Voting equipment accord off

Voting equipment is causing some consternation. Plymouth Township trustees Tuesday voted to purchase a voting system made by Optic Scan. Earlier, Plymouth city commissioners opted to buy a different system.

BY KEVIN BROWN

Plymouth city and township officials got together to create a joint fire department, but an effort to jointly buy voting equipment has fallen through.

On Tuesday, the township board of trustees voted to purchase a touch-screen voting system. The week before on Jan. 2, the city commission voted to buy a ballot-marking scanning system, while urging township trustees to join them to save money.

Privately, both township trustees and city commissioners shook their heads over the choice favored by their counterparts on the other government board.

Some trustees said they were surprised that City Manager Steve Walters wouldn't want to go with a cutting-edge high-tech system, favored by township officials, as Walters is a computer buff.

Meanwhile, some city officials expressed surprise township officials would favor a new system they said was unproven. Plus, they said that with school officials also planning to use the scanning system, township officials were passing up an opportunity to save money through a three-way purchase.

The three sides began talking last fall about buying a new system together, to save money. But after City Clerk Linda Langmesser and Township Clerk Marilyn Massengill researched available systems, they came to differing conclusions on which system best served voters.

And with training on new equipment looming as a primary election looms in March, decisions on which

Mild weather draws crowds to ice festival

BY JEFF COUNTS
STAFF WRITER

It all came together this past weekend in Plymouth to make the 14th Annual Ice Sculpture Spectacular the best ever.

Temperatures were mild for January and the crowds came — an estimated 500,000 to the delight of merchants.

"We're as busy now as we were during Christmas," said Diane Macky and Larion Kasmier who were handling their many customers at the Wild Wings Gallery.

Festival director Mike Watts said crowds were the best ever, taking note that the line to get into The Gathering had stretched along Penniman and onto Union since things got rolling on Thursday.

"The city crews and the carvers who have been here for the 14 years of the festival say this is the biggest crowd ever," said Watts. "We don't even have much competition from the Auto Show. There's really nothing new to see there."

The crowds got so large that downtown streets were closed on Saturday afternoon. "It's something we haven't done before," said Watts.

Last year, temperatures soared to near 50, melting many of the carvings, and two years ago temperatures were so cold that they put a chill on the crowds.

But this year, even the federal budget crisis couldn't shove the ice festival off the front pages and newscasts. "We've had every major television station out here," said Watts. "And I've done interviews with just about all the radio stations."

The only thing to mar the festival was a power reduction at Kellogg Park and the downtown area due to an underground transformer failure at about 7:30 p.m. Thursday. "It was a low voltage situation, not a complete outage," said Detroit Edison Spokesman Scott Simon. The outage affected traffic signals off of Kellogg Park on Main Street, and caused lights to dim.

However, that didn't bother Adam Knight, 4, and his parents, Melody and Gary Knight who were on hand for the appearance of Mickey and Minnie Mouse at the student carving site.

"He likes to watch the carvers, too," Adam's mom said.

Communities, schools mull how to work together

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

For the first time since 1988, representatives from local government and Plymouth-Canton Community Schools met jointly — this time inviting chamber of commerce representatives — to talk about "Unity Through Awareness."

Hosted by Plymouth-Canton school Superintendent Charles Little, the well-attended gathering convened Wednesday at Tonda Elementary School in Canton.

Speakers were asked to address "What's Ahead." After their formal presentations, government and business leaders brainstormed ways to rally community support for joint projects in the areas of recreation, purchasing, libraries, and assisting youth.

Canton Township Supervisor Tom Yack and Little said they'll be ready to unveil soon the goals of a newly-formed "youth initiative group" they predict will be well-received. Active in the initiative are religious, civic and political leaders and educators, said Little. "We have to make the community stronger for young people. There's a lot to indicate there is the enthusiasm to do it."

Plymouth City Commissioner Doug Miller asked what could be done to coordinate efforts in recreation. "It seems disjointed and duplicative," he said. Working jointly on recreational projects "would be a better use of taxpayer dollars."

Yack said that possibly, the schools could provide the land and the municipalities the funding for improved athletic facilities, jogging paths, etc.

School Trustee Sue Davis said such cooperation is becoming an economic necessity.

Davis has long proposed combining school and community library operations. In the past, whenever anyone suggested extending high school library hours into the afternoon and evening to relieve crowding at the community libraries, former school Superintendent John Hoban nixed the idea as cost-prohibitive. The schools don't have the money to keep librarians working after school, he said.

"It seems to me there is a workable way to do this," said Davis. "Maybe the communities could help out with financing, or we could get volunteer librarians. There is a wealth of skill and resources in the community."

Plymouth Commissioner Dennis Shrewsbury said he would like to see "an effort on an informal basis. An authority might be what we do eventually, but I would rather see a collaborative effort with the communities and schools, versus forcing something on the community."

While emphasizing that the district's first responsibility is to educate kids, Little was receptive to the ideas. "There's a good rapport here, and it's building," he said. "I sense within the leadership of these groups that there is a lot of connectedness. The school district is starting to recognize some broader responsibilities."

"Our futures depend on these kids. If you are past 40, our retirements depend on them," he added.

Canton Treasurer Elaine Kirchgatter raised concerns about the pervasiveness of drugs and alcohol in the school system, recommending use of a drug-

Schools to mark King Day

Plymouth-Canton schools are commemorating the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in some creative ways. "Passing the Torch, Igniting the Vision of a New Generation" is the theme of the national celebration.

Isbister Elementary principal Lee Harrison will host Ernie Robinson, a dramatist and motivational speaker from Dynamic School Assemblies of Clawson.

Labeled a slow learner in school, Robinson went on to graduate from college. A former insurance executive, Robinson now has his own consulting business. "In his talks, he emphasizes self-esteem, goal realization, and strong self-belief," said Harrison.

Robinson will speak to an assembly of kindergartners and first- and second-graders at 1:30 p.m., and to third-, fourth- and fifth-graders at 2:30 p.m.

First-graders in Carol Breed's class at Bird Elementary are creating a mosaic with Dr. King as their theme.

At Central Middle School, principal Barbara Church has arranged for social studies students to see a student-produced video on the slain civil rights worker. King's "I Have a Dream" speech is included, as are excerpts from students from Plymouth-Canton Educational Park, who produced the video.

Central students will view the video in their classrooms on the schools' closed-circuit Dynacom system.

At Canton and Salem high schools, a 10-minute video will be broadcast during second hour.

Area veterans also recognized Dr. King. At the Ann Arbor VA Medical Center, veterans invited members of the public to a special celebration Thursday.

Gerald K. Hinch, the VA's deputy assistant secretary for the Office of Equal Employment Opportunity, served as keynote speaker. He addressed the VA's national theme for Dr. King's birthday.

Jack R. Sibal

Veteran a giver

Plymouth resident Jack R. Sibal, a 47-year-old disabled ex-Marine who saved money to buy toys for underprivileged children, died last week at home. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Sibal, who lived on a sparse income, cut down on take-out food, movies and other luxuries to save nearly $1,000 to buy toys for charities.

"I had such a burning desire to help children," Sibal said in a Thursday, Jan. 4, article in the Community Life section of the Observer. "I was an orphan myself and that is what really gave me the inspiration to do something for these children who had nothing. I could really relate to many of the things (they're going through)."

sniffing dog paid for by Canton taxpayers.

The problem is so pervasive among youth and their sometimes enabling parents, said Little, that "a dog will not change the behavior of people. It's absolutely everywhere."

Ginny Hauck, manager of Canton

Place, served on the Plymouth-Canton Substance Abuse Task Force and was among those trained to intervene and counsel. She suggested a reunion of the group.

"Why not bring us back together to brainstorm and see what we could do to be real proactive and help? We could be an extended arm to the community."

Little proposed that the group meet again this summer.

School board President David Artley said that Little occasionally meets with Yack, Plymouth City Manager Steve Walters, Plymouth Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy, and chamber representatives. "That might be a place to start having these conversations," Artley said.

School board meets Monday

The Plymouth-Canton Board of Education meets at 7 p.m. Monday, Jan. 15, at the E.J. McClelland Educational Center, 454 S. Harvey in Plymouth.

The Extra Miler award will be presented after roll call, the pledge of allegiance and adoption of the agenda.

If you've never seen snow before, a first look at the Plymouth Ice Spectacular has to be a real mind-blower.

"It's amazing that they could make anything like that," said

Leticia Wisecarver, a native of Brazil who now lives in Tennessee with husband Mark. The couple joined hundreds, make that thousands, of others who trekked from around metro Detroit and around the country to view the nation's No. 1 ice carving event.

"I used to live in Michigan," explained Mark Wisecarver. "We drove 600 miles from Johnson City, Tennessee, I told her she had to come and see it," he said, as his wife snapped pictures while they strolled past sculptures displayed in The Gathering.

"Some of the things I liked in past years are the larger things; one year they had a sailing ship," Mark Wisecarver said. The couple, who arrived in town Wednesday night, planned to stay all weekend for the festival.

Leticia Wisecarver said her favorite carving display involved kids skating on a pond.

Sheri Keilly of Novi, with daughter Alexis and neighbor Pam Lazarus with daughters Anna and Katy, viewed sculptures near the Kellogg Park fountain before joining festivalgoers gathered around some ice carvers at work.

"We were just trying to find something to do with the kids," said Keilly, who chose a stocking cap and down coat to help keep warm. Her friend Pam Lazarus opted for a down coat with attached hood to complete her cold weather outfit.

"The reason we came out, is we were watching TV and saw it," said Romana Parbo of Detroit with friend Margrito Gonzalez of Ecorse.

"It's beautiful, it takes a lot of skill," Gonzalez said. "We like to come out, but it's cold," he added.

Which sculptures did they like best? "They're all beautiful," Gonzalez said.

Mark Wira, whose office is just off the park, viewed sculptures in the park along Main Street with son Nathan. "Last year it was 5 degrees, it was so cold people who came by the office to see it could barely go outside," he said, adding this year the weather was more tolerable.

Nathan, checking out carved likenesses of cartoon characters, "likes Casper," his dad said.

"It's the first one (ice festival) we've been to, said Don McCutcheon of Rochester, with wife Barb.

"I was saying to her as we were crossing the street we should be wearing long underwear," Don McCutcheon said.

Even Pinky got a ribbon.

It was at the Fall Festival pet show. My daughter's pet rabbit Pinky won a ribbon on his first try.

Fast forward to the Celebrity Ice Carving Competition on Thursday at the Plymouth Ice Spectacular. Two grown men pooled their efforts — Plymouth Observer photographer Bill Bresler and me — and we couldn't win jack.

And this was our second try. You're the man, Pinky.

The Celebrity Ice Carving Competition happens every year. They probably asked us to carve because they didn't have enough real celebrities.

Among those competing were Judy Coy from WJR, Joe Wade Formicola from Young Country-FM, Judge Ron Lowe and Dr. Tom Morse, and some folks from Channel 50.

Never caught their names, because to heck with taking notes — It's time for some serious ice carving!

First, it's important to think up a striking subject, one that could bring acclaim to the carvers. Most celebrities timidly opt to carve the logo or symbol of the company they work for.

For example, Kevin O'Neill and Bill Bailey of Budweiser did a Bud Ice bottle. Judy Coy did "Old Man Winter" and worked in the WJR logo.

But not Bill and me. Last year, we did an ice statue of Elvis Presley.

Not only was it a welcome change from the usual ice swans and dragons, it was a crowd pleaser and a tribute to a great musician. It didn't win.

This year, Bill wanted to return to the Elvis theme. "But we've got to do something different," I said.

Bill came up with a great idea: How about a tribute to Jerry Garcia! We're both big Greatful Dead fans, and this seemed most fitting after Jerry's recent passing.

I guess we're setting a tradition of honoring dead musicians at the ice fest. Maybe next year we could do a Buddy Holly-Lynard Skynard-Rick Nelson tribute and carve an airplane crashing. Then, when the judges come around to view it, we could douse it with kerosene and set it on fire!

Back to the Jerry Garcia tribute. The idea's good, we said, but what do we actually carve? Garcia's head? Too tough, and potentially so lame as to be an embarrassment to ourselves and Dead fans.

How about Garcia's right hand! True-blue Deadheads know that Jerry lost the tip of his middle finger in a childhood accident.

So that's what we chose. Bill brought a photo of his own hand for a model — like we really need it, Bill — and some tools from home. The ice festival organizers provided a chain saw and we started hacking.

Some of the older folks who stopped to watch could be overheard saying, "It's a hand." When I would explain to some what it meant, they said, "Oh," with a distant look in their eyes, the kind people get when trying to avoid an oddball.

Of course, casual Dead fans, Dead haters and those who know little of the band wouldn't know about Garcia's missing finger. Could it be that our tribute, so noble to us, is just weird to others?

"Probably," Bill said.

A boy of 10 stopped to ask, "Sir, why is the middle finger missing on that hand?" Halfway into my explanation, he ran away.

We finished it off with the legend "Jerry Garcia 1942-95" underneath. The judges passed us by, like last year, awarding prize ribbons to others.

Our sculpture may be lame, but Jerry was awesome.

system to buy were required this month.

City officials estimated $175,100 in savings shared three ways by a joint purchase.

On why she prefers the touch-screen system, Massengill said, "I have spent two years looking at this. I have gotten articles from all over the United States."

Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy said the township board was impressed by the touch-screen system's ability to make accurate recounts of votes. "In Westland when they did a recount, it was right on the money," she said.

"The board asked a question regarding the comfort of seniors using the system," McCarthy said. Massengill told the board that a survey done in Burton, Mich., after that city had gone to the touch-screen system, showed 100 percent of seniors said it simplified voting.

Massengill said the scan system produces a different recount tally every time.

"I truly feel this is the best equipment for the citizens," Massengill said.

Meanwhile, Langmesser said the Optic Scan system has been in use longer and is more proven than the newer Unilect touch-screen system.

"What I'm looking at at this point is both of the companies selling Optic Scan have been in business a number of years, the surrounding communities have a backup if there's a problem," Langmesser said.

By a table prepared by the city administration, had all three parties joined to buy the scanner, it would cost the city $20,694, the township $68,980 and the schools $82,776.

The township's cost to buy the touch-screen system on its own is $179,500, according to the table.

McCarthy said, "It's getting the best equipment, our main concern is having accurate elections. The reliability of this equipment means a great deal, you can't have spoiled ballots."

The township's current punch-card system has had a few problems in recent years. In the August 1992 township primary election, 13 percent of ballots were spoiled.

Winter term enrollment increases at Schoolcraft

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Schoolcraft College is seeing a 1-percent increase in enrollment for the winter term.

As of Wednesday night with two more days of registration left, 8,894 students had enrolled in traditional credit programs for the winter 1996 term as compared to 8,893 for the winter 1995 term, according to John Tomey, dean of student services.

Between 50 and 100 more students were expected to enroll in the final two days of registration, Tomey said.

Enrollment task force chairwoman Sandra Florek is pleased. On Wednesday, Florek, dean of marketing and development, gave the college's Board of Trustees an update on how the college is marketed and how that can translate into a positive image and higher enrollment figures.

She has been working on ways to increase enrollment since last spring.

"Our image develops from many things," she said, including what people read, see, hear and personally experience.

After a slight decline in enrollment between the 1994 and 1995 winter terms, the college is one of the few in the area to see an increase in enrollment for the present term.

For example, Henry Ford Community College is reporting an 8-percent decrease in registrations for credit hours, and Oakland Community College also is down 8 percent in credit hours, Florek said.

As part of the college's drive to increase enrollment, volunteers called potential students who applied to the college, but didn't follow through and register. "We got a positive response. People were very impressed by the fact that we called," she said.

The college has bought print and radio advertising to spark interest. A radio spot saying "The first step to a better future begins with you" ran on WLTJ radio in December, Florek said.

A fall promotion of 80,000 fliers in the Observer Newspapers describing the weekend college program brought the return of 150 reply cards and more than 100 telephone calls, Florek said.

When an open house was held, 85 people attended, and open houses are valuable, Florek said, because research shows 80 percent of those who come to an open house will eventually sign up for a class.

After Schoolcraft College officials participated in an open house at The Summit community center in Canton Township recently, registration for an economics course offered there went from 14 to 28 people.

"We're planning a really major open house that will promote the fall semester," she said.

On College Night and Financial Aid Night thousands turn out, Florek said.

A small part of a marketing program, but "the thing everyone wants," is the brochure, Florek said. Recently, those who returned cards attached to a brochure received a personal letter from the dean and a follow-up telephone call from a volunteer.

"The personal touch really and truly is effective," she said.

Another marketing tool is the schedule, and for the first time Florek's office took over the production of schedules. Florek said she sought input and implemented improvements. The continuing education schedule is also going to become more of a marketing piece, she said.

"What we're really trying to do is polish what we're doing," Florek said. "The best selling tool is a satisfied customer."

Another marketing detail is getting out schedules to people who have taken classes at Schoolcraft, but who live outside of the ZIP code areas that Schoolcraft covers.

Increased hours for telephone registration, fliers in classes reminding students about enrollment, and faculty volunteers who make follow-up calls to students are other ways the college is being marketed, according to Florek.

Schoolcraft College studies its mission, values

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

It's a college on a mission. Schoolcraft College officials took a look at the college's mission statement and a list of value statements at a Wednesday workshop meeting.

This year marks the 35th anniversary of the college, and "it's time to review the mission statement," said college President Richard McDowell.

Along with the mission statement, McDowell presented a list of value statements for the board to consider, revise and later endorse.

The mission and value statements will also become the basis for decision making, he said. "We are getting requests for more and more programs with no funds to follow," he said. This would help set priorities.

"We are a very important resource for the community," he said. Besides full-time students working on degrees, there are also people who use the college as a resource for the library, computer labs, continuing education classes as well as people who attend plays, concerts and dinners, he said.

Trustee Mary Breen called the mission and value statements excellent. "I'm impressed," she said.

The statement includes the mission of the college "to serve its community as an educational and cultural center and to provide an environment conducive to the pursuit of quality education."

It also lists the college's purposes: to provide programs and courses that allow students to transfer to other institutions and develop a broad range of knowledge and skills, provide developmental programs and courses appropriate to the open-door philosophy of the college, and provide guidance, continuing education and community service programs and activities.

The proposed list of values for the college includes: recognizing students are the reason for the college's existence and student success is paramount to the college's mission; adhering to ethical practices in the classroom, boardroom and business operations; valuing diversity in students, staff and programming; committing to having a positive intellectual, social and economic impact on the communities the college serves; and responding proactively to the needs and standards of the community, businesses and transfer institutions.

It also includes: achieving and holding a leadership position in academics, management practices, employee relations and institutional innovation; striving to maintain a supportive, cordial and aesthetically pleasing environment for students, staff and community; encouraging lifelong learning in students and staff by providing current programs using the most effective instructional delivery methods; and believing that higher education should remain accessible, both financially and geographically.

McDowell asked the board for input if there are areas not covered.

County eyes kiosk service

Wayne County is looking at installing kiosks in the suburbs for some services as a way for residents to avoid trips to downtown Detroit.

The county is going the route of electronic kiosks, instead of offices that would need personnel, as a less costly way to serve suburban residents, yet move services closer, according to Teola P. Hunter, Wayne County clerk. Hunter outlined the plans when she addressed the monthly meeting of the Conference of Western Wayne Friday at Summit on the Park in Canton Township.

The county has information on systems from IBM and Unisys, she said. Unisys has the best system to provide what the county wants, Hunter said.

Some of the services the county is looking at offering by kiosk are providing death certificate copies and processing marriage license applications. Plans are to have the kiosks accept credit cards as payment for services, Hunter said.

Although the kiosk system would make it possible to apply for a marriage license electronically, Hunter said. However, the applicants would have to go downtown to pick it up, she said.

"That would eliminate at least one trip downtown," she said.

Now getting a marriage license requires two trips downtown to the City-County Building — one to apply for the license and the other to pick it up.

Plans call for implementing two kiosks in the suburbs, she said. Since the city of Livonia already has a kiosk system, the county is interested in adding on to that system, Hunter said. Southland Mall in Taylor is being considered as the other site, she said. Networking onto other systems would make it less cost prohibitive, Hunter said.

Other parts of county government are also interested in "piggybacking" onto the kiosk system, she said.

The system is expected to be funded this year and go on line before fall, she said.

LINDA BACHRACK

See the softer side of the auto show

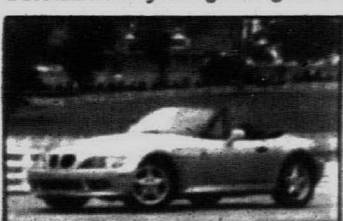

As I meandered through the auto show this week, I reminisced about the cars I've owned and how the models have changed as my lifestyle has changed. I think women are in some ways more practical and savvy car buyers than men.

We are not easily swayed by bells and whistles, or even status. We want a safe environment for our children, solid doors and anti-lock brakes, easy accessibility for car seats and grocery bags, quiet, comfort, and sporty (yet feminine) styling.

My first car was a practical Toyota Corolla that dependably transported me to and from college and expanded somehow to hold trunks and overflowing boxes on move-in days. After I was married and became pregnant, we bought a metallic green Oldsmobile Cutlass with a swivel driver's seat that allowed a growing tummy to get in and out of the car with ease.

As the family grew, the vehicles grew from a cumbersome brown Plymouth sedan to the first of a string of station wagons. We had a Chevrolet "woodie" (remember the snazzy woodgrain sides?) another slightly smaller Chevy wagon, and finally, a yellow Volvo station wagon. The Volvo, with standard transmission and absolutely no frills, was our car for the long haul — too expensive, but built to last.

And it did. Our kids, the neighborhood kids, and various soccer and swim teams depended upon the big, boxy banana-mobile for more than 10 years. It was heavy duty, safe as a steel vault and didn't have a cup holder, a cassette player or automatic anything. Imagine! Finally, when the Volvo made its last carpool run, we opted for what the kids called the "sports wagon." Yes, we were still at the station wagon stage (which today is the minivan stage), but we wanted sleeker styling.

Today, with two kids in college and a 16-year-old at home, I finally have a car that can not, and will never, hold more than five people. Phew! But, I'm at a brand new stage in my life. I'm ready for small, fun and sporty. My favorites at the auto show? Just park that BMW Z3 roadster in my driveway. Or give me a Miata, an Acura Integra sports coupe or even that sexy little Saturn SC2 in white or light plum.

What did other women choose as their favorites at the auto show? Rianne Doss of Detroit drooled over the Chrysler Sebring. Chris Morrione, public relations director at Hudson's, seconds the Sebring selection.

"I've been wanting a Jeep Cherokee," she said. "But, I think I could easily get my boys and the dog in the backseat of that gold Sebring convertible."

With a one-year-old baby, Marilyn Sawyer of Troy, likes the four-door Jimmy or the Mercury Villager. "The Jimmy is big enough for my very tall husband and it's easy to get the car seat in and out," she said. "Plus I love the fun colors." Sport utility fans should check out the new Toyota RAV4, the fave of Susan Thomas from Livonia. "It's new and cool, more rounded than the Explorer," she said.

Saturn SC2

The disappointment of the show? The Cadillac Catera may not have much going for it in the looks department. It was described by onlookers as "boring" and "styled like the old Taurus SHO." But it does have a three-driver memory system that automatically sets your mirrors and seat, heated seats, heated water squirts and swing-out cup holders, amenities that this woman definitely finds to her liking.

New Hudson's plans services

Hudson's new Somerset North store in Troy will be a modern version of the "way Hudson's used to be," according to the woman chosen to manage the operation.

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
STAFF WRITER

Here's the scenario.

It's September 1996. You're putting away your summer sling-backs and white leather sandals and you realize you need new shoes for all those fall suits. So what do you do?

You've been meaning to check out the new Somerset North mall in Troy. After all, Nordstrom which opened in August, is famous for its shoe selections and excellent customer service. And that much-publicized new Hudson's is at the other end of the center. Where will you buy your shoes?

"Why Hudson's of course," laughed Judith McCabe, Hudson's manager of the soon-to-be Somerset North store. "We'll be the store of choice. You'll find we've struck a balance between service and sales by listening to our customers. We'll also have the right merchandise. We have a strong vision for this store and I intend to mold it into what our customers have been asking for. I can't wait to make it happen!"

McCabe, recently moved to Troy from Grand Rapids where she managed operations at Hudson's Woodland Mall store. She said she asked for the Somerset North position the minute she learned of the company's plans to open store number 22 at the new shopping center.

"I've been in retail almost all of my life, coming from a retail family," said the mother of two grown daughters. "I began my career at the Penney Co. I've opened several other stores for Hudson's."

In Grand Rapids, McCabe was active in many community events in addition to her retail duties. To escape the long work hours and mountains of paperwork, she and her significant other enjoy walking and reading at their Lake Michigan cottage. But she admitted spare time is minimal these days.

McCabe is personally interviewing personnel for sales associate posi-

'Payless' for your groceries

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

Looking to lower your grocery bills? Janet Janiga has the answer. The 40-something mother of four knows how difficult it is to stretch food dollars. That's why at Payless Groceries in Livonia, Janiga offers canned foods, cereals, dry goods, cleaning products, and health and beauty aids at discount. Compared to major chain stores, the slightly blemished seconds drastically reduce costs.

"We're a deep discount store with 85 to 90 percent of the products at half off except for coffee, pet foods, and diapers. When cereal is $4 a box, this is a real bargain at $2," said Janiga holding up a box of brand-name corn flakes. "And because it's discount, we don't deal with anything perishable, no produce, no bread."

If you cook or bake, it's no secret the prices of bottled herbs and spices have skyrocketed. Caraway seeds cost nearly $3 for about 2 ounces on average. At Payless, the same size by Durkee, a trusted brand, is $1.40. How does she do it? Janiga is able to sell at mark-down prices by purchasing damaged or discontinued merchandise. In most cases, crushed packaging does not affect the quality of a product. Stores used to sell damaged goods in a special area. No more. It's more efficient to broker the products.

Unlike consumers, Janiga buys after a holiday. Seasonal items like red and green tree-shaped marshmallows create headaches for major retailers after Jan. 1, but they're gold for Janiga. She buys up non-perishable items, paper cups and plates, Halloween costumes and Christmas cards, Stocking shelves: Janet Janiga of Payless Groceries in Livonia puts boxes of reduced priced canned goods on the selling floor for customers who love a bargain.

JIM JAGDFELD/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

then stores them for next year. This strategy allows her to sell three heart-shaped aluminum baking pans for a $1 just in time for Valentine's Day.

"As soon as the holidays are over, retailers want that merchandise out, or items are nearing the expiration date. Sometimes a company changes their labels and the old stuff has to go. I work with food brokers who might have a pallet with 11 cases of something. They want to free up space so they call me," said the Wayne/Westland native.

The stock changes daily at the four year-old store, which employs one full-time person besides Janiga. New products come in on a regular basis and are promptly placed on shelves.

"We have people coming in every day to see what's new. I can order some items consistently, like County Fare baking products, because their mill is in Monroe. Others you'll only find one time," she explained. "But, that doesn't seem to bother bargain shoppers. You just never know what you'll find in here. They might not find the brand they usually use, but because of the half-off concept, they try a product they might not normally use."

Marketing strategies like placing fancy displays at the ends of the aisles to attract your eye and wallet, don't exist at Payless. In fact, some of the items still remain in half boxes. Prices are marked by hand with a felt tip pen. Janiga moves slow selling products like hearts of celery by first slashing them from $2.89 a can to $1.45, then offering an extra incentive to buy one, get one free. If customers purchase a total of $20, they receive a free item from the store's pegboard, which includes a range of kitchen helpers from spatulas to meat thermometers.

"It's demand on supply. If something isn't moving, I discount. Who shops at the discount grocery? Payless primarily appeals to families and senior citizens. Janiga's customer base hails from Livonia, Bedford, Southfield and Farmington Hills. While Payless accepts food stamps, no manufacturer coupons are allowed. Time spent processing the coupons would eliminate any savings for the customer.

Dentistry in the 90s

THE IMPLANT OPTION

Those who would like to replace lost teeth without having to resort to partial or full dentures may have the option of using dental implants. Whether used to replace all, a few, or only one missing tooth, this type of dental restoration has none of the characteristic disadvantages often associated with dentures. Because implants make use of titanium anchors placed firmly in the jaw, they are permanently set and will not slip. As a result, when the prosthetic teeth are attached to the anchors by connectors (abutments), the end products have both the feel and look of the patient's own teeth. Those patients with sufficient jawbone to support dental implants are the best candidates for the procedure. Once in place, implants require patients to follow hygiene habits scrupulously. For more details on implant dentistry, ask the dentist about all that it involves.

Dental implants represent new hope for lost smiles. At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we want your smile to be the best possible. If you have any questions about implants, please feel free to call us at 478-2110 to schedule a convenient appointment. We have the experience and surgical expertise to evaluate dental implants as an alternative for you. We're located at 19171 Merriman Road, where you can feel confident that all services are performed by a professional and dedicated staff. We feature "twilight sleep," for painless dentistry. TASTE BUDS

CHEF LARRY JANES

Use your slow cooker to make dinner easy

During 1995, I was inundated with books that suggested I "Entertain on the Run," make "To Die For" desserts, Learn "365 Different Ways To Make Pasta," and if all that wasn't enough, share "6001 Food Facts and Chef's Secrets."

I've been prodded to learn "How to Bake," how to "Dine in Grand Style" and even "How to Have my Cake and Eat It, Too." I want to cook something easy. I want to cook something fast. I want the house to smell like I've been working for hours, but all I want to do is dump everything in a pot, plug it in, and eight hours later, I want everyone at the Janes Gang table to sit down and enjoy it together.

I was pressed into service by a friend who needed to borrow my checkerboard cake pan. After searching for hours, I decided to clean the fruit cellar that houses all my eccentric treasures. It was then that I came across the aqua blue Rival box bearing a 23-year-old Crock-Pot we received as a wedding present just as many years ago.

Ever since the Crock-Pot made its way into the American kitchen in the early 1970s, millions of cooks throughout the country have been using a slow cooker or Crock-Pot, best known by the popular Rival trademark name of the same. Crock-Pots were designed for slow, moist heat cooking.

Dreaming of dinner, I headed to the grocery store for a too-tough blade-cut chuck roast, bag of potatoes, some carrots, and triple package of French onion soup mix. That's all you need to prepare a Crock-Pot dinner for four with enough left over for lunch.

Chicken nowadays is just as expensive as beef, so you couldn't cut costs there. Vegetarians will enjoy the slow-baked flavor derived from vegetarian chili or ratatouille.

Types of slow cookers

The most common, and still the best selling, is the basic slow cooker. It is round, with two temperature settings (low at 200 degrees F. and high at 300 degrees F.). The heating coils are encased in the sides of the metal unit that houses the crockery insert. This, in turn, allows for continuous, even heat to avoid scorching and burning. You can't beat it, and at under $20, it continues to be a steal.

Another type of slow cooker is dubbed a multi-purpose cooker that steams, fries and roasts in addition to slow cooking. Because the heating element is at the bottom of the pot and cycles on and off during cooking, some long cooking recipes might require stirring and cooking temperature adjustments. Scorching is a problem.

The last type of slow cooker is a removable metal cooking vessel that sits on an electric heating base. Again, uneven cooking, sticking and scorching might be a problem. Since the two latter appliances both sell in excess of the best old-time slow cooker, I suggest you stick with the basics.

Beginning in 1996, the first book I open and use is "The Best Slow Cooker Cookbook Ever" by Natalie Haughton (copyright 1995, Harper Collins, $17.95). It's about time good cookbooks come spiral bound (this one does and lays flat on a counter top). It uses recipes with ingredients like "one 28-ounce can diced tomatoes." The most exotic ingredient in the book is curry powder and with recipe titles like "Turkey Mexicali," you can be sure that most of the family, including the pickiest 7 year olds, will like them.

Vegans and people looking to increase their dietary intake of rice, grains, fruits and vegetables will also enjoy this book. If I had to complain about one thing, it's simply that the book doesn't contain the nutritional breakdowns that I have come to rely on for a more healthy eating regimen.

- Here are a few tips that Haughton suggests when using a slow cooker:
- For best results, fill the slow cooker half to three quarters full.
 - Purchase roasts and other large cuts of meats in a size and shape that will conveniently fit into your slow cooker.
 - To end up with the least amount of fat in finished dishes, use lean meats well trimmed of fat and skinless poultry.
 - To avoid heat loss, refrain from removing the lid during the first three quarters of cooking time. Remove the lid only to stir or to check for doneness.

STAFF WRITER

"Life's busy, especially in the winter," said Cathy Dunn of Troy whose recipe for "Best Darn Chili" is featured in "With Warmest Regards" a collection of 150 easy-to-make recipes from Hudson's, Dayton's and Marshall Field's Customers. "Everyone loves my chili. It's easy to make, feeds a lot of people, lasts a few days, and you can freeze it too."

Dunn's recipe was exactly the kind of recipe the Dayton Hudson Corporation was looking for when they decided to publish "With Warmest Regards." The book contains recipes for appetizers, soups and salads, main courses, side dishes, and desserts. It is thoughtfully dedicated to "Our Customers and Our Communities," and available at Hudson's stores for $11.95. All net profits from the book will be donated to United Way. Tomie dePaola, a children's book author and illustrator, created the whimsical illustrations peppered throughout.

Handy features are the space for "Cooks Notes" alongside every recipe, easy-to-read recipe format, and interesting tidbits about the cook behind it.

"I think it's a wonderful idea - traditional cooking, family-oriented recipes," said Dunn. "I sent in my recipe on a day when I was paying bills. I thought what the heck and sent it with my Hudson's bill. Months passed. When they told me my recipe was chosen I said 'you've got to be kidding.'"

Her recipe, like others in the 210-page cookbook, is a family favorite. "My husband loves chili," she said. "When I met him I had my mom's recipe and kept changing it."

Ellen Zehnder of Troy shared her Great Aunt Mary's Nut Rolls recipe. "My aunt died about 16 years ago," said Zehnder. "She made these nut rolls around the holidays. They are wonderful. It's a tribute to her that the recipe is printed in the book. She was a wonderful lady."

Margaret Mourad of West Bloomfield shared a Tabbouleh Salad recipe from her mother's collection. "I have fond, vivid childhood memories of going to our yard and picking fresh mint to add to it," she said. "My mother never had a recipe. If someone needed a recipe you had to have her put the ingredients in a measuring cup and write it down. Tabbouleh is one of my favorite salads."

Amy Gable of White Lake Township, formerly Farmington Hills, made Chicken and Spinach Lasagna Alfredo at her first dinner party. "It went over big," said Gable explaining why she submitted it for consideration in "With Warmest Regards."

Other local cooks featured in the book include: Maria DeLuca, Livonia; Bridget Haubold, Birmingham; Leslie Ward, Bloomfield Hills and Estelle Makrouer, Bloomfield.

The cooks I talked to had much in common. While all of them enjoy cooking, they said they had less time for it, and liked easy, quick recipes.

Zehnder, works part-time and enjoys making big breakfasts for her family on Sundays. She bakes on weekends, and has a tendency to cook lighter meals during the week.

When she was growing up,

Dunn said her mom would make a full dinner every night and roast beef on Sundays.

"It seems like we're going out more," said Dunn who enjoys making simple, one pot meals. "We like to grill and use our barbecue year-round. Once in awhile I'll surprise my husband with a gourmet meal."

Mourad's husband Bob is in partnership with his two brothers and owns Elias Brothers Big Boy Restaurants in Union Lake, Romeo, Howell, Port Huron and Marysville.

Their children are grown, and while they enjoy eating out, Mourad said she still cooks quite a bit. "When my husband comes home he likes to relax," she said. "I liked the cookbook. I made a few things in it, and thought it was nice for Hudson's to do it. The recipes aren't real hard, and they don't call for unusual ingredients. I had everything on hand, and didn't have to run to the store."

Gable was an exception to the others. "I cook every day," she said. "My husband Jonathan is pretty spoiled."

Washington's Columbia Crest is a hot brand

Columbia Crest is not a new Washington State winery. Back in the late 1970s, plans were drafted for the country French manor house style winery in Paterson, not far from the Columbia River Gorge.

If you watch TV, you've seen The Frugal Gourmet Jeff Smith commercials talking about the wines of Columbia Crest. Depending on how you're affected by advertising, you may or may not know much about the wines.

But the truth is that Columbia Crest has won recognition from within the wine industry, not just wine competitions in some obscure corner of the world. These wines have been called Hot Brand, Brand Builder and Fast Track. These are wines worth knowing.

Across the country, a baker's dozen quality Columbia Crest wines with a Columbia Valley designation (white label) from every popular varietal retails between $6 and $10 per bottle.

"We've developed a style and we try to stick with it," winemaker Doug Gore said. Chardonnay in the white label series, has an ambitious barrel program for such level-headed pricing. It is barrel fermented in 80 percent new oak that is 2/3 French and 1/3 American.

Columbia Crest also has a Barrel Select series (black label) for four varietals, chardonnay, cabernet sauvignon, merlot and pinot noir. These bottlings range between $10 and $15. In this series, the chardonnay, selected from an estate vineyard, is barrel fermented in 100 percent new Burgundy-coopered French oak. To enhance this program, a new barrel aging facility has just been completed.

Gore cited two reasons for accelerating quality of Columbia Crest wines. "It's both the vineyard and winery," he said. In addition to his time in the winery, Gore is spending more time in the vineyard. After he makes a batch of wine from a specific grower, he tastes it with the grower. "It has taken time for us to get growers educated about the practices necessary to grow quality fruit in Washington state," Gore continued. Basically, what Gore tells growers is that there are no smoke and mirrors - no tricks. A taste of wine from a well-managed vineyard against wine from a less well-managed block reveals all. The second factor occurred in 1992 when Columbia Crest started barrel fermentation for chardonnay. "This is the taste that people want and it made the greatest impact on both quality and sales," Gore admitted.

Another interesting wine from Columbia Crest is the semillon-chardonnay blend. While semillon is not as popular in other regions as it is in Washington state, the blend of the varietal with chardonnay has a growing number of fans. It's a unique wine in which two unlikely bedfellows gain complexity from each other in a blended wine. In 1989,

BEST DARN CHILI

- 2 pounds ground sirloin
- 1 pound boneless pork loin, cut into very small pieces
- 2 tablespoons peanut oil
- 1 tablespoon cayenne pepper (or to taste)
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 4 cloves garlic, minced

- 1 tablespoon ground, cumin
- 1 (18-ounce) can tomato paste
- Salt to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1 (28-ounce) can tomatoes, undrained
- 1 (15 1/2-ounce) can hot chili beans, drained
- 1 (16-ounce) can pinto beans, drained and rinsed
- 2 (15-ounce) cans black beans, drained and rinsed
- 1/4 to 1/2 cups beer

Garnish: grated cheddar cheese, minced scallion, sour cream, oyster crackers

In a mixing bowl, combine beef and pork. Knead oil into meat. Heat a large, deep-sided skillet over medium heat. Add meat and brown very well (about 10 minutes). Drain, transfer to an 8 quart stock pot, and heat over medium heat. Mix in cayenne pepper. Stir in onion and garlic. Cook, stirring constantly, until onion becomes translucent (about 3 minutes). Add cumin and tomato paste.

Mix thoroughly. Stir in salt, paprika, and chili powder. Cook for 5 minutes.

Stir in tomatoes and their liquid and beans. Increase heat to medium-high and cook, stirring until mixture boils vigorously (4 to 5 minutes). Reduce heat to low and simmer for 10 minutes.

Slowly pour beer into mixture until chili reaches desired thickness. Simmer, uncovered, for 30 minutes, stirring occasionally. Ladle into individual bowls, top with cheese and scallion, and serve with sour cream and oyster crackers on the side.

Serves 12-14.
Cathy Dunn's recipe.

1/2 cup minced fresh mint leaves

Juice of 3 medium lemons

1/4 cup olive oil

Salt and black pepper to taste

Soak cracked wheat in water for 10 minutes. Drain well and transfer to a large bowl. Add tomatoes, parsley, scallions, and mint to bowl and mix well. In a small bowl, mix lemon juice, oil, salt and pepper. Pour over salad and mix well. Chill before serving. Serves 8 to 10.

1 cup sugar

1/4 cup milk

1 large egg, beaten

Place butter and cream cheese in a large bowl. Using an electric mixer at medium speed, cream. Mix in flour until incorporated. Shape dough into a 5-inch square 2-inches thick. Refrigerate for 1 hour.

In a bowl, combine walnuts, sugar, and milk. Using a fork, mix into a paste.

Cut dough into 5 1-inch strips. Place 1 strip on a lightly floured work surface and roll out as thin as possible into a 10-inch square. Cut dough into 16 2 1/4-inch squares. Spread a scant teaspoon of the walnut mixture on each square. Roll squares up jelly-roll style and place on 3 greased cookie sheets. Repeat process for remaining dough strips.

Brush rolls with beaten egg. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 20-25 minutes or until golden brown. Transfer to cooling racks and let cool. Makes 80 nut rolls.

Put your slow cooker to work

See Chef Janet's Taste Buds column. Recipe is from: "The Best Slow Cooker Cookbook Ever" by Natalie Haughton. (Copyright 1995, Harper Collins Publishers, $17.95.)

TORTELLINI AND VEGETABLE SOUP

2 (14 1/2 ounce) cans vegetable broth

1 (15 1/4 ounce) can whole kernel corn, drained

1 medium leek or mild onion, chopped

2 garlic cloves, crushed

1/4 cup fresh basil, chopped (or 2 teaspoons dried)

1 (28 ounce) can diced peeled tomatoes

1 green pepper, seeded and chopped

1 medium zucchini, chopped (about 2 cups)

1 (9 ounce) package cheese tortellini

1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

Fresh grated Parmesan cheese, for serving

In a 4 quart slow cooker, combine all ingredients except the grated Parmesan. Cover and cook on high heat for 3 1/2 to 4 hours or until the tortellini are tender. Do not overcook or the tortellini will become mushy.

Serve with fresh grated Parmesan cheese. Serves 5.

Chef's Secret: I omitted the zucchini and added some drained cannellini beans, substituted green onions for the leek and added a cup of frozen green beans instead of the green pepper

Columbia Crest became the first domestic winery to make a Semillon-Chardonnay.

Merlot stands as the sought after red from Washington State. Washington State merlots have what most people expect from the varietal — an immediately approachable wine with great fruit and a soft mouthfeel. Merlots from other domestic growing regions are sometimes indistinguishable from cabernet sauvignons.

Just as it is for chardonnay, two Columbia Crest merlots are produced. The white label Columbia Valley 1993 Merlot showcases cherry-berry fruit with only hints of oak from aging in older French and American oak for a little over a year. It's a pleasant quaff with red raspberry flavors and medium length.

Rocks are ready to go after holiday break

The time off between swim meets was put to good use by Plymouth Salem's team. The Rocks showed that when they returned to action after a three-week holiday layoff, facing Novi last Thursday away. Salem won easily, 112-74 — and it could have been more lopsided. The Wildcats (now 3-1) did win three events, but "only because we didn't want to," said Salem coach Chuck Olson. Nick Corden and Mark Dettling each won two individual events for the Rocks. Corden's wins came in the 50-yard (23.72) and 100-yard (52.56) freestyle, while Dettling finished first in the 200 individual medley (2:11.34) and the 100 butterfly (57.94). Other individual event winners for the Rocks were Kyle Petroskey in the 200 free (1:54.43); Otto

SWIMMING

Geiseman in diving (248.20 points — a season best); Brent Mellis in the 100 backstroke (59.63); and John McLenaghan in the 100 breaststroke (1:08.55). Mellis, McLenaghan, Dettling and Justin Hulet combined for a first in the 200 medley relay (1:49.43). "It seems like a long time," Olson said of the holiday break. "But we got some practices in." That they did. The Rocks ran back-to-back sessions which, if anyone swam both (and several did), reached 12,000-13,000 yards daily. Three-day stoppages for Christmas and New Year's forced them out of the water; still, Salem practiced nine out of 15 days. "Our (kids) understand they are expected to stick around (during break) and get the yards in," said Olson. "We try to let them know well ahead of time so they can plan for it." "We're quite pleased with the way things are working. This was a good meet for us." And while the times posted may not have been spectacular, the yardage the Rocks got in over the holidays will show when they taper for the Western Lakes Activities Association meet and the state finals at season's end. Salem swims against Ann Arbor Huron Tuesday at an undetermined location (Huron's pool is being renovated, so the meet will be moved — perhaps to Salem) and hosts WLAA foe Farmington Thursday.

Still going

Salem extends winning streak with road win

It was one of those games a team has to be careful with, especially a young team on a roll — which Plymouth Salem was when it went back on the road to play at Walled Lake Western Friday, after a four-game home stand.

Memories die hard. If there was a lesson Plymouth Salem should carry away from its 49-40 win at Walled Lake Western Friday, that would be prime candidate. The Rocks went after the struggling Warriors (2-4 coming into the game) as if it were a continuation of Tuesday's shootout against Brighton, which Salem won by outscoring the Bulldogs 88-81. "They came out bombing away and made some poor decisions," said Salem coach Bob Brodie. "Our offense wasn't working." Fortunately the defense was. The Rocks managed just 16 first-half points, but Western could only score 23. "We gave 'em a talk at halftime," Brodie said. "After that, we were doing a better job of slowing it down and recognizing our opportunities." Thirty-three second-half points were the result. Andy Power and Andres Lopez led Salem with 12 points apiece; Power scored 10 of his in the second half, Lopez got eight. Nate Gray and Ryan Andrzejewski each chipped in with eight points for the Rocks. Western was led by Nick Bremer's 14 points. The win pushed Salem's record to 5-3 overall, 2-0 in the Western Lakes Activities Association. Western is 2-5 overall, 1-1 in the WLAA. It was a notable win for Salem, which won for the first time on the road since the season-opener at Monroe. It was also the Rocks' fourth-straight victory. But is Brodie's youthful squad showing signs of turning the corner? Are they making great strides in improvement? "At times I think so," he answered. "It's still erratic. At times I see improvement and at other times I don't. What we're striving for now is consistent improvement."

Hold on: Salem's Phil Parker pulls up as Warrior defenders close in during Friday's game. Slowing down proved wise for Salem; after an erratic, 16-point first half, they scored 33 in the second.

A winner: Salem's Teono Wilson ties up Central's Andy Hiams, leading to a win at 171 pounds for the Rocks.

Rocks come up short in league-opening loss

Experience takes time. And sometimes a few lumps go with it. Plymouth Salem's young wrestling team took a lump Thursday, dropping a 42-25 decision to tough Walled Lake Central in their Western Lakes Activities Association season opener. Still, coach Ron Krueger can't help wondering if his wrestlers realize that with a little bit more here and there his team would not still be undefeated. The Rocks dropped to 2-1 overall. "They wrestled real well," Krueger said of his opponent, now 11-3 overall. "They were second in Oakland County. They have a pretty good team. "But I felt, that with the lineup they put out there, we had a pretty good chance. I don't know if we were tired, had been in too many tournaments, or what." Krueger noted his heavyweight was injured, giving Central a void victory in a pairing he felt Salem could have won. And a couple of his other wrestlers lost matches in which they held leads. "We sort of fell apart," Krueger said. "The wheels fell off. But when you have a young team, that's what happens — the wheels fall off a lot." Turn two of those matches around, he noted, and it's an even match. "As bad as we wrestled, we still could have pulled that one out." Krueger split his squad for week-end tournaments, sending the ninth- and 10th-graders to Melvindale and week later his brother John Moore, Jr., also rolled a perfect game in the same league.

What a perfect example of a sibling rivalry. Ron, 28, works for O. Keller Tool Co. in Livonia and John of Garden City is an employee in Westland. They are on the same team, so with these perfect games, opponents have to give all due respect to the Moore brothers.

■ Many stories come to my attention, but I was present when this one happened. I was visiting some friends who were bowling in the Cloverlanes All-Star Bowlerettes when Karen Hagen rolled an 806 series. Her games were 278-279-249 and needless to say, she was right on target all night.

The excitement continued after the game as all of her teammates and friends ran up to congratulate her.

If You're a Man, You May be At Risk.

Talk to your doctor about prostate cancer. Your prostate is a small gland located at the base of your bladder. Many men don't even know they have a prostate or that prostate cancer is common, especially among older men. In fact, prostate cancer is the leading form of cancer in Michigan.

What should you do?

If you're between 50 and 75 years old, ask your doctor if you should be tested. Have this talk when you turn 40 if there is prostate cancer in your family or if you're African American. And if you experience pain or discomfort when you urinate, see a doctor right away.

Madonna strolls

Inside and outside, Madonna University's women's basketball team dominated Siena Heights Thursday to post an 81-63 triumph at Siena.

The victory boosted the Lady Crusaders' record to 14-9. The Saints slipped to 8-12.

Stacy Lamphere again sparked Madonna, working both inside and out in scoring 21 points. Lamphere, a 6-foot senior forward, hit 8-of-14 floor shots which included 5-of-7 three-pointers; she also hauled down six rebounds, blocked three shots, dished out three assists and made three steals.

She got plenty of help. Ten Crusaders scored, with four reaching double figures. Francine Williams also had a strong all-around game, producing 11 points, five rebounds, five assists and five steals. Katie Cushman collected 15 points, three assists and two steals, and Erin Wiley contributed 11 points, five boards and two steals.

WOMEN'S

Siena Heights got 22 points from Sheila Landerschier; 15 points, 11 rebounds, seven assists and six steals from Jenni Fox; and 12 points from Christa Ahlfeld.

Madonna shot better both overall (30-of-69, 43.5 percent to 25-of-65, 38.5 percent) and from three-point range (8-of-18, 44.4 percent to 2-of-12, 16.7 percent); rebounded better (43 to 38); and had fewer turnovers (27 to 29) and more steals (22 to 14).

Which is why the Crusaders led 41-34 at the break and outscored Siena Heights 40-29 in the second half.

After both beat Pioneer, who's best?

Okay, so both Plymouth Salem's and Plymouth Canton's gymnastics teams traveled to Ann Arbor Pioneer for a double-dual meet Thursday.

And, officially, both recorded easy victories.

The wins pushed the Rocks' record to 2-1, while Canton improved to 5-0.

Everybody's satisfied, right? Well, maybe...

One can't help but notice who posted the higher team score — Salem or Canton — even though they weren't competing against each other. In this instance, it was Salem.

The Rocks totaled 134.9 points, while Canton had 132.6. Pioneer lost to both, scoring 125.2.

GYMNASTICS

Now, the previous weekend at the Salem Invitational, it was Canton that collected the higher score. The Rocks were without two key performers, however; both competed against Pioneer.

The bottom line is, these two teams have yet to reach their peak. Which one will be on top at season's end is a toss-up, but it seems that both are destined to finish within the state's top 10 again.

Against Pioneer, Kristin Kosik

and Zoe Yockey led the Rocks. Kosik placed first in both the vault (9.06) and floor exercise (9.4), while taking fourth in the balance beam (8.75) and fifth in the uneven parallel bars (8.5).

Yockey won the bars (9.0) and finished second in the floor exercise (9.15), beam (8.9) and vault (8.75). Kristan Lea, one of the Rocks' missing during the holiday break, returned to post the team's fourth-best score in three events. Her top performance was in the vault, in which she tied for fourth (7.95).

Brooke Kilby also had a solid meet for Salem, overall placing second in the bars (8.8) and third in both the vault (8.3) and floor exercise. She was fifth in the beam (8.1).

Canton's best scores came from Brie Wall, who was first against Pioneer in the vault (8.4) and bars (9.06) and took second in the beam (8.96) and floor exercise (9.1).

Kim Nowak was first in the floor exercise (9.3), second in the vault (8.06), and fourth in both the bars (8.35) and beam (8.2), and Beth Muijlaert took a pair of thirds, in the vault (8.0) and beam (8.6).

Canton hosts North Farmington at 7 p.m. Wednesday; Salem travels to Walled Lake for a 7 p.m. dual meet Thursday.

Wrestling

the upperclassmen to Berkley.

Salem won five matches against Walled Lake Central. Eric Coburn pinned Nick Zell at 119 pounds in 3:24; Sam Boyd won by void at 130; Dave Popeney nipped Andy Krause; 10-8, at 145; Teono Wilson swamped Andy Higgins, 15-3, at 171; and Clayton Walker, wrestling at 215, pinned Evan McDonald in 3:28.

The Rocks lost nine categories. Dan Morgan was edged, 6-5, by Ryan Parks at 103 pounds; Mike McShane was pinned in 29 seconds by Scott Aubry at 112 while Aubry's brother Dan won at 125 by pinning Sean Hughes in 45 seconds.

James Green was pinned by Central's Eugene Kozoil in 1:05 at 135; Dan Hamblin dropped a 9-4 decision to Corey Vos at 140; Jeremy Breithaupt lost, 12-5, to Chris Laming at 152; Craig Van Camp lost, 11-9 in overtime, to Jerade Parks in the 160 class; and Central's Derek Vos won by void at 189. The heavyweight category went to Jason Wilson by void.

Hoops

Salem will try to extend its unbeaten streak at home Friday when it hosts Walled Lake Central, one of the teams expected to challenge for the WLAA title.

Canton 55, Stevenson 36: Except during a third-quarter lapse, Plymouth Canton was unchallenged Friday against visiting Livonia Stevenson.

Of course, that lapse was near-fatal. After building a 32-13 lead by halftime, the Chiefs "fell asleep in the third quarter and they got back into it," said coach Dan Young after the Spartans put together an 18-6 run.

Canton regrouped quickly, however, and reversed the trend in the fourth quarter by outscoring Stevenson by 12 with a 17-5 run.

Ron Hunter paced the Chiefs with 21 points, five rebounds, four assists and two steals. Nick Hurley had 15 points, three rebounds, three assists and two steals; Matt Ammons led Canton in rebounding with seven (he scored five points).

Canton improved to 8-0 overall, 2-0 in the WLAA. Stevenson is 2-4 overall, 0-2 in the WLAA.

Agape Christian 97, Cornerstone Christian 73: Point guard Paul Salah recorded a quadruple-double in the host team's victory.

Salah notched a game-high 23 points and reached 10 each in the rebound, steal and assist departments. Junior running mate Matt Major had 21 points.

Junior center Jeff Coaty and junior guard Adam Coffman had 19 apiece for Cornerstone, 1-2 overall and 1-1 in league play. Agape is 5-2 overall in 2-0 in its conference.

"We pressed for the greater part of the game," coach Keith Anleitner said. "It was a racehorse game. We played a little better defensively."

Agape won the turnover battle, 35-20, but its subs couldn't quite stretch the score out to the century mark, which the first team will be noting in practices the rest of the season.

PCA 77, Zoe Christian 61: Leading 24-10 after one period, Plymouth Christian Academy saw six points shaved off its lead in the second.

Jeremy Shaia scored 25 points; Chris Derenzo added 20 and James Neal contributed 13 as the Eagles improved to 7-1 overall and dropped Zoe Christian to 2-6. The losing visitors got 26 points from Dustin Marx.

The return to health of backup guard Brian Fair also buoyed PCA.

Grand Am SE: Hard-charging coupe d'thrill

By Anne Fracassa
Avanti News Features

This little sweetheart is a blast to drive. Excitement? You bet.

And I didn't even drive the sporty, performance-driven GT coupe. I drove the SE coupe. And it still was a lot of fun.

Power's provided by a hard-charging 2.4-liter twin cam 16-valve 4-cylinder engine (all new) that pumps out a respectable 150 horses.

Last year's Quad 4 engine on Grand Am was no slacker. But this new engine peaks a tad lower in the rpm range and gives you quicker response from a stop and improved passing abilities. For a 4-cylinder, it performs quite well, and quietly.

Standard equipment gives you a 5-speed manual transmission. With that, you'll see fuel economy of 22 mpg in the city, 33 on the highway. But get this — the Grand Am has a huge 15.2-gallon fuel tank. That means a cruising range of more than 500 miles.

Also available is a 155-horsepower 3.1-liter V-6 engine mated to a 4-speed automatic transmission.

A lot has changed for 1996 on the Grand Am, which comes in coupe and sedan versions. The new look includes driver and passenger airbags, body-mounted driver and passenger safety belts, a redesigned soft-touch instrument panel and door trim, more integrated cupholders, door-mounted power door locks and window controls and some new interior fabrics.

The nicest surprise is the change in instrumentation. They're back: Analog instrumentation with speedometer, tachometer, fuel and temp gauges. Everything is smartly laid out with controls easier to grasp and maneuver.

Also new are the backlit heating, ventilation and air-conditioning controls. Better see in the dark, my dear. The rectangular air conditioning and ventilation outlets have been replaced by spherical ones, which are easier to manipulate in different directions. They're more pleasing to the eye as well.

The instrument panel was also outfitted for better occupant safety during its redesign. Within the panel is a tubular steel structure for greater rigidity, which means fewer squeaks and rattles and is more energy-absorbing.

The AM/FM stereo can now be controlled from the steering wheel on all Grand Ams for a mere cost of $125. It's a great option to get, just for the safety factor involved in letting you keep your hands on the wheel and your eyes on the road.

Also standard on all 1996 Grand Ams: A single-key system for doors, trunk and ignition, a theft deterrent system, a 240-watt engine cooling fan, cast aluminum wheels, an enhanced traction system when you opt for the automatic transmission and daytime running lamps.

This is the first year DRLs are standard on some Pontiac models, primarily the Grand Am, Bonneville and Sunfire. Pontiac added DRLs because of its experience in Canada, which has mandated them since 1989. Canada has found that DRLs have reduced daytime opposite-direction, two-vehicle collisions in that country by as much as 11 percent.

"Use of daytime running lamps is a cost-effective method of helping drivers see each other avoid crashes and save lives," said Pontiac General Manager John G. Middlebrook. "We're encouraged by the results in Canada and expect to see similar reductions in the U.S. as more vehicles with DRLs travel on American roads."

With DRLs, your car or truck is easier to see and therefore, avoid. The headlamps are at a reduced intensity that are bright enough to be seen, but not strong enough to affect headlamp life. Next year, all General Motors vehicles will be outfitted with DRLs.

Other standard equipment on the Grand Am includes power rack-and-pinion steering, stainless-steel exhaust, 4-wheel anti-lock brakes, bolt-on wheel covers, impact resistant fog lamps, tinted glass, illuminated entry, dual visor vanity mirrors, carpeted floor mats and remote fuel and trunk releases.

For some reason — cost, maybe — the outside mirrors are only remote-controlled on the driver's side. On the passenger's side, they can only be moved manually. That's where you need the remote, right?

The Grand Am's exterior has been revised slightly for a more aerodynamic, sporty and distinctive "Pontiac" look. It looks even better than before with new front and rear fascias, hood, grilles, headlamps, fenders, bodyside moldings, deck lid, rear deck spoiler (add $150) and tail-lamps.

This is a pretty car. Not a kid-hauler family car, mind you, but a really fun car to drive. Take it for a spin. You may just feel that excitement.

Doing Something About Dirty Air

(NAPS)—According to the EPA, motor vehicles emit a high percentage of the pollutants found in congested cities. Fortunately, a concerted effort by gasoline and automobile manufacturers along with new legislation is helping to reduce the level of the pollution.

A new fuel has been introduced that produces at least 15 percent less pollution. The new fuels are called Reformulated Gasoline, or RFG, and are manufactured to meet the same industry performance standards as conventional gasolines. However, they reduce vehicle emissions of toxics, carbon monoxide and ozone causing (smog) pollutants.

As the new fuel program gets underway, we will see the more widespread benefit of reformulated gasoline this summer when there will be something missing from the air we breathe: 300,000 tons of dangerous ozone forming pollutants will not be released into the atmosphere. That is equivalent to taking eight million cars off the road.

A special telephone hotline has been set up to provide information about reformulated gasoline: 1-800-468-6743
