials have yet to vote on whether to join such an authority. But Canton Supervisor Tom Yack is strongly against the plan.

Meanwhile, Tom Kennedy of Plymouth Township, a TWA pilot, has promoted saving the airport so it can be used to host an aviation school.

Educator nearing end of 'rewarding' career

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Pontiac-born Carl Taylor knew as a kid he wanted a career in education. After graduating in 1948 from Rochester High School, he wanted nothing more than to go to college and study education.

But Uncle Sam intervened. Taylor — who retires this month after 33 years with Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, most of them as a middle school principal — spent 1948-1952 in the Navy, seeing service during the Korean War.

Taylor graduated from Eastern Michigan University and landed his first job with the Plymouth school district, which had just opened East Middle School.

Starting salary for the new math and science teacher was $4,000.

"I THINK WE had six schools in 1957, and the only school south of Joy Road was Gallimore," said Taylor, who earned his master's degree in school administration and supervision attending night school at EMU.

"We had a number of one-room schools — Geer, Cherry Hill, Bartlett and Stone. Frains Lake sent their kids here. Farrand and Tanger were on the drawing boards," said Taylor, the district's senior ranking administrator.

"It was interesting. The district covered 54 square miles, but the greatest percentage of students came from the city of Plymouth and Plymouth Township. Canton had very few children. There were no subs in Canton."

Taylor has seen changes aplenty. Enrollment at East went from a few hundred to a high of 1,059 in 1969.

In 33 years, our total school budget has gone from $1.5 million to $68 million, said Taylor, who was surprised recently with a laudatory resolution passed by the board of educations.

TAYLOR, WHO SPENT 25 years as principal at East and eight at Pioneer Middle school, said, "I've put 26,000-27,000 kids though school. That's why I know everyone in town."

While the district, like any other, has had its problems, it's been "very, very good to my family and myself. I wish everyone the good feelings I leave with. I'm very loyal to the district, and I'll speak highly of it. It's still an excellent place to work. That's why I never moved," he said.

Most enjoyable, said Taylor, has been the school spirit generated by performance groups, be they bands, teams or shop classes.

Band director Larry Livingston and choral director Bill Grimmer, founder of the Plymouth Community Chorus, helped inspire school pride, Taylor said.

"I think a school has to have spirit, and spirit begins with the performing groups, whether it's an art show or athletics. Those are the kinds of things that make you feel good. The town sees it, the parents feel good about it, and when you walk into a classroom, it just makes your body kind of tingle. You feel something there."

Dealing with middle school students is "very, very difficult, but extremely rewarding," he said.

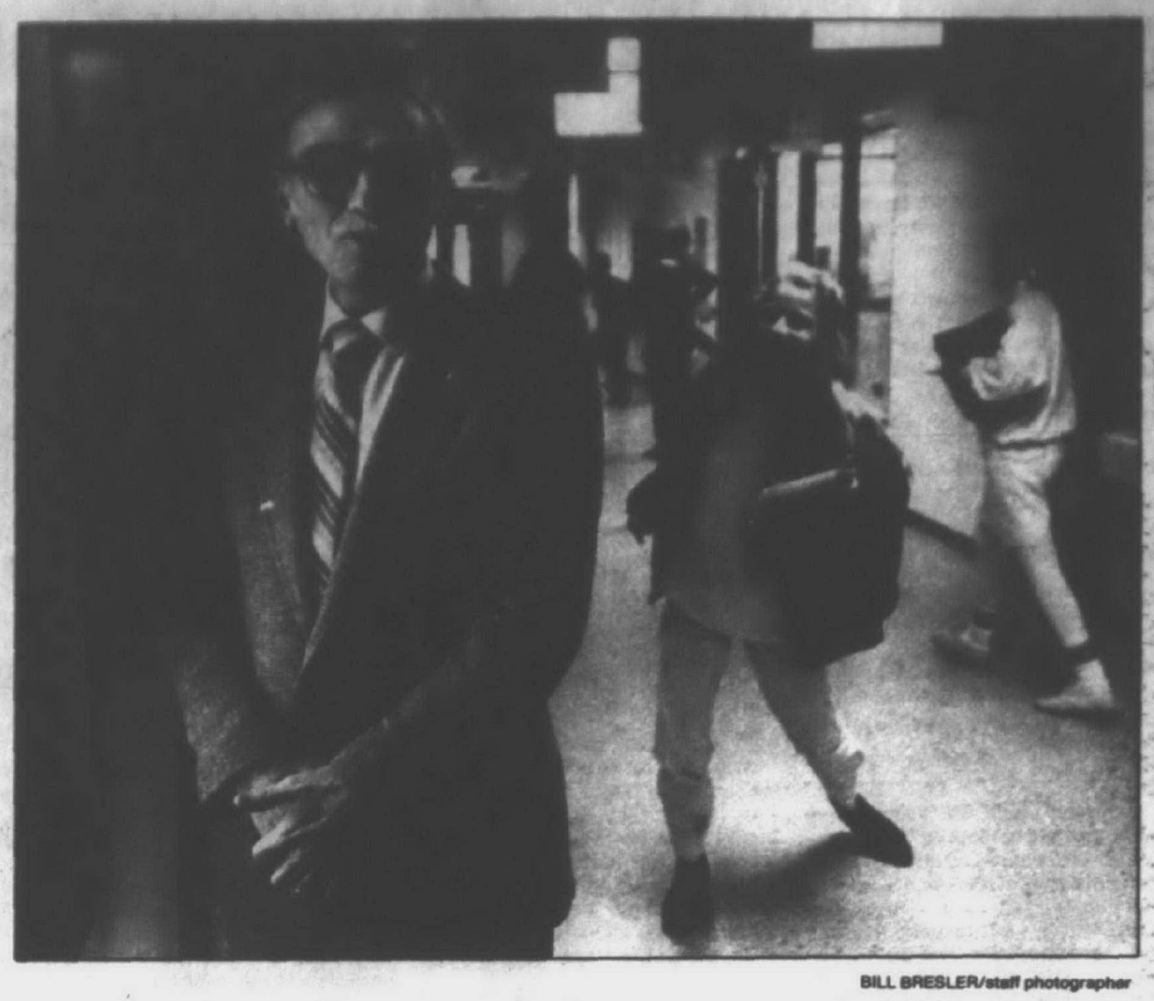

"They take a lot out of you, but they also give you a lot, because of their spontaneity. Junior high kids love you today and hate you tomorrow. That's a trait about them. I've stayed with them because I love them."

TAYLOR RETIRED AS Pioneer Middle School principal July 1, and was assigned to special projects. He has forecast population growth for the district, identifying areas where new schools will be needed. He also has worked on the bond issue and on the board office expansion.

With his wife Mary, Taylor plans a trip to Hawaii this April. "Our plans are to take a minor trip every year, and a major trip every other year," he said. "In 1993, we'd like to go to Australia and New Zealand."

Westland — close to the Taylors' four children and soon-to-be six grandchildren — will remain home base. "We will visit our grandchildren and enjoy things like the art museum and the library we never have time for."

That's good news for the Taylors, but the students back at Pioneer aren't so sure. Based on the amount of attention he received during a recent visit to his alma mater, there's no doubt at all that he is very well liked.

MEAP test shows scores down in 7 of 9 subjects

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

Plymouth-Canton school officials aren't weeping, but they're not leaping for joy either after reviewing students' scores on the Michigan Educational Assessment Program test.

Scores in the district were down compared to last year on seven of the nine tests.

The standard exam measures students' skills in math, reading and science. Math and reading tests are given to fourth, seventh and 10th graders, while the science test is given to fifth, eighth and 11th graders.

OVERALL TEST RESULTS were "relatively steady from last year to this year, said Michael Homes, assistant superintendent for instruction.

"There were some ups and downs, but that's not particularly unusual," he said. "I think one could expect to see that, knowing the test changes from year to year and student groups change from year to year."

He said a comparison from one year to the next is not always fair, and added, "They may be looking at the same kinds of student learning or the same kinds of skills, but the questions used to look at how well a student does are not the same from year to year."

The reading selections were more difficult this year, said Sheila Alles, curriculum coordinator for language arts.

Barb Church, K-12 curriculum coordinator for math, science and computer education, said she hasn't had a chance to review all the results, but said she's not overly concerned.

"I don't think a whole lot of significance should be attached to the scores because the drops are fairly minimal. If we dropped 10 points, I'd be really alarmed," she said.

"In looking at MEAP scores, you're comparing different groups of students every year. You're comparing students from one year to students of another year. That's not always legitimate."

Church said the math test will be changed next year to reflect the state's new math objectives.

She said she's looking at the district's test objectives in areas where the students didn't perform well to see if district expectations are still legitimate.

"The state has moved away, and nationally we have moved away, from math being heavily computational. The math curriculum we've taught traditionally was well-matched to 1940s, and doesn't match what kids need to know nowadays when we have computers and calculators," she said.

Math is being changed so there is less emphasis on drill and doing 50 problems exactly right, she said.

"What we need to focus on in the district is teaching kids concepts of math and how to use the calculator as a tool."

Eighth-grade science scores aren't as high as they might have been, because the test, administered in the fall, deals with physical science, which is taught in the eighth grade.

That's not likely to change, said Church.

"We feel eighth grade is the place to teach chemistry and physics because students are better prepared to handle theoretical concepts then," she said.

"We know they're not going to do well. We just bite the bullet and hope people understand. If we gave the MEAP at the end of eighth grade I feel the scores would be very different."

The district is using the MEAP test to identify students' weak spots, provide direction for teachers and find ways to enhance learning.

An important weak area in science deals with eighth-graders' ability to control variables in an experiment, Church said. "We feel this is an important skill for students to be able to understand. Therefore, we're saying to teachers, 'This is an area of need.' We'd like teachers to put more emphasis in this area."

MEAP test results

Here are some highlights from the Plymouth-Canton schools MEAP tests:

- Scores — representing the percentage of students who passed — were up in 10th grade reading and in eighth-grade science.
- Fourth grade, reading scores dropped from 47.1 to 44.7 percent. Overall math scores went down from 91.5 to 89.6 percent.
- Seventh grade, reading scores dropped from 47.2 percent to 44.6 percent. Math scores went from 80.2 percent to 77.1 percent.
- In 10th grade, reading scores improved from 40.7 to 47.3. Math scores dropped from 80.2 percent to 78.4 The two-part reading test was revamped last year after the state department of education changed its definition of reading.
- In science, fifth grade scores were down from 79.4 to 78.5 percent.
- Eighth grade science scores improved a bit, from 66.7 to 67.0 percent. There was little change in 11th-grade science — from 46.5 last year to 46.1 this year.

Tapes swiped from video store

crime watch

An unknown amount of video tapes was stolen early Wednesday from a drop box outside of Blockbuster Video on Ann Arbor Road in Plymouth Township, according to a report filed with police.

A store employee reported $50 in damage to the box, as metal near the lock was bent sometime between 1 a.m. and 8:15 a.m. Police have no suspects.

BREAK-IN: From a dresser in a Plymouth Township home, $420 was stolen sometime between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., according to a report filed with township police.

The homeowner said the thief possibly entered through a locked door, and said the locks would be changed to the house on Hammill Lane. Police closed the case for lack of evidence.

PURSE STOLEN: A Plymouth Township woman reported that her $20 blue purse, containing $208, was taken at around 9 p.m. from her house on Apple Creek.

The woman said she heard the kitchen door open, but thought nothing of it, according to the report filed with police. A few minutes later, she found her purse missing. Police said there were no suspects.

Ex-teacher seeks sentence under state law in drug case

By Darrell Clem
staff writer

A former West Bloomfield High School teacher and two Southfield men who pleaded guilty to growing marijuana have filed a motion in Detroit federal court seeking to be sentenced under state law, in hopes of avoiding tougher federal penalties.

The motion could potentially determine whether ex-teacher James L. "Doc" Spinelle and General Motors Corp. employees Richard K. Barth and Elmer H. Drouillard could spend years in prison.

The defendants, arrested in a March 15 raid that netted 388 marijuana plants being grown in the basement of Barth's Southfield residence, raise a constitutional issue over whether they should be sentenced under federal guidelines.

THE MOTION CONTENDS that the three men should be subject to state law and that efforts to prosecute them on federal charges amount to a due process violation.

Although both federal and state agents were involved in the investigation, the defendants claim in their joint motion that the decision by authorities to exercise federal jurisdiction in the case was made "on an ad hoc basis."

Michael Stern, the assistant U.S. attorney prosecuting the case, was preparing a response to the motion on Tuesday, and he said he expected to file it later this week.

The motion, filed Nov. 28, came about four months after Spinelle, Barth and Drouillard pleaded guilty before U.S. District Judge John Feikens to one count each of manufacturing marijuana at Barth's 24898 Farmbrook residence, near Telegraph and 12 Mile, in Southfield's northwest end.

The charges stemmed from a long-term investigation, led by the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, that involved federal and state authorities.

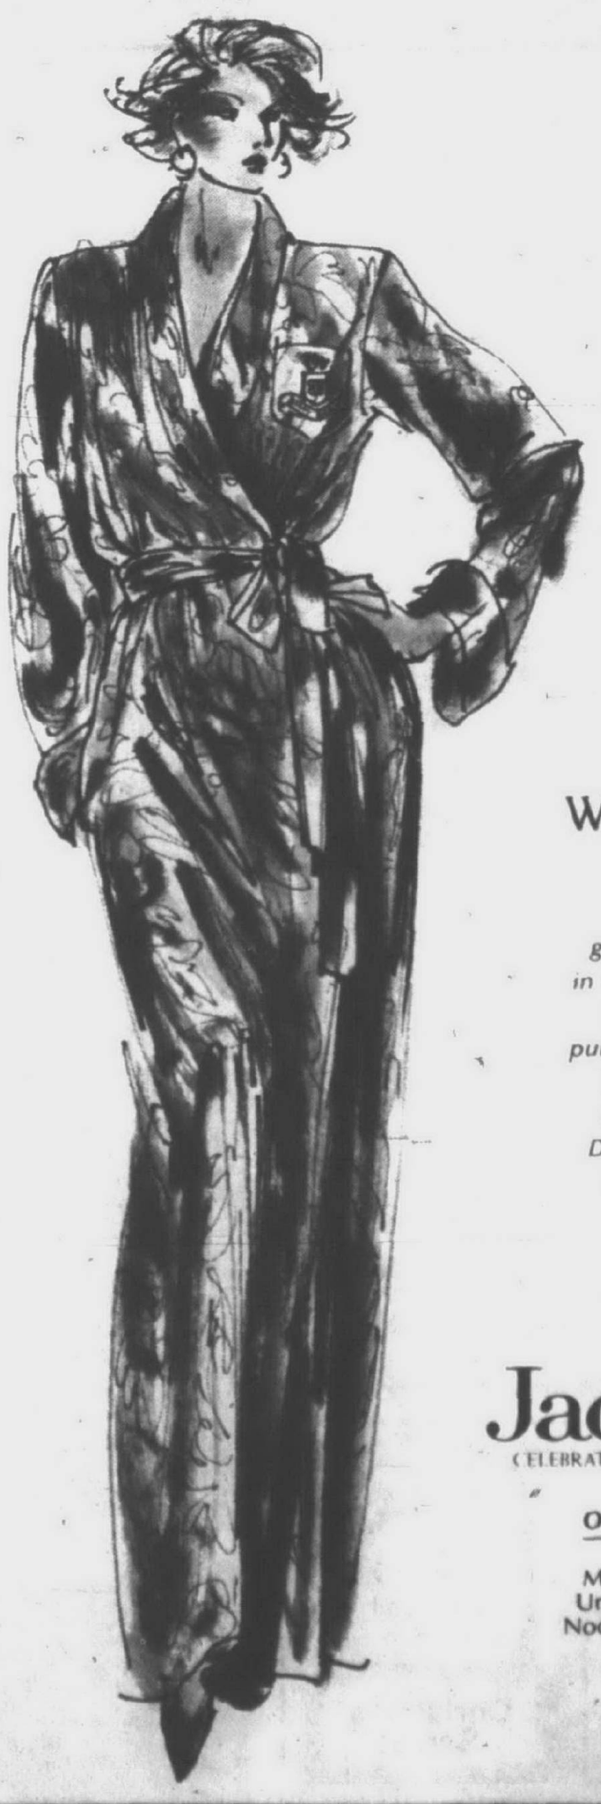

Early on, federal authorities had said the men each could face up to 20 years in prison and fines of $1 million. However, prosecutors and defense attorneys subsequently agreed to federal sentencing guidelines that took into account the defendants' admission of guilt and their lack of prior criminal records, among other issues, Stern said.

As a result, the men were expected to be subject to prison terms of 51 months to 63 months, or a maximum of five years and three months. Stern said that Judge Feikens could possibly use other federal provisions to adjust those sentences up or down.

HOWEVER, IF FEIKENS decides to hear the motion to have the defendants sentenced under state law, the rules could change dramatically. According to court documents, defense attorneys indicated that the men would face no more than 12 months in jail, considering their backgrounds, under state sentencing guidelines.

Pending sentencing, Spinelle, Barth and Drouillard have been allowed to remain free on $10,000 unsecured bonds.

Spinelle, a Plymouth resident who told The Eccentric after his arrest that he made "a stupid mistake," resigned his teaching position after his arrest.

Man arrested in women's shop

By Diane Gale
staff writer

A 48-year-old Waterford man was arrested Wednesday after walking into a women's apparel shop and trying on dresses.

The man is scheduled to be arraigned Jan. 4 in 35th District Court on misdemeanor charges of indecent exposure and disorderly conduct.

SALES CLERKS from a Hadley Arden shop on Ford and Lilley roads told police that a man came into the store wearing a brown men's suit and asked if he could try on dresses.

The sales clerks said they were unsure why he wanted to try on the dresses, however, they directed him to a dressing room. Shortly after, he was wearing a dress and nylons and looked out of the room.

"He asked if anyone else was in the store," said Pat Nemecek, Canton police spokesman. The sales clerks assured him that there were no other customers.

He then asked to be directed to the tri-fold mirror in the outer part of the store, police said.

The man reportedly asked the woman to help him button the back of the dress. As they obliged, they noticed that he became sexually excited, police said.

The sales clerks reportedly said they remained calm and unbuttoned the dress so he could return to the dressing room.

MEANWHILE, THE sales clerks called Canton police. When the officers arrived they confronted the man in the dressing room. They found the man wearing nothing but sheer gray nylons and a condom.

The man told police that he was trying on dresses and pointed to two dresses hanging on a wall in the dressing room. He reportedly told police that he was wearing protection so as not to damage the clothes.

The Waterford man was arrested and booked for disorderly person and indecent conduct.

He was released from the Canton jail Thursday after the man's wife and children posted a $100 bond on his behalf, police said.

The misdemeanor charges carry up to 90 days in jail and or a $100 fine, court costs and a two year probation, said 35th District Court Judge James Garber.

Events add to holiday spirit

Kids can meet Santa or learn to make Christmas gifts

By Diane Gale
staff writer

If you're looking for something to do this Christmas season there's plenty to add to your list.

For the first time ever, the Canton Recreation Department is offering a one-day workshop for children five and older 10 a.m. to noon and 1-3 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 15.

PARENTS ARE invited to drop their children off at the Canton recreation center, on Michigan Avenue and Sheldon, according to Bob Dates, Canton recreation supervisor.

Teachers will show young artists how to make a minimum of three Christmas gifts. The recreation department will supply all the art materials. Children will be given refreshments and invited to help decorate Christmas cookies. The cost is $12 per child.

The recreation department also is inviting children to Christmas parties Saturday, Dec. 8 at the Recreation Center, on Michigan and Sheldon. The party for children ages three to seven is 9:30-10:30 p.m.

Another party, 10:45-11:45 a.m., is for all children ages 12 and younger.

Santa will greet the youngsters, cartoons will be shown and games played. The free parties also include prize give-aways and refreshments.

You must make a reservation by calling 397-5110.

The annual tree lighting ceremony will be 7 p.m. Monday, Dec. 10, at the Canton Administration Building, 1150 S. Canton Center Road. The Canton Seniors Kitchen Band, Centennial Education Park Madrigal singers, Pioneer Middle School eighth grade chorus and Hoben Elementary School choir will perform.

Santa will come to the reception, after the singing, in the administration building. Stuffed animals will be given away as drawing prizes.

AND ALL businesses in Canton are invited by the Canton Chamber of Commerce to erect white Christmas lights in a sign of unity among local businesses.

"The hope is it will bring people to Canton to look at it and shop and eat in Canton," said Joan Bolek, chamber director. "It adds a pleasing effect for the holidays."

And once again this year, the Canton Beautification Committee is selling luminaries, candles inside bags filled with sand, at the clerk's office in the administration building or by calling 459-4132.

Good tidings.

Compromise struck, gun bills OKed

By Tim Richard
staff writer

A package of bills to make Michigan's pistol laws uniform and punish violators more severely is awaiting Gov. James Blanchard's signature.

The bills would prohibit "street sweepers" — shotguns that can spray nine rounds of ammunition — and armor-piercing bullets.

But the state Senate last week eliminated a House-passed requirement that first-time gun buyers take a safety course.

"Mandatory training was the biggest obstacle as viewed by proponents of the pre-emption billl," said Rep. James Kosteva, D-Canton, a major player in the deal.

"THE SENATE stripped it out. We accepted a compromise that the State Police and a review board would develop a brochure and pamphlet. All pistol purchasers would take a test, akin to 'what every driver should know.' The objective is to see that some training takes place," Kosteva said.

Buyers would be given the answers they got wrong.

"I've never seen information that can relate the benefits of safety training," said Kosteva. But he said research does show the benefits of a personal background check and seven-day waiting period.

Detroit has a city ordinance — nullified if Blanchard signs the legislative bills — requiring a safety course for first-time pistol buyers. But Kosteva said there had been problems with the availability and high cost of Deroit's course. Michigan still requires a safety course for hunters under 16.

Sen. Chris Dingell, D-Trenton, sponsor of a similar bill passed last summer by the Senate, opposed mandatory training. "I have grave misgivings over requiring training and putting that tool in the hands of bureaucrats," Dingell said.

THE BIG ISSUE was House Bill 5436, stripping local governments of the power to establish their own pistol licensing ordinances. It will affect Detroit and East Lansing. It was a home rule issue as well as a gun issue.

"Some of our cities would like to take stronger measures with regard to the control of firearms," said Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington Hills, who voted no. "It may be that the Constitution has certain protections about what people have a right to bear, but the society also has a right to protect itself by imposing appropriate rules."

Although voting yes, Rep. Maxine Berman, D-Southfield, called it disgusting that the Senate Tuesday stayed in session eight hours beyond its normal noon adjournment time but couldn't take up other important matters.

The pre-emption bill was pushed by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs and the National Rifle Association. They threatened to file a lawsuit if mandatory training were included. They say such a requirement would violate the constitutional right to have firearms and was really intended to discourage people from buying guns.

The bill also sets up a computer system for gun stores to check the criminal record of potential purchasers before handing over the weapon.

HERE IS HOW Observer & Eccentric voted on HB 5437, the pre-emption measure:

Senate — passed 23-10. Yes votes were Doug Cruce, R-Troy, Richard Fessler, R-Commerce, Robert Geake, R-Northville, and Rudy Nichols, R-Waterford. Nays were Faxon and William Faust, D-Westland. An excused absence was given to George Z. Hart, D-Dearborn.

House — passed 73-7. Yes votes were Lyn Bankes, R-Livonia, Justine Barns, D-Westland, John Bennett, D-Redford, Berman, Jan Dolan, R-Farmington Hills, David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, William Keith, D-Garden City, Kosteva, Judy Miller, R-Birmingham, and Wilfred Webb, D-Hazel Park. Missing the vote were Mat Dunaskiss, R-Lake Orion, Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, and Gordon Sparks, R-Troy.

THE BILLS were tie-barred, meaning all must be passed and signed for any to take effect. Here are the roll calls on the others:

• HB 6009 — prohibits licensing of pistols to persons under 21 and those convicted of felonies in the previous eight years.

Passed Senate 31-2. All local senators voted yes except Hart, who was excused.

Passed House 71-16. Berman voted no. Bankes, Bennett, Dolan, Dunaskiss, Keith and Law did not vote. Others voted yes.

• HB 6010 — increases punishments for altering firearm markings. Prohibits sale of firearms and ammunition to known convicted felons and persons under indictment. Provides 10 year penalty for possession of a "street sweeper" during commission of a felony or during a drug sale. Prohibits wearing of body armor during commission of a felony. Requires safety check of newly purchased pistols.

Passed Senate 30-3. All area senators supported except Hart, who was absent.

Passed House 73-6. Supported by all except Keith and Law, who were absent.

• HB 5366 — prohibits manufacture of armor-piercing bullets. Critics said it also should have banned purchase and possession.

MEDICAL SCIENCE CAN DO ANYTHING
You would think that the ability to bring us antibotics and heart transplants should give medical science the capability to find the right medicine to treat your arthritis. However, a great many decisions facing doctors still depend on experience and intuition.
For example, take the question of choosing a drug to treat your arthritis, in most cases aspirin or an aspirin-like medication is the first choice because of the drug's safety, efficacy, and cost.
If aspirin fails, or cannot be used because of its side effects, what should the doctor choose next? No study exists to answer that question. No investigation to date is large enough to account for the variation in people individually, additional drugs the person is taking, or how the aging process is influencing the way the person is breaking down drugs.
The only way to know if another anti-arthritis drug will help or hurt is to try that medication. Such a change can be hazardous and has led me in my practice, to avoid beginning new medication if the patient is going to leave town or is scheduled for an operation within the following four weeks.

County budget showdown nears

A showdown on the Wayne County budget could come Tuesday — or not at all.

Commissioners have scheduled a special Tuesday afternoon meeting on the budget. At that time, they could either modify the budget or attempt to override county Executive Edward McNamara's expected veto.

Commisison and executive's staff members were meeting last week to smooth out differences over the $1.8 billion spending plan.

Key differences center on money the commission approved for the clerk's office as well as a portion of its own expenses.

Both the $500,000 increase approved for the clerk and the estimated $1 million increase approved for commission-related activities were called "phony money" by the executive. Commissioners, however, said the budget figures were sound.

THE COUNTY'S 1991 budget year began Dec. 1. Commissioners approved the budget Nov. 29, although McNamara had 10 days after receiving the budget to issue a veto.

A two-thirds vote of the 15-member commission is needed to override the executive's veto.

In other county news:

Commission chairman Arthur Blackwell said the newly formed airport review committee would review airport safety equipment and plans without specifically investigating Monday's crash between two Northwest jetliners.

"We in no way want to be cross examining and second-guessing," Blackwell said.

In announcing the committee's formation, Blackwell had referred to an "appearance of unclear authority" at metro in the moments following the crash, but the commission leader had nothing but kind words for county rescue teams at Thursday's commission meeting, "applauding" their service.

Still, Blackwell said, review of the county's emergency preparedness plan was necessary.

Retiring commissioner calls for change

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Milton Mack never had the chance to stand behind the Wayne County Commission chairman's podium during his eight years on the commission, but he did so Thursday at his last commission meeting.

While he had kind words for his fellow commissioners, Mack, D-Wayne, didn't pass up the chance to use the podium as a bully pulpit — arguing for cnanges in the way commission leaders are chosen.

Mack, who spent the balance of his term as part of a so-called suburban "outhouse caucus," argued for a leadership system based on tenure, not what he termed "spoils."

"OUR METHOD of assigning committee seats and chairs every two years has consistently divided the commission," Mack said.

Mack, whose district includes Canton, is leaving the commission to become a Wayne County Probate judge. His last official day as a commissioner is today.

As of Thursday, it hadn't been decided who would fill the balance of Mack's current term, which expires Dec. 31, or whether commissioners would appoint anyone to the seat. A special election is expected sometime next year to fill the new two-year terra Mack won in November.

Though he oversaw drafting of the county's solid waste master plan and headed the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments, Mack only spent two years as a committee chairman, losing his role as public services committee chairman in one of the commission's annual shake-ups.

Changing leaders that quickly, Mack said, divides commissioners against the chairman and weakens the commission overall.

Commission Chairman Arthur Blackwell, D-Detroit, said he would give "serious consideration" to Mack's proposal.

Mack, an early supporter of the county charter, said the document helped turn county government around.

While he praised creation of a county executive, Mack also praised his fellow commissioners — despite frequent commission infighting.

"There is no need for us to agree on the issues, only that there be mutual respect for each other's positions," he said.

Nonedible goodies deck halls

'Tis the season for just about every kind of food.

Momma has started the semi-weekly brushing of her famed holiday fruitcakes with a clean cotton dish towel dipped in rum.

MaryLea, my twin sister, has had to remake her holiday cookies three times because the tin mysteriously ends up half empty during a midweek checking.

The gingerbread that filled the kitchen with holiday smells has been cut and is now "drying" for use in the Janes gang annual gingerbread house.

THE HOLIDAYS around my house always have the refrigerator, cupboards and cookie jars brimming with waist-expanding goodies.

But isn't it nice to know that there are recipes for non-edible holiday goodies?

These traditional recipes have the ability to transform plain flour, water and salt into a plethora of ornaments, table decorations and culinary gifts.

DID YOU ever make snowflake clay when you were a kid? It shimmers and shines and easily transforms basic kitchen cupboard ingredients into holiday treasures that will last for years.

Last year, the Janes gang got together to make non-edible holiday gifts, and ended up with a mini zoo full of dinosaurs, merry Santas and wreaths that will again find their way to the family tree after being safely packed away with the other ornaments.

We even have a door wreath bedecked in green flowers that unfortunately never made the ornament box because it fell and broke into smithereens while exiting with the Christmas tree.

Were we crushed? Hardly. We just spent the last 11 months occasionally dreaming on how to make this year's even more beautiful.

IF YOU'RE thinking that this process involves the purchase of $16 worth of colored play-dough, think again.

Many "Taste Buds" readers remember when yours truly owned and operated a gourmet shop in beautiful downtown Plymouth.

Loretta Mirro, home economist and now president of Intro-Marketing in Birmingham, would wow class members during the holidays with her non-edible holiday decor creations using simple flour, cornstarch and salt.

IT WASN'T until a trek to the archived file cabinet in the basement that I once again discovered these treasured recipes that will surely bring a smile to avid foodies who enjoy "playing" in the kitchen.

And that's exactly what these recipes are for — playing.

After the measuring, there is little to do except spend an afternoon or evening creating holiday treasures that will keep even a 4-year-old busy for at least a couple of hours.

AND, THE best part about it, you're left with lasting creations and cutesy gifts that have that look, touch and feel of something made from the heart as well as the hands.

A simple prink of a fork tine and your creation can be an ornament.

Add a paper clip or ornament hanger or just a swatch of red ribbon and watch the smiles emerge. The recipient will hardly be able to wait to hang it on a Christmas tree.

So, if you find yourself with just a little holiday baking flour left over and want to enthrall the likes of any participant from 8 to 80, simply follow the directions and behold!

BAKERS CLAY

4 cups sifted flour
1 cup salt
1¾ cups water

Combine flour and salt together, add water until a soft dough forms. Shape the dough into free-form shapes and place gently on kitchen parchment-lined baking sheets. Bake at 225 degrees for 1½-2 hours or until firm and dry. Creations can then be painted with food coloring, if desired.

DOUGLAS SUSALLA

A twist on tradition

Variations of Hanukkah latkes

By Anne R. Lehmann
special writer

ABOUT 50 men and women recently assembled at Kitchen Glamor in West Bloomfield to learn new ways of making an old traditional favorite — Hanukkah latkes.

The teacher, Elwin Greenwald, former chef at Van Dyke Place and currently chef-proprietor of Elwins Tu-Go, is a back-to-basics guy who believes that there are as many recipes for latkes as there are people you ask. "Tradition with a twist" is how this 32-year-old describes the recipes he has devised to help celebrate the Jewish holiday.

Hanukkah commemorates the victory of a small band of Jews over its religious oppressors. Wanting to rededicate the Holy Temple which had become the site for pagan rituals and cultic rites by its enemies, the group needed untainted oil to light the Temple's Menorah (a holy candelabra). A single untouched jar of oil was found, enough to last a day, but miraculously the Menorah remained aglow for eight days, the time needed to properly prepare more pure oil to keep the Menorah kindled. It is for this reason that foods fried in oil are a mainstay during this eight-day holiday.

THE KEY TO a latke with "Yiddishe Taam" (good Jewish taste), according to Greenwald, is method. "You can use virtually any combination of ingredients if you use proper cooking technique," he says.

Greenwald became interested in the fine art of cooking 10 years ago while working as the advertising director for Meyers Jewelry. Jimmy Schmidt suggested Greenwald train with Madelaine Kamman in France, which he did for a year, and returned to Detroit to work at Van Dyke Place as executive chef. Four months ago he opened the doors to Elwins Tu-Go, a casual walk-in eatery in Royal Oak which seconds as a catering business. Now that he has his own place, this upbeat, high-energy and friendly chef is always experimenting and developing new food sensations.

Potato, matzo meal and egg are basic to his latke recipes, which include potato-turnip, mushroom leek and carrot-corn, and offer a variety of colors, textures and tastes. For example, his carrot corn, or what he calls his Tex-Mex, latkes are great for a mixed crowd with Christmas-minded individuals, who will appreciate the red and green peppers coloring the latkes.

He prefers to leave all vegetables unpeeled. "Besides peeling away the vitamins," he says, "you eliminate color and texture." A good scrubbing with a soft brush is more than adequate to remove dirt and debris.

Greenwald favors hand grating his vegetables for the sake of uniformity. "When you hand grate, you have 150 percent control," he says. Whether a hash-brown or pudding-like latke is what you're after, the bottom line is in the coarseness of the grating.

STILL, GREENWALD acknowledges the virtues of a food processor when cooking for a large crowd, something he, as caterer, does often. He recommends using the pulse function, again in order to produce grated vegetables which are identical in size.

As for preparing latkes for a large crowd, Greenwald has several recommendations, including grating the potato and the onion last. By grating the potato close to frying time, discoloration is kept to a minimum and by grating the onion at the end, the vegetable's high liquid content serves as a wash between batches.

After frying and draining these savory morsels, Greenwald suggests layering them in baking pans lined with paper toweling and keeping them heated at 225 degrees for up to two hours.

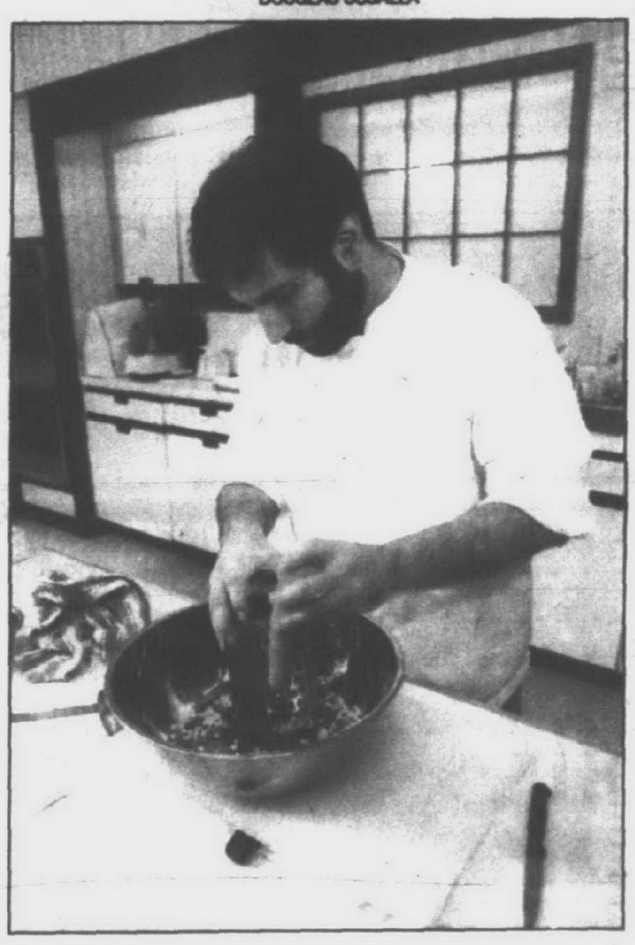

"When I fry my latkes," he explains, "I sear them in hot oil, peanut oil preferably, on both sides, drain them on toweling and then put them on lined baking pans."

In this way they are partially cooked, crispy outside, and the remaining cooking time is spent in the oven. When dinner is served you have hot, well-cooked crispy latkes."

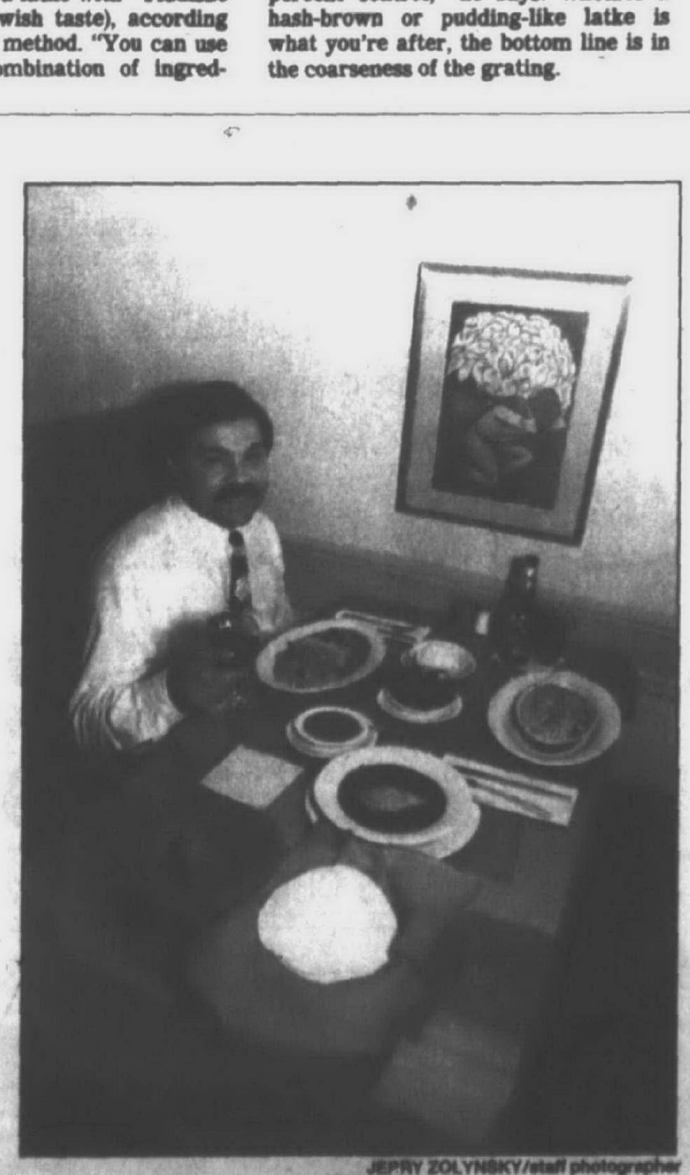

WITH THE GUESTS arriving and the smell of warming latkes in the oven, what does one serve besides the usual applesauce or sour cream on the side? How about a Sour Cream Chive or Horseradish Mustard Topping? And if latkes as a main or side dish aren't what you had in mind, what about latkes for dessert? Cherry Walnut, Spiced Sweet Potato Raisin or Ricotta Orange Latkes, with side dipping sauces of Grand Marnier Applesauce or Cranberry and Pineapple, are a few more of Greenwald's creations.

The possibilities are endless. All you need is imagination, a grater and, of course, a good appetite.

Joe Martinez of Trini & Carmen's with Mexican dishes including Chili Rellenos, Fiesta Sampler and Mexican Lasagna.

DISHING IT OUT By K.C.

Thirteen years ago, Trini & Carmen's cantina in Pontiac was hit with the restauurant equivalent of a neutron bomb: as the result of a faulty canning process, its famous home-produced hot sauce gave a few of its customers — oh, say, 59 — a dose of botulism.

That upsetting run of bad luck might have closed a normal restaurant forever. Not Trini & Carmen's. Thanks to an immmensely loyal following, Trini & Carmen's closed for a few days and then picked up where it had left off, as a landmark on Woodward Avenue. The restaurant changed its name to La Familia Martinez, but to its many, many fans that harmless coverup was unneeded. The restaurant was always known as Trini & Carmen's.

The original Pontiac bar has been lost to progress, wiped out by the expansion of the adjacent St. Joseph's Hospital, forcing the Martinez family to move south to a new home in Clawson.

Unfortunately, it appears that a little more loyalty is going to be required from the Trini & Carmen's faithful, which includes us. On several recent visits, the Clawson reincarnation of Trini & Carmen's has been uneven.

THE NACHOS are still outstanding, but we found other entrees borderline — and even burned. The chicken enchiladas that we remember as stuffed with chicken and topped with plenty of melted cheese must have been microwaved — and a bit too long at that. The cheese was singed, ruining a sad entree.

We can't say much more for the flautas, which were too crusty, had too little beef (especially when we had ordered chicken) and were blandly seasoned.

The enchiritos, on the other hand, were at least interesting. This entree features chorizo and beans baked in a tortilla and topped with cheese and black olives. The taste was strong — and a little strange, almost chocolatey. Still, with fewer beans and more sausage, we would give it another try.

The menu isn't extensive. It never has been. And it's the same for lunch as for dinner. A few specials are added weekly. We loved the black bean soup featured recently. The seasoning was about medium strength and cooled a bit with a dollop of guacamole.

Freshly ground black pepper
Oil for frying

Grate the potato and carrot, using the largest holes of the grater. Transfer grated mixture to the colander and press out the excess moisture. Transfer to the mixing bowl and combine with the corn and diced peppers. Add the beaten eggs to the vegetable mixture with the wooden spoon. Add just enough bread crumbs or matzo meal until a light batter is formed. Add salt and pepper to taste. Heat ¼ inch of the oil in the saute pan until very hot. Drop the batter by tablespoonsful into the hot oil to fry. Flatten with metal spatula and fry until down side is golden. Gently turn over and continue cooking until second side is golden. Remove each latke from the pan when it is cooked and keep warm on the towel-lined tray in a 200-degree oven while preparing the remaining latkes. Serve as soon as possible with either savory topping. Makes approximately 8 servings.

MUSHROOM-LEEK LATKES
2 pounds assorted wild mushrooms, roughly chopped
1 medium bunch leeks, thinly sliced and well washed
1 medium Idaho potato, peeled
4 eggs, lightly beaten
¼ to ⅓ cup fine bread crumbs or matzo meal
2 tablespoons kosher salt
Fresh ground black pepper
Oil for frying

Grate the potato, using the largest holes of the grater. Transfer grated potato to the colander and press out the excess moisture. Transfer to the mixing bowl and combine with the mushrooms and leeks. Add the beaten eggs to the vegetable mixture with the wooden spoon. Add just enough bread crumbs or matzo meal until a light batter is formed. Add salt and pepper to taste. Heat ¼ inch of the oil in the saute pan until very hot. Drop the batter by tablespoonsful into the hot oil to fry. Flatten with metal spatula and fry until down side is golden. Gently turn over and continue cooking until second side is golden. Remove each latke from the pan when it is cooked and keep warm on the towel-lined tray in a 200-degree oven while preparing the remaining latkes. Serve as soon as possible with either savory topping. Makes 8 servings.

SPICED SWEET POTATO-RAISIN LATKES
1 cup cooked, mashed and sweetened sweet potatoes
¼ cup raisins (mix of light and dark)
⅓ cup peeled, cored and diced apple
¼ cup milk
3 eggs, separated (yolks beaten to a pale yellow)
1 teaspoon grated nutmeg
1 teaspoon ground ginger
¼ to ⅓ cup fine bread crumbs or matzo meal
Pinch of salt
Oil for frying

In a large mixing bowl, combine the sweet potatoes, raisins, apple, milk, beaten egg yolks, nutmeg, ginger and bread crumbs or matzo meal until just combined. Beat the whites in another bowl with a pinch of salt until stiff but not overbeaten.

With rubber spatula, gently fold ¼ of the whites to the yolk base. Fold in the remainder carefully, not to overmix. Heat ¼ inch of the oil in the saute pan until very hot. Drop the batter by tablespoonsful into the hot oil to fry. Flatten with metal spatula and fry until down side is golden. Gently turn over and continue cooking until second side is golden. Remove each latke from the pan when it is cooked and keep warm on the towel-lined tray in a 200-degree oven while preparing the remaining latkes. Serve as soon as possible with either sweet topping. Makes approximately 8 servings.

No match for original restaurant

Baby back ribs also offered that evening were very good, and very meaty. In contrast to what we expected, the barbecue sauce served on the side was sweet and mild. This entree should have been served with rice — or anything other than the tasteless fries that were suspiciously like the kind we buy in the freezer section.

BUT BACK TO the nachos. They are great, especially with margaritas. Because they come in three sizes (micro to super) and five varieties (cheese, chicken, beef, beans and chicken, or beans and beef), there's enough here for any occasion and appetite.

This is a warm friendly place, like it always was. The service is good and the decor is interesting. Its warm Southwest theme is carried out with striking fabric-and-copper-trimmed light fixtures and a terrific array of Mexican baskets, framed posters and colorful ceramics.

We just hope the brothers Martinez can bring this restaurant back up to the quality of the restaurant founded by their parents. While some entrees are good, the quality just isn't consistent.

Trini and Carmen probably burned entrees now and then — but they didn't serve them.

Details: Trini & Carmen's, 1019 W. Maple east of Crooks Road, Clawson. 280-2626., Also at 50 N. Territorial in Ann Arbor and 1715 N. Telegraph in Pontiac.

Hours: Monday-Friday 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Saturday noon to midnight. Sunday 1-10 p.m. Reservations accepted for parties of eight or more. Carryout available.

Prices: $3.75 for micro nacho to $13.95 for a rib dinner. All major credit cards.

Value: Sporadic quality, reasonable prices.

Chicken dish is perfect for the Christmas rush family-tested winner dinner

Betsy Brethen

I must admit, there are moments during this busy month when the expression, "Bah, Humbug," comes babbling out of my mouth without warning. When that occurs, I mentally rein myself in and try to take a more positive tack by substituting "Better Hurry, Better Hurry" in lieu of Scrooge's infamous expression. Besides, "Better Hurry" is precisely how I feel every day in December, as there is always so much to do and never enough time in which to do it all.

If you can relate to the above, then this week's Winner Dinner will surely make your day, since it is easy to prepare and is a perfect choice for dinner on those nights when you have been out hurrying and scurrying around town. Submitted by Jan Schlaybaugh of Birmingham, these recipes for hearty-tasting Chicken and Dumplings and Gooey Pears are guaranteed to become instant family favorites.

Schlaybaugh has lived in Birmingham with her husband and daughter for five years. A member of the Cranbrook Kingswood Middle School Mothers' Council, she also regularly volunteers her time at the school library. She is an avid reader and enjoys taking riding lessons with her daughter. Nicknamed by her husband the "Queen of the One Course Meal," Schlaybaugh readily admits that she likes to get in and out of the kitchen as quickly as possible. She's surely not alone in that!

THANK YOU, Jan Schlaybaugh, for sharing your delicious recipes with us and congratulations on being this week's Winner Dinner Queen of the Week.

As the days of December continue to click by, hang in there and remember . . . better hurry, better hurry, and please, keep those Winner Dinners coming in!

Recipes are printed the same size so that you may clip and save them in a three-ring binder. Use a paper punch to make holes in the clipping or paste the clipping on a blank sheet of three-ring notebook paper. Another option is to simply file the clippings in a folder with pockets that will hold them.

Recipes

EASY CHICKEN AND DUMPLINGS

This recipe for chicken is as delicious as it is easy to prepare.

4 whole split chicken breasts
2 cans Campbells' reduced-salt cream of chicken soup
1 tube buttermilk biscuits

Place breasts in a prepared casserole or baking dish and completely cover them with the two cans of undiluted soup. Cover the dish and bake for 1 hour at 350 degrees. Remove and turn oven up to 425 degrees. Dip both sides of the biscuits in the gravy and lay them on top of the chicken breasts. Return the uncovered casserole dish to the oven and bake for 15 minutes more. Serve with cranberry sauce and your choice of green vegetable.

TOSSED GREEN SALAD

Chop up some romaine lettuce and carrots. Toss lightly with a dressing made of olive oil and freshly squeezed lemon juice. Garnish with Parmesan cheese.

GOOEY PEARS

It is hard to believe that such a simple recipe can yield such a delicious dessert. Trust me, this is one recipe you must try.

4 large, ripe pears — peeled, cored and cut in half
Lemon juice
Brown sugar
1 cup heavy cream, warmed

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Rub the pears with lemon juice and place in a shallow dish. Put one heaping spoonful of brown sugar in each pear half. Bake for 20-25 minutes. Pour the cream in the bottom of the dish and let the pears sit in the turned off oven for 20 minutes. Put the pears in serving bowls and spoon sauce over each pear. Enjoy.

Champagnes have own styles focus on wine

Eleanor and Ray Heald

There are so many excellent champagnes that it is impossible to say one is better than another.

However, champagnes can be distinguished by their style and personality. Champagne Veuve Cliquot and Champagne Roederer are two houses with easily recognizable styles.

Veuve (widow in French) Clicquot was the first woman to rise to power in Champagne and is often regarded as the first businesswoman of the modern era.

Widowed at 28, Nicole-Barbe Ponsardin-Cliquot was determined to carry out her husband's champagne business plans.

THOUGH INEXPERIENCED in commercial affairs, and in an age (early 19th century) when commerce was considered socially improper for women, the young widow was undaunted in her efforts to capture foreign markets.

Veuve Clicquot was an early master of marketing slogans. With her motto, "One quality only . . . the finest," she sent her sales agents worldwide.

In 1814, a secret shipment of her champagne to Russia was her greatest coup. She triumphed where others did not dream to venture.

UNTIL MADAME Clicquot's time, champagne was a cloudy wine with dead yeast sediment. No one dared drink the last drop.

Convinced that a crystal clear product would enhance champagne's reputation, she concentrated with the help of her cellarmaster on achieving this.

Together they developed the process known as remuage or riddling.

According to legend, bottles were positioned with the necks lodged in holes cut in the widow's wooden kitchen table. By shaking and rotating each bottle daily, she forced the unwanted deposit into the neck, settled against the cork.

Today, riddling is an essential part of champagne production.

WHILE CHAMPAGNE toasts have long been used to celebrate special events and good health, several superstitions have also become associated with champagne.

Afraid the devil would enter their bodies with the wine, and believing the noise would scare him away, superstitious people clinked glasses.

Today, French lovers often intertwine forearms while sipping champagne after a toast.

IN 1776, the same year the United States declared its independence, a small champagne producer began the company that became known as "the house of Cristal."

In 1833, Louis Roederer, an Alsatian by birth, inherited the company, gave it his name, and began to develop the reputation of Louis Roederer Champagne, which now boasts 214 years of continuous family ownership.

By 1876, annual production reached 1.5 million bottles, 80 percent of which was sold to the Russian market, and Cristal, the first prestige cuvee, was created for the court of Czar Alexander II.

ROEDERER CHAMPAGNE became such a favorite of the czar that he asked Roederer to reserve the best of each harvest to produce a special wine for him.

The czar's court cellarmaster visited Roederer annually to approve the selection. Alexander II also requested that Roederer design a special bottle for his exclusive use.

He desired two things from the select bottle.

First, he wanted it to be recognizably one of a kind, even when it was wrapped with a table napkin, and second, it was to be a stylish addition to his dining table. The result was Cristal.

WINE SELECTION OF THE WEEK

Veuve Clicquot Brut ($35) is distinguished by its full, toasty aromas and palate depth with generous mouthfeel. It's crisp and elegantly styled.

Louis Roederer Champagne Brut Premier ($35) is a traditional blend of ⅗ pinot noir and ⅖ chardonnay that highlights finesseful aromas and full, rich, toasty flavors. The emphasis on black-skinned grapes puts Roederer champagnes near the full-bodied end of the champagne spectrum.

BAKER'S CLAY

4 cups sifted flour
1 cup salt
1¾ cups water

Combine flour and salt together, add water 'til a soft dough forms. Shape the dough into free-form shapes and place gently on kitchen-parchment lined baking sheets. Bake at 225 degrees for 1½-2 hours or until firm and dry. Creations can then be painted with food coloring, if desired.

SNOWFLAKE CLAY

1 cup salt
⅓ cup cornstarch
⅓ cup plus 2 teaspoons water

Mix cornstarch and salt together. Bring water to a boil and slowly add to mix stirring until mixture begins forming a ball. Keep in air-tight containers until ready to roll out. Roll out small batches of the dough at a time and use small cookie cutters to make star shapes or other creations. Bake at 250 degrees for 15 minutes to dry.

Curry accents exotic spices

AP — In Indian cookery, individual use of exotic spices varies from cook to cook, and the differences are often subtle and quite personal.

The following recipe for Vegetarian Curry with Indian Spices uses a mixture of spices that are first cooked in a little oil to release and blend their flavors. Fresh or frozen vegetables are then added and coated well with the spices before they are cooked.

For a hearty entree, add chick peas and serve with steamed rice. Top with a dollop of plain yogurt.

VEGETARIAN CURRY WITH INDIAN SPICES

1 teaspoon ground coriander
1 teaspoon ground cumin
1 teaspoon turmeric
¼ teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
Pinch ground red pepper
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
12 ounces fresh green beans, trimmed and cut in 1-inch lengths (about 2 ½ cups)
12 ounces potatoes, peeled and cut in 1-inch cubes (about 2 cups)
1 cup carrot slices, cut ¼-inch thick
1 cup cauliflowerettes
2 cups water

1 teaspoon salt
One 19-ounce-can chick peas, drained and rinsed

In a cup combine coriander, cumin, turmeric, cinnamon, ginger, black pepper and red pepper. In a large skillet heat oil until hot. Add spice mixture; cook until spices are fragrant, about 1 minute.

Add green beans, potatoes, carrots and cauliflowerettes; mix well. Add water and salt. Bring mixture to a boil; reduce heat and simmer, covered, for 15 minutes. Add chick peas. Simmer, uncovered, over high heat until vegetables are tender and liquid is reduced by half, about 5 minutes. Serve with rice and plain yogurt, if desired. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

Note: You can replace fresh vegetables with two 16-ounce packages of frozen mixed vegetables cut in large chunks; reduce cooking time to 7 minutes.

How do you celebrate that ounce for ounce Philly has ½ the calories of butter or margarine?

With a toast of course.

Butter your bread with Philly instead.

Team approach works for Salem

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

basketball

Plymouth Salem looked like a team in mid-season form while Southfield looked like a team playing its first basketball game Friday night.

The unbeaten Rocks got key contributions from an assortment of players and gave an impressive demonstration of their power by downing visiting Southfield 69-55.

Salem is 2-0, the Blue Jays 0-1.

Jake Baker was the focus of Southfield's defense early, but Mike Mulder and John Hoffmeyer also had big games for the Rocks, taking some pressure off Baker and enabling Salem to establish a first-half lead.

"It's good to see a lot of different people contribute in a lot of different ways," Salem coach Bob Brodie said. "(Six-foot-5 Cliff) Lee and (6-4) Hoffmeyer did the job on the boards, (guard Chris) Tebben ran the floor and delivered passes on time, Mulder shot the ball well and (6-5 freshman James) Head came off the bench and got some defensive rebounds."

Baker finished with a game-high 21 points after struggling early. Hoffmeyer picked up the slack inside in the first quarter and finished with 14 points. Mulder scored his 13 points in the first half, shooting 4-of-4 from-three-point range.

"MIKE MULDER was the key to starting us off," said Baker, who has signed with Central Michigan. "They were keying on me and I wasn't producing. Mike stepped up and ignited us. They knew I wasn't the only one on our team then.

"I think Hoffmeyer is underrated," he added. "If he gets the ball underneath, he scores almost every time."

Southfield was the victim of cold shooting — compared to what Salem was doing — and was trying to work out the bugs, according to coach Harry Vanden Brink, against a quality opponent.

Through three quarters, after which Salem had a 62-36 lead, the Rocks shot 49 percent (21-43) and the Blue Jays 30 percent (14-46). Salem was 23-of-53 overall, Southfield 22-of-62.

'They were keying on me and I wasn't producing. Mike (Mulder) stepped up and ignited us. They knew I wasn't the only one on our team then.'

— Jake Baker
Salem basketball player

"First-game inconsistencies showed up in the first half," Vanden Brink said. "We went into the season not knowing how good we were or what we had to work on. We know now.

"We have to work on shooting and defense. I don't think we've given up 44 points in one half in three years. In most of our games last year, we held teams to 44 points, so that's unusual and unacceptable when you pride yourselves on defense."

HOFFMEYER SCORED eight first-quarter points as Salem took a 20-12 lead. With the Rocks leading 23-18, they outscored Southfield 21-6 to build a 44-24 halftime lead.

Mulder made three second-quarter triples, and Baker, who had 12 points by halftime, converted a four-point play late in the half.

"I feel more confident (shooting the ball) than last year, because I'm going to get more opportunities," Mulder said. "With the guys we've got inside, I feel I can go ahead and shoot because they're going to rebound."

Southfield's Marvin Reynolds had nine of his team-high 11 points in the first half. Tajuan Pickett and Terry Lowe finished with eight apiece and Hasani Gardner seven.

The Blue Jays were 4-of-13 from the floor in the second quarter and 10-of-30 for the half. Salem was 7-of-10 and 14-of-28, respectively.

"WE HAVE TO work on defense and force people to take shots they don't want to take," Vanden Brink said, "and we let them do what they wanted around the basket."

Salem maintained its first-half pace in the third quarter. The Rocks were able to circumvent Southfield's attempt to press, and Baker scored another eight points (including his second triple) before sitting out the entire fourth quarter. The Blue Jays scored the last 10 points of the game to lessen a 69-45 difference.

"Jake is going to have a lot of work to do this year," Brodie said. "People will be gunning for him and putting a body on him. But he'll still get his points. He won't always have spectacular nights, but he'll contribute in other ways besides points."

The Rocks accomplished the victory with one of their best players on the bench. K.C. Kirkpatrick, a 6-5 senior, sat out his second straight game with a pulled hamstring, but he should be ready to play this week.

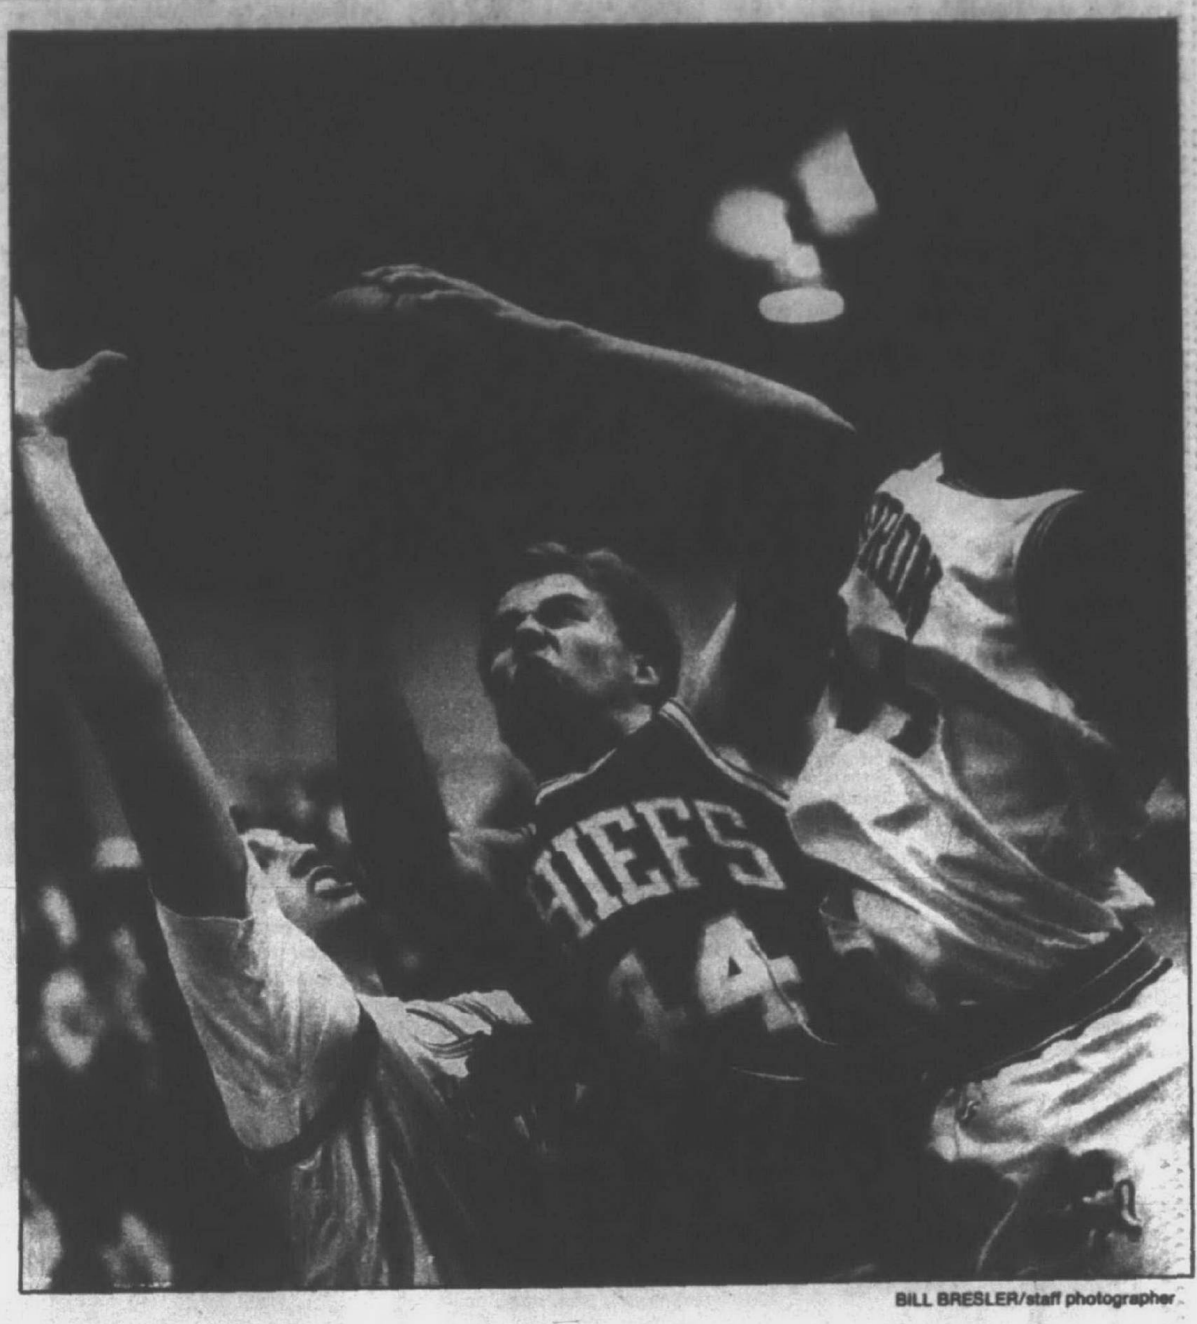

Still, the Rocks were a force inside with Hoffmeyer, Lee and Head complementing Baker, who was 7-of-15 from the floor and had seven rebounds. Hoffmeyer, who replaced Kirkpatrick in the starting lineup, also had seven rebounds and Head six. Tebben and Lee had four assists each.

"The players who were playing are stepping forward and getting valuable time," Brodie said. "Sometimes players reach down that much deeper when a player is not in the lineup.

THE FAST START was a key, according to Brodie, who agreed with Vanden Brink in regards to the difference in field-goal shooting.

"We came out of the blocks quickly and that's important for this basketball team, because teams will be gunning for them," Brodie said.

The Rocks were able to go inside and use their height effectively, but "more importantly was the defense," Brodie said. "They wanted to penetrate with the basketball and we forced them to shoot out of their range. And the other objective was to only give them one of those shots."

Kevin Holmes does a power move between Huron players Corey Maurer (left) and Demond Brown (44) in the non-league game Friday. Holmes scored 11 points in the 56-43 loss.

Eagles coast in opener

basketball

Three players scored in double figures Friday as Plymouth Christian made its 1990-91 boys basketball debut with a 67-51 victory over Taylor Light and Life at Lowell Middle School.

Senior guard Manish Nandani scored a game-high 16 points, junior forward Jeff Hess 15 and senior forward Keith McCants 12 to lead the Eagles.

McCants also led all rebounders with 12. Senior guard Brian Woodward paced Light and Life with 15 points.

HURON 56, CANTON 43: Ann Arbor Huron broke open a close game with a 22-14, fourth-quarter edge to beat visiting Plymouth Canton 56-43 in boys basketball Friday.

Canton dropped to 1-1 on the season, while Ann Arbor Huron improved to 2-0.

Canton shot 29 percent from the field for the game and was stifled by Huron's full-court, diamond press in the fourth quarter.

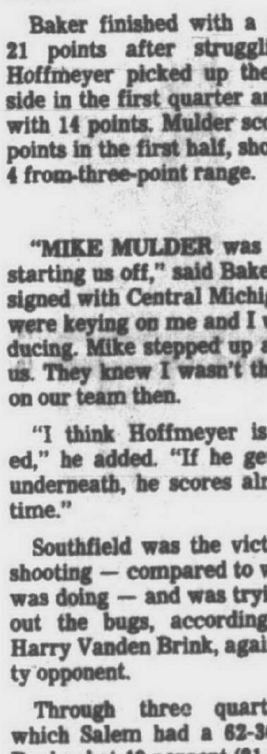

"We did not execute the offense," Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner said. "We did not get it into our big people enough.

"We took too many forced shots, and we missed a too many second and third shots. The diamond press made it a critical game. It opened it up to a 10-point difference."

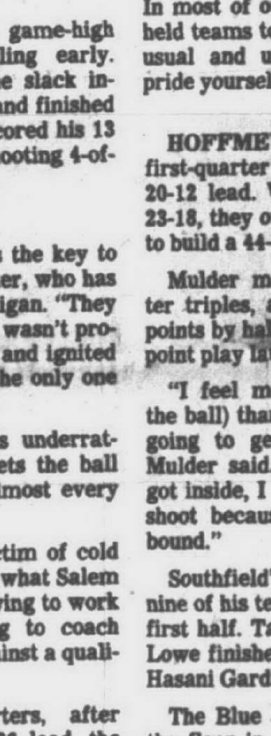

Canton was led by Mike Stafford and Kevin Holmes with 11 points apiece. Huron got 13 points from Eric Cullver and Curtis Howard.

"We also broke down defensively," Van Wagoner said. "Our defensive rebounding was horrendous."

Fred Thomann
Coach of Year

By Brad Emons and Dan O'Meara
staff writers

FRED THOMANN was an imposing figure at 6 feet, 8 inches when he served as captain of Michigan State's basketball squad during the mid-1960s.

And his Plymouth Salem girls basketball teams are no different, particularly during the past fall as the Rocks advanced all the way to the state Class A semifinals before losing to eventual champion Detroit King.

Salem finished the year with a 22-4 overall record, winning the 12-school Western Lakes Activities Association championship, along with district and regional crowns.

Thomann now has an overall record of 162-35 with the Salem girls.

Because of his efforts, coupled with the success of the Salem squad, Thomann was named Coach of the Year by the Observer sports staff.

This year's All-Area squad has a little bit of everything: prolific scorers and team-oriented players who were very instrumental in their team's success.

North Farmington's Eve Claar and Livonia Franklin's Dawn Warner both repeat as first-team performers.

Introducing the 1990 All-Area Girls Basketball Team:

FIRST TEAM PICKS

Eve Claar, senior, N. Farmington: The area's leading scorer at 25 points per game, Claar also averaged eight rebounds and three steals.

The 5-foot-6 senior guard also shot 42 percent from three-point range and was responsible for 70 percent of the Raiders' points. She may be best remembered for scoring 32 of her team's 37 points in an upset victory over Plymouth Salem.

Bound for Central Michigan University, Claar holds the North career scoring mark with 1,262 points.

"Whenever we needed a basket or three-point shot, we could get one from Eve," North coach Lance Davis said. "And I don't think I'll ever have that luxury again."

"She's a very good shooter — I would think the best in the state — off the dribble or pick.

"She's an outstanding student-athlete (3.5 GPA). Very quiet and nice off the court. Gutty and hard-hosed at times on the court. She's very intense."

Dawn Warner, junior, Franklin: The 5-7 junior, a three-year varsity standout at guard, led the 19-4 Patriots in seven categories including points per game (18.9), rebounds per game (8.5), steals, blocked shots, field goal percentage (37.7), free throw percentage (80.7) and three-pointers (38).

Warner scored a team-high 454 points during 1990 to raise her career total to 1,216.

"Her biggest trait is her rebounding, number one as a guard, and the other thing is that she is unselfish, she passes well," Franklin coach Dan Freeman said. "She's also the kind of player who brings her game up a level when she's playing tough competition. When it's crunch time, she wants that pressure."

Warner also holds the school single-game scoring record with 40 points.

Carrie Walton, senior, Mercy: Walton was a unanimous choice as Mercy's most valuable player. Playing small forward, she averaged 11 points, five rebounds, 2½ assists and 4½ steals per game.

Walton scored in double figures in 14 of the first 18 games. She had severe case of tonsilitis during the tournament, which sapped her strength, according to coach Larry Baker.

Walton also set a single-season school record, formerly held by Jenny Clinton, with 102 steals.

"It was a standing joke in practice you were a fool if you tried to pass over Carrie," Baker said. "She has long, long arms and good hands. If she stole 4.4 passes per game, she touched another 4.4 and someone else got the steal.

"Since her sophomore year, she's been a good defensive player, but this year she became an offensive force, too."

Sarah Ruete, senior, Salem: Ruete was the leading scorer on a well-rounded team, helping Salem win the Western Lakes Activities Association title for the fourth time in six years. The Rocks also got to the quarterfinals of the state tournament for the third time in five years.

The 5-foot-7 Ruete was a three-year starter, averaging 13 points, 5½ rebounds, more than two assists and 3½ steals this year.

"Her strength is her ability to put points on the board," coach Fred Thomann said, "and the rest of her game was solid.

"She had range, she could shoot the three, she could drive to the basket and she was a pretty good rebounder when she went. She also made a lot of clutch free throws during the year."

Kyra Woodard, senior, Borgess: The 5-6 senior averaged 23.9 points per game for the Spartans.

She was voted first-team All-State (Class B) by the Michigan High School Basketball Coaches Association. Woodard was also a unanimous choice in the AA Division of the Catholic League.

Woodard scored a career-high 40 points against Saline.

"I wish more people knew about her," Borgess coach Dave Mann said. "I will not live long enough to coach somebody as physically gifted as she is.

"If she gets her work habits up to her ability in college, she'll be an exceptional player."

Woodard, who possesses good ballhandling and passing skills, has signed with Duquesne (Pa.) University, a Division I school.

Carolyn Shanks, senior, Garden City: A three-year starter, the 5-5 point-guard averaged 12.9 points per game while averaging only 14 shots per contest.

She led the Northwest Suburban League champs and 19-2 Cougars in steals (5.9) and assists per game (4.9). The senior holds career and season marks in both categories.

Shanks also set the GC record for free

Bowlers must find right angle

10-pin alley

Al Harrison

All coaches and instructors agree on this point: the greater the angle of entry at the target, the less deflection of the ball when it hits.

BOWLING SOURCES SEEM to agree, the most effective way to throw strikes is to toss the ball in such a manner that it will hit the pocket at an angle. The greater the angle, the more likely it is you're going to roll a strike.

All coaches and instructors agree on this point: the greater the angle of entry at the target, the less deflection of the ball when it hits.

In addition to everything else, bowling is pretty much a game of angles. Even when throwing at certain spares, the proper angle can make the difference between making or missing a shot.

I am amazed at how many good bowlers still shoot spares without considering the most advantageous angle to the target. An example of this is the 3-10 baby split, where the ball should deflect off the three-pin and take out the 10. Your chances of making this split are much better if you shoot across the alley with as much angle as possible.

SPARE-SHOOTING at the corner pins also requires good cross-lane skills since the target area is actually smaller because of the channel. The proper angle increases your chances of hitting the corner pins.

Another common problem is the chopped or cherry picker on a combination spare. You can actually cut down your chances of making the spare by using the wrong angle.

The pins appear to be very one-dimensional when viewed from the foul line. Actually, each row of pins is one foot back of each row, leaving a lot of room to pick the cherry or leave the back pin just when you think you have it!

Of all the thousands of bowlers out there, everybody does it differently. Whether you have a different armswing, release, speed and ball action or whether you throw a hook, straight ball or back up, the same rules regarding angles apply to you.

Get the best angle you can to carry the strikes and use the angles to your advantage when shooting spares.

CC clips Falcons' wings

basketball

Senior guard Steve Whitlow tipped in an intentionally missed free throw at the buzzer Friday to send the game to overtime, and Redford Catholic Central dominated the rest of the way for a 67-57 victory over Dearborn Divine Child.

Whitlow and junior Bob Kummer led CC, 2-0 overall, with 18 points each. Paul Kuhn made his first free throw to put CC down, 55-53, with only seconds left in regulation. He missed the second on purpose and Whitlow was there to tip in the ball and tie the game at 55-55 after four quarters.

CC outscored Divine Child, 12-2, in overtime. Senior Jon Barbara, playing his first game, contributed 11 points for the Shamrocks.

CC trailed 15-8 after one quarter and 29-17 at halftime. The Shamrocks rallied by outscoring the Falcons 21-14 in the third quarter and reduced the deficit to 43-38.

YPSILANTI 83, JOHN GLENN 52: Ypsilanti outscored Westland John Glenn 28-7 in the fourth quarter Friday to win the non-conference game convincingly.

Glenn trailed only 55-45 after three quarters. The Rockets, 1-1 overall, made only 18 of 30 free throws and were stung by Ypsilanti's 11 three-point shots.

Chris Slater led the Braves with 22 points, including five three-pointers. Wayne Miner and Wendell Rodgers had 13 points each. Senior forward Gamal Ahmed led Glenn with 13 points. Teammates Kevin Champick and Kevin Tomaszewski scored 8 points each.

DEARBORN 55, CHURCHILL 49: Randy Calcaterra had 19 points, 6 blocks and 9 rebounds, but it wasn't enough to keep Livonia Churchill from suffering its first defeat at Dearborn.

The Chargers, 1-1 overall, trailed 18-8 after one quarter and 29-21 at halftime. This was the season-opener for Dearborn, led by forward Mohammed Abdrabboh's 26 points.

"It was a tough loss," Churchill coach Fred Price said. "They came at us in the first quarter. We didn't play defense in the first quarter."

Mike Thomas contributed 17 points and 6 rebounds to the Churchill attack.

Patriots wax Garden City

basketball

By Ray Setlock
staff writer

As snow flurries fell outside the Livonia Franklin gymnasium Friday, three-pointers dropped inside, most of which came off the hands of Patriot guard Keith Roberts.

Roberts connected on five three-pointers in Franklin's 76-45 win over visiting Garden City.

A 5-foot-9 junior, Roberts finished the game with 21 points. He tallied 13 of those in the second half.

"My three-point shot has felt real good so far this season," Roberts said. "They were giving it to me out there tonight and almost daring me to shoot it early in the game."

Roberts scored 24 points and connected on four three-pointers in Franklin's only other game of the season, a 71-56 victory over Novi.

"We give Keith the green light to shoot the ball when he wants to," Franklin coach Rod Hanna said. "The only thing we ask is that he read the defense before shooting the ball, and he has done a good job of that. We don't want any bad shots."

FRANKLIN set the tone early in the game, jumping to a quick 13-0 advantage.

Garden City closed the margin in the second quarter, but still trailed by 10 at halftime, 37-27.

"We didn't play with the same kind of intensity in the first half as we did in the second half," Hanna said. "I am glad we picked up the intensity in the second half."

The Patriots picked up the pace, and thanks to a pair of triples from Roberts, took a commanding 59-35 lead after three quarters.

"We came out real aggressive in the third quarter and took it to them," Hanna said. "Our aggressiveness caused some important turnovers."

Franklin maintained its lead in the final quarter, outscoring the Cougars 17-10.

"We did not play well in any phase of our game tonight," Garden City rookie coach Mark Cramton said. "We are a better team than we showed in this game."

Roberts wasn't the only Patriot player to contribute on offense. Senior forward Steve McCool chipped in a quiet 19 points and five rebounds, while guard Dave Roman added 13 points.

"STEVE IS one of our leaders on the court," Hanna said. "He has done a lot to make himself a better player in the off-season. Steve McCool has dedicated himself to being a complete basketball player for us every game."

Scott Marihugh paced the Cougars with 13 points. Jeff Williams scored 11 points, including a dramatic three-pointer from half court to close out the first half.

"We did a good job of pressuring them on defense," Hanna said. "That is our game. We like to put pressure on the opposition."

Franklin improves to 2-0, while the Cougars fall to 0-2.

Madonna cancels hoop

college sports

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

According to Madonna College athletic director Ray Summers, "In two days, the whole program unraveled."

What Summers said, in reference to the women's basketball program, is accurate. Injuries suffered by several players before the season was a few weeks old, combined with academic eligibility problems for two others, trimmed an already slim roster to four and resulted in the cancellation of this year's schedule.

What Summers said, however, doesn't shed much light on why the program was in a situation like this to begin with.

Summers refused to point fingers. "The only thing we can do is bow out (of the season) as politely as we can and start over new again next year," said Summers. He added emphatically, "We are not folding our program."

AND YET, the fate of women's basketball always seems to be in question at Madonna. As late as August, the program's future was in doubt because of a misunderstanding between Summers and coach Bob Belf on how much scholarship money was available.

That problem was resolved, but more trouble was just around the next corner for Madonna.

First came bad news on the academic front. A starter from last season, Michelle Dyksinski, and a top recruit, Renee Bennett, were both declared ineligible for the season. Dyksinski hadn't completed enough credit hours according to NAIA standards; Bennett had played previously for Madonna, prior to its joining the NAIA, leaving her in limbo. An NAIA District 23 committee was to rule on her eligibility.

All of which trimmed Belf's roster from 11 to nine. After school started, Belf found out another player from last season's 6-15 team, Holly Murphy, decided against returning. That left eight players.

Then came the injuries: Teresa Ternes suffered a broken collarbone last summer and hasn't recovered; Lyndell Ingalls injured her shin playing softball and it became infected, slowing her recovery; Lisa Kline had ankle surgery; Stephanie Niebauer was slowed by tendonitis in her knee; and, in a game against Albion Nov. 17, the clincher came — Lori Creten broke her wrist.

'The only thing we can do is bow out (of the season) as politely as we can and start over new again next year. We are not folding our program . . . It's a nightmare no coach wants to ever face. I would never blame Bob (Belf). Injuries like this can't be blamed on coaches.'

— Ray Summers
Madonna College AD

WITH THE SEASON three games old, the Fighting Crusaders found themselves with precious little left to fight with. Only Becky Edinger, Jill Burt and Alice Williams were entirely fit.

"We put it up to the girls, whether they wanted to play or not," said Summers. Their decision wasn't easy, but Madonna's options were exhausted.

Other problems seemed imminent. Edinger was a walk-on who was leaving school in January. It was hoped Ternes and Kline would be able to return by then, but it wasn't was certain. Niebauer could play with her knee, said Belf, but for how long? And there was a possibility Bennett might become eligible, but that was definitely in question.

Belf claimed he could have put five players on the floor for the rest of this semester: Edinger, Burt, Williams, Niebauer and Ingalls, who has recovered sufficiently from her shin injury.

But what chance would a five-player team have?

Through all the problems of the past few years, one factor has remained consistent for Madonna's women's team: It's uncertain future. Summers was adamant that the program would remain. He blamed no one for the current troubles: "It's a nightmare no coach wants to ever face. I would never blame Bob (Belf). Injuries like this can't be blamed on coaches."

STILL, THE PROGRAM'S cancellation was due to a lack of players — whatever the reason. And there are people who share the blame for that.

Belf admitted he channeled most of his recruiting funds into signing Niebauer, Williams and Creten. With just five eligible returnees (after Murphy's defection), that left him with eight players. He hoped to add some walk-ons, but had little money to offer other quality recruits. So he knew he was going into the season short-handed.

The pre-season problems regarding the budget, even after they were ironed out, didn't help Belf's recruiting efforts. Neither did Summers, who quarreled with Belf over money he committed to recruits, adding to the program's uncertainty.

The turn of events has made Belf's status tenuous, at best. "I was going into the season by the skin of my teeth, no question about it," the third-year coach admitted. Now, he has just one objective: his players. "I'm going to take care of those kids, first and foremost. Whatever it takes, whether it's here or somewhere else."

Belf added, "Right now, I'm not planning on coaching again at Madonna." He is convinced Summers wants to replace him, although Summers says no. "Bob and I get along very well," said Summers. "Technically, Bob's probably the finest coach we've ever had here."

Still, the future of women's basketball at Madonna is hardly optimistic.

Roller skater 4th in world

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Steven Findlay of Farmington thought his first trip to the world championships in roller skating would be a get-the-feet-wet opportunity.

But it was much more than that. Findlay did far better than expected, finishing fourth in a field of 32 contestants in world class men's figures.

The 20-year-old Findlay, a 1988 graduate of Farmington High School, actually tied for third during the late-October competition in Hanau, Germany, but lost a tiebreaker and just missed winning a medal.

"Generally, if it's your first year over, the politics are so heavy no matter how you skate you end up eighth," Findlay said.

"It was very gratifying to be fourth, yet disappointing to be so close to breaking that barrier. It's parallel with ice skating, so it's not really any different. It's just to be expected."

'Generally, if it's your first year over, the politics are so heavy no matter how you skate you end up eighth. It was very gratifying to be fourth, yet disappointing to be so close to breaking that barrier.'

— Steven Findlay
world-class roller skater

BEING A first-time qualifier for the worlds and a lesser-known skater, Findlay was surprised to finish as high as he did.

"I knew I had a good chance to do well," he said, "but I didn't expect the politics to work that well for me. I thought I could be in the top six. The politics worked for me to get fourth but not well enough to get third."

Making those kind of inroads in his first attempt bodes well for Findlay in the future, and his long-time coach, Bud Patton, believes he definitely has one.

The United States and newly crowned world champion, Justin Bates of Flint, also is coached by Patton. But, at age 25, his ability and career are more advanced than Findlay.

"He is probably the U.S. future in men's figures," said Patton of his younger pupil. "He's the heir apparent.

"Justin will probably skate one more year, and the Steve will take over. Obviously, it's not that cut and dried, but he's that strong. I expect he'll give the world champ a run for his money (next year)."

FINDLAY WILL compete in the Olympic Sports Festival in May and have another go at Bates and the national and world titles later in the year. The 1991 worlds will take place in Sydney, Australia.

"To break the political barrier the first year puts you in good position for the world championship the next year," Findlay said. "For anybody in the top 4-5 places, if they've been there once, the judges really begin to take notice."

"This is my third year in world class and first time at worlds. It was Justin's eighth year in world class and fourth at the worlds."

Findlay accomplished his original goal, the one he set for himself at the beginning of the year, when he finished third in national competition last summer in Pensacola, Fla.

He lost another tiebreaker in that meet, too. He tied for second but ended up third; however, it was still good enough to earn a place on the U.S. world team.

First place went to Bates and second to Dick Buick, but Findlay rebounded at the world meet to finish decisively ahead of the fifth-place Buick. An Italian skater was second and a German third.

FINDLAY, WHO began skating when he was 14, made the national finals the previous two years, but he finished seventh in 1988 and tied for fifth but was sixth in 1989.

"This year was quite a jump to go from sixth to second," Findlay said. "People don't realize it was a culmination of the first two years. Though I wasn't as close to making the team, the first two years of practice were a part of it. You have to be persistent."

Patton has seen that persistence and encouraged that quality in Findlay during the seven years he has been his coach.

"He's a super young man," Patton said. "He works hard all the way around — in college, at his job and at skating. He'll practice three to four hours a day.

"When I started with him, he was just a little guy, and each year he keeps getting better and better. He's a winner.

"He's kinda like my son," he added. "I've been with him that long. My wife (Lorraine) and I think a lot of him."

PATTON SAID Findlay will probably have to skate another two to three years to assure himself of a world title, and there's also the possibility of Olympic competition in the future.

Roller hockey, a popular sport in Europe, will be a demonstration sport at the '92 Games in Barcelona, Spain, but there's no timetable for including roller skating.

"The consensus is roller hockey will pave the way for other divisions in the sport," Findlay said.

Even if it eventually is included, Findlay, a third-year mechanical engineering student at Oakland University, doubts whether that will be possible for him.

"Quite honestly, the timing is unfortunate," he said. "It's so close to being in an Olympic sport, but my skating career coincides with my college career.

"I have three years left to get my degree — and who knows what will happen — but I'll probably attempt to skate until I'm done with school. I'll get a job offer, and that's probably when I'll have to retire and quit skating."

A key factor is whether or not the United States Olympic Committee continues its current level of funding. That might allow Findlay to delay career plans long enough to pursue the Olympics, too.

One thing is certain: Findlay is poised to make a big splash on the world scene.

Siena JVs top S'craft cagers

By Darren A. Nichols
staff writer

Schoolcraft College lost in four different categories Wednesday night — three-point shooting, free-throw shooting, rebounding and the most important, the game, as the Siena Heights JV squad beat the host Ocelots, 94-86.

Both teams are now 5-2 overall.

Siena Heights shot 10-for-17 from three-point land, while Schoolcraft hit only five for the game.

The Ocelots, who led 44-43 at the half, increased their lead to seven points with seven minutes left in the game before free-throw shooting took over. Schoolcraft attempted only nine free throws for the game, while the Saints made 18-of-23.

"They came out on us and shot the ball real well," Schoolcraft coach Dave Bogataj said. "They did an excellent job of rebounding, especially on the offensive boards. They had 13 offensive rebounds. You can't do that and win."

Schoolcraft was led by sophomore center Barry Quayle (Dearborn Fordson), who had 19 points and 14 rebounds.

OTHERS IN double figures included sophomore forward Dave Hamilton who had 17 points and 12 rebounds; Lynell Collins (Southfield), a freshman guard, who had 16 points and six assists; freshman guard Kwesi McGill (Detroit St. Hedwig) who contributed 14 points, and sophomore forward Randy Watters, who chipped in 11 points and six rebounds.

"Quayle and Hamilton did a good job on the boards, but the others struggled and disappointed me," Bogataj said.

Freshman Rob Burger paced Siena Heights with 26 points.

throw percentage (66.1) and is the school's second all-time leading scorer with 650 points.

"Carolyn was important to our team because of the fact that she distributed the ball," Garden City coach Marshall Henry said. "She didn't have to score for us to win basketball games. Her value was at the defensive end. She has the quickest hands I've seen along with quick feet.

"She's just a good all-around floor player, very unselfish."

Shanks is also a first-team All-Area softball player (shortstop).

Stephanie Locke, senior, Lutheran Westland: A virtual unknown, except by area coaches who have seen her abilities in AAU games.

The 5-8 guard-forward, a four-year varsity performer, averaged 22 points, eight rebounds, four assists and five steals for the Class C Warriors, who finished 15-6 overall.

"Overall she improved her game and her mental approach," coach Kim Melton said. "She's a leader on the court, and off the court, she'll halp anybody. She's well-liked by her teammates and classmates.

"Stephanie was satisfied with her season, but she knows she still has a lot to learn. That's what is unique about her. She's a gifted athlete, but wants to learn more. She does score a lot off steals and rebounds. Also a great defensive player."

Locke erased any doubts about her ability when she went head-to-head against All-Catholic performer Kathy Offer of Royal Oak Shrine, scoring 25 points in the district opener.

Shamrocks overcome Pioneer, 3-1

After trailing 1-0 in the first intermission Wednesday, the Redford Catholic Central hockey team tallied three goals in the final two periods, defeating host Ann Arbor Pioneer 3-1 at Yost Arena.

CC (2-2) got two goals from Paul Schloss and one from Dave Gallagher. Jesse Hubenschmidt and Bill Baaki each added two assists.

Freshman Mike Brusseau earned the win in goal for the Shamrocks, making 22 saves.

STEVENSON 4, LATHRUP 4: Nick Sata scored with 2:35 remaining in the game Wednesday to help Livonia Stevenson earn a tie with visiting Southfield Lathrup (0-2-1) at Edgar Arena.

Mark Peterson's opening period goal gave the Spartans a 1-0 lead. Sata and Ryan Gusick drew the assists.

Lathrup scored three times in the second period, thanks to two goals from Aaron Titus and one goal from Nathan Titus.

Frank Eupizi added a goal for Stevenson in the second period. Bush recorded the assist, making the score 3-2 in favor of Lathrup.

Mike Schmidt scored early in the third period for the Spartans, evening the score at three.

Lathrup then took a 4-3 lead when Aaron Titus completed his hat trick midway throught the third period. That lead was maintained until Sata's goal tied the score.

The Spartans (1-2-1) outshot Lathrup 24-18.

CHURCHILL 5, ANDOVER 2: Livonia Churchill improved its record to 4-0 with Wednesday's win over visiting Bloomfield Hills Andover at Edgar Arena.

Mark Mycek, Dan Imperati, Jamie Allen, Mark Michels and Mike Johnson all scored goals for the Chargers.

"We are keeping the ball rolling," Churchill coach Rudy Varvari said of his team's perfect start. "We beat a good team."

WYANDOTTE 10, FRANKLIN 1: Livonia Franklin fell to 1-3 following Wednesday's loss to host Wyandotte at Yack Arena.

Neil Roberts scored Franklin's lone goal. Shane Hastings and Scott Ware drew assists.

Wyandotte outshot the Patriots 40-17.

Hawks beat Kettering

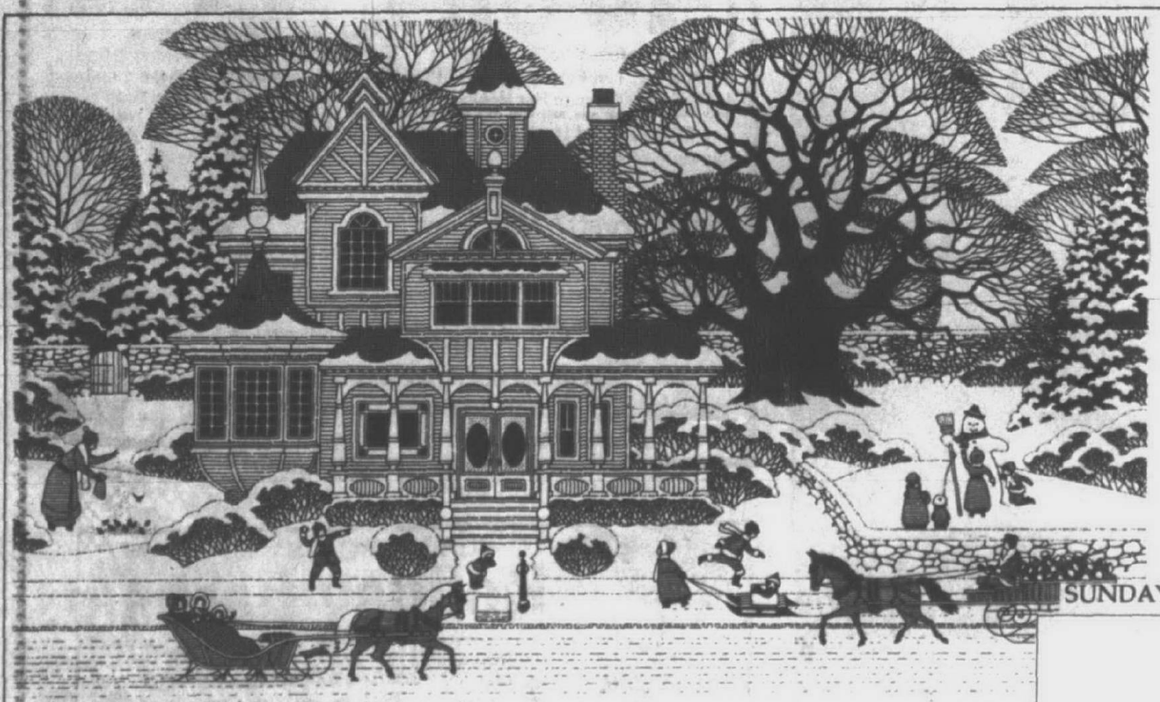

Inside scoring and perimeter defense made the difference Friday as Farmington Hills Harrison took its first victory, 66-57, over Waterford Kettering.

Paul Gilvydis, a 6-foot-7 junior, scored 19 points, grabbed 14 rebounds and had three blocks for the Hawks. Senior forward Andy Smith contributed 17 points and eight rebounds.

The Hawks also got strong defense late in the game from guards Roy Granger and Dan Hight. Waterford Kettering's Tad Smith scored 23 points, but he was held to only one shot down the stretch when guarded by Hight.

Harrison led 10-5 after one quarter and pushed its lead to 24-18 at halftime. The Hawks clinched the outcome by outscoring the visitors 23-19 in the fourth quarter.

The Hawks enjoyed a 50-24 rebounding advantage. Forward Andy Fitzpatrick, who had nine points, also helped on the boards with nine rebounds.

Detroit Piston John Salley wore his own now defunct brand of shoes by Osaka during the pre-season, but now sports Nikes after signing a contract with company.

Putting the best sneakers forward

By Charlene Mitchell
special writer

The battle of the high tops is gaining momentum.

Air Jordan, The Pump, British Knights, Avia Spiders and a host of other high profile athletic shoes have hit the classroom and basketball courts in what can best be described as the "sneakers war."

With the leather, ankle-high, rubber-soled footwear being in vogue for the fashion conscious elementary through college age folks, companies like Reebok, Nike and Converse are spending millions of dollars promoting their brands.

Sports stars like Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls can be seen in television commercials jumping to heights that appear to be limitless. And a glance at members of the world champion Detroit Pistons, lets you know just how competitive of a business it is.

Most NBA stars wear basketball shoes of their own preference. In short, it's the shoes that give them the best fit and playing comfort. Figured into that is which company pays them to endorse their product. Some players receive up to 50 pairs of shoes a season along with a hefty endorsement fee from the companies.

ACCORDING TO Dave Wieme, the Pistons' public relations assistant, a check of the team's footwear shows seven different brands among the 12 players on the roster.

Contrary to the heavy advertising campaigns of its competitors, Converse supplies the shoes for three Pistons — Bill Lambier, Mark Aguire and Tree Rollins — more than any other company.

"Basically, the players can wear any brand name they want," said Wieme, pointing out that it was only 10 years ago that the NBA required all players to wear the same shoes as part of their uniform.

"It's just the way things are today," Wieme said. "The shoes the players wear has such a tremendous influence on what everyday people buy at the stores."

Want to emulate Vinnie Johnson or James Edwards? Buy Nike. Joe Dumars? Adidas.

Dennis Rodman prefers the popular Reebok Pump, a change from the shoe by New Balance he wore in previous seasons. Scott Hastings prefers L.A. Gear and William Bedford is alternating between Pony and Nike.

During part of the pre-season John Salley was wearing his own now defunct brand of shoes by Osaka. After the company folded, he signed a contract with Nike.

"If the shoe fits wear it," said Salley, hinting that his decision to go with Nike was based in part on the handsome fee he's being paid for doing so.

As for Pistons' captain Isaiah Thomas . . . Well, Zeke is sporting a relatively obscure brand of shoes popular with NBA players on the West Coast, called Asics.

AND, LISTEN, for you star watchers, word has it Michael Jackson likes L.A. Gear, M.C. Hammer is into British Knights, and the Queen of Soul, Aretha Franklin, has a penchant for Tretorn.

Major sporting goods retailers like Dunham's, Herman's and Foot Locker all depend heavily on sales of athletic shoes.

At Dunham's in West Bloomfield, the sample of Reebok's Pump is on the top shelf of the wall display "to keep all customers from playing with it," joked one salesman.

It seems adults and kids alike enjoy trying on the shoe, which retails for $170, to see how the orange basketball-shaped device on the shoe's tongue inflates the inner workings of the shoes, making them tighten around the ankle.

While the sneaker craze may be good for business, most kids' parents aren't going for the exorbitant prices of the popular shoe brands.

"I'm not going to pay $100 or even $80 for one pair of shoes . . . It's ridiculous," griped a Southfield mother of two pre-teenage boys who were nearly in tears when she gave an emphatic no to their request to buy the shoes.

In Detroit, school officials have implemented a new dress code which forbids students to wear expensive sneakers to school, citing theft and other problems that seem to arise between students who own the shoes and others who don't.

"IT'S A STATUS thing that we just want to get rid of," said a teacher at Denby High School.

In the northern suburbs, many teens say they prefer the worn look of beat-up Keds in the slip-on style, boat shoes or well-worn penny loafers.

For now the sneakers war continues, but hopefully for the parents under pressure to buy, someone will wave a white flag, indicating an end to the fashion frenzy.

When Gregory Balteff speaks, a lot of people listen . . . People in the Detroit area . . . in Chicago . . . in Cleveland . . . in Texas . . . in California.

It's not that he has a voice that carries. Quite the opposite is true. Balteff is soft-spoken, but he has the "power" as he calls it, the power of positive thinking.

Meet Mr. Positive.

"I am a mirror to people's souls. I am what I am and what I say. If I believe I will be successful, I will be successful. If they believe they will be successful, they will be successful."

Sound positive? Well, how about this.

"I am who they are. If I can become positive, they can become positive."

Yes, he's for real. And, yes, people listen to him. And, no, he isn't on one of the lesser known radio stations. Mr. Positive is a Friday night fixture on WLLZ.

At the age of 27, Balteff wants to corner the market on positive thinking. He admits his aspiration sounds vain, but he believes that today's society really does need doses of positive thinking.

He got started in 1986, doing positive pieces on Tower Radio 96.3-FM. Because the station had a lot of "power and influence," he felt it could be used to improve people's lives.

HIS IDEA was to get people to "take a dream and believe in it." Batieff kept his messages short and to the point. One message lasted two-three minutes. And playing off the stations power theme, he ended his messages — and still does — with "And you have the power."

He eventually left for WLLZ and in between did cable TV shows, made 22 appearances on "Kelly & Co." and is tentatively scheduled to appear on "Arsenio Hall" in the coming months.

Batieff has refined his format over the years. Today, his messages are more esotaric and "use poetry to articulate his positiveness." He gets help with the poetry — "Like Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde, crack will take you for a ride." — from his boss, Paul Tepatti.

"I have to make sure I catch the hard rockers' attention," Batieff said. "I have to come to the radio and shake you. I want to represent to people that they don't need drugs.

"I want to personify positivity along the lines of religion, but not in the religious sense. I want people to put out positive vibes."

Batieff's positive inspirations and influences have come from an odd collection of people and experiences.

ELVIS IS his main motivator, the result of seeing a concert "The King" did in Hawaii and was transmitted via satellite throughout the country. He reached millions of people and the concert brought home the point of how much influence the rock star had on people, Batieff said.

Another inspiration was a young girl he saw while working at Farmer Jack years ago. The youngster, sick with leukemia, was trying to catch up with her parents while in the store.

"They were ahead of her and she reached for her parents' hand; I saw it as her reaching out for her Mom and Dad and they weren't there. I heard she died three months later. That really rocked my world."

And a seven-year struggle with a speech impediment also contributed to his positive nature. Experts told him he "wouldn't amount to a hill of beans, if you can't articulate." It taught him to "never say never," he said.

MOVING PICTURES

Clint Eastwood is Nick Pulovski and Charlie Sheen is David Ackerman, and veteran cop and his novice partner assigned to break up a vicious auto theft ring in "The Rookie."

'The Rookie' takes genre beyond realm of credibility

the movies

Dan Greenberg

"The Rookie" (D, R, 115 minutes) takes the super-macho film genre beyond the realm of credibility with sequences that are completely unconvincing.

Despite a great deal of fast-paced bashing and smashing — people as well as automobiles — the film is overly predictable and full of cliches.

How many times must audiences suffer through the old story about a rookie cop, David Ackerman (Charlie Sheen), with something to prove? Here's the usual pattern. He is assigned to work with a tough, older veteran, Nick Pulovski (Clint Eastwood), hot to trot on a vengeance trip.

Nick has just lost his partner in a reckless investigation of an auto-theft ring. One expects more caution from a couple of street-wise veterans. The sequence only exists to provide the pairing of two stars, the rookie and veteran, Sheen and Eastwood, and to introduce the arch-villain, a German named Strom (Raul Julia).

There's absolutely no reason for that ethnic choice, which confuses while failing to add anything. But that's characteristic of "The Rookie," a film fatally flawed by the ridiculous insistence that — no matter how far-fetched — anything goes in the name of style and excitement.

Apparently, six-shooters have been replaced by 76-shooters. While macho heroes always fire endlessly without reloading, there is an upper limit to what audiences will accept.

THE CAR-TRUCK chase sequence after Nick's partner is killed also lacks authenticity. Why he didn't call for back-up and how he was able to overtake the truck after waiting to mourn his dead partner are but two questions this sequence raises. Contemporary audiences may appreciate car chases but this one is so exaggerated that it's silly not stylish.

Another attempt at high-style that turns preposterous hits the screen in the person of Strom's girlfriend/hit-person Liesel (Sonia Braga). Looking like something out of "The Machete Maidens of Manila" or reprising her early sleaze film, "The Girl on the Bus," this Brazilian bombshell fizzles with a wet fuse.

Apparently conceived as a macho-feminist character, if such a type exists, Braga is neither appealing nor sexy. She just shoots a lot of people in a performance as tedious as her work in "Kiss of the Spider Woman" was inspired.

Audiences may well remark on how strong David's live-in girlfriend, Sarah (Lara Flynn Boyle), turns out to be. Such a sweet, little thing takes a lot of choking before David predictably drives a motorcycle through the front door to save her from one of the junior villains.

OF COURSE, that was more credible than the ease with which he rousted a bar full of motorcycle heavies, the way he survived three bullets in the back and the way Nick fell down an elevator shaft without damaging his body.

Does the endless repetition of the obvious — Laura getting choked — indicate that audiences are so stupid that it takes them three reels to figure out the poor girl was being strangled?

The film's dialogue isn't anything to brag about either: "He's got a gun." "This is my life." "You were never there for me, Dad." "It's time for me to stop being scared and time for others to start."

Japanese animation stars at the Detroit Film Theatre

By John Monaghan

A monster airship roars in and out of cloud banks as tiny dragonfly-like air cycles dart around. They're searching for a girl, but she jumps ship and, aided by the levitation crystal around her neck, floats gently to earth.

This sequence, from the animated "Laputa: Castle in the Sky," comes even before the opening credits. For the next two hours, the action unreels in what ranks among the most exciting animated films ever created.

"Laputa" joins two other animated features this weekend at the Detroit Film Theatre. They prove how seriously Japanese filmmakers take their cartoons.

The Friday night feature, "Akira," is the latest and most highly acclaimed. Set in a post-apocalyptic "neo-Tokyo" of 2019, the film pits a motorcycle gang against a military government cover-up.

"Akira" is based on a popular series of comic books and has already gained a cult following. Veteran animator Katsuhiro Otomo spared no expense (about $7 million) in realistically creating a city that has risen from the ashes.

Endless miles of videotape continue to unreel as distributors gear up for the holiday gift season. If all the videotape released each week was stretched out, traffic would snarl, tempers would flare and there would be nothing to watch.

Such is not the case and a great many established favorites long available at premium prices are now on the shelves at considerably reduced cost. As well, many films — both new and old — are appearing for the first time on video cassette just in time for Christmas and Hanukkah gift-giving.

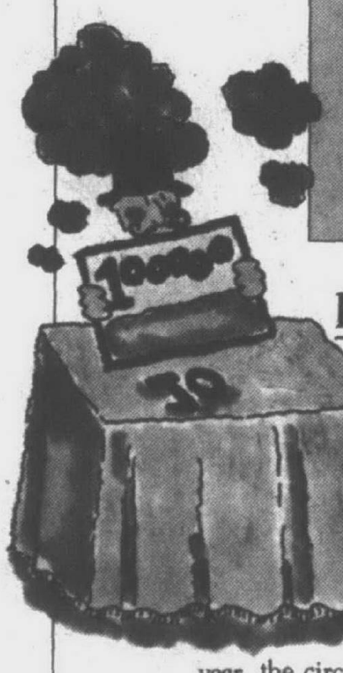

"Memories of Hollywood" (1990, black and white and color, not rated, 47 minutes) is a tape to avoid amidst the welter of new releases. Despite an attractive brochure with notes on more than "100 stars and 50 films" — including "Music of Academy Award-Winning Composers," it's a messy hodge-podge of film clips not clearly identified.

While some old-time film buffs may recognize all these stars, it would have been a lot more fun if sub-titles identified everybody as the program unfolds.

The show also needs some rationale. Hollywood's good ole days may be of great interest today but the glamour and glitz needs some structure, some clear principle of organization. "Memories of Hollywood" is

How to win at the numbers game.

The game is newspaper advertising — and the rules are changing. Rates are up in the Detroit News and Free Press. Suburban circulation is down. And all around town, advertisers are wondering what numbers to trust — and where to place their media dollars. What should you do?

Beware of smoke and mirrors.

Right now, the News and Free Press circulation is unstable at best. On the other hand, SPRING's network of 39 Detroit suburban newspapers delivers to more than 500,000 households — and that's a real number.

How do we know? All SPRING newspapers are audited. Every year, the circulation figures for each SPRING newspaper are verified by either CAC or ABC — two of the industry's most highly-respected independent auditors.

No slippery stuff here. SPRING's numbers are tested, tried, and true.

See what's behind the numbers.

OK — so dazzling numbers can be misleading. And, when it comes to newspaper circulation figures, you want more than quantity. You want quality.

We've got it. SPRING's one million readers are some of the most affluent consumers around. SPRING newspapers go to suburbs with the spending power to buy more cars, condos, boats, bikes, appliances, apparel, gizmos, and gadgets than most other Michigan communities combined.

Best of all, SPRING delivers this upscale suburban market at a lower cost per thousand than either the News or the Free Press.

Place your bet on SPRING.

Once you've studied the numbers, we're sure you'll agree: SPRING is a sure winner.

SPRING's circulation is solid and stable. It's audited. And it represents more than one million readers who have the means to buy what you sell.

No matter how you figure it — those are very good odds, indeed.

Beat goes for broke with its own tour

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Ranking Roger plays at a ska festival in San Francisco. He sees 150,000 people go mad.

The former singer with English Beat and General Public hooks up ex-Specials members John Bradbury, Neville Staples and Horace Panter. Special Beat is born.

"It's not The Special Beat," said Ranking Roger, correctfully like a school teacher. "It's just Special Beat."

If things sound a bit rushed that's only because Ranking Roger and his crew has chosen to hit the fast-forward button with their newly formed ska group. Special Beat have embarked on 45-date, two-month tour going coast to coast (which stops Monday, Dec. 10, at the Nectarine Ballroom in Ann Arbor).

Perhaps this is nothing unusual except in the mad dash, Special Beat didn't get a record contract before going out. You know, those people in glass towers in New York and Los Angeles who finance such whims.

Conventional wisdom states bands get record deals before such coast-to-coast excursions.

Instead, Special Beat members have broken their piggy banks and underwritten this tour themselves. So, needless to say, band members are not dining on smoked clams and drinking champagne ordered through room service on this tour.

FRIVOLITY, THOUGH is secondary. Ranking Roger, the two-toned haired singer who graced the stage with early '80s British new wave bands English Beat and General Public, believes he's on to something.

"I can't really tell you what I like about ska," Ranking Roger said. "I can only tell you what I see in other people who go to ska shows.

"I like to see them jumping up and down and going mad. That's what what I love about ska — the danceability."

Ska is a fast-paced brand of dance music influenced by reggae, jazz and funk beats.

Special Beat adds a twist to the sound, which is often referred to as monster music. Bobby Bird lays some heavy duty rock'n'roll guitar riffs on the music, pulling away from the early blues beat.

Roger sees ska growing in popularity in the United States, mainly due to the resurgence of reggae and world music here. Today, ska is largely relegated to the underground. Locally, Gangster Fun is perhaps the best known ska outfit, which also performed at the San Francisco ska festival in April.

AT THEIR initial shows, Special Beat appears to be drawing a mixture of ska fans and those of the English Beat who were too young to see the band the first time around. In a sense, it's like starting over for Roger whose solo career is on hold.

Bands are good fellas for Goodfellows

The Civilians, Goober and the Peas, Fun Club and the Stewart Francke Band will team up Thursday, Dec. 13, for the fourth annual Old Newsboy Goodfellows Rock Benefit at Saint Andrew's Hall.

The concert takes place 8:30 p.m. to 2 a.m. Tickets are $5.

All proceeds will be donated to The Detroit Old Newsboys Goodfellows, which provides underprivileged children with toys and clothes.

The line-up features some of Detroit's top rock'n'roll bands:

- The Civilians are back from a successful stint in New York where they performed at CBGB's with An Emotional Fish from Ireland and The Posies from Seattle. The band has an LP in the works, "Detonate to Explode."
- Goober and the Peas were voted "Detroit's Best Rock Band" in the 1990 Metro Times Music Awards and recently opened for Bob Dylan at the Fox Theatre.

The hay throwin', cow kickin' band of musicians play what they term "Wyoming Cowboy Punk." They are producing a country rock opera, Nashville's answer to the Who's "Tommy" on behalf of the Old Newsboys Goodfellows.

- Fun Club features a potpurri of sound, including soul, funk, world beat and rock. The female duo of Sarah and Mariana combine to provide vocal harmonies for a band that has become a regular on the Hamtramck club scene.
- The Stewart Francke Band presents an interesting blend of blues and folk stylings, straight ahead rock'n'roll and the power vocal tones. The group's first album, "Across Decker's Field," has been released.

Saint Andrew's Hall is at 431 E. Congress, Detroit. For information, call 961-MELT.

LIFE —Inspiral Carpets

Here we go again. Another "British invasion!" This one is of substantially less substance than those of yore.

Grab yer partners 'n' swing them round, 'cos we're all goin' dancin'. The so-called Manchester scene is the impetus for this influx of the likes of Stone Roses and Charlatans UK and the inspiration for the psychedelic gyrations of those hip-huggin', hip-shakin', club-lovin' groovesters Dee-Lite and has even pushed the likes of the Cure into releasing a "dance-mix" album of their old hits with that shuffling drum beat.

The Inspiral Carpets are currently riding high on their grooving single "Commercial Rain," which is included on this recording "Life," from Elektra.

But hold on a second. Don't let that dance-floor hit fool you into thinking that Inspiral Carpets are another concoction of studio whizzes tossing samples of other people's music about like pizza toppings. "Life" kicks off at a frantic gallop with manic guitars and that singularly annoying, kitsch and cliched '60s sound — the cheap psychedelic K mart special keyboard whine.

The song "Real Thing" is more akin to the '60s guitar thrash than the dance oriented "Commercial Rain." As a matter of fact, "Commercial Rain" misrepresents the band entirely.

Most of the songs align themselves more to the sound of a young guitar/keyboard band than a fashionable hip dance band. Hey, maybe the Hysteric Narcotics could still make a comeback!

Vocalist, Tom Hingley, who sometimes sounds similar to Soft Cell's Marc Almond (remember "Tainted Love"?) and organ player, Graham Lambert, who sometimes sounds like he raided his mother's '60s record collection, give the band their indistinct sound.

High points on the album are: "This Is How It Feels," which is in the same vein as the Mighty Lemon Drops, the previously mentioned "Commercial Rain," and "Sun Don't Shine," a relatively straight-forward paean to lost love.

Somebody please get rid of that organ sound.

— Cormac Wright

SOME FRIENDLY — Charlatans UK

Charlatans UK have been said to capitalize off the success of the neo-psychedelia craze brought forth by Stone Roses. Perhaps this is so.

Yet judging by "Some Friendly" (Beggar's Banquet/RCA), one can argue this Merseyside five-piece has left Stone Roses counting pedals. Yes, Charlatans UK encompass all the required elements of psychedelia — pulsating Hammond organ, crashing power chords on guitar and vocals that go with the flow.

Somehow, though, we don't remember '60s-'70s music sounding this good.

One of the reasons is simply Charlatans UK know a good pop tune when they hear one. "The Only One I Know," which has seen the light of day on MTV and college radio, is easily in the top 10 songs of the year.

Rob Collins' Hammond organ pumps an endless stream of delirium on this number while vocalist Tim Burgess tempers the mood by remaining calm while singing. Jon Baker's crashing guitar provides the right amount of electricity to give this floating cloud of psychedelia a neon sparkle. Impressive, to say the least.

But there is a darker, far more brooding side to Charlatans UK. "109 pt2" is a searing instrumental complete with throbbing bass and arena-sized drumming. The song touches the outer limits with its unrelenting odyssey of keyboards and guitars.

When such exploratory surgery is mixed with the band's pop sensibilities, the Charlatans' prove unbeatable.

"Flower," for example, is a beauteous piece of music caressed ever so delicately by Baker's cascading guitar and Burgess' dipped-in-honey vocals. "Sonic" is suspended in ecstasy, partly due to the Burgess-Baker-Collins troika and, also Charlatans' rhythm section of drummer Jon Brookes and bassist Martin Blunt who give the song an urban twist.

The band fails to reach the musical juggernaut, however, putting forth two rather throwaway pop numbers "You're Not Very Well" and "White Shirt." Only here do the Charlatans UK resemble a repetitive bell bottoms and poppys act.

Forget peace signs, though. Just latch on to a piece of this group's better music.

— Larry O'Connor

ANYWAYAWANNA —The Beatmasters

Here we have one of the latest bands to surface out of the British dance/rap scene. This American debut release from the Beatmasters is called "Anywayawanna." I suppose that can be taken anyway you want it.

Their music features all the latest musical mechanics. This is to say, they have a lot of special audio effects.

Vocalist Manda Glamford packs a heck of a wallop. She sounds a bit like Block Box's Katrin Quinol, even their music style is similar. Their sound is quite typical of today's British/American dance music scene.

The other two members of the trio are Paul Carter and Richard Walmsley, but the band's songs feature many stand-in vocalists and musicians.

One of the their more popular cuts called "Rock Da House" is an amalgamation of electronic wizardry, synthesized vocals, and a dash of repetitive drum beat. The Beatmasters made this song in collaboration with London's female rap duo called The Cookie Crew. It's a very danceable piece of music.

But their biggest hit to date is the 1989 smash hit in the UK called "Who's in the House?" This one is a lively little piece. The Beatmasters made this song with the well-known British rapper named Merlin.

Another song entitled, "Sarayet-Sayam-Sembte" is worth a mention. It has an unusual calypso style about it.

Before this band went to the studio to record their own album, they comprised "Stand Up for Your Love Rights" for the popular English group Yazz (aka Yazoo in the UK).

One of the Beatmasters biggest American successes is their funky dance concoction called, "Hey DJ/I Can't Dance (To That Music You're Playing)."

All together there are 11 funky and feisty tunes in this package. If funky and feisty is your bag, and you're looking for something new in that department, then maybe "Anywayawanna" should be your next musical selection at the record bin.

Thank you for this opportunity to further educate the readers of this column as to how it could be of greatest help.

I can respond to a question about the letter writer herself, when given the minimum of data for a valid conclusion. I cannot tell you why your husband does what he does when I know nothing about him.

I assume that you have asked him why he does it and have received no satisfactory answer. If you send me additional information, I will try to help.

You have made a good start toward a solution by writing your letter. Please write again.

Power of positive thinking

He admits that Mark Scott of WXYT has influenced him because of the latter's abilities to put his thoughts in order and speak on a subject.

Batleff isn't putting on an act when it comes to positive thinking. A casual conversation is laced with positive language and statements — "There's so much to life. People have to realize it and not give up on it. Sometimes they get down on life, but then they have to think about the good times."

HIS POSITIVE message can be heard 6 p.m. Fridays on WLLZ-FM, but when he's not on the radio, he's helping people look and feel good at the United Health Spa in Livonia, where he's an assistant manager.

He keeps himself physically fit and readily admits that he "doesn't drink or smoke."

"The stronger the mind, the stronger the body," he said. "I help people develop their spiritual side. I help them develop their physical side. I help them develop all aspects of their lives."

While Batleff has been cornering the market on positive thinking in the Detroit area for four years, it wasn't until he began marketing himself to other stations that he started branching out to other states.

Each new market area is fuel for his dream. Each new person who hears his message and responds puts him one step closer to success.

You see, Batleff would like to be for positive thinking what Martin Luther King Jr. and Mahatma Ghandi were to integration.

"I want to be the leader of people's dreams," he said. "As wild as it sounds I believe it's possible. I truly believe that if every person put out good vibes, the world would be a better place."

VIDEO VIEWING

sadly lacking in that regard.

FOR AN OFFBEAT selection, video viewers might appreciate a talkie but interesting film about interpersonal relationships, Henry Jaglom's "New Year's Day," "Can She Bake A Cherry Pie?" and "Tracks" were released Dec. 6 along with the re-release of Jaglom's "Someone to Love."

"New Year's Day" is an "only in New York" story about three girls, who have lived together in a New York apartment for four years. There's Winona (Melanie Winters), a photographer who is looking for a genetically attractive man to father her child; an art-gallery publication-relations person, Annie (Gwen Welles) who is looking for herself, and a young lady, Lucy (Maggie Jakobson), who does voices for cartoons.

One of the reasons they're moving out is that Lucy is moving to California to get away from her possessive but unfaithful boyfriend, an obsessive-compulsive mother and a lecherous (also possessive), know-it-all father. While that might seem like an unreasonable burden of relationships for one person, the situation provides interesting and satiric commentary on family and friends which, after all, is the point.

As one might expect from the title, it's the first day of the new year and the girls are packing to leave when the new tenant turns up. He's a middle-aged fellow, Drew (Henry Jaglom), who has fled L.A. due to the crumbling of his long-time relationship.

ONLY IN NEW York would a new tenant turn up early on New Year's Day with no place to go and the conviction that his lease started on the first of the month while the girls are equally certain that their lease allows them to stay through, rather than, until the first.

In addition to these four, Lucy's parents and friend, there's a steady stream of typical New Yorkers in a continual flow of conversation.

The film, as noted, is talkie but surprisingly interesting considering how little action occurs. The talk is about life, love and relationships and performed at a documentary, cinema verite style that seems improvised. Whatever the production technique used, it's well done and attractive, albeit not for everyone.

Consider giving videotape collector/friends Judy Garland's "The Clock" (1945, 90 minutes), a conventional story with Robert Walker on a 48-hour pass in New York where he falls in love with Garland. Keenan Wynn is also featured. The film was on the National Board of Review's Top 10 List in 1945.

Along with "The Clock" on Dec. 5, MGM/UA Home Video released four other films for the first time on video cassette — "Bombshell" (1933, 95 minutes), "The Children's Hour" (1962, 107 minutes), "Humoresque" (1946, 125 minutes) and "The Swan" (1956, 112 minutes).

THESE FIVE titles headline MGM/UA Home Video's 25-title "Leading Ladies" which includes a number of familiar films at reduced prices.

All but "The Swan" are in black and white. All appeared before the current rating system but need not concern parents with the exception of "The Children's Hour" which deals with two school teachers, Shirley MacLaine and Audrey Hepurn, accused of lesbianism. It's an updating of the Lillian Hellman play.

"Bombshell" is a Jean Harlow satire on the Hollywood star system. Franchot Tone and Frank Morgan are featured. This film was later retitled "Blonde Bombshell."

Alec Guiness headlines "The Swan" along with Grace Kelly, Louis Jourdan, Agnes Moorhead and a talented but not now widely known supporting cast. It's a romantic story about Louis Jordan's love for Grace Kelly despite the fact that she's promised to a prince, Alec Guiness.

Probably, the most attractive film of this group is "Humoresque" which features Oscar Levant in one of his best supporting roles. The story has John Garfield as an ambitious violinist involved with his wealthy patroness, Joan Crawford, Robert Blake plays Garfield as a child and Isaac Stern plays Garfield's violin (on the soundtrack).

A NUMBER OF recent theatrical successes — using the term loosely — are available for the holidays. "Robocop 2" along with Peter Weller's anti-drug trailers, Dabney Coleman's "Short Time," Bill Cosby's "Ghost Dad," John Ritter's "Skin Deep" and Jeremy Irons (twice) in "Dead Ringers" all debuted on video cassette during the first week of the month.

Finally, a year ago "Ernest Saved Christmas" and now, hardly appropos of the season, "Ernest Goes to Jail." There's a moral there. Knowwhatimean, Vern?"

Neither do I.

ALTERNATIVE VIEWING

"Akira" is being restricted from children under 18, "Laputa" (1986), the Saturday night feature offers something for all ages. The floating island of Laputa, mentioned briefly in "Gulliver's Travels," now becomes the quest of two brave children.

Sheeta, a young princess who possesses the levitation stone, floats into the arms of Pazu, a scrappy young miner best described as a hip Dondi. Together they join a bumbling band of pirates in the hopes of reaching Laputa before the government does.

"Laputa" runs a little long at just over two hours, but it has some amazing moments. In its world of past and present, of Jules Verne and George Lucas, giant airships submerge into a sea of clouds like a World War II submarine.

And in a scene that most recalls Tokyo-leveling Japanese movies of old, a giant robot, carrying Sheeta, takes a fatal blast to the chest from the military. The robots will later be revealed as keepers of Laputa's garden kingdom in the more or less subtle ecological message that closes the film.

SUNDAY'S "TWILIGHT of the Cockroaches" (1987) — the only film that hasn't been dubbed into English — is another animal altogether. In what has been described as "Roger Rabbit Meets Franz Kafka," a cockroach colony worships a filthy bachelor as God.

The film mixes live-action segments of the man with animated cockroaches. You see most of the action, however, from the startled bugs' eye view when God's new girlfriend starts to clean house.

While the Disney Studios stick with familiarity and nostalgia, Japanese animators take animated films in bold new directions. Local audiences, who have flocked to other animated programs at the DFT, should make this weekend a solid sellout.

Something special about Beat

"To me, this group is probably closer to the English Beat," he said. "Perhaps so, in terms of the music. Definitely so in terms of the chemistry. We make decisions involving all the band members . . . where that wasn't the case with General Public."

Special Beat is in negotiation with several record labels. Roger declines to name them. Touring without the support of a label has its pluses, he said.

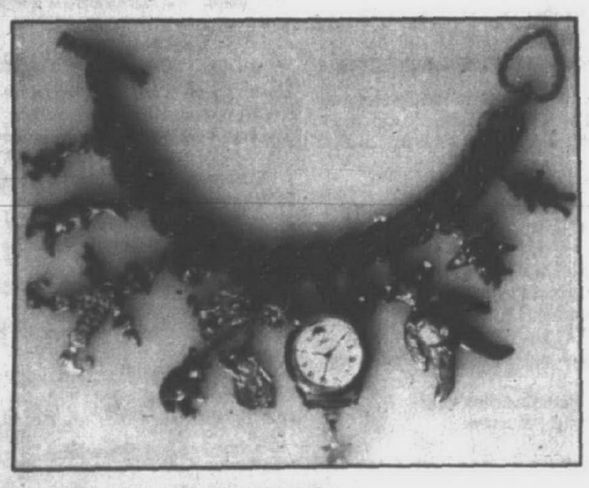

"It's given us credibility because we've done it on our own," Roger said. "As you get bigger and bigger, though, you do need a record company."

STREET CRACKS

Lenny Clarke makes it with his blue collar humor

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

Lenny Clarke looks like a guy one would find at a Boston Bruins game, calling opposing players "chaw-da heads" with suds spilling out of his beer mug.

Except his hockey knowledge is a little suspect.

"Detroit, hey the Red Wings are a great team. Stan Mikita played for them, right?"

No, ah, Mikita played with the Blackhawks.

"Bobby Hull, he was a Red Wing, right?"

Nope, another Blackhawk.

"Well what about the guy who got caught with cocaine in his underwear? What ever happened to that sorry . . . (guy)?" said Clarke, sensing he has obviously blown his chance as a color commentator on "Hockey Night in Canada."

The Bruins are another matter, though. He knows a lot of players on the Boston hockey team. He's also a friend of Detroit Piston John Salley, who is quite the comedian himself.

If anything, though, Clarke knows working class life. He graduated summa cum laude from the School of Hard Knocks.

Clarke grew up in a family of eight. His dad worked three jobs to make ends meet.

SO, STARRING in a sitcom about a hard-working, blue collar dude who has an opinion on everything is natural for Clarke. "Lenny" airs on CBS.

After all, Clarke was employed as a janitor before his comedic career began to blossom. He also ran for mayor of Cambridge, Mass., where he worked as a custodian for the city.

Clarke campaigned on the promise to clean up city hall. The other guy won, but Clarke still had to clean city hall.

He also made an aborted run for Congress. Then some young turk named Joseph Kennedy decided to enter the race.

"I spent $80 on my campaign; he spent $2 million," said Clarke, who majored in political science at the University of Massachusetts. "I have some really nice bumper stickers, though."

CRITICS SAY he has a nice TV show. "Lenny" originally aired 8 p.m. Wednesdays during the fall before being pulled by the network. The show returned to Saturday nights. On Wednesdays, the show was getting its clock cleaned by NBC's "Unsolved Mysteries" and ABC's "The Wonder Years."

Despite that, CBS called for three more shows to be made, showing enough faith to keep "Lenny" going.

If anything, the show depicts the last of a dying breed in this yuppified, high-tech society. Lenny Callahan, the show's character, works as a gas company construction worker and moonlights as a doorman at a Boston hotel.

. . . Clarke was employed as a janitor before his comedic career began to blossom. He also ran for mayor of Cambridge, Mass., where he worked as a custodian for the city.

With no prior acting experience, Clarke slipped right into the role with no problem.

"This TV thing is just a sidekick."

CLARKE'S FIRST love is stand-up comedy, something he has been doing for 12 years. Touchtone Television executives caught his act at the Just for Laughs comedy showcase in Montreal. They, in turn, recommended Clarke to producers for "Lenny."

Like his television character, Clarke is ripe with opinions.

- On Mayor Coleman Young's "Prime Time Live" appearance: "Here you have a mayor of a big city. You have to have some decorum. He sounded more like Andrew Dice Clay."
- On John Salley's comedic talents: "He's a quick learner. He could be a really good stand-up comedian. He just has to write some material. He's naturally funny. When you talk with him, he makes you laugh."
- On the state's economy: "I think the federal government should develop some type of job program just so people don't have to relocate to find a better job. I mean, c'mon, did GM have to go to Tennessee to build Saturn?"

HIS STAND-UP routine runs along the same lines, turning political and other current events into laughter. It's a fine line between political humorist and political preacher.

Clarke believes his appeal lies in his sincerity, an everyday Joe just trying to make a buck.

"It's true, people don't like to be reminded about what they see on the TV news. Then they look at me and say, 'He came from nothing and made it.'

"I'm living the American dream. It may sound corny, but it's true."

Comedian Lenny Clarke plays it for laughs as the star of the CBS "Lenny," a sitcom about a hard-working, blue collar dude who has an opinion on everything.

Storybook nursery is a work of art

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

WHEN GARY and Suzanne Lichtman began making plans to decorate a nursery for their first child due in January, they decided to look for something out of the ordinary.

The Farmington Hills couple pored through dozens of wallpaper books, but nothing seemed special enough.

A bit frustrated with the search, Suzanne was ready to settle for one of the wallcoverings, but Gary wasn't sold on anything they'd found.

So they returned about 40 pounds of sample books and headed for the bookstore to look up nursery decorating. During the search, Gary found the answer: a painted mural.

"We'd looked through all of the wallpaper books and couldn't agree but we both liked this idea right away. It was different," Suzanne said.

HOPING TO find an idea for the mural, they stopped at the children's book section to look over classics such as "Alice in Wonderland" and "Wind in the Willow."

But when they rediscovered the stories of Beatrix Potter, they knew that Peter Rabbit, Squirrel Nutkin and the other charming, whimsical characters were perfect for the walls of the nursery.

"The illustrations weren't just pictures of children's characters," Gary said. "They were a piece of artwork."

A FRIEND told the Lichtmans about Julie Giordano, an artist from Northville who mostly paints portraits from photographs in oil, watercolor or pencil.

To select characters and colors for the room, Giordano and the Lichtmans looked over the illustrations and other Beatrix Potter material that the couple had collected. Giordano couldn't wait to begin.

"Murals create an environment. People don't become emotionally involved with wallpaper, but they do with a mural. They'll always remember the time it was painted," said Giordano, owner of the Giordano Gallery in Northville.

Besides creating a lighthearted atmosphere in the Lichtmans' nursery, the 7¼-foot by 4-foot mural done in perspective gives the small room an illusion of depth.

"I wanted to push out the space and open up the room," Giordano said. "It looks as if you can walk right into the mural."

GIORDANO, WHO started to draw creatively as soon as she could hold a pencil, began the mural by dividing the picture to be duplicated in half.

To create balance, she also split the wall space in half and began to sketch the picture in pencil, first the left side, then the right. Even value changes were planned and marked in the sketch.

She then mixed and watered down latex paints and began to paint her favorite character, Peter's mother, old Mrs. Rabbit.

"Doing mural art isn't like painting in private," Giordano said.

"You start with one space and work outward. That way (the customer) sees progress and is hopeful right away. Their reaction charges me up, too."

WORKING THREE evenings after her studio closed, Giordano finished the mural in about 13 hours.

The painting of the inside of a colorful cottage includes about a dozen of Beatrix Potter's most endearing characters doing their chores.

A separate drawing of Peter Rabbit was placed over the light switch and a group of resting bunnies was painted over the changing table.

SINCE THE price of Giordano's mural art is figured by square feet covered plus labor, the work generally is more costly than wallpaper plus installation.

But there is no comparison between a wallcovering and original artwork, the artist said.

Thrilled with the result, the Lichtmans often walk into the nursery simply to admire the original, signed work of art on their walls.

They're already concerned about moving one day, worried that new owners might repaint the wall.

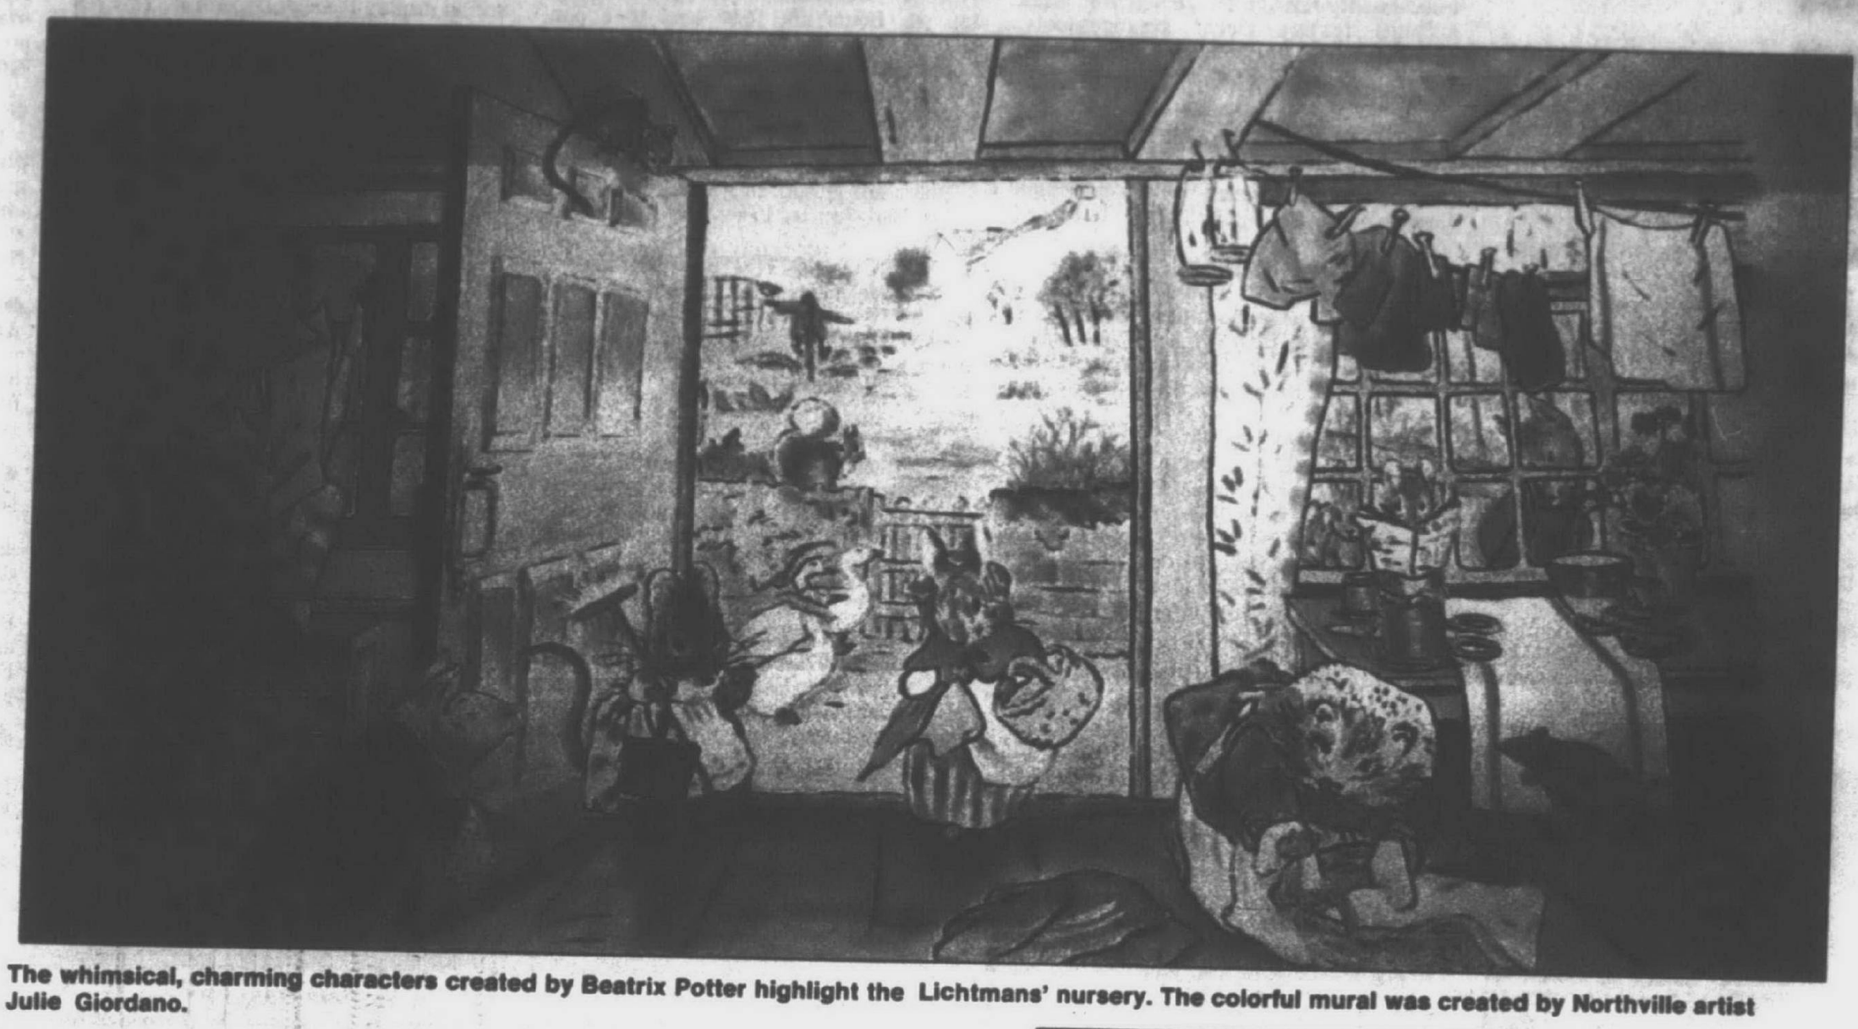

"When it was finished we made excuses to go in the nursery just to look at the detail," Gary said. "If the house is ever sold, we'll have to make sure the mural stays."

BEING PLANNERS and list makers by nature, it wasn't unusual for Gary, the media relations director for United Way, Southeastern Michigan, and Suzanne, a systems analyst for AAA-Michigan, to put such thought and energy into a decorating project.

"Gary even wrote an itinerary for our wedding reception," Suzanne said, laughing. "So, I knew the nursery wouldn't be a simple project."

'The illustrations weren't just pictures of children's characters. They were a piece of artwork.'

Gary and Suzanne Lichtman spent weeks planning the mural art for their nursery.

Holocaust Memorial Center presenting children's opera

"Brundibar," a charming children's opera originally performed by Jewish youths imprisoned in a concentration camp during the Holocaust, is part of a yearlong project of the Holocaust Memorial Center of West Bloomfield.

Phase I of the project will begin at 8 p.m. Thursday with a concert "In Remembrance of the Innocents" in the Community Arts Auditorium at Wayne State University.

A preview performance of the opera will take place for school children at 11 a.m. Friday, also in the Community Arts Auditorium.

Phillip Fox of the Hilberry Theatre is "Brundibar's" director. Deborah Smith, Wayne State University music department professor, will conduct the interdenominational and interracial cast, featuring the Civic Youth Chorus of Detroit.

THURSDAY'S CONCERT will feature Sister Veronika, O.S.B., a German nun, rediscoverer of the work and director of the first revival of the opera; Cantor Harold Orbach of Temple Israel, West Bloomfield; and pianist Flavio Varani. Admission is free.

Friday's preview performance, also free, of "Brundibar" will be for students of middle and high school age.

'"Brundibar" is a story of children's hope, courage and perseverance, even during the most desolate of times.'

—Rabbi Charles Rosenzveig Holocaust Memorial Center

Educators from public, independent and parochial schools and members of the public may apply to the Hilberry box office, 577-2972, for tickets.

AFTER THE opera, a panel of young people will discuss the significance of the Holocaust and Armenian massacre to young people today.

This contemporary significance will also be highlighted by a prologue and epilogue written by WSU Professor Guy Stern.

The premiere performance of "Brundibar" will be at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Community Arts Auditorium.

Tickets are a minimum donation of $8. They can be obtained from the Holocaust Memorial Center, 661-0840, or the Hilberry box office.

At 2 p.m. Sunday, a performance of the opera organized by Orbach will be performed for families under the sponsorship of the Keffy Orbach Family Concert Fund in cooperation with the Holocaust Memorial Center at Temple Israel.

Phase II will include expanding performances in the metro area and outstate. Phase III will be the production of a videotape of the opera with accompanying curriculum materials.

"'BRUNDIBAR' IS a story of children's hope, courage and perseverance, even during the most desolate of times," said Rabbi Charles Rosenzveig, Holocaust Memorial Center founder and director.

The opera, a morality tale, tells of a group of children trying to buy milk for their ailing mother. They encounter a series of obstacles provided by a hurdy-gurdy man named Brundibar.

In its literal sense, "Brundibar" reflects the universal lesson of goodness triumphing over evil.

For information, call the Holocaust Memorial Center, 661-0840, or Wayne State University's music department, 577-1795.

Holiday season: It's a time to reach out to help others organizing

Dorothy Lehmkuhl

Today's column is excerpted from "A Christmas Wish" by Dr. Twyman Towery and is reprinted here with his permission:

John was burned out on his job, marriage and life in general. He was quickly heading toward the hopeless feelings of failure and depression that have become epidemic in America. Then John was spared.

He happened to see a video that motivated him to spearhead a drive to repair needy people's houses. He and several church youth lived in concrete block huts for a week that summer, working by day and discussing their experiences at night.

As John continued to give time and energy to others, his life assumed dramatic new meaning. The more he reached out to help others, the more his self-esteem grew.

John found he could make a difference without being CEO of a Fortune 500 company, and probably a more meaningful one at that. During this Christmas season, when depression can literally be a killer, I challenge you to make a difference, too.

Interact with those you suspect are estranged, hurt or lonely. Remember who lost his job, had a heart attack, is struggling to start a business on his own, or whose wife dumped him.

MILLIONS OF men in our divorce-prone society are painfully separated from their children because of failed marriages. Sadly, men down on their luck are often treated by other men as if they are lepers.

The male obsession with the idea that "real men" should always be winners often causes them to avoid asking for, or giving, the unique brand of strength and wisdom men possess.

Know that the man who flashes the $64,000 smile during the day may be desperately struggling to survive the night. Talk about feelings instead of ball games for a change, even though it may be uncomfortable at first. If it's your own situation, share your feelings with others.

Don't judge who was right or wrong, who should or shouldn't have done what when. It's irrelevant. Just know that any man who is unemployed, part of a wounded family, or in any number of other of life's double binds needs friendship. Give it. Caring about others is an ongoing process.

The Christmas season is not the time to seek out the currently successful business executives who can refer you business or become a lucrative client. You can do that any time.

Set aside some specific times to go after the tough cases. Those who can't help your practice, business or social standing one iota. Those who aren't as articulate, friendly and sociable as they once were.

AS A start, make a minimum of three "reach out" calls a day from now through Jan. 31. After connecting on the first phone call, make another and another, Get them, and yourself, out of the house for lunch or a walk.

Visit with at least one "revived acquaintance" every day. Who knows: maybe this will replace the Marlboro cowboy myth to become the symbol we identify with being a "real man."

What's in it for you? One of the greatest opportunities you will ever have to help yourself. You may find your reward far exceeds your effort.

Twyman L. Towery, Ph.D., is a Memphis psychologist, management consultant and professional speaker who writes "Malecall," a syndicated newspaper column. Dorothy Lehmkuhl is a Birmingham-based time management consultant.

Affordable housing goal of builders' president

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

A new governor. A new state builder association president. New avenues. New opportunities. At least that's the way Don Pratt, the newly elected president of the Michigan Association of Home Builders and owner of Wake-Pratt Inc. in Troy, looks at the coming year.

Pratt, a residential builder since 1965 and an owner of Wake-Pratt since 1976, was elected as president by the association's board of directors last month.

He has been a member of the state association board of directors since 1974, has served as MAHB secretary (1980), treasurer (1989) and first vice president (1990). Pratt was also president of the Builders Association of Southeastern Michigan — one of the 36 local trade associations affiliated with MAHB — in 1983.

"Our primary goal is to work with our new governor," Pratt said. "For most of the past decade, we've had a state government that was totally unresponsive to (the building industry's) needs.

"We're hoping the new administration will be more receptive," he said, adding that in preliminary discussions with governor-elect John Engler, MAHB has found him to be open to new ideas and challenges.

And yet, communication and action are two different things. "We have to set objectives that are — and here's the key — reasonable to the government.

"Let's say we want to eliminate the Department of Natural Resources — we can't do it," he said. "But if we get talking, we can determine what can be done to streamline (those activities that involve the department)."

Don Pratt
fresh start in Lansing

According to Pratt, working with state agencies like the departments of natural resources, labor and commerce creates a tremendous drain on the building industry.

"We need to know what we can do to facilitate the process. What once took four to six months at the most now takes at least six years," Pratt said.

PRATT SAID builders share some of Engler's priorities, key among them are property tax reduction and education finance reform — both of which have potential to help the building industry, he said.

Lowering taxes and reducing the reliance of schools on local property assessments will not only free up money for large capital purchases, but will make home buying more attractive.

"If I only do one thing this year, I want to focus (attention on the issue) of affordable housing for the state of Michigan," Pratt said.

Affordable housing is not housing for a fixed price — for example housing under $100,000 — but a price that people in an area can afford, Pratt said. "It could be $50,000, it could be $200,000."

When a builder constructs a home, he has fixed costs he must pay, Pratt explained. "Then he adds a reasonable profit on top of that — if costs rise, he's not going to swallow it but pass it on (to the consumer).

"Builders don't arbitrarily set housing costs," he said.

THE KEY TO affordable housing is to control costs, he said. Some costs, like materials and labor, are market driven and are beyond the builder's control.

It is incumbent upon builders, communities and the state to work together to control those costs that can be controlled, Pratt said. Many factors that drive up costs are closely integrated with the no-growth/slow-growth movement.

"There are thousands of acres of green, blue water, swamps and wetlands — we're blessed with all that green that we will never be able to build on," Pratt said. "We've got areas that we can't built on, so we shouldn't say there are areas that we shouldn't build on."

The way things are heading, Pratt said, some communities are setting themselves up as conclaves for the more fortunate. Pratt said he believes every community should have every kind (of housing).

"Now even I don't want to see the apartment complex next to a four-acre farm," he said. "(But) we should keep our eyes wide open and see there's a need for all kinds of housing.

"I'm looking at a controlled situation where a person can live in a $500,000 home if he wants to, but I also don't want to see a situation where a young couple can't afford the two-bedroom bungalow on a 40-foot lot."

NO-GROWTH low-growth pressures drive up the price of land by reducing the amount — by restricting lot size and numbers or restricting the development through wetland and tree preservation through local ordinances — of buildable space.

Some more progressive communities address this situation by allowing builders to condense development on a portion of the property in exchange for leaving other portions undeveloped, Pratt said. "That's the kind of thing we're talking about — reasonable solutions (to difficult problems)."

Solutions need to be found for other problems too, he said.

Overly restrictive building codes that have an unequal cost for benefit tradeoff, high workers' compensation claims that drive up insurance and labor costs — all of these drive up housing costs, Pratt said.

The real problem behind regulations and restrictions imposed by the state and local communities is that state and municipal authorities — as well as the various interest groups that support the measures — rarely consider the costs of their actions.

"Will there be a gain in livability or a loss? We're really opposed to anyone — be it local state or federal — that dictates regulations without regard to affordability.

"What does not having a neighbor within 200 feet mean? An extra $30,000? An extra $40,000?" he asked. "We need to educate the people about things like this."

Duty ends at property line

Can you tell me whether ownership alone creates liability as it relates to an adjacent property owner concerning a condition or defect of the land or of activity conducted on the land that causes damage to the adjacent landowner?

I believe your factual scenario is offered under the principle of premises liability indicating that the right to recover for a condition or defect of land or for an activity conducted on the land requires that the defendant have legal possession and control of the premises. The defendant's duty ends at the boundary of his premises.

To the extent that the owner of land is delegated the responsibility for the maintenance of the land or premises to a tenant and does not have legal possession or control of the premises, he may be immune under certain circumstances from liability.

I would have to know the exact details of your situation in greater depth to be able to respond to your question precisely.

We have an open area of our condominium project. Some of the kids in the condominium are playing football there after school. Some of the residents are very disturbed about it.

The kids tear up the grass and otherwise make a lot of noise and commotion. In addition, they invite "undesirables" from other areas to play on the premises. I am not on the board but am wondering what, if anything, can be done about it.

It of course depends upon the rules and regulations of your condominium.

The board may consider the prospect of limiting ball playing to certain areas of the condominium project.

On the other hand, the rule-making power that restricts the use of an area for children may be deemed discriminatory as a violation of the familial status prohibitions in the Fair Housing Act.

In addition, there must be some reasonable place for the residents of the condominium to have recreational activities.

While you may have a basis to complain about excessive noise, violence or other improper conduct, the fact that others are allowed to come on the premises for football playing may make it a very difficult activity to prohibit.

I would write a letter to the board requesting its input as to what, if anything, can be done to ameliorate this situation.

Hammering home his point

Yankee Carpenter darling of public TV

(AP) — "Do you ever make mistakes?" a man asked Norm Abram.

"Whenever I bend a nail, cut something too short or hit my finger, my wife says she never sees Norm do that on television."

Norm Abram, star carpenter of "This Old House" and "The New Yankee Workshop," repeated the question into the hand-held microphone at the recent Southern Ideal Home Show.

"This man wants me to reassure his wife that I make mistakes and you just don't get to see them," he said.

"Well, they really don't happen," he said in a distinctive New England accent. After a few seconds of silence, he laughed and said, "But actually I do make mistakes occasionally.

"In fact, last season when I was building a butler table, the template slipped on camera and the hole for the handle turned out to be a big question mark. So I took the board and wrote on it, 'I make mistakes — spelled misteakes — too,' and hung it on the workshop wall."

Seated on a deck-like stage set at the state fairgrounds, Abram signed the pleased-looking man's shop apron and took the next question from the long line of fans.

EACH QUESTION was fielded with the same slow, down-to-earth manner that has made him the darling of public television.

"Norm, what do you do about squeaky wooden floors?" asked a woman leaning over the rail.

"I don't think anyone who lives in a house with wooden flooring should expect to have a squeak-proof floor," he said. "Some people put talcum powder between boards to act as a lubricant. Others glue boards down but they eventually come loose.

"One manufacturer advertises silent floors, but I think it's sort of a waste. If you have squeaky floors, there's not a heck of a lot you can do about them.

"At my house, I always found it was an advantage because when the kids were teenagers, I knew when they were going up the stairs," he said.

One couple drove from Fayetteville to ask questions about the house they were renovating in Haymount. The man held a camera ready to snap a picture of his wife with Abram. She held a "This Old House" coffee mug to be signed by the man she referred to as "my pot-bellied sex symbol."

OOZING SELF-RELIANT, denim strength, the folksy star was dressed in his trademark plaid shirt. His jeans were loosely fit and he wore comfortable athletic shoes.

Thick, brown hair folded over his forehead and his beard was neatly trimmed. Large, chocolate-brown eyes seemed magnified by his thin gold-rimmed glasses.

The 40-year-old Abram is the father of four and a grandfather and lives with his wife, Laura, in Hudson, Mass.

If he looks like an ordinary carpenter, it's probably because he once was just that. He was discovered building a barn in producer Russ Morash's back yard.

IN 1978, the originator, director and producer of Julia Child's "French Chef" and "The Victory Garden" hired him to build a barn. During the process, Morash asked him to do a new show called "This Old House."

At first Abram declined because he liked being self-employed. A month later he changed his mind when the New England job market became soft.

Now in its 12th season, "This Old House," which Abram co-hosts with Steve Thomas, is the most-watched public television show in the country. Carried on all 39 Public Broadcasting Stations in the country, it is seen by up to 15 million people a week.

THE POPULARITY of the show, he said, comes from the fact that it is entirely unrehearsed and unscripted.

"The show," he said, "is based on real people doing their everyday jobs. The only makeup we use is sawdust and sweat."

The value of the show, he said, is that it has upgraded the image of those in trades.

"We showcase the skills of electricians, plasterers, painters and plumbers and show that they are willing to share their considerable knowledge. Hopefully, we have attracted a lot of young people to get into the trades. We need them."

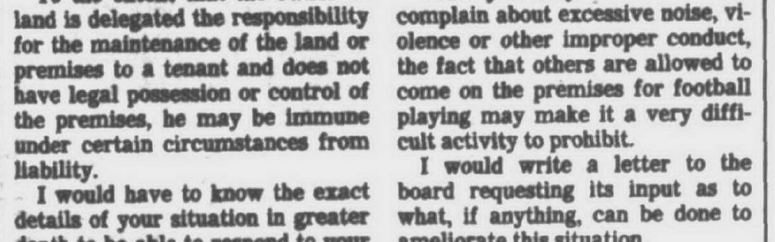

Best of all, Abram likes to hear people say that without the program they would never have owned a house, built a deck, improved their kitchen or had the confidence to paint or wallpaper.

"THE New Yankee Workshop," a spinoff from "House," starts its third season next January. That show features Abram building power-tool projects such as benches and cabinets.

Yes, it is exciting to design a television studio! It has been in the planning stages for several years and a number of people have made contributions to the project. The new facility will be located in the Farmington Hills industrial park hosting several film, video, photography and advertising studios. This studio is limited to television productions produced for non-commercial, residential, governmental or non-profit organizations. The governing authority of the Southwestern Oakland Cable Commission administrative offices will be housed here.

New community studio in Farmington Hills before remodeling.

The residency policy established within a cable franchise is fairly common throughout the nation. The resident is defined as someone who lives in the franchised cities who owns property or a business within any of the cities, is employed in the cities or is affiliated with a local organization. This definition serves as a guideline to help people to know where they can most conveniently become involved with Community Television. After taking television workshops through the cable franchise and becoming certified, the qualified person has access to the equipment and facilities available.

The completion date of the new studio is scheduled for January 1991. This studio will be one of many television options provided through the MetroVision Cable Franchise in the cities of Farmington, Novi and Farmington Hills.

Are you aware that studios exist throughout this television viewing area for your use?

In the MetroVision of Oakland County Cable System there are several options available. There are television studios at Novi High School, North Farmington High School, MetroVision Community Studio for classes, 3 camera shoots, cuts only editing, and also there are six remote portapacks for resident on-location shoots. The New Studio is available for those who need a maximum of 5 camera shoots, audience involvement, elaborate set designs, animated graphics, or chromakey. There is also equipment for AB Roll Editing, Suiteage Studios and a Remote Van are also available.

In the Omnicom System there is one large Community Studio which has 3 to 5 cameras, Amiga graphics, cuts only editing and room for large audiences. This facility also has a Chromakey and Audio Booth, and includes a waiting room for guests. It is located at the Omnicom administrative offices. Portapacs of Super VHS Camcorders are available for on location resident use and a remote van is also used.

This is the age of information and education. Dr. Roy Butz of Community Telecommunication Network expands the definition of education to suggest that education is the experiences of a growing nature through information exchange which goes beyond the four walls of a classroom.

More and more educational opportunities are being facilitated through distribution services.

The mission of studios for non-commercial use by the public, educators and the government is to increase the diversity in television programming and education.

To grasp the true meaning behind all these ventures, one must look beyond the tv programs seen on the channels. Whether or not you like the show is not as important as the production of the shows themselves. The effort and cooperation involved in putting the shows together is the most important aspect of all. The purpose of the shows is to inform, entertain, and to extend coverage of an event to those who could not be there. Expanding minds and informing people about what is important in their community is a wholesome and worthy objective.

These objectives are taken into consideration when studio facilities are being designed. The continuity and the sturdiness of equipment as well as the functional simplicity of the building itself are very important considerations. Therefore, a lot of different people with uniquely different skills must cooperate to make the best decisions.

We will report more on the details of our new studio soon, so that you will be able to share the opening up of all our worlds through telecommunications!

Dolly Parton celebrates a family-style Christmas

200 relatives unite for singer's ABC special

By Amy Schmidt

Growing up in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains, little Dolly Parton waited for Santa every Christmas. She never saw him. "I figured he couldn't find his way that far back into the Smokies," said country music's glamour queen.

Who would have thought that, with or without Santa, one day young Dolly would make Christmas come to her house. On Friday, Dec. 21, she does just that on her ABC special, "Dolly Parton... Home for Christmas."

Over 200 (count 'em) of Dolly's relatives will join her. Dolly has six brothers, five sisters, 15 nieces and nephews, and then, of course, there are the cousins to contend with. Parton said the special is "the most expensive home video we've ever shot." They join Dolly for singing and reminiscing on her trip down memory lane. (The sheer volume of their voices should rival that of The Mormon Tabernacle Choir.)

"I'm from a very musical family," said Parton. In fact, her Uncle Bill, himself a musician, helped her make her start. When she was 10 years old, he borrowed a car to drive her to Nashville so Dolly could talk her way onto the Friday night Grand Ole Opry broadcast.

Her show biz-shy mate, Carl Dean, won't be participating in the special. "I didn't need to ask him. I'm sure he would've said, 'Hell no, you know better than to ask,'" she said. Dolly met her husband of 24 years at the Wishy Washy Laundromat her first day in Nashville. The asphalt contractor is rarely seen or photographed.

The first destination of "Dolly Parton... Home for Christmas" will be the three-room cabin where she grew up. During most of those years, the tiny house didn't even have running water. But they always had a Christmas tree, said Dolly. Her father would cut one down, and they would decorate it with homemade ornaments.

Other destinations include her theme park, Dollywood, where some of her relatives are employed, and the Nashville studio where she recorded her Christmas album.

Even if there were no special, Dolly makes a point of spending Christmas with her family every year. In 1984 she flew everyone, including her nieces and nephews, to her new home in Hawaii.

Truly, the girl in "the coat of many colors" has come a long way. Dolly is one of the country's wealthiest country music stars, having expanded her empire to recording, film and television. At one point, Dolly admitted she spent thousands of dollars each year on shoes alone. Her collection of blonde wigs exceeds 300. She owns rooms full of clothes.

Admittedly, she's larger than life. But Dolly says she's just got to have it all: "Since I was a child, I've loved anything that sparkles and shines. So Christmas gives me a great excuse to decorate my house with all that's gaudy and glittery. I'm sure I would make every interior decorator shudder at my overstated Hollywood-hillbilly taste, but I don't care what anyone says," she said. "Too much has always been just about enough for me, and Christmas is no exception."

Yes, Santa Claus, there is a Dolly.

FAMILY FARE

New Kids learn meaning of Christmas

By Anne Wheeler

The New Kids on the Block have a Christmas they'll remember forever when a little boy teaches them the true meaning of the Yuletide on the New Kids on the Block Christmas Special, a prime-time special airing Friday, Dec. 14, on ABC.

In the animated special, the New Kids are caught up in plans to spend Christmas with their own families. But their plans are interrupted by an 8-year-old boy named Albert.

Albert takes the Kids to New York's Spanish Harlem, where they meet Rosa, a woman who provides food, blankets and toys for the neighborhood needy each Christmas. However, this year she won't have enough to go around unless there is a miracle.

The New Kids take it upon themselves to make that miracle happen.

Before the animated adventure of the New Kids, the real New Kids on the Block reminisce about past holidays. After the animated special, another live-action segment features the New Kids' concert performance of "This One's for the Children."

Other Christmas specials kids may enjoy this week are The I Love Lucy Christmas Show, Monday, Dec. 10, on CBS, and the holiday classic Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer, tentatively rescheduled for Friday, Dec. 14, on CBS. In Monday's special, the Mertzes and the Ricardos trim the tree and reminisce about Christmases past.

STAR NOTES

Dixie Carter stays close to stage work

By Candace Havens

Dixie Carter plays the delightful Julia Sugarbaker on the popular CBS series Designing Women. Her character is quick-witted and always gets what she wants, yet always remembers her perfect Southern manners.

Carter grew up in the South in McLemorsville, Tenn., and from the beginning she wanted to be an opera star. After receiving a bachelor's degree in English from Memphis State University, Carter headed for New York to study her music more intensely. Then, she recalls, "came the rude awakening. My voice simply wasn't big enough for opera."

With the encouragement of a friend, Carter decided to audition for a part in a Shakespearean production by Joseph Papp. Her acting career began in The Winter's Tale. Then what seemed to be a promising career ended when she married her first husband, Arthur Carter. Two children and eight years later, she returned to acting with hopes of working in musical theater.

She later headed for Hollywood to star opposite Richard Chamberlain in a West Coast production of Fathers and Sons. She starred in a few feature films and was a regular on several series including On Our Own, Filthy Rich, Out of the Blue, Diff'rent Strokes and The Edge of Night.

Carter recently reprised her singing career with a cabaret act at the popular Carlyle, for which she received rave reviews.

TIME OUT

49ers to have rematch with Cincinnati

By Steve Paschal

It will be a rematch of Super Bowl XXIII Sunday when the San Francisco 49ers and Cincinnati Bengals go at each other in the headline game of CBS Sports' Regional NFL coverage.

This will be the first time the teams have faced each other since Joe Montana led the 49ers to a 20-16 victory in one of the great Super Bowl finishes of all time. In that game, San Francisco got the ball at its own eight-yard line with 3:05 left in the game and marched 92 yards in 11 plays to win their second consecutive NFL championship.

Although the Bengals slipped to 8-8 last season and finished fourth in the tough AFC Central, they are back in the middle of a dogfight for first place with Pittsburgh and Houston. However, a 27-3 win over Pittsburgh three weeks ago helped them reclaim the division lead.

San Francisco wrapped up its division with six weeks left in the regular season and appears headed for an NFC championship showdown with one of the best New York Giant teams.

While the majority of the country watches the Bengals and 49ers, other areas will see either the Giants taking on the resurging Minnesota Vikings or the Atlanta Falcons going against the Phoenix Cardinals. The second game also offers a pair of interesting matchups with Chicago facing Washington and New Orleans playing the Los Angeles Rams.

Which film proved Santa's existence?

By Steven Alan McGraw

Questions:

1. Identify the film which features this line: "Your Honor, we request an immediate ruling from this court. Is there or is there not a Santa Claus?"
2. Here's an easy one. Carrie Fisher's parents are...
3. The most-often-filmed Shakespearean play is...
4. OK, this is really a theater question, but if you've ever seen The Dresser, with Albert Finney, you'll get it. (And if you've not seen that wonderful movie, you should!) All right, here it is. Theatrical superstition demands that the title of one of Shakespeare's plays never be uttered in the theater, except on stage. What is it and how do the actors refer to the show?
5. Who played the title roles in Zeffirelli's landmark film version of Romeo and Juliet?
6. Name the classic film that was originally advertised with the line, "They also pay who meet in hotel rooms."

Answers:

1. Miracle on 34th Street
2. Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher
3. Hamlet
4. The play is Macbeth. Theater folk usually call it The Scottish Play.
5. Leonard Whiting and Olivia Hussey
6. Psycho

ABC Television has made a midseason series commitment to Dinosaurs, the first series to be produced by Jim Henson Productions and the Walt Disney Company since Henson's death. The half-hour, live-action comedy series focusing on the last days of the dinosaur, features a human-sized family of dinosaurs and their blowhard, bombastic dad. The series will utilize state-of-the-art technology, taking puppetry and audio animatronics to a new level.

George C. Scott is set to star in the telefilm Mittleman's Hardware for ABC. Hector Elizondo also stars in the drama about an aging owner of a hardware store who suffers amnesia and is helped by a group of Hispanics.

SOAP TALK

'Days' actor related to 'M*A*S*H' star

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: Is Antony Alda (Johnny Correlli) on Days of Our Lives any relation to Alan Alda? There seems to be a resemblance. —D. in Arkansas

Dear D.: Alda is the son of the late actor Robert Alda and is the brother of Alan Alda.

Dear Candace: I enjoy reading your column very much. You said to write if we wanted to sound-off about our favorite soaps. My favorite is Falcon Crest.

I want it back! Since they kept Knots Landing and Dallas, why did they have to dump mine? Especially with a star as great as Jane Wyman.

Whatever happened to the cast of actors? My favorites were Lance (Lorenzo Lamas) and Melissa (Ana Alicia). They made a terrific team. I also miss Maggie (Susan Sullivan), Richard (David Selby), Chase (Robert Foxworth), Julia (Abby Dalton), Emma (Margaret Ladd) and Angela (Jane Wyman). I never hear anything about any of them. —Betty Wasmuth, Montclair, Calif.

Dear Betty: I want to let you know you're not the only one upset over the demise of Falcon Crest. Several readers have written in about that very subject.

As for the actors you mentioned, Lorenzo Lamas is devoting time to auto racing, and Susan Sullivan can be seen in commercials for Tylenol. She is currently in production on a TV movie. Robert Foxworth and Ana Alicia also have been keeping busy with TV movies. Little has been heard from David Selby, Abby Dalton and Margaret Ladd. Jane Wyman has earned the prerogative to take on only selected projects.

Dear Candace: I like The Bold and the Beautiful; it is the best of any soap. I would like to know why it is only 30 minutes long. Thanks. —Just wondering, Nacogdoches, Texas.

Dear Reader: B&B is a fairly new soap; it's been on the air four years. As the show becomes more established and moves up in the ratings, it could then go to one hour.

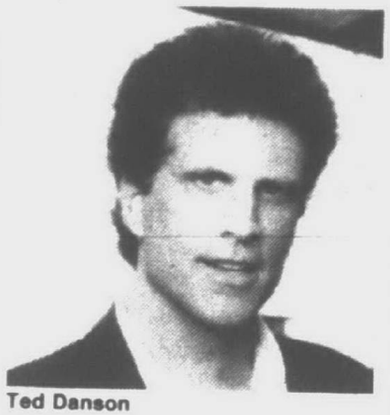

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76102-0748.

'Three Men and a Baby' rumor laid to rest

By Polly Vonetes

Q: Recently a story came out concerning the movie* Three Men and a Baby. *The rumor was that a little boy had been killed in a fall from a balcony in the apartment where they did the filming. In the scene where Ted Danson's mother comes to visit, there is a dark haired boy looking in the window. The story I've heard is that this is the ghost of the little boy. I watched the movie and saw the little boy and he didn't seem to fit into the scene. Can you tell me what the true story is behind it? —Jorja Maxwell, East Palestine, Ohio

Ted Danson

A: I am aware of the rumor; in fact one other rumor has it that the boy killed himself with a rifle some say is visible in the movie. (I didn't see the rifle.) I watched the movie, and yes, there is a boy in the window. In checking with my sources, I am told the image is of a prop. There are many such props on a soundstage. They are used in place of the stars to focus the cameras between scenes. Many have written in about this rumor, so hopefully this will put that "ghost" to rest.

Q: I live in rural Madelia, and for a long time I have enjoyed watching the program* Discovery. It has now been replaced with a travel program. It is mostly commercials and lots of talking. Is there a possibility that Discovery *will come back on station 26? —M.A., Madelia, Minn.

A: There may be several reasons your local channel chose to drop Discovery. One way to have them bring it back is for viewers, such as yourself, to write the programming director at Channel 26 and request the program be rescheduled on their channel. Enough letters from the viewing audience just may cause him to reconsider the program.

Q: Some four months ago a friend told me about an article you printed about a Joni James Fan Club. I missed that article and would surely love to acquire one of those addresses you printed. Joni James is one of my favorite artists and I would love to have some of her music again. —Wilda Hanson, Interlachen, Fla.

A: I know how you feel. She is one of my favorites too. There are two addresses I have for you. Write to: Joni James Fan Club, c/o Fred J. Mann, 15 Maryanne Ave., Pt. Jefferson Station, NY 11776; or Joni James Fan Club, c/o Wayne Brasler, P.O. Box 7207, Westchester, IL 60153.
