Election expenses checked

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

In keeping with this kindler, gentler city commission race, candidates' campaign statements show they're not spending a heap of money on their campaigns.

Campaign costs were kept down this year because the seven candidates agreed not to post campaign signs prior to the Nov. 5 election.

Candidates spending more than $1,000 were required to file a campaign statement by Friday. Those filing statements were Robert Jones, Bill McAninch, Dennis Shrewsbury, and Rosita Smith.

CANDIDATES RON LOISELLE, Doug Miller and Ken Way did not have to file statements, as each is spending less than $1,000, according to the Wayne County Elections Commission.

The biggest spender is Shrewsbury. Shrewsbury's biggest campaign contributor is himself, as he secured a $4,000 personal loan. Shrewsbury has raised $4,505, according to his statement.

Among campaign contributions, Shrewsbury received $50 from Wayne County prosecutor John O'Hair and $30 from county Sheriff Robert Ficano.

Both are Democrats. Shrewsbury, an attorney, has also been active in the Democratic Party.

HE SPENT the most money, $980.98, on brochures, fliers and other printed material and spent $742.86 on postage.

Shrewsbury also spent $687 on newspaper advertising, $550 to rent a campaign office and $300 on a phone installation deposit.

Also by the filing deadline, McAninch reported he raised $1,635.56 in campaign contributions and spent an equal amount. He contributed $1,307.66 of his own money and received contributions from several members of Plymouth Concerned Citizens, a group he's been active with.

McAninch's campaign expenses were due to printing of campaign materials and postage.

INCUMBENT CITY commissioner Robert Jones raised $1,564.44. Among his biggest contributors are real estate agent Robert Bake, $200.

Professor puts the bite on bat myth

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

'They are good at keeping down the insect population . . . (they act) as pollinators, and disseminate seeds.'
— Allen Kurta, professor of biology

What would Halloween be without a few vampire bats around to help set the mood, as witches tend their steaming cauldrons and ghouls, goblins and ghosts haunt our streets after dark?

Bats are portrayed as evil, creepy creatures in Western society, but undeservedly so, says Dr. Allen Kurta, professor of biology at Eastern Michigan University. They're actually much-maligned, misunderstood mammals that benefit mankind, said Kurta, who is working with an endangered bat species in a swampy area south of Lansing.

"BATS DO SERVE a function. They are very good at keeping down the insect population. They consume hundreds of insects every night," said Kurta. "And a mother bat producing milk for her young will consume more than her weight in insects every night. Add that up with the hundreds of thousands of bats in the state, and that's a considerable amount of insects. Worldwide, bats are very important as plant pollinators, and they disseminate seeds."

In North America, many are of the mistaken belief that all bats are rabid. "Facts are, very few have rabies," said Kurta, who welcomes calls from anyone who discovers colonies of bats in hollow trees, barns and attics.

"Ninety-nine percent of bats are rabies-free," he added.

Also, says Kurta, bats are an important protein source in some parts of the world. "In Africa and Asia, they get as big as chickens. I've seen stir-fried bat, and fruit bat stew."

The Chinese look upon the bat as a symbol of good luck.

"You'll often see their images on painted on plates and embroidered on garments," said Kurta.

Kurta would like to clear up another misconception.

"Bats do not fly into your hair. Why would they want to? They eat

Mettetal charter amendment to be decided on Nov. 5 ballot

By Kevin Brown
staff writer

'We feel that there are many, many questions that are still unanswered.'
— Sandra Kosky, concerned citizens group.

Besides choosing four of seven city commission candidates in Tuesday's election, city voters are also presented with a Mettetal Airport-related charter amendment.

Approval of this initiative would amend the city charter to prohibit Plymouth from purchasing, operating or maintaining any airport, including Mettetal, unless approved by the majority of the voters in a city-wide election, according to ballot language explaining the purpose of the amendment.

A "YES" VOTE favors the amendment; a "no" vote rejects it.

Passage of the charter amendment would mean that a second vote would be scheduled for citizens to vote specifically on whether to have the city join a joint operating agreement to run Mettetal, or reject such an effort.

But if the charter amendment passes Tuesday, commissioners have said that would suggest voters would not favor city participation in Mettetal's operation, and such an effort would be abandoned.

The Plymouth Concerned Citizens group last spring got enough signatures to put the amendment on the ballot, nearly 1,300, after city commissioners voted to jointly operate the airport with Plymouth Township.

Since the issue was placed on the ballot, Canton dropped its opposition to public ownership of the airport, the city, Plymouth Township agreement was scrapped, and a new agreement was formed between Plymouth Township and Canton to seek to operate the airport.

Some commissioners who favored the city's participation in the joint airport operating agreement say participation is now a dead issue because Plymouth Township and Can-

Observer seeks input from area readership

We want to know more about you.

In a move to bring your home town newspaper even closer to the community, the Plymouth Observer is seeking volunteers for its community participation team.

Those chosen will serve for six months, after which time a new group of residents will be selected. The team will meet with the newspaper staff a minimum of once a month.

We want to hear from you on how you feel about your community, what are your interests and what concerns you and your neighbors share in this rapidly changing world.

To launch this process we need you to fill out the accompanying coupon, giving us some background on interests. We are looking for diversity on our team; people of all ages, incomes and interests are urged to apply.

Those people who are not chosen for the first group will be kept on file for future reference.

So send in your coupon today. We look forward to meeting you.

only insects. Also, bats don't build nests, so they aren't after your hair for that reason. A bat that zooms close to your head was probably trying to capture a mosquito that was about to land on you. You should be grateful."

Nor are bats blind. "They have eyes and can see quite well," he said. "When flying in the dark, however, they rely on echolocation, or sonar. They emit high frequency sounds that we usually cannot hear and listen for the echoes bouncing off nearby objects."

RATHER THAN lumping bats with other outcast mammals such as skunks and shrews, biologists have awarded bats their own order, Chiroptera. Loosely translated, Chiroptera means winged hand.

The name fits. The struts of a bat's wing are its long, spidery finger bones.

Despite the name, Johann Strauss chose for his operetta "Die Fledermaus," which means "the flying mouse," bats are not winged mice. They're the only living mammals capable of sustained, self-powered flight. With their 1,000 different varieties, bats account for almost one fourth of all mammal species.

Asked during a phone interview how large bats are, Kurta said, "Here. Let me just grab a bat off the shelf." "Big Brown Bats, one of the nine species of bats living in Michigan, weigh only about half an ounce and measure about two inches from their nose to their rump," he said. "Their tail adds about another one-and a half inches. Only the rare Hoary Bat is larger; all other Michigan species are smaller than the Big Brown Bat."

Kurta, who is particularly interested in bats that roost in buildings, spent this summer working with the federally-endangered species called the Indiana bat.

"Southern Michigan is the northern edge of its range," he said. "We discovered the first colony of this animal in Michigan last summer. The idea is to find out anything we can about it so we can make recommendations to the DNR for management of this species."

The Indiana bat, which hibernates in Kentucky and southern Indiana, is endangered because of a lack of critical winter habitat. Habitats — where bats hibernate in colonies of more than 100,000 animals — are rare to begin with and have been destroyed by development. And bat colonies in caves have been killed off by humans who disturb the animals while they're hibernating. When a bat wakes prematurely, its metabolism speeds up. If its fat reservoir is exhausted before spring, the bat starves to death.

Increasingly, people are building wooden bat boxes to lure bats to their property.

"It's a growing trend, not only among farmers and gardeners, but among people from all walks of life," said Kurta. "A lot of people in the city and the country are buying pre-made bat boxes to attract bats because bats eat insects."

Kurta, who teaches mammalogy and comparative vertebrate anatomy, became interested in bats when he was in college crawling around in caves. "I had to write a term paper, and I picked bats for a subject."

Some of Kurta's students also have taken an interest in bat research. They're studying such things as the effects of fat content on energy use by bats, and emergence behavior. "Students are looking at what time bats come out, and whether they come out together, flight levels and how they're affected by rainfall," said Kurta.

Kurta says he's not interested in calls from people who find a bat in their house or garage — and he gets 80 to 100 of those a year, many of them after 11 p.m. "But I'll travel anywhere in Michigan to look at a bat colony in a tree, particularly a hollow tree."

ton have joined together to seek grants to run the Canton airport.

But the city can still seek to join the joint operating board, and that's why residents should vote against it, said Sandra Kosky, of the concerned citizens group.

"WE FEEL THAT there are many, many questions that are still unanswered," she said, over liability and potential cost to taxpayers, among others.

"If the charter is not changed the city can still get into the JOA (joint operating agreement) with Plymouth Township and Canton Township. If we don't, we're back to square one where we were last December — that the city can do so without asking the residents," Kosky said.

City commissioner Mary Childs has said she opposes amending the city charter over the Mettetal Airport issue, saying the issue could be decided without changing the charter.

Service for former school psychologist planned

Memorial services for Emma Chaffee, a school psychologist retired from Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, will be at 7 p.m. Friday, Nov. 1, at Faith Commmunity United Presbyterian Church, 44400 10 Mile Road in Novi.

"Emma Chaffee was a good school psychologist and a faithful servant to the community," said Superintendent John Hoben. "We were very sorry to hear of her death."

Chaffee joined the district in September 1971 as a social worker. She retired in June 1979.

Faith Community United Presbyterian Church is across from the Novi Police Station just east of Taft Road.

Man saves historic barn

Luckily for Plymouth Township, Dean Gilbert is a softy for history, and historic buildings in particular.

When a barn built in 1858 was scheduled for demolition in Saline, he offered to disassemble it and move it to property he owns in Plymouth Township.

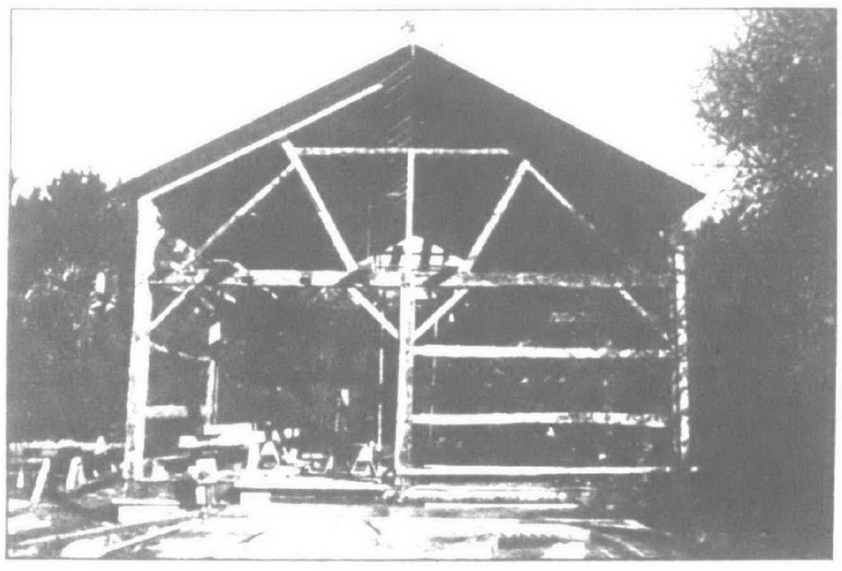
"It was a matter of preserving some history. If we didn't preserve and move it, it would have been firewood," said the Farmington Hills dentist, who's received help from friends interested in the project.

Having no blueprint to work from made re-raising the barn somewhat difficult. Each 35 foot by 40 foot section of the barn, built with hand-hewn chestnut beams and wooden pegs, weighs 4,000 pounds.

"You never assume you can't. Just assume you can until you run into a brick wall," said Gilbert.

"We just hated to see a piece of history go to waste."

Barn raising, especially the second time around, clearly is a labor of love. The job already has taken months, and it's not over yet.



A barn built 133 years ago in Saline gets a new lease on life in Plymouth Township.

Act lights fire under district

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

The Plymouth-Canton school district has homework to do, and will receive more than a poor report card from the state if it doesn't follow through.

Under provisions of Public Act 25, a new school improvement law, the district must implement specific changes or forfeit some state funding. Any loss would come in addition to a projected loss of $1.45 million in state aid. The district's total budget for 1991-92 is $73 million.

Superintendent John Hoben highlighted the state's recently passed 1991-92 school budget and requirements of Public Act 25 for the board of education Monday night.

He also addressed the tax-base sharing plan approved by the Legislature and expected to be signed by the governor. As part of the revenue-sharing plan intended to narrow the per-pupil spending gap throughout Michigan, out-of-formula districts that receive minimal state aid must share with poorer districts $27.2 million in growth on commercial and industrial property in 1991-92. The bill also reduces the possibility of tax-base growth inequities between Wayne and Oakland counties in the future.

NOW FOR the homework.

• Core Curriculum. Public Act 25 requires districts to make available to all students this year a state-designed core curriculum in at least one subject. The core curriculum includes key objectives and learning outcomes to be met by students.

Barb Church, Plymouth-Canton curriculum coordinator for math and science, said the district has adopted the math core curriculum, and has added to it. The district also has incorporated the state curriculum into its science, language arts and social studies programs over the past five years, Church said.

• Annual reports. The district must make available to the public "annual reports" intended to let taxpayers and parents know how the schools are progressing. The reports must be submitted to the state by Sept. 1 of each year.

• Dual enrollment. The district must pay college tuition and fees for those high school students who have completed their graduation requirements and who are taking college classes while still in high school.

• Student portfolios. To be eligible for state aid, districts must maintain student portfolios for every high school student beginning in 1992-93. In 1993-94, the same will be required for ninth-graders, and for eighth-graders in 1994-95.

Portfolios must include an annual academic and non-academic plan, record of achievement, records of career preparation, vocational-technical training and job experience, and records of accomplishments and recognition, Hoben said.

• Student competency testing. Beginning with the 1994 graduating class, students will be given "state-endorsed" high school diplomas if they do one of the following: meet half the objectives on standardized math, reading and science tests, achieve a passing score on a locally developed, state-approved proficiency test or pass a general equivalency diploma test.

PLYMOUTH-CANTON'S preference would be to use a locally developed test, said Hoben.

Students who fail to meet one of the above may be re-evaluated each year after completing a remedial program approved by staff and parents.

To receive state aid, districts also must report their enrollments and inform the state about pupils who do not have immunization records.

Ray Hoedel, associate superintendent for business, is less than pleased about the latest twists in state financing of education.

All the ongoing petition drives are just confusing everyone," he said. "They won't lead to the solving of any problems.

The concern that we are facing is the tax freeze in next year's budget," added Hoedel.

The loss of $1.45 million "has a negative impact on this year, which compounds the problems and concerns we have for the following year. Already, expenditures are exceeding revenues this year. That (the state aid loss) will widen the gap. Things are not getting easier. We have some pretty rough budget decisions coming up."

Area hunters bag their deer

We at the Plymouth Observer have revived an old northern Michigan tradition, the community buck pole.

In northern towns, hunters annually bring their buck or doe to town to hang them on the pole for all to see.

We're also asking hunters to bring their deer to our office so we can take a picture.

Here's our list:

Glen Heinrich Jr., 43, of Canton, killed a 145 pound doe on Sunday, Oct. 27, in Crawford County near Grayling. He has been bow hunting for two years.

Richard Parr of Ann Arbor Township killed a 160 pound spike-horn buck on Oct. 10 near Pontiac Trail and Joy Road on Oct. 10.

Mike Evans, 32, of Plymouth, killed a three-point buck on Oct. 20 near Cadillac.

For more information, call Jeff Counts, the editor, or Kevin Brown at 459-2700, between 8:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. Also, we'll take pictures of you and your deer during office hours. We're at 744 Wing St., Plymouth.

Taxes, development pushing out farmers

By Diane Gale
staff writer

Walking his hilly nine acres in west Canton, Todd Ehrhart has a Jimmy Stewart like drawl as he explains what it's like to raise pigs and black Angus cows in a town that's better known for it's subdivisions than livestock.

Working full-time at Ford Motor Co. as a receiving checker at the Michigan Truck plant, Ehrhart raises 28 piglets, a few older pigs and about 20 registered black Angus cows.

"I'd like to get a herd and do the thing I've always wanted — to be a full-time farmer," he said taking off his cap and combing his red and white hair back with his fingers.

Ehrhart wants to raise cattle, hogs and crops for their feed.

He hopes to realize the dream when he retires in seven years to a warmer climate where livestock can pasture yearlong. He'll leave the land his parents bought 43 years ago when he was five. It became home to his wife, Linda, and their five children.

"You can't farm here anymore," he said blaming taxes, development and city folk who don't understand country life.

"The more people who come out to farming who are from the city the more trouble you have," he said.

'The more people who come out to farming who are from the city the more trouble you have.'

— Todd Ehrhart
Canton farmer

AND THE more citified the area gets the further out Ehrhart has to go for service and equipment, he said remembering a time when mills were available in Plymouth and Ypsilanti.

A valley in the back 40 of his lot includes an area where a branch of the remarkably clean-looking Rouge River flows. The ravine stops developers from making offers to build yet another subdivision.

Heading toward the pigs pen, Ehrhart said he built the decks and small houses where black and pink swine feed.

"Pig condominiums, I guess you could call it," he said. "I want to build some more."

Slats in the decks let the droppings fall. Cow and pig manure sells for $15 a pick-up load.

Starting his day at 7 a.m., Ehrhart said he works on the farm until 1:30-2 p.m., then lays down for a while before starting work at 4 p.m.

As he heads back toward his house on Ridge between Geddes and Cherry Hill just outside Canton's historic district he talks about a time when pheasants ran in herds and deer were commonplace. Now the wild life is scarcer than hens' teeth.

A steady stream of cars pass his house, and sometimes when the cows are close enough to the road, drivers stop for a closer look.

HE RECOILED back from a shock while closing an electric fence. He chuckled, paused and said: "At least I know they're working."

His quick laugh and easy saunter faded. His voice choked and it looked like his eyes welled up when he pointed to limited job opportunities for young people, sour politics and environmental groups that fight for changes.

"A lot of the animal rights people are vegetarian or something and they want to put their will on you," he said. "The Bible says the animals were put here on this earth for our use. A lot of these people think animals are like human beings. There's a place you have to put a stop to it. You have to make a profit.

"When these people start to look like people in Africa with their bones sticking out, their attitude will change about agriculture."

Farmers in the United States could feed the world, he said. Agriculture, like the auto industries, are affected by foreign influences.

Japanese owned companies in the U.S. export meat, he said.

"And all we get is the measly little wages that the people who work there get. All the profits go to Japan."

When he was a teenager, Ehrhart said, it was easier for young people to get out of school, get a job at an auto company and make a good living. Teenagers can't do that today.

"The American dream is about ready to slip away," he said. "A lot of it was that American companies are taking everything out and not putting anything back."

While people in the U.S. are out of work, "We're still giving away all this foreign aid and we need it at home."

Record student enrollment greets SC's new registrar

By Brian Lysaght
staff writer

Twenty-two years ago Ronald Randall could be seen patrolling Schoolcraft College's wide open campus wearing badge number one.

Now he's the registrar, the man behind the scenes who oversees records and class registration for thousands of Schoolcraft students and former students.

Randall, 43, of Livonia, began Oct. 1 as registrar. He succeeds Russell Bogarin, under whom Randall served as assistant registrar for 14 years.

"My educational life has centered around Schoolcraft," said Randall, a 1977 graduate of Schoolcraft College. His professional life has too.

He hired on at the college as a public safety officer in 1969, after a year as a Detroit police officer. He was hired by Fred Wrenbeck a retired Detroit police lieutenant who organized Schoolcraft's new department.

Back then, the college was a handful of buildings on 160 acres. "It was farm land at the time. We were surrounded by fields," he recalled.

RANDALL WORKED full time at the college and took classes for eight years. His associate's degree helped him get hired as assistant registrar in 1977, he said. He later earned a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Madonna College, and in 1989, a master's degree in educational leadership at Eastern Michigan University.

> 'My ultimate goal is going to be a paperless office in three-four years,'
> — Ron Randall, SC registrar

When he started working at Schoolcraft, "I didn't expect to be a registrar," he said.

HE HAS SEEN vast changes in the office, which shifted from punch cards, file cabinets and a hectic three-day student registration period in the gymnasium. Now, the registrar uses computers to simplify the process and students can register by mail and or by in-person for classes. Randall wants to go further, to offer registration by phone and to introduce optical disc technology for more efficient record storage.

"My ultimate goal is going to be a paperless office" in 3-4 years, he said. He oversees a staff of four full time and two part-time workers, and during registration, 12 additional employees on call.

BOGARIN, SCHOOLCRAFT'S registrar for 19 years, said he hoped Randall would be selected as his successor.

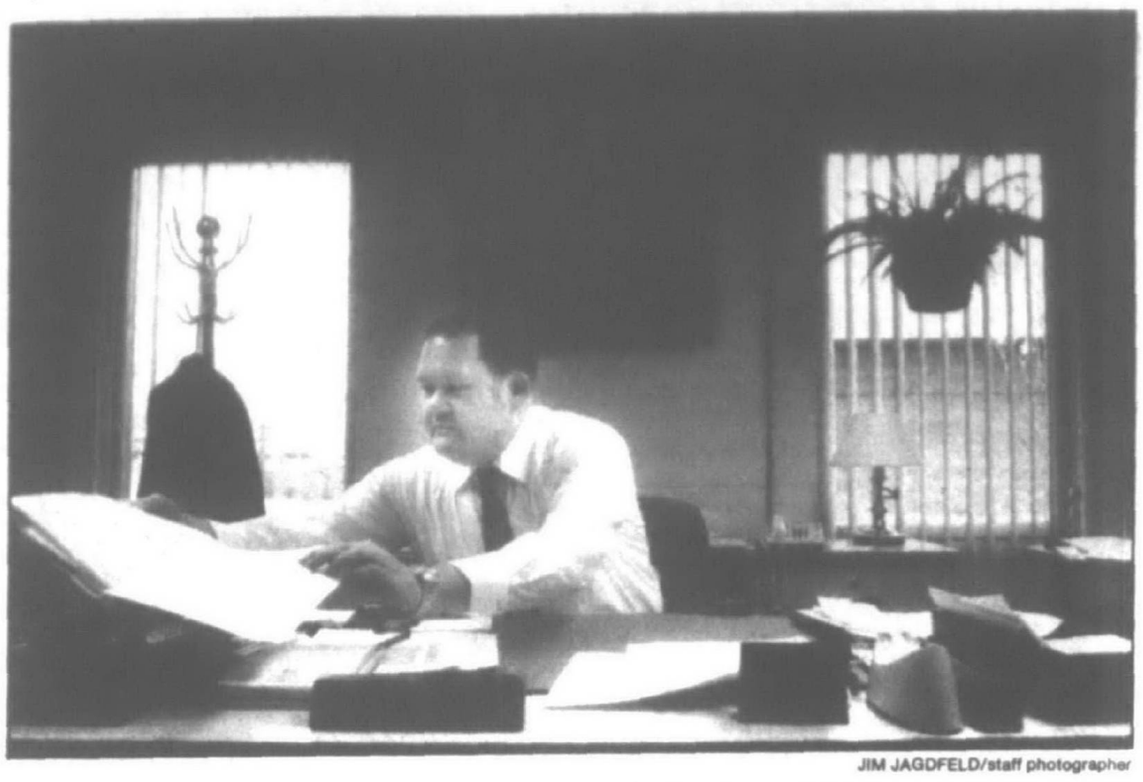
"There was no guarantee he would get the job, but I hoped he would," said Bogarin, now retired. "He has a total understanding of what we had been doing in that office."

The office has been especially busy lately. This fall's enrollment of 9,551, is the highest ever.

"Usually in a commmunity college setting, during times of recession, our enrollment increases because people not working or laid off go back to school," he said.

HE SAID 30-35 percent of Schoolcraft's students are enrolled in transfer programs, often recent high school graduates planning to attend a four-year colleges. The other 65 percent are in two-year career programs. Another 4,500 students sign up for the college's continuing education courses.

Randall has lived in Livonia for nine years, and his family includes two Schoolcraft graduates. His wife Sally graduated from the nursing program where his daughter is currently enrolled. One son graduated from the culinary arts program last year. A second son graduated from University of Michigan and now attends Detroit College of Law.



JIM JAGDFELD/staff photographer

Ronald Randall went from police officer to registrar in 22 years working at Schoolcraft College. In his new role as registrar, Randall is responsible for maintaining academic records and registering students for classes. He had been assistant registrar since 1977.

Health care issue sparks Senate debate on secrecy

By Tim Richard
staff writer

State lawmakers disagree sharply whether disciplinary procedures of health care professionals should be conducted in secrecy.

A Senate debate Tuesday on a 26-bill package for "affordable health care" turned into a battle over whether to shut down investigations, hearings and records under Michigan's "sunshine laws" — the Open Meetings and Freedom of Information Acts.

"The public has a right to learn the actions of negligent doctors," said Sen. John Kelly, D-Grosse Pointe, arguing the secrecy bills "destroy the credibility of the medical profession."

"The final vote will be on the record. But we won't know the allegations. We won't know what the investigator found. We won't know what the hearing officer found. We won't know the substance."

REPLIED SPONSOR Joanne Emmons, R-Big Rapids: "The Michigan Bar Association has the same restrictions. This assures confidentiality at least until there's some evidence they've done wrong."

One bill closes off settlement conferences in the Department of Licensing and Regulation. Another closes records of investigations and review conferences; only the fact of an allegation — not its substance — would be a public record.

The bills face tough sledding in the House of Representatives. Last year Rep. David Gubow, D-Oak Park, rewrote similar measures after doctors sought the same secrecy protections as lawyers. That bill did not get Senate action.

In key votes, the Senate gave 25-13 and 24-14 support to bills to close off proceedings under, respectively, the Open Meetings and Freedom of Information acts.

Area senators voted the same way on each:

Yes (for closing) — Republicans Michael Bouchard of Birmingham, Mat Dunaskiss of Lake Orion and Robert Geake of Northville, and Democrat William Faust of Westland.

No (for openness) — Republican David Honigman of West Bloomfield and Democrats Jack Faxon of Farmington Hills and George Z. Hart of Dearborn.

KELLY DID all the talking for opponents of closed sessions and records.

He charged the sessions would be "Star Chambers, meeting in secret, dominated by the professionals they're supposed to regulate."

Kelly said the board "received 500 complaints last year against health professionals. But in only 51 cases did they make determinations."

Another bill eliminates the right of court appeal in certain cases. Worse, he said, "it allows boards to change the findings of fact and law of a hearing examiner without new evidence."

Except for Emmons, no supporters — mainly 18 of the 20 Republicans — replied.

THE PACKAGE is designed to make health care more affordable by:

- Encouraging health insurance for 800,000 uncovered low-income people.
- Streamlining discipline procedures for health care professionals.
- Capping "pain and suffering" jury awards for most lawsuits.
- Scaling down attorneys' fees in high-award cases.
- Setting up arbitration panels as an alternative to court suits.
- Easing regulations on "certificates of need" for hospital purchases of expensive equipment.

LOCAL SENATORS won one amendment to require foreign medical school graduates to be proficient in spoken English.

"They all have to pass an examination in English," objected Sen. John Schwarz, R-Battle Creek, the chamber's only physician.

"English proficency is tested only in a written exam," replied Faxon of Farmington Hills. "People from foreign countries often have a better grasp of English grammar and spelling than Americans do. But clarity and articulation — that's a quite different issue."

"I probably have more foreign-born physicians in my district than anybody in the Senate," said Sen. Lana Pollack, D-Ann Arbor. "I don't think it's discriminatory to ask people practicing medicine to speak so they can be understood by a patient and understand the patient."

Schwarz predicted "every state (mental) hospital would close down and half the VA hospitals would close" if spoken English tests were required.

Supporting tests in spoken English were: Republican Honigman of West Bloomfield and Democrats Faust of Westland, Faxon of Farmington Hills and Hart of Dearborn.

Opposed were Republicans Bouchard of Birmingham, Dunaskiss of Lake Orion and Geake of Northville.

Cuts force area parks to share managers

By Tim Richard
staff writer

As state money dries up, the Department of Natural Resources will cluster up to four parks under a single manager, eliminating 50 managerial jobs.

Many parks will be kept operated just seasonally, said Russ Harding, chief of DNR's parks division.

"In 1992's first phase, 17 permanent park managers, three permanent park rangers, and 14 permanent-intermittent secretary positions will be eliminated," Harding told the House Conservation Committee.

THE REASON, he said, is that "funding for the system has gone from 70 percent general fund (10 years ago) to 30 percent."

The other 70 percent comes from park users fees — annual vehicle permits and nightly camping fees.

The shift to user fees is part of a long-term trend. The Legislature has raised the social services, prisons and education portions of the budget, squeezing DNR and other departments.

"It's our intention not to close parks," said the chief of the 71 state parks.

"We do make money in summer and have a negative cash flow in the winter months. We've tried to market the parks for year around use and have been only partially successful."

Most parks "closed" for half the year for camping will remain open for hunting, hiking and fishing.

THE CLUSTER system calls for 36 designated "core" parks with the rest designated "satellite" parks.

"In some satellite parks, some roads will not be plowed (in winter) and campgrounds will not be opened."

Asked by Rep. Tracey Yokich, D-St. Clair Shores, whether the Rochester-Utica State Park would be sold, Harding said, "Our position would not be to sell it.

"We've had very, very preliminary discussions with local units to manage it. Shelby Township (in Macomb County) and Rochester Hills (in Oakland) have expressed interest."

The local park manager would have authority to decide which services — such as snow plowing — to reduce, based on local usage, Harding said.

HERE IS the DNR's list of core parks in bold type followed by satellite parks:

- Waterloo in Washtenaw County (open year-round) — Pinckney (April 1 to Oct. 31 for camping), Lakelands Trail.
- Island Lake in Livingston County — Brighton Recreation Area (both open April 1 to Oct. 31).
- Proud Lake in southern Oakland County (year around) — Highland (April 1 to Oct. 31).
- Maybury in western Wayne County (open year around) — no satellite.
- Holly in northern Oakland County — Seven Lakes (both open April 1 to Oct. 31).
- Bald Mountain in northern Oakland County (year around) — Metamora-Hadley, Ortonville and Rochester-Utica (all April 1 to Oct. 31).

Host families needed

High school students from Brazil, Argentina, Germany, France and Spain seek area homes for a foreign exchange program.

Students are part of the American Institute for Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation exchange program. They will arrive in January and spend five months in the U.S.

Students are 15-18 and have studied English for at least four years. They will be arriving with money to cover their personal expenses.

Families with or without children can become host families. Details are available by calling Lynne Levenbach, 453-8562 or Scott Willson, 322-4678.

Hearing set on vo-tech bill

A Michigan House of Representatives subcommittee on education will hold a public hearing on House Bill 4165 from 10 a.m. to noon Monday in Garden City High School, 6500 Middlebelt, between Ford and Warren roads.

HB 4165 would restructure vocational-technical education. The legislation was developed to use the Michigan State Board of Education strategic plan for vocational technical education and research into the German dual-system of education.

Local man asks suburbanites for help on downtown parade

Bruce Lantto has fond memories of the Michigan Thanksgiving Day Parade.

"My dad used to work for Cadillac Motors, so, because of that we used to get access into one of the buildings downtown and we'd watch from there. We always had a great time," he said.

Now, Lantto is working toward preserving those same kind of memories for others. He's seeking volunteers to join the parade.

Lantto is president of the Friends of the Parade Association, a suburban/urban coalition that helps stage the annual event.

"I've been involved with the parade for about 10 years," said Lantto. "It's really great to see the cooperation."

He's no stranger to area residents, either through his affiliation with Thayer-Rock Funeral Home in Farmington or as a Livonia Chamber of Commerce member.

LANTTO IS calling on fellow suburbanites to help support the parade. The one-day event requires about 1,300 volunteers and, with a month left before the Nov. 28 parade day, workers are still needed. Volunteers handle balloons, drive floats, march in the parade and perform other tasks.

This year's parade will feature 100 units, among them floats, marching bands, giant balloons and papier-mache characters.

"It's one thing to see the parade from the outside in, but it's something quite different to see it from the inside out. To see the smiles on the faces of all the people, black, white, Asian, whatever, it's really quite gratifying"

Anyone 18 years or older who would like to volunteer can call the Friends office at 923-7400. Volunteers must pay a $15 Friends of the Parade membership fee which entitles members to a newsletter and parties.

Bruce Lantto is urging suburbanites to support the Michigan Thanksgiving parade with time or money.

Libertarians set modest goals for '92

By Wayne Peal
staff writer

Controversy over the nomination of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas is the clearest reason yet to abandon the two major political parties, Libertarian Party Vice Presidential candidate Nancy Lord said.

"I think the people finally got a chance to see Congress in action and they were revulsed," said Lord during a campaign stop last week at the University of Michigan-Dearborn. "People are beginning to see that it's the people in power who are the problem."

Lord is a licensed, though non-practicing, doctor and an attorney in practice in Washington, D.C. She was recently her party's candidate for mayor in that city.

THAT DUALITY — doctor and attorney, conservative and liberal — underscores both Lord's philosophy and that of her party.

Stauchly pro-choice, Lord nonetheless lists herself as a Thomas supporter.

"It's shameful what they did to that man," she said. "The real reason the liberals feared Clarence Thomas was because they were afraid he was going to do what Supreme Court justices should have been doing all along — declare certain acts of Congress unconstitutional. They were afraid he was going to tell them there were some aspects of American life into which Congress couldn't intrude and they were afraid of that."

Lord, a former member of the National Organization for Women, said she wasn't afraid Thomas would cast the deciding vote in overturning abortion rights.

"If we lose at the Supreme Court, we'll win at the ballot box," she said. "Acutally, I don't believe the public is as far apart on the issue as our leaders would have us believe. I don't think there are many pro-choice people who would favor abortions in the third tri-mester. And I don't think there are too many pro-life people who would outlaw abortion under all circumstances."

Barely a blip on the electoral chart in 1988, the party's 1992 goal is modest.

"Realistically, we're looking at taking 1 percent of the vote this time," Lord said. "If we do that we feel we'll send a message to Washington."

There were only six people in attendance for her talk at UM-D, a turnout 100 to 1,000 times less than Dan Quayle would have drawn for a similar visit.

But Lord, was both direct and enthusiastic during a give-and-take question with her tiny audience. Audience members, it seemed, were equally enthusiastic about her.

"I think she's great," said UM-D student Mark Fleming of Westland. "I've been following her since the convention (in September). I know she's a lot better than Dan Quayle."

What does Lord think of Quayle, the man whose job she seeks?

"Well, I'd love to debate him," she said with a laugh.

On other issues, Lord would outlaw neither guns nor drugs and if television networks want to show adult-oriented fare, that's fine with her.

"Common sense has to prevail," she said. "Televison networks aren't going to put pornography in prime time. They wouldn't get any advertisers."

Lord's personal affiliations include membership in the National Rifle Association, National Abortion Rights Action League and National Taxpayers Union.

If anything, hers is a political philosophy built on an issue-by-issue basis.

"WHEN I was a NOW member, I knew we stood for abortion rights, but I didn't know that also meant buying in to gun control and high social spending," she said.

While she favors reducing welfare, Lord said that Michigan Gov. John Engler's approach may have gone too far.

"Ideally, you don't want to see able-bodied people receiving welfare, but it's better to wean them off gradually than to just dump them," she said. "One idea I've been considering is to cut welfare $1 for every $2 they earn in the workforce."

Libertarians have been selling their message of less government involvement for more than a decade, though to date there haven't been too many takers.

In 1988, the party's national ticket pulled less than one-half of one percent of the total vote. Though its 432,116 votes was the third most cast for any party, its ticket trailed such candidates as ex-Klansman David Duke, right to life candidate William Marra, and long-ago Democratic Party contender Eugene McCarthy in several states where those candidates also appeared on the ballot.

The party's 1992 ticket is headed by presidential nominee Andre Marrou, the Alaska state legislator who remains the party's highest ranking elected official.

P-C committee to look at 'schools of choice'

By M.B. Dillon
staff writer

The state of Michigan is getting bullish on education, and as push comes to shove, Plymouth-Canton residents will have a say in educational improvement.

That's the intent of a "schools of choice" plan scheduled for implementation in 1992-93 in which students would be able to attend any in-district school they wish, regardless of where they live.

"By Nov. 15, a committee must be formed, established with two-thirds citizens," Superintendent John Hoben told the board of education Monday night. "The committee has until April 1 to go through the process and make a report to the board of education as to what process or program would be used within the district.

"THE BOARD HAS to adopt it, or it goes back to the citizens in the general election in June," said Hoben. "If the electorate goes along with the board, then for two years, we are exempt. At the end of two years, we have to go through the process again."

Hoben proposed a committee of 18 people — six administrators and school staff, and 12 people from outside. The 12 would include individuals from the Plymouth-Canton Education Association, which represents teachers and other school employees; the chamber of commerce; the school council; Business and Education Partnership; Talented and Gifted program; safety committee; the Special Education Parents Advisory Committee; I Care Committee and the 2010 Committee that is studying district needs. One at-large member also would be included.

'This is an opportunity for people to have a great deal of impact.'

school board president

They'll be charged with reaching a consensus on what the schools of choice program should be for this area, said Hoben. "The chairperson," he added, "should be someone from the citizen ranks, seeing as the committee will be dominated by citizens. We will go to the leadership of each of those groups" and ask them to recommend candidates. Administration will report back to the board Nov. 11.

"This is an opportunity for people to have a great deal of impact," said school board President David Artley.

Hoben said the schools of choice plan is fraught with concerns, given the fact that the district still has to service each school's attendance area.

"How you back off of that to create choice is a question," he said.

IN MINNESOTA, WHERE schools of choice has been tried, less than one percent of the student body has taken advantage of it, said Hoben. It has had little effect on athletics, as players who switch schools in Minnesota must give up a year of athletic eligibility.

For districts offering schools of choice in 1992-93, the Legislature will provide a 20 percent increase over the district's 1991-92 funding for transportation. Districts that also take part in an intermediate district schools of choice program will receive a 40 percent increases in transportation funding.

East meets West in B'ham Temple art show

staff writer

East will meet West in an artistic way this weekend, as four Russian artists trained in the Soviet Union participate in the 19th annual Birmingham Temple Fine Art Show and Sale, Friday-Sunday, Nov. 1-3, at 28611 W. 12 Mile, between Middlebelt and Inkster Road in Farmington Hills.

It will be the first time the juried show features the work of new Americans, part of the temple's outreach program.

The four are Anna Kocherovsky (tapestry) of Canton, Rudolf Nay (photography), Leonid Tikh (painting) of Oak Park and Irina Baranovskaya (puppets) of Oak Park.

There is an art club in Russia, but it's not a professional organization, the artists said. They are glad to exhibit and sell their work in the United States.

"(Exhibiting) was a problem, not just for Jewish people, but for Russian people too," said Tikh, 27.

TIKH, WHO came to the United States 1½ years ago with his wife, son and wife's grandmother, has shown his work in the Soviet Union.

Many of his paintings, in oil, tempera or watercolor, are of rustic scenes, but he also paints still lifes and portraits. A trip to Italy, his first outside his country, inspired other works.

"From young childhood I just like painting," he said.

In Michigan, he likes painting Cranbrook Park scenes. He would like to see northern Michigan some day.

PEOPLE FASCINATE and inspire Kocherovsky, who emigrated from the Soviet Union two years ago with her husband and son and now works at the Hertel plant in Plymouth.

"For me it's very important to weave people, how people look, how they move," said Kocherovsky, 33.

One of her colorful tapestries shows a circle of women wearing Russian shawls. Another work, "Simchat Torah," celebrates her Jewish heritage, American religious freedom and her family. It was first displayed at Temple Beth El in West Bloomfield, and a commemorative poster of the tapestry was made for the temple's 140th anniversary.

"Working with yarn, working with looms gives me peace, gives me self-confidence.

"I hope one day I can be a full-time artist."

SINCE BARANOVSKAYA, 36, came to the United States one year ago, she has worked with the Russian-American puppet theater in the Detroit area.

Her theater puppets and marionettes can be little or big, some life-size, with different personalities — from an exotic dancer to a demure young woman.

Say no to city charter revision

THERE'S A SLOGAN being used in the effort to curb drug abuse. It's "Just say no."

Well, there's another type of abuse that city of Plymouth voters should say no to and that's ballot abuse. That's the addiction to putting everything on the ballot to let voters decide what should be done.

It sounds nice on the surface, but like drugs, it has the potential to destroy the minds of politicians.

That's why we're urging a no vote on a proposal to change the city charter. The amendment would prevent the city from joining with Plymouth and Canton townships in purchasing and operating Mettetal Airport, unless approved by voters.

We oppose the proposal because our government is based on the idea that we elect people to make decisions and they in turn vote on public issues. Anything else is mob rule.

APPROVAL OF THE proposal would do more than prevent the city from joining in a Mettetal Airport operating agreement. It would set a precedent in the city for going to the voters every time the city council wants to make a move.

While it sounds good on the surface to have voters make important decisions about their community, the practical result would be to slow down any project in which the city decides to become involved.

Such a system of running a community turns city commission members into nothing more than clerks, folks who are there merely to handle the paper work that crops up between the important issues.

That's not the type of commission the city deserves.

We've already noticed the dumbing of the city commission because of the charter amendment. During a forum seven city commission candidates were asked their stance on Mettetal Airport.

THE RESPONSES WERE mushy. All said they would do whatever the voters wished. By doing that, council members duck important issues. And when council members do that, we all lose.

We hope voters see the wisdom of defeating the charter amendment. If they don't, they'll be back at the polls every year making all the decisions about the city.

That's chaos. And we don't what to see that.

Band tuned up for nationals

ON NOV. 15 there will be 186 kids from Canton and Plymouth stepping out in tune at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis.

But while the dome is best known for basketball, hoops will be the farthest thing from these kid's minds. They'll have their attention focused on their band routines.

The appearance by the Plymouth Centennial Education Park Marching Band at the Bands of America National Championships at the Dome comes one year after the band took first place in the competition.

It's the Final Four for bands, and we wish the band members well, and hope for back-to-back championship.

THE ROAD TO Indianapolis started earlier this year for the teens in the band when they started to practice in the heat of August.

Closed primary wrecks system

HOW WOULD YOU feel if the person who checks your voter registration card were peering over your shoulder in the voting booth, eyeing your ballot choices?

That's a sensation Michigan voters may experience next March when they cast their ballots in the state's presidential primary. No, it won't be nosy poll workers, it'll be the Michigan Democratic and Republican parties forcing their way into the voting booth.

Not only is the state's new closed presidential primary an unwarranted invasion of privacy, but it's bound to create a mess at the polls and turn off an untold number of people from taking part in the election process. That's something we just can't afford with voter apathy already running at unprecedented levels.

As it stands now, primary voters must register their party preference — Democrat, Republican or Independent — 30 days before the March 17 primary.

The Michigan Court of Appeals last July reversed a lower court ruling which said the closed primary was unconstitutional. The state Supreme Court has yet to rule on the case.

The move to a closed primary came out of perceived abuses of the state's 1988 presidential caucuses, in which cross-over voters played a role in large turnouts for Pat Robertson (Republican) and Jesse Jackson (Democrat). The state also used a caucus system in 1984.

PRIOR TO THAT, Michiganians expressed their preference in presidential primaries open to all voters.

Elected leaders and party officials have begun tossing around the idea of keeping the current system but loosening the pre-registration requirement so that voters could register right up until the time they vote.

We say let's forget that and just drop the whole closed primary idea. Reinstate Michigan's open presidential primary. Here's why:

- Under the current set-up, independent voters can identify themselves as such, but can't vote in either primary. More Michigan voters consider themselves independent than members of either party. A Detroit News poll before the 1990 gubernatorial election found 26 percent of the state's voters consider themselves Republican. 30 percent Democrat and 33 percent independent.

The closed primary system effectively disenfranchises one-third of the state's voters, people who have traditionally voted for candidates from all parties.

- A closed primary — regardless of how easy party registration is — will discourage people from making an election-day trek to the polls. As of Aug. 1 — three years after passage of the original law — nearly 75 percent of Michigan's 5.9 million registered voters had failed to declare their party preference.
- Such registration also will only give the state's organized political parties another shot at computer solicitation of voters. This will create more junk mail and intrusive telephone calls.

Which brings us back to our first and biggest argument against closed primaries — they are one more invasion of privacy.

Orator convinced Lincoln to recruit black regiments

ONE NIGHT in 1841, at a meeting of the predominantly white Anti-Slavery Society, an escaped slave in attendance spoke impromptu about his experiences in bondage.

The young man so impressed the audience with his intellect and oratory that William Lloyd Garrison, the prominent abolitionist, hired him to speak throughout the country for the abolition of slavery. The young man was Frederick Bailey, who later changed his surname to Douglass to throw off the bounty hunters on his trail.

As Douglass traveled, his fame spread, but his worries about being forced back into slavery increased. He fled to England until he was able to pay the price for his legal freedom.

Back in the United States, Douglass did not limit his activities to the abolitionist struggle. He wrote in his newspaper, North Star, "I am for any movement whenever and wherever there is a good cause to promote, right to assert . . . or a wrong to be redressed."

Douglass went on to play a prominent role in the Civil War. A close friend of Abraham Lincoln, he convinced the president to recruit black soldiers and to pay and rank them equally with other Union troops. After the war, Douglass served in several government positions, culminating in this appointment as ambassador to Haiti in 1889.

This is another in a continuing series of articles marking the anniversary of the Bill of Rights.

German vo-tech program puts its students to work

Philip Power

HERE'S THE right way to train kids for good jobs in rewarding careers when they leave school:

- Give them solid vocational-technical training from the time they turn 10 to at least 16.
- Organize much of this training around real work in real shops in real businesses, not just in artificial labs in school. Kids spend three days a week in a business setting. Businesses pay them salaries and cover health care, provide tools and instructors.
- Integrate business into the education process. The skills needed for various careers — metalworking or banking or construction — are identified jointly by businesses, labor union and educator representatives.
- Maintain high standards. Kids who don't measure up repeat the course. At graduation, many kids are hired by the same employers where they trained.

HERE'S THE wrong way to train kids for good jobs:

- Treat voc-tech training as something for dummies; stress going to college.
- Confine job-related training to schools, where equipment is outdated and teachers have no idea what business is about.
- Divorce the needs of employers or unions from the decision-making process; leave curriculum design and standard setting entirely to educators.
- Pass the kids who don't learn from grade to grade until they are dumped on the street.

SURPRISE! The first system is used in Baden Wuerttemberg, a state in Germany much like Michigan, with lots of auto making and high-tech industry. The second is what we do here in Michigan.

Americans criticize the German system in very interesting — and revealing — ways.

They say Germans "track" their kids — that is, steer them toward college or trades. In fact, there's lots of switching between tracks in Germany. And we in Michigan track kids right now: We have one track (college prep) and throw away the other 50-70 percent.

The American fascination with college as the only legitimate outcome for school expresses itself in two other significant contrasts.

Germans have a national consensus that high skills are important to individual and national economic success. We don't.

Germans run their educational system to respond to the needs of employers and of the broader economy. Our school governance is geared to "What do parents want?" When did you see a candidate for school board campaigning as a representative of employers' needs?

THE MICHIGAN House Education Committee held hearings last week on the German system, thanks to chairman William Keith who has been pushing this issue for some years now.

After registering astonishment at the sense and completeness of the German system, House members naturally fell to questioning the costs. The German system is more expensive than the American, and most lawmakers couldn't get the "T word" out of their craw.

In fact, the state Senate last week scuttled an attempt to put in place a serious job training program to cushion the loss of Michigan's safety net. Too expensive.

My own view? We're systematically short-changing our kids, building an elitist system focused on going to college and putting our economic future at risk by our reluctance to get serious about training for jobs.

No matter how much the politicians want it, there's no silver bullet. At the end of the day, you get just about what you pay for.

Give us back our word gay

To the editor:

After reading Jack Gladden's column in the Plymouth Observer dated 10-24-91, I could not help feeling saddened. He uses the Ku Klux Klan, Nazism, David Duke and Republicans to discredit traditional family values. He makes family values sound like a dirty word.

He insinuates family values are the enemy of atheism, abortion and homosexuality. The only thing he really supports is "homosexuality" and expends his whole column supporting this life style. I often wonder why, if homosexuality is so great and their relationships are so warm and loving, these relationships seem to occur most often in highway restrooms and other public restrooms?

I would guess the general public cares less what they do in private but when they proclaim themselves openly and then demand to be your child's teacher, minister, Boy Scout leader, doctor and dentist, then demand billions of our tax dollars be used to save them from their self-inflicted wounds and have the gall to claim this under the guise of "civil rights," I say enough is enough. I'll take traditional family values any time. I would also request that they discontinue using our fine English word "gay" to describe themselves.

If Jack Gladden really wants to promote homosexuality, he should write a column entitled, "10 Best Rest Rooms in Michigan to find love, companionship and warm lasting relationships."

Gays shouldn't work where not wanted

To the editor:

Hurry! . . . Everybody . . . Soak your roofs down . . .

There's a forest fire out of control in Oregon. We don't want that fire spreading here to Southeast Michigan and burning our homes.

That makes about as much sense as the people picketing the Cracker Barrel Restaurant in Belleville. That restaurant didn't even exist when the problem supposedly occurred. If there is a problem, have the people concerned go, with their representatives, to the source . . . the company headquarters in Tennessee, or to the restaurant(s) where the problem supposedly occurred. Or do these people know that what they're doing, wouldn't be condoned down South . . . that they'd be run right out of town! And if this is the problem they insist it is, and they can't solve it by going to the source, then they should go to the EEOC.

Of course, if it were me, and this purported problem were real, I sure wouldn't want to work where I wasn't wanted. I would want to work in a friendly environment. Much along the same reasons that I didn't join the Green Beret's or go to work for Red Adair.

The past is not all glorious

James Radebaugh

When my second-grade teacher told my class that Columbus discovered Indians when he discovered America, I objected. If the Indians were here when Columbus arrived, didn't they discover America, I asked.

OK, so those weren't my exact words. But I was thinking more clearly that day than Jack Gladden was thinking when he wrote a recent column.

Gladden, the O&E's debunker of "correct" thought, went on a tirade a couple of weeks ago condemning those who object to the celebration of the 500th anniversary of Columbus' voyage as "neo-revisionists, Yuppies and Politically Correct thinkers" bent on reinventing history.

Please, Jack, let's think about this.

When Columbus arrived, North and South America were inhabited by millions of human beings living lives that, while surely neither completely idyllic nor entirely free from injustice, were as legitimate as ours.

Today, most are gone.

Many of them assimilated into the new dominant culture, as did at least one of my own ancestors, and countless others died violently or from disease and hardship that resulted from the European conquest of their land. Enormous numbers of people suffered greatly. That's not history reinvented. That's history.

OBVIOUSLY, COLUMBUS isn't to blame for all the injustices that have occurred on these continents since he stumbled on them. But to say that all he did was "drive a boat" is being kind. You have to admit that arriving unannounced, then returning to Spain with hundreds of natives as involuntary passengers took a certain audacity.

And it's that audacity — not so much a personal characteristic of Columbus as a cultural one he shared — that celebration critics want to expose. Europeans of 1492 assumed they had a right to plunder the world. They were not unique in this way, but they were wrong. And their plunder of the Americas is our heritage.

The issue here is not political correctness, certainly worthy of debunking, but responsibility — yours and mine, more than Columbus'. Our presence in this world comes with an obligation to acknowledge humanity's blunders and to learn from them. Those who say we should consider Columbus' voyage with awareness, rather than denial, of its brutal and unjust aftermath seem to be doing so.

WHAT IS the harm in that? Why would any living American feel threatened by the acknowledgment that our past is not all glorious, that, as all human history, it includes plenty of cruelty and exploitation?

Here's a guess.

If enough of us bring ourselves to acknowledge the injustices of the past, we might eventually be more honest about the injustices of the present. The arrogance that allowed Columbus to cart off those natives, after all, hasn't entirely disappeared.

We might, for example, be less prone to cheer when our army kills 300 or so impoverished civilians in its effort to capture a common dictator, and former U.S. ally, who happened to embarrass a successful U.S. presidential candidate.

As annoying as the "political correctness" of the left can be, it's important to remember who and what are served by the deeper and far more pervasive political correctness that runs through this nation.

And while we're thinking about that, the anniversary of Columbus' voyage gives us an opportunity to reconsider the ways the powerful treat the powerless. We should demand as much from our political leaders.

Prague-nosis: life's good here

Tim Richard

"LOOK UP, not down, if you visit Prague," a Dutch tour guide advised us some years ago.

Prague, he said, is the most beautiful city in Europe. Much of that beauty is in facades, decorations, rooftoops, statuary.

Last month we learned he was right. Vienna's beauty is really only a century old, but Prague's is far older. Charles University was founded in 1388 in the old town on the Moldau. An opera house where Mozart worked still stands. Much of "Amadeus" was filmed around Prague's 18th century buildings. We visited a rich, old culture.

But sadly, Czechoslovakia is 200 years behind the good ol' U.S. of A. in dealing with a key problem of civilization.

CZECHS AND Slovaks, grappling with freedom after the 1989 "velvet revolution" which toppled the Communists, can't handle federal-state relations.

This I gleaned from a local English-language paper, Prognosis (Vol. I, No. 7).

"What began as a soberly euphoric effort to create a new set of constitutions last June — one federal and two republic (state) — has become a political catfight which threatens the 73-year-old union of the Czech and Slovak nations," said an editor's introduction to an interview with the prime minister.

"The nut of the dispute concerns the respective powers and responsibilities of the federation versus the republics, especially in the economic area," the editor continued.

Czechoslovakia was born after World War I in the breakup of the Austro-Hungarian empire. Czechs and Slovaks are tribal groups that moved into the region as the Roman Empire disintegrated. The notion of state-federal relations is new stuff.

PRIME MINISTER Marian Calfa, a Slovak, said (translated): "All the key people from Slovakia were nominated and elected to the Federal Parliament" rather than to the Slovak Republican government. "These other (Slovak) politicians didn't have their own sphere of economic development to use to advance their own politics," he said.

Result: Slovaks are pushing separate nationhood.

The idea is crazy, of course. A balkanized series of tribal governments — Czechs, Slovaks, Croats, Serbs — will tempt another Napoleon, Hitler or Stalin to weld them into a respectable nation. Eastern Europe isn't out of the woods yet.

Meanwhile, the Prague Town Assembly bounced Jaroslav Koran as mayor, Prognosis reporter Matt Welch wrote. There were multiple reasons, but a key problem was "confusion at the top of foreign investment policy in City Hall." No one knows who's to do what, it seems.

Why a city is dabbling in foreign investment policy is beyond me. In the good ol' U.S. of A., the federal government handles interstate and foreign commerce.

THE TRICK is for politicians to assign certain jobs to the nationwide government and leave others to the state-local units.

Americans haven't solved the problem totally, but we have essentially a correct grasp of it. James Madison, in No. 9 of The Federalist Papers, said 204 years ago:

"The proposed Constitution, so far from implying an abolition of the State governments, makes them constituent parts of the national sovereignty . . . and leaves in their possession certain exclusive and very important portions of sovereign power."

In No. 10 Madison added: "The federal Constitution forms a happy combination in this respect: The great and aggregate interests being referred to the national, the local and particular to the State legislatures."

A trip to Prague makes a guy appreciate the good ol' American system.

A 'sub's' life is not an easy one

Question: My son had a substitute teacher in his high school math class for three days last week. It was a total waste of time. My son and his friends did nothing but talk and fool around until the substitute quit and a new one showed up. Can't schools get better substitute teachers?

Doc Doyle

Answer: "A policeman and a substitute's lot is not a happy one!" I know! I was a permanent junior and senior high school substitute teacher (sub) in my first year of teaching. A permanent sub shows up every day and is assigned to "whatever" . . . art — home economics — physics . . . depending on who is absent.

I developed some substitute hypotheses during that first year when I was a permanent sub and they have held true through 30-plus years in education.

Hypothesis 1: The amount of disruptive behavior a substitute teacher will confront in a classroom is in direct proportion to the amount of disruptive behavior that the regular classroom allows or can't control on a daily basis.

Hypothesis 2: The clarity of lesson plans left for the substitute and the expectation of the students' regular teacher that all students will complete the assignment during the class period when the regular teacher is absent will reduce "horseplay" and "mouthing off" by 90-plus percent.

Hypothesis 3: The respect the students have for their regular classroom teacher is directly proportionate to a worthwhile classroom experience the sub will enjoy.

But let's be honest! Anyone reading this response has either taken part in working a substitute over or, at a minimum, sat by and watched the scenario.

Substituting can be a tough, tough job . . . especially at the upper middle and high school level.

CONSIDER CHICAGO with its 25,000 teachers, of which an average of 4 percent are absent each day, creating a need for 1,000 substitutes. On some days the count goes to 1,500 or 2,000 subs. How does the administration find 2,000 competent subs? It doesn't. Why?

Urban cities such as Chicago and Detroit pay substitutes $20 to $30 less per day than many schools in the suburbs.

YOU SAY your son and his friends did nothing but talk and fool around. You say the substitute asked questions about where they were in the math book. A clear sign of poor or no lesson plans. A lost day of education.

Also your 15-year-old son is in a high school remedial math class that teaches simple adding, subtracting, decimals and other minimal skills — skills he should have picked up in later elementary or during his middle school experience . . . if he had been paying attention and doing his homework.

Frankly, having taught a remedial math class, the problem may not all have been with the sub but with some undisciplined adolescents (not students . . . students study) who saw an opportunity to have "fun," go to lunch and then brag about their accomplishment for the day . . . humiliating another human being.

Sometimes, I think, we educators should have budgeted for a substitute parent program. The parent sub would go into the home and teach adolescents their responsibility to see that they do their homework, bring their book to class, sit tall and pay attention.

I suggest you meet with your son's counselor and make your son a joint effort between you and the school instead of laying it all on a substitute. Your son, who has above average ability but a 1.8 grade point average, should be a clue.

James "Doc" Doyle, a former teacher/school administrator/university instructor, is president of Doyle and Associates, an educational consulting firm.

How to fight spiraling costs of prescription drugs

U-M pharmacist tells consumers how to fight spiraling costs of prescription drugs

This is the second in a series of consumer health tips from specialists in the University of Michigan College of Pharmacy.

If the cost of prescription medicines is breaking your health care budget, you are not alone. Consider the fiscal nightmare facing University of Michigan pharmacist Richard R. de Leon.

As director of pharmacy services for U-M Hospitals, de Leon must find a way to absorb the cost of two new prescription medications — one to stimulate the growth of human bone marrow and a second to cure a potentially fatal infection. Each drug costs thousands of dollars per dose.

"While they only will be used by a few patients, these two drugs alone have the potential to double U-M Hospitals' $18 million annual expenditure for pharmaceuticals," said de Leon, associate dean for clinical sciences and associate professor in the U-M College of Pharmacy.

According to de Leon, pharmacists worry that the high cost of new drugs created with sophisticated genetic engineering technology — combined with average annual price increases of 10 to 15 percent for existing drugs — could push the United States into a system of rationed health care. "These new drugs represent a revolution in hospital therapy, but who's going to pay for them?" he asked. "If we cannot afford to treat everyone with these new medications, who should decide which patients get treated?"

Although consumers will ultimately pick up the tab for spiraling prices, de Leon says they have little control over how much prescription medicines cost.

"THE PROBLEM is there's no mechanism in place to regulate prices, particularly for new medications," he said. "Phamaceutical manufacturers base their pricing on a variety of conditions, including market potential and whether there is any direct competition for the product."

Pharmaceutical manufacturers maintain it costs an average of $300 million in research and development costs to bring a new drug to market, according to de Leon. "It certainly is true that research and development costs are rising every day, and pharmaceutical firms must include those costs in product pricing," he said.

De Leon is critical of the billions of dollars pharmaceutical manufacturers spend annually on sales representatives and promotional campaigns for specific drugs aimed at physicians and pharmacists.

"In 1986, the pharmaceutical industry spent $5 billion on advertising and marketing. Some of this marketing effort takes the form of sweepstakes, contests, frequent prescriber promotions and free samples," de Leon said.

"Physicians have no economic incentive to consider low-cost alternatives when they prescribe a medication. Indeed, many prescribers aren't aware how much patients or their insurance companies must pay for these drugs. Those that are best informed often ask that a generic equivalent be dispensed, rather than a more expensive proprietary product."

COMMUNITY pharmacists are in a good position to help consumers economize as much as possible with prescription medications, says de Leon. But first, consumers must be aware of drug pricing and be willing to complain when prices go up. Here's what de Leon says consumers can do:

- If you are concerned about prescription drug prices and marketing practices, contact your state and federal legislators.
- Let your physician and pharmacist know about your concern — whether or not you have prescription insurance coverage.
- Keep a written record of all your prescription medications and how much they costs. Take it with you to every office visit. If you physician prescribes something other than you usual medication for the same condition, ask why or ask your pharmacist to check for you.
- When you select a pharmacy, choose one that maintains a permanent record of all medicines prescribed for you and your family. Insist that the pharmacists, instead of a store clerk, give you the medication and answer questions about its use and interactions.
- Ask your pharmacist if a generic or less expensive alternative medication is available.
- Ask you doctor if you are eligible for special financial assistance programs created by some pharmaceutical manufacturers to help low-income patients afford expensive medication.
- Be aware that direct marketing to consumers through television and magazine advertisements, like recent campaigns for allergy medicines, puts you in the position of asking your doctor's guidance, rather than pressuring him or her for a particular medication.

"Direct advertising to consumers is one of the latest trends in pharmaceutical marketing," de Leon said. "These advertisements attract the consumer's interest without giving a balanced presentation of therapeutic benefits and adverse effects. To get all the facts, ask your physician or pharmacist."

IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME

Irritable Bowel Syndrome (IBS) is a chronic disorder of the colon. The disorder has also been called different names; Mucus Colitis, Spastic Colon, Spastic Bowel, and Functional Bowel Disease. IBS can cause a combination of constipation and diarrhea, as well as pain, gas and abdominal bloating. Stress or other factors such as diet can cause abnormal motility (movement pattern of the colon) which are controlled by nerves and hormones and by electrical activity on the colon muscle. In order to diagnose the disorder, the physician usually tries to rule out any more serious organic disease and exclude it. A complete medical history that includes a careful description of symptoms, a physician examination, and a laboratory tests will be done. Also the physician will probably order some diagnostic tests such as: x-rays or Endoscopy examinations to eliminate organic causes of the patients symptoms. A diet which is rich in fat in any form, (animal or vegetable) is a strong stimulus of Colonic contraction after a meal. Stress also can stimulate Colonic spasm in people with IBS. This process is not clearly understood, therefore, eating properly will help to lessen IBS symptoms. Dietary fibers, present in whole grain breads, cereals, fruits and vegetables also has been shown to be helpful in lessening IBS symptoms.

However, the patient is encouraged to consult his physician prior to using an over the counter fiber supplement. Food high in carbohydrates and low in fat includes: pasta, rice, breads, cereals, fruit and vegetables will be most helpful.

In considering management of this disorder, no concensus exist among physicians about the drug to be used in IBS. A combination of anti-spasmatic drugs and tranquilizers usually have been tried and may relieve symptoms. Other physicians feel that first they should reassure the patient and discuss means of controlling the stress including factors in their life. It is important to stress that IBS has not been shown to lead to any serious organic diseases. There is no link between IBS and Inflammatory Bowel Disease such as Crohn's disease, Ulcerative Colitis, or even the development of cancer.

6 area runners qualify

Six cross-country runners from Plymouth-Canton schools will compete Saturday in the state finals.

Plymouth Canton sophomore Lana Boroditsch did the best in regional competition, finishing fifth (20:47) in the Class A girls race at Marshbank Park.

The Plymouth Salem girls team had the most qualifiers with two. Stacy Moore was 13th (21:19) and Emily Farrell 20th (21:39) at Marshbank.

Canton and Salem will send one runner each to the Class A boys individual finals at L.E. Kaufman Golf Course in Wyoming Park.

Canton freshman Casey Moothart was 15th (17:22) and Salem junior Derek Cudini 17th (17:26) at Marshbank.

None of the teams qualified. Salem was fifth and Canton seventh in the girls race, Canton seventh and Salem eighth in the boys race. The top three teams advance.

Walled Lake Western, Livonia Stevenson and Ann Arbor Pioneer were the Nos. 1-3 girls teams. The Western, Pioneer and Redford Catholic Central boys teams finished in that order.

"I've never been so happy to be third in my life," said CC's Tony Magni, whose team qualified for the eighth time under his tenure as coach. "It was by far the toughest regional in the state.

Steve Witek paced the Shamrocks with a fourth-place showing in 16:48.

Junior Jamie Fitzgerald turned in his finest performance of the year with a ninth place in 17:09.

Rounding out the CC contingent was junior Mike Mittman, 14th (17:21); junior Chris Kuzia, 32nd (17:50); and sophomore Mark Leo, 34th (17:55).

Plymouth Christian junior Eric Jefferies was 28th (18:30) in the Class D regional at Brookwood Golf Course in Flint. He was the 10th individual qualifier. The state final will be Saturday in Bath.

Jefferies also earned All-Michigan Independent Athletic Conference honors, finishing fourth (18:52) in the league meet at Marshbank.

Rocks are solid but Chiefs recall upset

By Dan O'Meara

Before anyone becomes convinced of a Plymouth Salem victory Friday night when it plays rival Canton, the outcome of the 1988 football game reminds us winning is not guaranteed.

The Rocks, 6-2 and ranked No. 10 in Class AA, will be the favorite in one of Observerland's hottest rivalries, but Canton (3-5) can pin its hopes on what occurred three years ago.

The Chiefs were big underdogs but upset Salem 21-14 with sophomore quarterback Karl Wukie leading the way, taking their first victory over the Rocks.

Canton has won two of the last three games, including a 34-0 victory last year that clinched a post-season playoff berth for the Chiefs. Salem has the same aspirations this year.

"Three years ago, we were in the same position and lost the game," Salem coach Tom Moshimer said. "They were 2-6 and we were 6-2 — the same scenario — and they won the ballgame.

"WHEN IT comes to this game, I'm sure they're going to base their whole season on beating us. Whereas, we have to beat them to live up to our expectations. The pressure is on us to win."

As did North Farmington when it nearly upset Farmington Harrison last week in the Western Lakes Activities Association championship game, the Chiefs must be prepared for an intense and emotional effort.

"Sure, we can do it again," Canton coach Bob Khoenle said. "Anything is possible but we have to have a good game. We know were underdogs, but a group of kids get together and anything can happen."

Wukie threw three touchdown passes and ran for another last year as Canton romped to a one-sided victory with a predominantly-senior team. The Rocks had many underclassmen in the lineup that night, and the situation is largely reversed this year.

"We should be highly motivated on the basis of how badly humiliated we were," Moshimer said.

"They've won two of the last three, so we have to take them seriously. They'll come to play — and this year you can guarantee we'll come to play, too."

KHOENLE WAS already anticipating that.

"They're going to have their kids ready," he said. "They're going to remember last year, and we've gotta be ready to go, too. They have a lot of momentum and it should be a tough game for us."

Since losing consecutive games by a total of 13 points to Harrison and North, the Rocks have won five in a row, beginning with a 28-7 defeat of nemesis Westland John Glenn.

"That was the turning point for us," Moshimer said. "When you lose two tough ones like we did, a football team can fold up its tent or fight back — and ours fought back.

"The Glenn game was as good as we've played, and the last two have been very good. I think we're playing at the top of our game and peaking at the right time. This Friday will tell a lot if that statement is correct or not."

Canton has not done as well as hoped, but the Chiefs have won two of their last three games, albeit by a total of five points. The Chiefs also are eight points from being 5-3.

"WHEN YOU win, everybody feels better and is optimistic," Khoenle said. "Our consistency is getting better, and we'll have to be very consistent in this game."

Salem is led by senior tailback Leon Hister, who has rushed for 1,256 yards and scored 15 touchdowns. Moshimer has coached good backs who were bruising, fullback types like Bob Thornbladh (1967-69) and Ryan Johnson (1987-89) but Hister is the best pure running back, he said.

Playoff prospects part of CEP rivalry

football

For the third consecutive year, a possible post-season playoff berth will depend on the outcome of the Canton-Salem football game Friday.

If the Rocks can defeat Canton and get help from one other team, Salem should qualify for the Class AA playoffs in Region II.

"That's added incentive," Salem coach Tom Moshimer said. "We've talked about it. It's a realistic possibility."

Of the primary contenders in that region, Battle Creek Central is 7-1 while Ann Arbor Pioneer, Adrian, Brighton and Salem are 6-2.

The Chiefs, who qualified last year, are 3-5 and have no chance. They can only be the spoiler in the case of Salem.

"IT'S GOING to be tough, but we'll take them on and see what happens," Canton coach Bob Khoenle said. "If we do it, we'll do it with just good, hard, tough football."

Central plays Battle Creek Lakeview (8-0) and will qualify even if it loses. Pioneer and Adrian also play 3-5 opponents — Ann Arbor Huron and Monroe — and are expected to win.

Brighton tangles with Clarkston (7-1) and represents Salem's best hope for the needed defeat that would clinch a playoff berth for the Rocks. The top four teams in each region qualify.

Salem moved ahead of Brighton into the No. 4 spot this week but will probably need the Bulldogs to lose again since they will get more bonus points if both win.

The Rocks, who qualified one time for the playoffs in 1977, will be rooting for Westland John Glenn to beat Wayne Memorial, also.

The Rocks defeated Glenn and will get bonus points for games Glenn won if the Rockets prevail; whereas, Adrian would get points from Wayne since it has a victory over the Zebras.

A YEAR AGO both Canton and Salem were possible playoff teams entering their season-ending contest.

The Chiefs were 7-1 and No. 5 in the region, Salem 6-2 and No. 8. Canton defeated the Rocks 34-0 and edged Battle Creek for the fourth playoff spot. In their first post-season appearance, the Chiefs beat Glenn and lost to Redford Catholic Central.

Both teams were in the running in 1989, too. Canton was the more likely possibility that time, too, but Salem won the game 25-6 and vaulted into real playoff contention.

The Chiefs entered that game two years ago in fifth place in the region, Salem ninth. Both teams were 7-1.

Canton and a number of others dropped after losing their last games, allowing the Rocks to move up. Salem thought it had clinched the No. 4 spot only to learn Pioneer, with a 7-2 record, had tied Salem and won the tiebreaker because more of its opponents had won.

Moshimer contends the tiebreaking procedure — head-to-head competition was the first criteria — exposed Salem to double jeopardy since the only way Pioneer could have tied was if it had more bonus points resulting from more opponent victories. He believes won-loss record should be the deciding factor in such cases.

Stevenson penalty kick nips Salem in overtime

By Dan O'Meara

soccer

Livonia Stevenson committed itself to winning its regional soccer game against Plymouth Salem before the stalemated contest went to a shootout Monday night.

The Spartans did win but not the way anyone had expected.

Travis Roy's penalty kick with 40 seconds left in the second sudden-death overtime gave Stevenson a 2-1 victory, ending 109 minutes and 20 seconds of intense play.

"During the overtime, we decided we were going to go for the win with everything we had," Stevenson coach Wally Barrett said, adding the Spartans moved Roy from defense to center-forward. "I told our players before the break preceding the overtime, we were going to throw everything we could at them."

Roy crossed the ball to teammate Matt Grodzicki, who had an open shot on the Salem goal. Salem defender Matt Lee instinctively raised his hands to stop the shot coming directly at him, and the Rocks were penalized for a handball infraction.

ROY SENT the ball into the right corner, beating freshman goalkeeper Paul Dood for the winning goal. He had thought about changing his routine and shooting to the left.

"I always shoot to the right," Roy said. "A couple of my club teammates (who play for Salem) told him I was going to the other side, and I switched at the last instant (back to the right side).

"He was positioned too far to the left of the goal. I think he wanted to discourage me from going that way, so he could save it to the right. That's why I switched at the last moment.

"I thought we were going to score off Grodzicki's shot, but Lee did the only thing he could and grabbed it with his hands."

There was no controversy. The Rocks hoped the referee would call for a corner kick instead, but Salem coach Ken Johnson couldn't argue the decision.

"The man stopped it from going in. It had to be called," Barrett said, adding the Spartans made the extra effort in overtime to avoid a shootout.

SC earns Chicago trip

Schoolcraft sports

By C.J. Risak
staff writer

Every year it's the same. Neither team faces a challenge until they face each other.

And it's a rare year indeed when the two can settle which team is best in just two meetings. On Tuesday, for the fourth time in the eight seasons Van Dimitriou has been coaching Schoolcraft College's men's soccer team, the Ocelots and their rivals from Macomb CC met in a post-season playoff at Eastern Michigan University to decide who was best in Region 12. It was made necessary when the two teams split their two-game series, each winning on their home field.

The result was as predictable as the pairing: SC rallied from a one-goal deficit, scoring twice in the final 20 minutes to defeat the Monarchs 2-1.

The victory sends the Ocelots to the NJCAA Inter-regional Tournament outside of Chicago next weekend (Nov. 9-10). The winner of that tourney advances to the NJCAA Tournament in Trenton, N.J., Nov. 21-24.

"Why is it we beat this team?" Dimitriou asked moments after the victory had been assured. "Our team isn't better than theirs."

ON THIS day, the difference was depth. Both teams had injuries to deal with; SC's bench proved to be superior.

The game was decided with eight minutes left. SC's Nate Stoval got possession near midfield, on the right side. He crossed a pass to the far post, and Bobby Hayes sped in behind the Monarch defense to head the ball past keeper Al Weiskirch.

Until the final 15 minutes, the game could not have been played more evenly. Neither team scored in the first half, but play was fast and hard.

Macomb struck first, on a superb individual effort by Charley Zapata. A free kick by Justin Nevarez reached Zapata in the corner, left of SC's net; Zapata dribbled through two SC defenders and banged the ball into the goal behind keeper Scott Hauman.

But, even though they had the lead, the Monarchs were beginning to fade. "I couldn't have asked my team to play better or to do more," said Macomb coach Mick Lakatos, who was without three starters — two due to injury and a third suspended for playing in a non-NCAA sanctioned game.

THE OCELOTS had some key players ailing, too. Defender Shawn Mac, a sometime starter, was injured and out; several others, including leading scorer Jeff Vandemergel, who was limping badly with an ankle sprain, were at far less than full strength.

And yet, after Macomb scored, it was SC that picked up the pace. The Monarchs' fatigue showed on SC's first goal. Hauman started the play with a goalie punt, which carried to the midfield stripe. Vandemergel fielded it there, flicking a pass forward behind the Macomb defense.

Chris Crawford reached the ball first, carried it toward the net and put it into the left corner, tying the score at 1-1 with 20 minutes left.

"That showed something about the character of this team," said Dimitriou afterward. "I know our guys never stay down. They always come back."

WHEN ASKED about Crawford's quick strike, Dimitriou said, "That's what this team is capable of doing — moving the ball quickly." He added, in reference to Crawford: "That's what I've been telling Chris. He has to work off other players."

The Ocelot coach has also been pleased with his team's defensive improvement. Shane Millner and Mike Presley were particularly impressive against Macomb. "There's nothing wrong with our defense," he boasted.

Lakatos could only agree. "All the way around, on both sides, that was a well-played game," he said. "It was probably one of the best games we've played between us. Someone's got to win and someone's got to lose . . . but I'm getting kind of tired of losing."

Lakatos said, "I want to wish Schoolcraft all the best in Chicago." It's a trip his team was 20 minutes away from taking.

SC NOTES: On Saturday, the Ocelots guaranteed themselves a spot opposite Macomb in the regional playoff by ripping Lakeland CC 10-2 at Lakeland. Although Lakeland scored first, SC rallied quickly to take a 6-2 halftime advantage.

Sean Ryan led the scoring barrage with three goals. Jim Meldrum, Crawford and George Murphy each netted two, and Brian Hauman had one. Hauman also had two assists; Dave Seymour collected three assists.

Last Wednesday (Oct. 23), the Ocelots played University of Michigan's club team to a 1-1 tie. Millner's header accounted for SC's only goal.

Ocelot women pull inside job on Delta volleyball

The powerful inside attack of Schoolcraft College's volleyball team will, without doubt, have to be dealt with by any opponent that plans a long stay in the NJCAA Tournament.

SC hasn't gone past the regionals yet, it's true; but the Lady Ocelots are beginning to round back into shape after a series of serious injuries.

On Tuesday, they routed Delta CC 15-4, 15-8, 15-2 at Delta, with Kari Van Deusen and Renea Bonser providing the impetus. Van Deusen had 10 kills; Bonser added nine. Judi Scott contributed four service aces, and Keli Haeger — recovering from an ankle sprain — had 10 assists-to-kills.

The win improved SC's record to 30-9 overall, 27-8 against junior college opponents. The Ocelots are 8-1 in the Eastern Conference.

Over the weekend, SC made its trip to the Illinois Central CC Tournament a successful one, winning four of five matches.

ON FRIDAY, the Ocelots beat host Illinois Central CC 15-11, 15-6, and Parkland CC (from Chicago) 2-15, 15-11, 15-7. Bonser's 10 kills and .273 kill average led SC against Illinois Central; Stephanie Jandasek added eight kills and Nancy Ehlert returned from a knee injury to get five kills.

In the win over Parkland, Bonser again totaled 10 kills (.529); Van Deusen had six and Jandasek five.

On Saturday, SC beat Belleville (Ill.) CC 15-9, 15-8, and Johnson County (Kansas) CC 6-15, 17-16, 15-12, before losing to Jefferson CC 11-15, 15-13, 15-6.

In the win over Belleville, Bonser had 10 kills (.381), Van Deusen had nine (.389) and Jandasek eight (.286), and Haeger collected 24 assists. Against Johnson County, Bonser pounded out 18 kills (.516) and Van Deusen had 14 (.333); Haeger contributed 27 assists and three service aces, and Julie Wood and Ehlert each had 15 digs.

Jandasek and Van Deusen each had 13 kills and hit .303 in the loss to Jefferson CC; Jandasek also had two aces. Bonser had 16 kills (.289) and Ehlert had seven (.263) and two aces. Haeger led SC with three aces; Wood had two.

Madonna sports

All that remains now is the four-team NAIA District 23 Tournament.

It is the only obstacle remaining between Madonna University and the NAIA Tournament. The Lady Crusaders secured their first-ever district regular-season championship Tuesday by blitzing Aquinas College 15-7, 15-3, 15-5 at Madonna.

The Crusaders are 7-0 in district play, 38-10 overall. They will host the district tournament Nov. 14-16.

Tonia Smith ignited the offense with 14 kills. Elena Oparka added 11 kills and Kristy McFadden and Dana Hicks-Finley had eight kills apiece. The Madonna defense was led by Jenny Sladewski, with 16 digs; Maureen Paulin, with 14; and Melissa Mars, with eight.

THE VICTORY capped a triumphant week for Madonna. Last Thursday, the Crusaders handed Northwood Institute its first district defeat in five years, and on Saturday they won their Madonna University Invitational, beating University of Michigan-Dearborn, Huntington College and Wisconsin-Parkside in the process.

Also, Hicks-Finley earned District 23 player of the week honors for the second time this season.

On Saturday, Madonna bested UM-D 15-5, 16-14, 15-10; Huntington 15-6, 16-14, 11-15, 15-10; and Parkside 15-5, 15-2, 7-15, 15-3.

Hicks-Finley was named MVP of the tournament. Oparka and Madonna setter Penny Baker were chosen to the all-tournament team. It was the fifth tournament title the Crusaders have captured this season.

Hicks-Finley earned her honors. She had 41 kills in the three matches with a .427 kill average. Oparka totaled 30 kills (.370); Smith had 16 (.325); McFadden got 15 (.340); and Paulin and Mars added 11 apiece. Sladewski's 33 digs sparked the defense.

Hicks-Finley is honored

The stats show it: Madonna University has dominated the NAIA District 23 in volleyball.

So it should come as no surprise that its players have dominated the district player of the week selections.

Dana Hicks-Finley is the latest choice. The sophomore middle-hitter was honored for her performance last week, during which the Lady Crusaders ended Northwood Institute's five-year district win streak and won their own tournament.

Hicks-Finley's statistics for the week: 82 kills with a .429 attack percentage; 23 solo blocks; and 41 digs.

2nd season next for some teams

By Brad Emons
staff writer

Most Observerland teams will be gathering up their football equipment and putting it away in the storage rooms after this weekend's action.

But for some, the season has only just begun.

Unbeatens Redford Catholic Central (Class AA-Region III), Farmington Harrison (Class BB-Region IV) and Redford St. Agatha (Class C-Region IV) will all be going to the post-season playoff dance.

Twice-beaten North Farmington (6-2), despite a date Saturday with unbeaten South Lyon, is a lock for one of the four spots in Class A-Region III.

Redford Union (5-3) is also fighting for the fourth and final playoff spot in Class A-Region III against Romulus (5-3) and Detroit Chadsey (5-3). The Panthers, however, must first beat Farmington (3-5) on Saturday to put itself in position.

A solid bet in Class AA-Region II is Plymouth Salem (6-2). The Rocks must first beat rival Plymouth Canton (3-5) on Friday, and have 7-1 Clarkston defeat 6-2 Brighton, which is coming off a humiliating 44-0 loss last week to Flint Central, to get in. That appears to be a very distinct possibility.

WESTLAND JOHN GLENN (6-2) is a longshot to pass Salem in Class AA-Region II. The Rockets need a victory over rival Wayne Memorial (4-4), and a series of upsets to make it. Battle Creek Central (7-1), even with a loss to rival Battle Creek Lakeview (8-0), is in. Ann Arbor Pioneer (6-2) will make it with a victory over rival Ann Arbor Huron (3-5), as will Adrian (6-2), if it beats Monroe (3-5). But remember, Brighton (6-2) would spoil both Salem's and Glenn's chances with a win over Clarkston.

As for the prediction race, your friendly prognosticator went 11-4 last week, running his overall mark to 86-32. But he is still five games behind the lucky Irishman, Dan O'Meara, who now stands 91-27 overall after going 19-5.

Here is a look at the final week of the regular season.

FRIDAY'S GAMES
(all 7:30 p.m. unless noted)

Lutheran Westland at Det. Lutheran West (7 p.m.): Coach Dennis Tuomi returns to his old stomping grounds, facing a Leopards team (6-2) running second in Class DD-Region IV. Meanwhile, the Warriors (4-4) are in danger of losing their third straight. West is coming off an 18-14 loss to Bloomfield Hills Cranbrook, while Lutheran Westland was stung by winless Waldron, 14-12. PICKS: Go Detroit Lutheran West young man.

Liv. Stevenson at Liv. Churchill: The Spartans (3-5) can win the Livonia city championship with a win against Churchill (0-8), which is trying to avoid its second straight winless season. This game also pits the Osterlands against each other again — Herb, the head coach at Churchill; and Brian, an offensive guard for Stevenson. PICKS: Brian's mother knows best, it's Stevenson.

Liv. Franklin at Trenton: The Patriots (4-4) are what you call a Dow-Jones'er-type outfit. One week they're up, the next week they're down. Franklin is coming off a 7-6 win over Farmington. So what's in store for the winless Trojans, who have dropped a lot of close ones this year? PICKS: Emons says Trenton breaks into the win column. O'Meara differs, takes the Patriots.

Westland Glenn at Wayne Memorial: Could be the best game of the night. The Zebras (4-4) got quarterback Jason Wetmore back last week and it showed in a 28-6 victory over Monroe. Glenn (6-2), fighting for a possible playoff berth, has been sputtering offensively of late after a trio of ho-hum wins over Walled Lake Central (10-0), Farmington (28-6) and Walled Lake Western (13-0). PICKS: Emons says Wayne defuses the Rockets for the first time since 1987, but O'Meara knows better.

Ply. Canton vs. Ply. Salem (CEP): What a difference a year makes. A season ago, it was Canton (3-5) riding high and going to the playoffs after a convincing win over the Rocks. But this time it's Salem (6-2) in the limelight and trying to make the post-season tourney. Steve Hohl gained 242 yards for Canton last week in a 9-7 win over Stevenson, while Leon Hister had 194 for the Rocks in a 35-14 rout of Northville. PICKS: Salem does the Tomahawk Chop on the Chiefs.

Taylor Truman at Garden City: The Cougars (1-7) have had a devil of a time stopping the run, giving up 240-plus to Dearborn Heights Crestwood's Chuck Reynolds and 386 (and change) to Clarkston's Dan Griffiths. How many will Sibie Davis get this week for Truman (3-5)? PICKS: O'Meara says GC is ripe for a victory, but Emons likes Harry S.

SATURDAY'S GAMES
(all 1 p.m. unless noted)

Liv. Clarenceville at Red. Thurston: Clarenceville leads this series, 2-0, after Kendrick Harrington scored on the last play of the game to beat the Eagles in last year's finale (a phantom fourth timeout also helped the Trojans). Both teams are 1-7, wondering what lies ahead for next season. Clarenceville interim coach Russ McKenzie needs a good showing, while Thurston's Bob Snell needs some offense. PICKS: Thurston makes its namesake, Lee M., proud.

Redford Union at Farmington: RU missed a golden opportunity last week to make the playoffs, losing 7-6 to Waterford Mott. The Panthers (5-3) need a dry field and an inspired showing this week against Farmington (3-5), which is coming off its fourth straight loss, a 7-6 setback to Franklin. The only comparative score between the two clubs is against Stevenson. RU lost to the Spartans in the season opener, 39-14, while Farmington beat Stevenson in OT, 15-7. PICKS: Emons says logic goes with Farmington, but he takes RU. O'Meara soars with the Falcons.

South Lyon at N. Farmington: The game of the day pitting the unbeaten Lions, led by running backs Billy Porter and Ken Nelson, against the 6-2 Raiders, who nearly upended state power Farmington Harrison in last week's Western Lakes title matchup, 20-14 in OT. Running back Todd Anderson and quarterback Mark Temple make North a threat both on the ground and in the air. PICKS: Restore the Roar? Emons can't argue with the Lions. O'Meara can. He predicts a North win.

Toledo CC at Farm. Harrison: Toledo Central Catholic is only 4-5 and far from being one of the powers of northwest Ohio. Unbeaten Harrison is in the playoffs, but banged up. The Hawks, playing for pride, showed they were human last week after escaping the clutches of North. PICKS: Harrison wins a purple heart by going undefeated.

Bishop Borgess vs. St. Clement (7:30 p.m. at Center Line Memorial): Borgess (4-4) has supposedly played the tougher competition in the Catholic League's Tri-Sectional. St. Clement (6-2), meanwhile, is trying to hang on to a playoff berth in Class D-Region IV. Ray Henke is a good running back for the Crusaders, while Borgess counters with John Valentine. PICKS: Emons says Borgess is his Valentine, keeping St. Clement on edge with the computer. O'Meara sides with Borgess, too.

SUNDAYS'S GAMES
(Prep Bowl at Pont. Silverdome)

St. Agatha vs. Det. East Catholic (4 p.m.): The Aggies (8-0) could add another chapter for their storybook season with a victory over the Chargers (7-1), a team headed for the playoffs in Class DD-Region IV. The same two teams met two years ago for the Catholic League C-D Division crown with East Catholic coming out on top. PICKS: The coin flip please — It's Agatha this time around.

Redford CC vs. Det. DePorres (7 p.m.): The second meeting this season between the two teams. CC (8-0) won the first encounter, 21-6, and has not been seriously challenged after the first half in any game this season. DePorres (6-2) is no slouch, especially on the fast Silverdome carpet. Charles Winters is a breakaway threat. PICKS: CC is a run-away freight train. Take the Shamrocks.

Rocks fall in OT to Spartans, 2-1

"I DON'T believe in 50-50 chances — a coin toss after 78 days of soccer. I'm not going to let my season end with a coin toss, which is what a penalty kick shootout would be."

Stevenson (17-0-3), the top-ranked team in Class A, will meet the Okemos-Trenton winner for the regional championship at 1 p.m. Saturday at Salem.

It was a disappointing finish for the unranked Rocks (14-5-2), who had upset No. 2 Livonia Churchill to win the Northville district tournament Saturday.

"It's a shame to end like that," Johnson said. "I was looking forward to the shootout, because we have some good shooters. We were only 40 seconds away; that makes it harder to take.

"If it had been a regular goal, that would have been the end of it. A penalty kick is a hard way to end. A penalty kick is not justice either as opposed to a regular goal."

Stevenson led 1-0 when Grodzicki scored with an assist from Adam Pichler at 23:16 in the first half. The Rocks tied the score eight minutes later when Jason Oberhelman put in a rebound from a free kick by Tom Baker.

ROY HIT the top of the post late in the half, and the Spartans had the advantage for most of the second half.

Dood tipped a Pichler shot over the top and made another big save with 9½ minutes left in regulation. He was out of the goal when Grodzicki lifted an off-balance chip shot, but Dood managed to race back and grab the ball before it went in the net.

Salem held off Stevenson for most of the overtimes despite playing a man short after Eric Stemmer received a red card 2½ minutes into the first 15-minute period.

"We used 16 players and everything we had in our hearts to beat a vicious, motivated Salem team that came out with everything it had to beat Stevenson tonight," Barrett said. "I would like to tip my hat to Salem for an unbelievable, relentless effort."

Stevenson expended a great deal of effort to win the game, also.

"It was great — (Scott) Wiggins marking (John) Truskowski, the guys in the middle trying to take Baker out of it and always pressing up front," Roy said.

"EVERY ONE of our players had cramps and was dehydrated," Barrett said. "We don't normally play on a field this size."

Johnson thinks the Spartans, co-champions of the Western Lakes Activities Association with Churchill, will go a long way in the tournament.

"I think the winner tonight could reach the final," he said. "I can't see anyone beating them on the way to the final."

"After Saturday we felt we could go all the way. It's been a good season in that respect (beating Churchill and playing well against Stevenson). We were so close."

Lions post pair of wins

The Canton Lions junior varsity and freshman football teams recorded wins Sunday over the Garden City Chargers.

In the freshman game, Eric Peterson and Bradley Volas scored touchdowns in a 12-6 win.

Michael Hoelscher, Archie Kinney and Brandon Wheeler paced the offense, rushing for a combined 114 yards.

Paul Hurst led the defense with three tackles and an interception. Peterson, Matt Golem, William Wanniger, Hurst, Gordon Perrin and Douglas Flateau also had outstanding games defensively.

The JVs beat the Chargers 14-6 behind tailback Kurt Larson's 172 yards and two touchdowns. He scored on runs of 75 and 25 yards.

Brett Burleson led the defense with seven tackles. Adam Dailide added six tackles, including one sack.

Chris Sample, Kevin Guse, Mark Popejoy, Jordan Jones, Kevin Melchow and Douglas Kinney had four tackles each. Kinney also had a fumble recovery.

Despite six tackles and two interceptions by Jon Stopera, the varsity lost 6-0.

Derek Ellison led the defense with seven tackles and an interception.

Steelers JV finishes 8-0

The Plymouth-Canton Steelers JV team takes an unbeaten record into the Western Suburban Football League playoffs following a 31-8 victory Sunday over the Ypsilanti Braves.

The Steelers (8-0) will play the Northville-Novi Colts at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in the WSFL semifinals at Whitmore Lake High School (US-23 and Baker Road). The championship game will be played Sunday, Nov. 10, at Garden City High School.

Robert Johnson rushed for 75 yards and three touchdowns in the JV's win over the Braves (5-3). He had scoring runs of 8, 10 and 20 yards.

Steelers teammate Kevin Salla was the top rusher with 89 yards, and he also scored a TD, kicked a pair of extra points and tackled an opposing ball carrier for a two-point safety.

CHRIS MOVINSKI added 21 rushing yards, and Brent Mellis rounded out the scoring with a conversion run.

Nathan Gray led the defense with seven tackles (five solos). Aaron Pawlowski had five tackles, and Movinski broke up three pass plays and made three tackles.

Randy Mack and Brent Mellis intercepted Ypsilanti passes, and Mike Hirth and Johnson recovered fumbles.

The Braves defeated the Steelers 8-0 in the freshman game and 20-0 in the varsity contest.

Andy Kocoloski had seven solo tackles and recovered a fumble for the Plymouth-Canton freshmen (4-4). Shaun Nicoloff and Shawn Reynolds also made seven defensive stops, Jay Kelley and Bobby Curtis four each. Brad Wells had a fumble recovery, too.

Canton challenge to stop run-based Salem offense

"I'm not saying he's better than anyone else," Moshimer said, "but from a talent point of view we have not had a kid who can do what he does with the football."

Regardless of the outcome, the Chiefs will find it hard to duplicate last year's defensive effort when they held Hister to 13 yards on seven carries and prevented him reaching 1,000 for the season.

"They play good defense and they have the possibility of making the big play with Leon," Khoenle said. "There are other things we have to be concerned with, but we have to stop Leon from making the big play — the 60-yard run. (The big play) is what makes good teams a lot better."

Among the other things with which Canton needs to be concerned are the running of fullback Dan Burke and passing of quarterback Pete Zantop.

BURKE HAS gained 425 yards and scored eight TDs. While the Rocks run most of the time, Zantop has thrown five TD passes while completing 26 of 46 passes for 326 yards.

Canton, which outrushed the ground-oriented Rocks 290-37 last year and outgained Salem 405-85 overall, will give the ball to senior tailback Steve Hohl, who rushed for 242 yards (38 attempts) last week as the Chiefs defeated Livonia Stevenson.

(Canton games with Franklin and Churchill were decided in one and three overtimes, respectively.)

"Their tailback gained more than ours did last week," Moshimer said. Hister had 196 against Northville. "He's obviously the key. They have good receivers that you have to be concerned about, too.

"They were a big, strong team (last year) and they came after us. They're still big — they probably outweigh us — but we're probably quicker. Last year they were quicker."

Moshimer said the Rocks can't be sure what Canton will do offensively, and he could be very right on that.

Sophomore quarterback Kevin Shankie threw 27 passes two weeks ago Walled Lake Western and the Chiefs rushed for only 61 yards. Hohl's yardage is evidence of what Canton focused on last week. His season totals are 900 yards and nine TDs, and Eric Cunningham has caught 13 passes for 300 yards and three TDs.

"IT'S GOING to be whatever it takes to get in the end zone," Khoenle said. "We'll take what they give us, but we're going after them. We've got nothing to lose."

The Chiefs will face a Salem defense as solid as it was in '89 when the Rocks won 25-6 and finished 8-1. Salem has a big, strong front with Tim Galda, Hugh Blake-Thomas, Allen August and Bob Smith.

"I think our front four are as good as anybody," Moshimer said. "Other than Harrison, nobody has four better down linemen."

Linebacker Andy Szydlowski leads the team with 50 tackles. Galda has 34, August 30, strong safety Chip Wadowski 28 and Blake-Thomas 26. Agron Ujkaj "has done a great job," at inside linebacker, according to Moshimer, after Boyd Rudy suffered a season-ending knee injury. Linebacker Matt Horn and end Shane Beaty are Canton's leading tacklers.

It's trick or treat for Halloween bowlers

Al Harrison

HALLOWEEN IS UPON us and here are a few special "tricks" and "treats" just for bowlers:

Treat — any time you carry a strike on a "Brooklyn hit."

Trick — on a solid pocket shot, the whole back row of pins remain standing.

Treat — on a night when nothing goes right, they call your number for the mystery game and you win with a 112 game.

Trick — you expected dry lane conditions and they oiled them wall-to-wall and 10-feet tall (or vice versa).

Treat — When you thought you lost the game, then found a mathematical error and it turns out you actually won by two pins.

Trick — You just discovered that your socks don't match.

Treat — It's a "beer frame" and you rolled a strike.

Trick — The ball slips out of your grasp and lands squarely on your big toe.

Treat — Bowling your highest score ever.

Trick — They announce your car in the parking lot with the lights left on and it's raining out.

Treat — Seeing your own name here on the "honor roll" next week.

• Bowlers looking for some tournament action can pick and choose from all kinds of competition both locally or out of town. The largest cash prize, as usual is the Hamtramck Singles, which anyone would think is held in Hamtramck, right?

Wrong.

You will have to go to Hazel Park to bowl in the 41st Annual Hamtramck Singles Classic. The tournament starts Oct. 13 and runs through June 30 with a first prize of $50,000.

Entry blanks are at bowling centers all over town or call 546-0070. The DWBA 67th annual city championship will open March 7, 1992. Entry forms are out now.

The tournament will be held just prior to the WIBC 1992 National championships in Lansing, beginning April 2. That's a long way off, but remember, entries close by Jan. 10th.

The 89th Men's state tournament will take place in the Detroit area from Jan. 11 through May 11th. The total prize fund will be about $320,000 and entries and more information can be obtained by calling MNBA secretary Ray Sivers in Lansing at 517 699-3038 from 1 to 5 p.m. Over 3,000 teams are expected to compete in this event.

The Old Timers Bowling Association will hold its 61st annual tournament and dinner Nov. 30 in the Thunderbowl. This event is for men who have been bowling at least 25 years and are age 40 or over.

It is separated into groups for awards. One of the highlights will feature several of the past greats who will be bowling together in competition. Names such as Joe Norris, Billy Golembiewski, Bob Strampe, Buzz Fazio, George Howard, Tony Lindemann and Ed Lubanski are expected to be there.

The eighth annual "Make-A-Wish" charity Pro-Am Tournament is scheduled for Oct. 27 and Nov. 3 at Astro Lanes. Many of the top pro bowlers and local celebrities will be on hand.

This is a "No-Tap" event which has been organized by Cora Fiebig. For further information call 399-6739 or 589-9118. The Men's Pro Bowlers tour stop at Taylor Lanes affords an opportunity for local shooters to compete in the "pro-am" part of the event with a chance to bowl with the top stars of the Pro Tour.

The dates are Nov. 26-30. For those that like to say "Have ball, will travel," there is the big money action at the Hoinke Super Classic in Cincinatti, the Peterson Classic in Chicago, and the High Rollers in Las Vegas. The entry forms are available at most bowling centers. I expect to have the results of the Team USA Tournament in this column next week.

An innovation for those that like this type of competition is the newly-formed Classic Tournament League which will begin at Classic Lanes in Rochester Hills with the first one on Nov. 5 at 8:30 p.m. This will take place each week for 24 weeks. It will consist of mixed players. For more details on this call 852-9100.

Please Help A Neighbor's Child In Need!

In Third World countries, hundreds of thousands of children are in desperate need of food, clothing, medical care—the basics of life. These girls and boys are even denied the opportunity to attend school.

They are our neighbors in a world that grows smaller every day.

Through CCF, you can sponsor a neighbor's child. The cost is $18 a month—just 60¢ a day—to help a poor child in Asia, Africa or Latin America—a child who has virtually nothing.

Please pick up your phone now and dial the toll-free number below. Be a good neighbor by helping an innocent child.

Vampire tale

Skillful cast brings 'Dracula' to life

Performances of the St. Dunstan's Guild of Cranbrook production of "Count Dracula" continue through Nov. 2 at the playhouse, 400 Lone Pine Road in Bloomfield Hills. For ticket information, call 644-0527.

Barbara Michals

With the Halloween season here, "Count Dracula" once again menaces the area as St. Dunstan's Guild of Cranbrook presents a handsome, stylish version of the popular vampire tale. The skillful cast does a good job of bringing the creaky old story to life, creating almost believable characters trapped in a nightmare of fear.

The Ted Tiller dramatization from the classic Bram Stoker novel is set in England in the 1930s. Dr. Seward (Michael Shulman), the director of a private insane asylum, has his hands more than full. He must cope with Sybil (Roz Basherian), his addlebrained sister; Renfield (Brian Dooley), an inmate constantly escaping; Mina (Laura Raisch), his young ward suddenly suffering unexplainable bouts of weakness; and Count Dracula (Paul Gillin), the intrusive new neighbor who has moved into the castle across the valley.

THE PRODUCTION has its share of blood-curdling screams, eerie special effects, and dramatically chilling music. Despite the best efforts of director Amy Lynn Smith and her cast, a small percentage of lines still sound hopelessly silly. It matters little, as horror stories such as "Dracula" are today more for fun than for thrills, and last Friday's opening night audience willingly played along.

On the other hand, this adaptation of the Dracula legend has many lines ripe with dramatic irony that do not get the maximum benefit of good comic timing.

Gillin's Count Dracula is pleasingly suave and debonair in the beginning, gradually allowing his true pernicious character to show through until he reveals the blood-thirsty, fanged vampire contempuous of all who try to thwart him. Gillin nicely combines his arrogance with early hints of mischievous humor in his face. His makeup is refreshingly understated.

Dooley pulls out all the stops as the insane Renfield whether wringing his hands and cowering in terror at the awesome power of Dracula or reveling in his own penchant for swallowing flies and spiders. The physical fights are well-staged as Renfield grapples convincingly with Jonathan (Christopher Kelly), Mina's very earnest fiance, and Hennessey (Tom Christopher), Dr. Seward's loyal attendant.

The production has its share of blood-curdling screams, eerie special effects and dramatically chilling music.

Raisch is excellent at making Mina more that just a Pretty Young Thing. She very effectively conveys Mina's confusion and overwhelming fear, and she nicely slides in and out of playing the seductive minx Mina becomes when the vampires' influence takes hold.

Count Dracula (Paul Gillin) and Mina (Laura Raisch) in a scene from "Count Dracula" presented by the St. Dunstan's Guild of Cranbrook.

AS SYBIL, Basherian is amusingly befuddled, quite batty without any help from Dracula. Though her first few lines lacked clarity because they were too high-pitched, she quickly warmed to the role and endeared herself to the audience.

Shulman's Dr. Seward always seems appropriately in control as he struggles to keep Dracula out and Renfield in. As Jonathan, Kelly is full of sincerity and determination, as is Topper Pennington's Dr. Helsing, the kindly old family friend who is an expert on vampires and leads the plot to foil Dracula's evil intentions.

Bob Raisch's very handsome Gothic set establishes the tone for this stylish production, matched by Cathine Gianakura and Marian McMechan's costume designs. A few technical glitches on opening night were only minor flaws.

'Night Watch' entertaining thriller

Performances of the Schoolcraft College Theatre Department production of "Night Watch" continue through Nov. 16 on campus, 18600 Haggerty Road in Livonia. Dinner is at the Waterman Campus Center and performances at the Liberal Arts Auditorium. For ticket information call the college bookstore at 462-4409.

Bob Weibel

Schoolcraft College's production of "Night Watch" is an entertaining melodramatic thriller. One might wish the student performers were more polished and experienced, but Director James Hartman's elegant setting and superb sound effects combine to capture the essence of Lucille Fletcher's psycho-mystery.

"Night Watch" poses a number of questions for the audience. What do you make of a woman who claims to see a man murdered in a window, yet the police can find no evidence of a body? Is she delusional? What if she claims to see another muder, only this time it's a young lady? is someone trying to drive her crazy? Could it be her husband who is having an affair with a friend? Or is it something else that will only become clear with a surprise ending?

SUSAN DURACK skillfully plays the woman in question. It's a difficult role because we must see (or think we see) what she claims to have witnessed. There are no bodies. No murder weapons. And indeed, few really good clues. The show depends on her creating that fine line between fear and madness — and the audience trying to determine her true state of mind. For the most part, she does a fine job with an emotionally draining part.

Her task would have been somewhat easier if the supporting cast were more experienced at creating mysterious characters and suspenseful moments. Speech inflections, slight pauses, and little looks would go a long way in helping Sean Sullivan (husband) and Stephanie Lockhart (best friend) achieve more natural characters.

GOOD EXAMPLES of these techniques were turned in by Matthew Wood. He is excellent in two very different roles as a police lieutenant and as a dipsy deli owner. Tim Courtney also scores as a cop with an artistic bent.

John Clark had his moments as a neighbor who drops in at odd times. Patricia Parsons was equally effective as a nosey German maid given to listening in on conversations. A little more suspicious business by both would make them more believable as possible villains.

A delicious dinner theater option continues through the Nov. 1, 2 and 9 performance.

Plymouth Theatre Guild shines in 'Steel Magnolias'

Performances of the Plymouth Theatre Guild production of "Steel Magnolias" continue through Nov. 9 at the Water Tower Theatre on the campus of Northville Regional Hospital, 41001 W. Seven Mile Road, west of I-275. For ticket information, call 349-7110.

Sally Dubats

Playwright Robert Harling wrote his first script, "Steel Magnolias," in only 10 days, and it is obvious. Where the script lacks credibility, however, the underlying comedy usually provides enough laughs to hide the flaws.

The Plymouth Theatre Guild production of this play, directed by Kimberley Britt, attempted to overcome the deficient writing and, for the most part, succeeds in its endeavor.

SIX WOMEN in a beauty shop comprise the cast of "Steel Magnolias" which centers around M'Lynn, putting forth lines indicating a love/hate relationship that is more realistic than the script's "over-protective mother" idea.

Although Harling's script is his own true story (his late sister was a diabetic), too much stereotypical and old-fashioned "girl-talk" pervades the women's conversations at inappropriate moments, creating superficial female characters. Hair, recipes, fashion and men are almost the only topics discussed.

As M'Lynn discusses donating a kidney to her daughter, a tense moment is broken with a trivial joke about her waist becoming smaller.

Pretty Elizabeth Racer plays M'Lynn's daughter, Shelby, a warmhearted character whose "signature color" is pink.

Racer's comedy timing and energy convey well the bubbly personality of Shelby, who seeks dignity as she deals with diabetes.

Jill Snowdon puts forth a very likeable Truvy, the owner of the beauty shop. Snowdon's lines are delivered with a strong voice and confidence for snappy Southern dialogue such as, "There is no such thing as natural beauty," a motto which hangs prominently on the set.

LISA BRANDOW as a gawky Annelle and Clemie Cyburt as the curmudgeonly Ouiser are truly fun to watch. Brandow presents an off the wall beautician's aide who clumsily sprays water in clients' faces while washing hair. Cyburt, a member of the Guild for 25 years, shows her experience well while portraying the quirky Ouiser, who has "more money that God."

Constance Fox provides a lusterless performance in the roll of Clairee. Problems occur as Fox fails to pick up cues, causing an unsettled tempo in her delivery. The character of Clairee frequents the beauty salon, is the widow of a former mayor of the town and tells jokes. She alternately dedicates football fields and has her tires rotated, yet is costumed as though she were attending a cotillion.

The production is technically sound with a comfortable and functional set designed by Jeff Hammonds. Pre-show music and fast scene changes (also with music) provide atmosphere and set the mood well.

Britt's direction gave the cast and play its best shot. Were it not for the banal and trite conversation in the script, Britt's cast would probably fare better.

Actress enjoys role in 'Ten Little Indians'

Geoffrey Beauchamp and Maureen McDevitt play leading roles in Meadow Brook Theatre's production of "Ten Little Indians," which opens for a four-week run on Halloween night.

Performances of the Meadow Brook Theatre production of "Ten Little Indians" continue through Nov. 24 on the Oakland University campus in Rochester Hills. For ticket information call the box office at 377-3300.

By Keely Wygonik
staff writer

"It's a wonderful, thrilling evening in the theater to see this mystery unfold," said Maureen McDevitt who plays Vera Claythorne in Agatha Christie's "Ten Little Indians" which opens tonight at Meadow Brook Theatre.

McDevitt, a graduate of Farmington Harrison High School, still lives in the area. When she's not on stage, McDevitt appears in radio and television commercials, and industrial training films.

A graduate of Oakland University with a bachelor's degree in communication arts, McDevitt earned a master of fine arts from Wayne State University where she was a member of the Hilberry Repertory Company.

After graduating from college, she moved to New York, and later Los Angeles.

"Detroit was my home, my family lives here. It made sense to my heart," she said explaining why she moved back to the area.

Last spring, McDevitt portrayed Nora in the Attic Theatre's production of Henrik Ibsen's "A Doll House."

PREVIOUS MEADOW Brook Theatre performances include Roxane in "Cyrano," Cecily in "The Importance of Being Earnest" and Ghost of Christmas Past in "A Christmas Carol."

"Each role presents any number of problems to solve," said McDevitt describing her approach toward acting.

"You have to learn to love the character you're playing. Vera is wonderful. She's a secretary caught in a desperate situation who is trying to cope. 'Ten Little Indians' is a very well written script. There's a lot of information."

"Ten Little Indians," a tale of multiple murders at a macabre house party, began as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post under the title "And Then There Were None."

It has been adapted for the screen three times, most notably in 1945 with Walter Huston, Sir Aubrey Smith and Judith Anderson. It has also been performed under the title of "The Nursery Rhyme Murders."

"It's fun to open on Halloween, and we have a fun cast of characters," adds McDevitt. Birmingham native Richard Schrot is also appearing in the show.

Simple fare at new Muer eatery

By Keely Wygonik
staff writer

Hard boiled eggs and salami at the bar and a straightforward, simple presentation of food await diners at Johnny Magnum's, which opened Oct. 24 in the former Clamdiggers restaurant, 30555 Grand River in Farmington Hills.

The high-top booths, except for two facing the bar, are gone. Original Audubon prints decorate the walls and the table and chairs don't match, giving the restaurant a hunt club feel.

Even the music played on the sound system is nostalgic — no rock and roll here, only classics and easy listening, including Nat King Cole, Frank Sinatra, Mel Torme, James Taylor, Ella Fitzgerald and Anita Baker.

"THIS IS what a restaurant used to be," said Tony Bezsylko, director of operations for Chuck Muer's newly acquired restaurant. "We're giving people with big appetites a place to go. Couples can order a magnum cut and share it."

A magnum cut is bigger than a regular cut. For example, a regular cut of filet mignon is about eight ounces and costs $14. A magnum cut is about 12 ounces and costs $20.

A HOUSE specialty is the whole roasted chicken, $11.50 that is carved at the table. "It's a two-pound chicken that's cooked real slow," said Bezsylko. "It's crisp on the outside and moist inside."

Appetizers include regular and magnum size, shrimp cocktail, Texas BBQ shrimp and Cedar Point Oysters. Other choices include escargot, fried provolone cake, black bean cake and garlic toast.

Soups and salads are ala carte. Diners can choose from black bean soup, French onion soup, slice of iceberg with dressing or Caesar salad.

ENTREES ARE served with bread and butter, and choice of vegetable or potato.

There's quite a range of beef and seafood offerings including — short ribs, Tenderloin a'la Dutch, London Broil, Top Sirloin, Kansas City Sirloin, Filet Mignon, Boston Scrod, Whitefish, Salmon Steak, Tuna Steak, Swordfish Steak, and Maine Lobster.

Diners who want to share a magnum cut can order an extra plate with choice of vegetable or potato for $5.

Restaurant hours are 4-10 p.m. Sunday to Thursday, bar open until midnight; 4 p.m. to midnight Friday and Saturday, bar open until 1:30 a.m. For more information, call 478-2010.

Industrial liquidator Levy wins Eastern Airlines job

By Doug Funke
staff writer

A Southfield firm that claims to be the nation's largest industrial auctioneer in terms of annual dollar volume sold has landed a plum job — liquidating the physical assets, excluding aircraft, of bankrupt Eastern Airlines.

Norman Levy Associates expects to raise $20-$40 million from the sale of passenger loading bridges, baggage tugs and carts, tools and machinery, diagnostic equipment and other support items, said Richard Nucian, who's coordinating the project for Levy.

Negotiations are under way with airlines around the world for highly-specialized equipment such as an 11-station gantry jet engine testing system, Nucian said. Public auctions for tools and equipment of a general nature will be conducted in Miami and Atlanta early next year.

"We've already had our advance people down at Eastern inventorying all items for private negotiation sale and auction sale," Nucian said. "We go in and organize it, clean it, price it out. We need correct specifications for write-up and advertising."

Levy will be paid a commission based on a percentage of the sales, not yet established officially by the bankruptcy court, plus expenses. Eastern officials with expertise in the industry are helping with the liquidation.

Twenty-two firms besides Levy were invited by Eastern to bid for liquidation rights.

LEVY'S WORLDWIDE reputation and its large size carried much weight in getting the nod, said Terence Hickman, assistant to Eastern's bankruptcy trustee.

"We ran them (candidates) through scores of hoops — past experiences, references, size of auctions done in the past, ability to bring out a substantial bidding group. Levy came out the best," Hickman said.

"It's exciting, a large sale, a big name," said Robert Levy, president of the firm and son of its late founder. "Our company was chosen because we're most capable of handling a sale of this nature."

The Eastern liquidation will be among the largest in the firm's history.

Levy, founded in 1951, takes a team approach to business. Upwards of 60 work out of the Southfield office, with another dozen or so divided between offices in Boston and Coventry, England.

"There's no issue of ego here," said David Levy, executive vice president in charge of the appraisal department. "We're better able to service from a central location and not dilute ourselves by breaking it up.

"A lot of our business is auto shop related, " he added. "We would expect that the car business will continue and we have to be where it is."

"THE TALENT here is second to none," said Lew Nucian, chairman of the firm. That's why we don't want to spread 'em out. Working together is how you get things done."

The firm, privately owned, doesn't release financial data.

David Levy reported annual auction sales of $110-$115 million in recent years. The firm does about 120 per year. Commissions usually range from 5-10 percent of gross realization.

"In terms of revenues, appraisal and auction are very close," he added.

The firm does some 700 appraisals annually on assets with an aggregate value of some $2 billion, David Levy said.

Appraisals become important when applying for loans, establishing stock ownership plans, mergers/acquisitions and bankruptcies.

Experience and attention to detail have fueled the firm's growth, company insiders said.

"We are in the marketplace every day," said David Levy. "If you have involvement in the marketplace buying and selling every day, you have a solid foundation of rendering an opinion of theoretical value."

"WE HAVE computerized mailing lists we have built up over the last 40 years we won't let anyone else use," said Richard Nucian. Upwards of 40,000 notices will be mailed to prospective bidders for the Eastern liquidation.

Facsimile messages will be sent to airlines all over the world and ads will be placed in trade publications.

"Two auctioneers can do the same job, but one can get more due to the expertise in the way he sells it and the way it's marketed and advertised," Nucian said.

Orville Lefko, who does business valuations from an office in Troy, called the Eastern assignment a feather in Levy's cap.

"They have a solid reputation from way back. They're very highly respected," Lefko said. "I consider them to be a leader in the field. I don't remember anyone saying anything bad about that company."

David Levy used the word "fantastic" to describe business growth over the past decade.

"The need for this type of service has mushroomed," he said. "We were a well-regarded firm at the beginning of expansion. We were well positioned to take advantage of the need.

"In a down economy, we sell more assets for less dollars. In an up economy, we may get more for less assets. The economy doesn't have as much impact (on revenue) as people might suspect. A stagnating economy — not moving in any direction — might.

"Generally speaking, better times mean better sales," he said.

Awrey products to return

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Coca Cola apparently isn't the only company that can bow to public demand and bring back a discontinued product line.

Awrey Bakeries of Livonia, which stopped supplying baked goods to local stores last spring to concentrate on major institutional clients such as Marriott Foodservice Management and American Airlines, will resume selling its confectionaries in grocery outlets here Monday.

"We goofed," company spokeswoman Betty Jean Awrey said of the decision to discontinue its popular retail line including Long John Coffee Cakes, Almond Crunch Dunkers, Date Nut Bars and Danish Sweet Rolls.

"Our business objective was to install new-state-of-the-art Danish- and croissant-making equipment to provide higher quality, more consistent production for the institutional food service business," Awrey said.

But institutional sales have remained flat, she said.

The family-owned company forecasts sales this year of $41 million — which includes no retail operations May to November — compared to $53 million last year.

"We have been surprised and gratified by the call from our public for the return of the 81-year-old tradition of serving Awrey goodies to our loyal metropolitan area customers," Awrey said.

"Everybody was calling us when we stopped retail and asked, 'Where can we get this?' or 'When can we get that?' We started to rethink the whole thing. We're foolish to ignore this.

"We realize we made a very serious mistake. We have a change of philosophy in our organization now."

CHANGES IN top management have accompanied that change in philosophy.

Last March, the company announced plans to freeze products as they came off the line for retail sale and replace company deliverers with one or more independent distributor to supply local markets.

But Awrey scuttled those plans just two months later with an even bigger bombshell — the decision to quit retail sales altogether.

Awrey will again bake the retail goods at its Livonia plant. Veri-Best of Ferndale, which makes and distributes bread products with the Awrey label through a licensing agreement, will distribute the pastry.

Awrey already has reached agreement to display its products in 265 stores in the metro area including the Foodland and Kroger chains and independents.

Negotiations are continuing with A&P/Farmer Jack.

Unique partnership creates new hazmat training center

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Monetary seeds planted a year and a half ago by some 125 companies from around the state — including several from Observer & Eccentric communities — recently blossomed into a new Hazardous Materials Training Center in Lansing.

Private industry donated more than $350,000 to build the center to teach emergency response teams, fire fighters and industry personnel how to deal with hazardous material incidents.

The Michigan State Police will manage the center.

The instructional facility will enable hands-on training using railroad tank cars, tank trucks and storage tanks in addition to theoretical classroom instruction.

"We believe this center is the first one in the U.S. to be built with donations from private industry and then operated by state government," said Andrew Such, executive director of the Michigan Chemical Council.

CSX Corp., the railroad giant with regional offices in Livonia, was among the major contributors.

"The public, generally, and corporations are much more aware and environmentally sensitive than they have been in the past," said Tom Drake, a vice president for CSX.

"ESSENTIALLY WHEN you have an incident, everyone must work in a cooperative and coordinated manner. We've tried to foster that," he said.

CSX accounted for the lion's share of the $60,000 cash contributed by the Michigan Railroads Association, Drake said. CSX also donated several railroad cards for training exercises and made its hazardous materials expert available as an instructor.

Drake, who was president of the state railroads association when the center was first proposed, admitted to having doubts about how his members would react to the unusual private enterprise/government partnership.

He was pleasantly surprised. They liked it.

"Here was an opportunity to do something, to provide a benefit, but you didn't get involved in bureaucratic things," he said. "It was something tangible you could see."

Drake said he didn't have to do much arm twisting at the corporate level to contribute money, equipment and staff to the center.

There was no special sense that CSX should get involved with the center because its tracks regularly carry a Dow chemical train, Drake said.

"OUR CONCERN is bigger than that," he said. "We operate in 19 states. The safety center is another incremental step as we try to become more and more safe."

Olin Corp., a Livonia company that packages pool treatment chemicals, contributed nearly $5,000 to the center.

"We're an active member of the Michigan Chemical Council. It just seemed like a natural fit," said Michael Bauer, safety and loss prevention manager at Olin. "First responders were looking for additional training they just couldn't find.

"We try to stay in the forefront of what's going on in the industry," Bauer added. "There is a lot of top management support for working with community outreach programs. That is what this (center) is to us."

Mid-States Petroleum, a distributor/wholesaler in Troy, donated an above-ground storage tank to be used for training, fuel used in excavation at the site and cash for the center.

The donation totaled some $4,200, said Jim Butler, president of the Troy-based firm. Butler was president of the Michigan Petroleum Association in the mid-1980s when the idea for a private enterprise/government partnership was under discussion.

"THIS GIVES us a facility that has all different types of equipment there with classrooms in one facility," he said. "The association felt it was needed. We as a company felt it was needed — to have a state facility to train people.

"It started from an idea and just grew," Butler added.

The partnership involving associations in the chemical and transportation industries gradually evolved, said Lt. Arthur Nash, commander of the hazardous materials division for the state police.

"To get interest going, we had a model made. You don't want to start until you see someone else. Dow (Chemical) donated $50,000. As more knew about it, more people called. It's just been fantastic.

"The center is already booked through the end of the year and two months for next year," Nash said. "We've had calls from Virginia. People are coming out from Kansas and Iowa to see how we did it."

Shell Chemical Co., with offices in Farmington Hills, and Union Carbide, with offices in Birmingham, also contributed to the center, Such reported.

The center, built on state-owned land opened last month. It will be maintained through user fees. Participants may choose classes provided by the state police or bring in their own instructors.

The state police has sponsored hazardous material training programs around Michigan with a moveable trailer and railroad cars. But the lack of a permanent site made it difficult and costly to train large numbers.

Caring volunteers lend helping hand

By Arlene Funke
special writer

It is 9 a.m., Thursday, and George Irwin of Livonia is at his usual post at the Fort Street Presbyterian Church in downtown Detroit.

Dozens of people — mostly unemployed or homeless men — stand in line waiting to enter the church. The aroma of mashed potatoes and beef tantalizes.

A hot meal, served by a cadre of volunteers, awaits. Irwin's task is to help coordinate activities and keep the line moving in an orderly fashion.

Welcome to the Open Door, an outreach for people who need an encouraging smile and a helping hand.

"For some people, this is the only decent meal they will have all week," said Irwin, 64, a retired reliability specialist from Chrysler Corp.

"There is no charge," Irwin added. "It is for people of meager income. But there are no questions asked. If Lee Iacocca came in, he would get just the same as everybody else."

DEDICATED VOLUNTEERS help keep this service humming. People such as Stan Durst of Livonia, Carol Carlin of Detroit, Don Hill of Grosse Ile and Pamela Johanningsmeier of Plymouth. Around 35 people help weekly.

The driving force behind the Open Door is the Rev. Dr. Robert H. Crilley, 57, pastor of Fort Street Presbyterian. He established the outreach in 1968.

Fort Street Presbyterian, a huge, quietly elegant church, was founded in the mid-1850s. It has 650 members, half of whom live in the suburbs.

Although the church has many programs, and is well-known for its seasonal concerts, the Open Door focuses on the special needs of local poor people.

"We're trying to do what we can for the area where we are located," Crilley said.

The program is 9 to 11 a.m.

Uncommon courtesy

Have we become a bunch of boors?

MODERN MANNERS don't bear much resemblance to those of bygone days.

The days of white gloves and calling cards are long gone, and people don't necessarily mourn that era's passing. At the same time, they aren't convinced modern manners — or the lack thereof — are an improvement.

The main thing to keep in mind is "kindness, and not imposing," said Rosemary Smith, who teaches an etiquette course for children offered by Plymouth-Canton Community Education. That consideration and respect includes not correcting others for etiquette slips.

She's noticed a general decline in manners and an increasing tendency among many people to think "I'm No. 1." She attributes that in part to the fact that people are busier than ever now.

"BUT IF YOU don't think of other people, that kind of ruins it for everybody, including yourself," said Smith, a Canton resident who has four grown children and two grandchildren. The formality of earlier times is gone and that's not all bad, but cordiality's still needed, she said.

"I think it's just good manners. It shows respect for each other. You're not living in this world alone."

Judge James Garber of the 35th District Court has also noticed a decline in manners. One day last week, he had a young man who'd been disruptive in court spend some time calming down in a cell.

"I was trying to deal with him in what I thought was a reasonable fashion," said Garber, who's 58 going on 59. "He's cooling his heels for the moment."

Many cases in the court, which serves the Plymouth-Canton-Northville area, arise because of discourteous behavior.

"We see a very substantial portion of our caseload comes from that kind of situation," Garber said. A number of auto accidents are related to a lack of consideration for other drivers.

Garber remembers learning about the importance of common courtesy as a child.

"I was taught at my mother's and father's knee, so to speak. A good deal of it we used to get at home, I think." That isn't always the case today.

"THE INFORMALITY which in some ways is good has degenerated to the point where we simply are not respectful. We're just not respectful of other people and their feelings," the judge said. "It's kind of a pendulum effect, I think."

The trend isn't limited to the United States, he added. Japanese society, for example, no longer is based on the same standards of courtesy it once was.

Even in the law "people became much more concerned about their rights than anything else," Garber said. That trend began in the mid-1950s and continued through the 1960s and beyond; what some seekers of rights forgot was that equal and opposite obligations accompany each right.

"Manners are the way in which you deal with and treat other people," Garber said. He's seen cases where altercations arise between two drivers over their use of the road. He agrees it's best in some situations just to let things go rather than starting an argument.

Common courtesy may not be as common as it once was, but the situ-

Dedicated volunteers reach out to assist the needy

Thursdays. Currently, around 600 people are coming for the complete hot meal. Many of those will get a haircut from one of several barbers on hand, or select a change of clothes from the used clothing bank.

The church has eight shower stalls, available to those who want to freshen up. Sometimes healthcare professionals come to give assistance.

The Open Door is non-denominational. Participants are called guests. They aren't required to prove they're poor, or attend religious services.

CONFRONTING THE problems of indigents can be depressing.

"This type of volunteer work isn't for everyone," said Irwin, who has been helping out for around four years.

But Crilley says he has no trouble finding volunteers.

"It's wonderful the way people will help when they know the need is there," Crilley said.

One enthusiastic group is the Plymouth Kiwanis service club. The contingent includes Barbara Kropiewnicki of Farmington Hills, who manages a bank branch in Plymouth, and Mike Gardner, a Plymouth police commander.

The Kiwanians serve food and prepare hundreds of peanut butter and jelly sandwiches.

"I like helping people," said 43-year-old Nancy Caviston, a Plymouth accountant and a Kiwanian. "It makes you feel like a million dollars. Everyone is very appreciative."

Cooks prepare the food in the church kitchen. Today's meal is beef patty, mashed potatoes and gravy, corn, tossed salad and canned peaches. Second helpings on veggies. Coffee and orange juice.

Serving the spuds and salad are several members of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church in Livonia. These include Lori Pittard and Betty Almburg of Livonia and Ann Heinicke of Westland, formerly of Redford. Irwin also is affiliated with St. Paul's.

"I think this is very worthwhile," said Heinicke, 34, a homemaker.

THE GUESTS, holding numbered tickets, move along a stairway into the church's huge gym. Long tables are set up.

The room, filled with activity and talking people, reverberates with sound. The mood is friendly and purposeful. Guests banter with the food servers.

"Hi, how are you?" calls Nancy Caviston as she doles out her sandwiches. Irwin sends a man to the back of the line, admonishing him not to take cuts.

According to Crilley, guests include people on public assistance, unemployed and homeless, or lonely. Some have abused drugs or alcohol.

Many are, for a variety of reasons, considered "unemployable" in today's tight job market.

"I come to see my friends," said Charlotte Piper, 83, who has been coming for 10 years. The services help stretch her income from Social Security.

The numbers have increased since the recent cuts in state General Assistance funding, Crilley said. More families with children are coming.

"When we started out, most of our clients and guests were Skid Row bums," Crilley said. "They were mostly alcoholic, white and old."

"NOW THE vast majority are young, minority and unemployed," he added. "They carry their belongings in a bag because they may have slept in an abandoned building."

Alvert Thomas, 40, began coming to Open Door after being sidelined by a serious job-related injury.

"The workers are compassionate," Thomas said. "They give you delightful smiles."

Some of the guests wear torn, dirty clothing, while others are neat and tidy. Some look battered by life, unkempt, with whiskered faces and downcast red eyes. Their demeanor pleads "Leave me alone."

A young woman has purple bruises on her face. Did she have an accident, or did someone beat her?

Crilley is aware some guests really aren't needy.

"I'm the first to admit there are freeloaders," Crilley said. "I don't make judgments. I just say to myself 'If they are going to stand outside for an hour, they are hungry.' "

The Open Door operates on an $85,000 annual budget, Crilley said. Fort Street Presbyterian provides a little more than one-fourth of the total. The balance comes from contributions and gifts.

The clothing bank is supported by more than 100 churches and synagogues in the city and suburbs. Corporations, clubs and individuals provide help.

The work can be draining, Crilley said. But there are rewards.

Kevin Charles, 34, used to be a cab driver. He became discouraged because of frequent holdups. He began coming for lunch and helping to clean up.

Over time, he joined the church and began driving the church van. Three years ago, he was hired as the custodian.

Sometimes, letters arrive from former guests who got their lives together and found jobs.

"We're always hopeful," Crilley said. "We got them started. Perhaps we gave them the dignity (they needed)."

Donations, which are tax deductible, are welcome. Checks may be sent to Fort Street Presbyterian Church, 631 W. Fort, Detroit 48226, or phone (313) 961-4533.

Rules on rudeness have changed over time

These days, etiquette books deal with such thorny issues as how to introduce unmarried live-in companions or how to seat less-than-friendly divorced parents at a wedding. That wasn't always true, however. Etiquette writers of the 19th century had other things on their minds.

Those etiquette books could get quite detailed. One late 19th century book, for instance, gave men these instructions: "A gentleman when bowing should lift his hat slightly from his head. To merely touch the rim of his hat, or make a gesture toward it, is not the correct form. But while the hat should be lifted slightly it should not be carried away from the head with an ostentatious flourish.

"A slight inclination of the head at the time the hat is lifted should occur, but the body need not be bent," the writer advised.

That's just one example of etiquette found in John F. Kasson's "Rudeness & Civility: Manners in Nineteenth-Century Urban America" (Hill and Wang/Division of Farrar Straus and Giroux, 1990).

ONE SOURCE of that era advised men on how to deal with disputes. "To your equals a tranquil nature and manner should always be shown, no matter how trying the position. To inferiors temper should not be shown while in sight or hearing of equals, and even when alone with servants or agents only in case of breach of duty, and then should merely be shown sufficiently far to make a reprimand more severe."

The same writer, displaying an awareness of class distinctions, added that in dealing with a conflict with an inferior one should "Pay no attention to such, unless it is followed by violence, or when it places you in an awkward position in presence of equals, and even then, if from one decidedly inferior, or a woman, do not return it, but summon the agents of the law to rid you of the nuisance."

Middle-class women of the 19th century were also admonished to mind their manners and refrain from flirting, according to Kasson's book. An 1880 manual warned women of the dangers of "the bold free eye, which speaks what the lips would not dare to utter."

A few years later, another writer said "A lady never seeks to attract the attention of the other sex or form their acquaintance on the street. To do so would forfeit all claims to consideration as a lady, and would justify a suspicion of her virtue."

Modern manners occasionally slip a little ation's not hopeless. Parents can do a great deal to teach their children the importance of courteous behavior, said Smith, who's taught the "Etiquette Fun for the Young" course for a number of years. Adults can set a good example for young people.

Opening doors for others who need help — regardless of their gender — is polite, Smith said. Knowing how to make introductions properly is a help to young people, particularly when they reach dating age.

IN HER CLASSES, Smith covers such basics as telephone conversation, table manners, etiquette for when company visits, and safety in dealing with strangers. Students learn about the importance of saying "thank you" and sending thank you notes. Knowing how to behave in different situations helps students become more self-assured, she said.

"Believe it or not, they all want to know how to set a proper table." Learning such things and developing good manners comes in handy.

"Let's face it, when you get in the corporate world they kind of respect that too," Smith said.

Those who work in service industries, such as stores and restaurants, don't always see people at their best. Owners and employees aren't necessarily bothered by the behavior of an occasional overbearing customer.

"In general, most of them are pretty nice," Karen Groves said of customers at Bill Knapp's of Livonia, where she waits on tables and trains waiters and waitresses. "There's a lot more good that make up for the bad. I enjoy what I'm doing and I've made a lot of friends there.

"A lot of them are polite," said Groves, a Northville Township resident who has two teenage children. Occasionally, customers become impatient during the busy lunch time and expect their food to be served right away.

Away from work, Groves has seen some signs of rudeness in traffic and elsewhere. "Everybody's in a hurry." She's noticed that's not as true up north as it is in the Detroit area.

Russ Webster, owner of the Penniman Deli in Plymouth, hasn't noticed many examples of bad manners among his customers. There's occasionally a little discourtesy among kids "but not that it's anything new. And most kids are good, most kids are nice."

Webster, a 34-year-old Plymouth resident, remembers goofing off a bit as a boy, so he's not too critical of today's younger generation. He occasionally gets an older customer at the deli who's a little short-tempered, but he isn't particularly bothered by that. He figures such people may have a hearing loss or other health problem that affects their behavior, or may simply be in a bad mood.

"Everybody has their days."

BILL BRESLER/staff photographer

"But if you don't think of other people, that kind of ruins it for everybody, including yourself," said Rosemary Smith, who teaches an etiquette class for children.

Faith helped him face drug problem

By Julie Brown
staff writer

The Rev. Michael York didn't have an easy time of it in his younger days.

"I dropped out of high school," said York, who grew up in the downriver area. "I had some pretty troubled times in my teens."

York, now 36, "went the path that a lot of teenagers in those years went."

"I had a lot of wasted years in my youth. I became involved in the drug culture as an early teenager. It caused quite a bit of problems in my life."

It wasn't until York was 23 that he turned to the Lord and found the answers to those problems. He earned his GED, got involved in church work and decided to enroll in Bible college.

York, a Canton resident, is the new pastor of Main Street Baptist Church in Canton. He began work at the church on Morton Taylor Oct. 1.

HIS FAITH helped York overcome obstacles he'd faced as a younger man.

"In doing so, I found the help that I needed. When you've been helped, you want to help others, to pass it on, so to speak."

He'd received help from the Santa Barbara Rescue Mission in California in overcoming his drug problem. York later worked as a chaplain there and considered becoming a substance abuse counselor.

York comes to Canton from the Madison Heights Fellowship Baptist Church in Oakland County, where he served as pastor for a little more than three years. He was born in Kentucky and his family moved to Michigan when he was a preschooler.

York's found the troubles he faced as a teenager and young adult have helped him in his ministry. He knows a number of people who've abused drugs.

"It's opened up doors for me to talk to people."

York attended Clear Creek Bible College in Kentucky, earning a bachelor of theology degree in 1982. During his last year of Bible college, he was called to a pastorate and ordained.

"So I worked in ministry full time." He worked as a chaplain at the rescue mission in California where he'd received help and as a pastor.

"I felt that call to be a pastor. When the call came to go back to California and work with them, it was just something I couldn't refuse."

YORK DID additional undergraduate work in California, where he lived for about a year and a half. He saw that work with substance abusers would always be part of his ministry, but felt that the local church was the best way to provide such help.

He'd heard from people at the rescue mission that their local churches, for whatever reason, hadn't been able to help with their drug and alcohol problems. York and others at the Main Street Baptist Church are studying substance abuse ministry, and hope to more formally adopt that as an outreach ministry in the future.

York and his family moved from California to Louisiana so that he could attend New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary. He earned a master of divinity degree in 1988.

While in New Orleans, York served as a pastor of an inner-city mission. He worked with drug addicts, unwed mothers and others in need.

"We saw some great things happen there. We saw a lot of lives touched and changed."

"I had some pretty troubled times in my teens," said the Rev. Michael York, the new pastor of Main Street Baptist Church in Canton.

'I found the help that I needed. When you've been helped, you want to help others, to pass it on, so to speak.'
— The Rev. Michael York

YORK MET his wife, Carolyn, in Bible college. They have three children: Jonathan, 9; Jennifer, 7; and Michael Christopher, 6 months.

"We enjoy the community here immensely." The Yorks have family members nearby, including his mother, who lives in Romulus. His family has moved around quite a bit in recent years as York continued his education and his ministry.

"I'm glad to be back. I've always loved Michigan and I look forward to getting to know the community here."

In his free time, York enjoys being outdoors with his family, doing some hiking or walking in the woods. Such outdoor activities will become a bit easier when his children are a little older, he said.

York isn't a musician, but finds the time to enjoy contemporary Christian music. He appreciates the warm welcome he's received at Main Street Baptist Church, which has about 300 members and is affiliated with the Southern Baptist Convention.

He's been impressed with such things as the Canton congregation's ministry to deaf people. The church also has a ministry to group homes for the mentally impaired.

"We have a growing youth ministry." Church members are involved in a number of mission efforts as well.

"For a small church, we have a lot of diversity here." That diversity is one of the congregation's strengths, he said.

Rev. David Strong

The sign at the expressway exit said "Cultural Center." The image stayed in my mind all that day and the next. I wondered how long this sign would point to anything of significance. Who is going to care about the decline of our culture in this area?

I was about ready to leave for Europe. The importance of culture there is very evident. Here in contrast I see a decline in music, theater, art, dance, libraries and the school programs that once prepared children to appreciate culture.

Gov. John Engler, his supporters and the city are saying "Let someone else support the arts." This is not just an economic issue, it is ideological. If one believes that only the rich need culture, then let them pay for it. Everything has a price. Too many of our leaders are saying "If you want it, then pay for it."

I RECALL a police officer saying that the four things that build a community are the family, the neighborhood, the schools and the churches. If each of these decline, violence and crime increase. The quality of life goes down. To this list I add a fifth category, cultural institutions.

To some, culture is highbrow and unnecessary. I disagree. Culture gives us a perspective upon meaning and values. Often, the painters and musicians are social critics.

They reflect to us our values and the spiritual condition of our time. Culture also reveals to us the human spirit striving to create, to celebrate the highest aspirations.

Every distinct culture expresses one way of being human. Cultures and religions do this together. They combine to stand for a particular expression of what it means to be human. Together, all cultures and all religions show us the range of how human beings live out their distinct view of human life.

Never before has there been such an attack upon culture as there is in Michigan today. Other states are looking at what is happening in Michigan and wondering if the politicians will get away with it.

Even the drive to support education does not come from a motivation to educate. It has roots in a desire to ensure that people have jobs in an increasingly technical society. Art and music feed the human soul. Art, music, drama and literature insure the birth of a human person. Consumerism creates nothing.

IT IS SAD that many religious persons do not see the connection between religion and culture. It is just possible that the death of a cultural sensitivity is caused by the death of a religious sensitivity. If religion withdraws from society, if religion seeks only individual goals then the loss of a rich cultural life will not be noticed.

There is an even more critical issue. As the world becomes smaller, we must come to understand those who are different from us. In order to create unity in this diversity, peace instead of war, we must understand cultures and religions.

How will Americans do this if we have no understanding of culture? How will we build bridges if culture in this country is reduced to consumerism?

I remember going into a gallery in the suburbs. A woman walked up to the owner, pointed to a painting and asked "What is it and how much does it cost?" She seemed to be treating the two questions as though they were one.

Translate this to a church or synagogue. What is it and how much does it cost? Both realms, culture and religion, are not simply things to buy and hang on the wall as decoration.

One would hope that we are not on the verge of a new Dark Age when culture will have to be hidden and guarded, where tribal warfare between religions and peoples will erupt. Culture is a public, indeed a world, necessity. It cannot be sold off like some garbage incinerator.

The Rev. David T. Strong is pastor of Central United Methodist Church in Detroit.

Use the moon to locate Jupiter, Venus on Nov. 1

By Raymond E. Bullock
special writer

The planet Venus is at its maximum elongation (apparent distance) from the sun and there will be two meteor showers in November, one of which has the potential of being more impressive than usual.

Of the five naked-eye planets, Venus and Jupiter are morning planets this month; Mercury and Saturn are evening objects and Mars is not visible.

We lose one hour and one minute of sunlight in November. On Nov. 1, the sun rises at 7:05 a.m. and sets at 5:27 p.m. This allows for a possible 10 hours and 22 minutes of sunlight. n the 30th these times are 7:41 a.m. and 5:02 p.m., allowing nine hours and 21 minutes of sun.

It may come as a surprise to some skywatchers that you can see planets in the daytime. Obviously the stars and planets are still in the sky during the day; you just can't see them because the sky is too bright. There are two planets, however, that are bright enough to be seen in the day, provided you know their locations. An excellent opportunity to see both of these planets occurs on Nov. 1 and 2. We can use the moon to find them.

THE MOON is five degrees to the right of Jupiter on the morning of the 1st. Go outside about 45 minutes before sunrise, and you'll have no problem seeing the two objects. Note the location of Jupiter with respect to the moon.

Sometimes it's helpful to use your fist as a measuring device: Hold your fist at arm's length and see how many "fists" it takes to get from one object to another. After the sun has risen, locate the moon and use your fist to measure the same distance. Jupiter will look like a bright point of light in the blue sky.

You can do the exact same thing on Nov. 2, when the moon is five degrees to the right of Venus. Venus should be easier to see in the daytime sky because it appears brighter than Jupiter. Venus is at its maximum elongation (apparent distance from the sun) on the morning of the 2nd. Venus is 47 degrees to the west (right) of the sun and is well up in the sky at sunrise.

The bright star ten degrees above and to the right of Jupiter these mornings is Regulus (REG u lus). This is the brightest star in the constellation of Leo the lion. Leo is the location of one of this month's meteor showers. Having spotted Leo, you'll know where to look for "falling stars" in a few more weeks.

The first meteor shower of the month is called the South Taurids (TOR rids). This shower is named for Taurus the bull because the meteors all appear to streak out of that constellation.

THE BEST TIME to look for meteors is between midnight and dawn. Taurus rises in the northeast around 7 p.m. and is high in the south at 1 a.m. By dawn it has moved into the southwest. The South Taurid shower is not one of the year's best; expect to see an average of only 15 meteors each hour. That works out to about one meteor every four minutes, and even then the faintest meteors might escape your notice entirely.

Raymond E. Bullock

Notice the waning crescent moon on the morning of the 4th. Five degrees to the left of the moon is the bright star Spica (SPY ca) in Virgo.

Spica comes from the Latin 'Spicum' and represents the Ear of Wheat that Virgo holds in her hand. In Greek and Roman mythology Virgo was the daughter of the goddess of the harvest. Virgo also represented Justice and, in ancient Egypt, was known as the goddess Isis. To the Babylonians she was Ishtar and to Medieval Christians she was the Madonna.

New Moon is at 6:11 a.m. on Nov. 6. The moon is located between the earth and the sun and is not visible. Thirty minutes after sunset, on the following night, you might be able to glimpse the waxing crescent moon just a few degrees above the west southwest horizon.

Binoculars will help you spot it in the glow of evening twilight. If you do see it, look for Mercury as well. It is two degrees above and to the left of the moon; the upper cusp of the moon points right at Mercury. Officially an evening planet, faint Mercury will be a difficult object to see.

MARS IS IN conjunction with the sun on the 8th. Mars is located behind the sun and is not visible. It will appear in the morning sky in late December.

Watch the moon move through the constellation of Sagittarius Nov. 9-11. On the evening of the 9th the moon is six degrees to the right of the star that marks the spout of the teapot that makes up the constellation. On the 10th the moon is adjacent to the star at the top of the teapot. On the 11th it has passed the teapot's handle.

The "star" directly below the moon on the evening of the 12th is Saturn, the planet with the beautiful ring system. Located in Capricornus, Saturn is the farthest of the naked-eye planets. It moves around the sun slowly, taking 29.5 years to complete a single orbit. Its night to night motion among the stars is nearly imperceptible to the naked eye.

The moon is at first quarter phase at 9:02 a.m. on Nov. 14. The moon has completed the first quarter of its orbit around the earth.

The planet Venus is 18 degrees above the star Spica on the morning of the 15th. Venus moves about 1 degree each day and will pass within four degrees of Spica by the end of the month.

An excellent aid for learning constellations and keeping up to date with the sky is the monthly Sky Calendar. A one year subscription is $6 and is available from Abrams Planetarium, Michigan State University, East Lansing, 48824.

Raymond Bullock is former coordinator of the planetarium and observatory at the Cranbrook Institute of Science, Bloomfield Hills. He now works for a Troy company that specializes in laser displays and effects.

Raccoons and injured animals will once again be able to call historic Nankin Mills home.

Plans are on course to convert the Westland historic site, which now houses Wayne County parks offices, into a nature center, like it was from 1956 to 1979 under naturalist Mary Ellsworth.

The third annual wine and cheese fund-raiser Oct. 10 raised about $800 toward restoration of the mill and expansion of the annex. Parks offices would move into the new annex.

The 19th-century grist mill was one of Henry Ford I's village industries from 1918 until after World War II. Its years as a nature center inspire fond memories.

"It was so special to us growing up. We have hopes to see it through to a nature center," said Friends of Nankin Mills member Denise Mehelich, who co-chaired the fund-raiser.

Westland City Council member Chuck Pickering said he "saw the value of preservation of history. We have to preserve our past to preserve our future."

In 1985, Nancy Watkins, Wayne County parks design manager, started a campaign to restore the mill site.

"One of the mayors told me, 'Young lady, these buildings are a blight on our community,' but he also gave me the first $2,000 check to help save them," Watkins said.

Groundbreaking for the expansion is targeted for next fall.

The new digs are ready.

J. Giordano Studio will host its grand opening to celebrate moving to a new Northville location 5-10 p.m. Friday, Nov. 1. The new gallery is at 242 S. Center.

The studio will be home to the new Network for Promoting Arts and Musical Services as well as commissioned artwork by portrait artist Julie Giordano. The former Plymouth resident now lives in Northville.

Wind instrumentalist Gary Cooper also has moved his private lessons, music and sales (formerly Flute Centre Plus) to this location. He'll entertain during the opening.

The network, which should be up and ruinning in 1992, will offer Michigan artists and musicians a marketplace for their services. For a $25 fee, musicians will be able submit demo tapes and artists will be able to submit slides.

Folks in search of, say, chamber music for a store grand opening, face painting for a church fund-raiser or modern art to decorate their home or office will be able to visit the studio, review network offerings and call the artist directly. Sales will bring a 20-percent commission on sales.

Right now, Giordano is gathering names of potential artists and musicians. Applications will follow. Friends of the Arts in Northville is co-sponsoring the network.

Jean Payton uses the router to contour the scalloped top of a pine cradle. After engraving a family name in the head of the bed, the handmade piece will be assembled, then stained by her husband, Joe.

Self-motivated

She meticulously crafts woodworking wares

By Janice Tigar-Kramer
special writer

UNLIKE OTHER craft show-goers, woodworker Jean Payton returned from a local craft exhibit in 1988 with nothing but a head full of ideas and inspiration.

"I liked all of the wood furniture and accessories I saw that day," remembers Payton. "But I didn't like the prices, so I thought, 'I can make that.'"

And that's exactly what she did. After all, Payton already had installed paneling and a vaulted ceiling in the family room of her Redford Township bungalow, so woodworking seemed like a hobby she could master.

Her first project, a baby cradle for her son and daughter-in-law, was hardly for beginners, "but big doesn't always mean more difficult."

Payton finished the pine cradle in just a week, working evenings after returning from her full-time job in shipping and receiving at a local tool and die company.

She didn't have all of the sophisticated woodworking tools she uses today, yet she produced an admirable pine cradle using just a portable saw, router and sander. She was so satisfied with the job, she immediately went to work on a matching dresser with changing table.

"I learned to use machines and do simple repairs working in the machine shop, but I was always taught that you can do whatever you set your mind to do." Payton said.

TODAY, PAYTON is a full-time woodworker who makes 100 items to sell at local and out-of-state craft shows. She cuts the wood pieces from original or existing patterns and assembles with pegs, screws or glue and nails. Husband Joe stains the finished product and installs hardware.

Using mostly pine, or hardwoods on request, Payton, who calls her business The Old Wooden House, sells a complete line of Early American-style accessories and furnishings to outfit a playroom or a master suite.

She makes a child's table with two benches for $100, plus a matching stove, refrigerator, sink and hutch for $100 each. She also sells a doll cradle with foam bed, sheet and comforter for $45, doll strollers and doll high chairs for $25 and $30. A child's ironing board with a heart-shaped iron is just $17.50.

Besides the cradle she made for her own granddaughter, Payton takes special orders for a six-year crib with canopy and mattress, kids' headboards and dressers.

"I feel so proud making things for children. I'm a sucker for kids, I guess," said the mother of three, grandmother of four.

BESIDES CLASSIC children's toys and high-grade furnishings, which are sure to become heirlooms, Payton makes can hardly keep shelves, pine potato bins and covered trash containers in stock.

Though mostly self-taught, Payton took a woodworking class through adult education at Redford Union High School and will take another class before using her new lathe.

"There isn't enough time to do everything I want to do. Once I start working, I can't stop," said Payton, who once spent 18 hours in her garage workshop.

Most projects include an eight-step process — enlarge the pattern, rough cut the wood, draw on scroll work, engrave, assemble, sand, stain and install hardware. Yet Payton's work is far from assembly-line quality. She takes some furniture patterns from popular craft magazines (the child's table and benches is her own design), but she generally lets her imagination take over once the work begins.

"My kid's sets are always different. I might make a drawer in place of a shelf or a double-raised panel door instead of a single door," she said.

THOUGH PAYTON will do about 26 craft shows this year, she'll make time to oversee the remodeling of her master bath and even do some of the work herself.

"A lot of people at the craft shows think my husband does the work. Most people just don't think that women can do woodworking, but we can," Payton said.

A pine cradle for a grandchild due next year is one of Dorothy Payton's latest creations. The Paytons already plan to pass it along to other family members.

Visual art exhibition will begin on Friday

☐ Exhibitions listing: 2D

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

The Visual Art Association of Livonia will present its fall art show, an exhibition of 93 works, Nov. 1-22 in the lobby of Livonia City Hall, Farmington Road at Five Mile.

An awards ceremony and opening reception to meet the artists will be 2-4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 3. Livonia arts commissioner Betty Ward will present the honors. Everyone is invited to attend; admission is free.

VAAL's show was divided into three categories for judging: oil, watercolor and mixed media. Awards were given for first, second and third place in each category as well as Best of Show, chosen by jury; Best of Show, chosen by Livonia Arts Commission; the Grumbacher Award for Best Use of Color; and six honorable mentions.

Jurist for the show was David Sharp, a professor of painting and drawing at Eastern Michigan University in Ypsilanti.

"On The Reef," an abstract watercolor by Lorraine Whitacre of Farmington Hills, took three awards: Best of Show, chosen by jury; Best of Show, chosen by Livonia Arts Commission; and first place in the watercolor division.

"There were a number of pieces in the show with superior qualities of imagery," Sharp said.

SHARP JUDGED each work using two criteria: intention of the artist and formalistic presentation. "My criteria are unvarying," Sharp said. "My criteria is visual."

During the first round of judging, Sharp juried "out pieces on the basis as just not being mature yet."

"There were two types of works that did not make it into the show," Sharp said. "Illustrations obviously done from a photograph and the decorative ones, a collage of different materials. It's a very mature hand that gets them to work together."

Sharp used objectivity and professionalism to judge the show. He believes the quantity of time he spends in his studio undoubtedly qualifies him to judge other working artists. "I'm in constant contact with the working part."

The winning watercolor by Whitacre, Sharp said, "struck me as a very acute perceptual and subjective piece. She had to have seriously studied and looked at the forms in nature. There was a strong idea of fantasy."

"The flatness of the form and space balanced by three-dimensional elements is an honorable invocation of composers such as Matisse," he said.

WHITACRE HAS worked in watercolor for seven years. Previously, she used inks and acrylics. "I find watercolor more creative. I like to pour in a design and then texturize it. I build up color in several layers."

Whitacre spends 20 hours a week painting. She's president of the Livonia Art Club and has been a VAAL member for two years. She belongs to the Michigan Watercolor Society.

Art galleries team up to stave off economic blues

Bob Sklar

IN WAKE of the economic downturn and the emotionally draining controversy surrounding state arts funding, a spirited group of gallery operators is fighting back with all the creative vigor it can muster.

The strategy: teamwork.

The group's cooperative spunk doesn't surprise me in the least because the very livelihood of each gallery is what's partly at stake.

To help rekindle community excitement for gallery art in time for the critical holiday shopping season, the group is planning a Holiday Gallery Tour in Plymouth and Northville from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 10.

Tour participants from Plymouth are D & M Art Studios and Cooperative Gallery, Native West, Chameleon Galleries, Penniman Showcase of Art and Crafts, The Frame Works, Wild Wings Wildlife Art Galleries and Plymouth Community Arts Council's Art Rental Gallery. Northville participants include Tiffany Art Glass, Painter's Place, Atrium Gallery and J. Giordano Studio.

"It's our maiden voyage," said Julie Giordano, the group's feisty leader. "But I'm a woman of great faith. And I feel very strongly in what we're trying to do.

"With the economy so bad," the portrait painter added, "most galleries are really struggling. We can't just sit around. We've got to do something.

"That something is trying to spread the word that galleries must generate business for each other. We can't work against each other. We've got to promote each other more."

"OUR GOAL is to keep everyone aware of the art that's available right in their own towns," said Kathy Savitskie, Plymouth Community Arts Council executive director. "This is a great way to showcase our local talent."

The tour, 15 months in planning, begins at Northville's Historic Mill Race. Tour goers will board a trolley and spend 20 minutes at each gallery. The galleries will furnish snacks and donate a piece of fine art for a drawing.

The Northville Arts Commission will host a closing reception.

As a handy reminder where the galleries are, tour goers will receive a keyed map of the Plymouth-Northville arts community. The map will include phone numbers of key local arts groups as well.

The range of art is inviting: photo-realistic portraits at Giordano, contemporary art at Chameleon and Atrium, Michigan art at D & M, traditional art at The Frame Works, Southwest art at Native West, fine art and decorative crafts at Penniman, Tiffany-style lampshades at Tiffany, Carolyn Dunphy's watercolors at Painter's Place, wildlife art at Wild Wings.

EVEN BEFORE the arts funding crisis, galleries on the tour maintained lines of communication. They've cooperated by referring prospective clients and sharing exhibit announcements.

"We're working for a common good: to keep the arts alive in Michigan. It's not enough anymore to keep the doors open and wait for customers to come," said Giordano, who should know.

The former Plymouth resident closed her 2-year-old, Northville-based gallery of Michigan fine art Oct. 1 after lease problems and a 30-percent drop in sales, notably big-ticket oils. Portrait commissions are now her full-time work.

Savitskie, meanwhile, already is working with Northville Friends of the Arts and the Livonia Arts Commission in planning and organizing Michigan Art '92, the Plymouth Community Arts Council's statewide fine arts show that will run concurrent with the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular in January.

Holiday Gallery Tour tickets are $10. They're available at any of the galleries.

"I especially recommend it to artists so they can see what other artists are doing," Giordano said. "I know I get geeked up seeing other artists' work. I just want to go home and paint."

Doug Zemmin, Wild Wings manager, reminds that "there's a real diversity of art among the galleries. That should be kind of a kick for anyone on the tour."

Bob Sklar is assistant managing editor for special projects.

Plymouth Symphony fare: classical to Dixieland

By Linda Ann Chomin
special writer

Bernstein, Schuman and Dixieland jazz will highlight the second concert of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra's 46th season at 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 8, in the Plymouth Salem High School Auditorium, 46181 Joy, Canton.

Guest artists for the "All-American" program are the seven-member jazz group, New Reformation Dixieland Band.

Selections for the evening include "New England Triptych" by Schuman, "West Side Story Symphonic Dances" by Bernstein, and Dixieland standards, "It Don't Mean A Thing If You Don't Have That Swing," "When The Saints Come Marching In," "What a Wonderful World," "Sunshine of Love," "Little Rock Getaway" and "Do You Know What It Means To Miss New Orleans."

"The idea for the All-American program was to commemorate the musical genius of Bernstein and American music with the New Reformation Dixieland Jazz Band because it's an original American musical art," said Linda Alvarado, PSO publicity chairwoman.

Founded in 1970, The New Reformation Dixieland Band balances skilled musicianship with rapid-fire wit and humor. It has been called "one of the country's most entertaining and accomplished Dixieland bands."

The New Reformation Dixieland Band will perform with the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra Friday, Nov. 8.

"They're a nationally recognized Dixieland jazz band. They really do have a reputation mainly because they've incorporated several types of styles into their Dixieland jazz: New Orleans, Chicago, and full brass sound," Alvarado said.

THE BAND has played alongside Basie, Ellington, Hampton and Herman. They have headlined the major jazz festivals in Davenport, Decatur, Sacramento, St. Louis, Los Angeles and Reno, produced six albums and made appearances on national television. Leader David Opperman has been with the band since its inception and is renowned for his humor.

"They have a good sense of humor. Their music is cleverly arranged and it's musically sophisticated. There's an allusion to the Beethoven Fifth and Ninth and Mozart's Fortieth," said William Hulsker, Plymouth Symphony Society president. Hulsker has played bassoon in the Plymouth Symphony for 32 years.

The up-tempo group consists of a front line of three: trumpet/cornet, trombone, and clarinet/saxophone backed by a four-man rhythm section: piano, banjo/guitar, string bass and/or tuba, and drums.

Around the turn of the century, Dixieland was all the rage in New Orleans. New Orleans musicians in Chicago and Chicago style jazz roared through the late Twenties and into the Thirties with Bix Beiderbecke, Paul Whiteman and the Dorsey Brothers.

In 1926, Duke Ellington began a music career ranging over half a century as the leader of a classic Dixieland combo. In 1932, he emerged on the hot jazz scene to characterize the state of big band music with "It Don't Mean a Thing If It Ain't Got That Swing," and prophesied what was yet to come; the swing era in American music history, 1935-45.

ELLINGTON ALONG with Count Basie and Benny Goodman gave the American public what they wanted: easy melodies and rhythms to dance to.

On Friday, Nov. 8, all that classic American jazz will surely raise spirits and set toes a-tapping to the sound of the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra and the New Reformation Dixieland Band.

General admission is $11; seniors and college students, $10; students K-12, $5.

Tickets are available in Plymouth at Beitner Jewelry, 904 W. Ann Arbor Trail, and Evola Music Center, 215 Ann Arbor Road; in Northville at Gitfiddler, 302 E. Main, and Bookstall on the Main, 116 E. Main; in Canton at Dearborn Music Co., 42679 Ford Road, and at the auditorium box office 30 minutes before the performance.

Arts calendar focus: Livonia

The second issue of the Livonia Cultural and Arts Calendar is now in circulation. The calendar features events sponsored by 14 Livonia organizations and institutions.

The calendar was one result of the collaboration and planning done by the Livonia Public Library and the Livonia Community Resources Department. The Livonia Arts Commission supported the concept and suggested a meeting be held of all the cultural and arts groups.

The next roundtable meeting is 8 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 21, in the Livonia Civic Center Library. Organizations will bring their calendars to share for the next 6-12 months and receive copies of the next quarterly calendar covering December through February.

Organizations wanting to attend may call the library at 421-8306 or the Livonia Community Relations Department at 421-2000, Ext. 221.

How interested are you in selling your home?

Interested enough to spend a few moments and discover the best place to advertise the fact that your home is for sale?

Good. We knew you were intelligent.

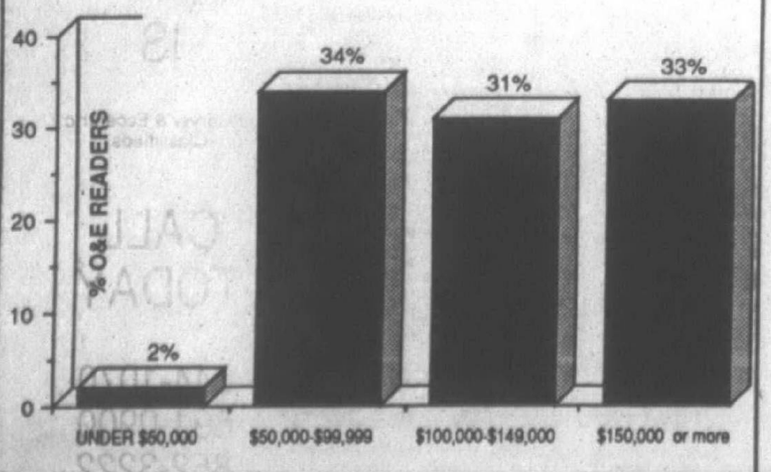
In fact, more than 40% of our readers have college degrees or better.*

And if knowlege is power, let's look at a few powerful facts: this newspaper, the one you're reading right now, reaches some of the most affluent households in Wayne and Oakland counties:

That's a median household income of more than $50,000—$10,000 more than the income of the people who don't read our newspapers.So when you advertise in your Observer & Eccentric newspapers, you not only reach thousands of smart people, you reach people with substantial incomes.

Now, that's something to smile about.

Our circulation area has 90% home ownership and look at the value of our reader's homes:

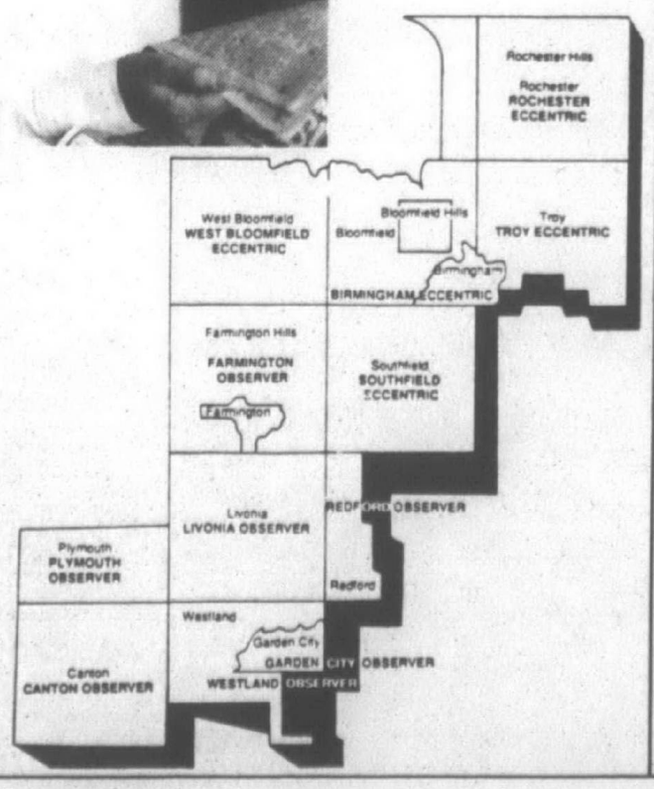


FACT: When you advertise with us you will reach 9 out of 10 adults in the Observer & Eccentric market area who have read weekly classified advertising.*

FACT: 91% of the adults in our market area who had read classified advertising in the past seven days had read it in the Observer & Eccentric*.

So, we can offer you one quarter of a million adult readers and a very rich market, what else do we have for you? How about an award-winning newspaper— a newspaper that people trust and look forward to reading? One that reaches 25 communities with important local news that's not available anywhere else.

That's us.



By the way, did you know that all those little ads in the back of this newspaper—the ones placed by people like you—are published in all 12 newspapers? Therefore, when you advertise anything from a horn to a home, you will automatically reach this huge, interested reading audience.

What else can we say? We've had years of experience in publishing newspapers and are proud of our record for successfully putting home buyers in touch with home sellers.

In fact, we've just introduced HOMELINE,* a great new way to find out about open houses simply by using your touchtone telephone.

Be sure to mention it to your Realtor® so that when it comes time to show your home, it will be described on HOMELINE.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

Title insurance prevents pig-in-a-poke syndrome

By Doug Funke
staff writer

Most home sales come off without a hitch and new owners enjoy an uneventful occupancy. But occasionally problems arise after the fact.

Maybe a check bounces and back taxes are owed putting the property at risk. A contractor puts a mechanic's lien on the property when a previous owner stops paying for improvement work. A long-lost heir materializes to challenge an estate sale. Or out-and-out fraud like misrepresentation or forgery occurs.

That's why title insurance exists — to protect buyers and mortage companies from challenges to ownership.

"It's imperative to have marketable title free and clear of any claims," said Paul Cuschieri, owner and president of Minnesota Title Agency in Livonia. "It's a one-shot deal. The protection you're buying isn't for the future. It's protection from the past."

"We want to make certain the individual selling the property is — quote, unquote — the true owner," said Mark Tarrant, chief title examiner for Lawyers Title Insurance in Troy.

PEOPLE WOULD be foolish to buy a house and expose themselves to tremendous monetary loss for back claims without title insurance, Cuschieri said. Financial institutions are reluctant to issue mortgages unless purchasers obtain a title policy indemnifying lenders for the amount borrowed.

So two policies generally are issued for a single sales transaction.

The seller usually pays for title insurance for the buyer's protection as part of a standard purchase agreement. The purchaser then buys a policy for the bank's protection. A real estate agent handling the transaction usually arranges for the insurance.

Title insurance costs are fairly standard due to the competitive nature of the industry and insurance laws in Michigan. Both Lawyers Title and Minnesota Title would charge the seller $320 and the buyer $128 for insurance on the sale of a $50,000 house.

The title search, a historical review of property owners, goes back 40 years.

Previous owners are identified through the county register of deeds. All or some of those names are checked through courthouse records for involvement in legal entanglements that might affect the ownership of property — lawsuits, bankruptcies, divorces.

TAX RECORDS are checked for recent payments. Easements, which could limit property uses, also are identified.

"I want to know what I'm buying," Tarrant said. "I can't walk out and see a lien.

If necessary, the title company — at its expense — will defend the purchaser's title and ownership rights in court. If a claim proves valid, the title company will bear the cost of settling to protect the title and legal possession by the policyholder.

"I think title insurance is extemely important," Tarrant said. "The average person has no clues what competing interests can affect property. A title policy lets you know what you're buying before it's too late. Should we be wrong, that's what we insure you for and against."

The lender's coverage usually decreases as the mortgage is paid down, but the purchaser's coverage stays the same for the one-time premium due at closing. The purchaser can buy extra coverage for increases in a property's value over time.

"The most frequent thing I see is tax problems," Tarrant said. "I pay for taxes resulting from erroneous information from treasurer's offices. Those are smaller amounts."

The next category of problems now affecting good title is construction liens, he added.

Heed wetlands laws before development

condo queries
Robert M. Meisner

We are thinking about developing a campground condominium but are somewhat concerned about some of the liabilities that we may incur as a result of the improvements that we are making. Can you give us any idea as to how to avoid these potential problems before they arise?

As is the case with any condominium, the developer should ensure that its construction procedures and design are properly approved by the local municipalities and the state of Michigan. Also a competent registered architect and engineer should be hired with respect to all phases of the condominium as well as an experienced site planner for the condominium subdivision plan and an experienced condominium lawyer to draft the documents.

In the case of a campground condominium, the experience of this writer is that electrical and sanitary sewer and water systems are often potential problems that were not adequately addressed by the condominium developer. I would be particularly concerned about these issues and obtaining adequate approvals from the Army Corps of Enginers or the DNR in connection with any involvement with water or wetlands.

I am president of a management company and am hopping mad. In the middle of my management agreement with an association, another management company came along and low-balled my monthly stipend to the association and told it that they would pay them a $500 bonus to induce them to terminate my contract. I had been performing fine, but it is just a matter of economics. Somehow I feel I have been wronged by the management company. What can I do?

Consider your legal alternatives against the other management company as well as the association. The association may be obligated to you for breach of contract depending upon the terms of your contract and what provisions it has with respect to early termination. As to the other management company, when one person tortiously interferes with the contractual rights of a third person, that person can be held liable for interference with contractual relations or economic expectations for damages.

Robert M. Meisner is a Birmingham attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate and corporate law.

Judges for the Builder Magazine Builder's Choice awards were particularly impressed with the character of the Woodlynne's balanced rear facade accented by the strong horizontal bands and gentle, twostory bay.

Just grand: Builder's classical house earns trade magazine award

"Good design is more than just a pretty face. It's about the way buildings and communities function day to day, regardless of economic ebbs and flows. The 36 winners of the 1991 Builder's Choice Design and Planning Awards exemplify this durable quality." — Builder Magazine

By GeraldFrawley
staff writer

CLASSICAL SYMMETRY never goes out of style."

So begins a brief description of the design of Woodlynne, a 5,400-square-foot custom home built by the Birmingham-based David Jensen Building Corp., and the winner of a grand award in the annual Builder's Choice awards sponsored by Builder magazine.

It's not every day a house is chosen for such an award. In fact, in the 15 years the awards have been given, no one can recall a Michigan house, or even a house from the Midwest, being chosen.

That changes this year.

David Jensen, president of the building company, said he set out not to build an award-winning house, but a "special" house.

"I think that in a lifetime, you try to get recognition of anything you've done," Jensen said. That doesn't necessarily mean he wanted to win an award — only that he wanted to build a home with character, dignity and a timeless quality.

'It's not just a series of spaces. Good architecture is a matter of taste, but what they've done is created a timeless house.'

— Builder David Jensen

The award was for the first house in the Woodlynne development — a 23-acre site in Bloomfield Township near 13 Mile and Bingham roads — designed by Rick Lamb Associates in Cambridge, Mass. Homes in the development sell in the $1 million range.

Jensen said the site was designed to give a quiet "Connecticut-like" feel. The award-winning home was designed by Robert A.M. Stern Architects in New York City.

Since that first project, a second home has been built, another starts construction this month, and three are in early planning, Jensen said.

HIS GRAND AWARD house was what he likes to call "a perilous venture."

Built on speculation, meaning there was no buyer prior to construction, Jensen said he realized the first house would set the tone for the entire development.

The house was intentionally built on a grand scale. Oversized rooms, smooth circulation patterns, custom molding and trim, a circular staircase, solid materials, an impressive entry court created by symmetrical placement of a three-car garage and a living room, high ceilings and large, well-placed windows to allow extensive use of natural light all combine to give the home a majestic feel.

At the same time, Jensen said there are more subtle touches to the home that give it a human scale. An oval dining room tempers the harsh, rectangular geometry common in most homes, a well-separated private area for bedrooms, and one of Jensen's favorite features, a back stairway.

"It's not just a series of spaces. Good architecture is a matter of taste, but what they've done is created a timeless house," Jensen said.

"Most people (who have seen the house) feel this is a bold stroke," he said. "This is a very Midwestern, conservative community. This house is way outside the norm."

Which isn't to say the home is wild or contemporary. "We (in this area) have been flooded with a series of homes that are simply knock-offs of other homes.

"An awful lot of architecture is garish and loud like a bratty kid demanding attention. There is a quietness to significant architecture," Jensen said.

The Woodlynne, Jensen said, is a reinterpretation of the classical homes found in some of Detroit's older subdivisions.

'The projects they (judges) chose to honor are attractive and efficient places in which to live, work and play. Whether traditional or contemporary, small-town or citified, their beauty goes far beyond skin deep. Much attention has been paid to the way these projects read from the street. Garages are set back, canted or tucked under to minimize the automobile's impact. Common materials are used in fresh new ways; so is color. And most important of all, this year's Builder's Choice award winners are good and responsible neighbors to the communities that surround them."

— Builder Magazine

The house's "classical symmetry" was noted in the balance and workmanship and the courtyard created by the garage and living room jutting from the house. Judges also were impressed with many of the interior design features.

'An awful lot of architecture is garish and loud like a bratty kid demanding attention. There is a quietness to significant architecture.

— Builder David Jensen

GRANT MARANI, project coordinator and an associate at Robert A.M. Stern Architects, said a builder's choice award (particularly a grand award) is a very reputable award in the design industry. "It's quite coveted."

Builder magazine asks some of the best known names in the building and design industries to judge the contest, he said.

This year, winners were chosen by a panel of nationally acclaimed architects like John D. Bloodgood, president of Bloodgood ● Sharp ● Snider Architects & Planners Inc.; site planners like Andres Duany, principal with the Miami-based Andres Duany and Elizabeth Palter-Zyberk Architects and Town Planners; builders like Harold Lynch Jr., president of Newport Beach-based RGC (RecreActions Group of Companies); and design journalists like Withold Rybczynski, author and professor of architecture at McGill University in Montreal to name just a few.

Marani said the design that eventually became the Woodlynne home was a result of several trips to the area. "We were concerned with making a design that had architecture that reflected the Midwest."

He has found that when an out-of-state firm tries to impose its own style on a home, people in the area reject it.

Marani said although his firm has built homes in the Midwest, this was the first in Michigan, which meant a considerable amount of study. "We wanted a home that reflected many of the great homes in Detroit's older neighborhoods."

"One of the advantages of being an out-of-town architect is that you have a different perspective. "There is a sense of the classical in these homes."

SOME OF THE features that they set out to include were predominant roof forms, a horizontal design base, solid materials like brick and stone, a symmetry to the overall design.

At the same time, the design was also meant to be a reinterpretation of the older homes. "They belong to the same style of architecture — if not the same architecture."

For example, the architects designed the front with a more defined entrance and a fan window to give the house a vertical element, but still retain an overall horizontal feel.

The back of the house includes a strong horizontal band and a two-story gentle, curving bay.

Some of the interior features include a two-story entry, a grand high-ceilinged living room, and the oval dining room — all incorporating modern design practices to better control movement through the home.

Marani also noted the extensive use of natural illumination. "The home faces north, so we wanted to design the home to work with that — it captures both morning and evening light."

SUSAN BRADFORD, senior editor for design at Builder Magazine, said this is the first project she can recall from Michigan, but may not be the first project in the Midwest. "We don't keep a running list of all the winners."

Bradford said the lack of Builder's Choice houses isn't necessarily a result of Midwestern homes being poorly designed. "We don't get many entries from the Midwest."

Why few Midwest builders enter the contest, she said, is open to speculation. "There seems to be a reluctance on the part of Midwestern builders to hire good photographers. We don't have the staff or budget to send photographers all over the country, so we rely on the builder to furnish the photographs, and for a magazine we need very high quality photographs."

But that is not the only reason.

Midwestern design standards are not necessarily bad design, but the Builder's Choice awards measure innovation. Most of the architectural innovations, they have found, generally occur in the East and West and then trends move inward.

"This isn't always true, but that's generally the pattern," she said.

In fact, several judges criticized the lack of innovation in projects built in the South and Southwest, where architectural styles are predominantly Mediterranean.

There was also surprisingly few entries from the East Coast. Judges speculated that the slow housing market there has greatly decreased innovation. "When times are tough, builders are going to hold back and stick with the tried and true that sells well, not be innovative and take a risk."

The Builder's Choice awards is an annual selection of the best national builders have to offer, sponsored by the magazine and the National Association of Home Builders.

More than 550 projects were submitted for the awards. Thirty-six winners were selected — one project of the year, one focus on affordability award, 10 grand awards, 20 merit awards, and four special focus awards.

Warranties set 'reasonable' performance

Buying a new house may be the largest single investment a person ever makes. Before signing on the dotted line, buyers should ask their builder what type of warranty he or she offers and who insures the warranty.

"More than 40 states have 'implied' warranty laws that outline the basic requirements for new homes," said Gerald Kosmensky, president of the Southern Michigan Home Owners Council. Warranties vary from state to state, but four standards are typical.

- A house must be "free from faulty materials."
- The materials should be assembled in a "workmanlike manner."
- A house must be built according to "sound engineering standards."
- A house should be "fit for habitation."

"In effect, if someone sells us something described as a 'house,' then we have a right to expect that the product can be used for its intended purpose," Kosmensky said.

IMPLIED WARRANTY laws represent minimum standards. But it would be unwise to buy a house backed only with an implied warranty because nothing is said about the builder's obligaton after the sale.

To assure buyers that their purchase is secure, builders often provide oral promises that rely on the builder's good will if a problem arises. But if the builder is not willing to resolve a problem, or can't because he is out of business, then homeowners are stuck.

"You can always take a builder to court if something goes wrong and claim that the builder violated implied warranty statutes," Kosmensky said. "There is a no guarantee that one side or the other will win, and it is almost certain that the dispute will not be resolved quickly or without the payment of expensive legal fees."

BUILDERS TODAY provide written warranties. When a guarantee is in writing, it is called an "express" warranty because all provisions are clearly stated. Typically, written warranties show the builder's promises and how long such obligations last.

The best warranties establish reasonable levels of performance, Kosmensky said. They also require a builder to respond in a timely manner when problems arise.

"Like location and sound financing, an enforceable, insured warranty with concise standards is an important part of your new home. Where effective warranties are missing, hidden costs and great uncertainty may lurk within deals that otherwise look good."

House delivers amenities

Richly windowed along the back of the house, the Morris is designed for full appreciation of a beautiful view.

Relatively small at 1,652 square feet, this house is affordable but not Spartan. Despite its compact size, the designers have managed to include many of the features that buyers frequently request.

The master suite has a private bathroom with twin vanities. Extra storage space is available in a utility room, accessible from inside as well as from the garage. The kitchen/family room features a sunny eating bay and large fireplace, and the front entry has French doors.

All three bedrooms are grouped together at one end of the house. Three closets line the longest wall of the master suite.

Sliding glass doors in the dining room open onto a small deck that overlooks the back yard.

For a study plan of the Morris (400-54), send $7.50 to Landmark Designs, P.O. Box 2307, Eugene, Ore., 97402. Specify plan name and number.

Financing differs for kit homes

(AP) — If you're considering buying a factory-built house, bear in mind that coming up with the cash for a manufactured house — be it a log house, panelized house or modular structure — can be far more complicated than getting a mortgage on a house you'd buy through a real estate agent.

Before you even begin talking to lenders, you should know that you will have to raise more cash than just the materials supplied in the manufacturer's kit. You've also got to finance what the factory doesn't provide — such as plumbing, electricity, heating and cooling systems, interior details — such as cabinets and improvements to the site (water well and septic system).

FOR EXAMPLE, site preparation work, such as cutting and removing trees, grading the lot, excavating a foundation, drilling a well and installing a septic system can easily run $10,000 to $25,000.

If you use a general contractor who builds the entire house, including hiring subcontractors to do electrical, plumbing and other work, you can add another $30,000 to $50,000 in cost.

Don't forget to add the cost of shipping the package to your site. A rule of thumb here is about $2 per mile for each truck, and many houses require two truck loads.

A good rule of thumb is that a completely finished ready-to-move-into house will cost you 2½ to three times the cost of the basic package.

THE ACTUAL costs you incur will depend on the size of the house you buy, the quality of materials used throughout and the amount of site work needed. A good rule of thumb is that a completely finished ready-to-move-into house will cost you 2½ to three times the cost of the basic package.

So that 1,700-square foot log-house kit that sells for $40,000 can actually wind up costing anywhere from $100,000 to $120,000 completely finished. This includes the cost of site preparation but not the cost of the land itself.

While it is possible to finance the land as well as the rest of the house, the whole process goes a lot more smoothly if you already own the land. In most cases, the land amounts to the homeowner's equity in the project — the money you put up front, much like the down payment on a regular mortgage.

Many mortgage companies and banks have no real system for financing a factory-built house.

GENERALLY SPEAKING, you will probably need two loans — a construction loan and a house mortgage. The construction loan will provide the cash you need for the kit itself, site improvements and the other expenses you incur along the path from manufacturer's package to a complete house.

Once the house is finished, the construction loan will be paid off and replaced by a long-term mortgage — the same type of loan you would use to buy a conventional house.

Usually, you will get these loans from separate lenders — the construction loan from a bank and the mortgage from a mortgage bank such as a savings and loan association or an institution that specializes in house mortgages.

WHILE THERE are exceptions to the rule, very few house manufacturers offer financing. They're in business to sell houses, not lend money. The most important — and complicated — part of the financing is arranging a schedule that lets you tap the construction loan to pay the bills you incur as you build your house. Most banks allow you to do this in a series of four to six draws, each of which is tied to completing a specific stage of construction.

Your customers check the Yellow Pages before they buy, right?

WRONG.

When was the last time you bought a car? You decided you needed one or wanted one and you went right to the Yellow Pages, didn't you?

Of course you didn't, and neither does anyone else.

They find the kind of car they want in what's been printed within the last week. The newspaper. And more often than not this is the newspaper they use.

We've just had a survey done by Belden Associates of Dallas, Texas and their research tells us that 61% of our readers have purchased or leased a motor vehicle in the past two years.

We have a super-rich market for selling everything from cars to carpets. If you are in business be sure your advertising budget isn't being wasted on the Yellow Pages. If you don't buy things by looking in the directory, you can be sure other people don't, either.
