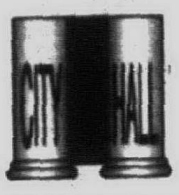
City finance director bids adieu



A familiar face will soon be gone around Plymouth City Hall. Longtime Finance Director William Graham will be leaving later this month. He at one time served as acting city manager.

City Manager Steve Walters said Graham would leave his position with the city effective March 27.

Walters said he, Treasurer Teresa Cischke and the city's auditing firm will perform finance department duties until a new finance director is chosen.

At the city commission meeting Monday, Walters said he and Graham in recent weeks have negotiated terms by which Graham would leave his job, which pays $48,000 annually.

Commissioners voted to accept terms of the agreement presented by Walters, which calls for $7,500 in severance pay and would allow Graham the chance to participate in the city's pension plan.

The commission voted 5-1 to approve the agreement as presented by the city manager, with Commissioner John Vos voting no. But Graham's attorney John Thomas told commissioners, "In fact, there is no agreement."

Commissioner Doug Miller responded that the commission's approval of the agreement presented by the city manager could serve as a starting point for further negotiations — between Thomas and the city attorney — on an agreement for Graham to retire from the city.

Graham, 52, was on vacation this week and unavailable for comment.

Walters said he was trying to negotiate an agreement for the finance di-

Smoking will net youths community

Hey, kid: That pack of smokes could cost you $50.

Youths caught smoking by school officials or police will be ticketed and forced to pay a fine or perform community service, under a proposed Plymouth city ordinance.

The ordinance passed a first reading before Plymouth city commissioners on Monday and must pass a second reading to become law.

Cameron Miller, assistant city attorney, said the ordinance is being sought by police. While under-age smokers can be ticketed under state law, local authorities said that often no penalties are levied.

Creation of a local ordinance, Miller said, "allows better control and enforcement."

The local ordinance differs from the state statute in that the offender would be charged with a civil infraction, which would not go on their per-

Nicholas Delbanco, the author of "In The Name of Mercy," said a newspaper article on him should more properly focus on his latest book.

"The story really resides in that novel rather than the guy at this desk," said Delbanco, about whom John Updike once wrote, "He wrestles with the abundance of his gifts as a novelist the way other men wrestle with their deficiencies."

Delbanco's latest novel, "In the Name of Mercy," is a medical thriller that explores the intricacies of euthanasia in today's medicine.

Since writing his first novel, "The Martlet's Tale," as a 1960s Columbia University graduate student, Delbanco, 53, has penned 15 more books.

At present, Delbanco presides over the University of Michigan's master of fine arts program and the Hopwood awards program.

Born in London during World War II, Delbanco criss-crossed the ocean with his pond-hopping parents, Kurt and Barbara, so many times that he didn't quite know where he belonged.

Teens charged in house shooting

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Two Plymouth youths are among three 17-year-old area residents charged in connection with the Feb. 29 shooting of a Canton Country Acres house.

James Carl Thorpe and Trevor Merrill, both of Plymouth and Jason Radziszewski of Canton are charged on charges of discharging a firearm at a dwelling, a four-year felony, and use of a firearm in commission of a felony, a five-year felony.

Thorpe was arraigned Monday, March 5 before 35th District Court Judge John MacDonald, who set Thorpe's bond at $5,000. No one had posted Thorpe's bond as of late Tuesday morning. Radziszewski and Merrill were arraigned on the same charges Tuesday, March 6, before MacDonald. They are free on $5,000 personal recognizance bonds.

A preliminary examination for the trio is set for 9 a.m. Friday, March 15, before 35th District Court Judge Ronald Lowe.

Police believe the suspects fired a shotgun at a house in Canton Country Acres the night of Thursday, Feb. 29.

Police received a 9-1-1 call at 10:27 p.m. Feb. 29 from a man who said shots had been fired at his house in the 43100 block of Lancelot. The street comes off Morton Taylor between Palmer and Michigan Avenue.

The house was hit by at least one shot, Stevens said, but no one was injured.

En route to the scene, officers discovered the suspected getaway car, a Pontiac Firebird that struck a piece of construction machinery eight to 10 houses away from the target house.

Police found a spent shotgun shell and some live rounds in the car, Stevens said.

Thorpe, Radziszewski and Merrill were located and identified as suspects through the owner of the Firebird, Stevens said.

Police believe the shooting is gang related, Stevens said.

Man facing trial

Burns is charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm in connection with an incident that took place at a private party at the hall.

The trial before Detroit Recorder's Court Judge Kym Worthy was to have begun Feb. 28. The judge had another trial that interfered, forcing the adjournment.

Burns, 25, originally was charged with assault with intent to commit murder.

He was bound over for trial at his preliminary examination before 35th District Judge John MacDonald. He pleaded not guilty and has remained free on $1,000 cash bond.

The case arose from a fight that occurred outside the Mill Street hall following a wedding. William Donohue, 43, of Plymouth required stitches and plastic surgery for facial injuries he said Burns inflicted with a broken beer bottle.

Burns has requested a jury trial.

Disturbance sends two men to court

A 33-year-old Livonia man and a 40-year-old Plymouth man are to appear in 35th District Court March 18 on charges of fighting in public and disorderly conduct.

The two were cited after a disturbance at about 8:30 p.m. Feb. 29.

The incident was reported by a 49-year-old woman who manages the apartments at 555 Starkweather, the residence of one of the suspects.

Upon arrival, officers observed both intoxicated subjects walking from the building toward a car parked in the alley.

Asked if they'd been fighting, they said yes, over a woman. Asked who they were, they answered "brothers."

The two were placed in the back of the squad car. Police asked if they could go in and check the apartment for damage, if any. The man said yes; and that the door was open.

Officers said there was evidence of a fight. Beer bottles were on the floor of each room. Chair cushions were left on the floor and chairs were overturned.

As a sergeant checked the kitchen, he observed through the open bathroom door a white male on the toilet. He asked police what they were doing in his apartment. The man identified himself as the lessee of the apartment.

Police said they had permission to enter the apartment. Satisfied there were no other victims, they left.

The men told police they were not real brothers, but best friends. The manager said she warned the two to quit fighting, but that they continued "throwing themselves around" the apartment, lawn, and parking lot.

She signed citations against both men.

Liberty Fest to offer an extra day of fun

There might still be snow on the ground, but Canton parks personnel are already thinking about the fifth annual Liberty Fest, set to occur June 20-23.

"We wanted to expand it and do a bit more," said township communications director Ken Voyles. "And one way to make it bigger, is to make it longer."

So officials decided to begin this year's Liberty Fest one day early.

The summer festival will now kick off the evening of Thursday, June 20, with a showing of the movie "Pocahantas" in the Heritage Park amphitheater.

Organizers hope to precede the movie with live entertainment, but no act has been booked yet.

Whether or not the expanded Liberty Fest also includes daytime activities Friday, June 21, is undecided, Voyles said. "I think the only thing happening Friday is concerts," but other things may be added.

The list of happenings for the weekend include Saturday night fireworks, local performers at the amphitheater, bingo and Vegas nights, an expanded classic car show lasting two days, fine arts booths, arts and crafts booths, an art workshop for kids, mini-midway, paddle boat rides in the pond, wandering clowns, musicians and balloon animal makers and a food concession featuring local restaurants.

Sponsorships are available to local businesses and groups for $50 to $1,000 and beyond.

Grand marshal to have a grand old time at St. Pat's parade

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

He's come a long way since the days of the 1930s when he hoed and pulled weeds in the truck farms along Plymouth Road, and bused tables at the Mayflower Hotel for the late Ralph Lorenz.

James I. Butler of Redford has received one of the highest honors that can be bestowed by Detroit's Irish-American community — the title of grand marshal of the St. Patrick's Day Parade. The 38th annual parade is set for 2 p.m. Sunday in downtown Detroit.

Butler joins the ranks of such luminaries as the late Detroit Mayor Jerome Cavanagh and U.S. Sen. Phil Hart; Attorney General Frank Kelley; then-U.S. Rep. James Blanchard; Archbishop Edmund Szoka; Judge James L. Ryan; publisher Neal Shine; the Rev. Tom Duffey and Sister Mary Watson; Martin Fleming; and Daniel O'Kennedy.

"A unanimous vote was cast by the delegates of the United Irish Societies for Jim Butler out of recognition for his tireless dedication to Detroit's Irish community," said Joe Parsky, parade co-chairman.

For 29 years, Butler has served the Knights of Equity fraternal organization as a member and national officer. Among the many duties he's assumed is commissioner of the Knights of Equity Scholarship Commission at the University of Detroit-Mercy.

A delegate to the United Irish Societies for more than 20 years, Butler serves as UIS corresponding secretary. He also belongs to the Irish-American Cultural Institute and the Detroit and Livonia-Redford chapters of the Irish-American Unity Conference.

Realizing a dream

Butler's wife of 40 years, Mary Pigott Butler, knows firsthand what a hard-won honor this is.

"It probably is a dream he thought he would never see fulfilled. As you get older, dreams kind of slide away, one by one. This one he hung onto. He worked quietly, did his thing, and is finally being rewarded for it all," said Pigott Butler, who has typed, stuffed, stamped and mailed many a newsletter for the grand marshal.

For Butler, the theme of this year's parade, "A Nation Once Again," is heartfelt.

"My mother used to talk about the British oppression of Ireland, and about how the Black and Tans — misfits of the British Army — practically raped the countryside of Ireland. That kind of stuck with me, to think that was going on in the 20th century," said Butler, a 1940 Plymouth High School graduate and World War II veteran. Both Butler's mother, Winifred Kennedy Butler, and father, Pierce J. Butler, were Irish-born.

"The peace process was moving forward, except for what the British were doing to slow it down. There was a glimmer of hope that Ireland would not only have peace, but peace with justice and equity," said Butler. "The real conclusion of that would be for the six counties to be united with the 26 counties of Ireland. Then Ireland would be a complete and whole nation."

Still hopes for peace

A 1948 U-D graduate retired from the banking and construction industries, Butler is hopeful that despite the recent abrogation of the cease-fire, the peace talks will bear fruit.

Butler says that while he was always aware of the injustice long perpetrated by the British government, it was his brother, Westland's Pierce Butler, who got him involved in the Knights of Equity.

Butler's children are enjoying the "high holy days" as their father is honored at pre-parade festivities.

"We always knew our dad was one of the hardest-working people in the Irish community, and we're glad his efforts and hard work are being recognized in such a wonderful way," said Eileen Butler Ehrlich of West Bloomfield.

Kay Butler Taylor of St. Clair Shores said, "My dad has always instilled in us how great our Irish heritage is, so we can pass it on to our children and into the next generation."

Livonia's Colleen Butler Green said, "I think my dad is the one who coined the phrase, 'Proud to be Irish.' Wearing that grand marshal sash this year in the parade is quite an honor; an honor he said he has worked for all his life." Green said that "to us our dad wore an invisible sash every year, but this one everyone will know."

Son Peter Butler of Livonia said, "It's a very fine honor, and one my dad really deserves."

Butler is a multi-faceted man. He plays catcher on the Chaplin Comedy Store's Over-70 Michigan Senior Softball League team. He belongs to St. Hilary Parish in Redford, where he is a longtime lector and serves on the Parish Council. He also is a member of the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Parade's real purpose

It's his hope that the real reason for the parade isn't obscured by "all the revelry."

"The purpose of the parade is to honor St. Patrick," he said. "St. Patrick was an apostle to, and of, Ireland. He has played a very influential role in the lives of Irish people, through good days and bad days, since he lived 1500 years ago.

"With St. Patrick watching over Ireland and its people on the spiritual level, and Irish-Americans and political people watching over Ireland during this time of hope, maybe we will see in our lifetimes Ireland become a nation once again."

When Graper resigned his post in 1989, Graham served as acting city manager until March 1990. But when he sought to be named full-time city manager, a majority of commissioners opted instead for a consultant-led nationwide search for a city manager.

"I've been talking to the judges at the circuit court, they're looking forward to something like this coming through," Miller said.

On a first offense, a youth would get a ticket payable by a $50 fine, or 16 hours of community service.

Fines would increase for a second and third offense, and so would terms of community service — 32 hours for a second offense and 48 hours for a third.

Miller said the plan is for youths serving community service to do so with a hospice or nursing home. Those ticketed would also have to attend a class on the danger of tobacco and illegal substances.

Commissioner Doug Miller said he favored placing youths serving such community service in a health facility, "or at least a non-smoking environment."

"In other places where they could perform community service they could end up being supervised by adults who are smoking," he said.

Cameron Miller said ticketing under-age smokers could be a way to reach some youths who get into trouble with police for other things.

"There's no scientific evidence, but sometimes we see them down the road with other troubles. They can serve with police and see they're not bad people," he said.

They'll play in the 4,000-seat arena now being built on a 26-acre site on Beck Road between M-14 and Five Mile Road.

The team's move to Plymouth Township should spark spin-off business development, Kerch said, along with more business for area restaurants and hotels as visiting teams come to town.

"We're also going to be looking for some families that might be willing to house a player," Kerch said.

In February, Canton Supervisor Tom Yack in his State of the Township address said that the arena — whose developers first approached Canton officials — is not being designed to meet the needs of Canton hockey and figure skaters.

Players in the three Canadian junior leagues are ages 16-19, with each team allowed to have two 20-year-olds. Interested families should call the club at (810) 737-7373.

"We're hoping that all of our players will live in the city of Plymouth; we'll try. We have one this year, Josh Carter," Kerch said.

"We have more Americans on our roster than other OHL teams; we have 11 Americans and 13 Canadians and two Europeans," he said. For those of high-school age, school attendance is mandatory.

The junior team now averages around 5,800 per game for scheduled home games at The Palace of Auburn Hills and the Oak Park Ice Arena.

"It's the top development league for the National Hockey League in the world, it's a chance to see the NHL's true future stars," Kerch said.

"I think the arena will be very user-friendly. I don't think you can beat the entertainment you'll get for the price of tickets," he said.

"We expect to have close to sell-outs every game. We'll probably make an announcement on ticket prices," Kerch said. Tickets for Detroit Whalers games are currently $5.

Why was Plymouth chosen as a new arena site? Kerch said access to M-14 and I-96 was a factor. "We do get a fair amount of Canadian fans as well; it's only 25 minutes from Windsor."

Arena partner Thomas Mullen, Kerch said, "kind of had a plan for this arena; he looked at different cities — Troy, Hazel Park, Novi, Plymouth and Canton."

"Basically the way the Plymouth-Canton area is growing we figured it was the place to go. Location-wise it's the best place for us," he said.

Plans call for the arena to be finished in August, in time for training camp and an exhibition game. The OHL season runs from the end of September to mid-March, followed by playoffs running through mid-May where teams compete for the Memorial Cup.

Kerch said the club will seek to have home games televised either on local cable or commercial TV.

Check out home inspections, brothers say

Brian Lee of Canton Township and Craig Lee of Livonia are running the HomeTeam Inspection Service, serving Canton, Garden City, Livonia, Plymouth, Redford and Westland.

Brian started in the business, and Craig joined him in November.

The home inspection business has really taken off in the 1990s, Craig Lee said.

"Home buyers, for spending as much as they are on their homes, are looking for value," he said. "They want to know what they are buying is secure."

Also, many people are working all the time, and they don't know that much about the home they are buying, he said.

The HomeTeam service uses a team of inspectors, including a licensed heating and cooling inspector. Areas an inspector looks at include the roof, mechanical and electrical systems, exterior siding, windows, decks and garages, interior walls and ceilings, steps and floors, plumbing and all appliances.

Realtors and homeowners are looking for a shorter time period for inspections, Craig Lee said.

The Lees suggest that home inspections should tell not only what is wrong with a house, but what is right with it. Inspections also should offer advice on maintenance of a home, Craig Lee said.

Home inspectors look for major visual defects, Craig Lee said, but "we're not there to fix the problem; we're not part of a construction company."

"The point is to give an unbiased opinion of the home," he said. If inspectors see a major visual defect, it's recommended that the home be looked at by a licensed professional in that area, he said.

The Lees suggest that questions should be asked about home inspections:

- Does the inspection company have an interest in or a connection to a repair or remodeling company? Such an affiliation might cause a conflict of interest, according to Craig Lee.
- How long will the inspection take and how soon will you receive the written report? Is it detailed and easy to read? Ask to see a copy of an actual report.
- Exactly what will the inspection include? How much will the inspection cost?
- Does the company encourage the home buyer to attend the inspection and ask questions? Being present during the inspection allows you to see the home from a different perspective and provides valuable information on the care and maintenance your home will require in the years to come.
- Can the inspection company offer specialized inspections performed by a qualified professional?
- What sort of insurance does the company carry? A reputable firm will carry professional errors and omissions insurance, general business liability and workers compensation.
- Does the company follow the guidelines of any professional organizations such as the American Inspectors Association or the American Society of Home Inspectors? Does the company provide additional services such as termite and other pest inspections, radon testing, asbestos testing and other environmental testing?

The basic cost for a home inspection is about $220, which Craig Lee said can be viewed as an unneeded added expense by uneducated buyers. But if a buyer is investing in a home, the last thing a tight budget needs is an unexpected repair bill, he said.

The HomeTeam Inspection Service can be reached at (313) 844-1233.

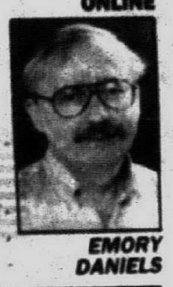
World Wide Web sites help unlock auto industry

O&E ONLINE



EMORY DANIELS

The automobile industry is gaining an increasing presence on the Internet with sites on the World Wide Web.

To celebrate the 100th anniversary of the American automobile industry, the American Automobile Centennial Commission (AACC) has launched a Web site at http://www.auto100.org/auto100.html.

Highlights include "Zero-100 in five seconds flat!" which allows users the evolution of the automobile from the first 1896 Duryea Motor Wagon to a 1996 model car.

Another feature links to Detroit's Center for Creative Studies so users can watch firsthand as senior engineering students design and develop cutting-edge concept cars.

"Car Crazy" is designed to appeal to everyone who has nostalgic memories of cars and cruisin', featuring an eclectic collection of fun and unusual automobile facts, trivia, anecdotes, events and photos spanning the last century. Examples include the top 25 car songs of all time, favorite car films, and the 10 greatest cars that were never made.

You also will find links to the Ford Historical Library, AutoZone's Classic Car Museum, the Tucker Homepage, and other automotive Web sites.

Auto 100 site also provides a calendar of events for the Centennial's year-long nationwide celebration. Users interested in learning more about the celebration can refer to the Partner Program calendar for a list of Centennial events in their community.

Buick enters fray

Buick Motor Division has launched a site on the WWW featuring a comprehensive look at its new products including a virtual walk-around of the 1996 Riviera, an interactive "Build Your Own Car" section, and a Buick dealer locator, as well as PGA Tour golf sponsorship and auto show information.

Point to http:/www.buick.com and visit the "Showroom" which features 1996 product photographs and detailed information on the Buick car line. This feature allows you to do some "research shopping" at home without a salesman hovering nearby.

A "Build Your Own Car" section provides the user with the opportunity to create his or her own 1996 Riviera or Regal from a complete available options listing.

When ready to buy, users can access a Buick dealer locator by entering its ZIP code. The locator will find the closest Buick dealership and provide the name, address and phone number.

The golf section includes information on Buick's sponsorship of four PGA Tour golf tournaments featuring same-day coverage and benefiting charities, Buick-sponsored PGA Tour players and a complete 1996 PGA Tour schedule.

The tournament section includes same-day coverage of each event, information on past champions and events, and golf course hole-by-hole images and descriptions.

General Motors Acceptance Corporation, the financing arm of General Motors, has joined GM, Buick, Chevrolet, Pontiac, Cadillac and Saturn on the World Wide Web.

The theme of the GMAC Financial Services consumer site is "SmartTown," a place where consumers will find information on buying or leasing a new car or truck. Point to http:/www.gmacfs.com.

"SmartTown" has a payment calculator to assist the consumer in comparing financing options. This calculator also is offered at other GM sites, such as Chevy's Website.

Coming soon, "SmartTown" will have a section that provides up-to-date information on the latest news from GMAC and a section for consumers to tell GMAC what's on their minds.

Anyone interested in Chevrolet or Geo should bookmark "The Chevy Spot" at http://www.chevrolet.com.

Chevy also can be linked to at the GM website at http://www.gm.com which also links to Buick, Pontiac, Cadillac, Saturn and GMAC — to provide a total of 1,300 pages and 15,300 links. At "The Chevy Spot" three product sections are offered on Chevy cars, Chevy trucks or Geo. Find out what's "New" and "Cool" from Chevy, like free software and products for purchase, such as clothing items.

Other options offer a payment estimator for purchases or leases, and information on dealer locations. Users are encouraged to tell their favorite product stories, ask for brochures or suggest ways to change the Website.

As of February some 12 Cadillac dealers were participating in a pilot program that began in December 1995. The Cadillac site has a "Dealer locator" feature which allows customers to find the four closest dealers in their ZIP code area. Information given on each dealer includes address, phone number, hours of operation, a map, etc. If you are shopping for a Cadillac, first take a visit to http://www.cadillac.com.

Ford Motor Company is developing Websites but so far their sites are for internal use, for media use, or dealer use and not the public at-large. Chrysler has some fine Websites, but this column is too long as it is.

For health care, you can pay now or you'll pay later

TOM HOGAN

Do you remember the ad on the television in which a mechanic comes on the tube and tells you how regular oil changes protect your engine?

He concludes by saying you can pay me now (oil change) or you can pay me later (repair of engine). Waiting until later can be very expensive, as replacing your engine is tremendously more expensive than regular oil changes. It's the same with the purchase of long-term health care coverage, the premiums for the coverage, which some people think are rather expensive, are less in cost than the actual expense of providing for a loved one's care in an extended care facility on an out-of-pocket basis.

As is true in most cases, a pay as you go system is always more expensive than planning ahead for your expenditure.

The average premium cost for a long-term health care policy for a person age 63-64 is $1,350 annually, according to Ed Rich, marketing specialist of M & O Marketing in Dearborn. The cost in today's dollars for long-term care facilities services can be up to $40,000 per year. Home health care is generally less expensive and can start at $20,000 per year.

What are the odds that you will actually use the coverages? In an article from Health Magazine of October 1993, it was stated that 43 percent of Americans over age 65 will spend some time in a nursing home. For every person in a nursing home at any given time, there are three more who require care in their home. In April of 1993, a report in U.S. News and World Report indicated that the use of nursing homes is expected to grow by 70 percent in the next 30 years.

"Purchasing long-term health care coverage is like investing, you can start easily with a small deposit annually to create a potentially large benefit at the end. It's worth saving a few cents on every dollar to protect one's life savings," Kenneth W. Lyon, a financial planner from Livonia, said recently.

"Many individuals feel Medicare will cover these expenses," Lyon said. According to an article in the Sept. 25, 1995, New York Times, this is not true. "While Medicare covers acute illnesses like heart attacks and cancer, it does not cover prolonged stays in nursing homes and largely neglects care for chronic, degenerative diseases," the article states.

If Medicare does not cover it, surely Medicaid will pick up the bill. This is correct, however, "Medicaid doesn't come to your rescue until you have lost everything but your home, your car and $2,000 in other assets," as reported by the San Francisco Chronicle, July 11, 1994. The vast majority of nursing home care expenditures are handled out-of-pocket or by private insurance coverage. This method usually continues until the patient and family go broke. Then Medicaid will step in and provide for these charges.

The bottom line is, you can plan for long-term health care now, or you can pay for it later when it is much more expensive.

The agreement allows for funding to a maximum of $20 million. The availability of the funding will be determined by the company's capital needs and receivables. The facility is credit rated AA by Duff & Phelps.

Universal Self Care, through its subsidiary Diabetes Self Care, is a specialty provider of supplies and support services for individuals with diabetes.

■ AUTOMATIC PAYMENT

Additional utility companies have joined with the Michigan Automated Clearing House Association system of automatic bill payment.

Ameritech, Barry County Telephone Company, Cherryland Electric Cooperative, Frontier Communications of Michigan, GTE and Lansing Board of Water & Light have joined the 1996 automatic bill payment program. Companies that participated in 1994 and 1995 include: Consumers Power, Detroit Edison, Battle Creek Gas, Citizens Gas Fuel Company, Indiana Michigan Power, MichCon, Michigan Gas Co., Michigan Gas Utilities and Southeastern Michigan Gas Co.

Each Michigan Automated Clearing House Association member financial institution and the participating companies have 1996 forms available for customers to sign up for automatic bill payment. By completing the authorization form, the customer allows the utility company to withdraw the monthly payment electronically.

"With automatic bill payment consumers no longer have to write checks or buy stamps to mail their payments," association president William Thornton said. "Each of these companies will continue to send monthly usage statements to their customers advising them of the amount due and the date it will be withdrawn from their account."

"Automatic bill payment utilizes the same network as Direct Deposit. Over half of all Social Security benefit payments, as well as millions of payroll items, are made this way. The system is proven, safe and reliable," Thornton said.

Exchange program promotes understanding of health care

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER

Seventeen nurses from Madonna University in Livonia spent three weeks last June in Liverpool, England, getting an inside look into how that country's socialized medical system works.

Just this month, 16 nursing students from Liverpool reciprocated by visiting several health care facilities in the Livonia area. Their 10-day visit to study this country's private-pay medical care system ended recently.

Both groups walked away from their visit to a foreign country with new insights into the medical system they had just observed.

"Both of us are facing similar problems," said Angela Clarke, a nurse and teacher from England. "What we've seen are how different health care systems are meeting these challenges."

The purpose of the trips was to compare both the good and not-so-good of each system, said Sandra Nutten, director of nursing for the Marywood Nursing Care Center in Livonia, who traveled to Liverpool in June.

The cooperative venture between the two groups of nurses "heralds the future" in which medical care is a global issue, not just a local one, said Mary Wawrzynski, dean of Madonna University's College of Nursing and Health.

Visits to other medical systems will keep nurses and other health professionals from "reinventing the wheel," said Patricia Carlson, assistant professor at Madonna University's School of Nursing.

"To get a healthier world, we need to share our knowledge," Carlson said. "International travel and education is not a reward for living, but a necessity for life."

The nurses from the U.S. came away from England liking that country's holistic approach and emphasis on preventive care.

"In England, the hospital is the last place you go to get treatment," said Michelle Laing, a nurse curriculum adviser from Liverpool. "In America, the hospital is often the first place of contact."

Ninety percent of the U.S.'s medical bill is spent on "last-ditch" care for a seriously ill person, said Dean Wawrzynski. The opposite is true in England, she said, where most of the money goes for preventive care.

England's holistic approach means incorporating various soothing therapies into medical care. Such therapies as music, colors, smells, massage and home-like settings are all meant to improve day-to-day life for patients.

"Before they reach for a pill, it's common in England to take a few extra minutes and make patients feel comfortable and relaxed, especially for chronically ill persons with cancer and Parkinson's," Nutten said.

Madonna's nursing program is changing its curriculum to include these "healing touches" into nursing care, Carlson said.

In touring local health facilities, Laing said she is most impressed with the ability of U.S. nurses to do detailed physical assessments of patients.

Most distressing about this country's system, she said, is the high level of infant deaths, with some cities having death rates comparable to third-world countries.

Clarke also liked Madonna's emphasis on technological teaching techniques, such as video conferencing.

Despite the fact that a national health insurance system has so far failed to get under way in the U.S., both England and local nurses believe that this country will one day adopt such a system.

This is coming at the same time England is making patients pay for more and more services, such as prescriptions and optical needs, they said.

"Great Britian is moving more to our system," Carlson said. "God forbid they don't. There, everybody can have health care."

a degree, I still think of parts of Europe as home, but there's not much question Michigan is my home now."

Although Delbanco published his first book at age 24, he never expected to be an author. "Like most other people of that generation, I wanted to be either a poet, a rock musician, or a movie star," he said. "It didn't occur to me that I'd be able to make a living as a writer, but when I had a book contract when I graduated it began to look possible.

"So I was able to tell my parents that I had a job. I could say, 'Look, I'm a writer,' which in some degree I've been pretending ever since."

Still, Delbanco's books didn't sell well enough that he could contemplate writing full time. "There are not many writers in America who make a fully-living wage just from their writing," he said. "The academy has become the mother of us all in some sense. I have a wife and two children, and I would feel a little risky about not holding down a steady job."

Delbanco taught at Bennington College in Vermont for 19 years before coming to U-M in 1985.

His master of fine arts program is popular that more than 300 applicants competed for fewer than 20 places in the fall 1996 program.

Andrea Beauchamp, Delbanco's assistant, had already read "Running in Place" thrice before Delbanco came to U-M, so she was understandably thrilled at the prospect.

"One person said when they heard that he was coming here, 'The Delbancos will improve your social life 100 percent,' and it's true. There's an art to being a good host, and he's got it. He always tries to bring out the best in his guests and make everyone feel like they're contributing."

Delbanco is "really a workaholic, so he gets more done than any five people you know," Beauchamp said. And his connections with other authors are invaluable. "He knows all these writers, so he can tap into them on their book tours and get them to come by and talk to the writing students."

By the time students reach Delbanco's classroom, they are already quite good, but lack polish.

"No one has ever created a genius out of a writer who doesn't have any talent," Delbanco said, "But you can certainly help people along. You wouldn't doubt that somebody who is a singer needs to have a voice coach or a football player needs to have a line coach. So a writer needs the advice of senior professionals in order to improve."

Presently, the senior professional is working on three books at once.

"I used to do one thing at a time," he said. "Now I find it a little easier (to do three at once), partly because I'm a little more scattered. I turn my attention to this, then to that, then to other things. And when a certain kind of energy flags, they you turn your attention elsewhere."

Tickets for the luncheon at Fox Hills Country Club in Salem Township are $18 and are available at the Canton Public Library, 1200 S. Canton Center Road; Plymouth Public Library, 223 S. Main Street, Plymouth; Northville Public Library, 214 W. Main Street, Northville; and Novi Public Library, 45245 W. 10 Mile Road, Novi. Reservations must be made by April 5. Delbanco's book "In the Name of Mercy" will be available for sale at the luncheon.

Sen. Bennett tops list of lawmakers to get bills passed

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Sen. Loren Bennett, a freshman from Canton, was western Wayne County's 1995 champion at getting his bills enacted into law.

Bennett's name is on six laws, mostly environmental acts and one utility act. Only four other legislators topped that mark.

He had two advantages. He's a Republican whose party controls both chambers. And he chairs the Natural Resources Committee, which had a major role in advancing Gov. John Engler's pro-business agenda.

Reps. James Ryan, R-Redford, and Gerald Law, R-Plymouth, got two laws enacted. Ryan's success rate was unusual since he's a freshman. Law is a veteran legislator. Both serve on the Judiciary Committee, which produces a great number of popular anti-crime bills. Ryan introduced 18 bills; Law, 40.

Both Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville, and Rep. Lyn Bankes, R-Redford, saw two laws enacted. They are on their respective Appropriations Committees, which produce budget bills that must be enacted to implement $8 billion in general fund spending.

Rep. Deborah Whyman, R-Canton, saw one of her 13 bills become law. She serves on the Tax Policy Committee, which reported out chairman Willis Bullard's bills. Bullard, R-Milford, topped all House members with eight bills becoming law.

Three western Wayne lawmakers — all Democrats — got nothing passed. Sen. George Hart of Dearborn introduced 11 bills; Rep. Eileen DeHart of Westland, 20 bills; Rep. Tom Kelly of Wayne, one.

That was politics as usual in the Capitol. The Legislature enacted 124 bills sponsored by Republicans and 20 sponsored by Democrats. Minority party lawmakers count their successes not in bills passed but in tying amendments onto GOP bills to make them more palatable.

Sometimes Democrats have to be content to see Republicans cannibalize Democratic bills and take credit for them. It worked the same way when Democrats controlled the Senate until 1984 and the House until last year.

Three Republican senators shared top honors for getting 10 bills passed — Mike Bouchard of Birmingham, Glenn Steil of Grand Rapids and Joanne Emmons of Big Rapids. Bouchard chairs the Senate Financial Services Committee; Emmons, the tax-writing Finance Committee.

The record was based on 1995 performance. The last compilation was published Dec. 31 by the Legislative Service Bureau. Bills passed in 1996 have not been counted.

Getting bills passed into law is only one measure of a legislator's clout. House Speaker Paul Hillegonds, R-Holland, didn't introduce a single bill. House minority leader Curtis Hertel, D-Detroit, batted zero for one.

County courts work to split dockets

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

The bugs are still being worked out in circuit court in wake of a state Supreme Court administrative order to send criminal cases originating in Wayne County outside of Detroit out of Recorder's Court back to the 3rd Circuit Court.

A plan to "demerge" the docket began Nov. 9 after the October order, according to Judge James J. Rashid, chief judge of Wayne County's 3rd Circuit Court.

About 250 pending out-county criminal cases have been reassigned to circuit court, he said. But, some cases haven't been moved to circuit court, because it wouldn't make sense administratively to switch judges on some cases in mid-trial, Rashid said.

"We hope to have that resolved by April or May," he said.

Five circuit court judges at a time rotate to felony crime cases for a three-month period. In addition, two circuit court judges handle arraignments on a permanent basis, Rashid said.

In the past, a case could be assigned to a Recorder's Court judge or a rotating Circuit Court judge in Detroit's Recorder's Court at the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice, but now the cases will be handled in courtrooms at the City-County Building in Detroit, Rashid said.

That's presented a problem for the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, according to Sheriff Robert A. Ficano.

The lockup at the City-County Building isn't as big or as sophisticated as the one for Recorder's Court, Ficano said. That has meant more trips to transport inmates for trial as male and female inmates have to be kept separate and not as many can be housed in the City-County Building lockup, he said.

The sheriff's department has the expense of bringing defendants over from the jail and keeping two police officers in the courtroom during proceedings, Ficano said.

The circuit court judges are trying to work with the prosecutor's office and sheriff's department to minimize the problem for them, Rashid said.

For the prosecutor's office the change is working out so far. "We're accommodating the demerger," said George Ward, chief assistant prosecuting attorney.

It's been so far so good for the added cases on the docket of circuit court judges, according to Rashid.

In some ways it will be more work just because of the way the court has chosen to handle criminal cases, he said.

At one time criminal cases were rotated to different judges at various points in the proceedings, but now the cases are being handled in a way similar to civil cases — the case is assigned to a judge who is responsible for disposing of it, Rashid said.

The plan is to continue the rotation of criminal cases to circuit judges, because it helps the prosecutor's office. If more of the court's 35 judges go into the rotation, "they'd have to have a lot more prosecutors," Rashid said.

Sending cases to Recorder's Court began in the late 1980s. It was viewed as a way of helping the overall criminal docket, and also saved on security and prosecutors' resources, Rashid said. But that plan met with opposition in part because Recorder's Court judges are elected by Detroit residents only.

"Ideally it would be nice if we could do it all in one building," Rashid said.

In the late 1980s, about 2,200 criminal cases a year came from Wayne County outside of Detroit, but that number has more than doubled to 5,000 a year, Rashid said. He said he doesn't know what percentage of the cases was being handled by Recorder's Court judges.

Clothing drive to aid battered women, homeless

Vista Maria's VOYAGE program will be having a clothing drive at the Main Campus, 20651 W. Warren, Dearborn Heights, until March 15.

Thirteen girls, ages 14-16, will coordinate, sort, clean and deliver the donated clothing to a shelter for battered women, a homeless shelter, and COTS.

The VOYAGE program offers day treatment services for first-time juvenile offenders. The goal is to keep the girls home and out of high-cost residential programs.

"The girls involved in this clothing drive want to give something back to the community. Vista Maria has helped them, now they are helping others," said Diane Bostic Robinson, executive director.

Gently used clothing can be donated; drop-off boxes are available on campus.

Vista Maria is a private, non-profit agency providing education, counseling, and care to teen-age girls with emotional and behavioral problems resulting from abuse and neglect.

Since 1883, Vista Maria has been providing services to young women and families from southeastern Michigan.

School election

Candidates needed for board

Have you been thinking about running for the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education?

If so, it's time to stop thinking and begin doing.

The deadline to file nominating petitions is 4 p.m. April 8, so potential candidates will want to obtain nominating petitions quickly and start getting signatures.

This is an important year for education in Plymouth. Voters will elect two school board members on June 10. Longtime board member Barbara Graham won't be running again, while from all indications, board member Jack Farrow will be in the race. So far, no candidates have filed to run.

The election could be a hot one. There are indications the school board will place an enhancement millage — property tax increase — on the ballot. Last June voters rejected a similar proposal that would have funded more technology, teacher training and textbooks.

The school board should move quickly on making a decision on a millage question. The school district has a history of dragging its feet on making a decision on millage questions, not deciding until the last minute. This hasn't given the millage backers enough time to go to the community to sell the tax increase to voters.

To run for the school board, go to the E.J. McClendon Educational Center, 454 S. Harvey, Plymouth and ask for a nominating petition.

You will need 27 signatures of qualified electors living in the school district.

The deadline for voters to register for the June 10 election is Monday, May 13.

In deciding whether to become a candidate, a resident should be genuinely interested in and committed to public education and be motivated by a desire to serve the community.

Other criteria that the Plymouth Observer considers when endorsing candidates include: length of residency; knowledge of the district; vision for the district; whether candidates vote in school elections; membership in community organizations; previous service to community; involvement in district activities; membership on district committees; service beyond local school building level; and general knowledge of curriculum and school finance.

It is important to have residents run for school board rather than only incumbents or other candidates who are "favorite sons" of other school board members or of the administration. But "fresh faces" also must be informed, knowledgeable, and committed.

If you think you fit the bill, by all means take a trip to the school board office and pick up a nominating petition. We encourage you to do so.

Don't pick taxpayers' pockets

The Detroit Lions organization will be the next major entertainment facility in Michigan to get in line for state tax dollars to support a private venture.

The Detroit Tigers are in line, by invitation, for $55 million in public funding for road improvements, site development, parking, and other infrastructure improvements for a new ball stadium. This is wrong but is not the first time Michigan has made this error.

The state first committed this error when asked for public funding by these same Lions for road expansion and infrastructure surrounding the Pontiac Silverdome followed by annual operating subsidies. That was wrong, but we did it.

Now the Lions are "unhappy" with lease arrangements the club signed and wants the city of Pontiac, which owns the Silverdome, to renegotiate. If Pontiac won't offer better terms, the Lions say they will build a new stadium elsewhere. And if the state won't help them build a new stadium elsewhere, the Fords will sell the club to someone who will move the Lions out of the state.

Feeling like a hostage yet?

Don't. We should not allow ourselves to be held hostage.

Public funding of a new stadium for the Lions simply should not be discussed because it should not be an option. The Lions are a family-owned business. The state simply should not subsidize a private business.

Another objection is that state funding of a new Lions stadium would be counterproductive. Michigan taxpayers have supported the Silverdome, both with infrastructure and annual subsidies for nearly 20 years, expecting professional football teams to be the main users. Why should we now spend more tax dollars to destroy the purpose of our original expenditure? Did we originally pump our tax dollars into a large stadium only for rodeos, circuses, tractor pulls and big-time wrestling?

■ Once we spend tax dollars on baseball or football stadiums, we might as well spend public funds to improve the competitive status of Pine Knob, Masonic Temple, the Fox, etc.

State-of-the-art stadiums, like technology, change. The indoor Silverdome, with its dome and large screen TVs, was state-of-the-art when built in the 1970s. Now stadiums need more luxury suites to generate the income needed to be competitive. What will they need in 10 years? The challenge is to the Ford family, not the Engler family.

Bill Davidson built and privately financed a beautiful, functional, and fully competitive facility in The Palace of Auburn Hills to house the Detroit Pistons. Bill Ford and Mike Ilitch can do the same. Let's give them the opportunity to do so.

Once we spend tax dollars on baseball or football stadiums, we might as well spend public funds to improve the competitive status of Pine Knob, Masonic Temple, the Fox, etc.

There likely is an answer for the Lions' financial woes, but the fix is not in taxpayers' pockets.

Adult ed threatened

Gov. John Engler and the Michigan Legislature's proposal to cut out funding for Adult Education will hurt Michigan's families.

Gov. Engler and the Legislature the past few years have been intensely cutting these vital programs, programs that Michigan's families need. Instead of funding these programs they are giving Adult Education funding to wealthy companies such as Ford Motor, General Motors and Chrysler. Why are they doing this you ask? So these companies can send their employees to classes such as stress management and foreign languages. Are these classes necessary and vital to Michigan's families? I think not.

Why can't these companies further train employees out of their own profits instead of our pocketbooks? This is because Gov. Engler needs these companies financial support for his proposals, such as his Proposal A. For example, General Motors contributed $100,000 to his Proposal A campaign. Is it just coincidence that GM received $2,245,136 in grants from Adult Education funding?

Would we rather be training people to be independent of welfare or have GM send employees somewhere to learn German? The choice is ours, the taxpayers. Remember, we will pay the welfare benefits of the person who is unable to obtain job skills.

Our state elected officials approve the funding for these companies, but do not review and rule on each individual grant. That responsibility is given to a 20-member panel appointed by the governor himself. Among the appointees are Richard Devos, president of Amway Corp., and Samuel Valenti III, president of Masco Capital Corp.

Together Amway and Masco received $436,408 from the 20 appointees. Together they contributed $75,000 to Engler's Proposal A. (Source: Michigan Jobs Commission & Secretary of State Election Bureau) If this isn't politics at its worst I don't know what is.

We need this money to help individuals, not companies make more profits. True, we need companies to better themselves to make profits to help the economy. However, the taxpayers won't be paying the company's welfare bills when they don't receive training.

These proposals to give Adult Education funding to wealthy corporations is hurtful to Michigan. Write the governor, your state senator and representatives to stop this nonsense from happening. Michigan needs adult education!

Highway robbery

I am appalled by recent comments made by Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) officials regarding Canton's request for a new freeway interchange at I-275 and Cherry Hill, particularly in light of MDOT's recent decision to take $22 million of Wayne County's federal aid road money to build new state highways.

MDOT planner Tom Doyle said in a recent Observer article ("State mixes freeway interchange") that an interchange wasn't feasible since "local roads can't disperse the traffic." He goes on to say that the answer to Canton's traffic problem is improvements to the local road system and that "the township should work closely with Wayne County to realize (its) needs." In other words, if Canton wants a better road system, only Wayne County is responsible.

Perhaps Mr. Doyle, or more significantly, his supervisors, can answer one question: How is Wayne County supposed to improve its roads when MDOT is taking 75 percent of local governments' federal road improvement money?

Originally, Wayne County had four major road improvements planned for Canton during the next three years. Of those four, only one has funding available, thanks to the Michigan Department of Transportation. Looking further into the future, the addition of any new Canton projects is unlikely until 1999 or the year 2000 because of the expected loss of our federal funding.

The only way to stop this descent toward a real road crisis in Michigan is to raise the state gas tax enough to meet the needs of state and local roads. Otherwise, new freeway interchanges, smooth traffic flow and pothole-free roads will remain a pipe dream — and the highway robbery by MDOT will continue.

POINTS OF VIEW

Spring of 1996 arrives on slow-moving feet

Observe the signals sneaking up on us. Fantastic winds blast away the tiresome gray and sidewalks start to dry. You won't catch me whining about the supernatural storm pattern that dipsy-doodled around us for a relatively balmy winter. I didn't have the heart to indulge in gloating when folks back East shared their harrowing winter woes.

There were a couple of cold snaps that made traipsing to the mailbox a study in cryogenics, and I swear this sad house sounded as if it were breaking in two some nights when the furnace came roaring on.

The big breezes this past Saturday were so powerful that even with all the hatches battened I might've flown a kite in the kitchen. See that yellow stuff? Sun!

Enthusiastically, you throw open your windows with wild ideas of cleaning and airing the house. Selfishly, you stretch out in a sunbeam with a good book. I imagine the pleasure of a bike ride without the merciless muffling, skip out to the yard and plunge impressively up to my ankles in fresh mud.

I try to appreciate that earthy aroma as struggles to extricate myself cause the muck to suck my shoes off. I debate giving my steely steed a wash, but decide the salt and rust are holding it together until its check-up.

Off I twirl on an everchanging, educational tour of new and fascinating potholes for future reference and long for the leaves that will soon spare my eyes streaming tears of glare.

A somewhat sillier sign of spring must surely be the two love-smitten raccoons that have chosen the branch directly outside the bedroom window for their laughably loud trysting in the trees.

GUEST COLUMNIST

DOROTHY MATSU

I must admit to a certain fondness for the quiet of winter walks in the woods, a pleasure squelched last week when a band of madmen brought the non-stop yelping of dogsleds on wheels.

Better weather transforms the parks into obstacle courses where many appear intent on conquering nature rather than communing with it. Suddenly, the solemn sanctuary is stuffed with people tearing about on everything but their own two feet.

One can only sneak a peek at their surroundings while dodging fleets of cycling families whizzing past scores of untalented Rollerbladers flailing into joggers with perpetual agony plastered on their faces.

I prefer to saunter myself, a pace unpopular with frenzied weekend warriors. I recall only acting nonchalant while trying to read the intent of some huge hounds slobbering by unattended when beautiful horses came clip-clopping round the bend.

Pausing to admire their magnificence, the head cowgal screeched at me to get away from the path.

Bewildered and embarrassed, I careened onto what looked like a safe footpath. I hardly feared getting lost as the shrill squeals of assorted offspring rang thoughout the woods.

If you ever wish to meet the rudest creatures on earth, they are to be round on what I soon discovered was not a footpath, but a mountain bike trail.

They cared not that I had to bail out into the brambles as they lurched past my spitting and swearing like Spandex sailors. For now, I will savor the soft, slow approach of spring, this slip of a season with all its sweet surprises.

Uncommitted delegates: They can pack a wallop

The Republican-voting lady gave me her impressions of Dole, Buchanan, Forbes and Alexander (all bad) and asked: "Can I vote for None of The Above?"

No, but you have two other options in the March 19 Republican presidential primary: 1) Write in another name — say, Kemp or Powell or Wilson — 2) or vote "Uncommitted."

As a practical matter, a write-in vote has been a waste of time ever since the demise of the paper ballot. It's hard to recall an election where a write-in effort had any impact.

But "Uncommitted" is another matter. A party may send "Uncommitted" delegates to its national convention. In a tight contest, they could make a difference. We'd have a brokered convention, just like we had through the first half of the century. As it is, the parties throw four-day conventions for which the results are known weeks in advance; delegates must spend a lot of money and use up vacation time but exercise no power.

Brokered conventions have an undeserved bad name, conjuring up images of bosses in smoke-filled rooms. Actually, delegates often know the inside dirt about candidates. I doubt Tom Eagleton or Spiro Agnew would have been nominated if delegates had free choices.

Michigan Democrats will have "Uncommitted" on their March 16 caucus ballots, too, in case anyone is less than fully enchanted with Bill Clinton.

The idea of voting for NOTA — "none of the above" — has a bit of support. House Bill 4794, sponsored by state Rep. Greg Kaza, R-Rochester Hills, would allow a NOTA option. To get it through committee, Kaza had it amended to apply only to his 42nd House District in the Aug. 6 primary. If it happens, the NOTA vote would be only advisory.

TIM RICHARD

My hunch is that Pat Buchanan will lead everybody, in part because of the religious right, in part because of unhappy workers, and in large part because Democrats will cross over.

"In an ideal world," Kaza said, "if NOTA got enough votes, the election would have to be conducted over again." California legislators are considering such an ideal bill.

Kaza handed me a sheaf of paper from Nevada, where NOTC ("None Of These Candidates") has been on the ballot since 1976. Some results are startling. In the 1980 primary, NOTC got more votes for president than George Bush (R) and Ted Kennedy (D). NOTC led the 1986 Democratic ticket for state treasurer. NOTC beat the two Republican contenders for U.S. representative in 1976 and '78 and the Republican secretary of state candidates in 1978.

But the novelty seems to have worn off, and lately fewer Nevadans vote NOTC.

In Michigan, NOTA is supported by Ted Bohlen of Plymouth and Vicky Beeman of Novi, both active in Ross Perot's United We Stand America movement. "It's time we put an end to the Tweedle Dee, Tweedle Dum candidates choices," Beeman wrote to Kaza.

In Michigan's 1992 presidential primary, 5 percent in both parties voted "Uncommitted."

I doubt the "Uncommitted" turnout will be much higher in the March 16 Democratic caucus and March 19 Republican primary, despite the lady quoted in the opening paragraph. My hunch is that Pat Buchanan will lead everybody, in part because of the religious right, in part because of unhappy workers, and in large part because Democrats will cross over and do mischief to the Republicans.

Michiganians are like that.

New proficiency test a tool for improving our schools

Starting this week, some 110,000 students in 11th grade will take the new Michigan High School Proficiency Test. It won't be easy.

Covering math, science, reading and writing, the new test will consume more than 11 hours over a two-week period. Much tougher than the old Michigan Educational Assessment Program (MEAP) that it replaces, the new proficiency tests stress writing and creative problem-solving skills and downgrade multiple-choice questions.

The writing test, for example, will ask students to analyze their own writing as well as to write original essays on assigned topics. The reading portion will involve three passages on the same theme; students will be asked to identify the theme and analyze it.

The new tests will determine whether students get a state endorsement on their high school diplomas. Given the current climate in Lansing, they will also likely play a role in whether individual schools receive accreditation for full state funding.

Like upgrading for the MEAP tests, scoring the new tests cannot be done entirely by computer. The majority of the grading will be done by the contractor which is administering the test for the state. Results are not expected until August.

With the new test, Michigan joins a national movement to assess what students actually learn in school. Seventeen states have tests that students must pass in order to graduate, and three others — now including Michigan — offer a state diploma endorsement for students who demonstrate satisfactory achievement in given subjects.

Not surprisingly, the new test is causing a fair amount of anxiety.

Kids are worried over the length of the tests and their reputed difficulty. Parents who have seen their 11th-graders sweat over the MEAP test are wondering why the kids must go through the whole rigamarole again. Teachers wonder whether they have prepared their students properly. Administrators grumble about having to jam an additional 11 hours for test-taking into an already crowded schedule.

Beyond the short-term aggravation, many wonder just how much difference the new proficiency test is going to make. Will colleges really base their admissions decisions on test results, or will they stick with the national ACT and SAT scores? Will employers, who have been complaining for years that high school diplomas are meaningless, really start looking for state endorsements while conducting job interviews?

PHILIP POWER

Seventeen states have tests that students must pass in order to graduate, and three others — now including Michigan — offer a state diploma endorsement.

I can sympathize with much of the concern. Examination periods for my 13-year-old son aren't exactly delicious times around my own household.

But at the end of the day, I firmly believe that the new proficiency tests mark yet another milestone on the way to fundamental improvement in our public schools.

Many criticized the use of MEAP tests to evaluate what children learn, on the perfectly legitimate grounds that this was not what MEAP was designed for. But most agreed that some data were better than no data, especially if the data gave parents and school people an objective way of evaluating their success in helping kids learn.

Now we have the new proficiency test, explicitly designed to assess what kids actually learn. Sure it will be tough, and certainly it will force teachers and parents to rethink just how they teach and review what they teach.

After all, as they used to say at IBM, "You cannot manage what you cannot measure." Over time, these new tests will provide the customers of our school system — students, parents, teachers, employers, taxpayers — a measure of outcome. And once we have a measure of outcome, we can begin the task of managing the process by which our children learn.

Good luck, 11th-graders! It probably won't do you any good when you're sweating over a tough math problem, but you should realize that you are taking the first step in an important leap forward for our schools.

If you answer "yes" to three or more of these questions, you may be a compulsive overeater. You are not alone. Millions of Americans suffer from this disease.

Compulsive overeating is a painful, relentless illness that interferes with every aspect of life. It is a disease that gets progressively worse if left untreated.

Weight gain often accompanies this illness. But not always. Many compulsive overeaters maintain normal body weight by strict diets, fasting, strenuous exercise, vomiting, or excessive laxative use. These methods are ineffective and medically dangerous.

Weight is not the problem, and dieting is not the solution. The problem is the disease of compulsive overeating, and the solution is a program of treatment and recovery.

The Eating Disorders Clinic (EDC) of St. Mary Hospital offers an outpatient treatment program that leads to lasting recovery. Our approach is comprehensive. We help our patients make lifestyle changes that give them renewed confidence in themselves and more control over their lives. Gradually, the chronic binge/diet cycle is replaced by a healthy, more satisfying, and more productive way of life. With food in its proper place, weight normalizes.

At EDC, we work as a team -- psychiatrist, physician, nutritionist, and specially trained therapists -- to diagnose and treat eating disorders. This experienced staff provides treatment with understanding and sensitivity.

If compulsive overeating is a problem for you, or someone you love, take the first step toward recovery. Call us today at (313) 655-2936 or 1-800-494-1654. WE CAN HELP.

Redford man is grand marshal for St. Pat's parade

Shamrocks will be sprouting on Michigan Avenue as the 38th Annual St. Patrick's Parade — Detroit's largest ethnic event of the year — steps off at 2 p.m., Sunday.

Presiding over this year's parade will be Grand Marshal James I. Butler of Redford Township.

The parade begins at Michigan Avenue and Third Street in downtown Detroit, proceeding westward on Michigan Avenue to 14th St.

Sponsored by the United Irish Societies of Detroit, the theme of this year's parade is "A Nation Once Again," symbolizing the hope that peace talks will result in the re-unification of Ireland.

The UIS is a federation of 21 Irish-American clubs and groups in the metropolitan area. It sponsors and organizes the parade through delegates from each member organization.

Expected to attract more than 100,000 people, local communities will be represented by bands, clowns and floats and marchers. Families will march in a special unit entitled "the Calling of the Clans."

Unanimously elected as 1996 grand marshal was Jim Butler, a delegate from the Knights of Equity, an Irish fraternal society. "Butler was chosen out of recognition for his tireless dedication to Detroit's Irish community," said parade chairman Joe Parsky.

A symbolic "Painting of the Shamrocks" on Michigan Avenue will highlight pre-parade festivities at 11:45 a.m., Friday, March 8. The event — to be followed by a complimentary boiled dinner — will take place in front of the Gaelic League/Irish-American Club, 2068 Michigan Avenue near Wabash.

Kicking off Sunday's parade festivities will be the 1996 Corktown Races in front of Tiger Stadium. Sponsored by the Motor City Striders, the race benefits the St. Patrick's senior center in Cass Corridor which serves hundreds of elderly and homeless every day of the year.

On tap are a quarter-mile run/walk at 12:30 p.m.; a one-and-a-half mile run/walk at 12:30; and a four-mile run at 1 p.m.

Parade Day Mass is set for 10:30 a.m., Sunday March 10 at St. Patrick's Church, 58 Parsons Avenue in Detroit.

S'craft looks for ways to serve older students

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

The face of the community college student is changing — it's aging.

That's the message the Schoolcraft College Board of Trustees heard last week from Conway Jeffress, vice president of instruction at the college.

Along with that changing student comes issues such as more night courses and the need to add security on campus, faculty members who need to understand how to work with older students rather than just 18-year-olds and an increased emphasis on child care, he said.

Many colleges are facing dropping enrollments, Jeffress said. A reason for that is the decline in the number of people in the traditional college age group, he said.

Schools are failing to reposition themselves, he said.

"One of the major shifts you see here is from credit to noncredit courses," he said. Students in continuing education or non-credit courses are the fastest growing segment at Schoolcraft with nearly 28,000 students, Jeffress said.

Credit students are still basically of typical college age, while continuing education students range from small children in the talented and gifted program to senior citizens.

Continuing education services are now an "absolute major player," he said. Schoolcraft's program is the third largest in Michigan, smaller only than Lansing and Macomb community colleges. There are no nearby competitors, not even Oakland Community College, he said.

The number of students attending classes on weekends or through telecourses is also increasing, with 8 percent of students in those programs.

Also, many of the college's courses begin in the evening now. But even though nearly all of the continuing education courses are evening courses, the college still gears most of its resources toward the daytime, Jeffress said.

"But customer-wise we're looking more and more evening with each passing term," he said.

Another change in the face of the college student, is the creation and success of the business and industry segment of the college, he said.

The college of business development is primarily funded through grants, and is now bringing in more than $1 million a year. It began almost 15 years ago, and now has between 4,000 and 5,000 students.

Jeffress cautioned that raising tuition to meet rising costs and putting a large part of the tuition increase burden on out-of-district students could be a mistake. "I have a serious concern about the way we increase our tuition," he said.

"The college always places the burden on out-of-district students, which make up 40 percent of the enrollment, he said. "You can't price yourself out of 40 percent of the enrollment," he said.

Other policy implications include child care, security and lighting.

"This can be a fairly frightening place at 10 or 10:30 at night," he said.

Saundra Florek, dean of marketing at the college, said the security and lighting issue is being looked at by the college, and signs, lights and security are being increased.

Traveling down a different road

I'm traveling down a road I've never traveled before. And since you're here with me, I'll share the journey with you.

Our family, as you might already know, was blessed with the birth of baby Steven on Feb. 16. I wrote of his dramatic arrival en route to the hospital last week. What I didn't tell you then, but I knew, was that this very special baby, this miracle of ours, was born with Down syndrome.

My family — husband Ron, sons Tony, Joe and Jack, daughter Carmen and I — have been entrusted with the precious life of a baby so gentle and quiet. He's touched and changed our lives for the good, forever. All of us, including not yet 2-year-old Jack, have gathered baby Steven into our arms and into our hearts and we're never letting go.

From his miraculous birth in the van on that bitter cold, winter night, with just Ron and me and God there, our gentle baby continues to beat the odds. As I type these words on the computer screen in my den, Steven is sleeping near me. We're now home. And that's the best feeling. The whole family is together and that, although to many may not seem like much, is everything. He is, at this writing, 11 days old and he is growing and blooming and eating.

Eating, though, wasn't easy those first days of his life. I learned that this is both common and serious. A Down syndrome baby typically has

Community embraces new retreat

■ Mothballed in 1988, the former St. John's Seminary in Plymouth Township has opened its doors again. But instead of training young men to be priests, it's a retreat center for youth and families.

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Once mothballed and put on the real estate market by the Archdiocese of Detroit, St. John Seminary in Plymouth Township is breathing new life into the area's religious community as the St. John Center for Youth and Family.

"The way I see it is we sit at the height of Wayne County; we overlook the whole area," said the Rev. John West, the center's director and pastor. "One of the neatest things we've been able to do is light up the tower. At night it looks like a light house and that's what my hope for the place is — that we'll be a beacon of hope for the whole metropolitan area.

"People will come here and be renewed or find a depth dimension for their life and take it back home."

The center, which sits on 200 acres of land, will focus on strengthening the faith of youths with its premiere program being The Cardinal Maida Institute for Youth Leadership Formation.

"It's really to reach out to what many have called, 'the lost generation,' people beyond high school," West said. "We do a real good job with programs for kids and all that. But we really need to focus on that generation that's going to take the reins."

Now open: Among the first to use St. John Center for Youth and Family, Audrey and Lou Schneider (at left) walk the halls of the former seminary while Larry Donnellon talks to center director Rev. John West.

The program will offer, for example, Sunday evening services where young adults do the readings and the music; and Reflection Circles, an organized way to discuss what it is to be a Christian or a Catholic in the world where the focus will be put on scriptures, current events or certain concerns.

"There's not a whole lot of places that are open to youths," West said. "We decided to design this so it would serve youths. We could have them come out here so they know this is their home."

Although youths are the center's focus, it also offers Engaged Encounters for soon-to-be-married couples, Marriage Encounters so married couples can "find new life in their marriage," and Retrovaille, a program named for the French word for recovery where folks who are having what experts call "low muscle tone." That means the muscles are floppy and not strong. And this "low muscle tone" affects even the muscles in the jaw, making eating difficult. The tiny baby must be "taught" to eat.

This was so very different for me. My other four children were very eager eaters from the very start, from the first moments after birth. I remember remarking as I nursed that very first time with the baby just minutes old, "Where do they learn how to do this? This is amazing!"

And so with baby Steven, things were much different. He didn't have the strength or the muscle tone to take in nourishment. And when you weigh only 7 pounds, 11 ounces, you don't want to let too many hours go by without eating. Too many hours did. I tried all the things recommended by the nurses and doctors and in the books I'd received in the two days following Steven's birth.

Through the five hours following our release from the hospital that Sunday afternoon, the tiny child became virtually motionless. We couldn't keep him awake, if we even could get him awake. He hadn't eaten in more than 12 hours. And his body temperature was dropping.

I was told to bring him to Urgent Care immediately. So Grandma and Grandpa, who'd traveled across the state to meet their new grandson that very afternoon, and my sister, who also came to welcome Steven, stayed with our four other children while Ron and I drove to Urgent Care, located in the same facility Steven and I had just been released from that afternoon.

What ensued in that place was heart-wrenching. For three hours our baby, so new to this world and so utterly defenseless, was handed more pain than even I, a 38-year-old woman with five children and a surgically repaired knee, have ever endured. His little veins were so small that many trials were needed to get an IV going. They poked him for blood samples many times. They filled small vials, slowly, his blood just wasn't coming out into the tubes fast enough. The oxygen blown in his nose made a strange hissing sound, a sound a newborn shouldn't have to listen to.

The beeps of the monitors and the tourniquets on his tiny, lax arms made me me sad. I wished I could get through to my baby to tell him that this is not at all what life is about, that life is fun and hopeful and good and doesn't hurt so much. It's soft blankets and bright toys and warm milk and gentle arms encircling you. And piano music and laughter and smells of brownies baking in the oven.

Baby Steven was admitted to the hospital that night. I stayed with him, in his room on the pediatric floor. Although there was a cot in the room for me, I couldn't sleep. I prayed and watched. He was in an incubator with an oxygen shield over his head. He had an IV for food and an IV for antibiotics hooked into his tiny foot, he had wires on his chest, a wire on his toe, and a TV-like monitor suspended from the ceiling over his head which beeped when something wasn't right. It was a scary and long night, the scariest and longest I've ever known.

The next three days I stayed at his side and watched. We didn't have many visitors, his condition was precarious. But the prayers of friends and relatives worked miracles, and the doctors and nurses worked their miracles, and Steven is home now. Where he belongs, in the arms and forever the hearts of his family.

Surgical Breakthroughs
Family Reunion.

This morning she was in surgery. Tonight, she's back home with her family. Later this week she'll return to work. And to think that just a few years ago, this same procedure would have meant many days in the hospital and weeks of recovery. Not a "family reunion" the same day.

New techniques like laser and laparoscopic surgery are revolutionizing gallbladder and appendix removal, laser prostatectomy, gynecological procedures and more. The result is less pain and faster recuperation for the patient.

Surgeons at St. Mary Hospital have taken the lead in offering these breakthroughs to our patients. They know how important it is to have the strengths and staffing of a full-service hospital available, should special needs arise. And they understand that the sooner a family member can return home and to work, the better it is for that family's economic and emotional health.

If being reunited with your family the same day you have surgery appeals to you, call us. We'll tell you more about laparoscopy and laser surgery.

ANNIVERSARIES

McQueen

Bennie and Pauline McQueen of Redford will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary by returning to the same Tennessee town in which they were married.

The McQueens exchanged vows in Union City, Tenn.

He retired from the Continental Can Co. in Melvindale in 1982 and she retired from the former Fisher Body in Livonia in 1985.

Fein

Jack and Kathy Fein of Garden City were the guests of honor at a dinner celebration, marking their 25th wedding anniversary and his 50th birthday.

The Feins exchanged vows on March 26, 1971, in Plymouth. She is the former Kathy Waling.

The couple lived in Colorado for nine years before moving to Garden City. He works at Fairway Construction in Southfiled, while she works at Pauli's Hallmark Shop in Garden City.

The couple exchanged wedding vows on Feb. 19, 1946, in Langdon, N.D. She is the former Lucy Reidhammer.

Wilhelmi

The Wilhelmis have lived in Garden City for 39½ years. They have nine children — Wayne, Sharon, Glenn, Thomas, Terrence, Daniel, Mary Ann, Steven and Sandra — and 13 grandchildren.

Dyer shows how to 'Awaken the Miracle'

"Staying on the Path" with Dr. Wayne W. Dyer can be both challenging and fun. The booklet is a compilation of some of his more pithy sayings.

But if you want to experience radical change in your inner and outer world, you might follow Sue Berlin's path. She purchased Dyer's tape "Meditations for Manifesting: Morning and Evening Meditations to Literally Create Your Heart's Desire," and her life has never been the same.

Founder and president of Sue Serlin Enterprises in Southfield, she began listening to the tape and practicing the power sounds.

"It's amazing," she said. "My business increased so dramatically that I had difficulty keeping up with the inquiries."

Serlin sells long-term care insurance to assure coverage for those who don't wish to choose between their homes and long-term care. She believes that "Meditations" made it possible for her to reach a larger segment of the population.

Dyer is one of the most widely read authors in the human potential field. He has sold more than 40 million books worldwide, including "Your Erroneous Zones," "Real Magic" and "Your Sacred Self."

Serlin believes that in addition to her increased prosperity, Dyer's work has enabled her to experience an inner feeling of peace. People have been coming up to her and asking, "What have you been doing? You look great. You seem changed in some way."

People who would like to experience what Serlin has can when Dyer comes to Hill Auditorium on the University of Michigan campus in Ann Arbor on Saturday, March 9, to teach participants how to "Awaken the Miracle Within." The three-hour program begins at 10 a.m.

Sponsored by Pyramyd Productions, Inc., in association with the University of Michigan Office of Major Events, tickets are $29.50 and are available through the UM ticket office at (313) 763-TKTS, or through all TicketMaster outlets, (810) 645-6666.

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene,

I find reading your column extremely interesting because of the diversity of all the analyzed handwriting. I am 39 years old, married and the mother of two teen-age sons. I work outside my home part time and enjoy dancing as a hobby, if time permits. I am constantly busy and also involved in civic duty when needed. I'm interested in your reply on my cursive technique! I am right-handed, and I do enjoy writing.

D.,
Dearborn Heights

Today's writer is a young woman who is proud and independent. She feels everything deeply, happy or sad. She appears to be prepared to defend her strong convictions.

Early in life, she wanted to be independent and may have been a tad resistant to parental authority. Her need to be in control is strong.

Methodical, careful and sequential would describe her thinking pattern. She is not gullible and dislikes being rushed. She enjoys things which are a challenge to her mind.

Most of the time, she is self-motivated and self-reliant. Order and organization are important to her.

Determination is outstanding and pervasive. Among other things this speaks of her ability to make decisions and follow through with action.

She appears to be good at problem-solving. She can eliminate the superfluous and has limited room in her thinking for non-essentials.

Intutition serves her well in both thinking and acting. She is capable of making judgments from quick impressions.

This is an achiever! She sets challenging goals for herself. She seems inclined to formulate her plans as she moves along in her work and activities.

She is a busy woman and is well-acquainted with the fact that judicious use of time is one the major contributors to her success.

Our writer has been blessed with a sense of humor. She can laugh at herself as well as the antics of others. In addition, she is good natured, well-mannered and considerate of others.

She enjoys people and her activities with them. But she also reserves time for her personal interests and/or talents. Seemingly, she is feeling some concern about the future or someone in it.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies are not possible. However, objective feedback is welcome.

FREE "LIVING TRUST" SEMINAR
"What You Ought to Know About Living Trusts"
(What you don't know could cost your family thousands of dollars!)
If you own a home...or you have assets worth at least $100,000...you owe it to yourself—and your family—to get the facts on living trusts. If you think you're protected with a simple Will...think again... A Will guarantees that your estate will go through probate, which means that your family may not be able to take possession of your estate for many months, or even years!
Plus, if your estate is over $600,000, your family may owe estate taxes which could amount to 37-55% of the value of your estate. This means that your family may have to sell some assets just to pay the estate taxes!
A living trust avoids all this by avoiding probate and minimizing estate taxes. Plus, a living trust will protect your estate if you become incapacitated during your lifetime by avoiding a conservatorship. This means your estate will be managed as you see fit, not as a court-appointed guardian sees fit.
To find out more about the benefits of living trusts, attend one of these free seminars...

Motion by Bennett, supported by McLaughlin, to adopt the resolution granting Final approval of the Preliminary Plat for Pheasant Woods Subdivision.

Supervisor Yack said that project contains 55 lots on 19 acres, with 3 units per acre density. He said that the subdivision extends Pheasant Run Drive west and jogs down to become Princess Drive, which proceeds west to Lilley Road and intersects at the current Princess Drive. He said that the road design should eliminate some of the existing traffic on Simcoe and will not create a direct route through the subdivision. He added that the developers were granted a variance for width to depth ratio for lots 8, 24, 31 and 32 to accommodate the required curvilinear street. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion by Bennett, supported by McLaughlin, to adopt the resolution granting Site Plan approval for Hayward Professional Office Building. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion by Bennett, supported by McLaughlin, to adopt the resolution approving the request to rezone 29.35 acres located on the north side of Ford Road east of Lotz from MR, Multiple-Family Residential, and LI-1, Light Industrial, to C-3, Regional Commercial. Motion carried unanimously.

Motion by Bennett, supported by Kirchgatter, to award the bid for the $1,590,000. Charter Township of Canton 1996 Special Assessment Bonds (LTGO) to the low bidder EVEREN Securities, Inc. and to adopt the awarding resolution. Motion carried unanimously.

Mike Whorf on squeaks, squawks and radio greats

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

Straight man George Burns had his "addlebrained" Gracie Allen when radio was king.

Frank Sinatra made his less-than-stellar singing debut on "Major Edward Bowes and His Original Amateur Hour" when radio was king.

And Hollywood's big names — Boris Karloff, Edward G. Robinson, Doris Day and Judy Garland — were familiar voices on the airwaves when radio was king.

"A lot of performers made names for themselves on radio," said Mike Whorf, who is no stranger to the medium. The host of WJR radio's "Kaleidoscope," he opened the new year for Livonia Town Hall with a trip worth taking down memory lane.

With slides and tape recordings, Sinatra's squawky singing, Burns' "Say good night, Gracie," and the squeaky door, the hallmark of the "Inner Sanctum," were heard once again by an audience well-acquainted with radio's golden age.

A native of Cape Cod, Mass., who was introduced to radio while in Air Force boot camp, Whorf worked at radio stations in Cape Cod and near Philadelphia before coming to Detroit in 1964 where he transformed WJR's 15-minute foreign music program, "Kaleidoscope," into stories interwoven with music.

"I told (sportscaster) Paul Carey I had an idea and he said, 'Go ahead and do it, nobody listens to the show,'" Whorf said. "The next day I had to see the station manager. He said, 'I don't know what you're doing, but keep doing it. The phones are ringing off the hook.'"

Changing times

In many ways, Whorf's lecture was a "kaleidoscope," touching on radio's early history — "In the early days, it was mostly static and squeaky voices, and late at night the signal got stronger and you might hear music." — and the changes that made commercial radio acceptable to listeners.

"The advent of singing commercials made commercials acceptable," Whorf said. "Like Jones and Hare, known as the Interwoven Pair, who sold socks."

It was only a hop, skip and jump from commercials to sponsorship with companies like Lipton Tea and Lipton Soup presenting the "Inner Sanctum" mysteries and the Lux Radio Theatre presenting "Hollywood."

And a lot of Hollywood's great performers were on radio. The "machismo voice" of Steve Wilson, editor of the crusading newspaper on "Big Town," was Edward G. Robinson while Clair Trevor played society editor Lorelei Kilbourne. Boris Karloff performed in many of the "Inner Sanctum" mysteries, and Orson Welles was the first to play "The Shadow, mysterious character that aids the forces of law and order, (who) is really Lamont Cranston."

Radio's 'best'

And "some of the best of radio was heard" on the "Bob Hope Show" with singers Judy Garland, Doris Day and Frances Langford, band member Les Brown and the comedian's recognizable theme, "Thanks for the Memories."

"It's just one man's opinion, but the greatest comic on the radio was Jack Benny," said Whorf. "His timing was unbelievable, his writers were supreme, and his cast of supporting characters was the best."

And mixed in were a dozen quiz shows, "the best by far," according to Whorf, being "You Bet Your Life" where Groucho Marx would interview contestants and mix in humor.

While families gathered around the radio to be entertained at night, daytime programming include soap operas, 15-minute shows that aired between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Whorf credits Frank and Anne Hummert with creating the American soap opera. Prolific writers, they had nothing less than 20 hits on the radio.

"The Guiding Light" told the story of the Rev. Ruthledge, and "Young Dr. Malone" practiced at Oaks Medical Center, but "the quintessential soap of the era was 'The Romance of Helen Trent.'" A fashion designer, Helen "sets out to prove that because a woman is 35, romance in life need not be over."

Natural mix

And news on the radio was a natural, it went together like a hand and glove, according to Whorf. People were transfixed listening to news of the war, reported by the likes of Edward R. Murrow who headed CBS's crackerjack news department, Eric Sevareid, Howard K. Smith and Lowell Thomas, the "dean of broadcasting" who signed off with "So long until tomorrow."

But if one show were to be tagged as the greatest show on radio during its golden age, the award would go to the Oct. 31, 1938, broadcast of "War of the Worlds" with Orson Welles.

"People panicked, families bundled into their cars to drive into the country, and people ran out of their houses to look at the sky. It proved to all that radio was a medium of great power and that people trusted radio."

For those who hanker to hear Whorf more than once a week, he has a collection of some 1,300 tapes of his work for sale. Brochures are available by writing to Whorf Productions, 5455 Forest Way, Bloomfield Hills 48302.

And for those who want to hear more about music, circle Wednesday, March 20, on your calendar. Weldon Petz will be the guest and his topic will be "The History and Sounds of the Big Band Era." It's something he should know quite well, considering he was a member of the Horace Heidt, Johnny Long and Jimmy Dorsey bands.

The Livonia Town Hall lecture will be 10:30 a.m. at Burton Manor, on Schoolcraft west of Inkster Road, Livonia. Tickets are $10. Lunch reservations, costing $12, must be made by Friday, March 15, by calling Dee Cullen at (313) 525-4596.

difficulty in their marriage can come out and in a "very calm, serene environment, find some help."

Community embrace

So far, the community is embracing the center. Its recent World Marriage Day program attracted 400 people who gathered to celebrate marriage. The center, which is open to all denominations, expects the same amount of people, or more, at the grand opening celebration in May.

"What we're doing a lot of this year is promotional events — to get people out here to see the place and dream with us about how we can best use it," West said.

What sets St. John Center for Youth and Family apart from other retreat centers is the fact that it is the first diocesan center exclusively aimed at family and youth programming.

"There's nothing like it in the country," he said. "When the Cardinal (Adam Maida) asked me to be the director of the place, he told me to go anywhere in the country and find similar centers and copy their programs and make them better. (But) it doesn't exist.

"I'm really proud that the church has decided in this kind of way to say that family and youth are very important. They're the future but they're also the present. This place will be a rallying point for all kinds of good programs."

■ 'I'm really proud that the church has decided in this kind of way to say that family and youth are very important. They're the future but they're also the present.'

Rev. John West

Built in 1949, St. John Seminary was originally used as the state's theology center.

"It was a major building project of the time," said West who was a student at the seminary in 1974-1978. "It was a major statement that we were going to train our own priests here in the state, instead of being sent to Ohio or maybe Washington. We wanted to bring that training home."

The theology center closed in 1988 when the archdiocese decided to move all the operations of priestly formation to Sacred Heart Major Seminary in Detroit. Everything, including the stations of the cross in the seminary's main chapel, was removed from the building and sold.

"That left this building closed and we mothballed it," said West. "We had the intent of selling it just because we consolidated everything at Sacred Heart Major Seminary."

A new purpose

Then came Cardinal Maida who, at the urging of local parishes, announced on March 17, 1994, that the building would be reopened as a family and youth center where families, youth, and married and engaged couples could get away for spiritual enhancement.

"When people heard we would reopen, they thought we would unlock the doors and that was it," West said. "We decided to take a look at it and see how we might improve the building, so it might be of better use. Between March of 1994 and January 1996, we involved ourselves in some major renovations."

The $4 million, 18-month renovation project included turning some of the single student rooms into suits, adding a new entrance, a circular driveway around the building, and enhancing the gymnasium which offers walleyball, volleyball, bowling, racquetball and basketball.

West said the archdiocese hopes the center will be self-sufficient and not have to rely on benefits or fund raisers to keep it going.

"We own the golf course that surrounds it, St. John's Golf Course, which had a freshening up; we hope that the revenue from the golf course will underwrite all that we do here," West said. "The only cost to the people will be for room and board, food and guest speakers. We'll take care of the rest."

The revitalization of St. John's has only just begun. Only part of the building was renovated, leaving a good portion of it unused. There are tentative plans to finish polishing the building.

"There's more to the building so stay tuned; we're going to go slow and decide the best way to make full use of this tremendous center," West said. "There's good parishes here. There's lively parishes. This is a support. This is going to help in even a deeper way to encourage people to grow and mature in their faith wherever they are in life.

"We can say we're pro-family and pro-life, but this is where we show we are."

BPW 'welcomes' spring with style

Spring will arrive in style when Barbara Carey and Barbara Mazer of "Take Time Fashion" introduce spring fashions from the stores of Twelve Oaks Mall at the Garden City Business and Professional Women's third annual "Parade of Fashion" fundraiser Sunday, March 24.

"We're so happy to be able to put on a fashion show for the community," said Joyce Pappas, who with BPW members Amelia Oliverio, Polly Wroblewski, Doris Closser, Margaret Woodruff and Beth Csicsila have been planning the benefit. "This club is very community-oriented and the members have a wonderful time doing this."

The "talk" fashion show will feature clothes from Twelve Oaks' Lillie Rubin, Hudson's, Ann Taylor and Liz Claiborne stores. A variety of daytime, evening and casual wear will be featured.

Jyl Forsyth of WYCD-FM "Young Country" radio will serve as the celebrity mistress of ceremonies.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Garden City BPW Scholarship Fund and the local organization. The BPW awards annual scholarships of more than $1,500 to women who are returning to the workforce and who need training.

The fashion show has also helped raised $1,000 that will be used for an honor scholarship for a graduating senior at Garden City High School, Pappas said.

The benefit will start at 12:30 p.m. at the Italian American Banquet Center, 39200 Five Mile, between Haggerty and Newburgh roads in Livonia. Tickets are $25 and include lunch and a chance to win one of the more than 75 special door prizes.

Prizes include gift certificates for travel, personal services, jewelry, gift packages for an overnight stay at Bay Valley Resort and dinners at Genitti's, Montanna's, New Peking and the Red Robin and aboard the Star Clipper Dinner Train.

Gift certificates also have been donated by Merricraft Florist of Livonia, the Hair Hut of Garden City, Misty's of Garden City and Gordon Chevrolet.

Also included is a watercolor, "Baraka," by Todd Marsee, a graphic artist from Plymouth who has exhibited in galleries and at art shows throughout Michigan and Ohio.

A special raffle will held for the scholarship fund. Tickets are $1 each or six for $5.

First- and second-prize winners will receive a midweek overnight stay at the Sugar Loaf Resort in northern Michigan. The package also includes 18 holes of golf with cart for two and complimentary Leelanaw Sands Casino player passbook.

Fourth prize is a $100 travel gift certificate compliments of The Travel Desk in Garden City. Fifth and sixth prizes are 18 holes of golf with cart for two at Sugar Loaf Resort courtesy of the resort.

With seating for 350, club members are hoping for a sellout. The deadline for ordering tickets is Sunday, March 17. Tickets are available by calling Joyce Pappas at Orin Jewelers at 422-7030. They also can be purchased from Garden City BPW members, at Orin Jewelers, Ford and Middlebelt roads, Garden City, and by mail at P.O. Box 549, Garden City 48135.

BPW/USA, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs Inc., is the world's oldest and largest organization for working women. BPW is dedicated to achieving full participation in the workforce, equity and economic self-sufficiency for working women.

Founded in 1919, BPW promotes legislation and public policy of concern to working working and families and provides a variety of services and training for its members.

The Garden City BPW is one of 34,000 local organizations dedicated to elevating the standards for women in business and the professions, promoting the interests of professional men and women, working to achieve a spirit of cooperation among business and professional women and men in the United States, and extending opportunities to business and professional women through education.

Care-ousel artwork is featured in show

A traveling exhibit of artwork created by children who have participated in Arbor Hospice's Care-ousel art therapy sessions will make a stop in Detroit during March.

"Art from the Heart" will be on display in the hospital chapel of Children's Hospital of Detroit March 5-31, coinciding with Children's Hospital Week March 17-23.

Care-ousel offers grief support for children who are seriously ill, or who have a loved one who is terminally ill as well as children who are struggling with the loss of someone close to them.

The program is for children ages 5-18 and divides them into age-specific groups for appropriate counseling. Last year alone, Care-ousel worked with more than 800 children, their classmates, family and friends.

Art therapy, one of the services provided, teaches children to use art to identify and express feelings about the disease/dying process while developing coping skills.

Through the creation of art, grieving children gain a sense of empowerment in what often feels like a powerless situation. Creating imagery and the use of metaphor are safe, non-threatening ways for the child to ask questions, explore fears and worries, share secret hopes and wishes, express rage and guilt, strengthen strengths and seek comfort.

The art can be a way in which children and adults together can share in and communicate about their pain and courage when someone in the family has a serious illness. The art serves as a visual testimony of love during a time of grief.

"Art from the Heart" also will be making stops March 16 at the Michigan Coalition for Cancer Survivors Conference at Mercy High School in Famington and July 17-21 at the International Hospice Conference at the Crowne Plaza-Ann Arbor.

Rosedale thespian troups presents 'Calamity Jane'

BY SUE MASON
STAFF WRITER

The sights and sounds of the Wild West will come alive in the basement of Rosedale Gardens Presbyterian Church this weekend when its in-house thespian troupe presents its annual musical, "Calamity Jane."

This is the 25th year the church has presented a musical, and the 25th year Martha Kuykendall has been at the helm as director. Helping her is a cast and crew of 50 church members.

"The first one we did was a 'Let's do a musical' and we did it and we got hooked," said Kuykendall. "And most of the people who are in it now were in it when we started."

The musical is an adaptation by Charles K. Freeman of the 1950s film of the same name that starred starring Doris Day. Taking on the role of Jane is church music director Carolyn Banta with Dan Williams as "Wild Bill" Hickok.

Katie Brown is pulling double duty as the musical's choreographer and as Catherine Stage, while David Conrad has been cast in the role of Lt. Danny Gilmartin.

Kuykendall has been responsible for bringing such renowned musicals as "The Sound of Music," "Fiddler on the Roof" and "South Pacific" to life on the basement stage of the church. But with 25 years of productions under the belt, the troupe faced a dilemma in selecting this year's musical.

"We're getting down to where there's not a lot left we can do in the church basement unless we repeat," Kykendall said.

The musical is a made-up story about the Calamity Jane Canary in Deadwood, S.D., and according to Kykendall, it's a family show, "a light-hearted show everyone will enjoy."

Work on the play began in January with auditions and true to its beginnings, anyone who signed up is in the production. Those not cast in title roles are members of the chorus, according to Kuykendall.

"We basically work with an in-house group," she explained.

And with 24 years of musicals behind them, there are plenty of props around for this year's production. That's good news for Caroline Dunphy, who's in charge of sets. And lighting up the place will be Richard Burgess, who's in charge of the technical side of the production.

The musical's three performances are usually a sellout. Kuykendall credits that to the "following" the thespian troupe has attracted over the years.

"People are surprised when they hear we do a musical in the church basement," Kuykendall said. "They come to see what we're doing and become loyal fans.

"We now have a following. I have people ask me in April what we're going to do the next year."

Curtain times for this year's musical are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, March 8-9, and 4 p.m. Sunday, March 10. Tickets are priced at $5 for adults and $2.50 for students.

Tickets are available by calling the church at (313) 422-0494.

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
SPECIAL WRITER

I have cheered twice for Babe the Gallant Pig in the last year – once when he won the national sheep herding finals and again, last month, when he nosed his way into an Oscar nomination for Best Picture of 1995.

Another "Doctor Doolittle," some groaned, recalling the embarassing 1968 nomination (it lost to "In the Heat of the Night"), but with one big difference: "Babe" really was the best film of last year. See it and you might agree.

Looking back, the most amazing thing about 1995 wasn't the quality of films that Hollywood produced – it was a mediocre year at best. It's how much sense (and sensibility) the industry showed in its nominations for this 68th edition of the Academy Awards.

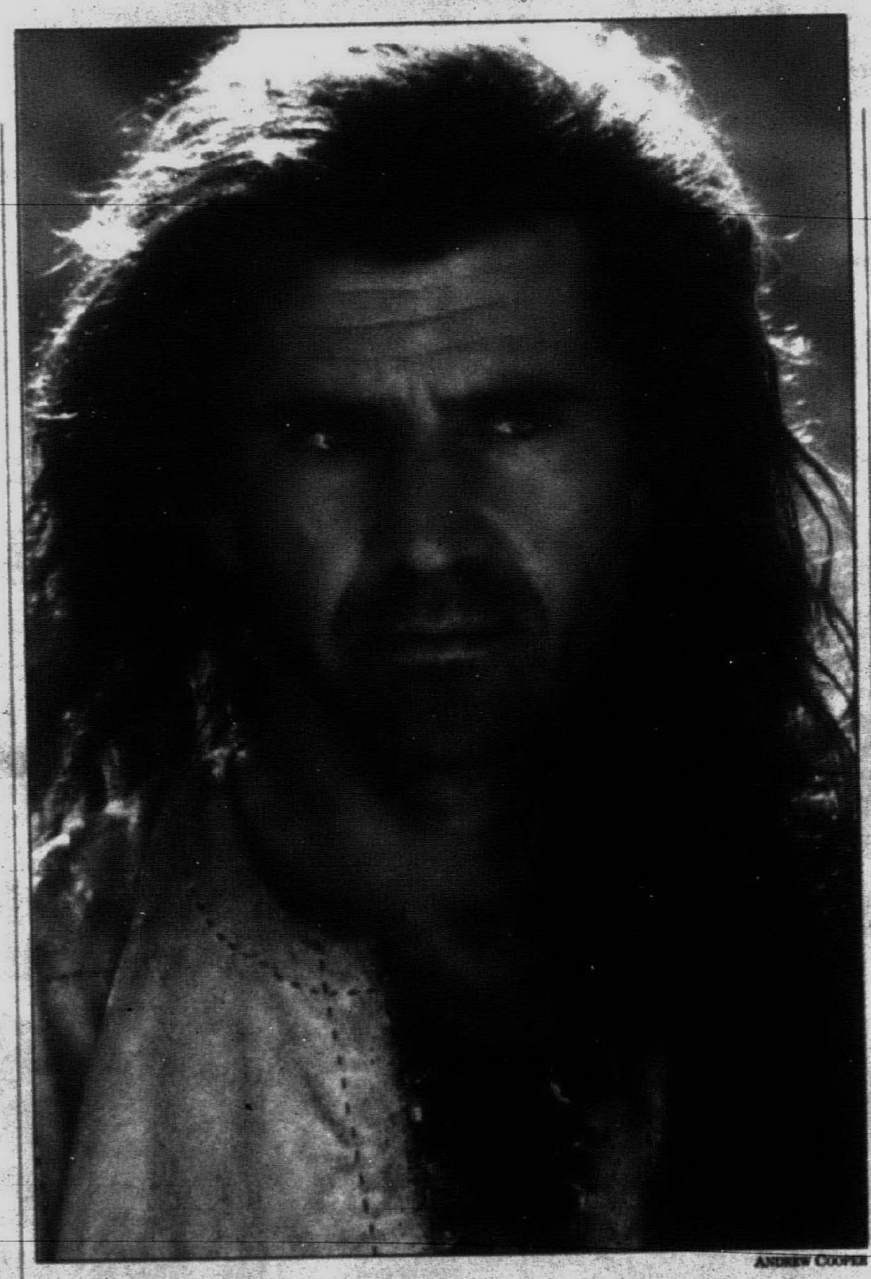
Below you will find a rundown of the major categories, pretty much in the order they'll be presented on March 25. Be warned in advance that, despite the pretense of assurance below, my predictions are usually shakey at best. Just what did happen to Anna Paquin, anyway?

BEST SUPPORTING ACTRESS

Joan Allen and Kathleen Quinlan played "Stand By Your Man" in "Nixon" and "Apollo 13." Kate Winslet cried "How Can You Mend a Broken Heart?" in "Sense and Sensibility." Mare Winningham performed a whole slew of songs in "Georgia," but no one paid to listen. It was Mira Sorvino who hit all the right notes as the most memorable Woody Allen creation since "Annie Hall." And you remember how Oscar liked her. The Winner: Mira Sorvino in "Mighty Aphrodite."

BEST SUPPORTING ACTOR

You can pick this one pretty much by process of elimination. Kevin Spacey and Tim Roth might deserve it, but both are still paying dues. Method act as he might, Brad Pitt still hasn't proven himself as anything but the sexiest man alive. James Cromwell as "Babe's" keeper? No chance. The only question here: Will this well-known character actor wear his lucky Mission Control vest to the festivities? The Winner: Ed Harris in "Apollo 13"



ANDREW COOPER

BEST ACTRESS

Not a fan of the actress or the material, I thoroughly enjoyed Meryl Streep in "The Bridges of Madison County." It's just not her year. Susan Sarandon must still suffer for using the Oscar podium for political ramblings. Sharon Stone and Elisabeth Shue both logged quality time in Vegas but won't come home any richer. The real winner is Emma Thompson, who delivered a one-two punch as writer and star of the best literary adaptation in years. The Winner: Emma Thompson in "Sense and Sensibility."

BEST ACTOR

BEST DIRECTOR

Follow me here: a few years ago bland actor Kevin Costner did the Orson Welles thing in "Dances With Wolves." He won. Mel Gibson produced, directed, and starred in "Braveheart" with even better results. Now consider that Tim Robbins is the only familiar name among the other nominees, and you'll have to concur. The Winner: Mel Gibson in "Braveheart."

BEST PICTURE

Traditionally the Best Director nod is a good indication of the Best Picture winner. Not so this year. For all its epic grandeur, "Braveheart" just doesn't have it. "Babe" does, but still won't be taken seriously enough to win. "Sense and Sensibility" is far too intelligent for the industry voters. The Italian-made "Postman" won't deliver. Bet instead on a movie so well-liked, so well-reviewed, and so darned American that it almost can't lose. Step right up to the microphone, Opie. The Winner: "Apollo 13."

For the sake of that passionate pig, I'd love to be proven wrong.

Motherhood inspires artist's rebirth

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

It seems natural that Lisa Grden would donate a piece of art work to the auction benefitting New Morning School.

Her "Mother and Child" clay wall relief is a statement about the preciousness of children.

As a mother and Brownie troop leader, the Livonia sculptor radiates what the Plymouth pre-K through eighth grade non-profit parent cooperative school is all about – the selfless giving of one's time to the children.

"Becoming a mother was one of the most powerful experiences I've ever had. There's nothing more sacred than that bond. I've had to learn to put my needs on hold temporarily, and take energy and put it into the children. It's a growing experience," said the 32-year-old Grden.

She wears her heart in the art. Grden's lyrical flowing figures, in most instances, portray familial scenes of tender touching and holding. Her female figures are not perfect Venus goddesses but women with sagging breasts. Unlike male sculptors, Grden shows women as they are: not older but better, improved and wisened by their years.

"The finished product is born from a life experience. I tell people everyone is an artist. You have to take risks especially when it comes to content."

When Grden graduated from the University of Michigan-Dearborn with a bachelor's degree in education in 1986, art was the furthest profession from her mind. She wanted to teach school but instead married and had two children. Rebecca, 6, and Christopher, 4, led her to discover clay on a shopping trip to Frank's Nursery. The three soon were making little boys and teddy bears from Sculpy, a form of modeling clay hardened in an ordinary home oven.

"My passion for clay took off from there. I love clay because it's three dimensional. It's of the earth, pliable and flexible. You can change and manipulate it. There's so many options. You can make it functional or sculptural."

Artists find support through ARTS Anonymous

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

At times I find myself delaying a story when I should be sitting at my computer writing. Most times it's because the subject matter deals with an important art exhibition or individual respected in the field.

Writing about 400-year-old paintings by Venetian masters like Titian, Tintoretto and Tiepolo now on display at the Detroit Institute of Arts is intimidating. Did I bring to life the history behind the paintings and convey the importance of the exhibit never to be seen again in this country?

Last week I learned, I am not the exception. Creative people have a lot in common including the avoidance of producing a work. They frequently clean house, run errands, or find other projects to become involved with instead of writing, painting, sculpting or composing music.

Now ARTS Anonymous, an international support group for artists involved in not only the visual but performing arts such as music, dancing and acting, is helping creative individuals like Julie through a 12-step program modeled after Alcoholics Anonymous. In fact, that's how she found out about the group which meets 2 p.m. every Saturday in the Northwest Alano Club at Farmington Road and Ann Arbor Trail in Westland.

Julie has been attending Adult Children of Alcoholics meetings there for the last two years. For 20 years she laid aside all creative urges to raise her children as a single parent. Now, it's time for her.

"It helps being with like-minded people. We prefer to remain anonymous because a lot of them are dealing with alcohol, drugs, anorexia, bulimia or an abusive relationships. At meetings, we're sharing our gut stories. These are people in severe pain hiding their artistic abilities," said Julie of Westland.

Judi M. is a former member of the Michigan Art Exchange, the non-profit artists' cooperative gallery that closed its doors last April in Plymouth. Although the MAE offered some support from fellow artists, it primary purpose was marketing the finished work. An unemployed graphic artist, Judi M. founded the Westland chapter of ARTS Anonymous last December to encourage her creativity. Previously, she had attended meetings in Royal Oak before the group folded. Strengthened by the experience of meeting with supportive creative people, Judi M. initiated the paperwork. The group has no dues or fees. It is self supported by contributions at meetings.

ARTS Anonymous was founded in 1984 in New York City by Abigial. She originally sought help from the Debtors Anonymous program because it was the only group available at that time but it failed to meet her needs as an artist. So she established ARTS Anonymous as a 12-step group focused on fulfilling a person's creative potential in their chosen art.

"We're talking about the process of creation more than the product. We set goals for the week. Part of it is finishing something from beginning to end," said Judi M. of Plymouth.

That's not April's dilemma. Without hesitation, the Dearborn Heights resident finishes the mixed media wall pieces to sell at Creative Hands in Taylor.

"The main basis is frustration. Do I market my work to interior designers or home decorating shops?" April said.

"ARTS Anonymous encourages us not to give up but to go on."

Judi M., Julie and April are now in the process of starting a company to reproduce artists' work on coffee mugs and other merchandise. After all, that's what ARTS Anonymous is all about — artists helping artists.

Call Judi M., (313) 459-6214 or Julie, (313) 721-5761 for more information on ARTS Anonymous.

Grden works evenings after the children are in bed. During the daytime she is too busy mothering her two and leading Brownie Troop No. 1572 of Hull Elementary on field trips to make clay tiles at OCC with Piepenburg. Talk about devoted. It's not easy keeping track of 17 six year olds among the piles of clay. Grden's teaching background is at play here.

"We're making a wall mural and donating it to the school to learn the lesson of sharing," she said.

Denny Englehart likes Grden's work so much that she's taken on her ceramic wall relief and female figurative sculptures at Chameleon Galleries on Main Street in Plymouth.

"Lisa's pieces have feeling. It's not like a clay bowl that's cold, her work has life to it," said Englehart.

"You can see her feelings. Her life experiences are in every piece."

Spacehog's timing couldn't have been better

CHRISTINA FUOCO

Spacehog lead guitarist Richard Steel had this feeling when he met drummer Jonny Cragg that they had a musical future together.

"We just liked each other," Steel said during an interview from Rochester, N.Y. "You know how you get a vibe about somebody? You don't know why they're groovy but you know they are groovy."

The two tried to jam together numerous times but the timing was always wrong. But when Cragg, vocalist/bassist Royston Langdon and his brother guitarist/vocalist Antony, and Steel finally got together to form Spacehog the timing couldn't have been better.

The band's debut album "Resident Alien" has spawned the Mott the Hoople-ish successful single "In The Meantime" and earned Spacehog a spot opening for the Red Hot Chili Peppers. (The tour comes to The Palace of Auburn Hills on Thursday, March 7.)

Members of Spacehog hail from Leeds, England, but hooked up as a band in New York's East Village, where they all moved one-by-one. Where some English musicians look down on the United States, Spacehog thinks differently.

"I love it, but I definitely have a distorted view. They've been very nice to us. In a way, I don't feel like a 'British band.' We're an alternative rock band who was born and bred in England but now lives in the United States."

■ Local rockers Benny and The Jets will perform 4-6 p.m. Thursday-Friday, March 7-8, as Mitch Albom's house band during his WJR radio show.

When the Plymouth natives aren't on the air, they're playing Reisers Keyboard Lounge, 1870 S. Wayne Road, Westland, every Tuesday, and The Office Bar, 15414 Telegraph Road (north of Five Mile Road), Redford, Thursdays-Sundays. For more information about the band, call their hotline (313) 730-1627.

■ Notable shows this week: The Irish pop band The Corrs, who played The Peach Pit After Dark on the New Year's Eve episode of "Beverly Hills 90210" plays a free show on Sunday, March 10, at the 7th House, 7 N. Saginaw, Pontiac, (810) 335-8100. . . . Canadian popsters Pure, whose drummer missed the band's last Detroit appearance due to "illness" (translated: busted at the border), returns to St. Andrew's Hall, 431 E. Congress, Detroit, on Tuesday, March 12, to play with a full band, (313) 961-MELT. . . . Fresh from their spot opening for Oasis at the State Theatre in Detroit on Sunday, The Vudu Hippies play 3-D, 1815 N. Main St., Royal Oak, on Thursday, March 14, (810) 589-3344.

TRAVEL

Valet offers tips for looking your best

Traveling takes its toll on your body, spirit and even your appearance. The Four Seasons Hotel Toronto's resident valet Nick D'Ugo is put to the daily challenge of keeping guests looking and feeling their best.

With 33 years of valet experience, D'Ugo offers some of his favorite tips to help you stay perfectly pressed.

■ Never press delicate fabrics directly with a steam iron. Before pressing, dampen a cotton cloth with cold water and place over the garment. Simply press over the damp cloth to avoid damaging the garment or causing the fabric to shine.

■ To iron a shirt professionally, press in the following order: collar, left front panel, the back, right front panel, both sleeves, and finish by ironing the collar a second time to ensure that it is crisp.

■ If your clothes are wrinkled after being packed in a suitcase, hang the wrinkled garment in the washroom after taking a bath or shower; the steam will help to remove some of the wrinkles.

■ Always use distilled water in your steam iron, this prevents mineral deposits from forming and causing the iron to clog.

■ Hang damp clothing on plastic or coated wire hangers. If hanging silk or delicate fabrics that tend to slip, secure a small piece of sponge on the corners of the hanger to prevent the garment from slipping.

■ Never attempt to remove any type of stain to a garment with water. This will only spread the stain and make removal virtually impossible. Take the garment to a professional cleaner as soon as possible.

■ To remove stains on your shirt collar, simply rub the stain with a bar of soap and scrub with a nylon brush. Once the stain has been removed, wash the garment as usual.

■ When taking suits to the dry cleaners, ask that they stuff the shoulders and arms with tissue after pressing to preserve their shape during storage.

■ Never attempt to remove any type of stain to a garment with water. This will only spread the stain and make removal virtually impossible. Take the garment to a professional cleaner as soon as possible.

Located in the Yorkville shopping district, the 380-room Four Seasons Toronto is managed by Four Seasons Regent Hotels and Resorts, which currently manages 38 hotels in 16 countries with four properties scheduled to open before year end in 1996.

Coens deliver thriller in Fargo'

TICKETS PLEASE

JOHN MONAGHAN

Plodding through knee-deep snow, sheriff Marge Gunderson pauses for a second while examining a shooting victim in a bloody triple murder. She thinks she may vomit, not because of the grisliness of the scene, but because of morning sickness. She's six months pregnant.

"Fargo" may be my least favorite of the six films written, produced and directed by brothers Joel and Ethan Coen. But it does deliver something special: a police investigator unlike any that has walked across the screen.

Actress Frances McDormand, interviewed with the directors in New York recently, calls Marge "Midwestern nice." She works with the people she's interrogating, draws them out with a friendly "work with me here," but then gets tough if they don't treat her with equal courtesy.

"She's never trying to build herself up as smarter or dumber than she actually is," McDormand

STREET SCENE

■ DETROIT FILM THEATRE
Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward Ave., Detroit. Call (313) 833-2323 for information. ($5; $4 students)

"Eyes Without a Face" (France - 1959). 7, 9:30 p.m. March 8-9. Director Georges Franju concocted this little-seen French horror film, what he liked to call a "poetic fantasy." Here a demented surgeon tries to rebuild the face of his disfigured daughter — at any cost. The film itself has undergone a little reconstructive surgery, since most American viewers know the film under its dubbed and re-edited version, "The Horror Chamber of Dr. Faustus."

"I Am Cuba" (Cuba/USSR - 1964). 4, 7 p.m. March 10. The camera is the real star in this dizzying tribute to Cuban Communism. Numerous requests prompted the DFT to give us another look at this eye-popping propaganda film, especially timely with our current tense relations with Castro.

"Tales from the Brothers Quay." 7 p.m. March 11. Identical twins born in Philadelphia, the Quays have turned the animation world upside down with their visionary films, often using found objects and surreal imagery. Among the titles: "Are We Still Married?," "Rehearsals for Extinct Anatomies," and "Street of Crocodiles."

■ KINOTEK
Windsor Film Theatre, 2135 Wyandotte St. West, Windsor. Call (519) 254-FILM for information. ($4.50 Canadian; $4 U.S.)

Chris Marker — "La Jetee" (France - 1962) and "Sans Soleil" (France - 1982). Starting at 8:30 p.m. March 11-12. His short film, "La Jetee," served as inspiration for Terry Gilliam's "Twelve Monkeys." Now see the original, with its creative manipulation of still images in an early exploration of the subjectivity of time and the invalidity of memory. It precedes the feature-length "Sans Soleil," a cross-cultural travelogue spanning the globe.

■ MAGIC BAG THEATRE
22918 Woodward, Ferndale. Call (810) 544-3030 for information. ($5)

Ape Fest — "Planet of the Apes" (USA - 1968) 8:30 p.m. and "Conquest of the Planet of the Apes" (USA - 1972) 10:30 p.m. March 8. Two of the best-loved entries in the popular "Apes" saga. The original stars Charlton Heston as the astronaut who discovers a world where men are now ruled by apes. "Conquest," the fourth in the series, charts how the apes got the upper hand in the first place. A rare chance to see these camp classics in wide screen.

■ MAIN ART THEATRE
118 N. Main Street at 11 Mile, Royal Oak. Films play through at least Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 542-0180 for information and showtimes. ($6.50; $4 students and matinee; $3 twilight)

"Dead Man Walking" (USA - 1996). Sean Penn makes a welcome return in front of the camera as a condemned man who forms a controversial friendship with a Catholic nun (Susan Sarandon). A decidedly offbeat drama directed by Tim Robbins.

"Restoration" (Britain - 1995). In this long-promised period piece, Robert Downey Jr. plays a notorious womanizer in the court of Charles II who may have been stung by true love. Sam Neill, Meg Ryan, and Sir Ian McKellan co-star.

"French Twist" (France - 1995). When Victoria Abril discovers that her realtor husband is cheating on her, she gets sweet revenge when a tenderhearted woman (played by the director, Josiane Balasko) has her van break down in front of the house.

"A Midwinter's Tale" (USA - 1995). Kenneth Branagh's latest comedy is a tribute to hutzpah when a struggling, on-the-ropes actor attempts to mount a production of "Hamlet" with only a handful of actors. Joan Collins appears among the memorable cameos. Starts Friday.

■ MAPLE THEATRE
4135 W. Maple, Bloomfield. All titles play through at least next Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 855-9090 for information. ($6; $2.95 twilight)

"Leaving Las Vegas" (USA - 1995). In this uncompromisingly depressing drama, Nicolas Cage plays a hopeless alcoholic who finds true love too late in a Las Vegas prostitute (Elizabeth Shue). Tough going, but the kind of movie that haunts you long after seeing it.

■ REDFORD THEATRE
13670 Lahser, Detroit. Call (313) 537-2560 for information. ($2.50)

"Chariots of Fire" (USA - 1981). 8 p.m. March 8; 2, 8 p.m. Mar. 9 (organ overture begins a half hour before showtime). The inspirational story of two runners, a Jewish Cambridge student and a devout Scottish missionary, who compete in the 1924 Olympics. The year's Oscar winner for best picture features Vangelis' now-famous electronic score.

■ STAR JOHN R
John R at 14 Mile, Madison Heights. Call (810) 585-2070 ($6.50; $3.50 matinee/twilight)

"Fargo" (USA - 1995). In this sixth film from Joel and Ethan Coen, Frances McDormand plays a pregnant sheriff investigating a bizarre murder case in the Upper Minnesota snowbelt. Dryer and less satisfying than the Coens' other pictures ("Raising Arizona" and "The Hudsucker Proxy" among them) but still one of the most unique and uncompromising films of the year. Steve Buscemi co-stars.

■ STATE THEATRE
2115 Woodward, Detroit. Call (313) 961-5450 for information. ($1)

"Caddyshack" (USA - 1980). 9 p.m. Mar. 11. It ranks as the favorite film of professional athletes and does have its hilarious moments. Rodney Dangerfield has rarely been funnier, not to mention Bill Murray's Ahab-like hunt for an elusive gopher.

Voted Best Broadway Play of the 1992-1993 season by the Outer Critics Circle, "The Sisters Rosensweig" explores the relationships between three middle-aged sisters and how they interact with each other, their children, and their men.

"It's a story about families, both immediate and extended. About deciding to embrace your heritage or redefine it," said director Amy Smith. "It's a funny show, but there are some tears too."

Wasserstein is also the author of the popular "The Heidi Chronicles," recently made into a television movie starring Jamie Lee Curtis, and "Uncommon Women and Others," which she wrote while attending Yale's School of Drama. "The Sister's Rosensweig" was presented last year at the Fisher Theatre in Detroit.

Holowicki recovering

After a tense week, the news regarding Bernie Holowicki is good.

The Madonna University basketball coach, who lives in Livonia, is recovering at home following a quadruple bypass heart operation he underwent Feb. 27.

"Every day is beautiful," Holowicki said in a brief phone conversation Wednesday. "Just to brush your teeth . . . every little thing is a plus."

Bernie Holowicki

Holowicki, 64, started feeling chest pains on his team's bus trip home from their final game of the season, Feb. 24 at Berea College in Berea, Ky. His wife, Barbara, took him to Providence Hospital when the bus arrived early the following morning.

Holowicki was released from the hospital Monday. "Right now, he's just taking life easy," Barbara Holowicki said. "He's on his feet and walking a bit."

Said Bernie: "I'm starting to walk, starting to recuperate. I feel like I was hit by a train.

"I'll tell you, you sure do appreciate things differently. There have been so many calls, and cards and flowers from so many. I'll tell you what, that's so important."

Before taking over Madonna's team this season, Holowicki coached at Redford Catholic Central for 22 years, guiding the Shamrocks to a Class A state title in 1976. After CC released him following the 1993-94 season, he served as an assistant to Chuck Henry at Wayne Memorial for a year.

Holowicki guided Madonna to an NAIA playoff berth and an 8-22 record in his first season.

Trivia contest winners

Herman White of Plymouth and L.D. Cook of Livonia were among the five winners in our fishing trivia contest. Since there were more correct entries than prizes, the winners were selected by a random drawing from a pool of the correct responses.

The question was: What river is considered the drain plug for Lake St. Clair and is world-renowned for its smallmouth bass and walleye fishery? The correct answer is the Detroit River.

White and Cook, along with Allan Goci of Rochester Hills and Edward Klosky of Southfield, each won a Plano model 6803 tackle box and four tickets to the Sportfishing Expo at the Palace of Auburn Hills. Rick Yuchas of Westland was our fifth winner and received four tickets to the Sportfishing Expo.

Runners' clinic

With the onset of warm weather — well, almost — Botsford General Hospital's Total Rehabilitation and Athletic Conditioning Center (TRACC) will conduct a clinic to demonstrate how to get the most out of running without suffering the injuries and other physical problems.

The clinic will be 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Saturday, March 16, at the Botsford Center for Health Improvement, 39750 Grand River in Novi.

Cost is $20, which includes refreshments, compliments of Manhattan Bagel. Due to limited space, registration is required. For further information or to register, call (810) 473-5600.

Softball registrations

The Canton Parks and Recreation Services will have registrations for its men's, women's and coed softball leagues through April 4 at the Canton Parks and Recreation Services offices.

Cost for men's teams is $275 (four non-residents maximum per team). Returning teams register through Friday, new teams register from March 11-22.

The cost for both women's and coed teams is yet to be determined, but both will include a $50 refundable forfeit fee (six non-residents maximum per team). Women's teams may register through April 4. Returning coed teams may register until Friday; new coed teams may register from March 11-29.

The coed and women's leagues are run jointly with the City of Plymouth Parks and Recreation Services. For more information, call (313) 397-5110.

Canton Softball Center starts its softball league seasons Sunday, April 14. The 14-game season (single games and doubleheaders) costs $495 per team, plus a refundable forfeit fee and umpires fee. Men's, women's and coed leagues are offered. There are no residency requirements. Call (313) 483-5600 for details.

Canton Softball Center's tournament schedule begins Friday, April 12 with the Early Bird Tournament. There is a four-game guarantee in the round-robin format for men, women and coed teams. Entry fee is $125 (plus umpires). Call (313) 483-5600, ext. 103 or 104 for details or to be added to the tournament mailing list.

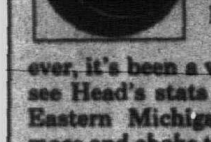
Head accepts rebounder's role to help Eagles

■ Star basketball players in high school often find the road to collegiate success too steep to traverse. High expectations loaded on top of them as they head to the school of their choice makes the adjustment that much tougher. James Head has seen all of it — and more.

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER



What James Head took into his senior year at Plymouth Salem HS was star status. He lived up to it.

Since then, however, it's been a winding road. Some see Head's stats as a sophomore at Eastern Michigan University, grimace and shake their head.

They thought he'd dominate this league.

Others know better. Head's started 24 of 27 games. He's contributed. And most importantly, his team has blossomed. Tuesday's 84-72 win over Kent State in the opening round of the Mid-American Conference Tournament pushed the Eagles one step closer to every college basketball player's ultimate dream:

The NCAA Tournament.

And to those who think his talents haven't developed as predicted, Head has some advice: "When my turn comes, I'll take advantage of it."

So many prep standouts never come close to realizing what's expected of them. For Head, the reality of college sports hit home early, before he even started school.

He's had to re-prove himself. And he's had to adapt to a role far different from the one he filled at Salem.

The University of Iowa signed Head in November '93, prior to the start of his senior season. The following summer, citing academic reasons, Head's scholarship offer was revoked — even though he met all the NCAA's standards.

As a senior at Salem, Head averaged 18 points and 12 rebounds as the principal force in its 19-4 season.

Chiefs start slowly, then take it to Novi

BY C.J. RISAK
STAFF WRITER

Slow starts can mean fast exits at state tournament time.

It's something Plymouth Canton's basketball team should remember after surviving its first-round district encounter against Novi, 57-34 Monday at Novi.

Sure, the final indicates another rout for the Chiefs, who collected their 20th win of the season with just one defeat. But it was nothing like that.

"I thought we were a little flat," said Canton coach Dan Young. "I didn't think we were real sharp tonight. We were playing on their floor, against a patient, well-coached team . . . I'm glad to be moving on."

Which is what the Chiefs are doing — they meet Livonia Franklin at 8:30 p.m. tonight at Novi, following the Plymouth Salem-Northville game (6:30 p.m.).

Canton's offense was nearly nonexistant until the 5¼-minute mark of the third quarter. Indeed, the Chiefs did not score their 20th point in the game until less than five minutes remained in the third.

Fortunately, their defense was superb. They forced the Wildcats outside with good half-court pressure man-to-man, then dominated on the boards (a 29-14 rebounding advantage). Novi converted just 12-of-37 floor shots (32.4 percent) to Canton's 21-of-37 (56.8 percent).

While the final shooting stats may look grand, the Chiefs should remember they were just 4-of-12 (33 percent) in the first half.

That's right — only 12 shots for the entire half. Novi had 20, but made just five (25 percent). And while the Chiefs got nearly twice as many chances at the free throw line in the game as the Wildcats, they converted less than 50 percent (13-of-27). Novi was 9-of-14 (64 percent).

There were other positives for Canton. The game's turning point came early in the third quarter, when Novi — which trailed 16-10 at the half — came out determined after the intermission. The Wildcats scored six straight points, the last three on a three-pointer by Chad Dicken, to tie it at 16-all with 5:53 left in the quarter.

The Chiefs handled it more like an afront than a challenge. Mark Bray put in a pair of baskets inside, penetrating what had been a suffocating zone defense until then; when Nick Hurley picked Mike Barthlow's pocket on the inbounds pass after Bray's second basket and laid it in, Canton had outscored Novi 8-2 in a minute-and-a-half.

The Wildcats never recovered. They trailed 31-23 after three quarters, a lead that quickly increased to 36-23 before the fourth was two minutes old.

By then, Novi coach Pat Schluter knew he couldn't keep his team sitting back in a zone. The Wildcats switched to man-to-man defense, and Canton switched to high gear. In the last six minutes, the Chiefs outscored Novi 21-9.

Agape prepares for tourney trip

OUTLOOK

Plymouth Agape Christian Academy puts its little toes in the big waters tonight, wanting to find out whether it's the chill of Lake Superior or the warmth of the Gulf Stream off Florida.

The Wolverines will play their first Michigan High School Basketball Association tournament game at 6 p.m. when they play host Southfield Franklin Road or Redford St. Agatha, who opened the Class D district Tuesday.

Coach Keith Anleitner is as anxious as everybody else to see if Agape, unbeaten in its league and only twice defeated all season long, can swim with the big fish.

But more than that, Anleitner wants to use the tournament to put Agape on the map.

"Most people don't want to play us," said Anleitner, who knows, because he's tried. "We're so small and we're not well established."

Agape's chances of winning are speculative. St. Agatha was the Catholic League C-D Division runner-up. Franklin Road defeated Agape by four points early in the season.

But the Wolverines are well coached. What they do, they do well. Their problem will be adapting to a consistently higher level of play and doing it in a hostile environment.

While they play half their games in regular-sized gyms, they practice and play home games on a carpeted floor in a tiny room that's part of the church.

That will begin to change next season, however, when Agape moves from its Ann Arbor Trail home south a few miles to Michigan Avenue. The school is moving into an old elementary building — one with another tiny gym, which current plans call for replacing in a short time.

As it moves on, it is also hoping to move up.

Agape has less than 50 students in its high school but the boys "just love basketball," Anleitner said. "They practice all the time. Our main emphasis is on the kids, God, family, academics — and then basketball.

"We're hoping for exposure from the district tournament. We'd like other schools to say, 'Hey, that's a nice school to play. They've got good kids and are good competition.'"

Wayne repels Jones-led Rocket attack

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

It was a scene right out of "Raging Bull."

Staggered, a bit dazed and on the ropes during the second quarter — trailing by as many as 16 points — Wayne Memorial's boys basketball team came back with a flurry over the final 16 minutes to beat rival Westland John Glenn before a jam-packed crowd in the Class A district tourney at Belleville, 80-70.

The 19-2 Zebras, who will try to repeat as district champs beginning at 7 p.m. Friday against either host Belleville or Garden City, didn't know what had hit them during the early going.

And it certainly wasn't the same Glenn team that got pasted 75-49 by Wayne on Jan. 16.

"I don't think I've burned two timeouts in the first half all year," Wayne coach Chuck Henry said. "I challenged our kids at halftime about defensive pressure and unity on offense.

"In the first half we had four guys watching the other guy do his thing. And we had nobody on the boards."

They came out like fighters, nailing their first seven shots.

Junior guard Lorenzo Guess, who was only three of 11 from the floor during the first half, warmed up along with his teammates. His three-pointer with 3:41 left in the third gave Wayne a lead it would never relinquish, 42-41.

The Zebras, who made 11 of 15 shots from the floor after going nine of 39 in the opening half, outscored Glenn 29-12 in the third quarter.

Guess had 10 points during the surge, while Roland Patterson added three triples. Richard Johnson came off the bench to add six.

Meanwhile, Glenn was hanging tough behind the play of senior guard Albert Jones, who finished with a game-high 33 points, including seven triples.

Wayne gradually pulled away in the final period and padded its lead by making 15 of 20 free throws. The Zebras outscored Glenn in the fourth, 28-22.

"We were able to get a steal, a pass and a layup," Henry said. "Our team defense led to team offense."

Jameel Wooden and Guess each finished with 18 points, while Patterson added 16. Lavelle Guess contributed 11, including nine of 10 from the line, not to mention a huge three-point play near the end of the first half.

Jones, who appeared to be on a personal mission all night long, got scoring support from Jarrett and reserve De'Korey Albright. Each finished with 10.

"I'm not surprised the way they played," Henry said of the 13-7 Rockets. "I threw out the tape from the first time we played after I saw them Friday against (Plymouth) Canton (a 63-60 overtime loss for the WLAA crown).

"They're not even the same team when we played them the first time. You can see they've gone from point A to point B, and that's the mark of good coaching."

Schuette said his team was determined to give Wayne a better fight in the rematch.

"We talked before the game and everybody's expectation was to be the best player they can be," the Glenn coach said. "We were not going to be outhustled or outhearted. We forced them to play their best basketball in the third quarter and they rose to the occasion, and played hard.

"They had some big threes in the third quarter. We left them open and they converted."

The Rockets, who had 22 turnovers to Wayne's 12, were also going against a seasoned and experienced Zebra team which reached the state quarterfinals a year ago.

Spartans reign

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

March Madness had barely settled in Monday night when Livonia Stevenson pulled off a shocker in the Class A district opener at Detroit Catholic Central.

The Spartans ousted Public School League runner-up Detroit Redford, 67-64, in a brilliant display of basketball. The last time Stevenson knocked off a PSL team was in the late '70s when Dave Hall led the Spartans past Detroit Mackenzie in the regional.

Stevenson (11-11 overall) shot a blistering 64.4 percent from the floor (29 of 45) and used an effective 2-1-2 zone defense to frustrate the Huskies, who bowed out at 12-7 overall.

All five Stevenson starters played pivotal roles in the upset victory.

Erick Giovannini, a 6-foot-2 senior guard, led the winners with a game-high 24 points, including six 3-pointers.

Point-guard Jim Grewe, a 5-9 senior, did not score a point, but was the trigger-man against Redford's pressure defense.

And 6-2 forward Eric Curl, who played during crunch time despite heaving on the bench, chipped in with eight points.

"I drank too much water and got hit (on a play) and it knocked the wind out of me," said Curl, a burly senior headed to Bowling Green State University on a football scholarship. "Our game plan was to work the ball around and make them play defense, and get easy baskets.

"We definitely came out to win and not to play a close game. We all believed we could win, but maybe a lot of people out there didn't expect it."

It was nip-and-tuck throughout three quarters — 17-all after one period, 30-all at intermission and 49-47 in favor of Redford entering the fourth.

But the Spartans caught fire to start the final period, going on a 16-4 run as Balow and Giovannini each scored eight.

Stevenson led 67-59 with 1:11 to play on a basket by Giovannini, but Redford would not quit, pulling to within three, 67-64, on a triple by Michael Green with only 56 seconds left.

The Spartans then missed the front-ends of three consecutive one-and-one free throw attempts, but Redford could not answer as the Huskies missed a pair of triple tries in the final 16 seconds.

"This brings a little smile to the kids," Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre said, "and this is nice because they've been working hard all year. It's just great."

"'Newms' took over the practices and he made our offense more methodical," McIntyre said. "We tried to use every option, go inside-and-out and a lot of ball reversal. Tonight we had all five guys touching the ball and more combinations. Tonight we stayed within the pattern."

Grewe's traffic directing became key.

"The kid weighs about 100 pounds, but he has the stamina . . . he just keeps going and going," McIntyre said. "He takes one heck of a load and made some super passes. He even picked their pocket a couple of times in the second half. He did a nice job."

Steven Reynolds, a promising 6-6 sophomore, led Redford with 22 points. Guards Rod Wells and Green added 17 and 12, respectively.

It was Redford's third straight loss following the PSL final against No. 1-ranked Detroit Pershing. The Huskies also played without starting guard Kenneth Flowers, who suffered a broken nose in Saturday's Operation-Friendship consolation game loss to Detroit Benedictine.

"It's no secret, we're in a slump," said Redford coach Derrick McDowell, a former assistant at the University of Detroit and Central Michigan. "We just fell apart at the end of the season and collapsed."

Shamrocks stave off stingy Spartans

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

It was sweaty palm time Wednesday night for host Redford Catholic Central in the Class A boys basketball district semifinals.

The Catholic League A-B Division champions needed a clutch three-point shot by senior guard Chris Misiak with 1:04 remaining to put away pesky Livonia Stevenson, 65-55.

Misiak and Marc McDonald each tallied 16 points to lead the winners. Justin Hoener and 6-foot-8 sophomore Chris Young (off the bench) each added 11.

The matchup was nearly reminiscent of the first-round state football playoff game played last November between the two schools (won by heavily favored CC 14-6).

The 11-11 Spartans, the fifth-place team in the Western Lakes Activities Association, nearly climbed all the way back from a 45-29 halftime deficit. Stevenson outscored the Shamrocks 14-9 in the third period and pulled to within five, 55-50, with 2:37 remaining when senior point-guard Jim Grewe, not usually known for his scoring, drove down the lane for a layup.

CC then took and ill-advised shot and the Spartans had a chance to cut the deficit even further.

But the Spartans could not convert and Misiak came through with his pivotal outside shot to give CC an eight-point cushion.

Grewe came back with three-pointer with only 46 seconds left, but CC held off the Spartans by making seven of eight free throws over the final 41 seconds.

"We had a super effort the last two ballgames," said Stevenson coach Jim McIntyre, whose team upset Public School League runner-up Detroit Redford on Monday, 67-64. "The seniors went out on an excellent note.

"And what I liked most is that the kids played without being fearful of who they played."

CC shot the lights out during the opening half, hitting 15 of 28 from the floor.

But Stevenson tightened the screws on its zone defense for the second half. CC made just five of 23 over the final two quarters. McDonald, who had 14 first-half points, was limited to a pair of free throws.

"In the first half we had it both ways, inside and outside," said CC coach Rick Coratti, whose team is 18-4 overall. "But in the second half we quit going inside and we didn't hit from the perimeter. We live and die by the 'three.' Misiak and McDonald are usually around 40 to 45 percent. Tonight they just were not falling, but Misiak hit the big one and that was the ballgame."

While the Shamrocks shot 39.2 percent for the game (20 of 51), Stevenson had even more problems with its shooting accuracy.

Stevenson was 22 of 61 from the field (31.8 percent). The Spartans' Erick Giovannini, who led all scorers with 24 points, was nine of 27.

"We got a lot of good looks, but the shots just didn't drop," McIntyre said. "If we make a stroke when it was 55-50, then I think it would have pumped us up and maybe tightened them up."

Matt Quinter added 11 points, while Eric Curl chipped in with eight points and 11 rebounds for the Spartans.

Pershing stops CC

BY STEVE KOWALSKI

■ BASKETBALL

They are called the Doughboys, but there is nothing soft about their inside game.

Detroit Pershing, led by Mr. Basketball candidate Winfred Walton, had a 42-24 rebounding advantage and defeated Detroit Catholic Central, 88-69, in Saturday's Operation Friendship Game at the University of Detroit-Mercy's Calihan Hall.

Walton, a 6-foot-9 senior center, had three dunks and finished with a game-high 24 points and eight rebounds for the No. 1 ranked Doughboys.

Lewis Lequent, a streamlined 6-6 senior forward, added 13 points and a game-high 11 rebounds.

How strong are the Doughboys up front?

Strong enough that coach Johnny Goston can bring 6-9 junior center Shamar Heron off the bench and still dominate teams.

Heron, a transfer from West Bloomfield, had two second-half dunks and finished with nine points.

Goston knew the difference would have to come from the frontline because CC's starting backcourt of Marc McDonald and Chris Misiak is capable of carrying the Shamrocks on most nights.

McDonald finished with a game-high 25 points on seven of 15 shooting, including 4-10 from three point range. Misiak finished with nine points, while senior guard Justin Hoener came off the bench to score 13.

Senior forward Michael Jordan added seven.

"Catholic Central is a very good team and we couldn't allow them to hang around," Goston said. "If you're in it, you can win it. Those two guys, they're averaging almost 40 between them. They do a remarkable job of getting their shots off. Misiak has good stuff off the dribble and he can dip."

The Detroit Public School League champion Doughboys, No. 4 in the USA Today national poll, improved to 19-1 overall. The Catholic League champion Shamrocks fell to 16-4.

The Shamrocks trailed 47-28 at halftime and 65-48 after three quarters before "hanging around" and making Pershing sweat it out a little early in the fourth quarter.

Misiak and Hoener scored four points each during an 8-0 run that cut the deficit to 67-56.

Misiak, who had a three-point shot and a free throw during the 8-0 rally, missed another triple from the wing that would have cut the deficit to eight.

Following a timeout, Pershing went on an 11-0 run to push the lead to 78-56 with a couple minutes remaining. Pershing made five straight shots from the field to take that lead.

"Chris had a nice look and if he hits that we're down eight," CC coach Rick Coratti said. "If it goes in, who knows, but they're damn good. The real deal."

Senior center Eron Kosmowski led the Shamrocks with six rebounds before fouling out in the fourth quarter.

The Pershing victory was expected, but the shocker of the afternoon came when Catholic League C-D champion Detroit Holy Redeemer defeated PSL runner-up Detroit Redford, 74-56, in the first game of the Operation Friendship doubleheader.

The Shamrocks and Redford will meet Wednesday in a Class A district hosted by CC if both teams can win first-round games Monday.

SCHOOLCRAFT SPORTS

Ocelots felled by Warriors

Schoolcraft College's men's basketball team fell victim to a three-point shooting onslaught inflicted by Michigan Christian Monday at SC.

The Ocelots kept it close, but not close enough, losing 96-90.

SC took a 9-20 record into the Region 12 Basketball Tournament, which started Wednesday in Muskegon. The Ocelots played Cuyahoga CC in their opening game.

Against Michigan Christian, SC trailed 45-42 at the half — only because the Warriors' Ty Clark nailed a three-pointer at the buzzer. They had eight triples in the opening 20 minutes.

And they never slowed up, adding six more in the second half. Clark finished with five treys, scoring 27 points. Jesse Heck scored 14 points, Damon Henry and Myron Brown got 12 apiece, and Paul Robak netted 11.

SC did counter, knocking down nine threes of its own. Dwaun Warmack paced the Ocelots with 18 points, with Tim Burns scoring 17, Dave Pavlak 15, Jason Maschke (from Livonia Franklin) 14 and Rudy Hatfield (Livonia Churchill) 10. Doug Walters and Chris Hebner (Wayne Memorial) added eight points apiece.

Hatfield also grabbed 12 rebounds, with Burns getting nine. Warmack dished out eight assists and Walters six.

Pavlak was the the most impressive in the second half, particularly from long range, nailing four threes. Burns wasn't far behind, with three triples and 15 of his points over the final 20 minutes.

Rice reclaims league title; CC 2nd

Well, Detroit Catholic Central compiled 297.5 points in Sunday's Catholic League Meet at Royal Oak Dondero and still finished a distant second place to the Warriors.

Harper Woods Notre Dame was third (183), followed by U-D Jesuit (162.5) and Warren De-LaSalle (96).

The Shamrocks finished first in four events and achieved five state cuts.

Senior Kevin Reinke was a double winner, taking first place in the 100 yard freestyle in a time of 49.72 seconds and the 100 backstroke (56.84).

His preliminary times of 49.30 in the 100 freestyle and 54.94 in the 100 backstroke both were state qualifying efforts in Class A.

Rice flexed its muscles especially in the 200 freestyle, sweeping the top three places, led by champion Chris Sanker (1:49.75).

The other CC champions were sophomore Nick Sosnowski, 200 individual medley (2:03.75), and Jason Markou, 100 butterfly (56.65). Sosnowski's time was a state cut.

Brian Greene of CC was third in the 100 butterfly (50.37).

The Shamrocks took second in the 200 freestyle relay (1:37.15) and second in the 400 freestyle relay behind Greene, J.P. Merchant, Reinke and Sosnowski (3:21.50).

The 400 freestyle time was a state cut.

The 200 medley relay team of Reinke, Paul Connolly, Sosnowski and Greene also qualified for the state meet with a time of 1:42.20.

"I just thought we ran out of gas," said Schluter. "Our game plan was to keep it close going into the fourth quarter. We did that for about 2¾ of the game."

Until then, the game had evolved just as Schluter had hoped. His Wildcats, who brought a 10-10 regular-season record into the state tournament, were on an upswing late in the season, winning their last two games after getting their lineup back together after a series of injuries.

But to beat Canton, Schluter knew his team would need something extra. "We had some great looks (at the basket) in the first half, we just didn't knock 'em down," he said.

And the Wildcats had no luck penetrating Canton's defense, managing just three baskets inside in the first 3½ quarters. "We knew we were going to have to kick it out and get some threes," said Schluter.

That was no more successful: Novi converted just 1-of-7 treys.

No one reached double-figures in scoring for the Wildcats; Dicken's nine was best. Canton got 13 points (and two blocked shots) from Ron Hunter, 12 (and four assists) from Hurley, and 10 (and eight rebounds) from Bray. Donte Scott also had four assists.

"When it was time to get it going, our guys really put it together," said Young. Then he added, "Hopefully, we'll look better on Thursday."

If they plan on extending their season, they'd better.

Perhaps Iowa folk reconsidered, thinking those numbers weren't good enough for a Big Ten player. Whatever the reason, it's done and over with, as far as Head's concerned.

He's an Eagle now. And the accomplishment of his main mission is within reach.

"At the beginning of the season, I was telling everybody that we were going to the tournament," the 6-foot-7 forward said. "Now I just want to win this (MAC) tournament and make sure."

It's doubtful EMU could be kept out, not with a 22-5 record and a regular-season championship to its credit. Tuesday's victory put the Eagles into the MAC semifinals against the Ball State-Ohio University winner; that game will be at 4 p.m. Friday at the SeaGate Centre in Toledo.

The MAC final is 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the SeaGate Centre.

As much as anyone, Head has sacrificed for the success of his team. He is no longer a prime offensive solution. Instead, he's a role player: He sets picks, crashes the boards, and plays defense.

And he does those things well.

Head took just two shots against Kent State (missing both) and never really touched the ball while in a true scoring position. He netted one point.

And yet, he earned his coach's praise and a howling ovation from the crowd of 4,067 for his hustle.

"He's been a player who's given us a spark, both defensively and with his rebounding," EMU coach Ben Braun said. "When his instincts took over, he got some huge rebounds for us tonight. And he got a big block for us, too."

Braun has taken Head out of the starting lineup the last three games. The reasons are partly defensive: "I thought he was struggling a bit defensively," Braun said.

Which was partially due to foul troubles Head found himself in early in games. "Now he doesn't have to worry about it," Braun said.

"James can give us an offensive punch off the bench. But I don't care about the points. Whatever James gives us in points is a bonus."

What prodded Braun into saying that was Head's proven ability on the boards. What the Eagles don't have in abundance is size. Center Theron Wilson is a slim 6-9; next biggest is Head.

That means someone has to go to the boards. The job fell to Head.

"There's only one ball," Braun said, applying a time-honored coach's creed to the situation. "All five guys can't be the man."

So Head accepted the role. And he excelled — his 6.5 rebounds per-game average made him the Eagles' leader and placed him eighth in the MAC. Against Kent State, he played 25 minutes despite not starting and grabbed a game-high nine rebounds.

He's also averaged 7.2 points per game, while making 55.2 percent of his floor shots.

What Head hasn't done well is shoot free throws. He was 1-of-4 against the Golden Flashes, leaving him 23-of-52 for the season (44.2 percent).

After his final miss, however, he showed his value to the team. Head went to the line after driving toward the basket, shooting, missing, then rebounding his miss and getting fouled. He hit the first free throw and clanked the next, but quickly slid down the lane and outfought two Kent State players for the rebound.

His hard work was recognized, and loudly applauded, by the crowd.

Sure, Head appreciates it. He also firmly believes he can do more, given the opportunity.

"Right now, I just want to be like Dennis Rodman. We don't have anybody who does that here."

Now, the key question: What if EMU draws Iowa in the NCAA Tournament?

"They're just another team," Head replied. "That's all in the past. I mean, I'd be happy to play them, to show them what the MAC's all about.

"If it happens, it happens."

And what's happening at EMU at present couldn't make Head happier — at least until his role is expanded.

Bear-baiting proposal likely on fall ballot

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

Anti-hunting forces are attempting to undermine Michigan bear hunting through a ballot initiative. In all likelihood a proposal to ban baiting and the use of hounds for bear hunting will be on the ballot when the polls open for the presidential election on Nov. 5.

Volunteers representing anti-hunting groups are currently circulating petitions across the state in an effort to put the issue to a public vote. They have until May 29 to gather the 280,000 signatures needed to put the proposal on the ballot.

On the surface, the proposal may not seem like a big deal. After all, it doesn't appear that they're trying to end bear hunting, just limit the ways we hunt bear, right? But the truth is, in Michigan 96-percent of the annual bear harvest comes directly from the use of bait or hounds. In Michigan, it's nearly impossible to "glass" bear from mountain top to mountain top like they do out west, or "drive" bear from cover like they do in some of the eastern states. With the enormous, thick tracts of forests and swamps which make up Michigan's bear country these techniques are non-productive.

A healthy population

Michigan's bear population is in excellent shape with between 8,000 and 10,000 bear residing in the Upper Peninsula and the northern Lower Peninsula. This healthy population is a direct reflection on the superb job the Michigan Department of Natural Resources biologists are doing in managing the black bear. Managed hunting is a big part of that management plan.

"The DNR is committed to managing the black bear resource in the best way possible," said then DNR director Michael Moore in a press release issued last month. "This includes the annual harvest of some animals through hunting to maintain bear numbers at a desired level and to help avoid unwelcome bear encounters. In Michigan, the use of bait and the use of hounds for bear hunting currently play an important role in this effort. In addition, cubs and female bears with cubs are protected from hunting in this states so that many of the young animals will survive and become an important part of the state's future bear population."

Last year, 5,592 hunters killed 1,455 bear for a 26-percent success rate statewide. Approximately 76-percent of that harvest was taken over bait and 20-percent was taken behind hounds. Take away these two time-honored techniques and you'll effectively end bear hunting and the DNR's ability to manage the bear population.

If we lose this battle, what will they come after next? Will it be hunting rabbits, pheasants or ducks with dogs, or maybe bow hunting?

"It's more than an attack on hunting. It's an attempt to do away with scientific wildlife management," said Tom Eurich, president of the Michigan Bear Hunters Association. "I can't think of anything more damaging to all wildlife."

An expensive fight

It will take millions of dollars to win this referendum. Anti-hunting groups will buy television and radio time and use it to try to convince the non-hunting public that our proven scientific management techniques are wrong. We must counter these attacks with equal TV and radio time to spread the truth about hunting and wildlife management. Who do you want managing our wildlife, professional biologists or emotional animal rightists?

Hunting groups have joined forces to fight this initiative. The Michigan Sportsmen's Defense Alliance (MSDA) started raising money last year and recently pledged $100,000 to Citizens for Professional Wildlife Management (CPWM), which is a coalition of groups formed by the Michigan United Conservation Clubs. Fund-raising efforts such as raffles and gathering pledges are ongoing. One of the more exciting raffles, sponsored by the Upper Peninsula Sportsmen's Alliance, offers a new log cabin and 40 acres of hunting land as the grand prize. (Call Bill Sutherland at (313) 728-6686 for ticket information).

Get the answers

The Michigan Bear Hunters Association and the Michigan Bear Hunter's Conservation Association are holding their annual convention on Friday and Saturday, March 15-16, at the Troy Marriott. If you want to find out more about this threat and how we can win I encourage you to attend the convention.

Saturday's daytime program features a lineup of speakers who will address all aspects of the initiative including the state of Michigan's bear population; how to communicate a pro-hunting message; details on animal rights attacks across the country and what's being done in Michigan to win this referendum; information about governor Englers Hunting and Fishing Heritage Task Force, formed last year to seek ways to preserve our outdoor pursuits; and much more.

Tickets for Saturday's daytime program, which begins at 9 a.m., are $5 each. Tickets for the Saturday evening banquet, emceed by former Detroit Tiger great and avid hunter Jim Northrup, are $40 each and cover the daytime program, a cocktail hour, a prime rib dinner and a grand auction. On Friday night there will be a special event featuring an open bar, a dinner buffet and a hunting and fishing trip auction. Friday's program will be emceed by Bob Garner, host and producer of the television show Michigan Out-of-Doors. Tickets for Friday's program are also $40. For more information and to order tickets call (313) 878-5845 during the evenings and on weekends.

Gallimore parent receives school award

Barbara Weir, a parent volunteer at Gallimore Elementary School for 17 years, was presented with the district "Volunteer in Public Schools" (VIPS) award by the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education recently.

Gallimore principal Larry Cole said Barb Weir's relentless volunteer activities include serving as both PTO vice president and secretary, and helping in the classrooms and at special events, such as Field Day and the Ice Cream Social.

She has been an active participant with many groups, including the Playground Committee, Beautification Committee and Fundraiser Committee. Weir also has served as the Publishing Center chairperson and coordinated the Holiday Happening event for the past six years.

Jan Jungquist, an active Gallimore PTO member and one of the many individuals who nominated Weir, described her as "one of the most selfless people I know when it comes to the needs of Gallimore school, staff and students."

Even outside of school, Weir seeks to enrich the lives of others. She has been both a Girl Scout and Cub Scout leader, and also is involved with activities and committees at her church.

Sally Gubry, Gallimore Elementary PTO co-president, said, "Barb Weir is a miracle in motion and has never hesitated to step forward and help, while still raising her own family and volunteering in the community. To put it simply, with her smile and her knowledge and skills, when she reached out to us, we could not help but reach back and help, too. So we have all gained more than we can acknowledge from one person. And for this, we are all grateful, parents, students and staff — the whole Gallimore community."

Weir received a certificate of recognition, a pin of the Flag of Liberty and Learning, and a gift certificate from Ernesto's and the 'I Care" committee, all presented by Board President David Artley.

Communications budget gets the nod

BY RALPH R. ECHTINAW
STAFF WRITER

Canton trustees unanimously approved a $213,000 annual budget for the new communications office Feb. 27.

The budget for the rest of 1996 calls for $80,408 in pay for three employees, $31,294 in fringe benefits and $80,000 in printing and publishing costs.

Most of the money needed to run the communications office was freed up by deleting items in the budgets of other departments which had been doing things the communications office will now do.

Still, officials came up $39,951 short and had to take $5,000 from the fire fund, $10,000 from the police fund and $24,951 from the fund balance to square spending and revenue.

Communications Coordinator Ken Voyles will receive an annual salary of $41,818. Two communications specialists, assigned to the Municipal Services and Public Safety departments, respectively, will be paid $25,800 each.

Duties of the communications office include producing newsletters, advertising materials, press releases, a welcome book for new residents, a speakers' bureau pamphlet, a parks and recreation guide, Summit and Pheasant Run publications, board meeting handouts, photographs and videotapes of events and a host of internal communication tasks.

Hospital offers course on AIDS awareness

St. Mary Hospital in Livonia will offer a Premarital AIDS class in March and April.

Persons who wish to be married in Michigan are required to receive information about sexually transmitted diseases and HIV/AIDS before applying for a marriage license.

Upon completion of the class, you will receive the necessary certificate to obtain a marriage license. Certificates are valid for 60 days. Registration for the class is required. Cost is $15 per person or $25 per couple.

To register, call (313) 655-3314 or toll-free at 1-800-494-1615.

Henry Ford system gets $12,000 donation for Ukrainian hospital

The Regional Clinical Hospital in the Ukrainian city of L'viv will soon receive a desperately needed "mobile isolette" to carry premature and seriously ill newborns from around the region to the hospital.

The purchase of the $12,000 isolette, or infant transporter, which provides oxygen and warmth to newborns, was made possible by the Ukrainian Village Corp., the operating arm of the Ukrainian Village senior housing center in Warren. It presented a $12,000 check last month to the Henry Ford Health System/L'viv Oblast Clinical Hospital Partnership program.

For more than three years, the Ukrainian Village Corp. has followed the partnership, established to modernize medical care at the Regional Clinical Hospital, which is short of medical equipment and supplies.

Henry Ford's Dr. Sudhakar Ezhuthachan, neonatology division head, and clinical nurse specialist Christine Newman coordinated the neonatology portion of the partnership. Newman is a Livonia resident.

"Our attempts to help our friends in the Ukraine would fail if not for the backing of the Ukrainian community and other friends of this project," Ezhuthachan said. "We are so grateful for all their support."

Members of the Ukrainian Village Corp., comprised mainly of elderly Ukrainian-Americans, wanted to participate in the program, because it helps their compatriots in the former Soviet Republic, said Stephen Wichar, president of the Ukrainian Village Corp.

Ezhuthachan said an infant transporter is vital because of the regional hospital's neonatal unit treats premature and seriously ill newborns from miles around the city of 600,000.

Begun in 1993, Henry Ford Hospital's partnership with the Regional Clinical Hospital is sponsored by the American International Health Alliance through funding from the U.S. Agency for International Development.

BOOK BREAK

Troy 'Whiz Kid' offers guide to investing

ESTHER LITTMANN

Some people spend more time thinking about what kind of pizza to order than they do about investing $10,000 in a touted stock.

Strikes home, doesn't it? It's a comment that Warren Buffet or Peter Lynch could have made but didn't. These are the words of 17-year-old Matt Seto who has already appeared on the front page of the Wall Street Journal (March 1994) for creating a private mutual fund that gained 38 percent in 1993, outperforming 90 percent of all funds in its category.

The Troy teenager's latest achievement is a book, co-authored by Steven Levingston, called "The Whiz Kids of Wall Street's Investment Guide" (William Morrow, 1996, $22). In a style both lucid and entertaining, the author insists that picking a good stock isn't magic but common sense compounded by dedication.

The product of his Chinese parents' Confucian philosophy and solid Midwestern values, Seto approaches investment with three principles in mind: 1) education, 2) independent thinking and 3) logic. In his book, our young guide leads us through the steps he takes when selecting a good stock.

Don't depend on the advice of your friends or your broker, the author insists. Research the stock yourself. The library is full of informative sources such as "Value Line" and "Standard and Poor's Stock Reports." Then, make a decision based on the numbers: the company's debt, inventory level, cash flow, book value and price-earnings ratio. Seto defines his terms and explains each process in layman's language, referring to visuals such as an annotated page from "Value Line."

Seto also explodes what he considers the diversification myth. Those who diversify, he claims, lack confidence in their ability to pick stocks. But "the more effort you put into assessing each stock pick, the more confident you will be about it." The slogan he lives by is "Buy the best, forget the rest."

What is so astounding is that the young man speaks from a wealth of experience. After all, he began his reading, analysis and assessment eight years ago when the stock market crashed in 1987. At the time, he was 9 years old.

Although the whiz kid of Wall Street doesn't invest in mutual funds — he created his own, remember? — he admits that "a professional at the wheel," one who does the research you can't do, will be helpful to people with time constraints. But even then, Seto cautions, it's important to do your homework. Identify your goals, read relevant publications, even the fund's prospectus before making a selection.

Matt Seto's "Investment Guide" is both humbling and inspirational. Older readers will want to emulate him and will find anecdotes describing his financial encounters with Best Buy, Blockbuster and American Express fascinating reading.

Working with color

Spring brings out the home decorator in all of us. Smudges on the wall, dull hues, and outdated color schemes cry out for home improvement. But what if we're on a budget? What if we have neither much time nor money to invest? Then color is the answer, writes Virginia Carr, interior designer, local TV and radio color consultant and newspaper columnist ("Ask the Color Wizard").

Color can alter the perception of size, create a mood, make us feel either warm or cool, and camouflage the objectionable — all at reasonable cost. To help people coordinate their color scheme, Carr has written "Making Color Work" (Smart Home Moves Press, $15.95). It's chock full of practical advice on how to colorize the home, both inside and out. A workbook section replete with graph paper for floor plans and furniture templates helps the do-it-yourself decorator plan every inch of the house. Spring is on the way. "Making Color Work" advances the timetable.

Esther Littmann, a resident of Bloomfield Township, is a lecturer of English and German at Lawrence Technological University in Southfield. As an only child, Littmann grew up regarding books as substitutes for siblings. You can leave her a message from a touch-tone phone at (313) 953-2047, mailbox 1893. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314

Poets to visit Cranbrook

The second annual "In Seed Time — The William and Nancy Beckwith Memorial Reading" will take place 2:30 p.m. Sunday, March 17, in the deSalle Auditorium at Cranbrook Art Museum, 1221 N. Woodward, Bloomfield Hills.

Live Irish music and poetry will be featured. Admission is free with no seats reserved. Call (810) 335-0021 for information.

With renowned poets and musicians from Ireland and America, "In Seed Time" should be an unforgettable afternoon for those looking for "authenticity" or just fun.

Irish poet and playwright Paula Meehan will come from her home in Dublin for the event. She is the author of four books of poetry, most recently "Pillow Talk" (1994). In her native Ireland, a number of her poems have been choreographed and set to music. She has also collaborated with visual artists in creating multimedia presentations.

Irish-American poet and writer Thomas Lynch will also be featured. He lives most of the year in Milford, where he is a funeral director, and spends part of the year in Ireland, where he has restored his family's ancestral cottage. The author of two collections of poetry, "Skating with Heather Grace" (1987) and "Grimalkin & Other Poems" (1994), Lynch has published poems and essays in The New Yorker, The Paris Review, The London Review of Books, Harper's and other leading periodicals.

The Ann Arbor Irish Ensemble will present traditional Irish music, with fiddle, guitar, tin whistle and bodhram (the Irish handheld drum).

Poet, essayist and critic Richard Tillinghast of Ann Arbor, who lived for a year in Ireland and spends part of the summer writing, giving readings and teaching there, will be master of ceremonies. Tillinghast and famed Irish poet and writer Eilean Ni Chuilleanain launched the "In Seed Time" series in 1995.

INTERIOR MOTIVES

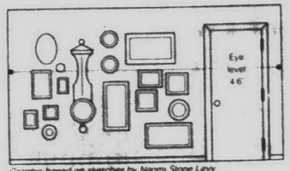
How you display artworks speaks volumes

NAOMI STONE LEVY

Where, why and how we decorate our walls will display the importance of our crowning glory. Whether your collection of art work is prodigious or innocuous, putting it in its proper perspective speaks volumes about you.

Nothing looks as amateurish as a very small painting (even if it is an authentic Vincent van Gogh) that is lost on a very large wall. If you are trying to feature that single magnificent work it needs to be hung in a smaller space. One very large painting or its equivalent should occupy that large wall. If you don't own one large painting or print, this is the time to consider a group of lesser acquisitions.

Do you own a collection of silhouettes; perhaps cutouts of your own or family profiles? Do you own a banjo clock or a barometer? All of these could comprise an inordinate grouping, whereas they have no punch when scattered "hit or miss" throughout several rooms and hallways. Small prints or paintings should find their home; I envision these in what I think is an imaginative spatial setup.



Graphic based on sketches by Naomi Stone Levy

Grouping

The configuration of this group is critical to its success. Place the banjo clock or barometer slightly off-center and then align several small framed bits and pieces at the smaller end of the wall. Larger pictures or paintings will be better on the opposite, or larger side of the clock.

If this vertical arrangement meets your standard be certain that the height is also correct. The horizontal center should be at eye level, approximately four feet six inches from the floor, not necessarily in a rigid straight line, with suitable items above and below. Determine the original line at the outset.

Some time ago in a previous column I suggested using the floor below your intended collection to achieve a final layout before hammering in the nails. Measure carefully, don't trust to luck. (See illustration.)

In this balance it is important to consider color. Black and white seems lighter in scale than strong color; therefore striking paintings and prints require more space around them. To counterbalance the aforementioned wall configuration another composition has rigid and equalized possibilities.

Variety

Do you own a set of Audubon prints? If necessary, reframe them appropriately. If you wish to fill a larger space it behooves you to substantially enlarge the matts before selecting the frames. The matt might even be deemed out of proportion to the size of the print, but be ever more effective. My recommendation is that the matts be a neutral color, preferably off-white.

I might mention any other set of prints you own, whether in color, or even a set of small black and white photographs. Monographs, lithographs and woodblocks, all of which comprise great collecting, will have a singular esthetic effect and will resonate your good taste.

Other eclectic collectibles worthy of display are cross stitch samplers and fracturs. Early American or Country French devotees will be appreciative of their presence. A singular colorful quilt, whether new or old, makes a delightful wallhanging. The Amish produce artful new examples. "Square within a square" designs are awesome.

In the 16th century magnificent tapestries served two functions: They were decorative of course, but they also were conducive to adding warmth to the unheated room. In the 20th century a dazzling contemporary tapestry will enhance your wall. Search one out in local craft shops.

Wall sculptures, constructions and plaster casts would diversity your wall decor. Stained glass, possibly an old church window, will lend wondrous color tothe area. If you are enterprising you might even uncover a Frank Lloyd Wright window for a prodigious 1920s look. Even an antique framed mirror has value in a wall setup. Now proceed to hang the rest of your treasures.

Lighting

Many months ago I devoted an entire column to lighting. At that time I didn't mention illumination of collectibles. In another era there existed "over painting" lights. The ugly cord always hung below and the overall effect was horrible.

In our time, at worst, we can resort to several spot strip lights that are ceiling mounted and focus directly on our treasures, lending them the importance they deserve. At best we can install hi-hats with directional focus or bracket lights that are wall-mounted and also focus on the items displayed. A visit to a Michigan Chandelier showroom will explain all of the above. Very important!

FOCUS ON PHOTOGRAPHY

Try 'freeze frame' portraits

MONTE NAGLER

Posed group portraits can appear stiff and boring and many times won't result in relaxed, spontaneous expressions. Here's a new way to take portraits that is fun and exciting for all and will in all likelihood produce photographs that will capture the fleeting expressions so often elusive when people are posed.

Whether it's just two subjects or an entire family, you'll get great results that everyone will enjoy and treasure.

Creative photographer Dave Frechette of Detroit's ColorPerfect employs this technique and recently used it to shoot this writer's family portrait.

Here's what Dave did and what you can easily do, too. In his studio, he placed a chair in the center of the composition. I and all family members gathered around the chair and Dave began to count to five. His instructions were that during his count, we were to run quickly around the chair (similar to playing "musical chairs") and then

Nagler

when he said "freeze," we were to do just that and look at the camera! At that instant, he would snap the shutter.

We all had a great time and as you can see in the photograph shown here, Dave captured everyone with a natural, delightful expression.

Some points to remember:

- Make sure you have enough space in the viewfinder so that no faces are "cut off" in all the excitement.
- Use an aperture small enough so that depth-of-field is adequate and no one appears out of focus.
- If indoors using flash as Dave did, you'll easily freeze the action. If outdoors, use a shutter speed fast enough to eliminate any movement.
- Remind everyone that on "freeze," they should be able to see the camera. If all your subjects can see the camera, then the lens will see them and no one's face is blocked.

Try Dave's idea the next time you're snapping the kids or other family members or friends. Even try it at a party. Think of all the fun everyone will have and of the exciting pictures you'll be able to produce!

Leonard to speak at luncheon

Join the city of Southfield's Cultural Arts Division in welcoming area writer Elmore Leonard to the Author's Luncheon Series 11:30 a.m. Sunday, May 5, at the Southfield Radisson Hotel.

This special afternoon will feature a lively lecture from western/mystery writer Leonard, crowned "the best American writer of crime fiction alive" by Newsweek magazine. Come discover how Leonard comes up with his wonderfully messed up characters and intricate storylines that have been described as so real and compassionate that "the reader forgets that it is fiction."

Admission is $15 for the luncheon and lecture, $5 for the lecture only. Call (810) 424-9039 for reservations or information.

The author has gained much fame in the past few months with the release of his 32nd novel, "Riding the Rap," as well as the release of the movie "Get Shorty," based on his book by the same name. The movie was a smash featuring John Travolta, Danny DeVito and Gene Hackman.

MODELS PORTRAY LIVED-IN FEELING

STORY BY DOUG FUNKE · STAFF WRITER

"If a model is done properly, prospects visually move in," said Laurie Frankel, vice president of sales and marketing for the Herman Frankel Organisation in West Bloomfield. "The whole idea is to envision family lifestyles in the home."

Builders don't want prospective buyers to get so enraptured with furnishings, wall treatments and accessories that the model, itself, becomes a secondary attraction.

"One of the things a builder always specifies is they don't want us to make items so beautiful that people forget walking through," said Julie Baba, A.S.I.D., an interior designer with Gorman's Studio in Southfield.

"The house is what they're selling, not the furnishings," said Suzanne Lucas, owner of an interior design firm in Franklin.

Their needs, tastes and spending capabilities differ.

"We tell designers who the market is," Frankel said. "We tell them who the family is and they decorate around it."

Lucas and Baba understand the routine perfectly.

"You work on a precise location, price point and the general attitude of that area," Lucas said. "That will dictate the attitude of the house."

"You can buy a house in Novi for $250,000 and a house for $350,000. That jump will create a different homebuyer. I don't want to put something in too elaborate for someone in a $150,000 house," Lucas said.

"In a family room with an appeal to a younger group, sports-type things, things like golf clubs in the corner looks like you just walked in from outside," Baba said.

"A lot of people have animals. You might want to do something to introduce an animal theme – maybe photographs or put down a dog dish," she said.

"Putting out a basket with a lot of yarn, knitting needles gives a lived-in touch, a family touch," Baba said "I've done collection of photographs, frames on the wall and tables, maybe even put a camera out in the den or bedroom."

Lucas said that while she will set out plates and a mixing bowl on the kitchen table, counter space most likely would be left empty.

"What a customer wants to see is function and easy maintenance of a home," she said.

"Other things I do is put a New York Times out with a pair of glasses in the family room and fill up a bowl with M&Ms," Lucas said.

Stuffed animals are popular accessories in houses geared to families.

Furniture is placed so that prospects can measure what they already have to room sizes in the model. It's important that visitors can move freely.

"I want people to walk into a room and gaze upon it, look at moldings, look at corners," Lucas said. "It's important that a house looks like it will for a homeowner, not a vignette for a furniture store."

Baba concurs.

"Basically, the best thing we can do is coordinate a house so it has a certain flow to it. Visitors feel comfortable when colors don't jar. That's why we use a lot of mirroring to create open space."

Designers get their inspiration from a variety of places, said Steve Teich, A.S.I.D. and a principal with Teich-Davis Interiors in Royal Oak.

"We get ideas from trade shows, magazines, looking at other designs we see around town. We're all getting ideas from one another. It's a pretty compatible community," Teich said.

Because all of the furnishings in a model are purchased for a builder by a designer, it's important that they're neutral in color and can be used again and again, Frankel said.

Baba sees a trend to blending traditional and contemporary in the same house.

"You mix in each room," she said. "You might have traditional upholstery with a contemporary cocktail table and some real modern art. You might do all contemporary and put in a couple of antiques to give it that blend."

"The greatest trend I see," Teich said, "whether contemporary or traditional is the tendency to go to the more classical look. Something that's not out of style in five years. Just well-made, simpler-line furniture."

Cost always is a factor.

"If you do the whole house with full apppointments, it can easily run $30,000 to $50,000," Baba said. "They're buying draperies, wallpaper, not just furniture."

"The least expensive job I had was several thousand dollars," Lucas said. "It was more painting, wallcovering, a face lift to a spec model, no furnishings. A four bedroom colonial or two bedroom condo can run maybe $30,000, $40,000."

"We want them to be real livable and distinctive," Frankel said. "But not too distinctive."

GARDEN SPOT

Nursery specializes in tree peony hybrid

BY MARTY FIGLEY
SPECIAL WRITER

There are many horticultural businesses in Michigan, some of which specialize in the unusual or one particular type of plant.

Scott Reath of Reath's Nursery (County Road 577, N-195, Vulcan, Mich. 49892; phone (906) 563-9777; catalog, $1) specializes in herbaceous and tree peonies. Many of Reath's plants were hybridized by David Reath, Scott's father, who began hybridizing in 1961.

The plants are propagated and raised on this nursery, in zone 4, and are very winter-hardy. Their herbaceous varieties need no support and grow from 18 inches to five feet; tree peonies range in height from one to six feet. The spectacular blooms glow in a variety of colors.

Plan a sunny place for a peony this spring by incorporating manure into the ground two to three feet deep. They ship their plants in September — fall is the best time to plant them in well-drained fertile soil with a pH of 6 to 7.2. Each herbaceous plant sold is a large division with from three to five eyes.

"Peonies love a fertile soil and like summer dryness," Reath said. "As long as it rains every once in a while, no watering is necessary."

Herbaceous peonies naturally die down to the ground and Reath recommends cutting them to two inches of the ground after it is frozen. A winter mulch of pine or other bark mulch should be applied two inches deep, especially if they are in a cold pocket in the garden. For large blooms remove side buds; for landscape purposes leave them.

The buds vary with the variety, some of which are Faith Fenton, pink; Little Red Gem, with gray-green foliage; Rozella, double pink; or White Frost, with very white fragrant blooms.

Tree peonies are very long-lived and are kept in the nursery for four to five years before being sold. There is a lot of difference between flower forms and shapes. Some to try are Age of Gold, good for beginners; High Noon, sometimes reblooms; or Iphigenia, a single red. They only need a minimum amount of pruning. Remove old brown leaves as they occur and in eight years old stems should be cut out and then again every five years.

Kiwis

Want to grow a Kiwi vine? Hartmann's Plantation, Grand Junction, sells only wholesale, but the information company vice president Daniel Hartmann shared with me will help home gardeners who want to learn how to grow and care for the vines.

Some Kiwis are now winter-hearty; tests have been conducted in northern climates where they survived 25 degrees Fahrenheit below zero temperature.

"The Arctic Kiwi, Actinidia arguta, is the fruit of the future," their catalog said.

Each cultivar has a different flavor, depending on how ripe the fruits are when harvested.

"The best flavor comes out of the fruits when they are left on the vine and receive cool nights in the autumn, since harvesting in Michigan occurs in late August for the first ripe fruit; but the best fruits will ripen through September," Hartmann said.

In Michigan the vines are planted in the spring five feet apart, using a single wire trellis. A mature plant can produce about 100 pounds of fruit, so the support has to be strong. A grower or gardener often develops a support system to suit his or her needs.

It is necessary to grow both species of Kiwis to realize fruit. One male plant will take care of six females. They like a sunny location and protection from the wind. They will grow in most any kind of soil, although organic matter should be incorporated into the planting hole. Good drainage is essential. These vines produce pretty white clematis-like flowers before they set fruit and don't need a lot of care, just fertilizer twice a year and pruning. They are pruned similarly to grapevines and are best trained to a single main trunk, with two permanent lateral side branches.

Some female vines for this area are Anna, Cordifolia or Geneva — males, Arctic Beauty or Number 1971. Your nurseryman can recommend suitable Kiwi varieties for your garden. It takes several years for these vines to produce, but they are pretty and will add to the landscape before the fruits can be enjoyed.

TIMELY GARDEN TIPS

- Clean your garden tools if you failed to do so last fall.
- Flexible foam plastic tubing will cover metal handles on garden carts and be more comfortable than the cold metal on your hands.
- Remember where wild violets grew last summer? Dig up a chunk of frozen sod from the area and plant it in a broad container, keep it constantly moist and wait for bloom.
- Walk your grounds, draw and plan, study books and try something new in the garden this year.
- Build a trellis or other structure to hide an unsightly view, then plant a flowering vine to add beauty to an otherwise eyesore.

WHAT'S THE LATEST?

Presently, personal preference influences the selection of cabinetry more than any trend involving a particular period or style. If there is a look that is gaining in popularity, it is the influence of Shaker and Arts and Crafts. Interest in these two styles is based on a shared belief in honest styling and materials that are distinctly American. Each showcases the workmanship, quality, and individuality that many now deem important. In addition, both Shaker and Arts and Craft styles integrate well with other areas of the home in open designs. Arts and Crafts can be seen as the logical progression from the country-style of cabinetry, utilizing stained glass and rectangular motifs in a handsome accessory colors. In terms of overall design, the trend is toward unfilled units that vary in depth, width, and color to impart a series of freestanding furniture to the kitchen in an attempt to make it look like other living areas of the home.

The design professionals of MODERN KITCHEN & BATH recognize that each customer has specific tastes and budget requirements. Our goal is to help you create a kitchen that suits your tastes and is ergonomically functional. Our Amera finely crafted contemporary and traditional cabinetry help meet your particular use and organizational requirements. No matter what your kitchen expectations are, from office and family center, to traditional or gourmet food preparation, your Amera kitchen will always be the useful and beautiful room you planned. Visit our showroom of 819 E. Fourth Street, Royal Oak, or call us at (810) 546-0660 for craftsmanship and service.

HINT: The increasing popularity of glass doors and such architectural elements as valances in kitchen cabinetry also underlines the trend toward distinctive design.

Make miniatures

In daylong workshops Friday-Saturday, May 10-11, Bill Lankford of Schererville, Ind., will cover the making of a miniature tree, built on a scale of one inch to the actual foot. The tree shelters a clubhouse in its branches and a lemonade stand on the ground. Lankford's work is displayed in important miniature museums nationwide.

Criss Goad of Birmingham, owner of Miniature Makers' Workshop at 4515 N. Woodward, offers a free spring brochure with details about classes, including Lankford's. The brochure describes sessions beginning March 9 and ending June 15. It is available by calling (810) 549-0633 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday.

Classes conducted by Sue Jaques of Farmington Hills include creation of a woven wicker Easter basket in a session Saturday, March 30, with children welcome. Other Jaques classes cover a long wicker planter, geraniums and a Victorian wicker dressing table and stool. Her instruction on a Victorian wicker crib Saturdays, June 8 and 15, is the first in a series on furnishings for the dollhouse nursery.

Subjects for the Saturday classes of Gail Braman of Farmington Hills are a table and bench March 23, when children are welcome, and a highback settle bench April 27.

Criss Goad will be instructor for classes on dollhouse exteriors, interior decorating and electrical wiring and a dollhouse wiring workshop. Tuition prices vary according to class length and materials furnished. Reservations for classes should be made a minimum of two weeks in advance.

Remodeling is topic

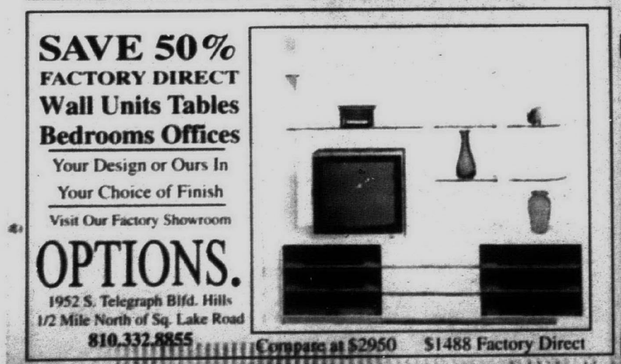
The seminar will take place 7-9 p.m. in the Southfield Civic Center Pavilion, 26000 Evergreen. Registration is free. For registration information, call (800) 354-9310.



LET'S REMODEL

Remodeling ugly bathrooms can be exciting

Q: We are considering remodeling a small bath in our 1956 ranch. We need ideas for adding space to the bathroom and any considerations we might want to give to design options. In addition, what type of questions should I ask a tile installer for totally redoing the tile?

A:If your bathroom is like many, commonly found in the ranch homes built in the 1950's era, sea-foam green tile running up the walls, peach and black countertops, or love marigold colored fixtures, then I'm sure it's been at the top of your "it's gotta go" list ever since you moved in. I find it amusing that so many prospective clients I meet tell me that their bathroom must be the ugliest bathroon I've ever encountered. Well I've seen my share and they all seem to have their own unique charm (or lack thereof).

On the up side, with all the new products on the market today remodeling a bathroom can be one of the most exciting rooms in your home to remodel! Solid surface countertops, numerous sizes and styles of ceramic tile, coordinating bathroom fixture ensembles, the selections and availability have vastly improved over the years.

The planning of your bathroom is a crucial step in the remodeling process. A bathroom can be one of the most expensive rooms in your home to remodel, so establish some budget guidelines and determine to what extent you wish to take this project first. For example you are indicating a need for increased space to your bathroom. This can be accomplished a couple of ways. First,if it is storage space you are looking for, consider increasing the amount of cabinetry in your bathroom. Also make them more accessible, cabinets with roll-out trays and drawers seem to give better storage than doors. Possibly add a tall linen cabinet or a wall cabinet over the toilet.

The only drawback here could be that because of tight clearances you might have to purchase custom cabinetry with reduced depths or special widths to fit some areas. This still might be more economical than some of your other options.

In addition to adding cabinetry, lack of counter-top space is a common problem. In many, bathrooms that we remodel, we often continue the countertop from the vanity over the toilet at a reduced depth, which offers approximately, 3 linear feet of added countertop space. This also gives us an opportunity, to add a full mirror over the countertops that gives the illusion of a larger bathroom.. Another way to give this illusion is to use recessed lighting, which concealed in the ceiling, does not close in a room like a bulky light bar or fixture.

If it is actual physical space that you are looking to gain, our options would be to add an addition off the bathroom or to steal some space from an adjacent room or closet. My experience has been that you don't have to drastically increase the square footage of a bathroom to improve the layout; in many cases gaining the area of a closet is sufficient. Although, if you are doing your own design you should consider how this will affect the room you are borrowing space from. If you take over a bedroom closet, I would suggest adding a closet in this room to replac it. In any case, once you figure out how to gain the space you need, and if you are able to keep the plumbing fixtures in the same location, your new layout should come together quite easily. In some cases though you may have to move the location of a toilet or tub to give you the layout you desire. If you are considering a contractor, a good design/build firm can provide you with the design layout as well as the materials and labor to complete all phases of the bathroom remodel.

NARI® MICHIGAN REMODELING ASSOCIATION

50-year rosarian gathered honors

By Marty Figley
Special Writer

There aren't too many people who can claim a 50-year membership in an organization, but Ethel Rogalski of Redford can. 1995 marked her golden anniversary year as a member of the Detroit Rose Society, and what an active member she has been!

Ethel and her late husband attended their first rose show in 1945 at the Goodwill Industries in Detroit, and admired the 50 or so large roses on display.

"We thought we had superior bloom in our garden," she said.

At that time they had 50 rose bushes of different varieties in their yard. Many were "old-timers" such as hybrid teas, gradifloras and shrubs, with names such as "Chrysler Imperial," "Mardi Gras," "Confidence," "First Love" and "Showgirl."

"(Now) people have these in their back gardens."

Joining the society wasn't just a matter of filling out an application and paying the dues. Their garden was inspected to see if they qualified. They did, and their membership card reads June 1945.

"We became dedicated members and roses took over our lives."

Starting out

Their first rose garden was in Dearborn. Later they moved to Dearborn Heights and transplanted all the roses to the new yard, without losing any of them. When I asked how they had achieved this, she said they kept their fingers crossed, and the property had been a horse ranch — "best for roses."

When Ethel first joined the DRS, they did everything by the book and although they won several ribbons (they began displaying in rose shows right away), they felt that "nothing worked." They soon started experimenting on their own and became quite successful.

For instance, instead of buying one bush, they bought three, planted them in different sites in the yard to find out where that rose grew best and then transplanted the other two with the one that excelled.

They also watered the seven 50-foot beds (each contained 50 roses) with soaker hoses, connecting them with a pipe so they could water the beds at the same time. The water was turned on at night and off in the morning.

In the fall the roses were hilled and covered with bean baskets. No leaves were used. Soon other members of the DRS did the same.

They also tired of using chemicals and experimented with organic practices. In November they bought cow manure from a farmer and covered all the beds. Other than needing to use specific chemicals for specific problems such as black spot and mildew, they followed organic procedures.

"Most roses now are almost disease resistant."

Soon they added another bed of miniature roses, which they first saw around 1955 at a garden show in Chicago. They bought three plants and shared one with another rosarian. They all thrived and two years later the Rogalskis introduced them to the DRS membership. Now these roses are very popular.

"When we first joined DRS all the members took three or four pails of roses and often thousands of blooms were shown at a show. There wasn't a rose show we didn't miss.

"After we had been members for five or six years, we ate, drank and slept roses."

The couple continued to show roses and win ribbons and traveled to many cities in the United States where they displayed their plants at the National Rose Society.

Keeping busy

Ethel has kept busy through all these years. She said that as the flowers in their gardens started to bloom in the season she began on one bed of roses, removing the spent blooms, and continued through the garden each day of the week. By the next Monday she had to start all over again and continue this necessary chore into late fall.

She also was the newsletter editor and the historian of the DRS and has received many of their awards, including the Ernest Schoensee Memorial Award, the highest honor given by them. She is also a life member in that society.

As the "rose career" waned, members of the society helped prune the 650 roses growing in the garden to get it ready for summer. Three years ago as she planned her move into a condominium she offered her roses to DRS members, who in a couple of weeks took all but 50 bushes, climbers and miniatures. The father of the new house owner was "thrilled to death" to find a rose garden already established.

MARTY FIGLEY

Ethel shared her roses during all those years by placing two bouquets each Sunday on the altar of St. James United Church of Christ in Dearborn.

Once a rosarian, always a rosarian, Ethel still grows roses. She hangs two miniature roses on the lamppost near her condominium door and trains them to cascade over the pots.

"This spring they will be 2 years old and will be more full and plush, more of a grown plant."

Seasonal work

The roses grow in plastic pots in a sunny spot where they are watered and fed with a complete fertilizer the first of May, June, July and August. She follows the organic principles as in the past.

For winter care, around Nov. 15 she digs holes for the two roses in a protected area against a building and sinks each pot to its rim, then cuts off some stems and ties the rest together. She then mounds the soil over the pots, covers all with a rose cone and puts a brick on the cones to hold them in place.

Ethel watches the weather and in the spring when it is warm enough she digs the roses up, cleans the soil and adds more if necessary, and grooms the plants.

Usually there is enough moisture in the pot from its winter rest, so she lets the soil dry out before watering and waits to begin fertilizing in May.

"Before planting, always soak new bushes for at least a week in a pail of water to which fertilizer has been added.

"It takes a rose bush two years before you know what it will do, so don't give up."

Activities

DRS members who live in Birmingham, Westland, Clarkston, Taylor, Centerline, Warren and other nearby cities now number around 250.

Rose shows take place twice a year, in the spring and fall. The 1996 Spring Show will be June 15-16 at Universal Mall, Warren; the Fall Show Sept. 14-15 at Laurel Park Place, Livonia. Mark your calendars now!

In June 1996 the DRS, organized in 1930, will celebrate its 66th year. The society is the oldest in Michigan and first met at the Naval Armory on Belle Isle. Eleven members comprised its roster. The first rose show was at the Naval Armory in 1931.

For many years the DRS maintained the rose garden at Fairlane in Dearborn, and the Wayne County Extension Service rose garden. Now the society's efforts are concentrated on the rose gardens at Presbyterian Village, Redford.

General meetings take place at the Pleasant Ridge Community Center, Pleasant Ridge. For information, call Diane at (810) 649-6161 or Bruce at (313) 563-5691.

Workbench Furniture offering design services

Local Workbench Furniture officials have announced the introduction of design services for customers.

"This is something we've wanted to offer for some time now," said Kendra Craig, regional manager for Workbench. "It seems more and more of our customers are inquiring about design services, especially when they're buying furnishings for an entire rooom, such as the living or dining room."

Design services are available at all four Michigan Werkbench Furniture stores in Birmingham, Rochester Hills, Novi and Ann Arbor.

The design services are managed and conducted by Warren Lewis, who has been the display manager at Workbench Furniture for more than 12 years. Lewis has also held design positions with Hudson's and Tyner Furniture in the Ann Arbor area. He earned his degree from the New York School of Interior Design. In all, Lewis brings more than 30 years of design experience to his new post with Workbench.

Workbench offers three levels of service, two of which are based on the amount of a furniture purchase.

The Basic Design Service, for purchases of $1,000 or more, includes a one-hour in-home consultation with the Workbench designer, who will help with decisions on sizes, colors and basic layouts.

Listings rebound: March usually brings an increase in houses available for sale from the relatively slow months of January and February.

Warmer weather will bring more sales

BY DOUG FUNKE
STAFF WRITER

Housing sales should climb to their usual spring and summer levels. So price your house properly: You want a price high enough for you get what the house is worth, but not so high no one will buy it.

If you're thinking of moving to a new house or condominium, we've turned the corner and are heading toward the prime listing and sales months of the year, statistically speaking.

Figures on both those fronts last year rebounded dramatically during March and April after hibernating through January and February, according to RealComp II.

The mammoth multi-listing service includes Western Wayne/Oakland County, Birmingham, Bloomfield, South Oakland, Rochester, North Oakland, Detroit, Dearborn and Livingston realty boards.

Nearly a third of the 55,755 listings reported to RealComp II during 1995 occurred during the months of May, June and July, said Karen Kage, director of the service.

Correspondingly, the three consecutive months last year with the most sales were June, July and August. Nearly a third of the 32,740 sales occurred then.

"That is typical," Kage said. "I've been doing this a long time now, 17 years, and summer is usually the busiest (for sales).

"In my opinion, when it's close to school being let out, a lot of people will list their house in attempts at selling and relocating before school starts," she said.

Last summer, agents bemoaned a shortage of houses for sale. As of June 1, RealComp reported 20 percent less inventory than was available on that date in 1994.

Things are still tight.

As of the end of January, 8,534 houses and condos were available for sale in the RealComp II network, a 5.5 percent decrease from what was available in January of 1995.

"Normally, as soon as the holidays are over, we're really busy," said Carol Kery, a partner and sales associate with the Prudential Accent Realty in Livonia. "That's not the case because we just don't have enough inventory to sell.

"It could be everyone has refinanced, they have low payments and might be reluctant to sell," she said.

"We have lots of buyers, people calling on houses," Kery said. "When we get a listing, it sells in a couple of days if it's priced right."

Larry Horn, an associate broker with Century 21 Today in Farmington Hills, attributes low inventory to refinancings and an increase in housing values so that people feel they're limited to what they can subsequently buy after selling.

Buyers and agents both have to move quickly today, Horn said.

"If a house is updated and in good shape, you don't have a day or two to think about it," he said. "Last week on Friday, I gave a customer 20 listings he wanted to drive by and look at. He called me on Sunday with eight he was interested in and only one was still available."

Mike Workman, sales manager for the Michigan Group Livonia office, shares that observation.

"You see a home you like, you better grab your checkbook," he said. "It's a big decision we're asking people to make instantaneously. I'd like to see more inventory."

An agent, apparently, must pay even more attention to detail when inventory shrinks.

Tom Lipinski, a Realtor with Chamberlain in Birmingham, projects an upswing in inventory.

"Last year, it was difficult for people to make the decision to sell and buy a new house after just refinancing," he said. "People are past the break-even point now (on refinancing expenses). I feel it's going to be a better year on that alone."

Agents farm inventory by contacting owners trying to sell their own houses and following up on expired listings.

"I'm bumping into a lot of real estate agents," Lipinski said. "When inventory is tight, more people are fighting for the few."

"Part of the problem is some people are still waiting for warmer weather," Workman said. "If you put your home on the market now, you can still move in June or July.

"Typically, you look at March as being an inventory explosion month. With the market being hot now, it may behoove the seller to move quicker."

Sales prices, reportedly, are holding firm.

"In many cases, we're getting multiple offers and sales are in excess of asking prices," Workman said.

Houses priced too high generally sit

Management company and lawyer may be liable

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I am extremely upset with my fellow condominium board members for basically being duped.

Our management company, which has turned out to be a dud, induced us to not use our present attorney, who was doing a good job, because they said that they could find a cheaper lawyer who would review the management contract with them at no charge.

The lawyer, in turn, reviewed the management contract, said it was in order, and then we hired the management company.

The management company strongly encouraged us to fire our old lawyer. The management company also wanted us to get the attorney who had done this free work for us.

It turned out that the attorney also had some previous involvement with the management company in a proprietary way and has been too busy to handle our work in a proper fashion in any event.

We think that both the attorney and the management company failed to disclose what their relationship was.

Can we pursue either the management company or the attorney?

A. Obviously, the management company had a fiduciary responsibility to operate in the best interests of the association and to disclose all relationships which it had with any persons it recommends to the association.

It appears that the management company was attempting to bring in the attorney which, as you indicated, had some sort of financial interest in the management company to represent the interests of the association.

The attorney should have disclosed to you the relationship that it had with the management company. Also, the attorney who was fired because of this arrangement may have a cause of action against both the management company and the attorney. The management company and the attorney you hired may have conspired together to interfere with the contractual relations between the association and its former attorney.

Moreover, the new attorney itself may have breached both legal and ethical responsibilities to the association in connection with full disclosure to it.

You may also treat this as a learning experience in regard to interviewing management companies and attorneys.

Remember, you usually get what you pay for and that there is no such thing as a free lunch.

Q. My condominium project is approximately 18 years old. The percentages of value we use are based upon square footage. These percentages of value are used for the allocation of assessments.

We want to consider changing the master deed so that everyone pays equal assessments. Can we do so?

A. That is a very complicated issue, but even under the amendments to the 1978 Condominium Act, which may or may not apply to your condominium, based upon one's reading of the savings clause of the 1978 Condominium Act, you cannot change one's percentage of value, without everyone's consent.

While you can probably amend your documents to give everyone an equal voting right, to the extent that the percentages of value are used for levying assessments, you would not be able to amend the percentage of value to accomplish that purpose.

You are best advised, however, to have an attorney give your condominium a complete legal audit as to your condominium documents, including your master deed, your articles of incorporation, and bylaws.

Be smart when you are hiring home improvement contractor

You're ready to have your kitchen or bathroom remodeled and you hope that the contractor you selected will do a good job and back up the work. You aren't alone.

According to the Council of Better Business Bureaus, people call the BBB to check on home improvement contractors more than any other type of business.

And while calling the BBB can help you find out if there are any complaints on the company and its response record, homeowners can follow some simple rules to avoid the pain of being burned.

Keith Paul, president of Home Advantage Referral Service, specializes in matching honest contractors with consumers. His advice:

■ Ask for references. By doing this, you receive valuable information about workmanship. Ask questions like, 'How was the quality of work?' and 'Would you use the contractor again?'

■ Check for insurance. If the contractor doesn't have valid insurance and one of the workers is injured on your property, you could be on the hook paying medical bills.

■ Ask for a written guarantee. This step is very important in case there's a discrepancy regarding workmanship or cost overruns. get a written, detailed cost analysis before the project begins to prevent problems between you and the contractor.

■ Request a project completion schedule. Asking the contractor for a schedule that explains the tasks and time frames for the project should help minimize construction delays.

■ Don't pay everything in advance. The only time contractors need money in advance is when they order a custom, non-refundable item for the project.

Never pay more than 20 percent up front. Paying for work as it's completed helps ensure it will be done to your specifications.

■ Don't pick up the permit. Having the contractor pick up the building permit from your city or township serves two purposes.

First, when the contractor obtains the permit, it's proof that his or her building license is valid. Second, if there's a problem with workmanship, you can track the company by its license.

■ Make your final payment after you receive a waiver of lien. This document from supply companies indicates that all of your materials have been paid. If your contractor doesn't pay for the materials, you could be liable for the debt.

Paul's company, (800) 733-3778, has developed a network of local contractors. He screens and checks references, licenses and insurance. There's no charge to consumers for referrals.

Builders take lead in setting standards for square footage

Suppose you wanted to know the square footage of your house. There's nothing to it, right? You just get out a tape measure or yardstick, go around the walls, take the measurements, multiply the length by the width, and you've got it. Your grade-school kid can do it even faster than you can.

But wait a minute! Here are some questions you might have:

■ That fireplace over there — do you count it in?

■ Here's a utility room. You don't use that floor space for general living. Does it count?

■ Your living room has a little "jog" into which a window seat has been built. Does that floor area count?

■ Your house has another nice feature — an enclosed porch. Does it count? And what about the unfinished basement?

■ Over here is a closet that has room only for hanging clothes. Upstairs is another one — a "walk-in" closet. Does either of them — or both — count?

■ A portion of your second floor is under the eaves, and part of its floor runs into an area where you can't stand up. Does all of the part that offers less than standing room count, or part of it, or none of it?

So you see, determining the square footage of your house isn't necessarily simple. Traditionally, these and other puzzling questions have been answered in different ways. The result is that if you ask a group of highly skilled professionals to measure your house and give you the square footage, they are likely to come up with different answers.

Architects have a set of rules for measuring square footage, but the system is designed for structures that are far larger and more complex than houses and is generally regarded as being too cumbersome for house building. Real estate appraisers, local building inspectors, and house builders all have methods that they use, but the methods are not identical, and sometimes there are differences within the professions.

House buyers are interested in knowing footage, and they would like to have numbers that can be compared. House builders are taking decisive steps to solve the problem. The National Association of Home Builders has commissioned its research arm, the NAHB Research Center, to develop a set of uniform standards for measuring the square footage of houses.

The Research Center formed a committee that includes representatives of federal agencies, real estate appraisers, architects, mortgage lenders, realty groups, building code officials, industry associations, house builders and homeowners. The group has been designated as an Accredited Standards Committee of the American National Standards Institute (ANSI).

This group is reconciling old differences and hammering out answers. Plans call for the committee to complete its work by Memorial Day and to forward its results to ANSI by Labor Day for adoption as an official ANSI Standard.

All of this means that, beginning in the fall of 1996, when your grade-schooler measures your house, he or she will get the same results as everyone else. It also means that you can compare houses, knowing that the figures reflect a uniform set of procedures.

Home builders face challenges in making housing for everyone

For more than 50 years, the National Association of Home Builders has dedicated its efforts to building high-quality housing attainable at all income levels, enhancing the legislative and regulatory climate for housing and the building industry, expanding homeownership opportunities and promoting policies to maintain housing as a national priority. And here in Michigan, the Michigan Association of Home Builders has worked with NAHB for more than 40 years to further these goals in our community.

Today, the housing industry faces many challenges. Among them are bringing homeownership opportunities to the millions of Americans who are still unable to purchase a house, maintaining the availability of housing and assuring an adequate supply of decent, affordable rental units. The housing industry also must promote innovation, develop new technology, foster competition and build a working partnership with all levels of government. A healthy and competitive housing sector will create millions of good jobs and generate demand for billions of dollars worth of goods and services, thereby fueling the economy.

By working together on the elements that make neighborhoods and communities a reality, house builders provide a good mix of housing opportunities and create a positive quality of life for all residents.

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

THIS WEEK'S HOME MORTGAGE SHOPPING TIP:

Beware of prepayment penalties when selecting a mortgage lender and a mortgage program.

Years ago, prepayment penalties were the norm. Over time, it became more uncommon for mortgages to include a prepayment penalty. Because these penalties are beginning to show up again, consumers should add the question "Do you have prepayment penalties on your mortgages?" to their list of questions to ask lenders when mortgage shopping.

There are a few reasons for the recent move toward prepayment penalties.

First, with the boom in mortgage refinancing in the last few years, servicing lenders have lost a lot of money because many current customers refinanced to a lower rate, often with a different lender. Some of the customers who refinanced may have had the loan only a short time, possibly a few years or less. Lenders are hurt most by these short term loans because the profit they make only begins after they have covered the expense of originating the loan. Without charging a prepayment penalty, they are left without covering the original cost.

Secondly, customers who obtained a no point loan or no point/no closing cost loan may have refinanced too. These loans have all the costs built into the interest rate up front, resulting in an above-normal rate. Lenders offered those loans in hopes of recouping their up front costs over time in addition to the profits that would emerge after a few years of servicing the mortgage. When borrowers refinance, lenders are again left without the ability to cover originating costs of the loan.

The no point and no point/no closing cost loans are the ones most commonly carrying prepayment penalties today. In addition, adjustable rate mortgages typically carry prepayment penalties. Unfortunately, loan officers don't always offer this information up front when you are deciding on your loan product. Therefore, you need to make sure to read the fine print and ask questions.

Generally, prepayment penalties range from 1% to 2% of the loan balance at the time of payoff. The penalty generally only applies within the first 2 to 5 years of the mortgage. After that, there is no penalty. These parameters vary from lender to lender. Borrowers need to consider their future plans if possible when deciding on the type of loan that is best for them. A poor mortgage decision could end up being a costly mistake. For example, choosing to pay off ahead of schedule a loan with a balance of $125,000 could cost up to $2,500 in penalties for early payoff. Obviously it is something to consider when choosing a mortgage program.

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION:

Q. We recently closed on our house and had a bad experience with the lender. At the closing, we were told for the very first time that there would be a prepayment penalty if we paid off the loan early. The lender said the penalty would be 1½% of the balance if we paid it off within the first 3 years. We know we are moving in 2 years because of my husband's job transfer. Is this prepayment penalty a normal charge and is there anything we can do about it?

A. First of all, I am surprised that the loan officer did not inform you of this fact during your initial application or when you selected your mortgage program. It really should have been verbally noted to you. Unfortunately for you, the prepayment penalty clause was most likely written on the application forms you signed and therefore, the lender fulfilled his requirement to inform you of it. Often, this type of misunderstanding happens when inexperienced loan officers inadvertently neglect to inform their clients of a prepayment clause. If your initial paperwork does not disclose the prepayment clause, consult your attorney for advice. Hopefully, other readers will learn from your experience and remember to ask this important question at the start of the mortgage process.

Marina Pointe offers water, golf opportunities

BY MICHELE GLANCE
STAFF WRITER

In many ways, Marina Pointe in Orion Township is like two subdivisions in one.

For people who want to be in an executive house at an affordable price, Marina Pointe's off-water sites offer a lot of house for the money.

For people who yearn to live on a canal leading to Lake Orion and are willing to pay a lot premium starting at $75,000, Marina Pointe offers that lifestyle.

"It's possible to buy a really nice home on the lake, but it won't be in a subdivision like this," said Jeff Menzel, sales rep for Pulte Homes, the only builder at Marina Pointe.

There are a total of 88 lots in the subdivision. About two dozen are still available. Prices for the executive style houses start at $232,990 for the Baybrooke model and go up to $275,990 for the Wentworth on base lots.

"It's very difficult to find homes of that quality and for that price on the water," said Deen Hyde, director of marketing for Pulte. "I guess you could say it's affordable lakefront living."

The typical Marina Pointe buyer has been working in the Auburn Hills or Troy area and is attracted to the idea of living in a peaceful setting near Lake Orion, Hyde said.

Dave and Kimberley Muncie lived in Troy for four years before they decided to move to Marina Pointe. They have two daughters, Rachael and Lauren.

"We wanted to be on the water," Dave Muncie said. "It's a little more peaceful out here, and you feel that you're getting away from it all.

"It's a little bit farther drive for me coming out here, but it's worth it," he said. "Coming up Joslyn from the freeway is a nice hilly drive, and you pass lots of lakes. You feel like you're turning down the speed control on life a bit."

Robert and Jeannine Hamill moved to Marina Pointe from Portland, Ore. They live in a house that backs up to Indianwood Golf and Country Club.

Since the Hamill family was moving from out of state, choosing a spec house at Marina Pointe was very convenient. The Hamills also felt moving into a new subdivision would give their daughters, Briana, Chelsea and Madeline, a chance to make friends easily.

"I liked the fact that there are a lot of trees here and that it feels kind of secluded," Jeannine Hamill said. "There's a small town feeling here, and yet you're close to everything."

Even buyers who decide to pick a lot that doesn't overlook the lake will have easy access to boating and fishing since the public lake access site is just around the corner.

As if abutting Lake Orion isn't beautiful enough, Marina Pointe also offers homesites overlooking the lush Indianwood Golf Course. Houses backing up to the golf course carry a $10,000 premium.

There are five floor plans available. All have been nearly equal in popularity, Menzel said, with the Remington selling just slightly ahead of the others.

Remington Model: This house, which features four bedrooms and two staircases, is the most popular among the offerings at Marina Pointe.

"People talk a lot about the nine-foot ceilings, the sense of open spaces and the fact that there is a staircase in both the front and the back of the house," Menzel said. "That's a feature that you don't usually see in a home selling for $300,000."

It features two staircases, including one that gently curves off the hardwood foyer. The back staircase leads to an overlook just off the master suite, which includes a private bath with a garden tub. The Remington has a base price of $266,990.

It features 2,498 square feet, four bedrooms and 2½ baths. One thing that makes this model particularly appealing is the roomy kitchen with a working island.

The sales office at Marina Pointe, (810) 693-8200, is open 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily.

Chimneys need to be checked, cleaned regularly

If your house was built in the early 1900s or before, its old masonry chimneys are probably unlined. Although an unlined brick chimney was OK in its day — when labor was cheap, and we often saw the chimney sweep — it is considered substandard these days.

In many cases, old bricks and mortar have deteriorated and cracked. This creates spots where smoke and other flue gases can escape into your home. Should a chimney fire occur in an unlined system, the gaps become passageways for smoke and fire.

At the very least, an unlined old house chimney will need a flue lining. At the worst, a badly deteriorated stack will require a costly rebuild. A visual inspection of the chimney in the basement, attic and the section protruding through the roof is usually sufficient for a certified chimney sweep to evaluate chimney condition.

In addition to checking for external deterioration, you should also make sure a 2-inch clearance exists on all sides of an internal chimney. This clearance is necessary to allow heat from the masonry to dissipate. If your chimney doesn't adhere to this, some modifications and reframing work are necessary.

As far as the internal condition is concerned, if the chimney already has a liner it should also be inspected. It may need repair or replacement due to a chimney fire or improper installation. A newelectronic video-scan system, where a camera records the inside of the flue, is probably the best way to detect problems. This operation is done by qualified chimney sweeps. Depending on location, the costs of a video scan on a 2-story home stack range from $35 to $85.

If a chimney is unlined you can eliminate this step, since you should line it anyway. But before you choose a flue lining, decide if you want to add a wood stove or high efficiency insert to the fireplace as this will affect the size and style liner you'll need.

Adding a wood-burning stove or an insert to a fireplace changes what happens in the chimney. Since these appliances use a smaller, controlled amount of air than an open fireplace, they create less heat than a roaring open fire. Because the flue gases don't move through the chimney as quickly, they have time to cool and, due to the lower stack temperatures, condense on the flue walls forming creosote.

The safest and most efficient way to operate a heating appliance is with an insulated liner. It must be sized properly for the stove or insert's flue outlet and it must extend all the way to the top of the chimney.

Creosote builds up faster in an oversized flue where there's more space to heat. An insulated liner combats the condensation by keeping stack temperatures warmer. Basically, there are three types of liners available for masonry chimneys — clay tile, stainless steel and cast-in-place.

Clay tile is the most commonly used in new construction. It's available in rectangular 2-foot sections, five-eighths inches thick and of various widths. For these to be installed properly, the chimney should be opened up every 2 feet so the joints can be sealed with refractory mortar.

Builders set footage standards

Suppose you wanted to know the square footage of your house. There's nothing to it, right? You just get out a tape measure or yardstick, go around the walls, take the measurements, multiply the length by the width, and you've got it. Your grade-school kid can do it even faster than you can.

But wait a minute! Here are some questions you might have:

- That fireplace over there — do you count it in?
- Here's a utility room. You don't use that floor space for general living. Does it count?
- Your living room has a little "jog" into which a window seat has been built. Does that floor area count?
- Your house has another nice feature — an enclosed porch. Does it count? And what about the unfinished basement?
- Over here is a closet that has room only for hanging clothes. Upstairs is another one — a "walk-in" closet. Does either of them — or both — count?
- A portion of your second floor is under the eaves, and part of its floor runs into an area where you can't stand up. Does all of the part that offers less than standing room count, or part of it, or none of it?

So you see, determining the square footage of your house isn't necessarily simple. Traditionally, these and other puzzling questions have been answered in different ways. The result is that if you ask a group of highly skilled professionals to measure your house and give you the square footage, they are likely to come up with different answers.

Architects have a set of rules for measuring square footage, but the system is designed for structures that are far larger and more complex than houses and is generally regarded as being too cumbersome for house building. Real estate appraisers, local building inspectors, and house builders all have methods that they use, but the methods are not identical, and sometimes there are differences within the professions.

House buyers are interested in knowing footage, and they would like to have numbers that can be compared. House builders are taking decisive steps to solve the problem. The National Association of Home Builders has commissioned its research arm, the NAHB Research Center, to develop a set of uniform standards for measuring the square footage of houses.

Mortgage rates climb upward

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirty-year, fixed rate mortgages averaged 7.41 percent this week, up from 7.32 percent last week, according to a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the highest since last Nov. 2, when rates averaged 7.44 percent. Rates have risen for the last two weeks, from 6.94 percent during the week ended Feb. 15. The 6.94 percent was the lowest since Oct. 28, 1993, when they averaged 6.88 percent.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.38 percent, up from 5.34 percent last week.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for those refinancing mortgages, averaged 6.87 percent this week, up from 6.77 percent a week earlier.

How to create a splash with your kitchen faucet

It used to be so dull.

Years ago, choosing a kitchen faucet didn't require much choice at all. Faucets were considered merely for their function. Style wasn't an option. There was basic chrome, with maybe a choice of one or two handles and a swinging head. For homeowners, creating kitchen style had virtually nothing to do with the faucet.

Not anymore.

Today, the array of features — both styling and function — is dazzling, as are many of the faucets themselves. Finishes run the gamut from polished brass to a spectrum of colors (or a combination of finishes). Manufacturers are putting an emphasis on faucets with aesthetic flair — so much so that a faucet has become a key element in kitchen design, adding snap and flair to the room's decor.

But with so many choices nowadays, how can a homeowner know which faucet is right for her? Here are a few tips on what to consider.

Faucets to fit today's lifestyles

"The kitchen is the center of attention in today's lifestyles," says Karen Mendelsohn of Delta Faucet Co. "Gone are the days when Mom was hidden away in a kitchen to bring meals out to the family or guests. In a dual-career family, everyone gathers in the kitchen to pull together the evening meal, and guests mingle in the kitchen to help cook or just socialize."

No matter what the decor, there are faucets to complement the style. Sleek, Eurostyle units impart contemporary flair for modern kitchens. Replicas of colonial designs, complete with porcelain cross-handles and other old-fashioned looks, are perfect for traditional kitchens. Waterfall spouts with sweeping arches are timeless choices for fashionable kitchens of almost any decor.

These days, plumbing products are regulated by strict code guidelines issued by the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) and other code bodies. To be code-approved, universally designed faucets must operate at a force of five pounds or less and not require tight grasping or pinching.

These more accessible products, mandated by the Americans with Disabilities Act, are designed with physically challenged individuals and seniors in mind — but their universal, non-institutional design has appeal for all users.

"Accessibility is an important consideration for everyone, not just for the physically challenged," Mendelsohn points out. "We want Grandma and Grandpa to be able to use the faucets, when they visit. Baby-boomers are growing older, but we don't want institutional-looking faucets in our homes."

With water shortages and water conservation an ongoing concern, plumbing products must be designed to preserve the nation's potable water resources.

Many state and local regulations require water-conserving faucets to be installed in their jurisdictions. Most of these requirements are aimed at faucets in showers and lavatories, but low-flow heads are also useful in the kitchen.

Of more concern in the kitchen are faucets that prevent backflow and back siphonage. These problems are caused when pull-out spouts are immersed in used water. This may allow waste water into the clean water system, which can lead to water impurities.

To prevent backflow and back siphonage, select a faucet with a device to restrict the used water from flowing back into the system. Look for faucets that are equipped with an atmospheric vacuum breaker and backflow check valve built right into the body of the unit. Some companies charge a minimum of $50 extra if they do offer a vacuum breaker to meet code. However, adding a vacuum breaker may require a separate hole to be mounted in the sink or wall, adding more work and expense.

Code-approved units should meet backflow and back siphonage regulation standards recommended by the Building Officials and Code Administrators International (BOCA) on removable spray spouts, International Association of Plumbing and Mechanical Officers (IAPMO), Southern Building Code Congress International (SBCCI) and the City of Los Angeles.

■ 'The kitchen is the center of attention in today's lifestyles. Gone are the days when Mom was hidden away in a kitchen to bring meals out to the family or guests. In a dual-career family, everyone gathers in the kitchen to pull together the evening meal, and guests mingle in the kitchen to help cook or just socialize.'

Karen Mendelsohn
Delta Faucet Co.

What's inside is important

"Finally," points out Mendelsohn, "to be sure you're getting a good value as well as a good-looking faucet, look for a well-built product. Ask about the internal construction."

For instance, a stainless steel ball valve in a single-handle kitchen faucet is extremely reliable, without the maintenance and replacement part problems some other faucets have. Faucets that are fabricated from solid machined brass bar stock and copper tubing are not subject to internal cross leaks and waterway blockages, which occur in sand- castings. Additionally, sand-casted models typically leach more lead than fabricated brass units.

For long lasting and lustrous chrome faucets, look for models that are triple plated. To protect special finishes — polished brass, antique brass and satin brass — look for a powdered epoxy coating that is electrostatically applied and provides a water-tight, abrasion- and chemical-resistant overcoat.

Wrought iron fencing is back

The traditional look of wrought iron fencing has been making a strong comeback over the past few years. This type fence lends a distinctive elegance and charm in its appearance that other fences lack. However, the frequent painting and constant maintenance associated with it (not to mention the rust) have kept many people from purchasing wrought iron products.

Recently, many people have discovered a fence that offers the dignified appearance and protection of wrought iron without the bother or the rust. Jerith Manufacturing Co. in Philadelphia has created an ornamental fence that is fabricated from aluminum and is guaranteed for as long as you own your fence. Jerith fences are ideal for swimming pool enclosures, as well as for coastal areas where dampness causes wrought iron steel fencing to be a chore to maintain. Jerith's aluminum ornamental fence can not rust even under the most severe weather conditions.

Jerith fences never need painting and maintenance because their powder-coated finish is guaranteed not to peel, crack, or chip. In addition, Jerith's exclusive aluminum alloy allows a typical section of fence to support over 300 pounds, which makes it as strong as a steel section. This unique fence is available in a wide variety of colors, styles and heights to complement any type of architecture. As a manufacturer of aluminum products for over 40 years, Jerith has built a reputation for high quality and product durability. This is why Jerith includes a lifetime warranty on every item it sells.

For a free brochure displaying Jerith's full line of maintenance-free aluminum fences, write to Jerith Manufacturing Co., Dept. HT05, 3901 G Street, Philadelphia, PA 19124
