No injuries in house blaze

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

A second-story fire Monday morning nearly destroyed a house at 305 Farmer in Plymouth but caused no injuries.

The first city fire truck arrived on the scene at 10:57 — one minute after a call from a neighbor that the house was on fire, Fire Chief Al Matthews said. Another city truck and one Plymouth Township truck were called to the fire, which brought out 15 firefighters.

The cause of the fire "is still under investigation," Matthews said Tuesday.

While the upstairs apartment had a gas heater, Matthews said "anything's a possibility" as to the cause of the fire with the investigation not yet complete.

As firefighters arrived, smoke was curling out from under the eaves and from an open rear window.

"There was a tremendous amount of heat," Matthews said. "They were unable to make entry into the upper level because of the heat."

A search of the first floor level revealed no one inside. Firefighters were driven back again by the heat when they tried for a second time to enter the upstairs.

Matthews said "everything" was burning upstairs — the mahogany-paneled walls and ceiling and carpeting — in the recently remodeled house.

Flames, fueled by winds, eventually broke through the east end

Firemen seeking to put out the second-story house fire were delayed by intense heat generated by the blaze, as mahogany paneling and carpet smoldered.

Bila resigns as mayor

Plymouth Mayor Dennis Bila announced his immediate resignation in a memo to the Plymouth City Commission late yesterday.

Chief to take job in Illinois

Willard Myers, the city of Plymouth's police chief for nearly six years, is leaving his post.

Myers will leave his Plymouth job March 29 and begin working as police chief of Lisle, Ill., 23 miles west of Chicago, on April 8.

It's just a terrific career opportunity professionally, said Myers. He described the town as twice the size of Plymouth with 47 police on staff. The quality of life is comparable to Plymouth, he said.

I think he's really been a good chief for the community, said City Manager Gordon Jaeger. He's very professional in his approach to dealing with the work, he's good in dealing with the men.

He's done a good job. I've got a lot of respect for Rick, said Capt. Barry Brown, Plymouth Township police chief.

I think it will be the department's loss for certainly brought a lot of insight to the department. After the years, said Plymouth assistant city manager.

He was mildly adequate, said Commissioner Jerry Vorva, fired from his job as Plymouth police officer in 1990, for alleging ticket quotas. Vorva asked the commission to remove Myers as police chief, but was not supported.

Myers was hired by former city manager Henry Graper in 1985, at a time when the department faced cutbacks and changes due to the loss of a shared services contract with Plymouth Township. It was a credibility team-building situation. Those kinds of things certainly have been accomplished, Sincock said.

Widow tries to rebuild family's life after tragic fire

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Almost everything Debbie Dell'Orco smells, sees and touches is a reminder of her husband and six children killed in a fire that in minutes swept through their Canton house last December.

She said Monday she is trying to piece together a new life for her three surviving children.

The future includes a construction company that Dell'Orco recently founded. She also plans to build a house on the property she and her husband bought before the fire.

BUT, THE past is always with her, too.

There is not a day that goes by that I don't grieve or think of my losses, because they were such a part of my life. They were my life, she said. Everything I do or see or touch is a reminder. There were so many of them that there are always reminders.

Looking back, she said the overwhelming outpouring of support from more than 3,000 people in Canton and across the nation carried her through the toughest times.

It's a good feeling that so many people were thinking about my family and praying for us and I'll always hold that in my heart for the rest of my life, she said.

People said they didn't know where I got the strength. That's where I got the strength — from these people.

Millions of people cried for the young widow and her children. They were touched by the tragic story of the 38-year-old self-employed carpenter who died Dec. 22, 1990, after trying to save his six children from the Proctor Road fire.

Dell'Orco said the fire and smoke spread throughout the house in about four minutes.

My husband ran back into the bedroom to get the other children out and I ran outside with Adam and to the windows for my husband to hand the children to me. But my husband never made it. The smoke took him before he got to the children.

Investigators concluded that the fire started when an old kerosene heater ignited a fire [illegible].

Hockey game to benefit Dell'Orco family

Two months after a fire killed seven Dell'Orco family members, a Canton man is planning a benefit that he hopes will in some way ease the pain suffered by the surviving family members.

Jim Reed organized a hockey game to be played by the Red Wing Alumni and the Westland Over 35 All Stars 6 p.m. Saturday, March 9 at Westland Sports Arena on Wildwood north of Ford Road.

Northville city manager eyed for Plymouth post

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Steve Walters, Northville city manager, is candidate No. 1 in the Plymouth City Commission's search for a new manager.

He's very interested in being a candidate for the city manager, Mayor Pro Tem Ralph (Jack) Kenyon told the commission Monday, after talking with Walters earlier in the day.

"I indicated I was interested in talking with them about the opening," Walters said Tuesday.

The commission voted to begin negotiating with Walters, and set a meeting for 8:30 a.m. Saturday at Plymouth City Hall. Walters had been a candidate for the job last year. The public session will give citizens a chance to interview Walters, 46, Northville city manager since 1973.

PLYMOUTH CITY Manager Gordon Jaeger has said he intends to remain in his post through May 1, and has offered to work part time for a period afterward, if no city manager is hired by then.

City leaves itself an 'out' in airport deal

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

Maybe they should rename Mettetal General Airport.

Because as in the long running TV soap opera "General Hospital," the day to day plot twists sparked by controversy over the tiny Canton airport are multiplying.

In Monday's episode, Plymouth's city commission was scheduled to name two members to the board that would run the airport once federal funds are approved for its purchase.

Plymouth Township trustees named that government's two representatives to the joint airport board last week.

But at the city commission meeting Monday, Mayor Dennis Bila asked the commission to delay the naming of representatives to the airport board for two weeks.

'However that comes out (a public vote on the airport issue), I want to do all I can to be sure that the people's will is fulfilled.'

Bila has said he'll back the outcome of a public vote on the airport issue. And before submitting two names for the airport board, I'm directing the city attorney to meet with township officials to draft whatever document is necessary to relieve the city of its responsibility, he said, if joining Plymouth Township in forming an airport governing board, as called for in a commission vote in January.

However that comes out (a public vote on the airport issue), I want to do all I can to be sure that the people's will is fulfilled, Bila said.

I would respectfully disagree with the mayor, said Commissioner John Vos. We would be remiss if we were not to move forward and appoint two members of the airport board, he said.

memories and surviving children give her comfort.

We are learning how to survive together and we will together.

The day after the fire, Canton firefighters, police officers and police chaplains launched a Dell'Orco fund. About $200,000 was raised, Dell'Orco said, adding that she was unsure about the final tally.

The donations will help Dell'Orco bring to life a dream she shared with the man she married a couple of years after she graduated from high school.

The couple bought five acres of land on Beck Road in Canton. They would drive out to the area, walk around and talk about the house they planned to build. Sometimes they shared a picnic there with their children.

We intended to build a big home to suit our large family, she said. And I intend to still build that home just as we had planned. I will truly feel at home again when I'm back there. That was the only thing that I have that was not scarred by this.

OTHER TIMES. Dell'Orco shows signs of stress. Her voice was filled with emotion as she explained how she tried to save her children the night of the fire.

It was so fast, she said. I've thought to myself, why couldn't I get them out? How come? It just wasn't possible.

I will never recover, but I will learn to live with it and go on. My children and my husband were my life. I feel like I had a life once and now I have a different life and I'm starting over with what I have left.

I will go on and my children and I will learn to have a family again and we will stay in Canton, because this is truly our home.

As a tribute to the good times, Dell'Orco said she wanted to donate the land, where their house stood, to be used as a park. However, neighbors in the area didn't want that, she said.

I wanted to put a park there and make it a happy place once again, where children could come again, where they used to. I thought it would be a good healing thing for the children to go there and play once again. Some of neighbors saw it as a morbid type of thing. I certainly didn't mean it to be anything that would hurt anyone. I thought it would be something good.

Dell'Orco said she wasn't sure what will happen to the land.

LAST WEEK, she broke a two-month silence when she sent a letter to the editor thanking people for their generosity and prayers. See related story. Dell'Orco tried to write personal letters, she said, but it was just too much.

There was so much support, Dell'Orco said, that she hasn't really been able to comprehend it all. She said she didn't believe that kind of overwhelming kindness existed today.

But obviously it does.

There were comments and gestures that she said were especially meaningful.

One note came from a prison inmate. He told Dell'Orco about traumatic turns in his life and how he wound up in jail.

It was a plea to me to handle things differently.

Senior citizens wrote Dell'Orco, explaining that they had little money to spare, but they wanted to help, so they took collections for the family.

Dell'Orco said she was also touched by a visit at the funeral home from a woman whose second grader recently died.

I thought it took a lot of strength for her to do that.

do something," Reed said. "They'll only do it for causes that they know are genuine. It will remind the people of what happened. A lot of people have said they have enough money, and I differ with that, because it will never be enough."

THE EXACT amount of money donated to the Dell'Orco's hasn't been released. However, Debbie Dell'Orco said $200,000 was donated to a fund set up by the township.

Tickets for Saturday's hockey game are $5 and will be available at Playball Cards and Comics, 35253 West Warren, west of Wayne or at the door the night of the game. For more information call, 326-3930.

The alumni also will be available for autographs after the game and some of the players are expected to have dinner at Legends Lounge in Montana's restaurant on Ford Road and Wildwood.

"The public is welcome to meet the players there," said Reed.

Mother thankful for community's support

The following is a letter written by Debbie Dell'Orco to the Observer editor.

"On the night of Dec. 22, a fire swept through our home in Canton Township taking the lives of six of my nine children: Bonnie, Sarah, Katie, Megan, Michael, and Robert, and my husband Marty. What began as a joyous Christmas season suddenly turned into tragedy.

"For my surviving children and me, the loss has been devastating and still seems unreal. However, in the first weeks since the fire, the outpouring of loving support from family, friends and many people from across the country has been staggering. It has given us the strength to begin to cope with our sorrow and the spirit to piece together and continue our lives.

> 'I cannot personally thank each of the many people who have written, donated food and money, and offered prayers and other forms of support. I hope this letter will reach those who went out of their way to help us.'

> — Debbie Dell'Orco

"I cannot personally thank each of the many people who have written, donated food and money, and offered prayers and other forms of support. I hope this letter will reach those who went out of their way to help us.

"The morning after the fire, some neighborhood children placed a homemade cross on the front lawn of my home, inscribed with the names of my family who perished the night before and the phrase, 'God bless them all.' Now I would like to say to those who kept our family in their hearts and minds and provided support in any way, 'God bless all of you.'"

City manager interview set

"Steve is interested in staying in Northville until his budget is through," Kenyon said. "I don't foresee this wrapping up in a couple weeks."

The commission considered the option of adding Walters' name to a list of prospective candidates. But commissioners — who went through an extensive search one year ago before hiring Jaeger — said they intended a less exhaustive search this time.

"Simplicity works really well for us," commissioner Jerry Vorva said. "Then if we're not satisfied we can go through a broader search."

Commissioner John Vos also suggested a shorter search.

"I was impressed with Steve Walters when we met last year," he said.

NORTHVILLE CITY government observers say Walters was a main force in that city's downtown renovation completed in the early '80s. That background could serve Plymouth well, as the city plans to begin a similar downtown renovation plan this fall.

"He's a real solid administrator," one Northville government observer said. "(Walters) is well-versed in municipal finances. He always has a good relationship with the council."

The Plymouth job "would have a lot of interesting challenges, there are similarities to Northville," Walters said.

"There may be some positive things in change from time to time."

Walters understands that along with Plymouth commissioners, he'll decide his possible future with Plymouth "in the next 30 days or so," he said.

JAEGER, THE long-time Battle Creek city manager who took the Plymouth post in May 1990, rents a flat in Plymouth while his wife Kay maintains the couple's home in Battle Creek, where Jaeger commutes on weekends.

His ties to Battle Creek, and concerns with commission delays in making decisions, have been cited as reasons for considering retirement as early as May 1.

Has Walters talked with Jaeger about what it is like to work as a city manager in Plymouth?

"We've talked in the past several times about several subjects," Walters said.

Therapists head home to help troubled kids

By Larry O'Connor
staff writer

An hour on the couch in a clinical setting usually doesn't get to the root of mental illness in children researchers found.

Instead, therapists would have to see the troubled youths in their natural settings.

As a result, Northwestern Communities Services developed an in-home treatment program for kids. Staff go into the child's home and school, sometimes up to three times a week for crises intervention.

The program is deemed a success. Of 45 kids receiving services last year, only eight were hospitalized.

"You see the clients where they are," said Mary Enger, program director for Northwestern Community Services, which also has offices in Canton Twp. and Inkster. "When you see a client in their traditional 50 minutes once a week, it's only what they're doing right now.

"When you see them in their home and you see them in their school, you see them in their natural setting."

This week's question

What advice would you give to the Iraqi people concerning the future of Saddam Hussein?

We asked this question at the Plymouth Post Office.

Joan Cooper
Plymouth

I'd like to see him step down from power and get some therapy. I pray for Saddam Hussein that he won't have selfish motives but will strive for their best interests.

Kim Lybarger
Plymouth

I think they should overthrow him even if they don't get anyone much better. I think it would help.

Kimber Masser

Of course I'd like to see him deposed somehow. I'd like to see the Iraqis be the ones to do it, or the Arab community — not us.

Airport debate spurs economic club's best turnout

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Canton attorney Bruce Patterson wore a referee's uniform Tuesday while he moderated a roundtable discussion.

The gag was directed at an argument between Canton Supervisor Tom Yack and Plymouth Township Supervisor Maurice Breen regarding public ownership of Mettetal Airport in Canton. The banter took place at Geneva Presbyterian Church during a Canton Economic Club luncheon before 96 spectators, the biggest crowd ever attracted to a club luncheon.

City of Plymouth Mayor Dennis Bila stressed the importance of cooperation among the communities.

He said Plymouth agreed to form a Joint Operating Agreement with Plymouth Township to run the airport in Canton, because it would be in the best interest of residents.

Yack calls the action a land grab.

"If one of us turns our back on something and says 'It's not for us,' and our neighbor decides to go forward," Yack said, "that's not the type of neighbor I would want to have."

Breen said it's unrealistic for Yack to focus on one piece of land and say the development of that land will make or break a community.

He compared Mettetal in Canton to the development of M-14 in Plymouth Township.

"We didn't want M-14 going across the middle of the township. Local governmental officials are not the kings. We derive the power from the state of Michigan."

If Canton and Plymouth townships along with the City of Plymouth are to be considered one community "you can't draw a line and say this is strictly mine and this is strictly yours," Breen said.

Plymouth Township went to Canton's aid a few years back by joining the Western Township Utilities Authority, Breen said. The sewer line for Canton, Plymouth and Northville townships protects development in Canton.

Yack said that if the tables were turned, Breen would adamantly fight the takeover.

WHILE THE barbs continued between Yack and Breen, Bila stressed the importance of cooperation.

"We know that we have to learn to cooperate with the governments surrounding us if we are going to survive," Bila said.

"I can't think of another issue that I've spent more time on than Mettetal," he said. "But I can think of a lot of issues that are more important. We are clearly the little guy here between two heavyweights."

Regardless of how the Mettetal issue is resolved, it shouldn't affect the community's ability to work on joint efforts, in areas like public safety and public works, Bila said.

In older communities like Plymouth, where there is a loss in the industrial and commercial base, Bila said, there is a need for shared services with surrounding communities.

Mayor wants public input on airport

Asked if Plymouth Township could sue the city for signing an airport agreement and then backing out — if Plymouth residents vote not to join the airport board — City Attorney Ron Lowe said, "I am not prepared to tell you you can't be sued for breach of contract."

When the commission agreed to delay the appointments to the airport board, Vos moved for a commission vote to rescind the earlier vote to buy and run the airport.

City Manager Gordon Jaeger said Plymouth Township could apply for grants to buy and run the airport on its own, and suggested that cooperation on the airport issue could encourage cooperation on merging city police and fire services.

The motion to get out of the Mettetal Airport agreement was voted down 6-1. Commissioner Jerry Vorva, who in January voted against joining the airport board, voted against doing so again.

lice is in charge of juvenile and sexual assault crimes. Northwest Community Services is one of two agencies, the Hawthorne Center is the other, where she refers offenders and victims.

"We want to make sure they get help as soon as possible," Moore said. "This is one of the places we refer them."

Engor said Northwestern Community Services is treating youths for a wide variety of problems.

SOME OF the more common problems are depression and adjustment reaction to trauma such as a death of a parent. The agency is not licensed to handle substance abuse therapy.

Children needing services range in age from 2 to 18, though clients tend to be early adolescents.

"We're no longer able to see the kind of child where there is a divorce and the child is kind of sad . . . That's the type of cases we used to see," Engor said.

Clients are referred to the program by parents, school personnel or law enforcement official. Children 14 years and older can seek help without parental consent.

Emergency situations are dealt with immediately.

The severity of cases today range from suicide attempts to fire starters, Engor said. She attributes part of the overall rise in mental illness of children to the disintegration of the family.

In many cases — Engor estimates at least 60 percent — substance abuse issues are usually involved, whether it be an alcoholic parent or one who is an adult child of an alcoholic. The in-home treatment program can detect a dysfunctional family better than a clinical setting would.

"THE TRADITIONAL thing was you'd bring in the kid and dealt with his problems," Engor said, "but you never dealt with the whole family."

Bila announces resignation

"It's not the Mettetal issue per se. It's what's happening secondarily to that.

"We have commissioners who are meeting privately with (Plymouth) township officials and with airport officials. The mayor hasn't been present in these meetings and neither has the city manager," said Bila, mayor since August.

"We have commissioners meeting privately with other commissioners along with other township officials to pressure people to change votes. This is all nonsense."

MEETINGS TUESDAY afternoon and Wednesday morning clinched his decision, said Bila, a mathematics professor at Washtenaw Community College.

"This morning has been the last straw. There was another meeting involving a township official and two or three commissioners related to a vote. They were trying to pressure one commissioner to change his mind."

Bila said he was asked Tuesday by an FAA official whether he'd be attending a 2 p.m. meeting.

"I told him I was surprised; I hadn't been invited and neither had the city manager."

ASKED WHETHER his decision could change, the mayor said, "Not really.

"I have support of my family. They know I've been very distressed over this. I've spent many sleepless nights. The commissioners are all good and decent people, but they obviously don't believe in the group process and obviously don't have respect for me as mayor.

"I love this city very dearly and I would have loved to have completed my term with honor and dignity."

Bila's term would have expired in November.

COMMISSIONER Jerry Vorva said he is shocked.

"Dennis is an incredibly strong person. I don't know what it was that caused him to do this, except that it's been a very trying period, from the Hank Graper episode on."

"I got my son back"

"I was at the end of my rope with Tim. It started out with skipping school. Then the running away and violent outbursts. After he got in trouble with the law, I knew we needed help."

Picking Brian's Brain

ON PERSONAL STYLE
It is very important that when the room or the home is done it looks like the client and it doesn't look like Brian Killian. If you look through my portfolio, you probably would not find two rooms that look alike. You would not recognize that one designer had done it all. And that's the most important thing.

ON LIFESTYLE
I really don't sell furniture. I sell life style, hopes, dreams, a way that people are going to live and raise their children. I always hope that the things I choose for them today are going to be those cherished things that will reflect a particular period of time in their life.

ON BUDGET
A designer's role is to assist a client with budget issues, where to spend money, where not to. A client of mine will hear me say "you don't need to spend that much money" as often as they will hear me say "you do need to spend the money."

ON THE DESIGN PROCESS
A designer's art is the ability to coordinate all of the other art families together. I've got a chair, I've got fabric and wallpaper, I've got color and a painter, I've got an electrician, all those things are my palette. And when I put them together I'm practicing my art.

ON USING MICHIGAN DESIGN CENTER
To me, the most important thing about the Michigan Design Center is the fabrics and wallcoverings. It puts us on a national par with New York or Los Angeles. If I open Architectural Digest and find a fabric that I love, I don't have to fly to Paris to get it. I just have to go over to Stutz Drive and it's there. That's where the Michigan Design Center gives us an edge.

Gov seeks office fund limits

Gov. John Engler said he is moving to end abuses of state legislative officeholder expense funds by proposing a set of voluntary restrictions.

Engler said his reforms would ensure greater accountability, more regular reporting and tougher enforcement provisions.

"Our ultimate goal is the elimination of OEFs," said Engler, praising Senate committee action to abolish OEFs.

"Until OEFs are abolished, however, they must be reformed," Engler said.

ENGLER PROPOSED to:

- Limit the types of expenditures which could be made by these funds to those acceptable under the federal Internal Revenue Code as business or charitable deductions — a more restrictive list than that currently afforded by the state administrative code.
- Mandate that OEFs be managed by a treasurer and chairman who are legally responsible for all receipts, expenditures and reporting on behalf of the fund.
- Mandate regular, periodic public reporting of all fund activity.
- Establish a mechanism for determination and enforcement of fund violation by providing a system of meaningful penalties, including civil fines.

HE ANNOUNCED creation of a Governor's Club — a fund that, among other things, will pay for services and items incurred by members of the executive office incidental to holding office which would otherwise be borne by the state general fund.

He said his Governor's Club fund will abide by his proposed reforms. It also will operate under more severe self-imposed restrictions — individual contributions of no more than $100 per year, no corporate or political action committee contributions, quarterly of receipts and expenditures.

This is not a cure-all. But it is an important step in cleaning up the OEF system and it leads the way toward the eventual elimination of officeholder expense funds," Engler said.

Senate debates reform bill

By Tim Richard
staff writer

Without a murmur, a Senate panel sent to the floor a bill to eliminate officeholder expense funds, a bane to political reformers.

State and local officeholders would be limited to using their campaign funds for incidental expenses now paid out of OEFs.

"Corporations can give to OEFs but not to campaign committees," supporter Karen Merrill of Common Cause, a liberal citizens group that frowns on corporate political influence, told the Senate Government Operations Committee.

The panel voted 5-0 to report out Senate Bill 32. Sen. Doug Cruce, R-Troy, joined the unanimous vote. It's due before the full Senate this week.

> 'Corporations can give to office holder expense funds but not to campaign committees.'
> Karen Merrill > Common Cause

THE BILL, sponsored by panel chair Phil Arthurhultz, R-Whitehall, was passed 34-1 by the Senate last year but died in the House. If it passes, OEFs would become history next Jan. 1.

Secretary of State Richard Austin also favors abolition of OEFs. "The expanded ban on corporate giving furthers Michigan's long-standing objective of eliminating undue corporate influence on elected officials," Austin said in a memo.

Austin said banning OEFs would slow the practice of one officeholder making a campaign contribution to a candidate.

Instead, officeholders would be limited using campaign funds once a year to buy a $100 ticket to another candidate's fund-raiser. Austin said this provision would abolish "an inequity between incumbents and challengers" because challengers can't have OEFs.

IF PASSED, the bill would require officeholders to dispose of leftover OEFs by giving the money to a tax-exempt charity or returning it to contributors.

The bill incorporates by reference a list of allowable expenditures drawn up by Austin's office.

"Does this prohibit expenditures for my district office?" asked Sen. John Kelly, D-Detroit.

"Your campaign committee could contribute to that," said Arthurhultz.

Besides district offices, politicians have used OEFs for tickets to civic functions. OEFs came under attack when it was revealed they funded many dubious entertainment expenses.

St. Patrick's Day Parade will honor U.S. soldiers

The United Irish Societies of Metropolitan Detroit will hold its 33rd annual St. Patrick's Day Parade at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 10, beginning at the corner of Michigan and Third, Detroit.

This year's parade will honor U.S. troops stationed in the Persian Gulf. Yellow ribbons will be distributed to marchers, along with traditional green shamrocks.

The First Michigan Colonial Fife and Drum Corps will also participate. The corps, founded in 1975, is the last U.S. Bicentennial unit still active.

Other groups scheduled to perform during the two-hour parade include Celtic Pipes and Drums of Birmingham, the Detroit Fire Department Clown Troupe, costumed members of the O'Hare School of Irish Dancers, Grosse Pointe Highlanders Roller Blade Moslem Temple Highlanders Pipe Band and other bands and special attractions. John Egan of Redford will appear as St. Patrick. Mike Sullivan of Farmington Hills is parade chairman.

Parade Grand Marshal Martin Fleming of Dearborn is credited with helping revive the parade in 1959. He has served as president of the Gaelic League and Irish American Club, was president of the United Irish Societies and supervised the parade for 10 years.

The 1991 parade theme is: "A Downtown Irish American Family Affair."

Toward that end, the parade will feature the second annual "Calling of the Clans." An invitation is extended to all area families of Irish descent to march in the parade.

Family members will receive information packets detailing the history of their family name in Ireland, get up-to-date information on St. Patrick's week activities and, perhaps, meet relatives they didn't know they had.

Individuals and families who wish to participate are invited to Electrical Workers Hall, 1358 Abbott, 12:30 p.m. on parade day.

The hall is east of Trumbull, three block south of Tiger Stadium. Marchers will leave for the parade at 1:45 p.m.

Irish Week will officially kick off Friday, March 8.

Additional information is available by calling the St. Patrick's Day Parade office, 471-1540.

Riegle says he'll run again for U.S. Senate

But locals are divided over his chances

JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Donald Riegle expects to run for the U.S. Senate again in 1994 — giving voters the final opportunity to pass judgment on the senator's controversial involvement with savings and loan tycoon Charles Keating Jr.

"I fully expect to (run again)," Riegle said last week during a session with Observer reporters and editors, apparently laying to rest any speculation about his political future.

Only two days earlier, a Senate ethics committee said Riegle used "poor judgment" in his relationship with Keating and that the relationship "gave the appearance of being improper."

But the committee found Riegle broke no laws, either in accepting campaign money from Keating — since returned — or in meeting with other senators and federal regulators to discuss Lincoln Savings and Loan, Keating's troubled, California-based S & L.

The ethics committee findings left Riegle's status as Senate Banking Committee chairman in tact.

Riegle believes his status as one of the Keating Five will quickly fade and area Denmocratic Party leaders agree.

"The 1994 election is a long way off," said Richard McKnight, chairman of the 15th Disrtrict Democratic Party organization. "He's got a lot of time, especially if he gets back to doing the kind of things he's been doing for Michigan."

Republicans, however, promise to make Rielgels' involvement with Keating a key campaign issue.

"Certainly it will pay a role in the campaign," said Harry Greenleaf, chairman of the 2nd District Republican Committee, the area's largest GOP organization. "No mater what, the committee found he used poor judgment and no politician wants to have that on his record."

Nontheless, Greeneleaf said Republicans will have to work hard to defeat Riegle. "He is a tough campaigner, he's very effective in that," Greenleaf said.

During Friday's meeting with Observer staff, a relaxed Riegle carried both the look and sound of a man who felt himself fully vindicated.

"IN TERMS of whether I did anything wrong, my answer is no," Riegle said in discussing his relationship with Keating. "In terms of doing things differently — with the benefit of hindsight, there are things I would do differently."

Chief among them, Riegle said, is that he wouldn't have allowed Keating to hold a fund raiser in his honor. The March 1987 event, at the Ponchartrain Hotel, raised $78,250 on behalf of Riegle's upcoming campaign.

Riegle, who returned the money in the wake of a newspaper investigation, said he had no knowledge the campaign money was entirely contributed by Keating and his subordinates — a point he made several times during the ethics committee investigation.

In fact, Riegle said, the event was more for Keating's benefit than his own.

"Charles Keating was greatly admired, the general impression was this was a guy doing important redevelopment work in Detroit," Riegle said. "I actually felt I was doing Keating a favor."

Now, Riegle said, he will no longer allow anyone with a potential conflict of interest, however slight, to be associated with his campaign events. He claims it's a position few other senators will take.

As for the meeting with regulators, Riegle has said the ethics committee found concerns about the way investigators were treating Lincoln Savings and Loan may have been legitimate.

If there's a problem, Riegle said, it's that federal elected officials have to spend increasingly large amounts of money in their campaigns.

Riegle said his own campaign fund ballooned from $800,000 in 1976 to $4.5 million for his most recent campaign.

While calling for federal campaign financing — similar to the way presidential campaigns are now financed — Riegle also acknowledged such a suggestion is seen as highly partisan. "Money is more of a problem for Democrats than Republicans," he said.

"Fund raising is the worst part of the job for all of us, believe it," Riegle said.

Area seminary deal called 'blessing'

By Tim Smith
staff writer

The transformation of Duns Scotus into a "world class" executive business conference center will not compromise the beauty of the 61-year-old Southfield landmark, the man in charge of the project said Tuesday.

"We are committed to the Franciscans and to the city," said developer Lawrence LoPatin at a press conference held at the former seminary. "If we're successful, when it is completed you won't know the old from the new."

After the conference, LoPatin said there will be some changes, including the removal of all religious artifacts on the building exterior. But stained glass and the chapel will remain.

LoPatin also said his company would not have proposed buying the 110-acre wooded site without assuring city officials that the longtime home of the Franciscans would not be destroyed or substantially altered.

"We would not have touched it had we not talked to the city first," said LoPatin, whose company reportedly bought Duns Scotus for $10 million. The company plans a $50 million development project at the site.

MEANWHILE, DUNS Scotus' days were numbered with or without a purchase deal, according to the Rev. John Bok, who heads the Franciscans' Cincinnati-based provincial headquarters.

Bok said he initiated the press conference primarily to clarify why the order thought it necessary to sell the landmark: A dwindling number of priests all but made it impossible to continue its chapel ministry, poverty program and Franciscan School of Evangelization there.

Those programs might eventually be relocated in Detroit, where Bok said there is more of a need. Also being considered is the expansion of St. Michael's parish in Southfield to accommodate some of the 3,000 people who regularly attend Duns Scotus.

"We're excited about the fact that the sale of the property allows us to leap forward in faith to do something very positive for the people of the Archdiocese of Detroit," Bok said.

The idea of keeping the chapel and friary open, even after a sale, also was rejected by Bok.

"That's just postponing the inevitable," Bok said. "What happens to the chapel when there are not enough Franciscans to staff it?"

BOK SAID the Franciscans of St. John the Baptist Province, of which Duns Scotus is a member, is "not attracting new vocations in large numbers."

There are only about 240 active friars in the province, which covers a 15-state area, he added.

Bok said that the deal with LoPatin was a "blessing. . . this place could have been closed down and deteriorated."

A purchase agreement was expected to be signed this week with the LoPatin group, Bok said. That deal might be completed by early 1992, until which the friars and programs will remain.

The developer must meet several requirements before that can happen, including site plan approval and obtaining the necessary zoning. The wooded site must be rezoned from its residential classification to accommodate the planned business center and adjacent golf course.

AT THE TIME a letter of intent was signed by the two sides in mid-January, Duns Scotus supporters vowed to block the rezoning.

LoPatin said the business center won't include D'Etre University's America-Japanese International College, which since January 1990 has leased a portion of Duns Scotus.

That was another concern for the friars. "We didn't really want to be landlords of this huge facility," Bok said.

D'Etre president David Friedrichs said the college is taking a "wait and see" stance until all terms of the sale are met.

LoPatin said he expects a meeting within a month between city officials and the architectural design firm being hired for the project. He would not disclose the company's name.

"WE WANT to show them what an executive conference center is," LoPatin said. "There are only about five in the country."

The planned project would not directly compete with other hotels in Southfield, but it would be a perfect complement to the 30 million square-feet of office space in Southfield, LoPatin said.

Leaving landmark Duns Scotus following Tuesday's press conference is the Rev. John Bok (right), of the Franciscan order's Cincinnati-based headquarters, and Harold Meininger, the real estate agent handling the sale of the former seminary to Southfield developer LoPatin & Co.

Anti-drug program slated

Members of AAL (Aid Association for Lutherans) Branch 2458 in Westland will sponsor a drug-education program, "Get Involved Before Your Kids Do," at 7 p.m. Monday at St. Matthew's Lutheran Church, 5885 Venoy, north of Ford.

The 2½-hour program is targeted to parents of children ages 9 to 14, though parents of older and younger children also may find the program helpful, organizers said.

The workshop will include a videotape presentation, group discussion and take-home activities for parents to use with their children. Scenes from the videotape, titled "Drug Free Kids," demonstrate parenting techniques necessary to help children stay away from drugs and alcohol.

For information about the program which is open to the public, persons may contact Pat Angove at 425-0261.

Supporters rally as arts funding dies

By Corinne Abatt
staff writer

THEY SANG, THEY CLAPPED, they listened, they questioned, but mostly they wept silent tears. It was a rainy Wednesday morning, and for them, the sun was setting on the glory days of the arts in Michigan.

About 100 supporters of the arts from across the state attended a rally at Arts Center in Lansing, sponsored by Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Michigan and Michigan Advocates for the Arts, to discuss the state of the arts.

Marilyn Wheaton, director of CCAM, chaired the rally. Dressed in a "Last Art Before Michigan" T-shirt, said the protest was held "to provide opportunity to be informed, to be inspired, to be empowered."

Ready with information were members of the arts community, legislators and arts lobbyist Richard J. Allen. Ortheia Barnes sang a set of Motown songs, with one, "There's a Winner in You," dedicated to Wheaton and other people in the arts.

Ortheia Barnes provided a special Motown brand of musical inspiration.

Allen explained the legislative process that led to deep cuts in arts funding. She said that a 9.2-percent cut in funding to all state programs, including arts funding, is now in effect. "This was passed by both houses and signed by Governor Blanchard," in December.

The new administration then issued an executive order that eliminated all grants and further cut funding to the Michigan Council for the Arts. This wasn't accepted by legislators.

Then, a freeze was put on any further payments of current grants. As a result, those promised payments for the rest of this fiscal year are in limbo, unsure when or if the payments will be made.

Allen suggested that legislators could be counting on the death of some programs, which would ease the arts-funding burden.

Meanwhile, back at the Capitol, Gov. John Engler will submit the 1991-92 budget today. Allen warned: "Expect that you will be treated abysmally. There will be practically nothing in it for you."

Allen predicted slow or no arts-funding payments in the current budget, and said he had little hope for any arts funding in the year ahead.

"You'll need overwhelming legislative support to combat line-item vetoes," Allen said. "We have to win them back. We can't spend the next two years trying to win veto overrides."

REP. JAN DOLAN, R-Farmington, defended the budget cuts while proclaiming her affection for the arts.

"The policy of the House and Senate has been to keep adding new programs with no thought of where the funding is coming from," Dolan said.

She urged arts advocates not to become polarized over the issue, "to work both sides of the aisle," and said there would eventually be an effort to restore some arts funding.

"We're going to put things back in the budget, but it's going to take both sides of the aisle," she said.

She said that one group favors total government funding of the arts, and that another believes in private funding only. "The middle group is where I'm coming from," she said.

Further advice came from Rep. Paul Baade, D-Muskegon, who listed attracting new businesses and tourism as two strong reasons for funding the arts.

Both flourish in a culturally exciting atmosphere, he said. Businesses like to be in places where there are museums and cultural activities and tourism thrives on festivals, theater and musical productions and other arts events, he said.

"It's not difficult to make a financial case for arts in the state's economy," he said.

Saying there are plenty of facts to support his contention, he told the audience, "Go for it. This is what they (legislators) understand and need to hear and see."

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington, voiced his own disillusionment just before speaking to the gathering.

"For 25 years, arts programs have made a tremendous difference to the people in our state. We have been a model to other states.

"This is a tremendous tragedy for the leadership to be totally destroyed because of the Governor's ideology. He never articulated this. It was not part of any political platform."

Opinions about the state of the arts in Michigan are exchanged in the hall by Rep. Jan Dolan(R-Farmington), left, Joe P. Bianco, Jr., execxutive vice president of the Founders Society of the Detroit Institute of Arts and Lisa Steele, director of marketing, Detroit Institute of Arts.

Sen. Jack Faxon, D-Farmington, and a fellow legislator wait their turn to speak at the rally for the arts in Lansing.

Marilyn Wheaton, executive director of Concerned Citizens for the Arts in Michigan, urged those attending the rally to make appointments to see their senators and representatives before the day was over.

Poison Prevention Week: March 3 - 9

The theme for National Poison Prevention Week is "Children Act Fast – So Do Poisons." The theme is part of a campaign to alert the public to the problem of accidental poisonings among children.

According to the Poison Prevention Week Council, more than half a million children swallow some medicine or household chemical each year. While most recover, at least 30 children die annually in poisoning accidents. When young children are crawling, they can find poisonous products such as drain cleaners under the kitchen sink. As children get older and are able to stand, they may reach for medicines on counter tops or open medicine cabinets.

If chemicals or household products have been swallowed, offer a small amount of water to the child. Then call a hospital emergency room of the local poison control center for advice as to whether or not to make the victim vomit. Keep a one-ounce bottle of ipecac syrup on hand for each child or grandchild in the home.

Poison prevention starts with keeping poisons out of the reach of children. When these products are in use, children should be observed closely. Keep poisonous products in their original containers. Medicines are best stored in a locked cabinet or on a high shelf out of children's reach.

Mental health clinic opens

Despite state cutbacks, mental health services in western Wayne County increased recently with dedication of Northwestern Community Services' new community outreach center in Canton Township.

The office is home to the agency's new crisis management team, case manager and in-house therapists.

All will work with troubled youngsters 18 and under. Communities to be served include Canton, Garden City, Inkster, Livonia, Northville, Plymouth, Redford, Wayne and Westland.

Offices are at 5820 N. Canton Center Road, in Suite 125 of the Canton Ford Crossing complex.

The agency received a $190,000 start-up grant from the Detroit-Wayne County Community Mental Health Board.

The new facility is one of four offices maintained by NCS throughout the county.

NCS, formerly Northwestern Guidance Clinic, has provided service to area resident for three decades. Its staff includes 50 full- and part-time social workers, psychologists and psychiatrists. Services are provided to nearly 1,500 youngsters.

Its respite care and Beacon day treatment programs are nationally recognized and used as models for other programs throughout the country.

Additional information is available by calling 425-6110.

Our troops

More than parades needed

The Plymouth-Canton area should look to see what other needs the returning troops have.

WHEN THE troops return we hope the Plymouth-Canton area does more than just roll out and the red, white and blue carpet. The communities should look to see what other needs the returning troops have.

Parades are nice. Nobody did them for Vietnam era veterans. They just got off a plane and went home. A parade acknowledges the sacrifices made by these service women and men. It gives them a focal point, a memory, a formal ceremony in their hometown.

But we think the Canton and Plymouth communities should go further. Local Vietnam era veterans who have the experience of dealing with war memories have said they will help counsel the returning veterans. We hope that happens.

Another group is trying to raise money by tapping corporations to make up for the pay lost by reservists called to duty. We hope that happens.

Other groups have been holding rallies and selling t-shirts in an effort to support the troops. We hope that continues.

The city of Plymouth has been decked out in red, white and blue and yellow ribbons. We hope they stay up.

It's easy to support the troops when the war is going well and it's on television every night. But we've got a short memory. The Gulf War will soon fade among talk of the economy and presidential politics.

That's why we're challenging the Plymouth and Canton communities to not only show their patriotism, but to show their humanity by putting together a support network for the returning troops.

It's the least they deserve.

Fund-raiser aids Dell'Orco family

LAST CHRISTMAS, the unthinkable happened to Debbie Dell'Orco of Canton. A fire swept through her home, taking the lives of her husband and six of their children. This remarkably strong woman somehow has managed to pick up the pieces and go on, building a new life for herself and her three surviving children.

After months of silence, Debbie Dell'Orco has come forward to say she couldn't have done it without the help of people in the community.

"I didn't believe that kind of overwhelming kindness existed today, but obviously it does," she said.

When asked how she's managed, she says she's summoned her strength from the many people who've supported her family.

While the community has given much, Jim Reed of Canton says it's not enough. He's organized a benefit hockey game for 6 p.m. Saturday, March 9, in the Westland Sports Arena on Wildwood north of Ford Road.

Red Wing alumni including all-stars Alex Delvecchio, Dennis Hextall, Nick Libett and Johnny Wilson will take on the Westland Over-35 squad.

Tickets, available at the door, are $5.

Here's a chance to show the Dell'Orcos that they can continue to rely on this community.

Bad policy

Don't exempt seniors from tax

ONE PART of Gov. John Engler's property tax reform is headed for trouble. Liberals and conservatives alike are saying it would be unwise to exempt senior citizens from school operating property taxes. Even some senior citizens admit it's bad policy.

The idea of exempting seniors has some superficial charm. "My kids are grown up. I don't have any kids in school. I've paid my share," the argument goes.

Once that can of worms is open, however, a parade of people will come forward and ask to be exempted from one tax or another:

- Young workers can ask to be let off the Social Security hook at least until they get closer to retirement age.
- "Doves" can ask to withhold the share of their taxes that goes for military purposes.
- The overwhelming majority who never file a civil lawsuit can ask to avoid taxes supporting the civil docket.
- Older folks will be back asking for a break from taxes for ball diamonds and wave pools that are used mostly by kids. . .

The list of services any one group doesn't use can become mind-boggling.

UNLESS HE only wanted to curry favor with one voting bloc, it's difficult to understand why Engler would even propose the idea. And there are far better ways to help those in need than exempting all seniors from school operating taxes.

Senior citizens would still be eligible to vote on millage proposals — Engler's proposal wouldn't change that. It would be patently unfair to allow seniors to vote on a tax they didn't have to pay.

On the contrary, it's good public policy for everyone to take an interest in public education. Older folks have shown strong charitable instincts in doing volunteer work for schools, serving on advisory committees and boards of education. They should stay interested.

The state Treasury Department estimates that the senior citizen exemption, if enacted, would cost $500 million annually by the time it's fully implemented in 1993. That is an enormous bite — the equivalent of another recession on the $7.4 billion state budget. Even the Headlee II property tax cut proposal, a more drastic plan than Engler's, doesn't contemplate exempting seniors entirely from school property taxes.

THE CHIEF FLAW in the plan is that it would pay an expensive benefit to an entire class of people whether or not they all need the benefit.

Engler already has proposed lifting the $1,200 per household ceiling on the "circuit breaker" — the income tax break for people who pay more than 3.5 percent of their household incomes in property taxes. He would raise the ceiling by $100 a year to a new ceiling of $2,500 and then increase that benefit with the rate of inflation. That idea is sound.

Such a tax break would be a justifiable benefit to people who retire and find their incomes reduced while their property taxes continue to go up. It would go a long way to helping them remain in their present homes.

Michigan's property tax is burdensome. Our rates are high. In prosperous areas like the suburbs, assessments have increased faster than general inflation, certainly faster than paychecks.

Engler and legislators from both parties are correct in saying state government should devote a larger part of its budget to education. Twenty years ago the state was spending half its budget on schools, community colleges and education. Today education gets about one-third of the budget. The results have been higher property taxes and higher college tuitions.

The correct solutions would be to lower property taxes generally and cap assessment increases that homeowners have endured. The "generation gap" in America is wide enough without fueling it by giving one generation a $500 million break.

Homefront becomes a battlefield in war, too

America, a country unfamiliar with casualties on the homefront, has typically neglected those who continue to fight our wars long after the treaties have been signed, the flags and ribbons put away and the memorials erected.

Steve Barnaby

The image is all too clear. We've seen it before. We know we shall see it again. A woman, in mourning, stands surrounded by a coterie of family and friends.

A soldier, in great military style, presents her with a folded flag, recently draped over the casket of her son or husband. The image fades and soon the public forgets about the woman and the flag.

War offers up a multitude of wounds. Some heal in days, some months and others take years. Most can be mended with sufficient medical care.

But America, a country unfamiliar with casualties on the homefront, has typically neglected those who continue to fight our wars long after the treaties have been signed, the flags and ribbons put away and the memorials erected.

Marian Faye Novak changes all that. And those who seek a deeper understanding of war and the dirty scars it leaves, should pick up a copy of her newly published book, "Lonely Girls With Burning Eyes."

IT WOULD be nice to believe that Ms. Novak is writing only about another time. But, in truth, what happened to her and the small group of friends in the 1960s is just as relevant and lasting as the history of war through the ages.

Her story, sculpted around the Vietnam War, could have just as easily been the Civil War, World War I, World War II, the Korean War and the Persian Gulf.

With great emotion and authority, she writes about soldiers torn away from families, young men killed and young men coming home, unmercifully transformed into persons mysteriously different.

But most importantly, she is writing about the almost-suffocating isolation felt by wives who struggle to survive, to heal their wounded soldiers, bodies scarred by shrapnel, psyches wounded by the sheer devastation of the war experience.

Like many military wives, Ms. Novak spent endless hours, which migrated into the tedium of endless days, waiting for her husband to come home, with little understanding from those around her of the nightmare she was living.

Although psychologically wounded, her husband made it back home.

"The homefront had become a battleground for me, I couldn't leave the battlefield," she says.

AS MS. NOVAK so ably tells us, the real war for many wives only begins after the peace treaties are signed. The battlefronts often are their living rooms and bedrooms, where dreams are challenged and often shattered. All too often, treaties are signed in divorce courts or in drug and alcoholic treatment centers, years after the shooting stops.

If you have ever been through the experience, reading Ms. Novak's story will make you remember, it will make you laugh, it will make you cry and it will make you understand, better than ever, the real tragedy of war.

If you are a person who wants to gain a deeper understanding of what war does to personal relationships, why a person you love may have a tough time dealing with emotions, you'll want to read this book.

"I've had to find a way to live with the memories," she said in a recent interview. "That is what made me who I am."

And with her book, Ms. Novak will help many others live with the memories. And for those of us who know, we can only say, "thanks."

Stand up for children

To the editor:

The foster care system is well on its way to being a total shambles due to 22 percent DSS budget cuts. These cuts will cause irreparable damage to the children in the system: foster parents will not be able to provide adequate food, shelter and clothing for these youth; agency staff will be unable to adequately provide services to children and families due to increased caseloads and decreased resources; and our social as well as economic costs will increase.

The vast majority of Michigan's foster parents have decided to "strike." Some may question this as a moral and ethical decision: who will care for the children? But, to me, a higher moral value is to refuse to hurt the children even further by accepting more responsibility for children who cannot be adequately cared for.

The true morality is to work together to rebuild the moral and social foundations of our society starting with our children. We must make sure that no child grows up poor or without adequate child care, health care, food, shelter, education and that they ar safe from neglect, abuse and violence. Failure to do so will bring our state to its ecomomic knees and increase violence, crime and homelessness. The problems of these children pose a greater threat to American security, prosperity and ideals than any external enemy.

The time to stop the tide of increased social costs is now. Do your part to stop the DSS budget cuts. Let your legislators and the Governor know that you are willing to stand up for children.

'Let's wave the flag intelligently'

To the editor:

I wholeheartedly agree with your Feb. 28 editorial about the right to dissent, especially as it applied to Bishop Thomas Gumbleton and the war in the gulf.

About a month ago, I attended a lecture by Bishop Gumbleton regarding the Persian Gulf War and I know that if people were given a chance to hear his presentation in its entirety, instead of fragmented quotations, they would be less willing to banish him to South America.

He gave us the historical background of the dispute between Iraq and Kuwait, laid out conditions necessary to call a war just, and allowed us to form our own conclusions about whether these conditions applied to the war in the Gulf.

Let us wave the flag intelligently. Let's not allow feelings of patriotism to resemble the notions of nationalism, or the attitude of might makes right; or, my country, right or wrong.

As you correctly stated, wars are the result of diplomatic failure. And, President Bush, it seems to me, showed no interest or made no attempt to negotiate.

The results of that failure will be felt for decades to come.

Scheduling was poor

To the editor:

I would like to say what bad planning I feel the High School had in scheduling the 9th grade Orientation night on Ash Wednesday. This is a Christian community, and I really resented the fact that they felt compelled to choose that date, with all the other dates available to them. It also was unfair to ask the teachers to miss a very important church service, as it begins the Lenten season.

Reformers push for 'compact' House districts

Tim Richard

IT'S NOT news that Michigan's 17th and 18th Congressional Districts are among the most gerrymandered in the United States.

Gerrymandering is the custom, nearly as old as the Bill of Rights, of misshaping legislative districts to concentrate an opponent's strength in as few districts as possible.

"Moreover, gerrymanders will only get worse — that is, more effective — as computer software and hardware grows in power and sophistication," say two professors in a paper published by The Heartland Institute, a conservative think tank based in Chicago.

THE 18TH DISTRICT takes in a corner of northwest Macomb County, meanders in an S-shaped curve across Oakland County and ends in the Brighton area of southeastern Livingston County. It was arranged to give 70 percent margins to Republican Bill Broomfield.

The 17th is shaped like a fly's leg, starting in the middle of the Royal Oak area, turning southwestward through Southfield, dropping south through Redford Township and northwest Detroit, and ending with a toe in Inkster. It's safe for Democrat Sander Levin.

What's news is that the Heartland study puts numbers on these machinations.

We all have known, since the 1964 U.S. Supreme Court ruling, that districts should have nearly equal populations. In Michigan they're also supposed to minimize the number of communities cut apart.

The Heartland study by Daniel Polsby, a Northwestern University law professor, and Robert Popper, a New York City litigation attorney, proposes a new standard: compactness.

They measure compactness by the ratio of a figure's area to the length of its perimeter. By this standard, the most compact figure in the world is the circle. It is assigned a score of 1.0.

You figure the area of a congressional district; calculate the perimeter (circumference) of a circle with the same area; measure the district's perimeter; and divide the circle's perimeter by the district's. The score will range from zero to 1.0 in a circular district.

Michigan's 18th gets a score of .325 and the 17th gets .348. Ohio's 19th and 20th get .104 and .170 respectively. The lower the number the less compact the district is and the more reason to suspect gerrymandering.

SEN. DOUG Cruce, R-Troy, and this writer received early copies of the study. Cruce is an important figure because he chairs the Senate Local Government and Reapportionment Committee, making him the GOP's point man on congressional and legislative redistricting.

"I tend to agree with the authors," Cruce said, "but I'm not sure the courts will buy the idea.

"Courts will deal with those issues that have direct impact on the rights of people. They've looked at the integrity of district boundary lines. I'm not sure the courts would look at it (compactness) the same way as the authors."

Michigan Democrats have made a big thing of equal populations. Their last legislative plan in the '80s broke 46 county lines and 40 city and township lines. The plan that was finally adopted broke only 10 county and 13 municipal lines.

MICHIGAN IS due to lose two of its 18 congressional districts by 1992. The average district will have 590,000 souls.

Detroit Democrats are adamant that they have two congressional districts in their city of barely 1 million.

Oakland Republican chair Jim Alexander also wants two self-contained districts for his bailiwick of 1.1 million. Currently, Oakland has portions of five districts.

Cruce may be right. In this atmosphere, political integrity will rank above compactness.

Tim Richard reports regularly on the local impact of state and regional news.

Rules are rules, after all

Jack Gladden

ONE WAY TO take your mind off the war is to get involved in some good, old-fashioned American bureaucracy.

I'm not talking about high-level, government stuff, just petty annoyances — the kinds of things that typify everyday life in America. Like trying to . . . well, let me start at the beginning.

My wife, who visits our local library at least once a week — sometimes two or three times — had asked that a book be put on reserve for her. On Friday, after she got home from work, she found the mailed notice that the book had come in and the library was holding it.

It was too late to pick it up Friday night. Saturday was hectic and she didn't get to the library. Our daughter had a friend sleep over Saturday night, and they had been promised a trip to a movie on Sunday. The film of choice? "Kindergarten Cop."

I PROMISED to clean the house, scrub the floors, cook dinner and run any necessary errands if I could be excused from this particular field trip. I just wasn't ready for Arnold Schwarzenegger as an undercover cop turned kindergarten teacher. Besides, by Sunday morning the streets were icy and I figured this would lessen the amount of driving that each of us had to do.

My request was accepted on condition I buy a Sunday New York Times, pick up a prescription for my wife at the local drug store, return a half-dozen books to the library and check out the book that was being held for her.

Everything went fine — until I got to the library.

I shoved the books I was carrying into the return slot and moved to the new books area to see what was in. I decided to check out "Tenured Radicals" for the third time. Maybe this time I would actually read it.

There were no new computer books, so I got in line at the circulation desk. When it was my turn I handed the librarian my library card, the copy of "Tenured Radicals" and the notification slip that my wife's book had come in.

SHE TOOK THE slip, found the book on the reserved shelf and returned to the counter.

"Do you have your wife's library card?" she asked.

I said I didn't.

"I'm sorry," she said, "but I can't give you the book unless you have her card. She reserved it on her card."

"I know," I said. "I forgot to bring it. But we've done this before. I don't know how the other librarian handled it, but she canceled out something in the computer so I could take the book on my own card."

"I'm sorry," she said. "The computer doesn't recognize family relationships."

ON MY WAY out I stopped at the information desk and left a note in the suggestion box. The clerk at that desk, after listening to my story, said, "Well, you may not have any secrets in your house, but some people don't want their spouses to know what books they're checking out and we have to respect that."

"Oh, sheesh!" I thought. "Is this a library or the Department of Social Services?"

Out in the parking lot, still feeling irritated, I noticed the dozens of yellow ribbons waving from every light post. I thought about the war again.

I thought about the single-minded computer and the recalcitrant librarian. And I felt a little silly.

"It's better than dodging Scud missiles," I muttered to myself.

What makes good teachers?

Doc Doyle

Question: My high school friends and I were discussing what makes a real good teacher. They can all be so different. We also argued what we thought was their hardest tasks. We think we know but thought we would ask anyway.

Answer: There have been many studies on this issue. Anyone who has ever attended high school can identify with the findings of those studies. The major qualities middle and high school students see in what they call "real good teachers" include:

- Those teachers who can relate what is being learned to the "real world." High school students always want to know how this class will have an impact on their future lives. "Why do I need this class?" is the ongoing question from students. And those teachers who do relate what they are about in the classroom to the real world have a great edge over those who are just teaching a subject.
- Contrary to students' typical bad mouthing of "tough" teachers, they want and respect those teachers who challenge them the most. In one national study a majority stated their best teachers pushed them until they reached their own personal excellence.
- The hardest job students said teachers have is keeping them motivated. Indeed, it is definitely a major chore to continually hold a students' interest, especially during these long, dark, cold days between the winter and spring vacation break.

TYPICAL COMMENTS by secondary students in a national study by IBM included:

- "I feel a good teacher is one that listens and cares. My teacher, Mr. X, is the best in the country."
- "Mrs. Y does not pick favorites. She cares and seems to enjoy her students as real people."
- "Mr. H devotes hours of his own free time for his students. He stays after school. He radiates excitement in his teaching and the excitement is picked up by us."

Elementary students said:

- One seven-year-old said, "She listens, looks me in the eye and doesn't wander off when I'm talking to her."
- And the five-year-old kindergarten girl who summed it all up said, "She's special because we like her."

Guard members sue state

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Ten current members, and one former member, of the Michigan National Guard are suing the state for back pay seeking a class action lawsuit for all state guard members who have served in the past decade.

Though none of the guardsmen are currently stationed in the Persian Gulf, the suit could eventually include the 15,000 Michigan guard members sent overseas, said Jeanne Stempien, the Livonia-based attorney representing the guardsmen.

"The state has been underpaying its guardsmen since 1981," said Stempien.

The suit alleges that state failed to pay a $2-per-day fee to guard members assigned to outdoor training.

"Those individuals — whether they went to Saudi Arabia or not — completed that training and, as such, are entitled to the money," Stempien said.

The suit alleges the state illegally eliminated the fee and that various state officials have promised guard members payments would resume at an unspecified future date.

"WE'RE TALKING about $30 per member per year," she said. "Had it been paid as it should, it would have cost the state $250,000 to $300,000 per year."

It will now cost the state more than $4.5 million, Stempein said, if the suit is successful.

The 11 guard members include one member, and one former member, of the Air National Guard. Stempien said she didn't believe any were assigned to the guard's Livonia post.

The case has been assigned to Judge James R. Giddings of the Ingham County Court of Claims.

The state's response to guard members' allegations was expected to be filed Tuesday.

Lawmaker seeks more study on assisted suicide issue

By Tim Richard
staff writer

State Sen. David Honigman, R-West Bloomfield, is trying to head off a bill making assisted suicide a felony — a measure some consider "unduly harsh."

"Many legislators are uncomfortable with the uniform treatment" of making all assisted suicide a four-year felony, Honigman told a news conference minutes before Senate Bill 32 was reported out of committee.

Honigman and Rep. Tom Power, R-Traverse City, want to set up an 18-member "Commmission on Death and Dying" to study data on voluntary suicides, causes, the role of alcohol and drugs, the roles of disease and disability, legal and moral questions.

"I can't see throwing an 80-year-old woman in prison for four years," said Honigman, "when her dying husband, in excruciating pain, begs her to hand him a bottle of pain killer that he says will end his life.

"Even the threat of prosecution is too harsh."

BUT THE BILL by Sen. Fred Dillingham, R-Fowlerville, would punish her, Honigman added.

Dillingham's bill won 5-2 approval in the Family Law Committee. Supporters included Robert Geake, R-Northville, Jack Welborn, R-Kalamzoo, Doug Carl, R-Utica, and Chris Dingell, D-Trenton.

Opposed were Virgil Smith, D-Detroit, and Debbie Stabenow, D-Lansing.

Dillingham scoffed at delaying action for a lengthy study, calling Honigman's commmission "a lot of hoopla."

"We solve nobody's problems by not taking action. The judges were very, very specific that the issue needed to be decided quickly in the Legislature," Dillingham said. He referred to two Oakland County judges, one of whom dismissed a murder charge against Dr. Jack Kevorkian and another who slapped an injunction on Kevorkian's use of a heart-stopping suicide machine.

Dillingham said his bill is aimed at Kevorkian and those "who make a business of assisting suicide."

SB 32 would amend the penal code to make it a four-year felony for a person who "provides the means by which another person attempts or commits suicide (or) acts as a participant in a suicide or attempted suicide."

Suicide itself is not a crime.

Dillingham's bill is due on the Senate floor next week. If adopted, it would take effect in 1993.

STABENOW SAID she will support Honigman's measure.

"Four years for passing a bottle of pills?" she said, echoing Honigman's speech. "I know he (Dillingham) intends to go after Dr. Kevorkian, but the net is way too broad."

Smith called Dillingham's bill "a knee-jerk reaction," saying present law is adequate.

"Look at it as placing a moratorium on the issue until someone comes up with a solution," Dillingham replied.

Committee sets hearing on veteran benefits

Veteran's benefits, including those for veterans of Operation Desert Storm, will be discussed 7-9 p.m. Monday, March 11, at VFW Post 9568, Romulus.

Members of the Wayne County Commission Veterans Services subcommittee will discuss current and proposed federal and state benefits, veteran's service organization programs and employment and training opportunities for veterans.

Kay Beard, D-Inkster, is the committee chairwoman. Beard's district includes Westland and Garden City. Other members include Shirley Poling, D-Canton.

The VFW Post is at 39270 Huron River Drive, near Northline and Hannon Roads.

Additional information is available by calling Beard's office, 224-0902, or Poling's 224-0944.

Artists take to the stage

STUDENT ARTISTS in the Plymouth-Canton community have talent to spare.

That's plain to see from watching the Damaris Student Fine Arts Awards competition. The annual program, sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council, is for sixth through ninth graders.

Nearly 90 students signed up this year. Performing arts students appeared before the judges Friday and Saturday, March 1 and 2, in the Little Theatre at Plymouth Canton High School in Canton. Some were a bit nervous, but did just fine when their time on stage came.

"I think it's difficult for them to take the responsibility to carry the whole thing through from beginning to end," said Nancy Cooper of Plymouth, Damaris Awards chairwoman. "It's a beginning for competition for them."

THE COMPETITION for dance, drama and piano was Friday afternoon. Saturday's schedule included competition for vocal and other instrumental music performers.

Some parents, siblings and friends came along for the performing arts competition, applauding enthusiastically and making the young artists' task a little bit easier.

Family ties span time, distance

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Driving from North Carolina to Michigan takes about 11 hours, but for Dolores Moser making the trip was worth it.

Moser and her husband, Wayne, traveled north last week for a long-awaited family reunion with Betty Tanguay of Plymouth Township. Moser, 60, and Tanguay, 65, hadn't seen each other since they were girls during the 1930s.

"I am so excited. I can't sit down hardly to talk," Tanguay said. "I never thought I'd see them again. I just thought they were gone forever.

"My mother died when I was a little girl and my sister took me to raise up in Virginia," said Tanguay, who works as a coat checker at the Mayflower Hotel in Plymouth. Her older sister, Dolores Moser's mother, died a few years later of tuberculosis.

Tanguay's father wasn't able to care for her, so she left Virginia to go live with her brother and his family in Kentucky.

MOSER AND her sister, Thelma, hadn't seen their aunt since their mother's funeral in 1934. Their father died following surgery a few years after their mother's death. The girls grew up in Virginia and didn't have contact with their aunt, who's just a few years older.

Thelma Moser, 62, of Norfolk, Va., is married to Wayne Moser's brother, Edward. They weren't able to visit last week, but Tanguay, who is widowed, plans to go to Norfolk for a reunion later this year.

"I've been trying to find her all these years," said Dolores Moser, who lives in Hendersonville, N.C., near Asheville. Every time she visited her sister, Moser would say "Let's look for Aunt Betty."

The two would choose a town and call the telephone operator, trying to find people named Thurman. Thoroman was Betty Tanguay's maiden name, and the difference in spelling got them off the track for some time.

Thelma Moser met a sailor in Norfolk named Thurman. He had a book on the Thurmans of Ohio, and the Mosers took names from that book

Deployment of military women creates dilemmas

By Julie Brown
staff writer

Elaine Donnelly was impressed with the bravery of women soldiers in the Persian Gulf war.

"I have a great admiration for the courage and ability of these women," said Donnelly, an activist in the Michigan Republican Party and former member of the Pentagon's Defense Advisory Committee on Women in the Services. "They're doing a fine job. They are patriotic and they are capable."

Donnelly, a Livonia resident, served on the DACOWITS civilian advisory group from 1984 to 1986. She visited a number of military bases during that time and attended Pentagon briefings.

She and her husband have two college-age daughters, neither of whom have served in the military.

"Women have always been involved in war," Donnelly told those at a Thursday, Feb. 28, meeting of the Livonia Republican Women's Club. "They have always given patriotic service to our country."

NEVER BEFORE have so many women served in so many nontraditional roles, she said.

"Women are very, very close to combat right now." The expanded role of women in the military has created dilemmas.

"The children are suffering, according to the psychologists," Donnelly told those at the luncheon, held at Ernesto's in Plymouth. "What we are witnessing is a massive wartime social experiment. We have to remember children cannot fight their own battles."

A recent Associated Press poll indicated 64 percent of respondents were opposed to mothers of young children serving in a war zone.

"Can you imagine the orphans being left behind if both parents are lost?"

Proposed legislation to allow exemption of one of two military parents or of a single parent from deployment to a combat zone sounds compassionate on the surface, she said. In fact, however, it has more to do with careerism than compassion.

"That's a double standard." Such a policy would allow some people to have all the benefits of military service without any of the wartime burdens.

"What are these military commanders supposed to do?"

DONNELLY FAVORS physical strength tests for those in near-combat support jobs. Such tests should be sex-neutral, she said, and should be used to determine who's most qualified.

"The issue is national defense. We can't live in a dream world. The main issue is who can do the job and do it best."

Recruiting policies should be changed, to ease pressure on recruiters to sign up so many women. The Defense Department needs to confront the political forces and realities that have led to such pressure, she said.

"In a nuclear age, conventional war is more likely, not less likely." Some military jobs require considerable physical strength, and women would be at a disadvantage if required to move quickly over rough terrain with heavy equipment.

Donnelly doesn't doubt that many servicewomen could throw themselves on a grenade to save others. They must, however, also be able and willing to throw that grenade far enough, she said.

Fraternization in the military is a reality, and leads to pregnancy, dual-service marriages and child care problems, she said. She favors a return to an earlier policy of providing an honorable discharge for a servicewoman who becomes pregnant.

"Readiness depends on baby-sitters, it really does."

DONNELLY ADMIRES the stoic willingness of servicewomen and their families, but believes gender differences must be acknowledged.

"I think we need to be honest with young women about this, so that they are not misled. Some women are suited for military life, but some are not. The military is not just another equal opportunity employer."

The needs of enlisted women — not just officers — must be considered, she said.

It's not known just yet how well it worked out having servicewomen in Operation Desert Storm.

"We probably won't find out until it's all over," said Donnelly, who is a member of the local Republican Women's Club, which takes in Livonia, Plymouth and other western Wayne County communities. "We really do have to sort it all out and reconsider this."

Jeanne Fitzgerald, club president, enjoyed Donnelly's presentation.

"I thought it was excellent, very timely," said Fitzgerald, a Livonia resident. She has two daughters who previously served in the Army.

"So I have a personal interest in it." Fitzgerald's proud of her daughters, but has a hard time visualizing them fighting in a war.

"It's hard to make a decision." Women shouldn't get military jobs they're not qualified for, although some can lift 200 pounds and handle nontraditional assignments, she said.

Fitzgerald worries about single parents in the military and others who must leave young children behind.

"That presents another problem entirely."

Reunion

Phone call brings woman joyful tidings

and began searching.

"We mailed letters all over the United States to these names," Dolores Moser said. They got a few replies, but didn't have any luck finding their aunt.

A couple years ago, Moser and her husband went to Cincinnati on business. They had some free time, and she found Peebles, Ohio, her birthplace, on the map.

THE MOSERS drove to Peebles, parked on Main Street and went into a furniture store. An older woman there knew of some local Thoromans, a school teacher who lived nearby and the teacher's mother.

The Mosers met those two, and were then able to track down a cousin in West Union, Ohio, a retired professor in her 80s who keeps up with the family's history.

"So I talked to her a long time," Moser said. The cousin, Grace Thoroman Sproull, said she'd put a query in a genealogy publication, asking for information on Betty Tanguay's late brother, Albert.

"A cousin of ours read it," Moser said. "Within three days, Grace had an answer from a cousin in Huntington, W.Va." The cousin, Bob McGinn, knew Betty Tanguay was living. He had her address in Michigan, but didn't know her last name or telephone number.

Some family records had indicated Betty was dead, but Dolores Moser was convinced that wasn't so. Moser was able to track her aunt down with the help of the Wayne County sheriff's department.

At first, Tanguay thought the call from the sheriff's department could be a prank; she hadn't seen Moser since they were young girls. She soon realized it was the real thing. Lengthy phone calls followed, and within 10 days or so the Mosers came to Michigan to see Tanguay.

TANGUAY'S BEEN widowed three times, and the name changes made the search more difficult. Tanguay has no children of her own, although she has several stepchildren and is close to a stepdaughter who lives in Redford.

"I've got lots of friends here." Tanguay has a brother in Louisiana, but doesn't have many family members closer to home.

TAMMIE GRAVES/Observer & Eccentric

Pastors learn to overcome stage fright

By Arlene Funke
special writer

The Rev. Leland Seese remembers how petrified he felt when his father first came to hear him preach.

"I wanted badly to impress him," said Seese, 32, associate pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Plymouth.

Seese, who was attending the seminary at the time, couldn't seem to get his thoughts on paper. He finally wrote his message. But when he stepped into the pulpit he realized he had left his notes behind.

"I just got up and prayed," said Seese, a Plymouth resident. "I babbled something."

SEESE HAS become more confident since his student days at Princeton Theological Seminary in New Jersey. But he still has sweaty palms and a parched mouth when he steps up to preach.

The Rev. Emery "Kip" Gravelle of Westland, vicar of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Spirit in Livonia, had a "captive" audience for his first sermon. Gravelle, who also was a student, spoke to a group of jail inmates in Connecticut.

"It was the worst sermon I ever gave," joked Gravelle, 50, a 1958 graduate of Redford Union High School in Redford. "It was scholarly and, I would even say, pedantic. Most of them were sound asleep after the second paragraph."

SOME SURVEYS have indicated that the number one fear — among all people — is speaking before an audience.

"I think it's performance anxiety," Seese said.

Divinity schools and seminaries, recognizing the importance of effective communication, help students prepare for speaking to audiences.

"Counseling is important," said the Rev. Roy Forsyth, assistant pastor of Newburg United Methodist Church in Livonia.

"But Sunday worship service is the highlight of the week," said Forsyth, 61, a Livonia resident. "One way or another, you're looking to touch their lives and help them, even if it's just encouragement."

Forsyth spends hours preparing and practicing his sermon because "I don't want to feel overconfident. I always have a little trepidation when I go in."

SEMINARY STUDENTS study the Scriptures. They must become familiar with such ancient languages as Greek and Hebrew so they will be able to read original texts.

To polish their speaking skills, students must give practice sermons and readings, which are taped and critiqued.

Several denominations follow a three-year liturgical calendar, covering the major scriptural readings. Sermon topics often are based on those readings.

"I LIKE to use the nervousness as a positive force," said 37-year-old Morris Meseke of Canton, now in his third year at Concordia Seminary in St. Louis, Mo.

Meseke, a former medical technologist, is serving as vicar of the Risen Christ Lutheran Church in Plymouth. He expects to graduate from the seminary next year and become an ordained minister of the Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod.

"People want a scriptural message that they can apply to their lives," Meseke said. "We are handling something very precious. It is truth and it is preached in its purity. And that takes preparedness."

A little bit of nervousness goes with the job, said the Rev. Paul Kopka, 30, pastor of Augsburg Lutheran Church in Redford. Kopka, who graduated from the seminary in 1986, tries to "interact with the word of God" when giving sermons, he said.

AT AUGSBURG, Kopka ministers to a small congregation of 120 people. He enjoys the intimacy of his small group, which is different from an earlier assignment.

Kopka served at a Detroit church that received financial aid from large, prosperous congregations. He had to visit and talk to those groups.

"By the spirit of God I didn't lose (composure)," Kopka said.

The Rev. Paul Wilson of Livonia, a minister for 26 years, said his preaching style changed dramatically after he took a Dale Carnegie human relations course.

HE LEARNED the personal growth and effectiveness that stems from sharing his own experiences with the congregation.

"That was a catalyst in my life," said Wilson, 49, pastor of the Livonia Wesleyan Church. "Without experiences, we don't live. It is costly to tell your own story, because you become vulnerable then."

Wilson uses personal experiences to illustrate passages from the Bible.

"When you are put in the place of adviser, it is critical to say the right thing, which will help them," Wilson said. "Something could be miscalculated and somebody lose a beautiful plan for their life."

SEESE AGREES that choosing words carefully is imperative. He recently preached a sermon that, if handled improperly, might have offended some members.

"It was right after the war broke out," Seese said. "The sermon suggested that as Christians we can't be looking at this war as a good thing. It might be a necessity."

The sermon was well received, he said. Several members of the congregation asked for copies.

Seese, whose nervousness fades when he begins making eye contact with his audience, said his greatest advice came from a professor at the seminary.

"He said that people have tremendous needs," Seese said. "Get up there and say something significant."

A PASTOR may never know how many lives are touched by a sermon, several said.

"A preacher only plants the seed," Kopka said. "How it is received is only his or her own business."

Forsyth, a longtime minister, said he can tell when his audience is responding.

"There is quietness," Forsyth said. "People are sitting on the edge of the pew."

AN EFFECTIVE sermon can both comfort and spur people to action, Gravelle said.

Many members of his congregation are active in outreach programs, including the First Step shelter for battered women in western Wayne County. They also support agencies that provide services to homeless and indigent people in the Cass Corridor of Detroit.

"A lot of it is 'How do you apply the Gospel message?' We believe that our worship opens us to God's message," Gravelle said. "The sermon opens the door. It's a reminder to people to minister (to others)."

Modern medicine: It raises thorny questions moral perspectives

Rabbi Irwin Groner

Today, modern, high-tech medicine is forcing an awesome responsibility on hospitals and society as well.

Physicians today have at their disposal an arsenal of equipment to prolong life, even to push back the boundaries of nature.

When should new medical technology be used and when should nature be allowed to take its course? Should physicians disconnect respirators from comatose patients? Should life-saving surgery be performed on an infant who will probably be profoundly retarded for life? How can donor organs be distributed fairly?

Every day in hospitals across the country, physicians are required to wrestle with thorny questions like these in a profession where saving lives and alleviating suffering has always been the paramount consideration.

IN A NUMBER of medical institutions in the United States, basic issues like these are being addressed by "doctors" with special training.

But these particular "doctors" are not part of the medical community; they are doctors of philosophy, theology and ethics, engaged because of their ability to ponder complex issues, to evaluate life and death matters, to help physicians and the medical community make hard choices.

These bio-ethicists, as they are sometimes called, don't treat patients, prescribe medication or diagnose illnesses. Their job is to analyze medical dilemmas and provide physicians and hospitals with appropriate conceptual frameworks.

CONSIDER THE phenomenon that man has now reached a frontier where he can create life and control its development. We are at the boundary of a radical breakthrough in genetic research and genetic manipulation.

Who is to make the decision who shall live and who shall die? Who is to decide what type of existence it shall be? We are at the edge of a biological revolution just as dramatic as the release of nuclear energy only a generation ago.

Once we travel this technological road, we cannot turn back. As a bio-ethicist said, "Once they have bitten into the fruit of the tree of knowledge, there can be no return to Eden."

SOME OBJECT to man's interference with nature, for he ought not play God.

It is interesting to recall the reaction of people when the first railroad train was invented. All kinds of excuses were offered as to why people shouldn't ride. "If God had intended man to go 12 miles an hour, he would have given him the foot power to walk that fast."

Technology is neither good nor evil per se. It all depends upon whether we direct techniques toward desirable goals.

We know that the procedures are currently being developed in which researchers are able to manipulate the character of simple organisms. How far away are we from the alteration of human genes, from genetic engineering, from a sexual duplication of human beings called cloning?

TRADITIONAL RELIGIONS do not have specific answers to offer. We need to draw new maps and stimulate more study and discussion of these issues.

As scholars deal with these decisions in dialogue with members of the medical community and the research community, the results of their inquiry will reflect, we hope, a new awareness of the higher level of moral responsibility and decision making that modern science and research require.

Rabbi Irwin Groner is with Congregation Shaarey Zedek in Southfield.

A tufted titmouse feasts on the cocoon of a large moth which was inside a leaf attached by silk to the branch.

Behavior can help identify animals

Timothy Nowicki

Identification of natural subjects is probably the first thing that people do when they become interested in the natural world. Knowing what you are looking at is basic when learning about something and when discussing your observations with others. After all, you want to make sure that both parties are talking about the same thing.

Properly identifying a bird, flower or an insect is important, and can often improve your powers of observation and your knowledge of the subject. Learning about variations in one species will help you identify those stumpers that "don't look like the picture in the book."

But the excitement of identifying a new species should not be lost just because you have seen it before. In the case of plants, you may find a specimen in an unusual area or in an unusual habitat. With animals, there is always behavior watching too.

Watching the behavior of animals always makes observations interesting. Even sighting a common species can be interesting by watching new behaviors never seen before. Tufted titmice, for instance, are fairly common birds in our area and are often seen at bird feeders. Their subtle colors are beautiful in their own way and their large eyes give them a neotenic appearance.

LAST SPRING, before the new leaves emerged, I watched a tufted titmouse foraging among the trees. During the time I watched this bird, it was exploring all the small clusters of old dried leaves that remained on the branches. It seemed to be "intentionally" searching out leaf clusters.

What I suspected, was that the bird found the cocoon of a large moth, such as a promethea or polyphemus, which was inside a leaf attached by silk to the branch. These cocoons persist until late spring. After feasting on a meal of such proportions, that titmouse was looking for more. They were probably easy to find since most branches did not have any leaves except for those attached by caterpillar silk.

If my suspicion was correct, I was watching a search image behavior. Birds will cue in on a good source of food and search for it exclusively until it no longer becomes beneficial.

Behavior watching of any animal can always be interesting, because animals are very diverse in their actions and interactions.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence-Oaks County Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

Riegle, Levin OK committee budget

Roll Call Report

Here's how Observer & Eccentric-area senators were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending March 1. There were no closely contested House votes.

SENATE

To Fund Committees — By a vote of 72 for and 22 against, the Senate approved a two-year budget of $113.9 million for its 19 standing committees, up $7.2 million or 6 percent from the biennial budget adopted early in 1989 at the beginning of the 101st Congress. After $4.3 million in carry over money from 1990 was counted, the cost of the legislature was about $118.2 million. The measure (S Res 62) did not require House approval and took effect immediately.

The budget authorizes a 4.1 percent cost-of-living adjustment (COLA) this year for the more than 1,200 committee staff members, and anticipates a similar staff pay raise next year. The present top salary for committee aides is $99,125, although most are paid less. Also funded by the measure are foreign and domestic committee travel, hearing, consultants, public relations and general operations.

A yes vote was to approve the Senate committee budget covering two years beginning March 1991.

Voting, yes from Michigan were Carl Levin, Democrat, and Donald Riegle, Democrat.

To Curb Committee Spending — By a vote of 56 for and 40 against, the Senate tabled (killed) a bid to curb Senate committee spending and allocate the savings to Head Start programs for disadvantaged children. The amendment sought to pare about $7.2 million from the $118.2 million authorized for 19 Senate committees over the next two years, by slowing the growth of staff salaries and making it impossible for senators to enlarge committee domains with surplus funds carried over from 1989-90. The vote occurred during debate on S Res 62 (above).

Tabling supporter Wendell Ford, D-Ky., said Senate staff salaries "are 25 percent behind private enterprise now, and you wonder why we are losing good staffers."

Sponsor Hank Brown, R-Colo., said Congress has assembled "the largest staff of a deliberative body in the world," 30 times larger than that of the Parliament in Great Britian and nine times larger than the Canadian Parliament staff.

A yes vote opposed lower spending on Senate staffs.

Voting yes were Levin and Riegle.

Capping Senate Staff — By a vote of 55 for and 41 against, senators tabled (killed) an amendment to cap the number of Senate committee aides at the 1990 figure of 1,203. Any additions to committee staffs were to have been offset by reductions in those few panels having more than 100 staffers. The offset provision sought to put Senate staffing on the same pay-as-you-go basis that last year's deficit reduction summit set for most other federal programs.

Tabling supporter Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, said the Senate needs additional staff to discharge its responsibility "to limit the total growth of government."

Sponsor John Chafee, R-R.I., said it was wrong for the Senate staff budget to be exempted from fiscal discipline applied to other parts of the federal budget.

A yes vote opposed capping the number of Senate staff members.

Voting yes were Levin and Riegle.

Awrey to freeze products, quit distribution

Awrey Bakery, founded in 1910, will spend some $2 million to modify production lines in Livonia. By May all baked goods trucked to local retail outlets will be frozen.

Awrey Bakery, which stopped making its own bread and rolls last fall, has announced plans to revamp its local pastry and sweets retail operations by May.

The family-owned company intends to freeze all baked goods before shipping from the Livonia production plant. Also, the products will be wholesaled to independent distributors, who in turn will deliver to retail outlets.

Upward of 80 percent of Awrey's business now is frozen pastries, croissants, biscuits and muffins sold through 700 distributors to restaurants, airlines, nursing homes, hospitals and other institutions.

"We believe customers shouldn't notice any change because the products will look and taste the same and be displayed on the same store shelves," said Rick Pedi, Awrey president.

"We have 20 years experience in the food service business working with frozen products, so we know what it takes to make quality baked goods this way.

"We're confident that our emphasis on national food service and contract manufacturing is the best way to grow the business in the long run," Pedi said.

"These changes are consistent with those already made by some of our competitors, and it's the only way we can become more efficient while maintaining the same product quality," he said.

BETTY JEAN AWREY, public relations spokeswoman, said she doesn't know how the price of Awrey goods would be affected at the retail level with independent rather than company distributors.

'We're trying to streamline production. What we're trying to do is gear all production to the frozen line. We want to stay ahead of the times.'

— Betty Jean Awrey spokeswoman

About 48 layoffs including truck drivers, retail management and support staff and production workers will result from the new focus. Another 47 employees will be reclassified to on-call job status or reassigned to other jobs.

"We're trying to streamline production," said Betty Jean Awrey. "What we're trying to do is gear all production to the frozen line. We want to stay ahead of the times."

"Right now, we're trying to be sensitive in order to treat people as fairly as possible and in accordance with union contracts," Pedi said.

Awrey intends to pare its retail product mix to a core line of best selling products like Long John coffee cake and date nut bar cookie.

Awrey will continue to sell unfrozen, freshly baked goods only out of its thrift store in Livonia, Awrey said.

Awrey, founded in 1910, now employs about 500. The company had revenue of $53 million in 1989, according to Crain's Detroit Business.

Students learn business concepts

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Some folks in business and industry worry that young people don't know much about the workaday world. Others do something about it. Like get involved in Junior Achievement of Detroit & Southeastern Michigan.

You know, the outfit a lot of us thought disappeared years ago. The one where kids got together to learn about business and the free enterprise system by actually planning, manufacturing and selling a product.

Well, take another look.

According to JA, more than 36,000 students participated in traditional workshop and school education programs in Oakland, Wayne and five other southeastern Michigan counties last year.

That's up from 12,300 just a decade ago and about 7,000 in the late 1970s.

"We're still a partnership between business, education and students," said Daniel J. White, senior vice president of operations for JA and a Plymouth resident. "The only difference is we have a program we can deliver to the total community and multiple grade levels.

"Certainly people involved — kids, teachers know about us. We just haven't got the story out," he added.

WHILE THE after-school workshops still draw, most participants now encounter JA through the classroom curriculum.

"We felt we were limited where we could go," White said. "As times change, people change. We felt we weren't reaching enough students."

So JA, a non-profit, tax-exempt organization established here in 1949, shifted focus. Now, three separate school programs are operational.

- Applied Economics, a daily class lasting an entire semester for high school juniors and seniors in which a business partner adds his or her insights once a week.

Included is a computer simulated management game. About 280 classes of this kind will be offered in southeast Michigan this school year.

- Project Business, a weekly class lasting up to three months for eighth and ninth graders in which a business partner supplements the teacher on discussions of basic economics and career education.

Topics include supply and demand, and the stock market. Some 475 classes will be offered this year.

- Business Basics, a series of four sessions with fifth and sixth graders usually taught by high school students from the Applied Economics classes. Topis include marketing, management, production and career exploration. Some 450 classes will be offered this year.

"THE KEY ingredient is all programs are provided free of cost," White said. "All business people are trained, all materials are provided. It's totally supported by the business community."

Erick A. Reickert, chairman of Acustar and a Bloomfield Hills resident, is general chairman of JA's annual fund-raising drive. The target this year is $1 million.

"I was impressed with the enthusiasm of the students with the material," he said of classroom visits. "I think part of the enthusiasm is to see the practical use of this."

Thomas Gerken and Susan McAmmond have been involved in Business Basics as certified teachers at Taylor Elementary School in Livonia.

Both were struck with the way Sanjay Kacholiya, a Livonia Stevenson High School student, presented business topics to their students.

KACHOLIYA demonstrated the difference between cottage industry and mass production by having students assemble pens as individuals and in teams. He also had the students write and act commercials for products.

"He taught them things not in the curriculum — entrepreneurship, capitalism, sole proprietorship, how a business is set up," Gerken said. "Kids learned a lot of terminology."

McAmmond plans to build on Kacholiya's lessons. "For their next book report, they'll write a character resume," she said. "It fits into the real world."

PR advisers to take counsel

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Sheldon J Scott, a Southfield public relations consultant, neglected to include a specific payment schedule in a contract with a client years ago, then spent several months trying to get the deadbeat to pay.

Norine Zimmer, a Huntington Woods public relations consultant, didn't know about residual fees a decade or so ago when she developed a computer program for a client. She figures it cost her money in the long run.

Marilyn Palliaer-Staargaard, who works for a Troy public relations agency, recalled that an employee of the firm once upon a time in a social setting offered an offhand opinion about an innocuous idea. The idea later surfaced, coincidentally, in an actual campaign developed by the agency, sparking a lawsuit.

Most PR experts who advise business clients agree that it's wise to take counsel occasionally themselves, said Scott, president of the Greater Detroit Public Relations Counselors, a professional association.

That's why the association will sponsor a seminar March 13 on public relations and the law at the Radisson Plaza in Southfield.

"THE PRIMARY mission of our organization is to educate. That's what we were founded on," Scott said.

"We live in an increasingly litigious world," Zimmer said. "I think it's important for people in the business to hone up on their legal knowledge, stay current with trends and learn preventative measures."

And the topic is especially timely now, said Palliaer-Staargaard.

"In the past, a lot (of PR) was sending out news releases and doing special events," she said. "Now, there are so many more opportunities for crisis management — mergers, layoffs, environmental things, food tamperings. There just seems to be more incidents like that happening."

Three lawyers will speak to the gathering.

"PRE-CRISIS planning in preparing to handle a crisis . . . and executing the plan is the most advisable approach for a company to take today," said Daniel L. Malone.

He will talk about crisis management and communications ramifications.

"I think the policy has to be honesty, openness and forthrightness," Malone said. "Anticipate that the media will investigate, explore and expect an answer."

Megan P. Norris will address defamation and the right to privacy.

"If they're going to be in the business of publicly saying things . . . they need to have at least a working knowledge of what things they are and not allowed to say," she said. "Most PR people have no idea what defamation law is all about."

Norris also intends to touch on the legal ramifications of using the names, images and comments of individuals for promotions.

Ian D. Pesses will talk about contracts.

"THEY HELP provide a road map where a relationship is going to go," he said. "They're good in good times and better in bad because they make business relationships more accountable."

Even veteran PR advisers aren't always on the ball when it comes to dotting the i's and crossing the t's on contract arrangements, Pesses said.

"An experienced business person will say, 'He won't pay me. I want to sue.' I'll say, 'Where's the contract?' He'll say, 'You mean I need one?'

"Contracts with your clients is part of normal business etiquette," Pesses said.

Upwards of 70, each with at least five years experience and who represent more than a single client, claim membership in the Greater Detroit Public Relations Counselors. "We felt by doing something like this we could instruct communicators of some pitfalls they might be able to avoid," Scott said. "People gobble up new information and techniques."

For more information on the seminar call Zimmer, 544-3040.

GM taking charge of electric cars for California

Dan McCosh

By Dan McCosh
special writer

GM is going to be building an electric car within the next few years in Lansing, in the plant where they used to build Buick Reattas, one of those watershed events that could alter the automotive landscape for all time, or at least until somebody else gets another wild idea.

Strangely, GM's entry into electric cars mainly has been greeted with yawns by the bulk of the media. Maybe it's due to a Saturn-media-blitz hangover, but when GM announced two years ago that it was going to make a battery-powered car, the first in general production in the U.S. since the untimely demise of the Detroit Electric in 1935, there was surprisingly little interest.

Auto enthusiasts couldn't see much excitement in an overweight, underpowered car that moves along in a kind of creepy silence. Hard-core technoids were cynical, noting that GM appeared to be plunging ahead with yesterday's technology, since it was going to use a battery based on a principle so old that it was in existence before anybody had figured out how to charge it up.

But as it turns out, GM was taking the then-fledgling California Green movement more seriously than most, and thus gained, if not a leg, at least a toe up on its competition.

CALIFORNIA, it seems, was serious about actually banning gasoline cars, particularly in the Los Angeles Basin, which disappeared about 15 years ago under a thick cloud of semiliquid goo. Smog is so bad in California that the only alternative to banning gasoline cars would have been banning immigrants, which would have meant that Californians would have had to stop living off the real estate business and get a job.

The compromise was to demand that all auto companies selling cars in California had to build some percentage of their production as electric. The thinking was that an electric car didn't smoke, although some cynics quickly pointed out that the power plants that produced electricity did.

"Hah!" said the California Greens, pointing out that most of their electricity comes from clean-smelling natural gas, and most of the rest comes from Nevada, where they are too busy gambling to notice the acid rain. They also use more nuclear energy than practically any other state, which leaves the air clean, although it also explains why Beverly Hills types are starting to glow in the dark.

The end result is something of a mandated market for electric cars, which has prompted GM, Ford, Chrysler, Peugeot, Volkswagen, BMW and Honda, among others, to lay plans to churn out hundreds of thousands of the hummers.

MOST OF THESE companies figure that the big customers will be electric companies that have something to prove and will put their meter-readers in a couple of vans to make a public statement.

Not GM. They are serious about the market for an electric car you can drive to work, which will be happily recharging until you are ready for the trek home. Putting a couple of billion in Hughes Aircraft and related electronics ventures is part of the motivation — it gives GM a vast high-tech base to work from.

But mainly, GM sees a future in electric cars that is being ignored by nearly every other auto company in the world, and it's willing to take a chance.

Win or lose, it's going to be interesting.

Disability insurance can protect you

By Sid Mittra
special writer

Between the ages of 35 and 65, seven of 10 workers will suffer a long-term disability, reports Best's Review. Yet 80 percent of the workers have no personal disability insurance.

If you are disabled, your paycheck will stop coming, but your bills won't. Even worse, new bills for medical expenses and rehabilitation will start to arrive.

Total the income you could count on if your paycheck stopped: sick leave, company insurance, Social Security, other governmental programs, workers' compensation, personal savings, and retirement money such as IRAs and pension plans.

Estimate your monthly expenses during an extended disability. The deficit, if any, should be covered by disabiliy insurance.

You need 60 or 70 percent of the potential deficit. A good policy has:

- 1. Own-Occupation clause. The policy should pay if you couldn't perform your own regular occupation.
- 2. Partial disability. The policy should cover even when you can work just part-time.
- 3. Guaranteed renewable. The company must renew your policy regardless of your past claims and present condition.
- 4. Rehabilitation benefits. The policy should provide these benefits to help you get back to work.

Now address the fact that one of four people older than 65 will require nursing home care. Medicare does just part of the job. A good long-term care policy should should provide daily benefit of at least $90, adjusted for inflation for four to six years. The premium should be fixed. The waiting period should be less than 20 days. The policy should provide skilled care, intermediate care, and custodial care. Better quality policies cover pre-existing conditions as long as they are disclosed when the policy is bought.

We have barely scratched the surface of risk management planning ideas. Here are two others.

A cross-purchase plan has two components. One is a contract between the shareholders of a corporation that on the death of a shareholder, the surviving owner(s) will buy the deceased shareholder's stock at a predetermined price. The other is continued funding of the plan. which means that when you die, your salary will be continued to your surviving spouse. A high estate tax on your stock could cause a severe need for cash in your estate. If, however, the plan is funded with life insurance, the cash needed to buy the interest would be available almost automatically when it is needed.

Many policies provide substantial advantaged to policy owners who need to withdraw the maximum amount of cash from their life insurance policies.

The annual premium is made equal to the maxium premium allowed by law. The excess cash is placed in a side fund earning a competitive tax-deferred rate. The death benefit is the minimum possible permitted by law.

Organized this way, the policy owner can get the biggest possible zero-cost loans in excess of the mimimum necessary to retain the policy.

Seminar: "Playing to Win: Financial Concerns of the Affluent Professional" 7-9:30 p.m. Thursday, March 21, in the Conference Room at 3290 W. Big Beaver, Troy.

Reservations required, telephone 643-8888.

Kacholiya, who has won several awards for participating in JA's night workshop program, said he was delighted with the experience.

"I had a great time working with kids and they were really responsive," he said. "It was a different routine and they could actively participate.

"It's a tremendous program useful for all areas of life," Kacholiya added. "It has a practical value to whatever you're looking for."

CARL SOFIA, 29, a product engineer for Chrysler and a Farmington Hills resident, served as a business volunteer last semester in an Applied Economics course at Farmington High.

"What I wanted to accomplish was give these kids some guidance about what alternatives are out there, what it's really like to make a living," he said. "There are definitely choices out there to be made, and a lot of these kids aren't aware of it."

Sofia arranged for the students to tour a modern auto assembly plant.

What made him decide to get involved with JA?

"I had wished I got better guidance than I did," Sofia said. "It's a nice balance with your work."

Bernard Call, a certified teacher for 27 years, worked with Sofia.

"You could never replace things they add," Call said of business volunteers. "The kids hear it from someone in the business world; that's the way it is. It's not just theory."

JA hasn't abandoned its workshop program.

STEVE VULETICH, 27, a systems programmer for World Computer Corp. in Auburn Hills, managed the Farmington JA Center this year at Farmington High School. Previously, he served as an adviser to student companies for two years.

"It's a real fun organization. To tell you the truth, some achievers are real smart," Vuletich said. "It (company formation) really brings them into real life situations. In school, it's all theory.

"From the ground up, we built the company. After 18 weeks, we liquidated the company. It showed them everything. Granted, it's not as real as real life, but it does show what goes on in corporations.

"They form the company, sell stock, use the capital to buy raw materials, start production, go through sales, pay bills," he said.

Products manufactured by JA companies include ice scrapers, personalized buttons and Christmas ornaments.

"It's open from ninth grade through 12th grade," Vuletich said. "A wide variety of personalities and interests are involved. Most achievers are college bound interested in business, marketing."

'Book of Love' brings him home

By Dan Greenberg
special writer

SHERRIE BUZBY/staff photographer

Filmmaker Robert Shaye of New Line Cinema discusses "Book of Love."

Shaye and "Book of Love" stars Keith Coogan and Tricia Leigh Fisher joke around during an interview at the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham.

NEW LINE CINEMA'S CEO, Robert Shaye, a Detroit native, Mumford High School and University of Michigan graduate, came home last week for a benefit premiere of his directorial debut, "Book of Love."

The premiere at the Star John R Theatre in Madison Heights raised money toward programs of the Variety Club for Children in Detroit. "Book of Love" opened Friday at Detroit-area theaters.

Shaye was in town with two of the film's stars, Keith Coogan, grandson of Jackie Coogan, and Tricia Leigh Fisher, daughter of Connie Stevens and Eddie Fisher. Despite their youth, both Coogan and Fisher are accomplished, experienced performers, who represent the acting profession's best facet, the ability to appear on screen as someone else. Neither looks nor acts in person as they do on screen in "Book of Love."

"I was happy my role came across as such a change from what I really look like," Fisher said, during and interview with her, Coogan and Shaye at the Townsend Hotel in Birmingham. "Acting is not about looking the best you can."

Coogan added, "It's your character. It's fun to be someone else."

IN "BOOK OF LOVE," Fisher plays Gina Gabooch, who is pretty tough-looking, a chopper-chick trying to emulate her brother, Angelo, football star and local bully. Coogan is a nerdy type with glasses, a limp and terrifically unfulfilled yearnings for the opposite sex. He befriends the new fellow in the neighborhood, Jack Twiller (Chris Young), and together they wend their way from lonely high school sophomores to reasonable success at their senior prom.

"I felt very passionate about this material," director Shaye said. "You have to have emotional enthusiasm to carry you through the difficult times in directing." Shaye believes this story of adolescence in the '50s is an important story for today's youth.

Although "Book of Love" is not set in Detroit per se, Shaye continued, "a lot of Detroit is in this movie. Kids today find the film lots of fun and very illuminating because, despite what they're going through in contemporary anxieties and pressures, adolescence is still very much the same as it was then. A lot of kids are enlightened by that because they can't really believe their parents went through the same stuff that they're going through."

Inspiring other's creativity has been part and parcel of Shaye's style since founding New Line Cinema in 1967 as a small, private distributor of art films. Now listed on the American Stock Exchange, New Line Cinema is unique as a prominent, successful, independent motion picture production and distribution company. Maintaining independence in a world of international entertainment conglomerates and corporate giants is no easy task, and Shaye's successful track record reflects his unique, personal style of stimulating and encouraging individual creativity.

New Line has just completed a production arrangement with Harry Belafonte's company. In the past, New Line has given a boost to such noted filmmakers as Susan Seidelman and George Romero. Among more successful box office ventures, Shaye and New Line have distributed "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles" and "House Party," while producing the first five parts of "Nightmare on Elm Street," two "Critters" and the cult favorite "Polyester."

SHAYE SAID, "It's really important for people in the entertainment business to know as much about their business as they can, so shifting to directing from producing and distributing was a natural segue and also something I always felt I had an instinct for."

That instinct was evident early on as the 15-year-old Shaye was co-winner with Martin Scorsese of the prestigious Society of Cinematologists Rosenthal Competition for Best Motion Picture by an American Director Under the Age of 25. That national competition was won the previous year by Brian DePalma.

Shaye's father, uncle and grandfather were wholesale grocers, as Grosse Pointe Quality Foods. Later young Robert learned to polish apples and carry out groceries for his father and uncle at the Big Bear Supermarket on Eight Mile and Livernois roads in Detroit.

After Mumford High, Shaye attended the U-M, took a brief shot at acting in California, traveled in Europe and attended Columbia Law School. He is still a member of the New York Bar.

After law school, Shaye studied in Sweden on a Fulbright Scholarship. That's when he met a Swedish girl, whom he married. The couple has two daughters, 18 and 20. His one sibling, a sister, Lin, is an actress, who appears in "Book of Love" as Mrs. Flynn, mother of one of Jack Twiller's friends.

Robert Shaye's father, now retired and living in Franklin, has devoted much of the last 25 years to painting, so clearly the artistic and business influences are part and parcel of Shaye's background. "Book of Love" admirably fuses those interests.

Northville's Historic Marquis Theatre presents "Charlotte's Web," the classic story by E.B. White, continuing at 11:30 a.m. and 3 p.m. Saturday, March 9, 16 and 23, and 2:30 p.m. Sunday, March 10, 17 and 24. Tickets are $5. Tickets are available from the Marquis Store in Northville or by telephone. Tickets also are available at the door. The play is not recommended for children under 3. Call 349-8110 for tickets.

● FOR DEPENDENTS

In an attempt to help relieve some of the stress of war placed on community members, Olympia Arenas Inc. has made available tickets to Joe Louis Arena and Cobo Arena for dependents of servicemen and women based in the Persian Gulf. Tickets to the Ice Capades on Tuesday, March 12, through Sunday, March 17, will be available to parents, spouses and children of servicemen and servicewomen. Family members may contact Selfridge Air Force Base support group leaders to place orders. Questions may be directed to the 927th Tactical Airlift Group Public Affairs Office at 466-5575.

● ANNUAL PARADE

The St. Patrick's Parade steps off at Third Street and Michigan Avenue in Detroit's Corktown at 2 p.m. Sunday, March 10. The 33rd annual parade, which proceeds west on Michigan to 14th Street, pays special tribute to the men and women serving in the Persian Gulf by distributing yellow ribbons secured with a shamrock to be worn by parade marchers. Area groups participating in the parade include the Celtic Pipes and Drums of Birmingham and the Irish Setter Club of Birmingham. John Egan of Redford will be dressed as St. Patrick.

● 'CHORUS LINE'

Cadillac presents the nationwide farewell tour of Broadway's most successful and longest-running theatrical production, appearing at the Fox Theatre in Detroit on Tuesday, April 23, through Sunday, April 28, for eight performances. "A Chorus Line" was conceived, choreographed and directed by Michael Bennett, with music by Marvin Hamlisch and lyrics by Edward Kleban. Tickets are on sale at the Fox Theatre box office, the Joe Louis Arena and Cobo Arena box offices and all Ticketmaster outlets. Tickets are priced from $32.50 to $15. To charge by phone call 645-6666. For further information call 567-6000.

'Barefoot' is a romp

Performances of the Meadow Brook Theatre production of "Barefoot in the Park" continue through Sunday, March 24, on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For ticket information call the box office at 377-3300.

Neil Simon's "Barefoot in the Park" pits a sensible, young lawyer, Paul, against his free-spirited, artistic wife, Corie — a classic polarity. Director Terence Kilburn's expert casting and directing capitalize on the generosity of Simon's kind of comedy.

In good-hearted comedies, like this one when it's cast right, idiosyncracies and foibles are made fun of so we can better cherish what makes characters vulnerable and therefore loveable. Shirleyann Kaladjian as Corie, Alexander Web as Paul, Eric Tavares as Victor and especially Jayne Houdyshell as Corie's mother, Mrs. Banks, are generous-spirited and never mean — sometimes selfish, naive, or fussy perhaps — but never mean.

Mrs. Bank's emerges as a good sport and Simon's true heroine. Houdyshall plays Mrs. Banks, the interfering mother/mother-in-law role, with infectious warmth. Even bit players like Jospeh Reed as the phone repair man and Paul Hopper as a delivery man aren't resentful after they wheeze and pant up the five, punishing flights of stairs to Paul and Corie's apartment. Nobody has a chip on his shoulder in the New York comedy. What a pleasure!

After six days of mushy, newlywed bliss, Paul and Corie have just moved into a fifth-floor walkup in Greenwich Villiage when the squabbles begin. Their marriage weathers (literally) a hole in the skylight, a bathroom sans bathtub, and a walk-in closet (the sole way to get to the closet is to walk across the bed) only to flounder on irreconcilable differences after an evening entertaining Mrs. Banks and Victor Velasco, the penniless, bon vivant who lives upstairs.

CORIE DECREES Paul an incurable "stuffed shirt" with whom she can't abide living. He's not the pompous, nitpicker-type stufed shirt, just a careful, practical fellow who prefers to watch the human comedy rather than indulge in its follies. Little things irritate Corie about Paul — he wears gloves to keep his hands warm when the mercury dips — and she sees that habit as evidence of a fatal lack of spontaniety, zest and adventure.

Director Kilburn doesn't suffer such fears of spontaneity. In a spirit Corie would applaud, Kilburn updates the 1963 script by injecting a throwaway line about Donald Trump and another about video recorders —" small playful touches. Peter Hicks' raw set before the furniture arrives in the apartment shows off the cubbyhole corners and squeezed charm that led Corie to fall for the apartment in spite of its flaws — much like we fall for Simon's characters despite their foibles.

Once the furniture arrives — modern decorator-coordinated, expensive-looking stuff (except for the orange crate bar) — the apartment's eccentric charm fades. Would the supposedly artistic, free-spirited Corie really opt for conventional style? A small gripe about an otherwise warmly funny and fine production.

Alaska

Porpoises and sea lions say howdy-doo to cruise crowd

By Mickey Jones
special writer

After following a black bear along the shore, we literally barged our way through floating beds of ice floes covered with hundreds of harbor seals as we approached the towering blue face of LeConte glacier.

Alaska is hot this year! They broke tourism records in 1990 and this summer will be even bigger. The Persian Gulf war and rising overseas costs due to the slumping dollar are at least partially responsible for the great interest in Alaska.

This year, hundreds of seven-, 10- and 14-day Alaskan cruises are being offered on ships diverted from the Caribbean for the summer months.

One-week trips from Seattle or Vancouver take you through the "inside passage" to the southeastern "panhandle" of Alaska and back. Some ships go all the way to Anchorage.

These huge cruise ships travel mostly at night so passengers can spend their days in the ports of Ketchikan, Sitka, Juneau, Skagway and Anchorage. They also cruise into Glacier Bay and some of the larger fjords.

An alternative way to appreciate coastal Alaska is to fly from Seattle to Ketchikan or Juneau and spend a few days on one of the small ships operated by Alaska Sightseeing Tours.

The Sheltered Seas for example, is a modern 90-foot motor yacht offering three-day, all-daylight cruises between Juneau and Ketchikan. It has no staterooms, so motel or hotel accommodation is provided on shore each night. A similar boat, the Spirit of Glacier Bay, makes two-day cruises to Glacier Bay from Juneau. It has staterooms to accommodate 49 passengers for the two days and one night at sea.

These small boats are extremely comfortable and have the advantage of being able to navigate narrow passages and shallow waters where big cruise ships can't go. They get you really close to nature in the raw.

I boarded the Shelter Seas in Ketchikan one morning last September for a three-day cruise to Juneau. As we cruised between misty islands, a crew member used a large map to give us an overview of our journey. Almost all of it would be within the Tongass National Forest, the largest national forest in the U.S.

We spent much of the first day cruising along the mountainous coastline of Southeast Alaska which is 500 miles long, has 1,000 islands and 65,000 people.

After a satisfying lunch, another crew member lectured on the native cultures of Alaska which we would shortly encounter during a 90-minute stop at the small fishing village of Wrangell.

Founded by Russians in 1834, the town has an interesting collection of totem poles and a tribal house on tiny Shakes Island. The masthead of the Wrangell Sentinel, Alaska's oldest continuously published newspaper, declares it to be "The only newspaper in the world that gives a damn about Wrangell."

On the second day we saw plenty of wildlife. Dozens of porpoises danced alongside our hull as we snapped pictures of their smiling faces 10 feet away. Whales spouted so close that we could feel their spray, and we were able to get within 100 feet of bald eagles perched in tall trees.

After following a black bear along the shore, we literally barged our way through floating beds of ice floes covered with hundreds of harbor seals as we approached the towering blue face of LeConte glacier.

During an overnight stop in the quaint fishing town of Petersburg, passengers were treated to a Norwegian smorgasbord and ethnic dancing in a waterfront restaurant.

The next day, as we cruised northwest toward Juneau, our ship made a long side-trip into Tracy Arm to view the magnificent Sawyer glaciers. We again bumped our way

Have pen, will travel, always looking for Michigan residents

Everywhere I go I meet people from Michigan. And every time I write a travel article, I meet people who know more about the destination than I do. Both things happened to me in relation to the story we ran last week on the Florida Keys.

Sarah Shaw, for example. She works as a waitress at the Full Moon Saloon in Key West. Ask a couple of questions and you soon find out that Sarah grew up in Redford and Livonia and still visits her parents in Howell and her brothers in South Lyon and Milford.

Or Jeffrey Anderson. I was on a tour boat out of Key West when I met Dina and Jeffrey Anderson. Captain Dave was at the wheel telling the same jokes he tells every night and getting the same laughs from the 25 people aboard. Joel, the first mate, was serving cold beer and champagne.

The Sebago is a catamaran, so we were all sitting around the edges of the boat, in shorts and T-shirts, watching the sun go down. I was on the landward side of the sail with a young couple on their honeymoon.

"Where are you from?" I said.

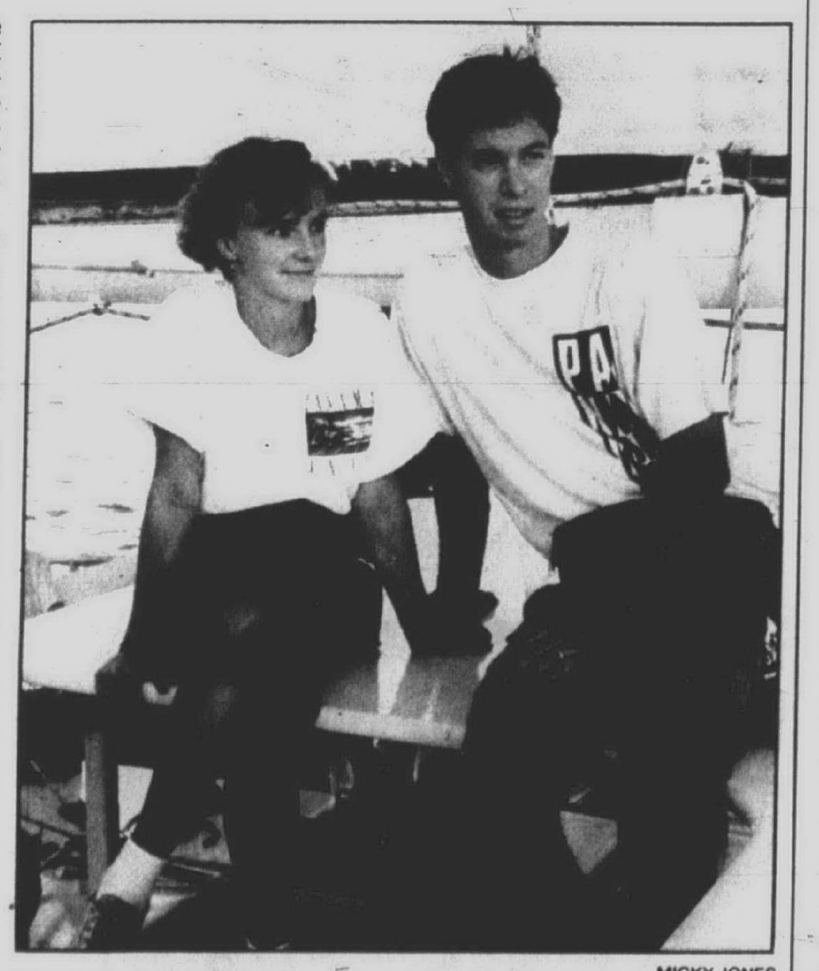
"Chicago. What about you?"

"Michigan."

"I grew up in Bloomfield Hills," Jeffrey said, and there it was again, the Michigan Connection.

Jeffrey graduated from Andover High School and attended Eastern Michigan University before he moved to Chicago and met Dina. They were staying at the Casa Marina in Key West, planning a little parasailing and a little jet skiing. Their favorite place in Key West was Sloppy Joe's, "loud bands and fun people."

Judy Berne doesn't live in the Keys. She lives with her husband Ed in West Bloomfield but she has been going to the Florida Keys once or twice a year for 12 years.



MICKY JONES

Dina and Jeffrey Anderson honeymooned in the Florida Keys and ran into writer Iris Jones, who was there doing a story. Jeffrey is originally from Bloomfield Hills.

She stays with her mother, Rolla Doner of Birmingham, in Islamorada.

"The Keys are a most relaxing place to visit, quite unlike Fort Lauderdale or Miami. My kids love it so much, they take their friends to the Keys for spring break."

I asked Judy to give some tips to potential travelers:

St. Patrick's Day!

Chicago River runs green as celebrants toast favorite saint

By Vera Hogan
special writer

You start at one end of the town, watch the parades, eat corned beef and cabbage, and drink green beer in pubs all over the city. Irish or not, you'll get hassled if you're not wearing green.

Patrick O'Leary may have been the first Irishman to set Chicago on fire, when his west-side cow barn started the Great Chicago Fire 120 years ago, but he certainly wasn't the last. Chicagoans set the town on fire every March 17 on St. Patrick's Day.

One of the major decisions I had to make every spring when I lived in Chicago was whether to take a day off for the opening home game of the Chicago Cubs or for St. Patrick's Day. It's a tradition to take the day off on St. Patrick's Day.

You start at one end of the town, watch the parades, eat corned beef and cabbage, and drink green beer in pubs all over the city. Irish or not, you'll get hassled if you're not wearing green.

This year I will have the pleasure of escorting my husband, Mike, to Chicago for his first St. Patty's Day away from home. I'm going to show this Irishman how to party Chicago-style.

If you plan to visit Chicago the weekend of March 16 and 17, you can enjoy the sights and smells of old Ireland as Chicagoans and visitors celebrate St. Patrick's Day.

The celebrations begin with the annual downtown St. Patrick's Day parade at noon on Saturday, March 16. Nearly 700 marchers and 50 floats will roll along Dearborn, from Wacker to Van Buren.

Celebrities to appear in this year's parade include Jim Sullivan, son of Albert Sullivan, one of the five famed Sullivan brothers killed during World War II. The Sullivans are being honored by the Navy this year to commemorate the 50th anniversary of their deaths. For more information on the downtown parade, call (312) 263-6612.

The annual South Side Irish St. Patrick's Day Parade begins 1:30 p.m. Sunday, March 17, along Western between 103rd and 114th. For more information, call (312) 238-1969.

If you visit Chicago during the St. Patty's Day weekend, look for the "bright green" Chicago River. The river is dyed each year under the direction of parade organizers and the green dye is usually visible for a couple days after the parade.

Restaurants and pubs throughout the city will be ready to serve those ready to eat, drink and be merry Irish-style. A few of them include:

- Abbey Restaurant and Pub, 3420 W. Grace, (312) 478-4408. American and Irish selections and entertainment. Irish breakfasts served Saturday and Sunday morning. Open 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. Monday, 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. Tuesday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 3 a.m. Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday.
- Atlantic Restaurant and Pub, 7115 W. Grand Ave. (312) 622-3259. Features British and Irish cuisine and traditional British and Irish entertainment. Irish breakfast served Sunday from 9:30 a.m. Open 4 p.m. to midnight Monday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, noon to 2 a.m. Saturday, and 9:30 a.m. to midnight Sunday. Closed Tuesday.
- Butch McGuire's, 20 W. Division St. (312) 337-9080. Music and lounge with lunch and weekend brunch. Open 11:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. Monday through Friday, 10:30 a.m. to 3 a.m. Saturday, and 10:30 a.m. to 2 a.m. Sunday.
- Clancy's Pub and Deli, Ltd., 1237 S. State St. (312) 252-6297. Irish entertainment and deli sandwiches. Open 7 a.m. to 4 a.m. Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 5 a.m. Saturday, and noon to 4 a.m. Sunday.
- Kitty O'Shea's, 720 S. Michigan Ave. in the Chicago Hilton and Towers, (312) 922-4400. Irish pub and restaurant featuring live Irish entertainment nightly. Open 11 a.m. to 1:30 a.m. Monday through Saturday, and noon to 1:30 a.m. Sunday.

For the party-goers and merry-makers who visit Chicago for the first time this St. Patrick's Day, the city offers an affordable, comprehensive transportation system via the Chicago Transit Authority and city cab companies.

The subways, elevated trains and buses can take you anywhere in the city for $1.25 or less, depending on time of day. Cab fares are $1.20 per mile.

If you have a little more time to spend in the city, you can get an overview of Chicago by attending the Here's Chicago exhibit at the Old Water Tower Pumping Station, 163 E. Pearson St., across Michigan Avenue from the Chicago Water Tower.

In specially-designed theaters, images of Chicago are projected from 63 computerized slide projectors, followed by a grand tour of the city via 70mm film. The presentation takes less than an hour and includes the slide presentation, movie, walk-through masses of floating ice and icebergs, some white and some brilliant blue. Thousands of harbor seals were basking in the sunshine.

In another part of the inlet, the skipper nosed our bow right into the spray of two waterfalls and later pulled up to a rocky little island covered with dozens of huge roaring sea lions.

It was getting dark as we pulled into the glistening harbor at Juneau where three huge cruise ships were strung with lights from stem to stern.

A comfortable hotel for the night and a bus ride to the Mendenhall Glacier the next morning concluded our Sheltered Seas tour.

The cost of these three-day trips on the Sheltered Seas, including all meals and accommodation for four nights is $795 to $1,295 per person depending on departure date. The season runs May through September with the highest prices from mid June to mid August.

The two-day Glacier Bay cruise from Juneau on the Spirit of Glacier Bay runs between $399 and $649 per person depending on stateroom selection.

For a free 100-page vacation planning guide, write to the Alaska Division of Tourism, Box E-748, Juneau AK 99811.

These two tours can be combined or tied-in with other Alaskan air, land and water packages that include Anchorage, Sitka, Fairbanks and Skagway.

If a close-up look at Alaska from a small boat sounds appealing, write Alaska Sightseeing Tours, Suite 700, Fourth and Battery Building, Seattle WA 98121, or call toll-free, (800) 426-7702. Ask for two brochures: Alaska Yacht Tours and Alaska Cruises and Tours.

For a free 100-page vacation planning guide, write to the Alaska Division of Tourism, Box E-748, Juneau AK 99811.

By extending your Alaska trip a day or two, you can include such attractions as a day of salmon fishing, a flight or boat ride to Misty Fjords National Monument, helicoptering to nearby glaciers or traversing a mountain lake in an Indian war canoe.

You can also swish down the bumpy Mendenhall River in a rubber raft, fly over Glacier Bay or zip over to the goldrush town of Skagway for a few hours, then ride one of the coastal ferries of the Alaska Marine Highway System affectionately known as "blue canoes."

It's a six-hour ferry ride from Skagway to Juneau and almost 24 hours from there to Ketchikan. If you have three extra vacation days, you can blue canoe all the way to Alaska and back from Bellingham, Wash. For a 1991 ferry schedule and fare information, call toll-free, (800) 642-0066.

These extras are not cheap, so if you follow the crowd to Alaska this summer, you may spend a lot of money but you won't be disappointed. It truly is America's last frontier.

For more information, contact your travel agent.

Airlines resume flights to Middle East

By Iris Sanderson Jones
special writer

I shouldn't have been surprised, but I was. I was in an airport, talking to my friend Amnon Linn-Lipzin of the Israeli Government Tourist Office, ready to commiserate with him on the lack of travel to Israel.

"You can't get a seat on a place to Israel, they're all full," he said.

Remember, this conversation took place while the war was still in full swing.

The reason of course was that every airline except El Al had stopped flying to Israel, making the few available seats precious to those eager to be with their loved ones in the Middle East.

That situation changed this week. British Airways announced that it will resume twice-weekly flights to Tel Aviv March 14 and twice-weekly flights to Bahrain March 10. The flights were suspended Jan. 16, the day after Desert Storm began.

A British Airways spokesman said that flights to Kuwait, and the Saudi cities of Riyadh and Dhahran would resume "as soon as possible."

Iberia, Spain's state-owned carrier, is also resuming flights to the Middle East, with service to Cairo and Tel Aviv already started.

And that's not the only good news in the travel industry.

Northwest Airlines will offer a coupon discount on fares in hope of attracting travelers who postponed their trips because of the Gulf war. Sunday papers in more than 40 cities will carry the coupons, offering discounts of up to $100 off most ticket prices.

And if warm seas and cold slopes interest you, take note. Cruise ship bookings are already up and ski industry experts believe that the combination of pent-up demand and growing consumer confidence will boost domestic leisure travel. International vacations remain a question mark.

Nashville's Opryland Hotel growing again

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Opryland Hotel, one of the country's largest convention hotels, will expand for the fourth time since opening more than 13 years ago.

Hotel officials say they will add 38,431 square feet of meeting and office space in the hotel's east wing at a cost of $3.1 million.

When completed in November, the expansion will feature 15,644 square feet of meeting space. Included will be three new meeting rooms ranging from 967 to 4,740 square feet, as well as new reception areas and hallways.

A uniform distribution center, new offices, public space and support facilities on two lower levels of the hotel will bring the project to 38,431 square feet, said Jack Vaughn, general manager of the 1,891-room hotel.

TORTOISE RESERVE

Passengers on Galapagos Cruises flagship Santa Cruz will now be able to visit the tortoise reserve in the highlands of Santa Cruz Island.

Early seafaring visitors to the Ecuadorean archipelago all but wiped out the animals and today there are only two sanctuaries in the wild, on Santa Cruz and around the Alcedo volcano on Isabela Island.

Santa Cruz passengers will be driven into the highlands to the reserve, lunch at a farm along the way, and stop at nearby Los Gemelos, sink holes formed by volcanic action.

The trip passes through most of the vegetation levels of the archipelago, from the salty lowlands through thickening brush and trees to cloud forest at the top.

For more information and prices contact your travel agent, or the tour operator's US representative, Adventure Associates toll-free, (800) 527-2500.

NORTHWEST AIRLINES

Northwest Airlines has reduced its transcontinental first-class fares to economy-class prices. First-class fares have been lowered for travel between Los Angeles or San Francisco and New York City, Washington D.C., Boston or Philadelphia.

For example, the price of a first-class round-trip ticket between Los Angeles and New York has been lowered from $2,202 to $1,474. Round-trip travel between San Francisco and Washington D.C. went from $1,994 to $1,262.

First-class fares carry no restrictions and first-class night fares are applicable only to late night or overnight flights. All fares are subject to normal first-class availability.

Northwest has also cut its lowest discount fare by 40 percent for travel between Los Angeles and Honolulu. Northwest will charge only $248 for a round-trip ticket, down from $413. The fare is available Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. It's $50 higher the rest of the week.

For more information consult your travel agent or call Northwest reservations toll-free, (800) 225-2525.

- "Don't eat anything but fish. Lots of other things are good, but the fish is so wonderful that it is a waste of time to eat anything else.
- "Try the key lime pie in different places, because everybody has their own recipe.
- "The best restaurants in the middle Keys are Mile Marker 88, Cheeca Lodge, Ziggy's and the Lorelei.
- "You don't have to like fishing to be in the Keys. There is great tennis at The Net, Cheeca Lodge as well as other resorts and condominiums in the Keys."

Local people appointed to ski board

Several ski industry business people from the area have been appointed to the board of directors of a new non-profit organization called Michigan Ski Industries Association.

MSIA, based in Thompsonville, will represent Michigan ski resorts and facilities, ski equipment manufacturing companies and ski retailers.

The organization was formed to promote skiing in Michigan and surrounding states, and to develop cooperative marketing ventures and corporate sponsorship programs.

Bud Rudden of Ski Concepts Inc. has been named vice chairman. The board of directors includes Bruce Firestone of Mt. Holly Ski Area; Dick Held of Bavarian Village Ski Shops; Jim Sullivan of Sullivan International Ltd., Don Thomas of Don Thomas Sporthaus.

Other officers are chairman Jim Bartlett of Nubs Nob Ski Area in Harbor Springs, treasurer John MacGregor of Boyne USA in Boyne Falls and Harbor Springs, secretary Nancy Mullen-Call from Crystal Mountain in Thompsonville.

The association's first order of business was to invite Gov. John Engler and his wife Michelle to sample skiing at a Michigan resort.

For more information, contact MSIA, Route M115, Thompsonville, MI 49683-9742 or any of the officers listed above.

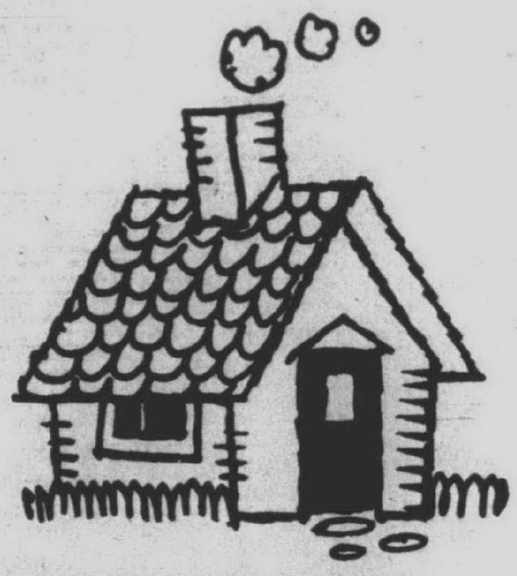
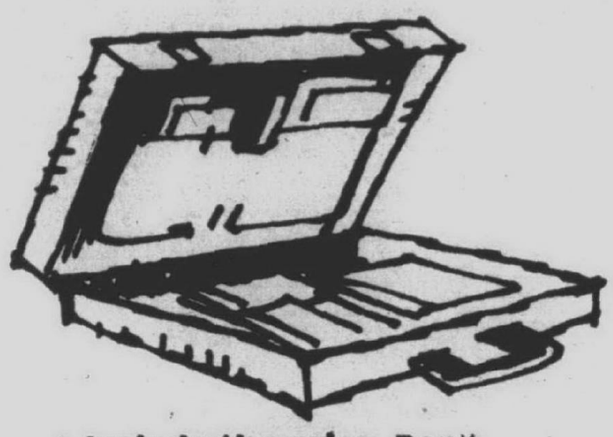
WRITE IT AND REAP!

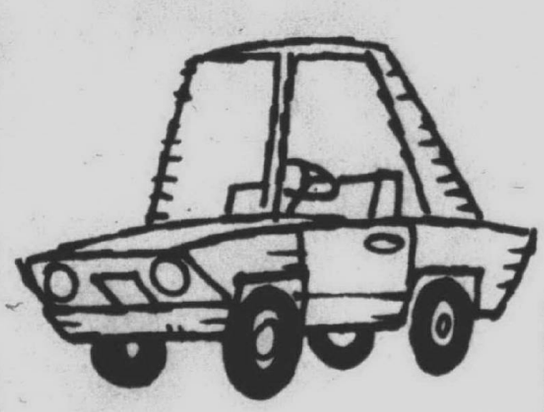


1. Give the reader specific information. Pretend you are someone reading the classifieds. What would you like to know about the item, service or job you are advertising? Be sure to add details such as color, size, condition, brand name, age, features and benefits. Be accurate! Don't embellish your ad with misleading information. Stick to the facts and reap the rewards!

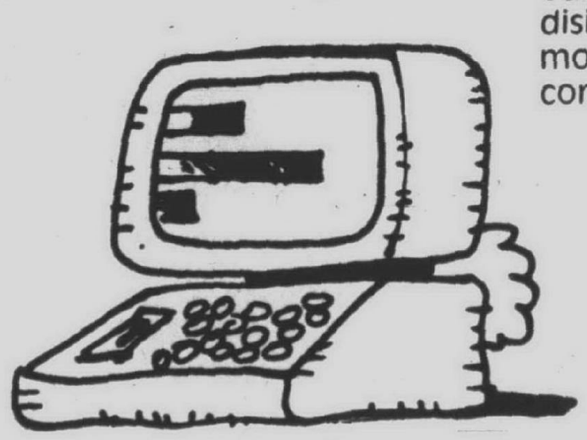


2. Include the price. Don't waste your time or a potential buyer's time. If you advertise the price of the item or service you offer, the people who respond to your ad will be those who are genuinely interested. Surveys show that readers are more interested in those items and services they know are within their price range.

3. Avoid abbreviations. Don't make a potential customer work too hard! Although you may be tempted to cut down on the cost of your ad by using abbreviations, surveys indicate that many people don't understand such abbreviations as EIK (eat-in kitchen) or WSW (white side wall) tires and won't take the time to figure them out. A confused reader is a disinterested reader. Get the most for your money and use complete words.



4. Include phone number and specify hours. Be sure to let potential customers know when and where to call. Surveys show that even if a person is very interested in your item or service, he or she will not call back after the first attempt. Stay near the phone during the hours you indicate you will be available. Don't risk missing a sale!



5. Run on consecutive days. Your ad will not get results if people don't see it! Therefore, it is important to set up a consistent and consecutive ad schedule with your telephone salesperson or outside sales representative.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT
Holy Spirit, You make me see everything & show me the way to reach my ideals. You give me the Divine Gift to forgive & forget the wrongs that are done to me & You are in all instances of my life with me. I, in this short dialogue, want to thank You for everything & confirm once more that I never want to be separated from You, no matter how great the material desire may be. I want to be with you, my Loved One, in Your perpetual glory. Amen.

ST. JUDE NOVENA
May the Sacred Heart Of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved & preserved throughout the world, now & forever. Sacred Heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. Say this prayer nine times a day, by the eighth day your prayer will be answered. It has never been known to fail. Publication must be promised. My prayers have been answered.

Thank you St. Jude & St. Anne for prayers answered. V. G.

Derrick McDonald scored six points Tuesday, including two free throws with :06 on the clock to clinch Canton's 61-57 victory over district host Novi. Teammate Mike Stafford gets in position to take a possible pass.

Rocks favored to win regional

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Canton is a defending regional champion in gymnastics, but its reign will probably end Saturday.

Coach John Cunningham is realistic about his team's prospects for a repeat, knowing it would require an upset of No. 2-ranked Plymouth Salem.

"As I've said all along, if we have a good meet and Salem has a bad meet, we can beat them," he said. "With so many girls qualified, I don't see it happening. We can give out the trophy now."

In a sport where the competitive edge is determined by fractions of a point, the No. 3-rated Chiefs have been a consistent four points behind Salem all season.

"I'm looking for an inspirational speech," Cunningham said. "It's hard to tell the girls 'If you do well, we'll be second' and 'If you do poorly, we'll be second.' "

THE GOOD news is that second place won't be all that bad. The top three teams from the 10-team regional will advance to the state finals on Friday, March 15, at Ann Arbor Pioneer High School.

Salem and Canton will be co-hosts for the regional. Competition begins at noon and will continue until approximately 4:30 p.m.

Based on season-long performances, Salem and Canton are almost assured of being the Nos. 1 and 2 teams in the regional. The Rocks scored 144.40 to win their second straight Western Lakes Activities Association title last week and have a season high of 144.60. Canton was second in the WLAA with a 138.50 and has scored as well as 142.20.

"It's in our gym so I think we have a little better chance to perform," said Cunningham of Canton and Salem, which share facilities.

"I expect to see Salem push 145 and Canton push 140. I expect Salem to do as well as they did at (the league) championships, and I think we'll do better than we did at championships. My expectation is we can't possibly fall that much on vault again."

Westland John Glenn and Adrian, both of which have scored in the mid 130s, are expected to battle for the third qualifying spot. The other teams have scores in the low 120s or high teens.

gymnastics

State swim preview, 2D

SALEM COACH Kathi Kinsella, like anyone who has followed the sport closely throughout the season, knows the Rocks are the favorites.

"I guess the numbers have been that way all year," she said. "But we have other goals than just winning. That is to have everybody on the team competing the very best they can.

"This should be our best shot, our best score, because of the number of people we have qualified. This is practically my entire team competing, so why shouldn't we get a good score?"

Both teams have qualified 13 individuals, most of them in more than two events, for the regional.

Salem has six all-around contestants: Courtney Gonyea, Kim Miller, Alysia Sofios, Autumn Bunch, Sarah Makins and Stefanie Angiulo. Triple qualifiers are Jenny Wong and Dana Driscol on vault, bars and floor exercise.

"I believe Kim will do her usual, consistent best," Kinsella said. "Courtney and Alysia have been working extremely hard. They get hidden in Kim's limelight, but they're just as consistent."

SALEM'S TWO-event people are Aimee Wong on vault and bars, Sue Farmer on vault and floor and Leanne Sovola and Theresa Giacherio on vault and beam. Meredith Giles will compete on vault.

"We have 13 qualified on vault and we'll be warming up for 26 minutes," Kinsella said. "That's more vault than we do in two days normally."

Canton also has six all-around qualifiers: Johanna Anderson, Dawn Clifford, Danielle Mirto, Heather Murphy, Kim Rennolds and Jenny Tedesco.

"Rennolds has a good chance to qualify all-around (for the state meet)," Cunningham said. "She's a potential 36-something all-around. And any one of the six all-arounders could qualify in any of the events."

Canton's Cara Stillings will compete on vault, beam and floor and Jill Mikaelian on vault and bars. Solo qualifiers are Laura Anderson and Cheri Burns on bars, Adrienne Brenner, Kim Wagenschutz and Jennifer Warnke on vault.

Anyone who qualifies can compete in the regional, which means in terms of numbers the likelihood of Canton overtaking the Rocks this week is slim.

"Canton and Salem will have seven or eight in every event," Cunningham said. "A lot of girls can make a mistake and (Salem) still have an optimum score."

IN ADDITION to three teams, the top eight individuals (plus ties) in each event and the top six all-arounders go to state. But teams can compete only four individuals in each event at state, and all four scores count.

That reduces the margin of error and increases the possibility of Canton finishing ahead of the Rocks. For that reason and the fact both are prohibitive favorites to qualify, the teams are looking forward to the state competition.

"There will be a lot of good teams coming up, and those teams are going to be a challenge," Cunningham said.

Salem is preparing itself for a showdown with No. 1-ranked Muskegon Mona Shores in the finals. The Sailors scored a state-record 146.80 at the Freeland Invitational and twice have finished ahead of Salem, but the Rocks didn't have all of their top gymnasts either time.

"Whatever we do at regional is cool, but we want it bad on March 15," Kinsella said. "We want to beat Mona Shores, and we're using the regional to get one step closer to that.

"First place gets a trophy and 15 medals (at the regional). The girls would like to have it, but it's the same thing at state and I think they would like to have those more."

Chiefs have early success in district

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

Plymouth Canton coach Dave Van Wagoner has made a point throughout the season of saying the Chiefs are indeed a good basketball team.

In the opener of the Novi district tournament Tuesday night, Canton emphasized the point by eliminating the host Wildcats 61-57.

Novi entered the game with a 17-3 record and the Kensington Valley Conference championship. The Chiefs, runners-up in the Western Lakes Activities Association and 13-8, will play Livonia Stevenson at 8:30 tonight in the second round.

In the first half of a double-header, WLAA champ Plymouth Salem faces Northville at 7 tonight. The championship game will be played at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

"We're excited to beat a 17-3 team," Van Wagoner said, "and we proved tonight we have a basketball team that Canton High School can be proud of."

"WE FINISHED second in a 12-team league, so we think that speaks for itself. Our overall record doesn't sound so good, but look at who we played. We scheduled tough teams by design and it's paying off."

Canton had balanced scoring with senior Brett Howell's 14 points leading the team. Mike Stafford had 12, Tony Coshatt and Kevin Holmes 10 apiece. Karl Wukie added nine points.

The Chiefs, who have been known to rely on the three-point shot, made a conscious effort to establish an inside game. Three of the four players scoring in double figures were post players, which is just the reverse of what occurred in the WLAA final Saturday when Salem defeated Canton.

"We stayed with Salem shooting threes," Van Wagoner said, "but if you're going to win a championship you have to be balanced inside and outside."

Canton attempted eight triples and made three Tuesday. The Chiefs made 12 treys in the WLAA final.

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

Junior center Tony Coshatt scored 10 points for Canton.

"That was by design," said McDonald, who clinched the victory with a pair of free throws with six seconds left. "(Van Wagoner) told us to pound it inside."

FREE THROWS helped Canton survive the fourth quarter as the Wildcats, who had been a cold-shooting team early in the game, found the range. The Chiefs were two fo r five from the floor in the last period but 14 of 21 at the line. Novi rallied behind nine-of-18 shooting.

Canton led 43-32 entering the final, but eight turnovers and a 12-4 run by the Wildcats cut the lead to 47-44. Wukie and Stafford scored the team's only field goals of the quarter to give the Chiefs a 56-50 lead, but Mike Sumerton converted a four-point play and hit another triple with 34 seconds remaining to get Novi within a point, 58-57.

"I started to wonder when he hit the three off the glass," Van Wagoner said. "My heart rate was up to about 200, but we had three seniors on the floor and we held our composure.

"Our guys hung in there and held them off. In their gym, that's a nice accomplishment."

Wukie made one of two free throws for a two-point lead (59-57), and Doug Soper, who scored a game-high 15 points for Novi, missed two free throws with :09 on the clock. McDonald's free throws were the decisive points.

"I was thinking we had too good a season to have it end with missed free throws," McDonald said. "I tried to keep the same rhythm I had the last I was at the line."

THE CHIEFS were at the line a lot. They were 26 of 41 overall, Novi 12 of 21. Holmes was eight 11, Howell six of 10, Wukie five 8 and McDonald four of four.

The fouls also took a toll on the Wildcats, who had four players — Mike Kramer, Matt Rolfes, Jeff Schram and Aaron Federspiel — foul out.

"It's been that way all year," Novi coach Bob Shoemaker said. "We play aggressively. We had four guards on the floor at the end."

Sumerton and Jason Walker had 10 points apiece, Federspiel nine and Schram seven. The Wildcats were 21 of 52 from the floor, Canton 16 of 41.

"We didn't shoot well or play well in the first half," Shoemaker said, "and I think a lot of that had to do with winning the KVC.

"It's the first time this school has won a championship, and it was our only goal. Today it was a matter of being a step behind, and I think it was a letdown from winning the championship."

The Chiefs had a rough start and fell behind right away, committing four turnovers and getting just one shot (a miss) in the first three minutes. But they rallied behind Howell's eight first-quarter points to tie 10-10.

Novi suffered from bad shooting in the second quarter, taking mostly perimeter shots and going two of 10 from the floor.

After Soper's basket tied the score at 14-14, the Wildcats didn't score for nearly six minutes while Canton ran off 10 unanswered points. The first of three triples by Sumerton made it 24-17 at halftime.

Livonia squads district champs

Livonia Churchill and Livonia Stevenson each won Class A volleyball districts last weekend and could be headed for another showdown in Saturday's regional at Ferndale High School.

The Chargers, 42-1-1 overall, meet host Ferndale in a regional semifinal at 10 a.m. Saturday. Stevenson, 32-7-6, will play Berkley in the other bracket, also at 10 a.m., with the championship scheduled for 11:30 a.m.

Churchill, which won the Western Lakes Activities Association championship, captured last Saturday's Redford Union district by beating Detroit Redford, Livonia Ladywood and Franklin.

In the district final, the Chargers benefitted from Janine Sproul's six points serving and Chrissy Daly's passing to beat city rival Franklin, 15-1, 15-12.

Churchill reached the final after beating rival Ladywood, 15-3, 15-8, in the semifinal. The second game was deadlocked at 8-8, but excellent defense by Alyssa Belaire, Keri Hawkins and Sproul helped the Chargers prevail.

Belaire and Julie Campau had six kills each in Game 2, Christina Garry had four, Sproul three and Hawkins two. Belaire recorded six digs, Hawkins five and Sproul four. Garry also led Churchill with six service points in the second game.

Belaire served six points in the first game rout and setter Amy Baron distributed the ball well from her setter position, according to Churchill coach Mike Hughes.

Ladywood, which made it to the Class A finals before losing last year, finished at 41-11 overall.

"In the first game, we used an experimental offense by lining up our best blocker (Rebecca Willey) against their best hitter (Christina Garry) and it totally failed," Ladywood coach Tom Teeters said. "We also moved Julie Wilson in the back row and she dug Garry, so that worked, but we never got our offense going.

"Churchill's strengths are its passing and serving. They are a level above us in that category. Mike does a very good job with that team."

Said Hughes: "In the second game they switched to what we expected, with Willey in the back row, but Belaire beat her with short tips. She did very well."

Senior Keli Haeger led Ladywood with 12 kills and only one error in the match and Wilson added 17 digs. Willey recorded two blocks and Jannel Hemme and Liz Gunn collected two kills apiece.

The Chargers started the day in easy fashion with a 15-0, 15-4 thumping of Redford. Whitney Said had two kills and zero errors and Stephanie Speen served 10 points for the winners.

STEVENSON, MEANWHILE, had an even easier time in winning the Novi district. The Spartans began the day with a 15-2, 15-7 win over Plymouth Canton.

Sue Bell led the win with 10 straight serving points in Game 2. For the match, Bell had eight aces and no misses in 15 serves.

"She had an outstanding top-spin serve," coach Lee Cagle said.

Alicia Smith served points 11-15 in Game 2.

In the championship, Stevenson ousted Novi, 15-7, 15-2. After being tied, 6-6, in the early going of Game 1, Cagle told his players to pick up the pace against the Wildcats.

"We were playing at the pace they dictated — slow, off-speed stuff," Cagle said. "I told our kids to pick it up and get more intense. We also pulled a blocker away (from the net) and that took away their tip and roll shots."

Patty Diamond and Laura Zatorski were the catalysts of Stevenson's offense with 19 and eight assists, respectively. Cagle, who expects a major test at the Ferndale regional, would have liked a better challenge in the district.

He expected to meet Northville, but the Mustangs were ousted earlier in the district. Six of Stevenson's losses this year have come against Top-10 opponents.

"Although I like the kids to win, it's better to have to play tough all the time, then you don't lose your edge," Cagle said. "Now we have to play tough and not sloppy because the next match is going to be tough. We need rhythm."

WAYNE MEMORIAL won its third straight Class A district title under coach Ann Kolnitys, as the Zebras beat Westland John Glenn, Belleville and Romulus Saturday in convincing style.

Wayne, 39-5 overall, hosts a regional Saturday and will meet Dearborn at 4 p.m. Lincoln Park and Monroe meet in the other regional semifinal at 4 p.m. and the winners battle in the championship immediately following.

The Zebras weren't challenged in the district, as they ousted Glenn, 15-3, 15-5 and Belleville, 15-2, 15-3, before reaching the finals. In the final round, Wayne drilled Romulus, 15-3, 15-9.

Seniors Brandy Caincross and Gerri Ruffing led Wayne's attack with 17 and 12 kills, respectively. Juniors Katie Corwin and Vicki Rohraff had eight kills each. Senior Denise Walsh finished with 10 service aces.

Ruffing led with 13 digs, while Walsh had 11, and Kolniyts gave credit to setter Laura Fisher, who had 40 kill assists.

"She just played a real nice game, took charge of the team and put balls where they wanted them," Kolnitys said. "Laura made everyone look good."

Saturday's regional semifinal matchup with Dearborn is interesting because the Zebras lost to the Pioneers during the regular season.

"We're going to have to serve well and play together as a team," Kolnitys said. "If we play as a team we shouldn't have a problem. We can't get overconfident because any team can win on any given day. Dearborn beat me earlier this year so I'm sure they'll give me a nice game."

Rocks, Chiefs go to state

By Dan O'Meara
staff writer

swimming

Plymouth Salem won't have a Ron Orris on which to hang its hopes this year, but the Rocks will again be well-represented in the state swimming and diving championships.

The prelims are Friday and the finals Saturday at the University of Michigan's Don Canham Natatorium. The second-day session starts at 2 p.m.

Salem has qualified for all three relays and individuals in three events. Plymouth Canton has two relays and one individual entered.

Curt Witthoff will compete for Salem in the 100-yard backstroke and the 200 individual medley, and he also will swim on the medley and 400 freestyle relays.

Albert Sneath qualified in the 100 butterfly and will anchor Salem's medley and 400 freestyle relays.

WITTHOFF'S BEST times are 2:02.60 in the IM and 56.66 in the backstroke. Sneath has a top time of 55.39 in the butterfly.

Salem coach Chuck Olson estimates Witthoff might have to drop two seconds in the IM to reach the finals on Saturday, but he already has reduced his time by six seconds. Sneath, in the butterfly, and Witthoff, in the backstroke, might need to drop another 1½ seconds.

"I haven't seen an awful lot of fast times," Olson said, "but enough (veterans of the last state meet) are coming back that they'll have to be a lot faster."

The Rocks won the Western Lakes Activities Association championship in the medley relay and have the area's best time at 1:40.40. Jon Stridiron and Matt Erickson round out the unit.

Salem's 200 freestyle relay of Joe Pawluszka, Brett Petroskey, Gary Bergman and Erickson has done 1:31.55, and the 400 freestyle team of Pawluszka, Bergman, Witthoff and Sneath has a best time of 3:20.43.

"The relays are legitimate," Olson said, adding the Rocks should drop two seconds in the 200 and three in the 400 to reach the optimum range. "The medley probably has the best shot.

"THE GUYS have been swimming faster and faster, and I'm sure not going to tell them they can't go any faster."

Orris left his mark last year when he won two events and set records in both. He won the butterfly in 49.79 and the IM in 1:50.97, but it's possible those records could fall this year.

East Lansing's David Klaviter, who was runner-up to Orris in the butterfly last year and edged Orris the previous year, could set a record, according to Olson. Other threats are Lansing Eastern's Ian Mull in both events and Bloomfield Hills Andover's Mark D'Errico in the IM and Sam Kim in the butterfly.

Salem was ranked among the state's top 10 teams in the coaches poll, and the Rocks would like to do that well this weekend.

"To do that, we'll have to get all three relays in and at least one individual," Olson said.

"A lot of teams around the state with one good swimmer are going to be there. We were ranked seventh in the country last year, but that was pretty much because of Orris."

CANTON'S CRAIG Steshetz has qualified in the breaststroke and as a member of the medley and 200 freestyle relay teams. He ranks third in Observerland with a 1:02.97 time in the breaststroke.

Doug Nevi, Ron Trosin and Mark Ealovega will compete in the medley relay, and Jeff Clark, Mike Orris and Ealovega round out the freestyle unit. The Chiefs have times of 1:41.07 in the medley and 1:32.05 in the 200.

Salem diver Pat McManaman and Canton divers Nick Atwell and Jon Stirling had qualified for regional competition Tuesday.

Shamrocks win league title

swimming

Redford Catholic Central's swimming team prepped itself for Friday's Class A meet with a Catholic League championship Sunday at Oakland University.

The Shamrocks, who were 10-1 in dual meets during the regular season, used their superior depth to record three individual titles, three relay championships and 427½ points.

Birmingham Brother Rice had five winners but took second place with 364½ points, followed by the University of Detroit Jesuit, 206; Warren De La Salle, 105; and Harper Woods Notre Dame, 100.

CC is No. 2-ranked behind Bloomfield Hills Andover and first-year coach Pete Leonhardt believes the Shamrocks are capable of holding that spot at Friday and Saturday's Class A meet at the University of Michigan.

The Don Canham Natatorium is the site of the Class A meet, which begins at 2 p.m. Friday. The finals will begin at 2 p.m. Saturday. Tickets to Friday's semifinal round action cost $3 and Saturday's final round costs $4.

"I'M VERY EXCITED about it," Leonhardt said. "Andover has all the studs and we've got the depth. We'll take it from there and see what happens. I'll be very happy if we held on and got second in the state."

As for winning the Catholic League, Leonhardt called "depth and relay strength the key.

"Brother Rice is a well-coached, fine team, but we've got a few more guys than they do," Leonhardt said. "It was an exciting meet. Lots of state-qualifying times were made."

Troy Shumate was the leader for CC, winning the 200-yard Individual Medley in 2:02.20 and the 500-yard freestyle in 4:56.56. Mike Hoeflein was the Shamrocks' other individual champion, taking the 100-yard backstroke in 55.45.

CC won all three relays.

Hoeflein, Devon Fekety, Shumate and Randy Teeters won the 200 medley relay in 1:42.30. Alan Afsari, Brian Dynda, John Brogan and Shumate took the 200 freestyle relay in 1:30.60, and the 400 freestyle relay was won by Brogan, Dynda, Afsari and Hoeflein in 3:18.80.

CC FRESHMAN Steve Reinke failed to win an event, but he took second place in the 100 butterfly in 54.17, just behind Brother Rice's Carlos Bustos' time of 54.16.

"The freshman swam great, but the senior just stuck it out and got a fingernail on him," Leonhardt said. "Senior pride was what prevailed."

Other winners for Rice included: Josh Gross, 200 freestyle (1:45.80) and 100 freestyle (48.16); Ken Ehler, 100 breaststroke (1:02.81); and Dave Lee, diving (350.35 points).

Rice eliminates Shamrocks . . .

hockey

By Mike Rosenbaum
staff writer

Birmingham Brother Rice is known as an excellent academic high school. But one lesson which the seniors on Rice's hockey team will never learn is how to lose a state regional. The Warriors won their fourth straight Class A regional championship at Oak Park's Compuware Arena Friday night, edging Detroit Catholic Central, 3-2.

For first-year Rice coach Michael Brown, it was his first victory in three tries this season over his alma mater.

"This was real special for me," Brown said, "because I played for Catholic Central . . . we outplayed them twice and lost twice . . . the players tried (too hard) to get me my first Catholic Central game."

In the regular-season losses to the Shamrocks, Rice fell behind early both times. On Friday, the Warriors took charge early and outshot the Shamrocks 12-5 in the first period. However, Rice (18-5-1) could not dent the Catholic Central (15-7-1) net and settled for a scoreless period.

Shamrock star Jesse Hubenschmidt did break loose once, late in the period, but Rice netminder Derek Billis poke-checked the puck away from the senior.

Part of Brown's strategy was to shadow Hubenschmidt closely in the neutral zone, forcing one of the other Catholic Central skaters to carry the puck into Warrior territory. The strategy was effective as Hubenschmidt did not figure in the Shamrock's scoring.

BROTHER RICE opened the scoring in the second period when Art Leo put a 25-foot snap shot past goalie Mike Brusseau — the only mistake the freshman netminder made all night. Leo's goal was assisted by Matt Allen at 2:22.

Two minutes later, Brusseau stopped a Greg Sharbaugh shot, but Tim Capaldi knocked the rebound past the fallen goalie. The assists went to Sharbaugh and Steve Morrow at 4:10.

Rice maintained its pressure, but the Shamrocks withstood a flurry of shots and broke out two-on-one. Paul Schloss fed the puck to Bill Baaki who put it in the far corner at 5:34.

Baaki's goal gave the Shamrocks a lift, and they took charge late in the period. After a strong save by Billis, Catholic Central's Dave Gallagher shot the puck between Billis' legs. Billis deflected the puck but it trickled past him and barely cleared the goal line, tying the game at 13:03 of the period. Matt Gorski drew the assist.

"Too bad the second period ended when it did," said Catholic Central coach John Gumbleton. "I though we had momentum going our way."

AS THE THIRD period began it was clear the Shamrocks had lost their momentum. Brother Rice was back in control, but Brusseau stopped Capaldi and Chris Freeman in the first minutes of the period. When the Warriors finally broke the tie, it was only after Brusseau was left defenseless or, more accurately, defenseman-less.

After Brusseau kicked out a shot from the right point, the Warriors swarmed around the puck, firing three more shots at the freshman. Brusseau stopped the first two before Morrow, left all alone in front of the net, finally banged the puck home, at 10:42. Capaldi and Grohar drew the assists.

Rice spent the remainder of the game controlling the puck and protecting its net.

Both coaches praised their teams' character, and said that Rice was a legitimate contender for the state Class A title. Brown said the Warriors "really hung in there after they gave up those two goals . . . we have the team to go all the way if we get the breaks."

Gumbleton said: "My kids played very, very well," adding that Rice is "a very good team. They're going to win the 'states,' I think."

Rice will play a quarterfinal game Wednesday at the Flint IMA Arena.

. . . after CC bounces Stevenson

hockey

By Neal Zipser
staff writer

Livonia Stevenson goalie Dave Labadie seemed like a brick wall Thursday for Redford Catholic Central, but junior Bill Baaki found a crack with only 28 seconds left in the game.

Baaki scored the decisive goal, his second of the game, on a deflection, lifting the Shamrocks to a 3-2 victory over the Spartans at Oak Park's Compuware Arena. The win put CC in Friday's regional final against rival Birmingham Brother Rice. See related story.

Labadie, who made a total of 28 saves, robbed CC of several excellent scoring opportunities in the game's final period. But with just 34 seconds remaining, junior Matt Fleury uncorked a low slapshot from the blue line. Labadie went down on the shot, but Baaki was able to get his stick in front of the liner and lift the puck over Labadie's left shoulder.

"I saw the play develop and came in," Baaki said. "Matt made a good shot and did a good job."

Both coaches said the hard-fought game was anybody's to win in the final minutes.

"WHICHEVER team was going to win this game stole the game," Shamrock coach John Gumbleton said.

"It was whoever was going to get the break would win the game and they got the bounce," Spartan coach Paul Ferguson said.

CC's Dave Gallagher opened the night's scoring 9:12 into the first period. The junior pounced on a rebound in front of the Spartan net and drilled a backhand past Labadie. Senior Tom Vaquera and junior Scott Johnson drew assists.

Stevenson (11-11-2) tied the game 30 seconds into the second period, as junior Frank Eupizi tipped a loose puck into the Shamrock net. Senior Nick Sata and sophomore Scott Johnson assisted.

The Shamrocks (15-6-1) answered 50 seconds later as Vaquera and junior Paul Schloss set up Baaki for his first goal.

Junior Aaron Moorehouse tallied Stevenson's final goal, as he tipped in a shot that went through CC goalie Mike Brusseau's legs. Eupizi and junior Mike Lindberg assisted.

Brusseau made 23 saves and the 5-foot-5 freshman matched Labadie's performance with heroic stops of his own — the final coming at the game's buzzer.

"HOPEFULLY no one will steal him from us," Gumbleton said of Brusseau, who was in net in every game for the Shamrocks except for a period and a half. "We started off slowly. We wanted the game, but didn't play like we wanted it. It may have been a little over-confidence. I think Stevenson really wanted the game."

Ferguson said the tough loss will benefit his young team next year. He had 15 players returning next season.

"I'm happy with our kids and congratulate them on having a good season," Ferguson said. "I also congratulate CC and wish them luck against Rice. This is a good lesson for us, but it's a hard way to learn it They know now what it takes to win the big games. They have tasted it."

CC has beaten Rice twice this year by identical 6-4 scores, but Gumbleton knows the third time will not be easy.

"It is extremely difficult to beat a team three times," he said. "We looked tired tonight. I didn't want to play an overtime."

Rice earned its spot in the finals by routing Southfield Lathrup 10-0, behind hat tricks by seniors Chris Freeman and Pat Grohar. The game was stopped with approximately nine minutes left (mercy rule).

CC routs Blue Jays

By Ray Setlock
staff writer

When Steve Whitlow was removed from the Redford Catholic Central basketball squad for disciplinary reasons last month, coach Bernie Holowicki knew there would be a large void to fill at point guard.

Without many choices, Holowicki was forced to move 6-foot-6 post player Bob Kummer back (again) to point guard.

Although his ballhandling skills may need minor improvements, Kummer has settled into his new position.

On Monday, the 6-5 junior tallied 20 points to lead host CC to a 71-58 victory over Southfield in the opening round of the Class A district tournament.

"I need to improve my ballhandling skills over the summer," Kummer admits. "But I think I have enough tools to handle the postion."

Kummer, who was successful at penetrating against Southfield's much smaller guards, converted 9-of-10 free throws and added a three-pointer.

"A lot of people were counting us out in this district," Kummer said. "People have been telling me to get ready for baseball because our basketball season is going to be over after the Southfield game. I told them that when districts roll around, everybody has the same record. Anything can happen."

CC GOT off to a quick start and led 19-9 after one quarter and 27-14 midway though the second period.

"Being down so early in the game we weren't going to get rattled," Southfield coach Harry VandenBrink said. "But give CC credit, they hung in there tough."

The Blue Jays went on a 10-2 run late in the second quarter and trailed by just five at halftime, 29-24.

Chargers overcome miscues

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Livonia Churchill made plenty of mistakes, but it was host Livonia Franklin that wound up shooting blanks on Monday, falling in its Class A district basketball opener, 59-50.

The Chargers' first-round state tourney victory was no thing of beauty. They coughed up the ball 30 times, but withstood a late Franklin rally to advance to the second round against Garden City (see related story).

Churchill, however, shot 22 of 36 from the floor for 61 percent, while Franklin connected on only 21 of 67 shots for 31 percent.

"Our goal was to get 70 shots, we had to up-tempo the game," Franklin coach Rod Hanna said. "We followed our game plan, but we just couldn't put the ball in the basket."

The Chargers, who defeated Franklin for the third time this season, were led by 6-foot-3 senior forward Scott Bowser, who tallied 16 points on seven of 11 shooting from the floor. Randy Calcaterra, a 6-7 senior, added 15 points and 13 rebounds, while junior guard Marcus Sarnovsky, who hit a couple of key baskets down the stretch, finished with 11.

"WE NEVER GOT into the flow offensively, but give Franklin's defense credit," Churchill coach Fred Price said. "They were doubling down and draped all around Randy (Calcaterra), so that left Scott Bowser open and he came through with 16.

"And Marcus, at key times, penetrated and made the jump shot."

The Chargers trailed early, 9-2, but came back to lead 16-13 after one quarter. They held a 31-21 halftime lead.

Churchill hit six of its first seven shots of the third quarter to take a commanding 43-25 advantage, but Franklin pulled back within 10 after three quarters, 45-35, on a tip-in by Russ Keberly with 1:10 to play.

The Patriots, pressing all over the floor, pulled within two, 48-46, with 4:47 to go on a three-pointer by Dave Roman.

Calcaterra answered with bucket only 15 seconds later and the Patriots, despite numerous scoring opportunities, never could get any closer.

"It was a case of when we had our chances to put it away at the free throw line, we started missing," Price said. "Eight of 17 (free throws in the fourth) will not salt it away."

BUT THE CHARGERS had enough gas to force the Patriots into some miserable shooting statistics. Part of the problem was that Franklin was without one of its top scorers, 6-3 senior Steve McCool (sidelined by a wrist injury).

Franklin's top three scorers on the night — Keith Roberts (19 points), Steve Stasevich (14) and Roman (10) — shot a combined 17 of 54 (33 percent).

The Chargers played a box-and-one on Roberts, hounding the junior point-guard into a 7 of 24 shooting night.

"They lost one of their main kids (McCool), but the other kids came to play," Price said. "I thought Russ McQuaid did a good job defensively on Roberts and Steve Townsend gave us some important points (five) and took a couple of key charges for us."

Franklin, which bowed out with a 10-11 overall record, simply could not match up with the Chargers' big front line of Calcaterra, Bowser and 6-4 Mike Thomas (eight points).

"WITHOUT McCOOL we had to take more outside shots and we really had no inside game," Hanna said. "We had nobody to post up or set picks inside for easy layups.

"And we didn't rebound the second and third shots. We're not big on the front line and it showed. Russ Keberly was our leading rebounder tonight (12) and he's only a 6-footer. Churchill's a good club, they're big and they've got shooters. They have 'bodies' who can board."

Despite the loss, Hanna was satisfied with his team's effort.

"We hustled, we had to because we caused 30 turnovers," he said. "I'm proud of the kids. They gave it all they could. But you can't win unless you have offensive players who can shoot the ball."

How to manage stress

Managing stress is the focus of a Schoolcraft College class beginning Wednesday, March 20.

The class teaches participants to handle their own stress and minimize stress for the people they supervise. Coping in productive ways and making stress work for you are among the concepts taught.

Classes meet 7-10 p.m. Wednesdays. They are offered in cooperation with the American Management Association. Fee is $105.

Additional information is available by calling 462-4448. Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty, Livonia.

SC graduation features Romney

Former governor George Romney will be the featured speaker at Schoolcraft College graduation ceremonies Saturday, May 4.

Romney served as governor from 1963 to 1969 before resigning to become U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

Before entering politics, Romney served as chairman and chief executive officer of American Motors.

A longtime advocate of volunteerism, Romney has served as a member of the President's Advisory Board of Private Sector Initiatives and is a founding director of the Points of Light Foundation established by President George Bush.

Pops concert to aid Plymouth Symphony

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

If the scores of the Broadway hits "Phantom of the Opera" and "Les Miserables" enchant you, why not spend the evening with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra on Friday or Saturday, March 15-16?

For its fourth and fifth concerts of the 1990-91 season, the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra, under the musical direction of Russell Reed, will present its annual "Solid Gold Pops Concert."

For the first time, the concert will be a benefit for the orchestra. It will start at 8 p.m. in the new Golden Fox dining area of the Fox Hills Country Club, 8768 N. Territorial, in Plymouth.

Guest artist for the concert is Luis Maldonado, euphonium soloist. Guest conductors for the evening are Linda Hart, Plymouth Symphony League president, and Fred Hill, leader of the Briefcase Brigade in Plymouth's annual Fourth of July parade down Main St.

Along with selections from "Phantom of the Opera" and "Les Miserables" by Andrew Lloyd Weber, the orchestra will perform Bizet's L'Arlesienne Suite No. 2, Emperor Waltzes by Strauss and John Philip Sousa's patriotic march, "Stars and Stripes."

"OUR POPS is a little different this year," said Linda Alvarado, who serves on the Plymouth Symphony Society Board of Directors. "In conjunction with our 45th anniversary, the pops benefit is kind of a celebration and support of the symphony."

"There will be cabaret seating at tables of eight," Alvarado said. "A pre-Pops dinner will be served earlier, at 6:30 p.m."

Tickets for the benefit pops concert are $25, with seating for tables of eight starting at 7:30 p.m. Along with the evening of entertainment, gourmet coffees and desserts will be served at intermission. Tickets for the pre-Pops dinner are $15 each (tables with seating for eight) with the purchase of a concert ticket.

Cellist Louise Bradley has been a member of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra for more than 25 years. She said she worries about Gov. John Engler's proposed budget cuts and "how the orchestra is going to make it."

"Music and the arts are the first to get cut," Bradley said.

UNDER AN executive order from the governor, a Plymouth Symphony Orchestra grant of $6,000 from the Michigan Council for the Arts was put on hold. According to sources inside the symphony, the freeze could jeopardize future concerts. Production costs for one concert are $10,000.

"I hope that the Solid Gold Pops is a success," Bradley said. "I'm glad to have the orchestra to play in. I worry about not having an orchestra. The cello's been my life."

Bradley and several other PSO musicians have donated their talents this year to the symphony. Bradley said the reason she donated her talents was "for the good of the orchestra."

Mark and Peggy Smith, with family dog Chloe, enjoy the spacious kitchen. The fireplaced kitchen, overlooking the treed yard, includes authentic tin fixtures and handsome, pine cabinets.

The Smiths' house, an authentic replica of a Saltbox-style house dating to 1700, is made of rough cedar painted with a transparent, gray stain. The house, featuring the traditional low, sloping roof line, backs to wooded, state land.

Couple's dream house styled in Early American

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

AFTER HOUSE hunting for a year, Mark and Peggy Smith finally decided to build. They selected a contractor, picked out a spacious Colonial-style house and had almost signed on the dotted line when they had second thoughts.

Both realized the house would be only a steppingstone to the kind of place they dreamed of owning: an authentic replica of an 18th-century, Early American-style house.

A family friend had just moved into a new Saltbox-style house, an American architectural style that dates to 1700. Peggy admits she was "a little nervous" when she toured the house.

"I've always loved the more primitive American home styles," Peggy said. "I like Tudors and Colonials, but I appreciate the modest, more common homes."

So in fall 1987, Peggy, a free-lance artist, and Mark, an account executive at EDS, decided to design and build a Saltbox-style house, sticking as close as possible to the authentic design.

The couple obtained a construction loan, sold their Farmington Hills house and moved into an apartment with their teenage son and daughter. To keep the construction cost reasonable, Mark became general contractor.

'There are limitations to the Saltbox style. It was difficult designing the staircase and good-sized bedrooms around a central chimney.'

— Mark Smith homeowner

THE COUPLE hired Carl T. Gaiser, a Farmington architect and Mark's former college roommate, to design a floor plan.

Gaiser worked with the couple for two months, altering the layout of the 2,500-square-foot house several times to accommodate three generous-sized bedrooms. The couple also added an art workroom on the first floor for Peggy and an office for Mark.

"There are limitations to the Saltbox style," Mark said. "It was difficult designing the staircase and good-sized bedrooms around a central chimney."

Besides working around the chimney (which they finally "staggered" to allow more space inside), they lost some living area due to the slanted roof line. The roof has a short slope in front and a long slope in the back.

In Colonial days, the Saltbox style was built with a traditional roof. Later, the house was enlarged by adding a room on the back and extending the roof down over the addition.

The couple looked at several lots, but both were sold immediately on a site just under an acre in Farmington Hills's Ridgewood subdivision. Besides the rural setting, which seemed perfect for the primitive-style house, the lot backs to wooded, state land and is just walking distance to Heritage Park.

BEFORE THE groundbreaking, Mark and the architect attended a seminar on home construction sponsored by Home Building Finance Corp. There, Mark obtained the names of dozens of licensed, sub-contractors who also had taken the course.

He also received a book titled, "Be Your Own House Contractor," which became his bible throughout the seven-month construction. By contracting the work himself and following the guidelines learned in class, construction was finished right on budget, about 25 percent below the builder's price.

Museum, bungelow, contest — all something special

Bob Sklar

TAPPING THE creative pipeline:

• Tribute time — It's chock-full of local history.

The Plymouth Historical Museum provides a panoramic view of Plymouth's storied past and a lively peek into the lifestyles of the pioneers of Detroit's western hinterlands.

Owned and operated by the Plymouth Historical Society, the social history museum focuses on the period from 1825, when the first house was built in Plymouth, to the early 1900s.

In the Dunning Memorial Building at 155 S. Main, the museum was built by Margaret Dunning in memory of her parents, Charles and Bessie. Bessie helped form the historical society in 1948 and was its first curator.

I'm delighted to salute the history-rich museum on the 15th anniversary of its opening to the public on Feb. 14, 1976. That followed two years of devoted volunteer work.

As The Plymouth Museum Memo editor Bruce Scott wrote in the latest issue: "We are where we are because of the dedication, the talents, the hard work and the gifts of a lot of good people."

Added Dunning: "It is not what you have. It is what you do with what you have. So today, our ambitions, creative ability, hard work, gifts, advice and a few heartaches have created our artistic and informative museum.

"It has taken many, many people working together to gain this respect. I particularly think of those who so freely gave of their time and knowledge to help create this living portrayal of our past."

Well put, Margaret!

• Preserving past — Once the bungelow is restored, the recreated turn-of-the-century Newburgh/Ann Arbor Trail intersection at Livonia's Greenmead Historical Village will look complete.

"Because it sat next to the Geer General Store, it's important to recreating what the intersection was," says Sue Daniel, Livonia Historical Commission chairwoman.

The 1½-story, two-bedroom house dates back to 1913. The Geer family lived in it for a short time.

Moved to Greenmead in 1978, it's on a foundation and has both heat and some electricity. Work is still needed inside and out. Architectural drawings were done in 1983.

As an exhibit building, the house, renovated at a cost of $60,000, will boast period furnishings acquired through the years.

The vintage site also sports a train station in addition to the Geer store and the bungelow.

• Heralding history — For eight years, the Farmington Historical Society has whetted the appetites of local history buffs.

The lure: a challenging contest encouraging original research into Farmington and Farmington Hills history.

The Lee S. Peel Historical Research Contest is aptly named after Lee Peel, Farmington's master historian and a popular former Farmington High history teacher.

Peel published the local history book "Farmington: A Pictorial History" in 1971. He's working on an updated version due out next year.

Contest eligibility is divided into four categories: elementary school grades 1-5, middle school grades 6-8, senior high grades 9-12, college and adults.

Historical vignettes may consist of audio, visual or written material. Sources may range from reminiscences and diaries to paintings and sketches. So scrounge those attics and cellars!

Suggested topics include the DUR, North Farmington, dairy and cheese industries, the Winery, flour and lumber mills, English and German settlements, schools, churches, Indian lore and contemporary history.

For entry details, call Nancy Leonard: 476-4125. Entry deadline is March 30. Four "best in age" prizes are $25 each. First prize, The Lee S. Peel Writing Award, is $100. Second prize is $50. Winners will be honored at a May dinner.

Even if you don't win a prize, you'll gain a richer understanding of the Farmington area's formative years.

"There are so many advantages to building yourself," Mark said. "We had more flexibility and were able to customize the house."

Being their own boss, the Smiths took time to obtain 100-year-old beams from a barn near Morris, Mich., for the great room and living room. They also hunted for authentic, thumb latches for interior doors and hand cast strap hinges and a knocker for the front door.

Peggy also found authentic, tin fixtures at Horwood's Country House in Plymouth. Through a Garden City glass company, she ordered old-fashioned, bullet glass from Germany, which was placed over the front door for natural lighting.

THOUGH BUILDING a house yourself has advantages, the couple quickly points out the downside.

Mark remembers the long days, often working at the house eight hours or more after leaving his regular job. He had to check the work done during the day and once fired a sub-contractor for an unsatisfactory job. During construction, Peggy often drove around town searching for masons, roofers and other workers to hire.

"I used to pull off the road and take names and phone numbers if I saw someone working construction," Peggy said. "I was always on the lookout."

Mark learned early in the construction that the rough carpenter is one of the most important tradesman. Taking off only Christmas day, their carpenter did the framing, installed drywall, hung doors and installed beams and plank, pine flooring throughout the house.

After serving fast-food dinners on make-shift, saw-horse tables, Peggy stained and sealed the floors and trim throughout the house. Mark painted the interior and finished the kitchen, which includes custom, pine cabinets and a work island. The kitchen fireplace includes a pot for cooking.

Though it was difficult building during the winter, the toughest job was preparing the basement floor for the pouring of cement after a spring thaw. Mark and his son, Adam, removed wheelbarrows full of muck from the basement and poured layers of pea gravel to create a base for concrete.

THE SUMMER the family moved into the house, Mark painted the home's rough cedar exterior with a transparent, gray stain. "It was so hot. I'd sometimes paint at night while Peggy held a spotlight," Mark said.

The home's interior is a pleasing mix of Early American-style furnishings and accessories, including a 100-year-old church pew in the kitchen. The couple chose off-white for the walls, which are decorated with Peggy's cross stitch, art work, hand-made baskets and custom stenciling.

Mark built the pine armoire in the great room from a plan Peggy made. Windows are decorated with simple, cotton curtains sheared on dowel rods.

Plymouth Nursery designed a herb garden around the brick walkway. The garden includes plants found in the American colonies before 1800. Peggy added Baby's Breath and other favorite flowers for color.

Mark, who recently earned a Residential Builders License, couldn't be happier with the house."We used to drive around and look at other subdivisions, but we don't now. We'll never sell."

The Smiths' master suite is decorated with red and green, custom stenciling, rag rugs and simple, cotton window treatments. Peggy Smith made the quilted bedspread. Quilts made by her grandmother and great-grandmother hang on a handmade quilt rack.

Solid Gold Pops Concert to aid symphony

Luis Maldonado guest artist

Edith Schutze has played cello with the Plymouth Symhony for 45 years. She also donated her talents to the orchestra this season.

"I've done that for several years now," Schutze said. "I'd hate to see the orchestra no longer exist."

"THE POPS concert is always seen as the (PSO) money raiser that would pull the orchestra through," Schutze said. "The rental of music has gone sky high, and that's just one of the costs involved in putting on a concert."

Besides hosting the Solid Gold Benefit Pops Concert, the symphony kicked off its individual benefactor campaign. Linda Alvarado said that "it can't be stressed enough, the importance of individual donor fund raising."

'The pops concert is always seen as the (PSO) money raiser that would pull the orchestra through. The rental of music has gone sky high, and that's just one of the costs involved in putting on a concert.'

The March 15 and 16 concerts conclude with a patriotic salute to the Stars and Stripes. Luis Maldonado, euphonium soloist, is being brought in especially to perform the patriotism-stirring march by John Phillip Sousa.

The euphonium is a member of the brass family, more specifically a tenor tuba.

MALDONADO IS a tuba/euphonium instructor at Central Michigan University with an extensive background in teaching and performance. He received his Master of Music degree in euphonium performance from the University of Michigan and is pursuing a Doctor of Musical Arts degree.

Maldonado has won two international competitions, the third annual Japan Wind and Percussion Competition in the euphonium division and the Leonard Falcone International Euphonium Solo Competition in the artist level division.

Because of the popularity of past Solid Gold Pops concerts, reservations are a must. Tickets may be purchased on Visa or Mastercard at Evola Music Center, 215 Ann Arbor Road, and Beitner Jewelry, 904 W. Ann Arbor Trail, in Plymouth; Bookstall on the Main, 116 E. Main, and Orin Jewelers, 101 E. Main, in Northville; Hammell Music, 15630 Middlebelt, in Livonia.

You can also call the Fox Hills Country Club at 453-7272, Monday through Friday, between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Besides donating her talents to the Plymouth Symphony, Louise Bradley volunteers her time to the library at Fiegel school. She believes that the arts are an essential part of education.

"Music's been my life. I'm strictly a long-haired musician who believes that the arts are a must," Bradley said.

Musica Viva! unveils promising new talent

Avigdor Zaromp

With a handful of celebrities dominating the classical music stage, the prospects for the less famous are limited, especially in this time of austere budgets and declining public and private support.

The discovery of promising, young talent comes like a fresh breath and may even suggest a new lease on life for classical music.

Two such artists appeared Feb. 22 on a program of the "Musica Viva!" series, at the Smith Theatre on the Oakland Community College Orchard Ridge campus, Farmington Hills. They are violinist Hamao Fujiwara and pianist Katsurako Mikami, a man and woman team, who concertize and are on the faculties of various prestigious institutions.

Flutist Ginka Gerova-Ortega, known to audiences here through her own many performances, joined these two guest performers for a program of works by Telemann, Bartok, Brahms, Kuhlau, Bach and Sarasate. Gerova-Ortega is the artistic director of the "Musica Viva!" series.

THE TRIO Sonata A Minor by Telemann and a Trio in G Major, Op. 119 by Kuhlau were the two works on the program with all three performers. These were also the two works outside the standard repertoire.

Telemann, who was a contemporary of Bach and Handel and more prolific than either one, has only a small fraction of his music published today.

Kuhlau is known primarily to piano students through his sonatinas, which offer remarkable variety and action even to beginners with limited technique. In the Telemann work, the role of the piano is minimal. Traditionally it is the role of the basso continuo, normally performed on the harpsichord with an optional cello. This sonata in four movements has the traditional slow-fast-slow-fast structure.

There was good communication and interaction between the flute and violin in the slow movements. Some of the challenging runs on the flute were overshadowed by the violin in the fast movements, however.

The piano had a much more dominant role in the Kuhlau trio, and some of its material reminded me of the sonatinas. But the work as a whole is clearly not for amateurs, and I found its final rondo especially captivating in its vitality and well coordinated, joyful performance.

QUALITY PREVAILED in the more established masterpieces on this program. The Sonata for Violin and Piano in D Minor by Brahms received a competent performance for most part, with an approach that was too passive in the first movement, especially the piano.

More energetic intensity was evident only in the final movement. Some of the spiciness may have been left behind, with Bartok's First Rhapsody for Violin and Piano, which preceded the Brahms sonata.

Among the many good performances that I have heard of Bach's Chaconne, from his Partita No. 2 for unaccompanied violin, there were few as meticulous and as nearly flawless as this performance by Fujiwara.

He showed keen perception of the intricate structure of this ultimate masterpiece, differentiating articulately between the parts. Even in the more showy "Carmen Fantasy" by Sarasate, virtuosity took second place to art.

The degree of control that Fujiwara is capable of is astounding. He approaches multiple stops, higher harmonics, pizzicato and intricate bowing techniques with the same natural ease one would approach a simple, benign passage.

An arrangement of a Mozart Rondo by Kreisler, played as an encore, brought this delightful program to an end. Future programs of "Musica Viva!" will be 'The Mephisto Drama,' featuring music by Liszt set to original poetry, on April 12. Final event, "Flute Extravaganza at the DIA" will take place on May 10.

LSO to spotlight the masters

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

Looking for an evening that's a little different with someone familiar?

On Friday, March 15, the unfamiliar music of the masters will fill the intimate, chamber-style auditorium of the Livonia Civic Center Library as the Livonia Symphony Orchestra, under the musical direction of Francesco DiBlasi, performs in concert at 8 p.m.

The evening's fare: "Unfamiliar by the Familiar."

Guest soloists are three LSO members: Kristen Williams, principal oboist and orchestra manager; John Pirtle, principal hornist; and Virginia Hazen on French horn, performing Mozart's "Divertimento No. 11 in D."

OTHER SELECTIONS scheduled on the program include "Overture to Prometheus" by Beethoven, "Afternoon of a Faun" by Debussy, "Serenade for 13 Instruments" by Strauss and "Selections from Porgy and Bess" by Gershwhin.

"We've never done Mozart's divertimento as part of the library series," DiBlasi said.

Mozart wrote it for one oboe, two French horns, and strings.

"Mozart wrote about 40 of these for various solo instruments," DiBlasi said. "They're very difficult because they're (the solo instruments) so exposed."

WOLFGANG AMADEUS MOZART enriched music literature with more than 40 symphonies, scores of sonatas, serenades, string quartets and quintets, divertimentos, operas and concertos. He died shortly before his 36th birthday, a deaf pauper.

Mozart wrote more than 20 concertos for piano and orchestras, lighting the way in development of the piano concerto medium. This year marks the 200th anniversary of his death.

The divertimento is an instrumental music form, combining features of the symphony (sonata) and the suite. The chamber-style intimacy of the Livonia Civic Center Library Auditorium, with less than 300 seats, is perfect for the divertimento.

"IT'S KIND of fun to play something out of the ordinary," Kristen Williams said.

Originally from Farmington Hills, Williams is the LSO's principal oboist, orchestra manager and one of three soloists performing Mozart's divertimento.

A graduate of Hope College, Williams studied with Ron Odmark and Bob Sorton of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Now in her fourth season with the Livonia Symphony, Williams has toured the United States and Europe with the Hope College Symphonette, the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp and Musical Youth International. She also is a former member of the Farmington Community Band.

Kristen Williams
Oboe

PIRTILE IS in his second season with the LSO.

The Redford Township resident studied French horn with Bruce Heim at the Sewanee Summer Music Center and with Eberhard Ramn at the Blair Music School of Vanderbilt University.

Hazen is in her fourth season with the LSO.

A second-generation hornist after her father, Hazen has played with the Northville Community Band and the Mundelein Orchestra in Illinois.

Tickets for "Unfamiliar by the Familiar" are $9; $5 for seniors and students. They're available at the Livonia Civic Center Library, Madonna College and Hammell's Music, all in Livonia. Call the LSO at 458-6575.

Yellow a signal of hope; War alone doesn't alter trends

Helen Diane Vincent

Q. I certainly understand why Americans have been displaying yellow ribbons once the Gulf War got under way. But why the particular color yellow? Is there any special significance in this color that might tell us something about ourselves and the response to the situation?

A. When asked about using a yellow ribbon, many people refer back to the song, "Tie a Yellow Ribbon," popularized by Tony Orlando in the early 1970s. Later in the decade, we used yellow ribbons to show support for the American hostages held in Iran.

With the Gulf War, yellow ribbons again appeared spontaneously because they're one of the few commonly shared symbols we have to express our feelings, outside of the American flag itself. We're no different from other industrialized nations in our loss of deeply felt symbols, so commonly expressed throughout all of previous history.

In times past, a wide range of emotions could be expressed through a variety of symbols made of images, motifs and a complex arrangement of colors complementing the themes. One has only to look at the richness of heraldic banners for one example.

But once the symbols decreased, the importance of color increased. Color was left to carry the message once transmitted by ritual and time-honored symbols.

For us, today yellow carries a strong, though very ambivalent, message about our response to the Gulf War and surrounding circumstances. At the most fundamental level, yellow represents an extroverted hope tinged by anxiety. Yellow is also an unstable color, reflecting an impatient attitude that could change very quickly.

On balance, given the present context, yellow as a chosen color symbol reveals a magnanimity in pursuit of objectives. Because the yellow ribbon is not shown with any other color, outside of the colors of the American flag, a certain intensity with little desire to compromise is indicated.

Q. I've heard more than one fashion and color coordinator say that wars alter the direction of color trends — that the consumer is somehow influenced by the events and reflect their attitudes in shifting color and design preferences. How true is this?

A. You've been exposed to one of the glitzy generalities pervading the color and fashion coordination business. If you press those making the claim, they'll be careful to steer the conversation to the conclusion of World War II or perhaps Vietnam, when real changes did occur.

But any mention of the Korean conflict or of the smaller wars such as the Falkland and Panama wars are conveniently overlooked. Also forget taking the contention back into history. You'll get bogged down in a quagmire of inconclusive speculation that the most skilled historian wouldn't be able to extricate you from.

But generously granting a more contemporary time frame, the contention still isn't true unless the war in question is an integral part of overall change under way long before the war begins.

World War I is perhaps the best example. When World War I ended, the map of the entire world changed, monarchs were deposed, communism became the law of the land in a large country, modern art emerged and an entirely new sensibility came about. Although the war could be said to have precipitated some of these changes, it was essentially a long and complex history that brought them about.

Even the changes after World War II couldn't match the more radical changes of World War I. Nor could Vietnam, even though there was a lot more publicity for the changes that did occur. Those making the contention that war creates change

Victoria Diaz

The last three months have been, without doubt, the most difficult three months of my life.

Shortly before Thanksgiving, my youngest son, who is 18, was badly injured in an auto accident. He is home now and recovering, after a two-month stay at the University of Michigan Hospital, major surgery, and a lot of pain and anguish. Given the nature of his injuries, his progress has been something very much like a miracle.

Good friends, family prayer and the often-astonishing physical and mental strength of my son are what supported me and kept me afloat through an ordeal I was, of course, in no way prepared for.

Not surprisingly, to those who know me, I also "leaned on" books, often and at length. For people who don't read much, this may seem hard (impossible?) to understand. But book lovers will know that not only can the right book bring you joy, it can bring you comfort as well and sustenance in a very real sense.

What did I read?

Different things at different times, actually.

One afternoon, for instance, I found myself leafing through a copy of the latest adventures of cartoonist Bill Watterson's Calvin and Hobbes.

Don't laugh. It was, on that particular afternoon, just what I needed.

After that, what I read took on a more adult flavor (although I still referred back to Calvin and his fuzzy sidekick from time to time).

I DIDN'T read much fiction and how-to-cope books left me cold. What I wanted to read were accounts of real people who had encountered real difficulty in their lives and had somehow dealt with it "successfully." I didn't want to waste my time with any Pollyanna-ish platitudes.

I didn't want to hear any "keep smiling" philosophy. I certainly didn't want to immerse myself in any "poor me" tales. I wasn't sure what I needed to hear, maybe something like, "This happened to me, it hurt like hell, and here's what I did with it."

● The first such book I came across was Barbara Mandrell's "Get to the Heart," written with New York Times columnist George Vecsey. As you probably know, Mandrell was involved in a head-on car collision in 1984 that left her with a serious head injury and multiple fratures of her leg, ankle, foot and thigh.

Frankly, I hesitated to read this book. I'm not a big fan of Barbara Mandrell, who always seemed a little candy-coated for my taste, and I assumed, of course, that the book would reflect this perception. But I found it to be surprisingly frank and candid, revealing a genuine side of Mandrell, which helps a reader to quickly identify and connect with her experiences, and the ways she dealt with them (at one point, her coping devices included slugging a surgeon and pummeling her husband).

"There were two levels of recovery," she says, "whether I was going to survive the accident, and whether I was going to be the same person again."

She survived, of course, and resumed her successful singing career.

The second level of recovery, her father, husband and Mandrell herself admit, has been, so far, unattainable.

● I found Nancy Mairs' "Carnal Acts" at a local bookstore in the "Women's Fiction" section. While I'm not always exactly certain what "Women's Fiction" is supposed to be, I can assure you that it is not this collection of essays, centering on the life experiences of a young writer (Mairs) who suffers from multiple sclerosis.

By turns funny, sad, brash, thought-provoking and even maddening, Mairs' voice pulls no punches throughout, as she tells about the challenges she faces as a result of her disability. Dealing with fear happens to be one of her more formidable challenges, and her essays here on how she stares down some of her own personal horrors (falling, wetting herself, collapsing from physical exhaustion, having an auto accident) should be required reading for anyone who's trying to get through another mined-with-anxiety day or night.

● At 73, poet/essayist/novelist May Sarton suffered a stroke, and in her journal, "After the Stroke," she chronicles her on-again, off-again recovery with candor, good humor, and an engaging, heart-to-heart style. Whether she's writing of hospital life, pain, poetry, good food, good books, or her beloved, seaside home in Maine, these journal entries always read like comfortable letters from a close and gifted friend.

● In its own quiet way, Natalie Kusz's extraordinary memoir, "Road Song," spoke to me personally probably more than any other.

In 1969, when Kusz was 6 years old, she moved, with her parents, two sisters, and a brother from the streets of Los Angeles to the wilds of Alaska. There, one icy winter evening, a neighbor's hungry sled dog attacked her, tearing away part of her face and destroying one of her eyes. She would not live more than a day or two, according to the doctor who first saw her that night. But strange things happen, of course, and Natalie Kusz survived.

Many facets of this book impressed me, but I think what made it particularly appealing were Kusz's eloquent thought on what it feels like for a very young person to be very badly hurt (both physically and emotionally), and her dazzling insight on what it is like for the family of that young person, the "caretakers around the edges."

Don't expect any sentimentality. And don't expect this to really be a story about adversity. "Road Song" is the story of Kusz's life, not just an account of an ordeal. At heart, it's about the strength and survivability of the human spirit. As such, it's inspiration of the highest order.

From the bookshelf:

● New Flowers, Tessa Paul (Abrams, $35) gives descriptions of and contains 200 spectacular photos of established new flowers to the gardening scene. There is a type of flower here for everyone, from annuals to shrubs. Requirements of those plants featured include hardiness, disease-resistance, better scents, bloom size and growth habit.

Unusual new colors will surprise. A red delphinium? Yes!

Also look for Stubb's Tartan' Primula. Eight plans for gardens incorporating these flowers will instruct the beginner as well as giving ideas for longtime growers. You may have seen some of these new plants in catalogs. New Flowers will eliminate "weeding out" the undesirable ones. Included is a source list of nurseries and seed companies.

● In Antique Flowers, Perennials, Enduring Classics for the Contemporary Garden (HarperCollins, $29.95), Rob Proctor artfully explains the origins and early uses of many of these plants. He also describes their growing habits and needs.

Belamcanda chinesis Iridaceac (Blackberry Lily) for instance, likes moist soil when growing but prefers a dryer area for over-wintering, and the berries that appear after the flowers are gone are a big bonus. This lily is often grown from the berries alone.

Interesting facts make enjoyable reading. This book will inspire you to try new ideas. You may remember some of them from your grandmothers' garden. The lovely photos by Rob Gray will help bring them to mind.

● In the preface of Allen Lacy's The Garden in Autumn (Atlantic Monthly Press, $29.95), he explains why gardeners in the United States can enjoy the fruits of their labor for a longer period than our English friends, from whom we have learned so much, since our season is extended a month or so longer.

Descriptions of perennials that bloom into the fall as well as those planted for the specific blooming time are described. Many interesting facts are included. Lacy gives information about bulbs and grasses for autumn enjoyment. Thirty-one nurseries are listed as plant sources.

● Garden Lore, Julia Jones and Barbara Deer (Summit Books, $16.95) is a monthly account of legends and gardening tips, poems and the like that were believed and practiced by the English.

By watching signs from plants and animals, people knew when to plant and what the weather would be like. It may inspire the reader to observe nature more closely. A delightful book for pleasure, which gives an insight into the beliefs of our forefathers.

● The National Trust Book of the English Garden, Richard Bisgrove (Viking, $29.95) details the histories of these gardens from medieval times to the present.

Bisgrove describes gardens of specific periods in a readable manner and explains how the arts, science, explorations and even politics of England and other countries influenced designs for particular times. He also gives a look into the lives of the gardeners and designers themselves.

Much can be learned here, not only from a historical point of view, but about the people who created such masterpieces, each unique in its own way.

● A little cookbook, Peppers Hot & Sweet, Beth Dooley (Garden Way, $8.95) contains 100 recipes from around the globe, using these fruits.

Many herbs are used, adding a new dimension in herb cookery. Why not grow a few of the more unusual ones, or find them in a specialty store, to enjoy with these innovative recipes, from appetizers to condiments. Information about 40 different varieties, purchasing, storing etc. is included as well as many interesting facts about peppers.

Monte Nagler

Portraits taken indoors with outdoor light will have a special quality all their own. The lighting will be soft, allowing very natural expressions to be captured on film.

How best to light your indoor picture? It's a matter of logic — doors and windows. Try to find an opening not receiving direct sunlight. Most always, a northern exposure will work fine. Better still, a bright overcast day will provide good illumination at any doorway or window.

Place your subject near the window until the outdoor light just spills across the face. If the shadow side looks too dark, prop a piece of white poster board next to the face and just out of camera range to bounce back some fill light.

PAY SPECIAL attention to exposure because the bright light from the window may fool your meter and your subject will be underexposed in the final print. To obtain a good exposure, move in close and take a reading off your subject's face and use this setting when you snap the shutter.

Remember that even though you're shooting indoors, you're using outdoor light, so be sure to use daylight balanced film. And because the light will be less intense than if you were outside, you will probably need a faster film in the 400 ASA range.

As in all good portraiture, a short to medium telephoto lens is ideal to keep you at a comfortable, non-intimidating working distance and to get pleasing facial features. But don't overlook a full length body shot, too, where your normal lens will work just fine.

WANT TO be more creative? Here are a couple of different ideas that will produce pictures with an unusual impact:

Make silhouette portraits of profiles by placing your subject directly in front of a window and taking the exposure reading from the outside light, not off the face.

Or use a window with venetian blinds on a sunny day. Adjust the blinds so they "paint" your subject with alternating lines of shadow and light to obtain a most extraordinary effect.

Whatever you do, keep in mind that indoor images with outdoor light will reward you with exciting images for your photographic portfolio.

Two-year-old Elizabeth Barrett of McHenry, Ill., posed for Monte Nagler indoors near a natural light source. The result was this delightful, informal photograph.

also dismiss the backlashes that are also part of social and cultural change.

So if you're looking for changes as a result of the Gulf War, I doubt whether you'll find them, except superficial ones such as a revival of khaki colors. The evolving trends that were in place before the war will continue after it is concluded.

The Gulf War won't even precipitate any evolving changes, and all the glitzy generalities won't make it happen.

● COPPELIA STAGED

Three casts will alternate in five performances when the Cleveland San Jose Ballet brings Coppelia to Detroit's Masonic Temple March 7-10.

Presented by the Michigan Opera Theatre, Coppelia is scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, March 8 and 9, and 2 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sunday, March 10, with a student matinee at 11 a.m. Thursday, March 7.

Three artists originally from Michigan will be featured prominently in the ballet: Detroit native and Cleveland San Jose Ballet artistic director Dennis Nahat, former West Bloomfield resident Melissa Mitchell and Flint native Mark Otloski.

MOT is offering family-priced tickets to Coppelia. With the purchase of one full-price ticket, up to two additional children's tickets may be purchased for $10 each, subject to availability. Call the MOT Ticket Services Office, 874-SING. To charge tickets, call Ticketmaster: 645-6666.

● DSO CONCERTS

World-renowned violin virtuoso Isaac Stern returns to Orchestra Hall with pianist Robert McDonald at 8 p.m. Thursday, March 7 as part of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra Hall Recital Series.

They will perform sonatas by Mozart, Brahms and Bartok as well as Schumann's Intermezzo from F.A.E Sonata and Szymanowski's La Fontaine d'Arethuse.

Pops arranger and conductor Richard Hayman will perform with the DSO for Weekender Pops concerts at 8:30 p.m. Friday, March 8, 8:30 p.m. Saturday, March 9 and 3:30 p.m. Sunday, March 10 at Orchestra Hall. They will be joined by the Dallas Brass.

The DSO will perform a special concert at 7:30 p.m. Sunday, March 10 to benefit Michigan families of military personnel. Co-sponsored by the Southeastern Michigan Chapter of the American Red Cross, ANR Pipeline Co., WXYZ-TV and the Detroit News and underwritten by ANR Pipeline, this concert is called "An Evening for America." Proceeds will assist families of military personnel from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties involved in Operation Desert Storm.

For ticket information, for all DSO concerts, call the Orchestra Hall Box Office, 833-3700.

● WILDLIFE ART

The Michigan Wildlife Art Sale and display of custom knives will take place March 8-10 at the Holiday Inn of Southfield.

Those who attend will be able to view and buy award-winning wildlife art as well as talk to the artists, carvers and taxidermists who will be at the show. Featured artist will be James Campbell of Saginaw. Custom bench knives made by Black Forest Blades also will be featured.

Hours are 4-9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $3.50 for adults, with children younger than 12 free.

● CRAFT SHOW

Homespun Traditions'" Old Fashioned Country Craft Show" will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, March 9 at Fox Hills Country Club, 8768 North Territorial, just outside of Plymouth.

Live dulcimer music will be provided by Felicity Strings. Lunch will be available at the country club. Admission to the show is $1.50.

Exhibitors from nearby communities will present a variety of items, including primitive folk art, ceramic jewelry, stencilled wood, quilts, stained glass sculptures and clay miniatures.

Local exhibiters include Susan Haithcock, Livonia, country home accents; Barb Gentile, Garden City, clay miniatures; Leslie Stolaruk, Plymouth, paper and puzzle jewelry; Elaine Hoogerwerf, Farmington Hills, tin, calico, ribbons and lace.

● SPRING CRAFTS

Sunflower Subdivision in Canton Township will sponsor its annual spring craft show Saturday, March 9, at the clubhouse, 45956 Gainsborough, between Warren and Canton Center Roads. Follow the signs.

Among the items offered at the show will be painted sweatshirts, hand-painted wood items, baskets, flower decorations and baked goods. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. with no admission charge.

● ARCHITECTURE TALK

Preservation Wayne, the Scarab Club and the Center for Creative Studies will host William Porter as he lectures on architecture at 3:15 p.m. Sunday, March 10 at the Scarab Club, John R and Farnsworth, behind the Detroit Institute of Arts.

He'll speak on "Arts and Crafts Architecture." He's a modern design instructor at Wayne State University and the Center for Creative Studies.

A reception and tea will follow.

Cost is $5 for Preservation Wayne, Scarab Club and Detroit Area Art Deco Society members and CCS students and faculty. General admission is $7.

● CHAMBER MUSIC

The Chamber Music Society of Detroit will present the Beaux Arts Trio at 8 p.m. Tuesday, March 12, at Detroit's Orchestra Hall.

Pianist Menahem Pressler, violinist Isidore Cohen and cellist Peter Wiley will perform Mozart's Trio in G, Zemlinsky's Trio in D Minor, Op. 3 and Schubert's Trio in E Flat, No. 100.

The following Tuesday, March 19, the Talich String Quartet will make its Detroit debut. The group comes from Prague and includes in its repertoire of classical works native Czech composers. They will play Beethoven's Quartet No. 10 in E Flat, Op. 74, Mozart's Concerto in A for Piano and Strings, K. 414 and Dvorak's Piano Quintet. Beaux Arts's Menahem Pressler is the guest pianist.

For tickets and information, call the Orchestra Hall Box Office, 833-3700.

● STUDENT EXHIBIT

Visual arts students at the Creative and Performing Arts in Livonia will display their paintings, drawings and prints from March 14-23 on the second floor of Jacobson's at Laûrel Park Place in Livonia.

Store hours are 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday and 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

● AUTHOR SIGNING

Oakland County writer Kathe Koja will sign copies of her debut novel, "The Cipher," at 7 p.m. Friday, March 15 at Borders Book Shop, Novi Town FCenter, Novi Road, just south of I-96.

The novel is the first to be published under the imprint of Abyss, a new line of horror fiction published by Dell.

In "The Cipher," Koja describes the dead-end life of a failed poet named Nicholas, who, with his girlfriend Nakota, begins to experiment with a mysterious black hole they discover in his apartment.

Objects inserted in the hole come out drastically altered if at all; one day, Nicholas himself is altered in a fall near this "Funhole.'

Dell chose "The Cipher" as the definitive first title in its Abyss line, designed to showcase a new breed of literate, contemporary horror.

Koja has been writing fiction most of her life.

● PHOTO SEMINAR

The Photo Guild of Detroit will hold its 28th annual photographic seminar at 8:30 a.m. Saturday-Sunday, March 16-17, at Henry Ford Community College, Dearborn.

The program is designed for all levels of photographic expertise, from beginner to advanced amateur. Sessions will include nature, wedding and travel photography.

Darkroom techniques, composition and camera basics will be highlighted.

Call 642-8831 for details.

● BALLET SPOTLIGHTED

The Plymouth-Canton ballet will present "Coppelia" at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday, March 16, in the Plymouth-Canton High School Little Theatre.

The production will combine comedy and dance.

The company is a non-profit organization that offers opportunities for local dancers to work and perform in ballet productions.

Tickets are $6, reserved seating only. For tickets, call the Plymouth-Canton Ballet at 397-8828 or Joanne's Dance Extension at 455-4330.

● CRAFT APPLICATIONS

The Schoolcraft College Foundation is seeking exhibitors for its second annual craft show Saturday, Oct. 26 and Sunday, Oct. 27. Proceeds will be used to fund student scholarships.

The craft show will be in the college's Physical Education Building. Schoolcraft is at 18600 Haggerty, between Six and Seven Mile, in Livonia. Free parking is available.

For an application to exhibit, call the college at 462-4417.

● BENEFIT AUCTION

Time is right

Start tuberous begonias indoors down to earth

Marty Figley

When tuberous begonias are featured in a garden, they take center stage with their large blooms in colors such as white, pink, red, orange, apricot and yellow.

This time of year is good to start the tubers indoors and perhaps plan a garden around them where they will delight all who are fortunate to see them.

Choose firm tubers and place them round end down (the roots emerge there and along the sides) in a shallow container in a soil-less mix. Space them 3-4 inches apart. The depression in the tuber is where the leaves and buds will emerge and this area, just peeking out of the soil, needs to be kept dry to prevent rot.

Keep the growing mix evenly moist. Place the trays in bright, indirect sunlight with temperatures around 70 degrees. In about a month, plump pink buds will appear followed by the leaves.

. NOW THEY can be transferred to 5-6-inch pots in a soil rich in humus. Equal parts sandy loam, peat and well-rotted compost or manure is ideal. Transfer the sprouting tubers to the same depth as they were in the flats.

They now need lots of light, but not too much direct sun. An east window will do. Don't allow the temperature to go below 60-65 degrees.

They can be planted in the garden when all danger of frost is past, again at the same depth as before. When watering, keep the water off the foliage. Moist, but not soggy soil is the rule.

If the soil dries out when the plant is budding, the buds may drop off. Fertilize as package indicates, discontinuing the feeding in late summer.

Filtered light is kind to these begonias such as that provided by high branching trees, or man-made shade construction. They also like the east or north side of walls, fences or the house, where they will be protected from strong winds.

Some plants that enjoy sharing garden space with begonias are: azaleas, pieris, rhododendron, campanula, primroses and ferns.

Tubers can be brought back into the house for continued bloom for a few weeks in the fall, before a frost. When watering is stopped, they will go into dormancy. When the leaves turn yellow and fall off, lift the tubers, clean the soil off, dry in the sun for several days until they're hard and dry and store them in an open flat at about 45-60 degrees. Keep them dry to prevent decay.

Marty Figley is a master gardener, based in Birmingham.

Retail and commercial development has pretty much ground to a halt, and only those few that offer something significantly different — like River Square Main now under construction in downtown Rochester — will be built until the current recession ends.

Big vs. small: carving a retail niche

Big mall, small mall.
There's more to them than meets the eye.
Building a better commercial center,
Is one way to get consumers to buy.
Big mall, small mall,
Opponents decry the impact.
"Environmental, residential,
From the ambiance it will detract."
Big mall, small mall,
Zoning laws and NIMBY too. Traffic jams and parking lots, "Build a mall and we will sue."
Big mall, small mall,
Creating jobs and revenue.
"Spurring the economy," builders say,
"Is what we're trying to do."
Big mall, small mall,
Fulfilling retail and other needs.
Malls provide services and goods,
That explains the developer's deeds.
Big mall, small mall.
Economics contend with sprawl.
Big mall, small mall
Not so different after all.

Skittish lenders have all but dried up commercial construction.

In spite of the slowed economy, commercial and retail industry experts say there may still be some development, but it will have to be strikingly different from the common strip and power centers.

The message is clear: Build a better mousetrap, and the world will beat a path to your door; build a better mall, and tenants and customers will do likewise.

This is a story about two such malls. The Auburn Mills mega-mall in Auburn Hills is two million square feet; River Square Main in the city of Rochester is less than 50,000 square feet.

One, River Square Main — built by local entrepreneur and heart care specialist Dr. Pierre Attallah — will house small specialty shops and boutiques, medical offices and two restaurants.

The other, Auburn Mills, being built by the Washington D.C.-based developer Western Development Corp., will be home to upwards of 200 manufacturers' outlets and "value-oriented" stores under the same roof with family entertainment.

DESPITE AN ENORMOUS difference in size and approach, the two share one striking approach — they dare to be different.

Adco Associates president Pat Shea points to — among other things — the diversity of River Square Main. Few projects, especially projects of 50,000 square feet, can boast leasees ranging from medical specialists to boutiques.

Ground breaking for the project was in August 1990; the first tenants will take occupancy in early May with others moving in throughout the summer.

"I don't know of a single development like ours," Shea said. True, the original concept for River Square Main called for a more traditional retail mall, but in its evolution, the project has transformed greatly.

The first tenant to come on board was Real Estate One, the real estate company, which leased nearly an entire floor of the project, Shea said. Next, plans for a restaurant and

A renter's market in retailing

By Gerald Frawley
staff writer

It's hard to believe, but at the beginning of 1990, many industry experts considered the southeastern Michigan commercial and retail market to be under served. Leasing activity was so active builders couldn't keep pace with the demand.

Today, the bottom has fallen out.

Richard Rosenbaum, vice president of development and property management firm The Equitable Group Inc. in Southfield, said there's little question the recession has hit the commercial and retail industry.

"We (developers) are being conservative, consumers are being conservative, retailers are being conservative," Rosenbaum said. "It's tough out there — the retailers are singing the blues.

"Commercial and retail development is still going on, but it's mainly the guys that have really targeted a market," he said. Many large, successful retailers will actually use the recession to their benefit.

"Times won't return to the so-called boom, but they will return to normal," Rosenbaum said. "Once the current recession ends, people will spend money, but they won't spend what they don't have."

— Richard Rosenbaum
The Equitable Group

AFTER A PERIOD of recession, construction costs and leasing rates tend to decline, he said. "We haven't been in a recession for three months like the government says."

June Dresnick of Coldwell Banker Commercial Real Estate Services said new construction is idle because leasing activity has idled.

"There is leasing out there, but it's taking a long time to complete the deals."

Landlords are being forced to offer cutthroat rates, tenant improvement dollars and even free rent to fill up commercial and retail space — practices unheard of a year ago.

"It's definitely a renter's market right now."

Dresnick said people don't see a lot of vacancies yet because the malls are still full, but as current leases expire and retailers opt not to re-sign, the malls will start to empty out.

Commercial and retail space vacancies are approaching 10 percent — previously unheard of in commercial- and retail-rich Oakland and western Wayne counties, she said. Last year, vacancies at commercial and retail centers averaged between 4 and 5 percent.

RETAIL BROKERS are concerned things will get worse before they will get better. "We're just at the beginning of this — I don't think we've seen the bottom yet," Dresnick said.

Tony Camilletti, director of visual image communication for the national retail architectural/consulting firm of Jon Greenberg and Associates in Berkley, said his company has been extremely busy in recent months.

Commercial and retail development in general may be slowing, he said, but there are opportunities for new construction and leasing activity, Camilletti said.

"Relocation and remodeling work are the most commonly found types of construction (in recessionary times."

Progressive retailers with capital can take advantage of slow times when construction costs are typically lower, he said. Contractors hungry for work are more willing to take a job for lower pay, he said.

"If you have the capital and you have the plans, this is a good time to build," he said.

RECESSIONS ARE also traditionally the time when non-retail firms delve into the market, Camilletti said. For example, the Ringling Bros.-Barnum and Bailey circus organization has opened several retail outlets (none in Michigan) specializing in children apparel, related novelty and circus items.

"If retailers give customers a reason to come out with a creative and diverse appeal, they can succeed," Camilletti said, "There's definitely a niche to be filled in this market."

Rick Valade, partner in charge of retail consulting for the Detroit accounting firm Arthur Anderson, said:

"It would be hard to point to any area that is under-stored," Valade said. In the last 15 years, commercial square footage in the United States has doubled.

Most of the current commercial development is in the construction of small, local — or strip — malls, he said.

Regional malls, power centers and satellite malls are more expensive to build and will require incentives to lure tenants, he said. Local malls are inexpensive and fill up quickly with tenants.

But the real advantage, he said, is small malls can follow housing construction because smaller parcels of land are easier to find. As housing starts continue — albeit at a slower pace then in the past — the small malls can set up quickly nearby, Valade said.

There are large commercial projects being built, Valade said, but

To buy now or later seems to be question

AP — The traditional spring home-buying season is about to bud, so it's time for prospective purchasers to start looking.

Or is it?

Mortgage rates are at their lowest level in four years and home prices in many areas have been declining for months, helping boost the ability of a typical family to buy a home to its highest level in 13 years by one industry measurement.

At the same time, inventories of unsold homes are piling up in some areas, making homeowners — particularly those with deadlines — anxious about their ability to unload their houses and real estate brokers hungry for deals.

"I think it's probably one of the best opportunities we've seen in a number of years," said John Savacool, a housing economist with the WEFA Group in Bala Cynwyd, Pa.

"It's a buyer's market," agreed Elliott Platt, an economist with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, a New York securities dealer. "But the buyer still would be well advised to be patient" because there is room for prices and rates to fall further.

So if it's a buyer's market, why are sales at their lowest point since the last recession?

ECONOMIST MARTIN Regalia of the National Council of Savings Institutions says prospective buyers are uncertain about their incomes and futures because of the recession. "I think people are really saying to themselves, 'Let's wait and see just how low it goes.' "

Some prospective buyers also have expressed concern that prices will continue to weaken, depressing the value of any home they buy.

But John A. Tuccillo, chief economist for the National Association of Realtors, says that "if you buy for the long term, chances are you'll come out way ahead."

Regalia, himself a prospective home buyer who's not sure he's ready to take the plunge, says it is time for buyers "to be getting your ducks in a row."

"If you anticipate getting into the market, now is a good time to start doing the groundwork . . . checking on what financial institutions will lend, how much down, how many points, how quickly they could close on a loan," he says.

SURVEYS BY the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. found 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaging less than 9.5 percent this month, down from nearly 11.5 percent just two years ago and the lowest level since March 1987.

Some analysts doubt rates will fall much more.

The Realtors group says the median price of an existing home dropped from $96,300 in January 1990 to $91,900 in December. The median price of a new home, according to the Commerce Department, fell from $127,000 at the beginning of 1990 to $120,000 in November.

The median means half the homes cost more, half less.

Platt suggested prices could fall an additional 10 percent nationally and perhaps as much as 20 percent in some areas of the Northeast and West, where inventory problems are expected to eventually drive down costs.

But economists David Berson and Mark Obrinsky of the Federal National Mortgage Association don't see any substantial rise in prices even with increased demand if consumers jump back into the market.

"First, the unemployment rate should continue to rise for most of the year, keeping demand from surging," they wrote in Fannie Mae's Monthly Outlook.

"Second, with expectations of price appreciation significantly reduced, home buyers are likely to reduce bid prices. We expect the median price of new homes sold to rise by just over 1 percent and the median price of existing homes sold to rise by less than 1 percent this year."

Nationally, the Realtors said an index measuring the ability of a typical American family to buy an existing home rose for the fifth straight month in December.

"These positive home buying conditions, which are better than they've been for more than a decade, are too good to pass up," said Harley E. Rouda, president of the real estate industry group.

"It's a great time for the first-time buyer," the WEFA Group's Savacool concurred. "However, if you've got to sell first, it's a crummy time. Inventories (in some areas) are sky high," making it difficult to obtain asking prices.

The median price of a new home, according to the Commerce Department, fell from $127,000 at the beginning of 1990 to $120,000 in November.

then a banquet hall began to evolve until it was decided a casual restaurant, up-scale restaurant and banquet hall would occupy the project.

But the real coup, Shea said, was when Dr. Attallah arranged to lease space for physicians from the Detroit Medical Center to set up a one-of-a-kind suburban diagnostic center.

"Right now in Oakland County, if you have to see a specialist, you have to go down to one of the major centers in Detroit. Now, we will have specialists that people would normally be referred downtown to see," Shea said.

THESE THREE types of tenants will augment the specialty retail boutiques that are filling the remainder of the mall, she said.

"The kind of traffic that a medical office generates is entirely different from the type that retail generates," she said. "The type that restaurants generate is different from the type that offices generate."

With scheduled appointments at the medical and real estate offices, lunch and dinner crowds, and walk-ins at the boutiques, foot traffic — the stuff that commercial developers' dreams are made of — will be constant from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Shea said.

"We've really have built an ongoing busy place," she added. "I think what's most unique about the project is the hours it's going to be active."

Another part of River Square Main's appeal is its location and ties to the Rochester community, Shea said. Its architectural English Tudor style was chosen to complement the old world charm of downtown Rochester's business district.

Dr. Attallah also has plans for a downtown trolley that would run down Main Street to further tie the downtown business district together, Shea said.

AUBURN MILLS, the nearly two million square foot specialty mall on a 220-acre tract in Auburn Hills, is as conspicuous as River Square Main is subtle.

Big, vivacious, and boasting prices 20 to 60 percent less than competitors, the Mills concept is heralded by Western Development as the prototype for retailing developments into the 21st century.

Western Development has overcome public opposition to the project, but one gigantic stumbling block remains before it can be built — gaining the necessary construction funding.

> 'It became clear as we were watching these centers that they were gaining acceptance with educated, discriminating, brand-conscious consumers.'
> — Patience O'Connor

Antsy lenders are still leery about loaning Western Development the $200 million plus to bankroll the project.

Although Western Development has postponed groundbreaking until late summer, officials insist a funding arrangement will be made, and the mall will begin construction regardless of the economy.

According to Patience O'Connor, senior vice president, management and marketing, the Mills concept was developed in the early 1980s when Western Development was building a lot of small discount strip centers in the Washington D.C. area.

"It became clear as we were watching these centers that they were gaining acceptance with educated, discriminating, brand-conscious consumers," she said. The Mills concept was designed to meet what the company perceived as a growing demand.

"We said, 'Why not do it on a grander scale?' "

That grand scale would eventually evolve into the two million square foot Potomac Mills in Prince William County, just outside of Washington D.C., in which Western Development set out to marry the two most popular value-oriented retailers — the off-prioce and manufacturer outlets.

That in itself, was a daunting task. Off-price retailers and manufacturer outlets are typically fierce competitors and rarely associated with each other, O'Connor said. Convincing the two to set up shop in the same building took quite some doing.

"In the beginning, there were a lot of naysayers," she said. "When we opened (Potomac Mills) there were a lot more vacancies than we (anticipated)."

Western Development put on an extensive marketing campaign to sell the Mills' concept and was forced to offer leasing deals to fill up the mall, she said, but the company believed in the project.

"We believe we succeeded because we stuck to the original concept."

Just to illustrate how far the Mills Concept has come in years, O'Connor said, Potomac Mills now has a waiting list of retailers trying to get in.

"That's amazing when you consider how fragile the economy is."

The concept has been so successful, in fact, that retailers who previously shunned the word "discount" — like Ann Taylor, Sax Fifth Avenue and Laura Ashley — have now opened outlets at some of the Mills malls.

The retail mix has continued to evolve. Each of the three Mills now opened — in Washington D.C., Philidelphia and Florida — and each of the three now planned — in Michigan, Illinois and California — will have a different retail mix to reflect the area in which they are located.

But the value shopping is only half of the Mills formula. An important part of the Mills concept is the family entertainment offerings.

In other Mills malls — and planned for Auburn Mills — activities including miniature golf, computerized bowling, batting cages, roller skating rinks, movie theaters and other forms of participatory entertainment are provided to shoppers.

Various theme courts will also be part of the extravaganza. Other Mills projects have featured food courts with a variety of specialty restaurants, video courts that offer programming for shoppers including consumer information, activity courts for special events, and a new ideas court displaying exhibits of new products and services.

"The belief was, that if you entertain the customers, they will spend more of their time at the center," she said.

The entertainment aspect of the Mills malls has also evolved. Potomic Mills began with fairly simple video entertainment and special events throughout the mall.

Developers sing retail leasing blues they are protective development. "They're in places where there's only room for one store. If you don't build now, three won't be enough demand for many years."

MOST DRUG AND grocery store construction is in this category, he said.

Dresnick of Coldwell Banker said commercial development is always the first to suffer whenever the economy slows.

That is especially true this year, Dresnick said. Unlike in past recessions, many of those being laid off are white collar workers.

Last decade's commercial boom was mainly driven by white collar workers with disposable income, she said. Those same products couldn't be kept on the shelves a year ago are suffering today.

Soft goods, like clothing and accessories, and durable goods, like appliances and cars, are extremely sensitive to the economy, Dresnick said, so new construction and leasing of commercial space is unlikely.

But some very specific niches still hold some promise.

Produce markets, prepared food stores and frozen meat and butcher shops are benefiting from what is perceived as a lack of competition in the grocery industry. One big reason customers choose one store over another is the produce and specialty food sections.

RECENT GROCERY store mergers have resulted in a consumer perception that grocery store produce areas have suffered, which gives specialty stores a chance to move in and gain market share, she said.

Another good bet is the warehouse super stores, like Sports Authority and Office Max. Dresnick said several warehouse retailers are seeking space or new construction in the metropolitan Detroit area.

Rosenbaum of the Equitable Group said many developers have postponed commercial projects for the upcoming year because obtaining financing from skittish bankers is difficult, Rosenbaum said.

Banks are even skeptical about making loans for the expansion of retail centers that are 100 percent leased and doing well. "But successful companies will move forward."

A recession offers well managed retailers — especially those with capital to invest — a chance to relocate and renovate their facilities in anticipation of better times, he said.

"There's no better time than the present (to build) because it will always cost more down the road," he said. "If you can build now (without putting your company in jeopardy) then now is the time."
