Health care top teacher issue

School started Tuesday in Plymouth, even though teachers were without a contract. More than 300 attended a board meeting to complain about possible health care cuts.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Nearly 300 Plymouth-Canton schools teachers attended the Tuesday school board meeting, and some said they're troubled by proposed changes in their medical benefits.

The teachers current contract expires Friday. A negotiation session between the two sides is scheduled for Thursday. School started Tuesday without any problems.

Teachers now have Blue Cross-Blue Shield. School officials are proposing to go to a Catherine McAuley or Preferred PPO with co-pays and deductibles increased in a new contract.

Allen Dubois, a 28-year schools employee, told the board his Blue Cross coverage made it possible to pay for five courses of chemotherapy, after he was diagnosed with cancer in the 1970s.

He said the administration's proposed health care changes "puts me at risk and increases the uncertainty and stress in my personal life."

Dubois said the school district proposes to save $450,000 through changes in health coverage _ less than half of 1 percent of the total schools budget. To reduce health benefits, he said, would be "a tragedy that will haunt the district far into the future."

His comments were met with applause from teachers who filled the meeting room at Field Elementary School in Canton, where the board convened the Tuesday meeting. Several dozen teachers held placards with messages urging the board to consider teachers' concerns.

Plymouth Canton Education Association President Chuck Portelli said, "All employees want to be treated with dignity and respect. All of them would like a fair and equitable settlement in the contract and that is why they are here tonight."

Teacher Carolyn King told the board children deserve the best quality education possible. "Quality teachers deserve a quality contract," she said.

Laurie Manoogian said that four weeks ago, she commented before board members on the slow pace of negotiations. "I don't understand why we aren't any farther along than four weeks ago," she said.

Diana Carter said she didn't appreciate her health benefits until last year when she became ill in Hawaii. She said her Blue Cross card insured prompt treatment. "May you please consider keeping that for us, we have truly benefited from it," she said.

"It is a misconception that this is a total livable wage," said special education teacher Peggy Bozyk, adding she works another 20-hour job to help make ends meet. "Please reconsider what you're doing."

Errol Goldman, assistant superintendent for employee relations and personnel, told the teachers, "It is

Township to take action on home

BY KEVIN BROWN

Neighbors on Garland Street in Plymouth Township have complained for more than a year about a run-down, unoccupied house in their midst.

"It's a blight to the whole street," said Dan Schultz, who lives next door to the house at 14648 Garland.

After hearing a report on the problem, township trustees voted Aug. 20 to give the township attorney approval to file a lawsuit to get some action on the matter, if that action is deemed necessary to correct problems.

"The roof has fallen down, I suspect it's from the raccoons urinating. It's a spooky house to go into," Schultz said. Wife Elisa added, "It's full of feces and full of garbage."

Two dozen nabbed for rest stop sex

BY KEVIN BROWN

A state police crackdown on illegal sexual activity at the I-275 rest stop in Canton has sparked a couple dozen arrests this summer.

"We are trying to clean up the rest areas so visitors to Michigan who stop to use public rest areas have nice places to stop," said Raymond Walsh, Wayne County deputy chief prosecutor.

"I want to allow for anyone to send their 12- or 13-year-old son or daughter into a public restroom and not worry that someone will be there with their pants down around their ankles and say 'watch this' and perform a sex act," Walsh said.

He said police are cracking down on illegal sexual activity not just at rest stops, but also in Hines Park from Northville to Dearborn.

"The state police have brought us a number of different cases of all kinds of conduct involving open masturbation – in the cars, johns, on the benches in wooded areas, everywhere," Walsh said.

Violators are mostly men, but Walsh said, "The laws are being applied regardless of the gender of the actors."

While most of the charges of illegal activity involve homosexual acts, Walsh said pub-

It's difficult to take the family anywhere anymore without parting with serious amounts of cash. That's one reason Plymouth's Fall Festival is so popular with the 150,000-plus people who fill the streets of downtown for a weekend each September.

Many of the attractions are free, including lots of entertainment.

This year's festival is set for Thursday, Sept. 5 through Sunday, Sept. 8.

Paul Sincock, assistant city manager/director of public services, says festival-goers "can expect crowds and fine entertainment galore — anything from a pet show for kids to bands for mom and dad and everything in between.

"You can also expect some great Rotary chicken on Sunday." The barbecue is set for 11 a.m. - 5 pm. at the Gathering.

"We'll have kiddie rides for the kids, and an antique classic car show from noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday on Main Street in front of City Hall. It's a free event, and the entertainment is free all weekend," he said.

There'll also be entertainment geared just for teenagers, said Sincock. "There will be specific games and rides for teenagers on Ann Arbor Trail."

Pancake lovers will be happy to hear the Kiwanians will be serving hotcakes and syrup from 9 a.m. - 11:30 a.m. Saturday morning.

Food booths will be open throughout the festival. "There'll be all kinds of food booths up and down Main Street. We have a new format; a new layout because of streets cape being done this year," said Sincock.

An arts and crafts show is set for Saturday and Sunday at Central Middle School.

Old Village to host craft festival

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

■ 'That whole area is really starting to grow and get better and better, there are some strong possibilities as far as having some events down there.'

Diane Quinn
—Craft show ogranizer

If you've missed the Old Village Applefest in recent years, get ready for a new, improved fall event.

An Old Village Craft Fair is scheduled for Oct. 5 and 6 on Starkweather, Liberty and Spring streets.

It's being organized by Dianne and Raychel Quinn who put on the summer Art in the Park event in Kellogg Park.

"I had been shopping at Jerry Sindici's antique store (Robin's Nest Antiques) and we talked about doing something in Old Village," Dianne Quinn said.

Old Village, also known as Lower Town, is on the north end of town near the railroad tracks and Hines Park.

"That whole area is really starting to grow and get better and better, there are some strong possibilities as far as having some events down there," she said.

"We've been talking about this since last fall," said Old Village Development Authority Chairwoman Terri Kariniemi.

"We're looking at a way of bringing more attention to Old Village, we're reinstating some of the fall festivals that used to be held down here. We're making them a lot better with Dianne," she said.

The craft show will be juried and prizes awarded, as with Art in the Park. Besides providing a market for crafters, the event will present the Old Village area and show off some upgrading of buildings.

Raychel Quinn said 75 to 100 crafters could take part in the festival. "Basically we sent out information on our (Art in the Park) mailing list and by word of mouth to artists at other shows."

"It's going to have less art, more crafts, more demonstrators," she said, including seasonal Halloween and Christmas crafts, birdhouses, floral things and furniture.

So far, crafts scheduled to be demonstrated include broom making, floral designing, jewelry making, personalized signs and stained glass.

"It's going to be a small event, it should be a real relaxed thing," Dianne Quinn said. "It's a beautiful time of year, not too hot not too cold, we'll have entertainment, food too."

Plans also call for live music and people dressed in Renaissance costumes and art activities for kids sponsored by the Plymouth Community Arts Council.

"We hope to have an annual event, and grow into a fun thing for October," Quinn said.

Symphony names new publicity director

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra has a new publicity director.

Patricia Filios will be promoting all area activities of the PSO. A resident of the Plymouth-Canton area for 12 years, she brings considerable experience to the job.

According to Bonnie Holyoak, PSO executive director, Filios' background includes positions as a reporter with both a daily newspaper and a television station in Alabama.

She also spent 14 years as a public affairs officer in the U.S. Air Force and the Michigan Air National Guard. Most recently she has served in a volunteer capacity as the public affairs director for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for Wayne and Monroe counties.

"We are delighted to have this kind of experience working for us at the symphony," Holyoak said.

Filios, 47, sees the symphony as "a community treasure that more people need to know about."

The mother of four children, she is particularly interested in seeing families become better acquainted with the excellent PSO programs designed just for them.

"For many people in this area our performance of the Nutcracker has become a holiday tradition," she said. "But there are so many new families in the Canton area especially, I am eager to spread the word about our activities."

According to Filios, the 1996-97 symphony season will have at least three concerts aimed specifically at families with children.

"In addition to the Nutcracker, Dec. 13-15, the Family Fantasia, on Feb. 16, is perfect for Mickey Mouse fans. For teens and young adults, Musical Madness, March 15, will be in partnership with the string players of the Plymouth-Canton schools," she added.

"One of our main objectives is to help people in Canton, Northville, Novi, and Belleville realize that the Plymouth Symphony is actually their symphony as well," Filios said.

Plymouth Canton marching ban in step for season

BY DIANE HANSON
SPECIAL WRITER

The Plymouth-Canton Educational Park Marching Band is on the move again and ready to "ease on down the road" with a spectacular musical performance combining selections from "The Wizard of Oz" and the Broadway play, "The Wiz."

Parents of band members listened to a portion of the program Aug. 24 at the culmination of the week-long band camp at Camp Kohana in the Sleeping Bear Dunes area of the Leelanau Peninsula near Traverse City.

"It was probably the best band camp I've had since I've been teaching," admitted band director, David McGrath. This is McGrath's tenth year of teaching and his second year as music director at Plymouth-Canton and Plymouth-Salem High Schools. "We have a lot more of the show learned now than we did last year at this point and it's at a higher performance level too. This is a really special group this year...very hardworking and really talented."

Band grows

The 220-member band and color guard has grown from 180 members the previous year with more than a third of the band (77) incoming freshmen. "But, when you listen to them and watch them perform, you'll never imagine that," McGrath said.

Trumpet section co-leader, senior Tim Sissler, agreed. "We've got a lot of freshmen and they all learned really, really fast, especially this week," he said. "They were right up there with us." Sissler said the intense week of band camp made a "huge difference" in the band's performance level and amount of show learned.

Assistant marching band director of music, Amy Boerma, concurred. "I think every performance level has been raised," she said. "The band sound is so much more mature even than it was last year. Both Dave (McGrath) and I are really, really excited about the upcoming year."

Patrick Ruddy, assistant band director, for marching was extremely pleased with the efforts of the freshmen and the entire band during the week. "I told them this morning," he said. "I can't remember the last time I smiled that much during a run-through."

Practice, practice

The week at Camp Kohana came on the heels of two previous week-long mini-camps held at the school in June and August. According to Plymouth-Canton Music Booster president and camp director Sandy Keesey. "Everything went so nice this year. It was so smooth." She said there was one day of heavy rain but practice continued indoors. The band members practiced from 8 a.m.-8 p.m. every day but there was still time for fun, including a dip in Lake Michigan, dances, bonfires and a skit night.

Keesey noted that everyone was excited about this year's show. "It's a really good show," she said. "It's so uplifting and upbeat."

Juniors Lisa Garcia, clarinet, and Julie Wolf, baritone, are pleased with the tone of this show but admit that it is a bit more challenging than last year's performance of "Prophecy of the Earth."

"It's really fun," Garcia admitted. "We always do all the scary, weird shows and this year it's all happy and upbeat. But, it's really, really hard. It's actually harder than last year."

Wolf concurred. "It's really intense," she said. "It's very tough but I think the audience will like it a lot."

New show

McGrath couldn't agree more. "Everyone is in love with the show. It's a drastic change as you can get from the last few years," he said. "There are some dramatic moments. There are some absolutely drop-dead-gorgeous beautiful moments. And there are just some out-and-out fun moments too.

"This is a show that, if the audiences don't just give it up for the band while they're performing, there's something wrong because it's just an incredibly entertaining show."

The band will be performing the nine-and-a-half-minute program at football games, school functions and competitions this fall. Last year's performance of "Prophecy of the Earth" earned the band a multitude of first-place awards, including the Michigan Competing Bands Association State Championship award with the highest score (94) ever earned in the MCBA's 20-year history.

Additionally, the band captured fifth place among the 75 top bands competing at the Bands of America Grand National Championship in Indianapolis last November.

Toastmasters Club seeks to make a new comeback

BY CASEY HANS
STAFF WRITER

For many, the idea of talking in front of a group leaves them tongue-tied and brings butterflies to the stomach.

Help is here, as it has been for more than 70 years.

The Oral Majority Toastmasters Club is making a comeback in Plymouth, after more than a year of problems finding a new home and meeting place.

The group, an arm of the non-profit Toastmasters International founded in 1924, is designed to encourage and teach better listening, thinking and speaking skills.

"If you use a new word, you'll be more inclined to add it to your vocabulary – it stimulates the thinking process," explained founding member Marc Sullivan of Plymouth Township.

The group began meeting 7-9 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 18, at Plymouth Township Hall, and Sullivan hopes the new meeting place will draw both new and old members to the group. They plan to meet there every Sunday evening. Those interested in participating can call Sullivan at (313) 455-1635.

Unlike for-profit businesses such as Dale Carnegie, Toastmasters is an education-focused community group, with members helping members. The Oral Majority chapter in Plymouth draws from all over the area, including the Plymouths, Livonia, Canton, Westland, Novi and Farmington Hills, he said.

A typical meeting includes a number of different toastmasters including the "wordmaster," the "grammarian," the "poemmaster," the "topicmaster" and the "jokemaster," who all play a part in teaching the skills for better speaking. Members and guests also speak on various topics, and work their way toward various levels of certification within the group.

"I learned many years ago, it's not what you say, it's how you say it," said Sullivan, who started the Oral Majority Toastmasters chapter in 1981.

■ 'I learned many years ago, it's not what you say, it's how you say it. Clinton is a good example. People love to listen to him.'

Marc Sullivan

"(President Bill) Clinton is a good example (of people who speak well)," he said. "People love to listen to him."

Sullivan tells a story about one Toastmaster member who attended meetings for six weeks. Shortly thereafter, his employer told him that his job was being eliminated. Seeing a posting for a higher level job at the company, the man used the skills he learned over his six weeks with the club and persuaded them to give him the new job.

For many years, the local group met at the Denny's restaurant on Ann Arbor Road on Tuesday evenings, but recent changes in banquet policies there forced the group to look elsewhere for meeting space.

Just one year ago, the club had 28 members, which has dwindled down to very few because of the meeting place problem. Sullivan said he hopes a regular meeting place and time will encourage people to attend meetings once again.

"When you come to a meeting ... you'll say 'This isn't anything like I expected,' " Sullivan added. "There's nothing like visiting a Toastmasters club, just for the fun of it. Each club has their own personality."

People attend meetings from all walks of life, from educators to politicians to poets. "There's just a grand mix of people," he added. "Their common thread is that they want to communicate better."

On a related note, the international convention of the Toastmasters is being held this month in St. Louis, Mo., where the "world champion speaker" will be selected. Toastmasters International has more than 6,000 clubs in 48 countries.

Jaycees to sponsor child ID program

The Plymouth-Canton Jaycees will sponsor a Kidcare ID program from 1-3 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 28, at Kmart (on Ford and Sheldon Roads). Kidcare ID is the National Center for Missing & Exploited children.

Project Kidcare is a program designed to raise awareness of child safety and provides parents with an effective tool to aid law enforcement authorities, in the search for a missing child.

If anyone was photographed last year, bring your Kidcare ID, and they will update it for you. For more information contact the Jaycee Hotline at 453-8407.

Area Dems make the most of convention contacts

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

For Michigan's 157 delegates, one of the most popular men at the convention is U.S. Transportation Secretary Federico Pena.

"He has a lot of dealings with my boss," said Mike Duggan, deputy Wayne County executive and a Livonia resident.

"He (Pena) worked with us on the whole road issue with Gov. Engler," said Duggan, referring to the three-month fight in which the Republican governor tried to scoop up counties' and cities' shares of federal aid for state road projects.

"He was a key figure in making sure Wayne County got its road share. And he was a key in the $150 million expansion at Metro Airport."

Pena and Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros were the two Clinton cabinet stars at a Chrysler Corp.-UAW brunch Sunday honoring Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer _ a bash on the Navy Pier that drew even some General Motors executives.

But a trio of Detroit News reporters had to stand outside. "They weren't invited," said a Chrysler-UAW spokesman from Farmington Hills _ a former Detroit News reporter who refused to cross the picket line 13 months ago.

A Free Press reporter explained that Chrysler had invited all the media, but the UAW insisted on uninviting the two Detroit papers, where several unions struck July 13, 1995.

Kay Beard's scrapbook

It has been a productive week for Kay Beard's scrapbook, even before the heavy politicking started.

The Wayne County commissioner from Westland met, and had snapshots taken with, four members of the Clinton cabinet: Federico Pena of Transportation, Donna Shalala of Health and Human Services, Henry Cisneros of Housing and Urban Development and Robert Reich of Labor.

"I have a long list of things to do, and I'm going to do all I can," Beard said early Sunday. "After you spend this much to come to a convention, you want to see all you can."

Several snapshots were in reception lines, but there was a working conversation with Reich because his department has much to do with the School-to-Work Act Advisory Committee.

"I'm the only Michigan person and only county person appointed to it," Beard said. Her name was put up by an aide to former U.S. Rep. William D. Ford. Other members include a former Miss America, John F. Kennedy Jr., CEOs of big companies, students and parents.

The panel will advise the administration on the implementation of a 1994 that the Republican platform proposes to repeal.

Beard, an 18-year Wayne County commissioner, wears a second hat: She is on the executive board of the National Association of Democratic County Officials.

"Today there's the Chrysler brunch for Dennis Archer. At the Hyatt, we're going to hear Jim Carville; he's Clinton's campaign manager. We get a briefing from top Democratic officials on the issues, county and national.

"Tonight there's the Michigan delegation party at the Shedd Aquarium. Tomorrow morning there's the delegation breakfast (followed by a caucus).

"There's a luncheon for the National Association of County Officials. There's a reception from 2 to 4 called 'Women Win' at the Sheraton. That costs $125. This is costing me a lot.

"They're starting a foundation for Ron Brown (Commerce secretary killed in an April plane crash). That's going to cost me another $100. I can't pay that out of the officer's expense fund because we don't have that any more," said Beard, whose last national convention was the 1980 Carter-Kennedy brouhaha in New York City.

For emphasis, Donna Clark, a 13th Congressional District delegate from Van Buren Township, added: "People don't realize how much it's going to cost."

Clark is a teacher's aide and member of the National Education Association, which has 400 delegates, the largest single bloc at the convention.

The McKnights

Dick McKnight, 13th Congressional District chair, is "making connections with people who will help us" because he expects VIP visits in fall.

"We'll open an office in western Wayne County in Westland," said McKnight, a Westland resident who has a law office in Livonia and served on the Livonia Board of Education.

"When Clinton ran in '92, he went to Wayne Memorial High School. Mondale also came that way in '84," said McKnight during an interview at the downtown Westin Hotel, where the Michigan delegation is ensconced.

With him were wife, Gail, the Westland district judge, and son Edward.

2nd for Archer

Detroit Mayor Dennis Archer has given himself a second job _ promoting Chrysler Corp., its cars and trucks.

"They put a $750 million engine plant in Detroit, right down the street from the Jeep-Cherokee plant, where they added a second shift because it's such a hot seller," Archer said during the Chrysler-UAW brunch, adding:

"There'll be balloons, sand art, clowns, and all kinds of different activities," he added.

The highlight, says Sincock, is Sunday's chicken barbecue. "Once people have had their chicken dinner on Sunday, they're hooked. Once you've been, you have to come back to Fall Festival for your chicken dinner."

The Fall Festival has a proud tradition.

"The Fall Festival Committee is made up of volunteers," said Sincock . This is all done with local individuals and organizations, and it's non-profit. All the money raised goes back into the Plymouth community."

City police and municipal services workers will put 200-250 man hours into the event. That's worth $16,000-$20,000; $8,000 of which is being waived by the city commission.

Dan Schultz said he and a neighbor have taken turns cutting the grass at the home, as the house hasn't been lived in for nearly six years.

Elisa Schultz said that a raccoon once lunged and hissed at her and her daughter as they exited their back door. The family cat was nearly killed by a raccoon.

Township Chief Building Official Charles McIlhargey said that while the house doesn't look that bad from the outside, neglect has resulted in serious structural problems inside the house.

"I urge you to get this thing resolved before somebody's hurt," McIlhargey told trustees, in seeking their approval for potential legal action.

Township Attorney Tim Cronin said the problem has lingered, partly because it's been difficult to locate the three owners of the house.

■ 'We've found two, we've done our best to notify them. There are significant safety problems in the building. We've had long-term complaints concerning safety issues.'

Tim Cronin
—Township attorney

"We've found two, we've done our best to notify them," he said.

"There are significant safety problems in the building. We've had long-term complaints concerning safety issues," Cronin said. Problems in the house include decay in the floor under the kitchen, broken pipes and moisture damage.

McIlhargey said inspectors from the Wayne County Health Department inspected the house after complaints were lodged by neighbors. "They found rodents and raccoons living in there," he said, adding the house has now been boarded up.

Cronin said the house was willed to three siblings, one of whom lived in the house for a time. Attempts to contact the three have failed, but township officials say they've talked with relatives.

He told trustees citations have been issued to the owners charging neglect, but they have failed to respond.

Officials said taxes are being paid on the property.

lic displays of heterosexual sexual activity are equally illegal.

"This does not belong in public restrooms or the parks anymore than an act of intercourse on the floor," he said.

"The public areas demand a certain standard of decency. Public rest areas and public parks are not bedrooms."

Those who have been arrested range in age from 17 to 70, Walsh said. "We've caught doctors, lawyers, ministers, schoolteachers, regular working people. We've caught absolutely every conceivable profession," he said.

Judge Ron Lowe of the 35th District Court said of those who've appeared before him on related charges in recent months, "At this point 99 out of 100 are pleading guilty."

Authorities can choose to charge a violator with indecent exposure. The maximum penalty on that charge is 90 days in jail and a $100 fine.

Walsh said a steeper charge is gross indecency. Authorities can seek this felony charge – punishable by up to five years in jail and a $500 fine – if the accused is a repeat offender.

Walsh said a typical offender will hang around a rest area and approach someone, asking them "if they like to watch."

If the person says yes, the illegal activity often begins.

Walsh said that while most people go to rest areas, use the facilities and leave, potential sexual offenders visit a rest area and linger for an hour or more.

Too many men don't bother with prostate exams.

Fact is, it's no bother. The exam takes only a few minutes of your time. Once every two years if you're in your 40s; once a year if you're over 50 or have a family history of prostate cancer.

Regular screening can detect prostate cancer early, while it is still curable.

A few minutes of your time. It's really no bother. And your family will thank you for it.

STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO — Michigan delegates said it was a toss-up between actor Christopher Reeve and the Bradys as to who gave the most memorable speech in the early days of the Democratic National Convention.

"Christopher Reeve _ he appealed to our sense of humanity," said delegate Terry Ahwal, a Livonia resident and executive assistant to Wayne County Executive Ed McNamara.

"He asked us to help others less fortunate. It was not only what he said but his being there," she said of the former Superman who was paralyzed in a fall from a horse.

"And Sarah Brady's message _ the guns, the Brady bill, banning assault weapons," Ahwal added. Jim Brady was Republican President Ronald Reagan's press secretary when he and Reagan were shot in 1983; Brady suffered brain damage.

Democrats invited the Bradys to speak because the so-called "Brady Bill" on gun control was signed by President Clinton.

"The most moving had to be Reeve," said MEA local 1 president Lu Battaglieri, delegate from Rochester Hills, "but the Bradys were most on topic and had first-hand experience (with gun wounds). It's a reminder we're all vulnerable."

"Sarah Brady, because it's hard to argue with experience," said retiring state Rep. Maxine Berman of Southfield.

"When I was an English teacher, I told students, 'Talk seven days for a gun permit. Let me tell you about my family's inconvenience.'"

"The police officer," said Wayne County Sheriff Robert Ficano, who listened hardest to Chicago patrolman Mike Robbins. "It's courageous to be shot 11 times and come back and talk about it."

"The actor, Edward James Olmos," said delegate Kay Beard, a Wayne County commissioner from Westland, "because he talked about children. It was powerful."

"Bonior was pretty good," said Paul Policchio, executive vice president of the Service Employees International Union, representing Wayne sheriff's deputies and nursing home workers, among others.

House minority floor leader David Bonior of Macomb County linked the Republican convention to the 57th anniversary of The Wizard of Oz movie, quipping: "Buchanan doesn't have a brain, Gingrich doesn't have a heart, and Dole is on his way back to Kansas."

"Christopher Reeve was most moving," said attorney Dick McKnight, Westland resident and chair of the 11th Congressional District, "because he said we're all family, and we all have value."

"The Bradys and Reeve," said Mildred Jeffrey, grand dame of Michigan Democrats, the labor movement and Wayne State University. "Brady was always a comfortable guy, a nice person even though he was working for a person (Reagan) I didn't vote for. Sarah Brady had an underlying anger; she cared for him and was determined to keep after it (the gun control bill)."

"Hillary," said former state Sen. Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor. "It's not women's issues. It's women who are driving the issues of compassion. Women have much higher expectations from government than men. Women never accepted the notion that government is the problem. They have a different attitude."

Pollack said first lady Hillary Clinton was a major hit before standing-room-only crowds. "Women's support of Hillary shows they're confronting the lies head-on _ the gutter politics against that woman for four years."

■ 'The police officer It's courageous to be shot 11 times and come back and talk about it.'

Robert Ficano,
Wayne County Sheriff

Footnotes:

■ Want a snapshot of any famous Democratic woman? See Barbara Rom, the Bloomfield Hills lawyer and party fundraiser, who was performing heavy duty camera work on the convention floor Monday night.

"I'm busy taking Jessye Norman's picture," Rom said, delaying an interview. The Metropolitan Opera star was born in Georgia, attended the University of Michigan and visited the Michigan delegation on the floor.

"I have Hillary. Tipper (Gore, the vice president's wife). Sen. Barbara Boxer. Diane Feinstein. Barbara Mikulski. Donna Shalala. And that's just in the first hour and a half," said Rom, who attended women's forums and a group called Emily's list (Early Money Is Like Yeast _ it raises the dough)."

"It disturbs me that Republicans claim family values for themselves when our president and incumbent Sen. Carl Levin stayed married to their spouses."

■ Security is super-extremely tight at the United Center, where delegates meet. It takes about four times as long to get through the gate as at the GOP convention in San Diego. In prime time Monday, it took 75 minutes to enter the gate.

One reason appeared to be that metal detectors were set high to detect the smallest objects. Quipped Michigan chair Mark Brewer: "A fellow ahead of me had on so many buttons that he had to take his shirt off."

Another, so the story went, is that a hacker broke into the Democratic National Committee's computer and copied the code for credentials. Delegates, guests and media were told not to encase their credentials in plastic so that security guards could use scanners on every ticket.

Lawmaker wants Lions to pay state back for stadium

Michigan State Representative Deborah Whyman (R-Canton) is introducing legislation requiring the Detroit Lions Football organization to reimburse the state of Michigan for all tax dollars expended on the Pontiac Silverdome.

Whyman proposes that no new tax dollars may be spent on a new stadium by any unit of government until the state of Michigan is completely reimbursed for the 19 years of Silverdome subsidies.

Whyman stated: "The taxpayers of the sate of Michigan spent $13.9 million in taxes paying for the Pontiac Silverdome so that the Lions could play football there. The owners of the team now feel that the Silverdome has outlived its usefulness and expect taxpayers to pay for a new stadium. It is long past time the taxpayers get out of the business of building stadiums for private sports teams. I want to make sure that the taxpayers of the state of Michigan are made whole before one more tax dollars is spent on a new stadium."

Whyman continued: "My constituents have told me again and again that they don't want any tax dollars to be spent on new stadiums. All of us can now see the pattern developing with these sports teams."

Ross: Dems stake out middle ground

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO — Democrats are turning middle class and to the middle-of-the-road even as Republicans veer to the hard right, says platform builder Doug Ross.

"The national Democratic Party put 25 super-delegates on the platform committee to make sure the president's views would be strongly represented," said Ross, the West Bloomfield resident who was assistant secretary of Labor in Bill Clinton's administration until last fall.

"All along we tried to make sure the party connects with the great American middle class and those who aspire to the middle class.

"Democrats drifted away from the great middle class," said Ross, pointing to these differences between the 1984-88 platforms and the 1996 platform on which Clinton is seeking reelection:

■ "The '80s platforms were for larger government and more public spending. This platform calls for reducing government even more and cutting taxes.

■ "The '80s called for every imaginable program versus giving people the tools to solve their own problems.

■ "The '80s stressed the rights of criminals. This one stresses the rights of victims.

■ "On education, we call for charter schools, public school choice and performance standards to keep good teachers and remove bad ones. The earlier platforms called for more money for the educational status quo.

■'What most Michiganians want is government that is supportive of economic growth, a leaner and more efficient government, and social and cultural tolerance.'

Doug Ross,
Dem platform builder

"What most Michiganians want is government that is supportive of economic growth, a leaner and more efficient government, and social and cultural tolerance.

"There has been a tendency by the left to use government to manage the economy, and for the right to use government to manage social life. But there's no reason economic growth and tolerance cannot be compatible."

Isn't that Libertarian talk?

"Libertarians are strong on markets and tolerance," said Ross, "but they have no sense of community to create a safety net. It (Libertarian ideology) doesn't reflect that we're interdependent."

Ross has come a long way since the 1970s, when he led the Michigan Consumers Lobby effort to remove the sales tax on food and drugs. He served a term in the Michigan Senate and worked in both the Commerce and Labor departments in Gov. James Blanchard's terms (1983-90).

As rumored, he's pondering a run for governor in 1998.

"I'm connected to a think tank called the Progressive Foundation. And I'm teaching in the school of public policy at the University of Michigan.

"Over the next two months, my priorities are 1) the president's reelection, 2) Sen. Carl Levin's reelection and 3) the state House of Representatives.

"I'm seriously thinking about it (governor). I'll make some decisions soon after the election," Ross said.

Union leader: Labor won't desert Clinton

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO — "I don't think labor could be happier," said Paul Policchio, Novi resident, Democratic delegate and executive vice president of the Service Employees International Union.

"The whole platform focuses on working people, the bread-and-butter issues. That's the heart and soul of labor. Jobs. Education. Health care. Streamlining government.

"The Democratic Party (of the '80s) went on a path that diverged from the center. But now (Republican nominee Bob) Dole will be hard-pressed to peel off working class votes as Reagan did. Inflation is so low that unions can negotiate real raises.

Policchio reflected between speeches by national figures at the Michigan delegation's breakfast in the Westin Tuesday. Consumers Power Co. sponsored the repast of scrambled eggs, bacon, hash browns, cereal and fruit.

"Labor unions don't even have a whip structure in place," he said, referring to a network that passes The Word to the rank and file.

"[illegible] half the delegates here (Michigan) have connections to unions _ either members or spouses."

Many Michiganians don't spend the day with the state delegation, as Republicans do. Democrats identify with interest groups like labor, women, educators, ethnic groups, education and so on.

"We have our own union caucus at the Hyatt. Now we're linking to individual unions. We heard (Labor Secretary Robert) Reich the other day on issues relating to working people."

Policchio serves the Midwest branch of one of the least known unions of both public and private employees. Say "union" and most people picture the older industrial unions like auto, steel, mine and rubber workers.

"We're diverse. We have health care and nursing home workers, building service, state employees, Wayne County deputies, Corrections Department officers. We have scientists and physicists as well as janitors. It's not a monolithic movement."

SEIU has 35,000 members in Michigan and a total of 1.1 mil[illegible] making it No. 3 in the nation.

Policchio sees another reason labor won't desert Clinton, despite low unemployment and inflation statistics.

"Working people _ even those with jobs _ have a great deal of insecurity. They want to know, 'Is there a safety net if the employer decides to eliminate by job?'

"We had (proposed) a significant improvement in health care. The medical lobby stopped that. Clinton did the best he could."

Fall festival

It's a celebration of community

September starts in a couple of days, and in Plymouth that means the annual Fall Festival is just a week away.

The 41st annual event kicks off on Friday, Sept. 6, and runs through Sunday, Sept. 8.

Is there anything new?

Not really. And that's the festival's attraction. It's a tradition, a comforting ritual, a celebration of fall that doesn't need to be reinvented to attract crowds.

The festival reinforces the idea of community, which is a much-battered idea of late. People sleep in one community, work in another and go to yet another for recreation.

The annual Fall Festival gives folks in Plymouth a chance to slowly stroll through the downtown, in and around Kellogg Park, The Gathering and along Main Street.

There they meet folks they know; and may not have seen for a while. That helps to restore the idea of community.

The festival also brings together the service clubs, such as the Rotary, and others who sponsor major fund-raising projects.

The Fall Festival is more than just booths, food and entertainment. It's a ritual that brings people together.

It need not strive to do more.

Labor's legacy still lingers

Labor Day has become the official "end of summer" holiday, a last chance to hit the beach, the park or the back yard barbecue.

The days of the giant labor union parades and stirring speeches about workers' rights are long past. The day's meaning is lost on most Americans, even those who have benefited from the labor movement.

Recent years have been hard on unions. President Ronald Reagan's decertification of the air traffic controllers sent a chill throughout organized labor and emboldened many employers to take a strike with the intention of busting unions. The irony of this is that Reagan was once a union leader as president of the Screen Actors Guild.

In 1945, organized labor accounted for 35.4 percent of the American workforce. As recently as 1980, unions set a high for actual membership with 19,843,000 members, about 21.9 percent of the 1980 workforce. Last year, union members accounted for only 14.9 percent of the workforce and numbered 16,360,000.

As union membership has declined over the last 16 years, so has the real value of wages. But as reported by the U.S. Department of Labor, union wages are considerably higher than non-union wages. In 1995, the median weekly earnings for union members were $602 compared to a median of $447 for non-union workers. The department notes that other factors besides the lack of collective bargaining account for this discrepancy, but unions do provide a leverage that non-union workers don't have.

It is often said that unions have created their own problems. Many unions were infiltrated by or made deals with organized crime. Many unions pushed for excessive wage and benefit increases when companies weren't prosperous enough to afford them. Many union leaders became as fat and happy as the management they golfed with. Many unions took on social issues such as civil rights and government benefits when their more conservative members opposed them.

All of these things are at least partially true.

But organized labor from the days of the conservative Samuel Gompers and the radical Eugene Debs has had the positive effect of lifting most Americans into the middle class and giving each generation the hope that they will prosper better than the generation before. Unions argued that if the creators of wealth were given their fair share, the economy would grow faster and stronger. It was an argument that even Henry Ford could understand when he instituted the $5 a day minimum so his workers could have the opportunity to buy the product they made.

Unions have been in the forefront on such major innovations as social security, health care benefits, shorter working hours, restrictions on child labor, safer working conditions, food and drug inspections, student loans and minimum wage laws. Some unions, notably the United Auto Workers, also took a lead in the civil rights struggle and in fighting to improve the economic status of blacks and women.

Many of those who complain about unions have benefited from the union movement. The wages they receive were won on the picket line, whether directly or because union wages set a new standard that drove up wages in non-union shops. The benefits we now receive as a matter of course from companies and the government were the fruits of long and often bloody battles.

Memories are short. People have little sense of history, where we've come from and how we got here. But the Detroit area has long worn the union label as a sign of pride, in workmanship and in standing up to management for a fair share.

This Labor Day we should take a moment to remember why we have the day off and why we can afford the steak on the grill and the back yard in the suburbs.

"Solidarity Forever" has lost its thunder, but we should never forget the legacy it has left.

Help needed for telethon

I need your help. Some of you may find this hard to believe, but I've been arrested. Well, actually, I will be arrested as part of the annual MDA Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon, Sept. 1 and 2. Much like those villains we write about, I must raise bail to gain my "freedom."

The charges against me are "Having an extremely big heart." Sherry Margolis, honorary district attorney for the MDA Jerry Lewis Labor Day Telethon, has set my bail at $1,000. I need your help to raise the bail which is due Sept. 2.

So please be generous and help me help those less fortunate than ourselves.

I know some of you who are saying to yourself: Anne Sullivan deserves this. Her life has been downhill since she left the Plymouth community newspaper world and headed south. It was only a matter of time before they would eventually catch up with her. While others are probably in total disbelief wondering how someone like Anne Sullivan could be in this predicament.

Note: The Bob Dole style of speaking (writing in my case) in the third person, this should indicate how desperate I am.

You need to know this is true. Yes, she's one of those electronic media people and I'm sure you all know how those electronic media people can be. As print media peers, I'm sure you will be willing to stand up for one of your own, after all, it's a matter of pride for all of us. We don't want to be shown up by some TV media personality.

If you're of the persuasion that you'd like to see me in jail, you can.

My lockup will be televised on TV during the Jerry Lewis telethon in Detroit. The time is not confirmed, but will most likely be in the afternoon on Labor Day. So don't let your desires to see me locked up be an excuse not to contribute.

Friends, your donations toward my bail will not only help set me free, but will also help free many metro Detroit area children and adults with neuromuscular diseases by adding vital funds to the MDA's research efforts.

And, your donation toward my MDA bail is tax-deductible, so we all win.

Thank you for your help and support.

They're not serious

I recently read letters to the editor from Larry and Curly which criticized my "negative campaign" versus their buddy, Moe.

If I didn't know these guys better, I might have thought they were serious. As it is, I can't stop laughing.

I, for one, will sleep better knowing that we need not fear stray dogs, so long as we have these guys protecting our interests.

I suppose "negative campaigning" is in the eye of the beholder.

The intent was to let everyone know The Emperor had no clothes on.

I am doing some research on my family tree and a great-aunt, an Esther McMahon, married Sam Hudson from Michigan. Evidently, there was an article about Sam Hudson's death, in your newspaper, on Wednesday, Sept. 23, 1964.

I would be very grateful if you could assist me, by placing this note in your newspaper, for any relatives of Sam and Esther Hudson to contact me at the above address and//or forwarding any information you may have on this couple.

Thanking you in anticipation.

POINTS OF VIEW

Schools of choice live in a dream world

TIM RICHARD

■ Survey after survey has revealed that the overwhelming bulk of parents are most interested in having their kids attend the neighborhood school.

In the dream world of certain politicians, education is a huge market. Parents want freedom to choose the best schools for their kids. Poor kids, in particular, need this kind of market choice because rich families can pack up and move or send the kids to private schools.

In this dream world, "schools of choice" will wipe out bad schools, the way the car market eliminated DeSoto and LaSalle.

The dream world is inhabited by Gov. John Engler, Sen. Bill Schuette, R-Midland, and a few luminaries on the State Board of Education. Their ideology tells them free markets work, so they believe free markets work.

The facts are far different.

Back in the 1980s when Metropolitan Fund and the late Chuck Muer were pushing school choice, Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich was brought into town to explain his state's system. Perpich revealed that only 1 to 4 percent of parents ever wanted school choice. He thought choice was a good idea, but mathematically not particularly important.

For years, Michigan has had a choice system called property transfers. It is used by families who live on the edge of school district A but would rather be in district B.

These cases go before an administrative law judge in Lansing and then to the State Board of Education. Most transfers involve rural residents; Eaton, Clinton and Livingston counties generate many cases. This company has newspapers in those counties. So when cases arise, I read the judge's report and often the transcripts from cover to cover.

The politicians who live in a dream world don't. If Tim Kelly, Engler's emissary to the State Board, reads them, he fails to tell the boss about it.

In reality, here is why parents exercise choice by seeking property transfers from district A to B:

• Dad and mom work in town B. If Junior gets sick, it's less disruptive to pick him up from B school than to backtrack 20 miles to A school.

• Dad and mom shop and bank in town B.

• Dad and mom go to church in town B, they grew up in town B, and their social contacts are there.

• The grandparents, aunts and relatives all live in town B and are available to take in the kids if the parents have to work overtime.

• Dad died, mom remarried and moved, but the kids want to stay in the school where their friends go. The oldest boy is taking swimming lessons, and the other district doesn't have a pool.

• The family lives in district A, but district B's schools are eight miles closer, and the kids wouldn't have to waste so much time on the bus if the property were in district B.

• The family really wanted to be in district B, and the Realtor told them the house was in B, but they didn't find out until months later the house was really in A.

Very, very rarely does a parent testify that the school program is better in district B. And when mom says so, she usually is referring to a particular teacher who can handle her kid's problem.

That is the real world. Nothing about market forces and competition and all that hogwash.

This is not to suggest parents have poor reasons for requesting "choice" through property transfers. Their reasons are excellent and practical. The administrative law judge and the State Board members who read the transcripts most often grant the transfer.

The point is that the requests have nothing to do with the dream world of market forces.

Survey after survey has revealed that the overwhelming bulk of parents are most interested in having their kids attend the neighborhood school.

If there's a problem with the neighborhood school, they demand the elected school board – not mythical market forces – fix it.

New school challeges

Across the Plymouth-Canton school district, teachers, parents and students are preparing for the upcoming school year. Especially those teachers, parents and students at PCEP.

At the Park, with the approach of the new school year, we are experiencing several different things. We are experiencing growth, not only within ourselves but within the school population; we are experiencing diversity among students and staff; and we are experiencing changes with new students and new teachers.

These experiences are especially present with the incoming freshmen, and the parents of those freshmen, from the middle schools across the district. The unusual experience of moving from a school of 800 people to a park of 4,600 people, the decisions that need to be made regarding friends, classes, etc., which did not have to be made in the middle school, and the responsibilities that are required are new to these freshmen and to their parents.

And with the experience of intermingling with so many people, the question of safety and rules come into play.

So, to start, let me assure the parents of all PCEP students, not just those of the freshmen, that the Park is a very safe place to attend school. This is despite any rumors which some parents may have heard or of any prejudices which may exist about teenagers. This is coming from someone who is attending the Park for his third year.

The reason I say this is suggestions have been made as to such things as metal detectors and a police officer being placed at the park 24 hours a day to help enforce school rules. Those may be needed in other schools, but they are certainly not necessary in PCEP.

In fact, it is my opinion that these "options" would hurt a learning environment in school. Metal detectors would create an unnecessary feeling of insecurity among the students and parents, and a constant police presence is not necessary because we have a security team which does their job and are easy to get along with.

Which brings me to another point that was suggested by an assistant principal in another school district and that is that security does not do their job because 276 calls for service were made last year to the Canton police and fire departments. This is not true. Security does their jobs all too well.

Most of those 276 calls can be easily eliminated as they were for sporting events, medical requests, and traffic violations. These were mostly calls to make sure that enough security and protection was provided to all people.

So I encourage all students who attend PCEP, or any other school across the district, and their parents, to approach this school year with a feeling of safety and confidence as you or your son//daughters are being put in good hands. This especially applies to those who are attending PCEP because the students and staff at the park are like a big family and, with the incoming freshmen, we are willing to accept additions to our family.

Class reunion a time to look back at changes in society

PHIL POWER

I graduated from high school way back in 1956. Our class was small, only 58, and over the years seven have died and another eight have just kind of disappeared. But our 40th class reunion last weekend was well-attended; we had 25 middle-aged classmates Saturday night at dinner, including one who came all the way from Singapore.

The event gave me the chance to test a theory that's occurred to me as I've moved through the years: As people get older, they become more and more like themselves. When kids graduate from high school, for example, who they are can be glimpsed, but when they reach middle age the experiences of the years seem to amplify and sharpen the original tendencies of character.

It's true. Dave, the red haired scrappy ball player in school, had grown a beard and won a wife, but he was even more scrappy and talking up a blue streak. Mike, the tall, gangling brain of the class was still tall and gangling, but now just a bit stooped and focused as a successful professor at the University of North Carolina. Wendy, a glamour girl when we graduated, wore lovely sophisticated clothes that showed off her still-beautiful figure and sunny personality.

My reunion also came a poignant time. My son, Nathan, starts his own high school career next week when he enters ninth grade. As I listened to my classmates reminisce, I was struck at what a different world Nathan will be entering than the one I had known 40 years earlier.

Different and far more dangerous.

Of course, there are still cars driven too fast by teen-agers who still think they are immortal. But even those of us who were sexually active in high school – only a tiny minority ever went beyond petting – never thought about AIDS.

And as for substance abuse, the worst I ever heard about in my class was when some kids bought a bottle of blueberry brandy on our senior trip to New York. Nathan faces an entire pharmacopoeia of addictive and threatening drugs and a youth culture that is starting to reglamorize getting hooked.

Forty years ago, the tolerable bounds of mischief seem laughably mild today. The event recalled with greatest shame over the weekend was electing the ugliest girl in the class to be homecoming queen. Our homeroom teacher, Miss Chipman, put her foot down on that one. Of course, she never found who made paint bombs out of egg shells and threw them on the walls of a rival school.

Today, it seems unsurprising for kids to slash the tire on an entire fleet of school buses or to try to burn down a school building. If an important part of a culture is defined by the limits to shame, we're living in an entirely different world than the one of my youth.

Maybe I lived in a protected world 40 years ago – I grew up in Ann Arbor – but there was very little sense of the racial and ethnic divisions that so slash and crosshatch our society today.

Sure, there were Jewish and Asian and African-American kids in our school, but it wasn't until I went off to college that I was faced with the stereotypes that Jewish people were pushy and Asians were brains and African-Americans couldn't be trusted.

Last week, Nathan, with the casual, stereotyped wisdom of a 14-year-old in today's world, told Kathy and me that someone was a "nice, pushy Jewish lady." Forty years ago, I never would have known or noticed.

And, of course, 40 years ago we had none of the pop culture that so efficiently infests our society today through broad band technology. We had radio and fuzzy black and white television when I graduated; Nathan has VCRs, CD-ROM computer games, MTV, Walkman and Discman and endless TV.

Thinking about the world that my son will be facing next week, I feel a slight chill of worry. Maybe I'm getting old and the days of my youth look innocent and happy when bathed in the bright gauzy moonlight of 40 years. But I'm going to be praying for my son and his safety a lot over the next few years.

THE UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

DEARBORN

Is a Michigan MBA that important?

Should we tell the world how important our MBA program is by changing the University logo? We probably couldn't get away with it, but many graduates (and even more potential employers) think that a Master's Degree in Business Administration from the University of Michigan is among the strongest in the field. Good news for you.

The School of Management now offers two graduate degree programs at the Dearborn campus. There is a dual-degree program leading to both the Master of Business Administration and Master of Science in Engineering—Industrial and Systems Engineering. Then there is the MBA program which is designed as a crossover vehicle for those whose undergraduate degrees are in areas other than business administration.

Of course, with the Dearborn campus, things are even more convenient for many students. Not easier, just more convenient. After all, this is the University of Michigan.

■ 'I don't want to see the Democrats over-confident.'

Robert Ficano,

Ficano in Chicago

Party veteran attends first convention

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

CHICAGO — For 20 years, Bob Ficano has been politicking _ for Schoolcraft College trustee, for state representative, for County Clerk Jim Killeen, for himself as sheriff.

But this is the first time the Livonia Democrat has gone to a national convention. In fact, his being sheriff for 13 years has been an impediment until 1996.

"The Democratic primary was so close to the national convention that to take off a week and a half _ it didn't make much sense," Ficano said. This year the primary was Aug. 6 and the convention began Aug. 25. "It's the first time I've had a chance to run (for a convention slot)."

Actually, Ficano is an alternate. County Executive Ed McNamara _ who used to scoff that the sheriff is younger than his (McNamara's) children _ is a delegate. By Monday evening, however, McNamara had yet to show up at the convention.

Ficano was a tender 32 and a deputy county clerk when, in early 1983, he was appointed sheriff by a panel of county officers headed by his boss, Clerk Jim Killeen. Ficano succeeded William Lucas, the newly-elected county executive who wanted to appoint his own protege as sheriff.

Killeen prevailed. Killeen, in his white-haired 60s, was a fervent believer in promoting young people to responsible offices _ people like San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros (now Clinton's Housing secretary) and Bob Ficano as sheriff.

Time to gather: Wayne County Sheriff and Livonia resident Robert Ficano greets former Dem gubernatorial candidate and former Michigan State University Trsuteee Larry Owen at a convention reception.

"I'm living proof he tried to bring young people into the system. His wife and daughter came to my fundraiser," said Ficano. Killeen died in 1994.

Ficano blended in with the crowd of delegates, alternates and hangers-on as he boarded the shuttle bus to the United Center. He likes it. "It's well-organized. Upbeat. It's the Democrats' to lose this time. And it will be much closer than anybody thinks," he said. "I don't want to see the Democrats over-confident."

Sheriff Ficano credits President Clinton with having "an urban agenda _ put officers on the street. We're working with his drug czar to get some money."

Ficano doesn't know how he was selected to be among five delegates to appear on NBC's cable on-line program. "I'm doing a diary for them. They picked the youngest delegate, which I'm not, and the oldest, which I'm not, and three others," he said.

Ficano's diary observations:

■"Democrats had class in not interfering with the Republican convention. It was low-class for (Republican nominee Bob) Dole to come to the Chicago suburbs. There are certain protocols you go through."

■ He liked speeches to the Michigan delegation by House minority leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri and presidential communications chief George Stephanopoulous on the need for caution about Clinton's reelection chances despite high poll numbers.

"Polling is national," said Ficano, "but the president is running 50 different state elections. It will be difficult in Texas, Alabama and Mississippi."

■Clinton's whistle-stop train trip through West Virginia, Ohio and the Michigan cities of Wyandotte, Royal Oak, Lansing, Battle Creek and Kalamazoo is "a smart move. The Midwest is important to him."

Park program now expands to Sundays

Saturday in the Park has been a big hit with walkers, runners, bicyclists and skaters for the past few years, and now the program is expanding to Sundays.

Now every Sunday through Sept. 29, 6 miles of Hines Drive will be closed to vehicular traffic between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. so that the public can run, walk, cycle or skate safely.

"It's great to see people coming out to enjoy the park," Hurley Coleman, director of Wayne County Parks, said.

"Parents can bring their children with tricycles and bicycles with training wheels on Saturdays and Sundays. It's also a great place for skaters; more and more are coming to Hines Drive since so many communities have passed ordinances against skating in the streets," Coleman said.

Hines Drive will be closed from Ann Arbor Trail to Outer Drive for the Sunday in the Park program. Parking is available at Warrendale (Warren Avenue east of Telegraph); Merriman Hollow (Merriman Road and Hines Drive); and Nankin Mills Picnic Areas (Hines Drive and Ann Arbor Trail).

■ Every Sunday through Sept. 29, 6 miles of Hines Drive will be closed to vehicular traffic between 9 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. so that the public can run, walk, cycle or skate safely.

FAMILY ROOM

KAREN MEIER

Van snafu no problem

Hi, everybody! It's good to be back. And I must say, it was good to be away, too. I had some great fun with my family these past three weeks. We were hoarding fun because those rainy, cold, gray days and school schedules, and breakfast and dinner without the sun are just around the corner.

So we had picnics. We went to a circus. To the zoo. To a lake. We stayed home to pitch a tent in the yard and make S'mores on the grill. We read books on the front porch. We watched a very dumb movie in the family room and ate popcorn. And rode a Ferris wheel. And oldest son Tony and I played four-handed piano songs while crickets outside in the yard sang cricket songs. And we did a bunch of other stuff too.

Now, as my mother would say, "You got it out of your system." But I didn't really. Call me greedy, but I'll never get time with my family "out of my system." What I will do is come back to reality. And I'll come back refreshed and re-energized. Kind of like a battery.

As a matter of fact, just like a battery. Just like the battery in our van that got all drained recently, and that I (and I'm so proud to say this) recharged myself without blowing anyone or anything up.

This happened just the other day. Husband Ron was out of town on business for a few days so I guess you could say I was in "charge."

I suppose a dead battery shouldn't have presented much of a problem, or challenge, or scare, but I once witnessed a car battery explosion during a jump start. The explosion happened to someone very close to me, both in proximity and heart. It was horrible. The noise, the blast, the smell. It was very humbling and scary. And that was 12 years ago. But the memory has given me a rather enormous respect for automotive batteries.

Anyway, when I went outside on this recent night to check on the van windows to be sure they were up before going to bed, my heart sank. The dome light was on inside the van. And it'd been eight hours since anyone had been in there.

I went back inside my husbandless house to get the keys. I whispered incantations, "Please start, oh trusty old van. Please start. I don't know much about getting you to start if you refuse me. So please, just start."

I climbed in behind the steering wheel. I put the key in. And turned it. Vrump. Click. Silence.

All righty then. I'll figure this out. Carmen has to be at gymnastics practice in Westland at 8 a.m. Baby Steven has school up at Five Mile and Haggerty at 9:30 a.m. The vegetable market is six miles from my driveway and dinner tomorrow without vegetables wouldn't be responsible. I'll figure this out. I'll get this van to start. I will.

Tony suggested the battery trickle charger electric gizmo that sits among many other gizmos in the "Don't Touch This Stuff If You Don't Know What You're Doing" place. I gulped. "Should we?" I asked him.

"Well, yeah. I guess. That's what it's for," he offered.

I shrugged.

So at 11 p.m. we did it. We stepped into the Zone and fetched the Gizmo. We'd gone this far, we might as well see it through now.

There were directions in the Gizmo box. Unfortunately, they'd been written by a presumptuous expert who presumed a little too much. Like the gizmo user knowing what an engine block looks like. Is it a block? Does the engine sit on a block? Is the engine shaped like a block? Am I a blockhead? The instructions also presumed I know a carburetor on sight. These things are not obvious, they are not labeled under the hood, or in the owner's manual. I looked. And fuel line? There are tons of lines and tubes and hoses, none of them labeled. And if I'm messing with electricity and battery acid and positive charges and negative charges I'm going to need labels.

I was getting late now. My eyes were itchy and blurry. My mind was refusing to process information sensibly. I turned away from the useless vehicle, picked the gizmo up that could save its life, put it safely away, and resigned. For the night. I'd face this in the early morning. After resting. It would all make sense in the morning.

Guess what? It didn't. But in the light of day I remembered, I wasn't a blockhead. I could do this. And sure enough, after one false start (I put the negative clip on a painted part of the frame), I got the trickle gizmo battery charger to perform its three-hour magic. Not in time for me to get Carmen to gymnastics, my friend Nancy got her, but in time for Steven's school and in time for dinner vegetables.

And, I might add, in time to make me proud of my small, yet meaningful, accomplishment.

BIKE RIDE TO BENEFIT TROUBLED MARRIAGES

The Retrouvaille program saved Nick and Virginia O'Shea's marriage. To show his appreciation, Nick O'Shea along with the Rev. Sylvester Taube are riding bikes to Texas to raise funds for the program.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

When Nick and Virginia O'Shea lost their 3-year-old daughter Eileen to leukemia in 1976, they stopped communicating with one another. For 14 years, they stayed together for the sake of their five remaining children until spending a weekend in 1989 at a troubled-marriage program presented by the Rev. Sylvester Taube.

The O'Sheas, members of St. Robert Bellarmine Parish in Redford Township, became such believers in the Retrouvaille experience they began volunteering their time as presenters.

On Sept. 2, Nick O'Shea, 65, and Taube, 58, will leave St. John's Family and Life Center in Plymouth Township on a 1,600-mile bike trip to Fort Worth, Texas, to raise funds for Retrouvaille. Virginia will follow in a van with water and fruit to prevent their legs from cramping. The trio will arrive in time for the national Retrouvaille conference in October.

O'Shea and Taube rode 227 miles of the route in August of 1995 in 94 degree heat and high humidity. It was so hot Virginia had to buy head bands in between rest stops.

"We've been preparing by biking and walking about 50 miles a day," said Taube, assistant director of the Archdiocese of Detroit's office for family and youth.

The O'Sheas, who've been married 39 years, and Taube are asking people to donate one penny a mile. Although Catholic in origin and orientation, the weekend experience followed by six meetings is open to married couples regardless of religious background. Funds from the bike trip will go toward scholarships for those unable to afford the $75 registration fee and $350 cost due at the end of the weekend.

"No one's ever turned away because of money. Sometimes couples are proud. They're embarrassed. That's why we're trying to establish a scholarship fund," Virginia O'Shea said.

The trio has already raised $5,000 from Chrysler-UAW Local 412, the Knights of Columbus Council, and St. Columban in Birmingham. The use of the van was donated by Sherry Crepeau of Dearborn Heights, saving the effort hundreds of dollars.

Retrouvaille is a worldwide program. After attending the national conference in Texas, the O'Sheas and Taube will travel to Ireland, Nick's birthplace, to train others in helping troubled marriages the Retrouvaille way.

Founded in Quebec in 1977, the program was presented to French-speaking couples as the "Look Again." Translated into English by a Retrouvaille community in Toronto, the program began spreading throughout Canada and the United States in 1982. By this time, it became even more effective after the Toronto community strengthened the content and developed post-weekend meetings. In 1991, the name was changed to Retrouvaille, a French word meaning rediscovery.

Locally, couples participate in programs held six times a year at hotels. Each couple has their own room. They're not asked to share their stories. Instead, peers share theirs. The 2 1/2-day program is presented by a team of married couples and a priest. Each couple is assigned a number to maintain their anonymity.

"We're not preaching to them. We're telling them our story. What we do is teach them how to share feelings and listen to one another. Because this is a protected environment, they're able to concentrate on just that and realize there's something worth salvaging," said Nick O'Shea, a Chrysler retiree.

"The only thing they have to share is with their spouse," Taube said. "For me, it's extremely rewarding when you see the transformation. I'm convinced couples choose the right people to marry. I'm just as convinced too many get divorced so easy. Love takes commitment and work."

A follow-up study done two years after completing the program shows more than 80 percent of couples remain together or have reunited after divorce.

Mike and Sue Williams of Waterford went through the Retrouvaille program in October of 1995. Married for four years, they were having communication problems.

"Retrouvaille gave us the tools to focus on feelings instead of thoughts and opinions, and the ability of communicating those to our spouse. What we learned there continues to help the healing and growth of our marriage everyday," said Sue Williams, 48.

Mike Williams said in addition to that, "We learned love is a decision. Every morning now we tell each other, I made a decision to love you today."

Zonta Club fashion show full of flair

BY CHRISTINA FUOCO
STAFF WRITER

Kathleen Diggs describes the Zonta Club of Northwest Wayne County Area's fashion show on Wednesday, Sept. 18, as a working woman-friendly event.

"We've had other fashion shows since the club started in 1979, but this is the second year we've done it in this manner, for the working woman," said Diggs, a Plymouth resident and Zonta Club treasurer.

"They can come on their way home, have dessert and mingle with some other interesting people, view some fashions, do some shopping and head home."

Held at the Parisian store at Laurel Park in Livonia, "Fashion Flair II" begins at 6:30 p.m. with doors opening at 6:15 p.m. Tickets are $20 and include desserts from Confectionately Yours, and flavored coffees.

"Fashion Flair II" is a benefit for the Women's Resource Center of Schoolcraft College in Livonia. Zonta Club of Northwest Wayne County Area hopes to raise more than $2,500 for WRC scholarships.

"It's a cooperative project between the volunteers at the Women's Resource Center and our Zonta Club with all the profits coming back here for scholarships for women, books or tuition or child care," said Sylvia Vukmirovich, chairwoman of the fashion show, and a counselor at Schoolcraft College.

Information about the event is available 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Schoolcraft College's Women's Resource Center at (313) 462-4443.

The ticket price is, in effect, refundable. Each ticketholder who spends $150 or more that day or the two days immediately following the event will receive $20 off her bill.

The show, Vukmirovich explained, will feature fall clothing and coats for women of all sizes. A representative from HCL bags will also be there to raffle off a bag. Other prizes include a $25 gift certificate for Parisian.

Diggs said she expects a good crowd after the positive response they received at last year's event.

"Everybody seemed to respond very positively last year. Parisian had fresh people come in for the event so we had a good assortment of service people."

Zonta International is a worldwide service organization for women in business and the professions. Currently, there are more than 33,000 women in the world who are paid members and work toward the international goal of improving the status of women.

The Zonta Club of Northwest Wayne County Area meets on the fourth Monday of each month. Anyone interested in club activities should call Evelyn Munday at (810) 476-1980.

Recommendations aim to protect kids

A 16-member commissioned, chaired by Lt. Gov. Connie Binsfield, has come up with a series of recommendations to improve the protection of children and strengthen families.

Commissioned by Gov. John Engler in 1995, the commission recommendations include the early identification of families at risk and provide them with prevention/intervention services.

"All children deserve to grow up safe from harm," said Engler in releasing the report. "Most do. But for some children, help still comes too late – after abuse or neglect has occurred. The recommendations offer us an opportunity to build on Michigan's strong reputation as a leader in child welfare by improving the lives of our most vulnerable children."

Other recommendations cited in the report are:

- Expansion of the Maternal and Infant Support Services program which provides home visits to at-risk mothers and babies.
- Smaller caseloads, more training and automation improvements for case workers.
- Changes in state and federal law to loosen confidentiality laws.
- Explore the appropriateness of "Kinship Care" as a first choice to provide protection to abused children.
- Swifter termination of parental rights in cases of severe physical or sexual abuse or when a sibling is killed.
- Use of Children's Advocacy Offices to ensure strong legal advocacy for children.
- Issuance of a "report card" to measure the performance of achieving permanency for children by the courts, agencies and local Family Independence Agencies.
- A "medical passport" which will follow every child in foster care to provide foster parents, case workers and others with a detailed medical history and other critical information.

"When I was honored with the opportunity to serve as lieutenant governor, I did so with the goal of dedicating myself to the most vulnerable in our society – children," Binsfield said.

"At times this quest has been rewarding, at other times quite painful. There are no words to explain the reality of knowing that every day children in our society are beaten, neglected and sexually abused at the hands of those they trust."

Polish translators needed

They need help when their child goes to school, or there is a doctor's appointment, or to explain the significance of holiday customs.

"They" are couples who have adopted infants and toddlers from Poland.

The problem: the parents speak English and no Polish; the children speak Polish and no English.

The solution: "We are looking for individuals who would be available for support for these families," said Denise Weiss, adoption director at Orchards Children's Services in Southfield.

The agency, a full-service adoption resource center, is compiling a list of people who are proficient in Polish and make it available to families to call upon when a need arises.'

Individuals who want to volunteer or want more information should call (810) 433-8653 and for either Weiss or Lisa Presley.

Within the past year, Orchards Children's Services has helped five families in the metro Detroit area bring back children from Poland.

Writer has insight into other people's thoughts

GRAPHOLOGY PROFILES

LORENE GREEN

Dear Lorene, I am 41 years old and a single mother. I live in Mississauga, Ontario, with my 16-year-old son. My sole hobby is reading but I could pass the time watching funny shows on TV and in the movies.

I'm working as a part-time administrative assistant in one of the co-op housing in metro Toronto. I was visiting some friends in Livonia when I came across your column. I would love to have my handwriting analyzed and I thank you in advance, Mrs. Green, for your analysis.

M.Z. – Canada

Today's writing that eliminates loop formations and also incorporates printed forms in the body of the writing, tells us the writer adheres to a philosophy that is rational, pragmatic and get-to-the-point. She appreciates brain-storming sessions and think-tank enclaves, but only if they produce workable solutions, not wild speculation and fanciful theories. She has pared down both her writing and her thinking to the essentials. Accuracy and precision are the writer's forte. Habitually she places her emphasis on details and rarely overlooks little things. She is also thorough. Trivial things may cause her to become unsettled.

Her memory is retentive. She tends to check and double check to be certain everything has been handled to her standards. Intuition is pervasive in this handwriting. She has quick flashes of intelligence that are more of a general impression than she would have if she actually thought about something for the same length of time. Her hunches are often more right than wrong. She can rely on her insight because she knows from experience that it is reliable. In addition she has insight into other people's thoughts and feelings.

She is loyal to family and friends. Once an attitude is fixed it is difficult for anyone to change her mind. Loyalty serves to strengthen her purpose. Once committed, she goes all the way. She is true to those she cares for and will not let them down. Any shrinking of responsibility may cause pangs of blame or guilt. On the other hand, she expects the same unquestioning loyalty that she gives in both personal and work relationships. The writer's approach in both speech and action is direct. She seeks efficiency and lack of waste. She is a practical person with a discerning mind and a matter-of-fact attitude. She sets realistic goals.

Her astute mind can quickly penetrate the smokescreen and get right to the point. She concentrates on the essentials and can tell the important from that which is not.

In both speaking and writing, she is concise. She uses as few words as possible and makes every work count. Her succinct style helps to move things right along.

Clarity is her main concern. She wants facts and information without embellishments. Lengthy explanations are not necessary. If she has a task to do she takes direct action. She is a speedy worker with many short cuts. She can also simplify problems. The writer is orderly and organized. Efficiency has tremendous appeal to her. She has little patience with schedules that lack efficacy. Once she makes plans she carries them out methodically.

The writer wants to be in control of her life and be accepted by others. She may work better by herself than as a team player. With all these positive traits fulfillment seems to be eluding her.

If you would like your handwriting analyzed in this newspaper, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, at 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. Please write a few paragraphs about yourself, using a full sheet of white, unlined paper and writing in the first person singular. Age, handedness and signature are all helpful. Due to the volume of mail, personal replies are not possible. However, objective feedback is welcome.

Moderation Management helps problem drinkers

A national support network for people beginning to abuse alcohol, called Moderation Management (MM), has started a new chapter in the Detroit area.

Labeled as a revolutionary and needed early recovery option by a growing number of experts in the alcohol abuse field, Moderation Management is the brainchild of Audrey Kishline of Ann Arbor.

She started MM two years ago with a handful of people. There are now 60 chapters in 38 states, with the latest chapter starting in Farmington Hills.

A homemaker, mother of two young children and problem drinker, she sought help from a treatment center 10 years ago when she began to drink at harmful levels on a daily basis. As a woman with already low self-esteem, she says her treatment experience was humiliating and harmful, and resulted in an even more destructive drinking pattern: abstinence then binge drinking.

Four years ago, after discovering that she was misdiagnosed as an alcoholic, and that moderation programs were common in other countries, she chose to moderate her own drinking. Frustrated that there were no self-help groups available for people who want ongoing support to reduce their drinking and want to find moderation and balance in all areas of their lives, she founded her own group.

MM's key concept is that many beginning problem drinkers can reduce alcohol consumption and avoid developing alcoholism and other health problems. That flies in the face of traditional therapies for alcohol-related problems which treat all alcohol abusers as alcoholics regardless of the level of problems experienced and are based on total abstinence from alcohol.

Kishline argues that there is a distinction between an early problem drinker who has experienced mild to moderate problems from over drinking and an alcoholic, who has become physically dependent on alcohol after long-term and heavy alcohol consumption.

Unlike Canada or the United Kingdom, there are very few professional programs in the United States designed specifically for the early problem drinker. One such program, DrinkWise, is available at the University of Michigan Medical Center at Ann Arbor and at several Oakwood Hospital and clinic locations. The Ann Arbor location reports that 70 percent of its participants have dropped their consumption from 21 drinks to less than seven drinks per week.

Professionals on MM's advisory board cite studies showing that moderation or a reduced drinking goal is a reasonable and maintainable recovery goal for many people who address a drinking problem at a very early stage. They believe that problem drinkers should be given the choice and support to attain either moderation or abstinence, Kishline said.

"There is agreement that total abstinence is the only choice for those who have reached severe stages of alcohol dependency," Kishline said. "Problem drinkers who are not successful with moderation in MM are encouraged to go on to an abstinence-based program."

People who come to MM meetings are provided with information about alcohol and moderate drinking limits, behavior modification techniques, support from other members, and are encouraged to take small steps toward other positive lifestyle changes, such as diet, exercise and reducing stress.

One of the most important strengths of the program, according to Kishline, is that 30 percent of MM members go on to abstinence-based programs such as AA, Women for Sobriety, or SMART Recovery. She has received supportive letters and calls from members of AA with long-term sobriety who believe that those who have come to AA by way of MM are more serious about the necessity of remaining sober, although many people in the treatment industry appear to be outraged by MM precepts, Kishline said.

The Farmington MM group meets 7-8 p.m. every Thursday in the Marge Brown Room of the Universalist Unitarian Church, 25301 Halsted, between Grand River and 11 Mile Road. For more information, call Moderation Management at (313) 677-6007.

Grief series set for kids

Community Hospice Services (CHS) is offering its six-week "Connections" Children's Grief Series from Tuesday, Sept. 23-Tuesday, Oct. 29. The series, which encourages participation from parents and other caregivers, will begin at 6 p.m. with a potluck dinner, followed by group sessions at 7 p.m.

Topics such as reactions and feelings associated with loss, defenses and protecting feelings, support systems, coping and adjusting will be covered. The series concludes with a memorial service to help the children understand that their loved ones will never be forgotten, and that eventually it will be easier to remember them with less pain.

The program is offered free of charge, on a first-come, first-served basis. For more information or to register, call (313) 522-4244.

Youth centers receive national accreditation

Youth Living Centers, a private, non-profit human service agency in western Wayne County, recently received national accreditation by the Council on Accreditation of Services for Families and Children.

"Accreditation is an important step for our agency. It signifies a high standard of accomplishment and service for which we are proud to be recognized," said Dr. Ouida Cash, YLC executive director of Youth Living Centers.

Established in 1975, YLC offers a broad range of services to abused, neglected, homeless and at-risk children and families in need throughout southeastern Michigan.

From a single program, the Counterpoint Runaway Shelter and Crisis Center, YLC has grown to include 12 programs, serving thousands of people each year.

"The accreditation process rigorously examines an agency practices with regard to such issues as personnel qualifications, ethical standards, financial management and quality of services," said David Shover, COA executive director.

"Only those agencies that meet the highest national standards are approved."

"The process of accreditation is instrumental in examining our programs from a perspective other than our own," Cash added. "With the standards of national accreditation in place, we can continue to improve our existing programs and work to make our future programs even better.

■ 'Accreditation is an important step for our agency. It signifies a high standard of accomplishment and service for which we are proud to be recognized.'

Dr. Ouida Cash,
YLC executive director of Youth Living Centers

The COA is a national accrediting body founded in 1977 to establish an independent, objective process of agency review in the field of mental health and human services. More than 620 private and public agencies in the United States and Canada are accredited by the council. In Michigan, more than 70 organizations have received accreditation through Council review.

Finnerty feted

Bryan Finnerty, starting goalkeeper for the Detroit Rockers for the last six years, was stopping something different Monday.

Honors -- from the main man himself.

Finnerty's achievements as community relations director for the Rockers includes giving motivational speeches at local schools, making guest appearances and organizing the Rockers summer soccer camps. He also has been an active DARE committee chairperson for the past four years.

Those accomplishments by the man named the director of coaching for the city of Canton earlier this year earned Finnerty special recognition from President Bill Clinton, who honored him in Royal Oak on his Whistle Stop train tour Tuesday, en route to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago.

Late free throws lift Chiefs

■ There's no doubting it — the season is underway. When teams like Canton and Borgess mix it up on opening night, it's time to be ready.

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK
STAFF WRITER

To be the best you have to play the best.

It's a philosophy both Bob Blohm at Plymouth Canton and Dave Mann at Redford Bishop Borgess subscribe to, which is why their respective teams played Tuesday night to open their 1996 girls high school basketball seasons.

Canton won, 30-28, and no, the game wasn't stopped at halftime. The score just looked that way.

"It was a great first game," Blohm said after his Western Lakes Activities Association perennial power got a tie-breaking free throw from Melissa Marzolf with 22 seconds to play plus another from Kristi Fiorenzi with nine seconds left.

"Both teams played their hearts out," Blohm said. "Dave has lost a lot of quality kids from a team that won two straight Class C championships and was runnerup last year.

"But I think by the time the end of the year rolls around he'll have a pretty good team."

"I was happy," Mann said, "because a lot of inexperienced kids got a lot of experience. We're trying to take the long view of the season.

"We've got a less experienced team than we've had recently. We've got to play these kids. They'll be good at the end of the year."

The game was ragged, as most openers are. And the Bishop Borgess gym was hot enough to melt cheese sandwiches.

Canton is short, but strong

STAFF WRITER

If this preview was similar to the Plymouth Canton girls basketball team it would be, if you can stand the pun, a little short.

That's short as in height, not short as in talent.

For the Chiefs are, once again, long enough in talent to forecast another successful season for Coach Bob Blohm's team. Even if they don't have anybody at 5-foot-10 or above.

"We've got a pretty talented group," Blohm said, "with a lot of skills. But we don't have a lot of size.

"We have kids who have been at the varsity level for three and four years, so that's good news. I was talking to (Kristi) Fiorenzi the other day -- this will be her fourth year at the varsity level and her fourth year as a starter -- and I asked her, 'Are you ever going to

Shocking start

CC surprises both Salem and Canton

SOCCER

So lesson No. 1: Don't try scripting a soccer season.

The last two Class A state champions were competing at the C.E.P. Gary Balconi Tournament last Saturday, and the same team beat them both.

No, it wasn't a very good start to the season for either Plymouth Salem -- last year's state champ -- or Plymouth Canton -- the 1994 titlist. Both were upended (upset, really) by Redford//Detroit Catholic Central.

Canton lost 3-2 to CC in the semifinals, then ended up tying Portage Central 2-2 in the consolation final. Salem beat Portage Central 4-1 in the other semifinal, a rematch of last year's Class A final, but the Rocks surrendered two second-half goals and were beaten by the Shamrocks in the title match, 2-1.

"CC played excellent, played outstanding," said first-year Salem coach Ed McCarthy. "They earned the victory 100 percent. They completely shut us down in the second half.

"We didn't play nearly as well as we needed to to win."

Mike Martin scored the tying goal about 10 minutes into the second half after a corner kick by Tony Macoulis. A Salem player got his head on Macoulis' corner, but Kevin Graff intercepted and slid it to Martin, who scored from 18 yards out.

Martin assisted on CC's game-winner, which came from a persistent Larry Schmid with about 17 minutes left. Salem keeper Andres Lopez stopped a shot by Martin and made a rebound save on a shot by Schmid.

But the ball came free again and Schmid pulled himself off the ground in time to tip it in for a 2-1 lead.

CC keeper Matt Kessler kept the Rocks off the scoreboard the rest of the way to preserve the win.

"This was great, unbelievable, the biggest win CC soccer has had in three, four years," said Shamrock coach Dana Orsucci. "It was a great, great start. There wasn't one player who stood out. They walked off the field dead, left everything on the field. I'm so proud of them."

Salem's win over Portage Central did not come as easily as the 4-1 final might indicate. The

Salem still has look of a champ

Labor Day's still four days off, but Plymouth Salem's golf team seems in mid-season shape.

The Rocks opened their season Aug. 16 at the Traverse City Open, and have since played in four other tournaments. The result: A team that should be fit enough to pursue another Western Lakes Activities Association championship.

Salem shared the title last year with Livonia Churchill, beating the Chargers in their dual meet last year -- the Rocks were 11-0 in WLAA duals, 14-0 overall -- but finishing second to them in the conference tournament. They continued their rivalry into the state regional tournament, with Churchill finishing second and Salem third. Both advanced to the state tournament, but failed to reach the final round.

Salem coach Rick Wilson must replace two stalwarts from that team -- Mike Hjelmstad and Ryan Andrzejewski -- but the experience he has

Youth could help Canton's reversal

BY C.J. RISAK

There's something Plymouth Canton golf coach Tom Alles is hoping his team can accomplish this season -- and the earlier the better.

It's a simple lesson, really. All he wants to see is an ability to learn.

"I think we could get a lot better as the season goes along," Alles said. Then he emphasized that thought: "I'm looking for us to progress as the season goes on."

Alles makes no attempt to hide his disappointment in last year's team, which was 3-8 in Western Lakes Activities Association dual meets and placed 10th out of 12 teams at the WLAA Tournament.

He's convinced there will be no repeat. The basis for his confidence is youth -- three freshmen whom he believes will make major contributions.

"I'm looking for all three to contribute to our varsity heavily," Alles said. "They're all very

But the caliber of the competition unquestionably helped both squads. It for sure identified team weaknesses.

Canton played terrific girl-to-girl defense, neutralized its smaller size by boxing out well and adjusted well for an opener.

"Your execution early in the season ... it's still a learning time," Blohm said.

Borgess had trouble getting the ball inside to Aiysha Smith, who scored 17 points, and Candice Finley, who had eight. Sharron Gray had a trey for the Spartans' other points.

"We have big trouble," Mann said. "The strength of our team is going to be our two big kids."

The Spartans played without junior guard Christina Anderson.

"She'll be back," Mann said. "As soon as she completes her to-do list. The list her teammates and coaches made up for her to account for some missed practices."

Nkechi Okwumabua led Canton with 10 points despite picking up three fouls in the first half and drawing her fourth eight seconds into the second half.

Marzolf had nine points, Fiorenzi seven while Kristin Lukasik and Tiffany Williams added two apiece.

The Spartans came out in a zone and the Chiefs were never able to hit an outside shot to break it up. They also had trouble at the free throw line, perhaps due to the heat, making only 6-of-11 opportunities. But Borgess sank just 3-of-8 free throws.

"We have to be able to attack a zone a lot better," said Blohm, whose team did show flashes of ability to get into it through passing."

Canton broke out to a 6-3 lead with 4:20 left in the opening quarter on consecutive inside hoops by Okwumabua. It was 10-3 at quarter's end.

Okwumabua converted a three-point play with 6:34 left in the second quarter to stretch the lead to 12-3 but Smith then took over, scoring 11 points as the Spartans rattled off 16 unanswered points to lead, 19-15, at halftime.

The only reason the Chiefs got to 15 was due to a Marzolf steal and basket with 12 seconds left.

Fiorenzi took over the guarding of Smith after Okwumabua got into foul trouble and really put the clamps on in the second half. She fronted the bigger player and got help when the 6-foot-1 Smith was able to get the ball.

Smith had five points in the second half, all in the final period as she attempted to take over the game for Bishop Borgess, a tactic Mann may find himself turning to if his guards are unable to get his key player the ball.

Canton chipped away at a 23-15 Borgess lead, reducing it two two points by the end of the third period.

Okwumabua got a low-post bucket with 3:22 left to tie the score, 25-25. Fouled, she converted the free throw to give the Chiefs the lead.

The Spartans retied at 28 on Smith's trey from the top of the key with 30 seconds left. Marzolf then broke the tie with her free throw as the Chiefs had been using a delay offense since about two minutes were left.

After Marzolf's free throw, Canton put pressure on the inbounds attempt. Borgess got the ball in but Lukasik deflected a pass into Okwumabua's hands. She passed it to Fiorenzi, who was fouled and made her second free throw.

Blohm did an excellent job of taking Okwumabua out defensively whenever he could during the second half, then subbing her back in on offense.

It was a good opener in terms of what it did for both teams. Even if they both made more turnovers than Sara Lee.

Salem 52, A.A. Pioneer 47: A second half defensive surge was the difference for Plymouth Salem in its season-opener Tuesday against visiting Ann Arbor Pioneer.

The Rocks trailed 31-26 at the half, surrendering 19 first-quarter points, but survived with a defensive switch covering the last two quarters.

"Our defense got better in the second half," said Salem coach Fred Thomann. "We played a half-court trap and that gave them some trouble."

So did the offensive punch supplied by Amanda Abraham and Andrea Pruett. The game was tied at 19-all after one quarter; Pioneer's five-point lead at the half was negated by Salem's 17-8 burst in the third quarter, sparked by Abraham and Pruett.

Still, it wasn't until midway through the fourth quarter that Salem took the lead for good. Abraham supplied the key, three-point basket, turning a one-point deficit into a two-point lead. The 6-foot-1 junior guard finished with 18 points, five steals, four assists and three rebounds.

Pruett, a 6-1 sophomore, added 16 points and four boards. The Rocks also got six points and six rebounds from Laurel Weinman; six points, four boards and four assists from Angie Sillmon; and three points, seven rebounds and four blocks from Merritt Walker.

The Pioneers were paced by Alison Fileccia's 12 points and Ryan Johnson's 11.

graduate?"

"We've got a lot of questions we have to answer for ourselves. Skillwise, we're good. But our competition is pretty good. The key is going to be how well we defend and rebound.

"A team is going to get a shot off. But if they get two, three or four shots, then that becomes a problem. Then you're looking at fouls and easier shots.

"So that's our big challenge -- playing great team defense and rebounding the ball. That will be their challenge as a team."

Other key returnees for Canton include Ncechi Okwumabua, Mary Anderson, Melissa Marzolf, Kristin Lukasik and Tiffany Williams.

One of the problems the Chiefs face is replacing center Sarah Warnke and forward Becky Vachow. Warnke got a basketball scholarship to Wayne State while Vachow is getting aid to go to Henry Ford Community College.

"That's a lot of experience," Blohm said. "They were great leaders for us. And they both played on a state championship soccer team. They knew a lot about competing and working hard.

"Warnke gave us inside scoring and Vachow outside. So we had a balanced offense. Plus they were both good defenders and outstanding rebounders. We're going to miss the rebounding part of it, no question. And that's 25 points per game gone, so that's pretty big."

Fortunately, the Chiefs have seniors to lead them -- tri-captains Fiorenzi, Anderson and Williams.

The 5-foot-9 Fiorenzi has progressed from an inside to an outside player and Blohm notes "it's been a nice process for her." She'll swing from down low defensively to guard/forward on offense.

The 5-9 Williams is "a little like Fiorenzi. She'll end up defending people in the post but won't play there offensively. She's done a great job for us."

Anderson, at 5-4 a perimeter point guard type of player, "was a great defender last year. We hope that will continue for us.

"She'll be putting the ball in play and has made good progress as a player. She's a really, really hard worker.

"If she can improve her perimeter 15- to 17-foot shot, it will really help because it will give us better balance offensively. We're looking for that from her."

Playing in Warnke's center spot will be junior Okwumabua, who may be only 5-9 but who is an exceptional athlete with the strength of a pentathlete.

"She can play high or low," Blohm said. "She can run the court, has great hands and has really improved a lot since last year.

"She'll be able to give us a threat in the low post, make a team defend us down there."

Junior Marzolf gives the Chiefs versatility in the mold of Fiorenzi and Williams. She's 5-7 but Blohm notes he can "use her offensively anywhere on the court. She's a good shooter, driver, is pretty good around the basket and has good court vision.

"She's really solid at the point. This is her third year starting, too."

Junior Lukasik, 5-6, opened last season as a starter and wound up alternating with Anderson.

"She's a real smart, tough kid and a good perimeter shooter. We hope she'll be able to give us the same kind of perimeter offense as Vachow did last year. She's got a lot of varsity experience, too. We moved her up at the end of her freshman year. She's smart and a good passer."

A trio of juniors have moved up to the varsity level from last season's junior varsity squad: 5-6 Kristin Mayer, 5-6 Cassie Moore and 5-2 Angie Lebbon.

The Chiefs hope to maintain their position as one of the top teams in the Western Lakes Activities Association by doing the things a Blohm-coached team typically does.

Boxing out to neutralize height disadvantages, switching off, denying the ball and playing fundamentally sound basketball are things Canton generally goes well.

"We're going to have to work through the early part of the season," Blohm said, "see where they're at. We'll evaluate and go from there.

"Even though you have kids coming back, things still change. They'll be looking to develop their own identity, their own style. You can play a lot in the offseason but you really have to get into your own season to develop your identity."

Canton plays its second game of the season tonight in the Plymouth Salem gym against always-tough Birmingham Marian while the Chiefs' own floor is being installed.

"It's wood," Blohm said. "It's wonderful. We still, all of us, can't believe it."

The remainder of Canton's non-conference schedule is just as difficult as the first two games.

"It's going to be an interesting season," the coach said. "the competition in our league is going to be as good as it's been recently.

"Fred Thomann has an excellent team at Salem. Walled Lake Central will be tough again and I've seen Farmington Harrison, they're really improved. Northville is solid and Walled Lake Western is improved.

"There's a lot of teams out there that are starting to spend time playing ball. And as a result, they're getting better. It's a lot of fun, a real challenge.

"We're shooting for winning our division. We want to be up there somewhere at the top by the end of the year. By the time you get to the state playoffs, you want to be playing the style of basketball you need to play to be successful against the best teams."

The demanding schedule may be a test of Canton's character. It may also give the Chiefs the confidence and belief in themselves they need to have in order to mature into a title contender.

"You have to be an outstanding defensive team to be competitive," Blohm said. "And you have to rebound. Offensively, it's not that complicated -- pass the ball, catch it."

The Chiefs have their work cut out for them, no doubt about it. But they have some talent, a good work ethic and an excellent coaching staff.

It would be a mistake to sell them short.

BRAD EMONS

The Fourth of July turned out to be more than a fireworks display for Livonia Franklin boys soccer coach Dave Hebestreit.

On the night of the Fourth, Hebestreit had just returned from a banquet with his youth club team and was staying overnight with his father Chuck. (Dave lives in Berkley.)

"There was no prior warning, I really don't remember what actually happened," Hebestreit said. "I was asleep at my dad's place. I was tired and fatigued because I worked all day.

"My dad said I woke up screaming and I told him to take me to St. Mary's right away because my head felt like it was exploding."

Two days later Hebestreit, just 25, was fighting for his life on the operating table at St. Mary's Hospital.

"Apparently the blood vessel itself (to the brain) self-clotted and that saved my life," Hebestreit said. "They were able to drain the blood out. My neurosurgeyn later explained to me that I was only minutes from passing away. And when he told me that, all I could say was 'Wow,' I just didn't realize it was that close."

After seven hours of successful surgery to repair a brain aneurysm, Hebestreit was not out of the woods quite yet.

He suffered another serious complication.

"I have a heart murmur and I developed a bacterial infection," said the Patriot boys and girls coach. "I had to take antibiotics. I had to clear up the infection or I would have had to go in for open heart surgery.

"It was a one in 1,000 thing. My doctor said I was in the top two percent (of averting surgery)."

With a metal clip in place, the tissue around his brain healed, and his blood vessels strengthened, Hebestreit was out of Beaumont Hospital within 27 days, anxiously awaiting his return to practice with the Patriots.

"I was very fortunate, it was a big ordeal," said Hebestreit, who missed only three days of preseason workouts. "I came out of it well and I'm fully healthy. It couldn't have gone any better."

Under doctors orders, Hebestreit has to take things at a slower pace for awhile.

"I'm coaching, but I can't take contact, or run around and demonstrate like I have in the past," he said. "But in a few weeks I'll be back to normal."

Doctors told Hebestreit the chances of something similar occurring are remote.

"Taking Vitamin E helps build walls around the arteries," Hebestreit said. "My doctor says the chance of this happening again are one in a million."

He credits his recovery to staying physically-fit. Before undergoing emergency surgery, Hebestreit was player-coach for the Michigan Madness of the U.S. Inter-Regional Soccer League.

Under his direction this summer, the Madness improved to 10-5 after going 5-13 in their inaugural campaign. Hebestreit, one of the area's up-and-coming coaches, also led Franklin last fall to its first-ever Class A district championship.

Understandably, Hebestreit views life a little differently these days.

"I can't say enough about my doctor (Arturo Paz) and the wonderful staff at St. Mary's," he said. "There were a lot of people fighting for me and pulling for me.

"It's a cliche, but you appreciate sunsets and being out on the lake. You go for a bike ride and just say, 'Wow,'" I was very fortunate. I have a friend in high school his went through the same thing and he's never been the same."

Things may never be the same either for the Franklin coach.

Things will get rougher for PCA

BASKETBALL

Plymouth Christian Academy opened its season Monday with a convincing 44-18 victory over Zoe Christian.

But coach Rod Windle and his Eagles know there won't be many Zoes on their schedule this season.

PCA competes in the tough upper division of the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference with the likes of perennial power Oakland Christian, not to mention traditionally strong teams like Bloomfield Hills Roeper and Southfield Christian.

To make matters worse, the Eagles graduated their top two scorers from last season's 9-13 team -- Lisa Erickson and Kristine Zedan -- who combined for 22 points a game.

On the bright side, Windle returns seven players and has added two from the j.v. squad.

"Last season, we had six new players so it's nice to have a lot of returning players who know the system and know what to expect," said Windle, now in his fourth season at the helm of the girls squad.

That cohesion was evidenced Monday as PCA broke open a 20-7 halftime lead with a 16-4 third-quarter advantage to crush Zoe.

The leaders Monday were probably the same ones who will lead PCA this season. Senior Sarah Sumner, who averaged eight points a game last season, scored 10 points and grabbed 10 rebounds. The 5-foot-10 forward also had eight steals.

Sophomore center Jenny Sutherland (5-11) also netted 10 points. Sophomore guard/forward Carrie McCoy (5-7) and junior guard Sarah Harris (5-3) added eight and six points, respectively.

Windle was pleased with the play of junior point guard Amanda Clark. Play at the point and help for Clark will be a spot Windle will be watching closely.

"We're probably weakest at point guard, but we are strong in the post," Windle said. "We've got some players that are good underneath and take the ball strong to the basket."

Joining Clark and McCoy in the backcourt will be senior guard Rebecca Pugno (5-3). Harris will come off the bench to spell Clark and Pugno, while sophomore Lisa LaRew will come in at the forward spot.

Junior center Heidi Yonkman (5-9) provides depth behind Sutherland at center. Sophomore Elizabeth Pugno will also see time in the post.

"We lost a lot of scoring from last season's team, but the people that have to step up are ready to do it," Windle said. "It's too early to tell if we're better than last season, but I'm excited about the way we executed Monday. There aren't as many weak links on offense as we had last season."

Windle admitted that the youth on the team may hold the Eagles back some, but the learning process will help for the future.

"We're still young and have only two seniors," he said "We're in a tough division and I'm not sure if we're ready to meet the challenge. Maybe next year we'll be there."

Heights bowler collects U.S. title

AL HARRISON

This space is usually reserved for bowlers and events dealing with our own Observerland cities.

Today, this column will cross over slightly into neighboring Dearborn Heights, the hometown of 23-year-old bowler Vernon Peterson.

Last Wednesday, the message came in that he had won the U.S. Amateur Championship held in St. Louis.

That victory makes him the gold medalist on the Team USA, which will represent our nation in international competition.

Vernon won the honor by defeating third seeded Jerry Sikora of Southgate 268-202, then top-seeded Chris Barnes of Wichita, Kan. 242-217.

"Turnin Vernon" joined the adult ranks this year and won the Greater Detroit Bowling Association Masters title in January.

He was named Rookie of the Year in the All-Star Classic leagues.

All this follows a distinguished career in the youth ranks. Peterson was the Michigan Junior Masters Champion two years in a row and was Bowler of the Year once.

He is no stranger to international competition, having represented USA youth bowlers in Australia last summer.

The U.S. Amateur title will keep him busy this year as he will spend about 150 days representing this country in such places as Santiago, Dominican Republic, the African Cup in Johannesburg, South Africa and the AMF Grand Prix, which has not yet selected it's site.

"It's quite exhilarating" said Peterson, after winning the title at Tropicana Lanes in St. Louis, "I can't believe it. I never dreamed I'd be in this position."

He would credit a good measure of his success to his mentor and coach, Aleta Sill, who worked with him and in addition to helping with his mechanics. She must have given him the winning edge that it takes to become a champion.

•In the local spotlight last week was the Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital Senior Open at Century Bowl in Waterford. There were 197 of the nation's finest senior (50 and over) including 27 Michiganians, 19 of whom were from the Detroit area.

Among the area participants were; Jack Treolar of Farmington, Oliver Mabry of West Bloomfield, Mike Samardzija of Farmington Hills, Ruddy Pittaway of Canton, Mort Friedman and Phil Horowitz of West Bloomfield, Ray Randall of Canton, Joe Fitzsimmons of Waterford, Ed Grant of Rochester Hills, Ray Kreuter of Westland, Robert Chuba of Garden City and neighbors Gene Stus and John Zubor from nearby Allen Park.

Stus was the only one of the locals who made the cut for Thursday's match play event, which took place prior to the five-man stepladder finals on Thursday night. The early competition was highlighted by several 300 games including two in the same block by the venerable Dick Weber, along with Canton resident Ray Randall and one from Californian Barry Gurney.

The highest finish among the non-qualifiers was 29th by Buick dealer John Zubor of Allen Park.

The biggest disappointment was the injury to Jack Treolar, who had to pull out after only one game because of back pain. His one game was a nifty 234, and it seemed like the Hall-of-Famer was on his way to bigger and better things at the Pontiac event.

ROUNDUP

PCJBA sign-up

The Plymouth-Canton Junior Basketball Association is conducting registration for the upcoming season for third-through-eighth graders, both boys and girls.

The registrations will be on consecutive Thursdays, Sept. 5 and Sept. 12, from 6:30-8:30 p.m, at East Middle School. All students in the Plymouth-Canton school district and all of Canton Township are eligible.

Cost is $70 for third and fourth graders, $75 for fifth and sixth, and $80 for seventh and eighth. The season is 10 games plus a season-ending tournament; players will keep their jerseys. PCJBA rules state all players play at least part of every game, but not all of any game. Tryouts will be conducted prior to team organization in order to equalize teams.

High school kids interested in a job as a referee, and parents interested in coaching, may register at the same times.

Grades 9-12 will register at a later date.

Rocks led 2-1 at the half, thanks to goals by Brett Konley (from Josh Fair) and Chris Curry.

It stayed close until, 15 minutes into the second half, Salem's Scott Loewe was hauled down in the penalty area. Konley converted the penalty kick to increase the Rocks' lead to 3-1.

With Portage Central pressing for offense, Salem scored again late in the match, Andy Power collecting an unassisted goal.

The Rocks were without starting forward Ryan Konley, who had to sit out both games because he got a red card in last year's state final.

Canton 2, Portage Central 2: The strength for the Chiefs this season was supposed to be defense. Last Saturday, it never showed.

"We've got work to do defensively," said Canton coach Don Smith. "We started that today."

Smith said a few lineup changes were made to speed the improvement. "Defensively, we've got to get together more," he added.

In the 3-2 loss to CC, both teams got two first-half goals. Nick Wright and Kevin Gniewek accounted for the Canton goals, Sean Malone assisting on the first and Ryan Dyer on the second.

The game-winner came from Brian Lindsey with about 15 minutes left to play, and it came on an un-designed play.

Canton keeper Ben Davis booted out a goal kick, but the ball went right to CC's Lindsey, and he sent it right back in, looping his shot over the backpeddaling Davis.

"We learned by it," said Smith, adding, "I hope."

First-year coach Ed McCarthy went with sophomore keeper Brian Wozniak, and his choice seemed a good one -- Wozniak stopped 13 shots in the shutout. The Rocks put eight shots on the Pioneer goal.

But they couldn't put one in in this rematch of last year's state quarterfinal, which the Rocks won 5-1 en route to claiming the state championship.

returning should make that not-too-difficult a prospect.

His two biggest reasons for optimism are seniors Jeff Lear and Brian Fox. "It's their fourth years on the team," noted Wilson, "and they played a lot of summer events.

"They're the key guys, that's why they're our co-captains."

On Monday at the Brighton Invitational, they put their leadership on display. Lear fired a 76, tying sophomore Adam Wilson for team-best honors, and Fox followed with a 78 as the Rocks carded a season-best score of 309 to finish third in a very tough 23-team field at Oak Pointe.

Ryan Deschaw, also a senior, was Salem's fourth scorer with a 79. Junior Mark Runchey was the team's fifth golfer, with an 82.

"I'm very pleased," said Wilson. "That was a good effort. Our scores had been hovering around 320, 330. This was without a doubt (our best effort).

"And it's encouraging because we're going back there for the state regional."

That won't be until Oct. 11 and 12, but Wilson plans to have molded this team into a veteran group by then. The experience is there, for certain: Besides Lear, Fox and Deschaw, others with time on the varsity are Runchey and Pat Belvitch, both juniors; Wilson and Erik Krueger, both sophomores; and Aaron Pawlowski, a senior.

Wilson has utilized his entire team thus far. On Tuesday, Salem edged Plymouth Canton and Ann Arbor Huron, scoring 210 to the Chiefs' 216 and Huron's 222, in a tri-meet at Hilltop.

Fox earned medalist honors with a 39. Lear was next best for Salem with a 41, followed by Deschaw and sophomore Matt Hosch, each with a 43, and Wilson at 44.

At Traverse City Aug. 16, Salem placed ninth out of 22 teams with a 331 total. Team scorers were Fox, 76; Lear and Wilson, each at 83; and Runchey, 89. Fox finished in a four-way tie for sixth individually.

On Aug. 19, the Rocks were among 40 teams to play in the East Lansing Invitational. The reason for the large turnout was easily apparent -- they played at Forest Akers, the location of the state tournament.

Due to construction on part of the course, the teams played just 32 holes, so Wilson scored just the first 18 for Salem. Lear led the Rocks with a 79, followed by Fox, 80; Krueger, 82; and Wilson, 91, for a 332 total.

Last Thursday, the Rocks finished third out of 16 teams at the Eagle Invitational at the Huron Golf Club. Grand Blanc won with a 317; Salem scored a 325, led by Lear (78), Wilson (80), Fox (83) and Krueger (84).

On Friday, the Rocks were seventh among 21 teams at the Pinckney Invitational, held at Rush Lake Hills. Hartland won with a 301; Salem scored 326, led by Lear and Fox, each with a 76. Wilson shot 83 and Belvitch had a 91.

Wilson figures that, in the WLAA's Lakes Division, Livonia Stevenson and Westland John Glenn will be Salem's biggest competitors. The overall picture in the WLAA will feature Churchill, Walled Lake Western, Northville -- and Canton could be a surprise in the Western Division, too.

But Salem should be the power in the league. And the WLAA looks like a pretty potent league, too.

good, very talented, and they've been playing all summer.

"The way they've been playing . . . if I had to put a six-man team out there tomorrow, they would be on it."

The freshmen Alles was lauding are Derek Lineberry, Brendan Wheeler and Matt Rozol. At Tuesday's tri-meet with Plymouth Salem and Ann Arbor Huron at Hilltop, Wheeler shot a 41 and Rozol a 43 -- finishing second and third among the Chiefs -- to help Canton come within six of the defending WLAA co-champions (Salem 210, Canton 216, Huron 222).

"I was very pleased," said Alles. "We're vastly improved. They're all working very hard to get better.

"I think we could surprise some people."

The makings of a strong team are certainly present, and it isn't all dependent upon youth. Leading the three freshmen are senior co-captains Adam Allen and Miles Meibers. Meibers shot 45 on Tuesday; they're two of the four returning letterwinners.

The others are Ben Tucker and Erik Arlen, both juniors. Arlen shot a 40 on Tuesday to lead the Chiefs; the team's fifth scorer was junior Austin Meibers, who carded a 47.

It was Canton's best performance, easily. On Monday at the Brighton Invitational, at Oak Pointe, the Chiefs were tied for 21st (with Dearborn) at 342. Tucker's 80 led them; Lineberry shot 81, Shawn Gallahaire a 90 and Allen a 91. Miles Meibers was next at 92.

If Alles can find the right lineup in the next few weeks, the Chiefs could indeed make some noise in what is shaping up as a rough conference race. For now, defending co-champs Salem and Churchill, with Walled Lake Western, Northville, Westland John Glenn and Livonia Stevenson, all appear to have potential.

"My expectation is to be .500 (in duals), if not better," said Alles. "But again, this conference is very strong."

It may be tough, but Canton's only desire for 1996 is to make it tougher.

'VALLEYE ALERT!

Walleye fishing in the Michigan waters of the Great Lakes has been pretty steady this summer with anglers catching a fair share of tasty "eaters." But if you're after a little more size in your catch consider taking a one-hour drive up highway 401 in Canada and take a fishing trip into the central basin of Lake Erie.

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

"It's a fisherman's paradise. It's a dream come true. I've never seen anything like it." raved Rochester resident Harold Leider, founder of the Fishing Buddys fishing club, after returning from a recent fishing trip out of Erieau, Ontario. "There are so many fish out there and they're all big. Our boat had six people in it and we caught 28 fish. The biggest was just over nine-pounds and the smallest was around three. It's really unbelievable."

Redford's Bob "Hangman" Mitchel has been fishing the central basin for years. He runs a summer series of fishing derbies headquartered out of the Slip-In Lounge in Erieau. He concurs wholeheartedly with Lieder's assessment of the walleye fishing in that area of Lake Erie.

"It's a great fishery out there and its really not that far from home," explained Mitchel. "They have an unlimited food source and it's not over-fished. It's nothing to catch a limit, the question is how big will the fish be."

A firsthand look

Mitchel has been telling me about the great fishing in Erieau for a year now but it always seemed like a long trip. After Leider's story and an invitation from Mitchel, I decided to check it out.

Erieau is located just 67 miles northeast of the Ambassador Bridge on the northern shore of Lake Erie. The trip takes just over an hour from the bridge.

Upon arriving in Erieau on Sunday afternoon and purchasing a Canadian fishing license ($8 American for a daily) we immediately noticed that a brisk wind was quickly gaining velocity. An hour later, the waves had rolled themselves into to four- and five-footers and our afternoon outing was canceled. We were able to check the catches of some of the boats returning to dock from a morning outing, however, and the creels were very impressive.

The boat we were supposed to take out in the afternoon had a crew of five for the morning trip and returned to the dock with 19 walleye and one steelhead. The biggest fish was just over eight pounds. Five others were better than six pounds each and another seven fish were over four pounds each. The rest were between three and four pounds and just one was less then three pounds, or what we call an "eater" here in the states.

Burt Cummings , owner of Custom Tackle, and John Menhart, owner of The Fishin' Hole in Taylor, braved the wind and waves in the morning and managed to bring five walleye to the dock: a six-pounder, two four-pounders and two "eaters." "This is the first time all summer we haven't caught a limit," admitted Menhart.

Unique techniques

Because of limited access, the central basin of Lake Erie isn't fished as hard as the western basin, which is easily accesible from ports in Michigan, Ohio and Ontario. Access is limited to a few marinas in Ontario and a trip to the "hot spots" would be upwards of 50 miles from Ohio.

The secret, according to Mitchel, is to fish deep. Most of the larger fish are caught 40- to 60-feet down.

"It's a unique style for walleye fishing," explained Mitchel. "It's deep-water, power trolling. You're trolling two-and-a-half to five-miles per hour and using downriggers, Dipsy Divers and planer boards in front of spoons and deep-running plugs. The technique seems more suitable for salmon fishing, but produces huge walleye."

The final derby of the season will be held in Erieau on Sept. 14-15. The entry fee is $12 per angler, per day. The derby pays five places for weight each day as well as daily jackpots for the biggest walleye, steelhead and sheephead. Launching facilities and overnight slips are available in Erieau. Call Mitchel daily at (313) 287-4020 to register for the derby or for more information on Erieau walleye fishing.

Mitchel is also available for seminars and guided fishing trips.

Anglers and hunters are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI. 48009. Fax information to (810) 644-1314 or call Bill Parker evenings at (810) 901-2573.

BASKETBALL

A bad way to start

Spartans squander 2nd-half lead, and that leads to an overtime loss in their season opener

BY BRAD EMONS
STAFF WRITER

Livonia Stevenson's girls basketball opener was spoiled Tuesday as Dearborn Fordson's Lady Tractors roared back for 54-47 overtime victory.

The host Spartans led most of the way until Fordson, last year's Mega-Red Division co-champions, put on a late spurt behind the play of sisters Zeinab and Nazek Mroueh.

The 5-foot-10 Zeinab, a bruising three-year starter at center, finished with a game-high 26 points and 18 rebounds. She also made a clutch basket inside with only seven seconds remaining in regulation to knot the count at 41-all.

Then Nazek, who was quiet most of the night, came alive during four-minute extra session by scoring eight of her 10 points, including a long triple with 1:56 left to give the Lady Tractors a five-point cushion.

"I kept telling our girls during the timeouts that we need to get over this hump," Fordson coach Guy Del Guidice said. "We played catch-up the whole game.

"When we went to our full-court man-to-man pressure it turned it around for us and maybe it made them play faster than they like. For the first game we showed a lot of character."

Stevenson, which led by as many as eight points during the third quarter, shot a miserable eight of 40 from the field over the final 20 minutes.

"Part of it was poor shot selection and we weren't crashing the boards like we had earlier in the game," said Stevenson coach Wayne Henry. "We just got soft on the boards. And they (Fordson) were able to get put-backs and free throws."

The Spartans, however, led 40-37 on a basket by Carolyn Courtright with 1:26 to play, but Jessica Smith countered with a give-and-go hoop off a set-play coming out of a timeout with 1:04 to go.

Stevenson's Melissa Backus split a pair of free throws with just under 33 seconds remaining to give her team a two-point advantage.

Fordson then threw the ball away 13 seconds later, but regained possession after the trail official ruled the ball had been deflected.

Mroueh then sent the game into OT with her clutch hoop.

"Zeinab had just two points last year against this team (Stevenson) and wanted to prove something," Del Guidice said. "She hurt her shoulder early diving for a loose ball and most girls would have come out, but not 'Z.' "

Stevenson, with virtually a brand new starting lineup, had a more balanced scoring attack.

Backus, Lindsay Wilhelm and Gina Palmeri each tallied nine, while Jackie McClowry chipped in with eight. Courtright added six.

"Even though we had the lead, we weren't doing anything dominating enough for the other team to roll over and play dead," Henry said. "They were still very much in the game."

The Spartans also could have put it away at the free throw line, but shot only 13 of 29 (44.8 percent). But Fordson was just as inept from the stripe, canning just 11 of 27 (40.7 percent).

"Basically we have five new starters on the floor," Henry said. "I was pleased with the way they played most of the game and I think the people in the stands were surprised with the way they played.

"We did some good things offensively, but when you experience the pressure without the varsity experience, we were forced to make some bad decisions.

"We just have to be patient because of the inexperience factor."

Mroueh scored all 10 of Fordson's points in the opening quarter, but only had a total of 12 during the next three periods. She added four in OT.

"Part of it was fronting her early-on," Henry said. "Palmeri had some deflections, but then they made better lob passes and the weak-side help was not there. The girls guarding her understood who they had to stop, but not the rest of the team."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
PLYMOUTH CHARTER TOWNSHIP
PLANNING COMMISSION

TO AMEND TEXT: AN ORDINANCE TO AMEND PLYMOUTH CHARTER TOWNSHIP ORDINANCE NO. 83 BY ADDING A NEW ARTICLE XV-A, TECHNOLOGY AND RESEARCH DISTRICT TO SAID ORDINANCE, AMENDING ARTICLE XVI SCHEDULE OF REGULATIONS AND ARTICLE II ZONING DISTRICTS, ZONING MAP, USES PERMITTED.

DATE OF HEARING: WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 18, 1996

TIME OF HEARING: 7:30 P.M.

42350 ANN ARBOR ROAD

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the Planning Commission of Plymouth Charter Township proposes on own motion to add Article XV-A Technology and Research District and to amend Article XVI Schedule of Regulations and Article II Zoning Districts, Zoning Map and Uses Permitted, as follows:

A. ARTICLE XV-A, TAR TECHNOLOGY AND RESEARCH DISTRICT is hereby proposed to be added, as follows:

ARTICLE XV-A TECHNOLOGY AND RESEARCH DISTRICT

PURPOSE:
Advances in industry and technology have created uses which are related to industry and office uses, but may not be appropriate or function adequately in a typical industrial or office zoning district. These uses have been identified as "high tech" uses. The purpose of the Technology and Research District (TAR District) is to provide an environment where high tech uses and functions such as engineering, design, research and development, photonics/optics, computer assisted design, robotics research, numerical control equipment (CAD/CAM), prototype development and limited manufacturing, biotechnology lasers, medical research, food and materials testing, telecommunications, and related storage, warehousing and limited assembly operations associated with principal permitted uses can be located.

The TAR District will require a campus-type environment with generous setbacks and landscaping and so situated that uses will be developed without being negatively impacted by elements and conditions such as heavy trucks, which are commonly found in a traditional Industrial District and without negatively impacting uses found in an Office Service District. Such areas are often visible from freeways and high image locations.

SEC. 15.1 - A PRINCIPAL PERMITTED USES:
No building or land shall be used and no building shall be erected except for one or more of the following specified uses, unless otherwise provided in this Ordinance:

1. Laboratories, offices, and other facilities for basic and applied research and experimentation, testing, production design, technology development, consulting, and business development.
2. Business schools and training facilities.
3. Office buildings, providing for uses such as corporate offices in accordance with the purpose of this district, including any of the following occupations: Executive; administrative; professional; accounting; engineering; architecture; drafting; writing; clerical; stenographic; and sales provided that no display shall be visible from the exterior of the building, and that the total area devoted to product display, including both the objects displayed and the floor space set aside for the persons observing the displayed objects, shall not exceed fifteen (15) percent of the usable floor area of the establishment.
4. Data processing and computer centers, including service and maintenance of electronic data processing equipment.
5. Any use charged with the principal function of research in the area of photonics/optics, robotics, and electronic equipment.
6. A high technology service activity which has as its principal function the providing of services including computer, information transfer, communication, distribution, processing, administrative, laboratory, experimental, developmental, technical, or testing services.
7. A high technology industrial activity which has as its principal function limited manufacture for the purpose of one-time prototype production, robotics, biological or pharmaceutical research, or technology oriented or emerging industrial or business activity not involving any heavy manufacturing.
8. Accessory structures and uses customarily incidental to the above permitted uses, excluding outdoor storage. Such uses may include child day care, recreation and fitness facilities, cafeterias, health care services, financial services and similar uses if located wholly within the building of the principal use which it serves (except for outdoor recreation and fitness facilities), conducted primarily for the convenience of the employees of the principal use, and which have no exterior advertising or displays.

SEC 15.2 A: USES SUBJECT TO SPECIAL CONDITIONS:

The following uses shall be permitted subject to the provisions of Section 2.7, Uses Subject to Special Conditions.

1. Limited assembly and machining operations, when adjacent to research and development activities at the same locations, and subject to the following conditions:
   (a) Assembly activities shall be limited to assembly of pre-manfactured finished objects or components, and shall include only small-volume, non-routine assembly of innovative products or equipment.
   (b) Machining shall be permitted on a limited basis and only for research and development activities, repair, demonstration and/or training.
   (c) Assembly operations shall be located within a building so that floor area used for this purpose will at no point be within three hundred (300) feet of residentially zoned land. This requirement may be waived by the Planning Commission, after review and recommendation by the Planning Commission, if it is determined that there are natural features or characteristics of the property or adjacent property that would provide a sufficient natural separation between limited assembly operations in a building and adjacent residentially zoned land.
2. Medical offices, clinics and research facilities, including auxiliary or accessory laboratories. Such uses may include sports medicine, health fitness, physical therapy and similar facilities. Facilities that are principally for the treatment of substance abuse (drug and alcohol) shall not be permitted.
3. Motels and hotels.
4. Publicly owned and operated buildings and facilities, such as fire stations.
5. Outdoor uses such as testing facilities for prototype products.
6. Banks, credit unions and other similar financial institutions, including automatic tellers as a principal or accessory use.
7. Communication facilities, public utility transformer stations, substations and gas regulator stations without service or storage yards shall comply with the requirements of Sec. 22.9 of this Ordinance and shall be subject to the following:
   (a) A front yard setback of not less than fifty (50) feet shall be provided.
   (b) When a transmission or relay tower, etc., is proposed as part of the facility, the tower shall be located so that it does not present a nuisance to abutting residential properties. The tower shall be so located on the subject property that the distance from the base of the tower to all points on each property line shall be not less than one and one-half (1½) times the height of the tower.
8. Retail uses which in the determination of the Planning Commission are incidental and complementary to the principal technology and research uses, including the following:
   (a) Office supply establishments.
   (b) Business services such as printing, copying and mailing.
9. Restaurant or other places serving food and/or beverages when located within a building containing one or more other principal uses except that restaurants with open front windows, drive-ins or drive through service are prohibited.
10. Corporate fitness centers, health spas, racquetball clubs, bowling alleys or similar forms of recreation, except as otherwise provided herein.
11. Child day care centers.
12. Outdoor storage may be permitted as an accessory use subject to the following:
   (a) All open storage shall be completely screened on all sides by an obscuring wall or berm eight (8) feet in height, located a minimum of twenty-five (25) feet from the street setback line when the area abuts a street. An eight (8) foot wide planting strip shall be located on the street side of the wall or berm. When the side and/or rear yard does not abut a street, the wall or berm shall be located on the property line. The combined use of a wall and a berm shall be permitted.
   (b) Stored materials shall not be piled to a height of more than eight (8) feet.
   (c) A roadway shall be provided, graded and maintained from the street to the rear of the property to permit free access to fire trucks at all times.
   (d) Within the intent of this section, the Planning Commission may approve alternatives as it deems necessary to accommodate peculiar circumstances or unforeseen problems and to carry out the spirit and intent of this Ordinance.
13. Any other use of the same nature or class as uses listed in this district as either a Principal Use Permitted or a Use Subject to Special Conditions which the Planning Commission finds not to be inconsistent with the purpose of this Article and which will not impair the present or potential use of adjacent properties. When considering other uses, the Planning Commission will review the nature and function of the use and its proposed location to ensure that said use will not present a potential conflict with principal permitted technology and research uses.

SEC. 15.3-A: USES SPECIFICALLY PROHIBITED
No building or land shall be used and no building shall be erected for any one or more of the following uses:

1. The following uses or similar uses which may create unusual danger for fire, explosion, toxic or noxious matter, radiation or which may cause noxious, offensive, unhealthful or harmful odors, fumes, dust, smoke, light, waste, noise or vibration shall be considered as not meeting the minimum standards of this Ordinance as to performance and potential negative impacts on surrounding properties:
   (a) Processing of corrosive acid, cement, lime, gypsum or plaster.
   (b) Distillation of bone, coal, tar, petroleum refuse, grain or wood.

1. Site Plan and development approval for all uses as specified in Artifle 24 of this Ordinance.
2. Off-street parking for all uses as specified in Article 20 of this Ordinance, except that technology and research uses shall provide one parking space for every 300 square feet of usable floor area, usable floor area being defined as 80 percent of gross square footage.
3. Off-street loading and unloading for all uses as specified in Article 20 of Ordinance. The Planning Commission may modify such requirements, if in its sole determination, the use does not require the number of loading spaces specified in Article 20.
4. Screening and land use buffers for all uses unless otherwise specified shall be in accordance with Article 22 of this Ordinance. All doors designed for vehicles, and loading docks and truck wells shall not be located on the front of the building, and shall be screened from view from any road.

All sidewalks, both exterior and interior, shall conform to the standards as established by the Department of Building and Code Enforcement and Township Engineer.
   (h) Outdoor Lighting. Lighting shall be provided in an amount which shall be sufficient to permit safe movement of vehicles and pedestrians at night. The lighting shall be high-pressure sodium, metal halide, or other type of lighting approved by the Commission which exhibits the same characteristics and qualities of high pressure sodium or metal halide lights. All lighting shall be so located and designed as to reflect light away from adjacent single family residential areas. The type of lighting used on a site (high-pressure sodium, metal halide or approved equivalent) should be consistent throughout the subdivision or overall project.
   (i) Trash Removal: The method of trash removal shall be presented to the Planning Commission for approval. Dumpsters, compactors and recycling containers shall be screened.
   (j) Fencing and Screen Walls: Fences and screen walls shall require review and approval by the Planning Commission as a part of the Site Plan Approval. The following shall govern the eight, location and placement of protective or security fencing:
      (1) Permit Required. In the TAR District it shall be unlawful for any person to build, repair or relocate a protective or security fence without first having secured a fence permit therefore from the Department of Building and Code Enforcement.
      (2) Maximum Height. The maximum height of a protective or security fence shall be six (6) feet.
      (3) Material. Fences will not be constructed of old or used material unless such material shall be reasonably sound in the judgement of the Department of Building and Code Enforcement. Fences shall not be made of or contain barbed wire, electric current or charges of electricity or sharp or pointed projections of any kind; provided if such fence is constructed of pickets, the pickets shall be made of not less than 1 inch by 3 material and shall have an angle at the top of not less than 90 degrees. The fence shall comply with the requirements of the Building Code. Plastic or other type of strips intertwined in cyclone fencing shall be prohibited.
      (4) Placement. Except as part of a special use approval, no fence shall be built closer to the street than the front setback line applicable to the premises pursuant to the Schedule of Regulations (Article 16), provided no fences shall be built closer to the street than the established front building line along side streets or in front of the building closest to the streets on the fenced premise.
   (k) Building Design Standards
   (1) All exterior building facades and any accessory building shall be of the same finish material as the front facade of the main building and all materials used shall be recognized as finished materials. Standard concrete or cinder block shall not be permitted. The exterior finish of the buildings shall be harmonious with the surroundings and in character with the existing manmade or natural environment. Any decorative bands shall be continuous and terminate only at an interior corner of the building.
   (2) Elevators, stairways, tanks, heating and air conditioning equipment, vents, ducts, pipes and other similar apparatus shall be screened from view from off-site by a penthouse or structure equal in height to the height of the equipment being screened, and the outside finished building material of such penthouse or structure shall be the same as, or complimentary to, the finish material on the facade of the building to which is it attached.
   (3) In accordance with the established development pattern, any such building which is located on a site with Beck Road frontage shall be finished in brick.
   (4) Building elevations and landscaping provided on sites which abut a limited access highway shall be of equal importance and present an attractive appearance, comparable to the building front.
   (l) Environmental Features
   (1) The developer shall make every attempt to preserve any natural features on the site which exists prior to development. Existing natural features shall be shown in the site plan.
   (2) If natural features need to be altered or removed, it shall be the responsibility of the developer to provide a written report explaining the rationale for such actions.

Madonna looks strong, if shorthanded

SOCCER

When Pete Alexander took over as coach of the Madonna University men's soccer program three years ago, he looked at the calendar and circled the year 1998.

"That was when we hoped our team would be able to advance to the NAIA finals," Alexander said.

The timeline has changed, however, as Alexander and the Crusaders believe the future is now. After an 8-7 rookie season, and last season's 9-10 mark against a tougher schedule, this may be the year Madonna realizes its goal.

"If we stay healthy, I think we have a good chance to get to the championship," Alexander said.

The Crusaders took a giant leap forward last season by earning the No. 2 ranking in their section and then beating Sue Bennett College (Ky.) in a first-round playoff game at Madonna. A loss in the regionals against Transylvania College (Ky.) ended the season, but not the outlook for the Crusaders.

Madonna lost only two key players from last season's team – goalkeeper Dan McEvilly and forward Nate Stovall.

Stovall, who Alexander considered a potential All-American, will miss his senior season due to a back injury. He also missed last season with a knee injury.

Stovall's loss signifies Alexander's biggest fear -- keeping his team healthy. Currently, the Crusaders have 18 players (three of them goalkeepers).

"Our weakness is our depth," Alexander said, noting that several of his players are already nursing injuries and coming off injury-ridden seasons.

The player to watch on offense will be sophomore Seamus Rustin, who missed his freshman season due to a knee injury. Alexander expects Rustin to score 15 to 20 goals or more.

Senior Jason Stempien, a transfer from Central Michigan University, will join Rustin up front. Sophomore Charlie Bell will also spilt time at forward and midfield.

Rob Vega, a first-team All-Area performer last season at Livonia Franklin, is also fighting for a spot up front.

Three newcomers will solidify midfield including sophomore Ryan Thomason (Plymouth Christian Academy), a transfer from Oakland Community College, and sophomore Ryan Mollien, a transfer from Walsh College of Ohio. Freshman Andy Makins, who played on last season's Class A champion Plymouth Salem squad, will also see plenty of time.

"We had a great recruiting year," Alexander noted. "We are sitting in a great area for talent. Livonia is one of the best areas in the state and beyond that for soccer. We'll have the talent coming through and it's up to us to make Madonna a desirable place to play."

The strength of this season's team, however, is ironically last season's weakness.

"We allowed too many bad goals last season," Alexander said. "Not all of it was our goalkeeper's fault. We made some poor decisions on defense and that hurt us. This season, we are very strong defensively."

Christian and Scott Emert return to solidify the defense. Christian, a junior, will play center/midfield, while his sophomore brother plays sweeper. Sophomore Keith Gniewek (Plymouth Canton) returns as a marking back.

Freshman Jerome Beeler (Redford) should also see time on defense for the Crusaders. Freshman Adam Purcell is currently sitting out with a knee injury, but will help the defense when he returns mid-way through the season.

"We're a very offensive-minded team which could hurt us against counters," Alexander said. "We should make up for that, however, with our good speed on defense."

Replacing McEvilly in goal will be senior Mike Schroeder. He will be backed up by David Hart, a freshman from Novi and the goalkeeper of the future.

Mark Zathey is the inspirational leader for the team, according to Alexander, who will find a place on the field for the versatile junior to play.

"We're still young but we will do well," Alexander said. "I definitely think we'll have a better win-loss record, and if we stay healthy, I think we can win 90 percent of our games.

"The addition of Seamus really helps our offense and Stempien should also find the net. I also think our freshen will come in and make an immediate impact. They will surprise some people."

Madonna begins its season with a tough three-game trip to Florida, opening with a Aug. 27 match against Webber (Fla.) College. The difficult schedule will continue with several traditionally good teams visiting Livonia Ladywood field, where the Crusaders will play.

"We want to develop a fan following for this team," Alexander said. "There are some good teams coming here and there will be good soccer. It's up to us to continue winning and get recognized."

Healthy kids: *Scenes like this will be repeated throughout western Wayne County on "Super Saturday," Saturday, Sept. 7. Pictured here are Erin Klei, 3, and her father, David, and Mary Lou Anolick, RN, of St. Mary Hospital at a free immunization clinic last Saturday at Wonderland Mall in Livonia. 'Super Saturday'

Hospitals team up to offer free immunizations

Proper immunizations can prevent serious childhood disease. That's why area hospitals, the county health department and other sponsors are joining together to make Saturday, Sept. 7 a special day.

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

As part of the statewide campaign to "Immunize Your Little Michigander," the Michigan Department of Community Health, Wayne County Health Department, local hospitals, McDonald's, Meijer, Blue Cross Blue Shield and other sponsors are joining together to offer free immunizations on "Super Saturday."

From 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 7, the following locations will accept walk-ins: Oakwood Healthcare Center, 2345 Merriman in Westland; Mission Health Center, 37595 W. Seven Mile, Livonia; and Westside OB/GYN, 5800 N. Lilley Road, Canton. Pre-registration is not required. Parents should bring their child's immunization record.

"Super Saturday" is targeting ages birth to 2 but children of any age will be immunized. For more information, call 1-800-26-BIRTH.

"The purpose is to increase the number of children vaccinated from age 0-2 because the state came in dead-last last year nationally. The reason is, it's so hard to reach children because they're not in school," said Jan Arsanault, Wayne County Health Department immunization coordinator.

"Proper immunization can prevent serious childhood diseases which can be life-threatening and fatal to children. Although vaccines are available we still see cases of measles, mumps and rubella. We live in a small world these days. People are coming in from other countries with childhood diseases. We have to maintain the level of vaccinations."

According to Arsanault by age 2 children need four DPT, three Hepatitis B, three oral polio, four HIB and one measles, mumps and rubella. Measles may not seem dangerous but it can cause serious complications such as pneumonia, and brain inflammations leading to convulsions, hearing loss and mental retardation.

During Donald Lawrenchuk's 14 years as medical director of the Wayne County Health Department, one of the saddest and most preventable deaths he documented was that of a little girl who had not been immunized against measles. The child's father had signed a personal waiver during the 1989-91 outbreak which nationwide caused more than 130 deaths, half of whom were young children. Two of every 1,000 children who catch measles dies from it. Add to the high numbers of children unvaccinated because of waivers, the fact that vaccines on average are only 95 percent effective and you begin to see the danger.

Parents are encouraged to call, come and get their children up to date. Under age 2, only 64 percent of Michigan children are vaccinated, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

"The national average is 75 percent," said St. Mary Hospital's wellness program coordinator Marianne Simancek, a registered nurse.

St. Mary Hospital is making immunizations available at the Canton OB/GYN office.

Besides the Westland location on "Super Saturday," Oakwood Healthcare System and Garden City Hospital will also offer free immunizations to the first 100 children attending its "Safety in the Park" program from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Nankin Mills, 33175 Ann Arbor Trail and Edward Hines Drive, Westland. Although bicycle and inline skating safety is the thrust of the day, immunizations as well as blood pressure screening will also be available.

The safety event is cosponsored by Wayne County Parks, D&D Bicycle, AAA Michigan and Dearborn Heights Rotary.

"We're participating in Super Saturday because we don't find these kids until they enter kindergarten. Accessibility and awareness are some of the reasons children aren't being immunized," said Suzanne Truskowski, Oakwood Healthcare System's Keep Kids Safe team leader.

McDonald's will provide orange drink and cookies for children after vaccination at the health clinics. According to spokeswoman Michelle Fournier, McDonald's has been a strong supporter of immunizations. Bag stuffers and trayliners listing immunization sites and schedules will be utilized in more than 200 of their southeast Michigan locations now through Sept. 7.

The Michigan Ronald McDonald House Charities will underwrite the production of materials to help parents identify which immunizations are required and at what ages children should receive them. Health department volunteers will distribute the materials in McDonald restaurants on "Super Saturday."

"McDonald's cares about families and we want to do all we can to encourage parents to immunize their children on time in order to help them stay healthy," said Brian O'Mara, senior regional marketing manager for McDonald's Corp.

"Immunization education is part of our long-standing commitment to kids and follows the tradition of the Ronald McDonald House and Ronald McDonald House Charities."

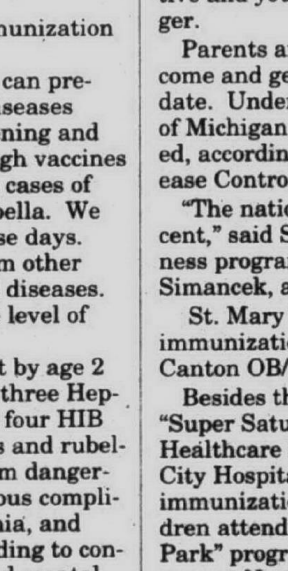
Once again, the new school year packs together in classrooms large groups of students and teachers who mix and mingle with each other every weekday.

As medical director for Wayne County's Medical Department, Donald Lawrenchuk, M.D., has a unique view of those thousands of classrooms spread across 33 school districts in Wayne County: the chance of not finding in each district a person affected with the HIV/AIDS virus is remote.

"This exists in such large numbers today that it's incomprehensible to think someone in those districts is not affected," Lawrenchuk said. "The numbers are large enough that every school district has a number of HIV-infected people. They could be students, teachers, administrators. Experts feel comfortable in general in allowing these kids be put in the school environment. In casual situations, risk is not there. It's not zero, but close to zero."



Keeping HIV/AIDS victims in class might be alarming to persons unfamiliar with the virus. When dealing with loved ones sitting next to an infected person, panic can set in and logic go out the window.

But the federal government and the state of Michigan believe so strongly that an HIV/AIDS person can't infect others in a classroom that they have a mandate written into law that prohibits excluding persons from a class because they have the virus.

Federal law considers an HIV/AIDS person handicapped, and prohibits discrimination against them.

The only way an HIV/AIDS child can be kept out of class is if the child bites or scratches another child or has open body lesions, Lawrenchuk said.

Persons with other communicable conditions may be excluded from class and kept out until the condition no longer exists.

"When a health professional or a building administrator suspects a child has a communicable condition, except for HIV/AIDS, they may exclude that student to get a determination by a professional," Lawrenchuk said. "The student may return when there no longer is a communicable disease."

In 1993, Lawrenchuk's department sent a 3-inch-thick manual to every private and public school in Wayne which explained the legal rules for communicable diseases.

There is no requirement under Michigan law that others in the classroom be told of the student

EMORY DANIELS

I don't really know what to make of Virtual Reality. Somehow it just doesn't seem real. Or is it too real? Or to close to being real?

But I do need to increase my understanding of Virtual Reality applications. One of my teen friends enjoys Virtual Reality games and is willing to spend up to $5 a pop for the experience at Cedar Point.

I've read somewhere about the more serious applications being studied. The futurists see a world where laser surgery might be performed on a wounded troop in the field by a surgeon at Walter Reed Hospital with Virtual Reality and a couple other technologies.

So I was interested when I got a call from Virtual Reality Institute. EDS, the world's largest systems integrator, and Prosolvia, the world's largest private Virtual Reality training supplier, joined to form the Virtual Reality Institute.

Prosolvia, based in Sweden with offices in Troy and Salt Lake City, specializes in software development and consulting for virtual reality applications.

In 1995, EDS brought together 40 companies, universities, and government organizations to create the Detroit Virtual Reality Center, the first commercial virtual reality center in the world. Since its opening in April 1995, more than 5,000 visitors have been through the center.

You can visit the VRI's web site at http://www.vrinstitute.com.

VRI will provide training and development services to demonstrate the value of Virtual Reality technology when applied to a customer's projects. The institute will teach students to use the new tools and processes VR offers for such uses as marketing and sales, assembly, styling and design, product development, simulators, environment, medical applications, and entertainment.

VRI in August began offering training and consulting services in virtual reality. Prosolvia provides the curriculum, experienced instructors, its expert research and development staff, and consulting expertise while EDS provides its vast marketing network, technical resources, facilities and administrative support.

"Interactive visual simulation and VR are technologies that have been rapidly evolving toward becoming efficient product development and process reengineering tools," said Mats Johansson, president of Prosolvia. "However, many companies have been restrained in their use of these dynamic technical tools because of a scarcity of trained personnel. The center will focus on creating an environment in which students can use new tools and processes applied to several types of projects."

Matt Vickers, a business manager for EDS Detroit Virtual Reality Center, said: "Students at the VRI" will have the opportunity to work on real-world problems with instructors who have created VR solutions for other customers.

"In addition, companies will have the opportunity to submit VR problems for students of the institute to work on."

Virtual Reality can be used, said Vickers, for modeling complex systems. By using virtual reality, users can configure, test and optimize products and processes such as parts assembly lines, facilities or process flows. Simulation training, once used almost exclusively for flight simulators, can now be used for training of assembly workers, surgeons and nuclear console operators.

Johansson said VRI is now working on a driver's training simulator for persons with neurological disorders. It will end up at a major hospital in the area when completed.

Holding back Virtual Reality from greater use in the commercial world is acceptance in the marketplace and the lack of trained personnel, said Vickers. There is more news to come from the institute, sooner than later.

with HIV/AIDS, Lawrenchuk said.

"We encourage parents with a child with these medical conditions to notify the school, but there is no law that says they must do this."

Experts also recommend — but don't mandate — that a private "meeting of the minds" take place between the parent, doctor of the child and health department representative so that everyone can "sit down and calmly go over the situation."

Many of these meetings are held throughout the school year in Wayne County, Lawrenchuk said.

"It's an opportunity to hear all the facts and to ask questions. But this is a recommendation, not an obligation, from the Michigan Department of Public Health. Things get very controversial when you deal with HIV and the stigmas attached to it."

Many investors fall prey to undercurrents

ARTHUR E. ZASKE

The investment media heartily enjoy touting Warren Buffet, Peter Lynch, George Soros and the like. Each has gained superstar status. Each is considered a successful investor and a winner.

Financial publications and the airwaves are filled with advertisements for various mutual funds, all of which seem to be number one in some category or in some time frame. Several publications hold annual investment competitions, in which individuals can create their own portfolios on paper. To win, the contestant must have the highest returns.

In general, it would seem that investors are being subtly programmed to believe that they are not successful unless they get the best return available. There is also the understanding that no one mutual fund or investment advisor can be number one forever, so investors are encouraged to switch around.

This is evident in the discount brokerage advertisements, through which companies offer the ability to "switch funds for no charge," while promoting the hundreds of different mutual funds they carry. It is deviously evident in the 401(k) packages that allow the investor to choose from dozens of funds and facilitate daily fund-switching using a Touch-Tone phone.

Many investors fall prey to these undercurrents and readily switch their funds or their investment advisers. One automotive executive recently complained to us that his firm has lost significant productivity in the engineering department, as his engineers are consumed with moving their 401(k) money daily to catch the best performers. However, most investment counselors realize that constantly "changing horses" usually leads to poor performance.

Switching generates risk

When investors bounce in and out of funds, additional risk is created over and above the inherent risk of the investment. Here are three classic investor mistakes:

- Buying high: Investors tend to pour money into funds after a clear uptrend has been going for awhile, usually after the best gains have been achieved.
- Selling low: Investors often bail out of long-term investments during a perceived temporary market decline.
- Investment through the "rear view mirror": Investors often buy mutual funds that performed best during the past few years. Inevitably, in the next few years, different funds do better. Many investors then switch funds into the "next" last year's winner.

So why is everyone trying so hard to win?

We live in a very competitive society that equates success with winning. Our tremendous preoccupation with sports at all levels reveals this. It is no longer popular to be a fan of the home team unless they are winning. Sports fans and commentators seem to enjoy bashing professional athletes, coaches and owners for not doing what it takes to win.

Now, put those same public sports antagonists in the private world of their own chosen activity and the standard changes.

Picture the start of the Boston Marathon. There are thousands of runners, but there are only 15 or so who are really running to win. All of the rest are running to achieve some very personal goal - a personal best time or the simple joy of finishing.

While some are natural runners, others are physically handicapped, overweight, or very young or very old. Many are even pushing child carriers. Each has a specific personal goal in mind. If a runner achieves his or her personal goal, do they not win? Are they not successful?

Successful investors

Psychologists call reaching one's personal goal self-actualization. We believe it is more important for an investor to be self-actualizing than it is for the investor to get the best return. That sounds pretty self-serving coming from a conservative investment counselor, until one considers the "Ying and Yang" relationship between return and risk.

It is a fact of life that these characteristics are joined at the hip. High risk means high return. Low risk means low return. The same forces that drive investors to seek the best return are driving them to take the greatest risk.

Each investor assumes risk. The amount of risk the investor is comfortable with should be a part of his or her guiding precepts and overall investment objective.

Successful investors measure financial objectives in absolute dollars, not relative percentages. In order to pay for the children's education, buy that retirement home, or achieve and maintain a comfortable lifestyle, investors must have absolute dollars. Percentage points do not pay the bills. An investment loss is a loss of absolute dollars. It can change one's life. Suddenly, seeking higher percentage-point returns on an investment portfolio may not be as important as avoiding high risk and a debilitating loss of capital.

Balance risk with return

Why should an investor take any more risk than necessary to achieve his or her specific personal objective? Is it to get there faster?

Ultimately, the level of returns an investor seeks will determine how fast the investor must go. However, there are greater risks to going faster. The marathon runner understands those risks -- muscle cramps, injury, dehydration, exhaustion, heart attack -- all of which can cause a runner to fail in the attempt to reach their goal. The faster an investor tries to go, the more likely a debilitating loss will occur.

But trust in the fact the few who escape disaster will be published, held up as the truly successful investors.

Are you a successful investor? Are you on track to reach your financial goals? Are you comfortable with that risk?

If you can answer these questions positively, you are a successful investor. If you are unsure, perhaps you should talk to a financial advisor, because there is no reason why any rational investor cannot be successful -- unless you believe that you have to get the best return to be successful.

STUDENTS COME TO FESTIVAL TO PLAY

BY KEELY WYGONIK

Jazz is the only music that we can claim as ours, and its future rests with the next generation.

This year's Ford Montreux Detroit Jazz Festival Aug. 30 to Sept. 1 at Hart Plaza downtown on Jefferson will feature 105 events on four stages including headliners, Kenny Burrell, Stanley Turrentine, Carla Bley, Jimmy Smith, Toots Thielemans, Jimmy Witherspoon, Jane Ira Bloom, Straight Ahead, Chico Hamilton, Henry Threadgill, Jane Bunnett, Orange Then Light Blue, Randy Johnston, A. Spencer Barefield, Malachi Thompson, Tom Peron and Bud Spangler.

See festival schedule inside

But Montreux is outstanding, not only because it draws international talent, but because of its educational component.

One of the four stages — Hudson's Bop Shop, will feature middle school, high school, and college groups. At the Pepsi Jam Academy Stage, a tented venue, student and amateur musicians can participate in free clinics and jam sessions.

"We wanted to make these educating events as easy to attend as possible," said festival director Jim Dulzo. "So they are free and located right in the middle of all the action. Anybody interested in learning to play jazz can attend. Just show up, and if you have a horn or guitar, bring it. We'll have a piano, bass and drums onsite."

Seven top Michigan jazz artists — Ed Gooch, Jack Pierson, Phil Lasley, Donald Walden, Chris Collins, Andrew Speight and Teddy Harris — will each offer a 75-minute clinic on jazz improvisations. These clinics sponsored by the Southeast Michigan Jazz Association, take place 1 p.m. and 5 p.m. Friday, Aug. 30 to Monday, Sept. 2. There is no 5 p.m. clinic on Monday.

The nightly student jam sessions were "the surprise new hit of last year's festival," said Dulzo. "A lot of students and amateurs showed up and had a fine time jamming with an excellent trio from Wayne State University. The jam sessions take place 6:30-8:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 30 to Sept. 1, and 5:15-7:15 p.m. Monday, Sept. 2.

Jazz is passed on generation to generation by professional musicians. Geri Allen-Roney featured in Robert Altman's "Kansas City," said Marcus Belgrave "was like a musical father. I've learned so much from him." Roney, who performed at the Birmingham Jazzfest in July, studied with Belgrave while attending Cass Technical High School in Detroit

As a youngster, Brad Felt of Bloomfield Hills, who, with the exception of last year, has played his tuba at every Montreux Jazz Festival since its inception, was inspired by musicians who visited his school.

"Some of my favorite gigs this year were in local high schools and junior highs," said Felt who presented concerts with well known local saxophonist Steven Wood. "After the concert we had an open forum and invited the students to play with us."

This year, for the first time, Felt will be performing with his own Quartet — drummer Danny Spencer of San Francisco, formerly Detroit, who has played with Joe Henderson, Bobby Hutcherson and other top musicians, Paul Keller on bass, and Jacob Sacks, piano.

"It's important for me to show tuba can lead a small group and be the only horn," said Felt who sees bright spots on the jazz horizon. He and 89 other musicians performed at the successful Second Annual Michigan Jazz Festival at Botsford Inn in Farmington Hills on July 21. A week later, jazz fans flocked to Birmingham for the fourth annual Jazzfest. "It's nice to see other things popping up," said Felt. "Montreux helps give jazz more impetus. Jazz is for everybody, but it's not part of pop culture. It's not presented with the hugeness and dollars behind it that pop music is."

Focus: HOPE's Community Arts Department with jazz pianist/musicologist Harold McKinney is presenting a program for children ages 4-12. McKinney's program 2:45-3:45 p.m. each festival day, combines the NewBop prose of jazz history with improvisation to explain how certain jazz rhythms and phrases can trace their origins to African tribal drum rhythms and early African American music.

Counter-culture illustrator makes 'Fiction Burn'

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

"Fiction Burn"

What: A one-man show of paintings, cartoons, album and magazine covers by Glen L. Barr.

Where: 515 S. Lafayette at Sixth in the Old Church, Royal Oak; (810) 398-9999, through Aug. 31. However, most of the work will remain on exhibit until Sept. 7.

When Glen Barr was growing up in Livonia, he never dreamed one day he'd make a living as an illustrator designing for such diverse mediums as advertising and animated videos. Many of the original artworks created for these commercial venues, and a series of recent paintings, are featured in his one-man show at C Pop Gallery in Royal Oak.

Barr's counterculture-themed "Fiction Burn" takes viewer from a seedy smoke-filled strip club on Michigan Avenue to two cars racing a locomotive in "Beat the Devil."

"You can inject your own scenario into it. Michigan Avenue was from an experience I had. Most of it's influenced by B movies from the 1950s," said Barr. "What I hope people get is some kind of exhilaration. They're kind of adrenaline-boosting visuals."

Created especially for the show over the last few months, many concepts for the paintings come from sketchbooks that he constantly fills while sitting in front of the TV, among other places. Some of the ideas were inspired by friends, and their cars, others by dreams. To begin one of the acrylics-on-Masonite, he simply transcends the present, "feels like a director and sets up a scene."

An admirer of the Old Masters, the Ferndale resident uses a palette similar to Dutch painters. Sepia dominates a portrait of a nude female standing erect on the edge of a wooden chair in "The Girl." Barr miniaturizes the figure to produce a looming, surreal sensation. In the background, her shadow crouches, appearing to be tortured by some sort of inner demons.

Barr works in layers, varnishing each one as it's completed. Then he sets the piece aside for a couple of days to allow time to decide "where to take it from there" because he's "constantly growing" as an artist. All of the frames Barr creates from found objects. Unfinished wood slats surrounding "The Girl" give the piece a raw, cutting-edge look.

Best known for creating the background illustrations that helped launch the animated Nickelodeon series "Ren and Stimpy," Barr has illustrated album covers ranging from MCA's "Saturday Morning Cartoons" by alternative bands to "Which Doobie U B."

While taking art classes at Livonia Franklin High School, Barr realized how lucrative the graphic arts could be as he designed T-shirts in marker for other students. After graduating from Center for Creative Studies College of Art and Design in Detroit, he worked as an illustrator for Skidmore Inc. in Southfield. At night, he freelanced in a Royal Oak studio until, finally, he'd paid his dues as his litany of accomplishments demonstrates. W.B. Doner commissioned him to design a Diego Rivera poster for the Detroit Grand Prix in 1989. In 1995 and 1996, he created T-shirts for New York designer Anna Sui's spring and fall lines. From illustrating D.C. Comics series to the intro for Tim Allen's "Home Improvement" show, Barr has done it all, including designing video covers for "Dennis the Menace." He recently returned from California where he worked on an animated video for singer Bjork set for release by MTV in October.

"Glenn is very versatile, as you can tell by all of the different styles and mediums that are in the show," said gallery owner Rick Menore.

Artist Steele captures grim side of city life

ARTISTIC EXPRESSIONS

LINDA ANN CHOMIN

While some artists paint idyllic landscapes, Jack Keijo Steele captures the grimside of life in the city. A student at Cranbrook Academy of Art in Bloomfield Hills from 1940 to 1942, the 77-year-old painter sets ups scenarios in the streets below tenements and Victorian dwellings that have seen better days.

The urban landscape is a sight most suburbanites never "see" as they breeze through these areas on their way to somewhere else. Steele makes us stop and look.

A quarter century retrospective of these large-scale paintings never seen before continue on exhibit through Sept. 8 at the Scarab Club, 217 Farnsworth across from the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"I started taking painting seriously in junior high because it was a real challenge," said Steele, a 48-year resident of Garden City. "I get my ideas from life itself when I'm thinking hard on a subject. I hope the viewer will feel a little kinship toward it. There should be a reminder of what it was like, that there's a social conscious."

Born in Ironwood, Steele began observing and recording what he saw on brown sheets of papers purchased for two pennies from a butcher shop. His father's death at the age of eight changed his perceptions of life forever when Steel's mother moved her three children to the urban landscape of Detroit. It was here he pursued his art at Cass Technical High School and Meinzinger Art School. He paid his tuition by sweeping floors and washing windows.

Steele applied for entrance to Cranbrook while working on the assembly line at Ford Motor Company. For the next two years he studied on a full scholarship with Zolton Sepeshy. After serving in the Air Force, he returned to his mother's home in Wayne to paint in an old wooden garage in 1940. Steele married his wife Helen in 1947. They raised five children together. The family's Sunday afternoon rides were a cruise down Michigan Avenue to view the remains of Skid Row on their way to the Detroit Institute of Arts.

An admirer of "the strong paintings by German Expressionists," Steele says, many years ago he was inspired by Pieter Bruegel, Rembrandt, Goya and other Old Masters. Using a dark palette with splashes of color he draws us in to a world where much of the day and night is spent on the streets, stoops and porches as time drags on. From 1954 to 1980, not much changes in the dreary scenes. The viewer can almost feel the intense heat.

Steele competed extensively in juried shows in the 1950s and 60s winning many awards. The rise of pop art in the 60s forced him to withdraw from the painting scene but he did not stop painting.

One day in 1962, he was out driving and stumbled upon a radiator shop at the corner of Ford Road and Venoy in Westland. Steele was so inspired he hurried home to retrieve his tools.

"The Manager" focuses on a dumpy, trash-strewn business long since torn down. The greasy, tattooed manager looks forlorn as he rests his arm and head on a telephone post. An A&P sign in the background and a stack of old Time magazines in the foreground are the only semblances of civilization. There's so much to see in these works. Steele places dozens of images in each scene but always give the viewer a place to rest. In this case, a dog sits nearby.

"We've had a good response to the show. Most of the people seem to like looking at the nostalgia," said Scarab Club board member Greg Stephens.

A cast of characters reveal their lot in life in "Hell's Kitchen." The 1974 New York City street scene emerged from a time when Steele found himself in an area where "nice people don't go because it isn't safe." A clown with a sock puppet on one side of the painting seems to mirror a hippie decorated with peace signs on the other side as a clarinetist blows his horn .

"It was quite an experience. It was at the end of the hippie movement. My wife and I were going to Greenwich Village and took the wrong bus," he said.

Steele retired as a clay modeler in the styling department at Ford in 1980. That year he painted the latest work in the show, a self portrait. The haunting canvas features Steele as a puppeteer manipulating four male figures.

Jack Keijo Steele was finally "discovered" in 1993 when former Cranbrook professor Michael Hall and his partner David Lusenhop as co-owners of Fulcrum Fine Art Gallery in Cincinnati curated an exhibit of his paintings for a 1994 show at Cranbrook. Long overdue, the exhibit focusing on the period from the Great Depression through the 1950s, established Steele as one of the Urban Realists of this era.

Gin Blossom's Wilson enjoys 'good life' on tour

STAFF WRITER

As lead singer of the successful roots rock band Gin Blossoms, Robin Wilson is loving the good life.

"You can quote me on this, I think the greatest thing about being the headliner on tour is having runners available to you," Wilson said.

"He took me to Meijer. I had to get some stuff like batteries, a plastic bin to recycle aluminum. I had a really fulfilling day so far."

Wilson, who was born in Detroit, was spending the day in East Lansing preparing to begin the next leg of his tour that night at the Michigan Festival. The Tempe, Az.,-based band had just returned from a month-long break, unprecedented for the band.

"It was a whole darn month. It's always the weirdest thing to have time off then you get on the bus again and you realize, 'Oh yeah. This is our reality. The back of the bus in an 8 by 8 space is the reality in which we live.' "

The Gin Blossoms, who return to Michigan Sunday, Sept. 1, to open for Neil Young and Crazy Horse at Pine Knob, are touring in support of "Congratulations I'm Sorry," its second full-length album for A&M Records.

The 13-song album carries on the band's reputation for soul-baring lyrics and hook-laden melodies. Even the recording process wasn't much different than the Gin Blossoms' debut release "New Miserable Experience" (A&M).

"We recorded it in the very same room in Memphis, Tenn., at Ardent Studios with (producer) John Hampton. ... John is our buddy and we just wanted to make a record in Memphis where there's a rich tradition of recording and rock 'n' roll," said Wilson, whose band also includes guitarist/songwriter/singer Jesse Valenzuela, guitarist Scott Johnson, bassist Bill Leen, and drummer Phil Rhodes.

Kicking off with "Day Job," a rollicking salute to their musical career ("I'm never going back to college/For just one good day job"), "Congratulations I'm Sorry" showcases the Gin Blossoms' penchant for ballads ("Not Only Numb," "As Long As It Matter,"), jangly pop rock ("Whitewash," "Competition Smile") and pedal steel guitar, country/western-influence songs ("Memphis Time").

Bass player Leen coined the name of the album.

"I guess it's just supposed to symbolize that there's a lot of ups and downs we personally have been through. There's been a lot of good and bad over the course of the last four years of whatever," Wilson explained.

The lowest point of the band's career was when founding member Doug Hopkins committed suicide in December 1993. Hopkins was fired by the band because of his alcohol problems during the recording of "Experience," a collection of songs mostly written by the troubled Hopkins. Afterward, Hopkins became increasingly bitter over his former bandmates' success and committed suicide. He had penned the two biggest hits from the record – "Hey Jealousy" and "Found Out About You."

Hopkins' downfall is alluded to in the song "Follow You Down," where a quivery-voiced Wilson tells the story of a friend who wants to jump off a bridge. In response, he sings, "Anywhere you go, I'll follow you down. I'll follow you down, but not that far."

Ironically, "Follow You Down" was the first hit single from "Congratulations I'm Sorry." One thing that he's not sorry or guilty about is the band's ability to write successful pop songs.

"We've had a string of them and we're quite happy with that. We don't think that's the most important thing, though. ... The bulk of our awards come from being involved in a creative process. We're perfectly happy to have hit records. We've always been pleased with the commercial success.

"We have different goals with the creative and commercial aspects of our career. Our goal on the creative side was to make a record that we liked and was strong enough to play it for a year on the road. Commercially, my personal goals for the record is to see it sell half as many as 'New Miserable Experience.' With 'Follow You Down' we're on line to do that."

Wilson was born in Detroit 31 years ago. After living in a series of suburbs that he can't remember except for Dearborn, Wilson and his family moved to Arizona at the age of 5.

"It's a funny story. We went to Arizona because my dad had a lot of allergies. When we moved there, Phoenix had really clean, dry air. Now the air pollution in Phoenix is so bad my dad can't live there anymore. My dad's thinking about moving back here," said Wilson whose aunts, uncles and cousins still live in the area.

Wilson, who is engaged to be married in late September, remains in Tempe, Az."That's all I dream about when I'm here on tour – Canyon Lake and getting back. The canyons and the plant life and the animal life is very exotic and beautiful. It's truly my favorite place on planet earth."

The Gin Blossoms along with Steve Earle open for Neil Young and Crazy Horse at 7 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 1, at Pine Knob Music Theatre, I-75 and Sashabaw Road, Independence Township. Tickets are $35 pavilion and $20 lawn. For more information, call (810) 377-0100.

CHRIISTINA FUOCO

"Dust" is the first album from the Screaming Trees since 1992's "Sweet Oblivion." But although there was four years between albums, the Seattle-based band wasn't exactly just sitting around.

"We made one album after we finished touring (for 'Sweet Oblivion') said guitarist Gary Lee Conner during a phone conversation from his upstate New York home. "We didn't like it. We did it way too fast so we spent a couple years writing more songs and recording. .. It took us forever. We wrote hundreds of songs and scrapped all but 10 of them. We probably could have done two other albums."

Conner said that they wanted to put out a quality record and not fall victim to a slump.

"I kept hoping (the first album that was scrapped) was good but I realized that it wasn't. It's scary to see other artists who make a really good record and then make one that isn't so good. You wonder what happened. Didn't they realize this was really terrible? That was the kind of things we were thinking about."

Conner calls "Dust" one of the band's best records. "Dust" marks a maturation and a heightened emotion in singer Mark Lanegan's vocals. The album, produced by George Drakoulias (Black Crowes, Jayhawks, Tom Petty), features an array of instrumental touches including Mellotron string lines and Hammond organs.

"We always had a lot of keyboards on records but I played most of them. They weren't played really well," Conner said with a laugh. "For this album we hooked up with Benmont Tench (of Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers), an amazing keyboard player. It gave the album a really cool feel."

Pearl Jam guitarist Mike McCready, Masters of Reality's Chris Goss, and classical cellist Milori also stepped into the studio with the Trees, bassist Van Conner and drummer Barrett Martin.

On Friday, Aug. 30, the Screaming Trees will join the Manic Street Preachers to open for Brit pop stars Oasis at The Palace of Auburn Hills. Tickets are still available. For more information, call (810) 377-0100.

Bizarre Brando makes 'Moreau' worth watching

TICKETS PLEASE

JOHN MONAGHAN

For those who wonder what Marlon Brando does all day on his island home, "The Island of Dr. Moreau" offers a fascinating, often unintentionally hilarious answer. In what may be the most bizarre studio release of the year, the jumbo method actor plays a crazed scientist lording over genetic experiments on a tropical isle.

You'd think Hollywood would have had enough of H.G. Wells' once controversial science fiction yarn, which celebrates its centennial this year. Charles Laughton did it best in 1933 (in "Island of Lost Souls") while Burt Lancaster, in 1977, tried to keep his dignity among hammy costars and cheesy makeup effects.

Dignity no longer concerns Brando, who enters in thick pancake makeup, carted around on a Cleopatra-style throne by his "children," a hideous population of man-beasts. He's doted on by a deformed midget (a truly amazing piece of work) who wears matching outfits and, in one scene, even pours ice into his master's tall ice bucket hat.

Money. Ease. Interest. Brando chooses his roles pretty much in that order, like Laurence Olivier did in his later years. Even swathed in huge robes, bee-keepers' hat covering his pasty face; you can still see the workings of America's greatest living actor.

You also can't help but be reminded of "Apocalypse Now," where Brando's Colonel Kurtz set himself up as the ultimate power in the Vietnamese jungle.

A mellower version of Dennis Hopper's drugged-out photographer, Val Kilmer plays a fellow researcher who serves as Moreau's zookeeper.

Kilmer, used to showy performances, tries in vain to hold his own. Talking to one of Moreau's creations, a dog boy, he pulls out a squeak toy and dismisses him with a condescending "fetch." In his most extreme example of Brando-envy, he stuffs his shirt and mimics the actor's muffled lines after the doc is inevitably killed by his own creations.

David Thewlis, so powerful in Mike Leigh's "Naked," plays the hapless English diplomat who ends up Moreau's guest on the island and through whose eyes we see much of the weirdness. He's also the only one who appears to take this movie seriously.

The creatures themselves are a fun bit of special effects, a B-movie cross between "Planet of the Apes" and "Cats," but on an A-movie budget. We see men crossed with leopards, hyenas, dogs and cats, the latter represented by Moreau's beautiful daughter (Fairuza Balk), whom Thewlis grows infatuated with.

Most amazing is how many talented people landed on this "Island," including director John Frankenheimer, reportedly brought in when Kilmer and Brando ran Richard Stanley (still credited as screenwriter) off the set. Veteran cinematographer William Fraker brings atmosphere to the jungle locales.

My vote for goofiest movie of the year, "The Island of Dr. Moreau" is not without its peculiar charms. Call it a guilty pleasure, but it's always fun to see Hollywood's best and brightest make monkeys — not to mention hyenas — of themselves.

John Monaghan welcomes your calls and comments. To leave him a voice mail message, dial (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, mailbox 1866.

■ "Monty Python and the Holy Grail" (Britain - 1975). 9 p.m. Sept. 4. This lampooning of knightly deeds is almost as legendary as old King Arthur himself.

Main Art Theatre118 N. Main Street at 11 Mile, Royal Oak. Films play through at least Thursday, unless noted otherwise. Call (810) 542-0180 for information and showtimes. ($6.50; $4 students, seniors and matinee; $3 twilight)

■ "Trainspotting" (Britain - 1995). A runaway hit in Britain: the story of five liars, losers, junkies, and thieves on the road to self-destruction in modern-day Edinburgh. Directed by Danny Boyle, who made the clever thriller "Shallow Grave."

■ "Emma" (USA - 1996). It showed up as a modern story "Clueless" last year. Now Hollywood has brought Jane Austen's novel to the screen as the real thing, a beautifully filmed and exceptionally acted tale of a woman who fancies herself a matchmaker but falls short when it comes to her own romance. Gwyneth Paltrow stars.

Mackinac Island inspires memorable reads

ESTHER LITTMANN

Visits to Mackinac Island always bring out the story-teller in me. There's the natural beauty, local color, and rich historical background that make this former center of the fur trade and modern resort area a perfect setting for a novel.

Two Michigan authors who specialize in young people's literature have already discovered Mackinac's potential. Gloria Whelan's "Once On This Island" (Harper Collins, 1995, $14.95) tells the story of a family caught up in the throes of the War of 1812. When the British army invades their remote Michigan island and conquers Fort Michilimackinac, 12-year-old Mary O'Shea and her sister and brother face some new challenges.

Within days, Mary's widowed father must leave the island because he refuses to compromise his patriotism by swearing allegiance to the British crown. His plan is to join General Hull's American forces at Fort Wayne in Detroit.

That means Mary and the older Angelique and Jacques will be left alone to work the farm and look out for one another. They're up to the challenge, their father insists, since he'll only be gone for six months.

Though saddened by his impending departure, Mary is proud when her father expresses faith in her courage and fortitude and places a gold coin in her hand, saying, "Spend it only when there is great need."

But months stretch into years. The Americans are not prepared to fight the well equipped British and their Indian allies. Winters on the island present numerous hardships. Food is scarce, and Angelique and Jacques become restless. At the brink of adulthood, they want more out of life than the daily drudgery of farm labor and household chores. A handsome British soldier at the fort and the lure of adventure among fur traders direct their attention elsewhere.

Yet Mary's spunk and fierce loyalty to her father and country are unswerving. Even the loss of her best friend Gavin, an Indian orphan raised by white settlers, fails to dampen her spirits or dim her vision for a brighter future.

An award-winning writer, Gloria Whelan brings to life the customs and concerns of Michigan residents living in the early 19th century. Her book is sure to fascinate and inspire middle-school readers and beyond.

• Rochester pharmacist Robert A. Lytle spent his boyhood summers in the Les Cheneaux Islands of eastern upper Michigan. His fond memories of swimming, sailing, and fishing are recorded in two fictional works entitled "Mackinac Passage: A Summer Adventure" (1995) and its sequel "Mackinac Passage: The Boathouse Mystery" (1996, $11.95), both published by Thunder Bay Press.

When "Boathouse Mystery" begins, 15-year-old Pete Jenkins and his friends are pleased that their efforts have culminated in the arrest of local counterfeiters. But a close call with disaster has made Pete a bit more cautious. Now it's time to enjoy what summers at Les Cheneaux have to offer: boating, water-skiing, and parties with the privileged but "neat" kids from Cincinnati.

No one seems too concerned about a rash of petty thefts from luxurious boathouses anchored along the channels and bays of Lake Huron. Or that the body of Fats FitzRoberts — one of the counterfeiters and a merciless killer — has never been found. With few clues, even the police are inclined to disregard the pilfering of minor items such as food and blankets. But when Dr. Scruton, polio specialist at Sault Sainte Marie Hospital, is mugged while carrying the substantial proceeds of a charity basketball game, the teens spring into action once again.

Little do Pete and his friends know that more than robbery is at stake. They soon find themselves in a predicament that requires quick thinking, team work, and conquering their fear of the frigid waters of Muscallonge Bay.

Young readers (10-14) will enjoy this book of friendship and adventure.

Action, humor, and suspense — plus some Michigan geography — make "Mackinac Passage: A Boathouse Mystery" as well as its predecessor a good choice for summer reading.

Both books can be purchased at Halfway Down the Stairs Children's Book Shop on 114 E. Fourth St. in Rochester.

Esther Littmann, a resident of Bloomfield Township, is a private tutor with Una Dworkin and Associates. You can leave her a message from a touch-tone phone at (313) 953-2047, mailbox 1893. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314.

Book captures Holyland beauty

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

David Roberts was a distinguished 19th century British landscape artist who rose from poverty to a place of prominence in English art circles.

His reputation was solidified by a book of lithographs based on his drawings of scenes from the Holy Lands done during a trip in 1838-39.

Now Stewart, Tabori & Chang, a New York publisher that specializes in large format art books, has released an eye-popping recreation of the original color plates with historical and artistic commentary, selections from Roberts' journals and present-day photographs of the scenes captured by Roberts. The book, "Yesterday and Today, The Holy Land," has a suggested retail price of $60.

Anyone interested in history, art or the Bible will find this book stunning. Roberts attention to the most minute details of architecture, landscape, costume and human form make these pictures especially vivid. They are rightly regarded as among the best documentary recreations of the Holy Lands during that period. The large 10 1/4" by 14" format and the beautiful coloration make the book a treasure. In addition to the Roberts' drawings, the book also contains maps and covers from the original edition.

In addition to being a chronicle of Roberts' work, here arranged following the order of creation for the first time, the book is also a celebration of the lithographic art. Belgian lithographer Louis Haghe created the plates from Roberts' drawings.

The commentary by Fabio Bourbon is informative and the book's design by Patrizia Balocco Lovisetti is outstanding. The only flaw in this presentation is careless editing in this English language version, translated by Antony Shugaar. As a newspaper reporter I am tolerant of occasional typos, a bane of newspapers usually caused by impending deadlines. But an art book of this quality and prepared with this attention to detail in its art reproduction should also be impeccably edited.

That's a small quibble, because the book's value is in Roberts' art _ precise, alive to local culture, informed by a love for the play of light and dark and reverent about the Biblical sites but never maudlin or sentimental, and equally respectful toward Islamic holy places. Though it is Roberts' landscapes that are most famous, his interior architectural renderings and his portraiture are also impressive.

The publishers are promoting the book as a form of time travel and the contrasts and comparisons with the photos (most excellently done by Antonio Attini) do create a fascinating trip to the Holy Lands then and now.

Cafe Oliverio moves, loyal customers follow

Artie Oliverio has again packed up his kitchen and taken it on the road.

This time, Cafe Oliverio has found a new home in Farmington Hills, bringing a group of loyal regulars and a New York-style Italian cuisine to an airy, casual ambience.

The move from Royal Oak to 11 Mile and Middlebelt brings chef Oliverio closer his area restaurant origins – Long Lake Road in West Bloomfield Township in the early 1980s. It also, he said, puts Cafe Oliverio closer to 90 percent of its regular patrons. "They claim this is much better, closer for them," Oliverio said.

But as always, said Oliverio and new business partner Tom Timmons, Cafe Oliverio's menu boasts fresh ingredients and made-from-scratch dishes that can be specially prepared.

"There's a lot of things we do here you can't get anywhere else," said Timmons, who formerly owned Peacock's Cafe & Grill on the same site and now handles the business side of things at Cafe Oliverio. "Everything is finished, sauteed, cooked to order."

Oliverio, a Brooklyn native with 25 years in the restaurant business, prides himself on light sauces made of imported tomatoes, stuffed pastas from his New York factory, seafood brought in fresh daily and a unique, versatile menu with many dishes of his own invention.

"You can come here every night for a year and never eat the same thing twice," he said.

He pushes the Eggplant Rollatini – rolled eggplant stuffed with angel-hair pesto and covered by marinara sauce and cheese that's served as an appetizer or an entree – and salmon dishes cooked in three different styles.

There are a dozen appetizers on the dinner menu, from the soup of the day to a tortelloni for two filled with cheese and pumpkin in a cream and wine sauce.

The restaurant also offers a dozen pasta dishes, another dozen entrees, seafood, New York strip steak served three different ways, beer and wine (a liquor license is in the works), desserts and coffee and a small menu for children. Several meatless dishes are available.

Oliverio also runs a wholesale food business that serves other area Italian restaurants. Sauces by the quart are available at the cafe.

Oliverio and Timmons say the restaurant, remodeled since its days as Peacock's, has a less-formal feel to it than when it was on Woodward. There, they said, a fancier atmosphere, along with a bar and a piano, gave it an unintended posh feeling.

Diners "felt like maybe it was for special occasions, which it wasn't intended to be," Timmons said.

The move has also reduced overhead and allowed price cuts of up to $4 on entrees, Oliverio said.

Condo conversion gives ownership option

River Crossing Townhome Condominium, an apartment conversion, offers buyers a unit of 1,300 square feet with two or three bedrooms, 2-1/2 baths and partially finished basement from $67,490 to $90,000.

About a third of the 97 units off Lahser between Nine and 10 Mile roads in Southfield are still available.

Units are clustered three to seven per building. Exterior materials are brick and aluminum siding. No unit is stacked on another. All have private entrances.

Existing oven, dishwasher, refrigerator, cabinetry, furnace and central air conditioning are included in the base price.

"We put them in proper condition," said Douglas Bock, a partner in the conversion. "When we sell, everything is functional."

A one-year protection plan on the furnace is included in the purchase price. New front doors and porch lights also are included at base price. Units will be painted and carpeted at no extra cost.

New appliances, cabinets, counter tops, plumbing and light fixtures are available at a premium.

"We saw an opportunity to offer product not being offered, a large square foot unit, for less than paying rent in a location where people wanted to be," said Michael E. Berger, a partner in the venture.

"We thought the location is excellent," said Walter Cohen, another partner. "Road patterns are excellent, plus employment in Southfield, itself.

"Southfield is a terrific place to live," Cohen added. "They have a fantastic library, schools. I think they won parks and recreation awards the last 11 years."

River Crossing previously was Hidden River Apartments. It was built in 1975. Rents recently ranged from $750 to $800, Berger said.

"The whole concept here is offering ownership below rent," Berger said. "That's the beauty of River Crossing. You can own with substantial improvements being done."

"The last owners kind of let it run down a tad," Cohen said. "We've done a lot of work."

The model has a living room, dining room, kitchen/nook and half bath on the first floor, three bedrooms upstairs. The master has a shower and two closets. A second bath with combination tub and shower is upstairs.

The basement has a laundry tub and washer/dryer hook-up.

The model, with extras and upgrades, carries a price of $92,000.

Prices vary depending on location within the project, kind of windows (bay versus regular), kind of porch, whether it's an end unit (premium) and what new/upgraded features buyers select from the menu.

The farther you buy back towards the woods and a branch of the Rouge River on the property, the more expensive your unit.

"You're in the center of a metro area," Cohen said while showing off the wetlands. "Look how quiet it is. How old would you say that oak is – 150 years?"

Buyers at River Crossing get one covered parking space in a carport and access to a pool and clubhouse on the grounds. Water is included in the maintenance/association fee, currently $124 per month.

A mix of empty-nesters downsizing, young marrieds and singles looking for an investment are buying. There aren't a lot of young children in the complex.

River Crossing is within the Southfield school district boundaries.

The property tax rate is currently $56.61 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $70,000 condo there would pay about $1,980 the first year.

Jacqui E. Jones, the sales rep, rented in Hidden River before buying after the conversion.

"The biggest thing people are impressed with is the size, space," she said. "They're impressed with the number of baths. The basement is a separate area where you can get away."

Connie Reddix moved to a three-bedroom unit at River Crossing from an apartment.

"I like the vicinity," she said. "When I looked at the model, I fell in love with it. I like the way the kitchen is laid out with a breakfast nook. I like when you first come in, there's a little vestibule, then the living room and dining room.

"It's quiet. I have a patio door off Lahser and a little hill (berm)," she said. "I have beautiful scenery.

"I have to give the sales rep and mortgage people credit," Reddix said. "They were wonderful. I had no problems at all."

"I was looking for something spacious that met my economic needs," said Rikki Marcilis, who also bought a three-bedroom unit at River Crossing.

"I wanted a private entry. I wanted a more home-like structure," she added. "I love the basement. I enjoy the quietness, room, space."

Simple bathroom renovation

Nearly any home-remodeling poll, when asked which room is of paramount importance, homeowners replay with unwavering, single-mindedness: the bathroom. Like any other room in the house, the bathroom requires a face-lift now and then. Yet, upscaling the look of your bathroom does not necessarily mean a major renovation. Replacing a deteriorated bathtub may be a simple solution that will make a big impact. Jacuzzi Whirlpool Bath, the original of the whirlpool bath, suggests the Venicia whirlpool bath.

Decorative yet practical, this whirlpool bath is ideal in bathroom remodeling. Measuring 72 inches long by 42 inches wide by 22 inches high, the self-contained, preplumbed unit offers ease of installation. It is made of high-gloss, scratch-resistant acrylic and is reinforced with fiberglass.

Prudential sells homes by price range

Wheel of fortune: The Prudential Great Lakes Realty offers sellers the opportunity to list properties in a value range, as well as the traditional specific price.

Prudential Great Lakes Realty, headquartered in Clarkston, has launched a program it believes will redefine the listing process to benefit both home buyers and sellers.

The new approach, value-range marketing, replaces the fixed asking price with a predetermined price range.

"For buyers, it expands the pool of homes available to view," said Jennifer Zardus, marketing director. "Under sellers ... it eliminates under- and over-pricing. It attracts more buyers and invites more offers."

Here's how it works.

When a seller lists a home with a fixed asking price, that price tends to be higher than true market value. Sellers list under the assumption there will be negotiations that will bring the price of the house down, so they may inflate the initial listing price.

This hurts the seller because it limits exposure of the house and immediately excludes a number of qualified buyers from a potential transaction. Most buyers automatically rule out houses above their price range without even looking.

For instance, if a house is listed at $135,000, buyers looking in the $125,000 market won't bother. With value-range marketing, the same house would list at $120,000 to $140,000, broadening the market and pool of potential buyers significantly.

Also, value-range marketing prevents sellers from having to reduce the listing price, which can be damaging to the image of the property and discourage potential buyers.

A price reduction is included in the value-range marketing as the lowest acceptable bid, so it's not necessary to lower the listing price.

Fifty ranges have been established starting at $45,000-$55,000 and going up to $9 million-$12 million.

■ 'For buyers, it expands the pool of homes available to view. Under sellers ... it eliminates under- and over-pricing. It attracts more buyers and invites more offers.'

Jennifer Zardus, marketing director.

When a value-range marketing listing agreement is signed by a seller, the property is marketed through newspaper advertising with a special VRM logo. A VRM rider is displayed on the yard sign. The property is entered into the multiple listing system under the appropriate pricing parameters.

The added visual elements provided by the company make it easier for the public to automatically target VRM listings.

"VRM is technically not a new concept; it's simply repackaged," said Daniel E. Stiehl, co-owner of Prudential Great Lakes Realty.

"The VRM negotiation process is a viable way for the buyer and seller to have greater control than traditionally-negotiated transactions," Stiehl said.

"VRM increases buyer choices. They see a greater number of homes, especially homes that never would have been a consideration because of the price.

"Plus, buyers can compare similar homes on the market and thus make a more educated offer when negotiating for their desired home," Stiehl said.

Prudential Real Estate Affiliates adapted the concept from its origins in Australia. Two affiliates, one in San Diego, the other in Colorado Springs, piloted the program in the U.S.

VRM listings sell three to five times faster than the market average, and 30 percent of its listings now are VRM, the California broker reported.

Sixty-five percent of sellers who listed with VRM sold for more than they expected, and just one sold at the bottom of the price range, the Colorado broker indicated.

About 15 percent of Prudential Great Lakes Realty listings were VRM 30 days after the program was implemented here, Zardus said. Sellers can list either VRM or the traditional way.

Realtors throughout the metro area have been given a copy of Prudential's VRM wheel to match numbers on for-sale signs with the price range.

Sellers who have a firm price they want to get and aren't willing to negotiate would do best listing traditional rather than VRM, Zardus suggested.

"Buying and selling homes in the future will be much more competitive than it is now," said Jerome M. Baranski, co-owner of Prudential Great Lakes Realty.

"With fewer real estate agents doing a greater amount of business and smaller companies being folded into larger companies, the need for advanced technology and alternative ways of conducting business are essential in being successful.

"We feel the VRM concept is a step forward in offering pricing alternatives to the growing number of educated buyers and sellers," Baranski said.

The Prudential Great Lakes Realty has 10 offices including Bloomfield Hills, Clarkston, Farmington Hills, Rochester Hills, Troy and West Bloomfield.

You can help accelerate mortgage application

By DAVID MULLY
SPECIAL WRITER

To help expedite the processing of a mortgage application, the borrower may be asked to provide a variety of information at the time of application. Listed below are some of the items you will generally need to supply. It's important to remember that these are only "guidelines" because different programs have dramatically different documentation requirements ... so what's needed for a VA loan may be entirely different than what's needed for a conventional loan with 20 percent down! Contact your loan officer to determine what will e required for the particular mortgage you are interested in.

■ A copy of the sales agreement and all addendums, signed by the sellers and buyers. This is always needed.

■ A copy of the Realtor's ticket, if possible. This is a big help in ordering the appraisal.

■ A complete legal description of the property to be mortgaged, which is needed to order the title work.

■ Original statements for the most recent two-three-month period from all depositories (banks, credit unions, money market accounts, etc.). Include the correct name, address and account numbers for all accounts.

■ Correct name and address for all employers of borrower and/or co-borrower for the present year and the previous two calendar years. Also provide the most recent pay stub showing year-to-date earnings and W-2s for the two previous calendar years.

■ Borrower and co-borrower's addresses for the last two years. Also, you will need social security numbers for all applicants.

■ If you are self-employed, provide federal tax returns, including all schedules and attachments for the two previous calendar years. Also provide an accountant-prepared profit-and-loss statement and balance sheet through the most recent quarter.

■ Name, account number, balance and monthly payment for all creditors (stores, credit unions, revolving lines of credit, etc.). Copies of the most recent statements may be helpful in determining minimum payments for underwriting purposes.

■ Accurate information on any home currently owned including name, address and account number of the mortgage holder. Please provide the same information for any home previously financed but sold within the 12-month period preceding date of application.

■ Complete information on any other real estate owned including rental properties, vacation homes, time-share units, etc. If renting, provide the name and address of present landlord and any landlord within the last two years.

■ A letter signed by the borrower that itemizes and U.S. Savings Bond holding by issue date, serial number and denomination. For stock holdings, bring a copy of the certificates themselves of your most recent brokerage statements.

■ VA applicants need a Certificate of Eligibility of DD214 of "in-service" letter. FHA applicants need photo identification such as driver's license, and a copy of the social Security card for both borrower and co-borrower.

■ If alimony or child support are to be used toward qualifying for the mortgage, bring documentation of receipt.

■ In the event that the applicant has been involved in a judgment, collection, divorce or bankruptcy, copies of the releases, discharges, decrees or evidence that the accounts are paid in full need to be provided. Contact your loan officer for more detail.

■ Finally, bring enough funds to pay for the credit report and appraisal.

Although it looks like a lot of information to gather, having a complete set of documentation as described above will certainly help your mortgage application proceed as quickly as possible.

Interest rates:

Here are some recent interest rates that may be helpful to you in tracking the direction of rates for home mortgages. These are just a guide. Be sure to call a lender to get current rate quotes.

In Freddie Mac's Primary Mortgage Market Survey, the 30-year fixed rate for the North Central area for the week ended Aug. 23, 1996, moved slightly upward to 8.00 percent (U.S. average 7.93 percent). A week ago, the average for the U.S. was 7.88 percent, and one year ago it was also 7.88 percent. Current 15-year fixed-rate mortgages have edged up slightly to an average 7.50 percent. Adjustable-rate mortgages were recorded at 6.10 percent, edging down from last week's average of 6.25 percent for our area of the country.

GARDEN SPOT

Take some time to enjoy the garden

MARTY FIGLEY

In these last few weeks of summer, take time to sit in a quiet place and enjoy some new gardening books along with a cup of tea or coffee.

"Seeds," Peter Loewer ($25, Macmillan), begins with what a seed is and does. In simple layman's terms, Loewer's explanations are easily understood and fascinating. This book is a must, especially for future botanists.

We also learn how to plant them for optimal results, origins of plants and diverse information such as that one of the earliest records of germination of seeds (stored for 15 years) was recorded in 1846. We meet seedsmen from many parts of the country and learn the history of their seed houses and their role in seed production and distribution. Many nurseries and exchange companies are described in detail.

Loewer has included several reviews of books especially geared for seed collectors. He has also profiled several collectors and relates unusual and sometimes harrowing experiences in their quest.

Women's works

"Between the Apple-blossom and the Water," edited by Pamela Norris (Little Brown, $17.95), is a collection of word vignettes of woman and gardens. Each narrative is taken from novels, poems or gardening books by women, published between 1860 and 1935 at a time when women were beginning to venture out of the house to pursue hobbies other than embroidery, etc.

Authors include Vita Sackville West, Edith Wharton, Louisa May Alcott and Katherine Mansfield. A suitable painting by artists such as George Samuel Elgood, Sidney Shelton and Hugh Norris accompanies each piece.

In "The New Northern Gardener" (Firefly, $24.95), Jennifer Bennett has expanded her important book, "The Harrowsmith Northern Gardener," written several years ago. A new chapter on flowers with a list of more than 100 hardy ones (and personal notes) will enable gardeners in our zone to realize success with a large number of these plants.

The herb section includes mail-order and zone information, and the how-to diagrams enhance the directions Bennett so carefully gives. If you are trying vegetables for the first time, here is good advice with descriptions of many – and growing information. The author details the process from beginning to end for information from gardening directly in the ground to containers. Check out the harvest and storing chapter, too.

Floral portraits

"Hydrangeas," Toni Lawson-Hall and Brian Rothera (Timber Press, $34.95), is an excellent book with all the details of these versatile shrubs.

The first half deals with all the "technical" aspects from garden sites, propagation, cultural needs, where the genus originated and an interesting chapter about bloom color and soil requirements. We learn that color changes were first recorded in the late 18th century and since then botanists have tried many experiments to learn what works. Their results are here.

The second half contains the portraits giving all pertinent information of this large genus. The color photographs are excellent; I especially like the drawings of the leaves illustrating the shapes and veining, and individual flowers showing their forms.

Dorling Kindersley has added four new titles to the Eyewitness Garden Handbooks. They are "Garden Trees" ($17.95), "Shrubs & Climbers" ($19.95), managing editor Francis Ritter, "Perennials" ($19.95) and "Roses" ($17.95), managing editor Helen Parker. Each book is divided into two sections and follows the same format.

The color plant portraits illustrate hundreds of plants and includes desirable information such as habit, light requirements, cultivation and size. If a generic group is large, additional information is given, for instance dahlias, chrysanthemums and hostas. A quick flip through the pages further shows that the plants are grouped into specific categories for seasonal interest or type (i.e. roses). The second section deals with growing techniques and plant care.

"Taylor's Guide to Orchids," Judy White (Houghton Mifflin, $19.95), is suitable for experienced or novice growers. All cultural information and photographs of more than 300 varieties of orchids is included, and White has done a superb job.

High Hopes

There's still time to enter our High Hopes Sunflower Contest. Look for the entry form on page G3 of this section.

Marty Figley is an advanced master gardener based in Birmingham. You can leave her a message by dialing (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, then her mailbox number, 1859.

INVITING IDEAS

State fair party is blue ribbon winner

RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON

As a child and teenager, I loved going to the Michigan State Fair. When I was little, animals and kiddie rides were my passion. As I grew older, I'm sure my folks thought it was an ideal place for me and my friends to meet boys. Not so; well, usually not so; my interest was usually centered around food!

I guess some things never change. My mouth still waters when I think about carnival treats, things like tart-crisp apples glistening with caramel topped with roasted chopped nuts; cotton candy; batter-dipped, golden fried corn dogs; triple scoops of creamy ice-cream in a sugar cone; plump hot dogs topped with sauerkraut, onions and mustard; huge crispy, golden, too-hot-to-handle, french fries served in a paper cylinder splashed with vinegar (that was my Mom's favorite), and salt water taffy that stuck to your teeth, so much so, that you could taste it for nearly half a day.

I still enjoy those glorious foods, even cotton candy; they're my inspiration for a state fair theme party to celebrate the end of summer.

It's a great idea for a neighborhood get-together or weekend event for family and friends. You could even host blue ribbon contests for pie making, jams, and cakes. Have everyone bring his "best try" for each category and award blue ribbons. Take this idea one step further and make it a fund-raiser for your favorite local charity, church, synagogue or school.

Cover picnic tables with red-and-white checkered cloths and matching napkins, decorate with streamers, balloons, and metallic ribbon. Rent "State Fair" (1962) starring Pat Boone, Ann Margaret, Bobby Darin, Tom Ewell and Alice Faye, and plug in your VCR so everyone can watch. Serve corn dogs, french fries, and other carnival fare, or create a menu of blue-ribbon-winning recipes.

MAIDA HEATTER'S COUNTY-FAIR CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE

Yield: 12 generous portions

Cocoa Cake Layers

- 2 cups sifted cake flour
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 6 tablespoons strained unsweetened cocoa powder (preferably Dutch Process)
- 1/4 pound (1 stick) sweet butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 1/4 cups sugar
- 2 large eggs
- 1 cup milk

Adjust rack to center of the oven and preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Butter two 8-inch round layer-cake pans, dust them with flour, invert and tap lightly to shake out excess, and then set aside.

Sift together the flour, baking soda, salt, and cocoa and set aside.

In the large bowl of an electric mixer, cream the butter. Add the vanilla and then the sugar and beat well. Beat in the eggs one at a time, scraping the bowl with a rubber spatula and beating well after each addition.

On low speed add the sifted dry ingredients in three additions, alternating with the milk in two additions. Scrape the bowl with the spatula and beat only until smooth after each addition.

Divide the batter between the prepared pans and spread smoothly.

Bake for 35-40 minutes until the layers just begin to come away from the sides of the pans.

Cool the layers in the pans for 5 to 6 minutes. Then, with a small, sharp knife, cut around the sides to release. Cover each layer with a rack, invert, remove the pan, cover with another rack and invert again, leaving the right side up to finish cooling.

Prepare a flat cake plate or serving board by placing four strips of wax paper around the outer edges of the plate. Place one cooled cake layer upside down on the plate, checking to see that the papers touch the cake all around.

If you have a cake-decorating turntable or a lazy Susan, place the cake plate on it.

CHOCOLATE ICING

- 5 ounces (5 squares) unsweetened chocolate
- 1 cup heavy cream
- 1 1/4 cups sugar
- 1/4 cup (1 stick) sweet butter
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Chop the chocolate into small pieces – it is all right for them to be uneven – and set aside.

In a heavy 2 1/2- to 3-quart saucepan stir the cream and sugar to mix. With a wooden or rubber spatula stir over moderate heat until the mixture comes to a boil. Then reduce the heat and let simmer for exactly 6 minutes.

Remove from the heat, add the chocolate, stir until it is melted, then add the butter and stir until it is melted, Add the vanilla and stir.

Partially fill a large bowl with ice and water. Place the saucepan of icing in the bowl of ice water and stir frequently until completely cool. Then stir constantly until the mixture begins to thicken.

When the icing begins to thicken,

APPLIANCE DOCTOR

The doctor shares a personal story

JOE GAGNON

In 1979 I bought my existing business from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carmack, who had owned it for many years before and wanted to retire.

Today, Mr. Carmack, who is in his mid-80s, is in failing health; yet he maintains that sharp mental attitude that made him so successful. He lives with his daughter, Judy, and every few weeks I pick up some Kentucky Fried Chicken and we spend a few hours of conversation, which I so dearly love.

He is a man I have greatly admired for his business philosophy of helping others. I have used his principles for the past 17 years in business with the same belief that he has. What goes around comes around and when you do good for others, it comes back to you.

That wasn't the case in March 1995 when the Detroit News ran a front-page story with my picture, announcing to the world how the Appliance Doctor was taking Carmack Appliance into bankruptcy court and filing under Chapter 11. The embarrassment of it all was a very depressing period in my life. I blamed others when I should have blamed the one sole person responsible: myself.

Today, after 14 months of having the court watch everything over my shoulder, my company has been removed from Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Court. It has taken a lot of hard work and an attitude of knowing what the business can and cannot do. The court wasn't mean to me, but rather very cooperative in teaching me how to get out of this serious bind.

I have also felt a certain amount of pride at the end of all this. It is rare for a company in Chapter 11 to get out of the predicament it is in. All in all, it has been a very big lesson in the life of a guy who has always worried about others and didn't pay attention to what was going on around himself. Lesson learned.

Eighteen months ago I began doing my appliance show on WJR radio, which has proven to help others and achieve success. Much has happened during this period, and I'm sure you'll read about it soon in the columns of other writers. There has been so much written lately about this radio station that I stand so proud of that I feel I must defend their decisions of late.

Those who write the negative are those who don't work for WJR, and – without knowing the full scope of what's going on – show their ignorance to those of us who are in the know.

Many business experts inform corporations that they can't do things the way they used to; they have to change or they will stand still and fail. My bankruptcy might never have occurred if I would have followed the advice of experts. I'm sure you will see more changes at WJR, and they will be positive ones that incorporate good business sense and a continuing attitude of caring for their radio audience.

In closing this personal side story let me thank this newspaper for allowing me to write this weekly column and all the people along the way who have helped me. I want to thank all of you who read this column and listen to the radio show. I could never have achieved this limited amount of fame without the support of you. It is hard to explain how much I care for others without making it sound like a con job so I will just carry on doing what I do and try to make all of you proud of me. I can't do it without you.

Joe Gagnon, the Appliance Doctor, will answer your questions about maintaining and repairing large appliances. Gagnon is president of Carmack Appliances in Garden City and does a weekly radio program on WJR-AM. He is author of "First Aid from the Appliance Doctor," available at area bookstores.

remove it from the ice water and stir/beat briskly with a rubber or wooden spatula until it becomes smooth and thick enough to spread – or about like a very heavy mayonnaise. It should take only a few seconds or maybe a minute or so of stirring/beating. If the icing remains too soft, return it to the ice water briefly, then remove and stir/beat again.

When the icing is thick enough, quickly spread it about 1/3 inch thick over the cake on the plate. Cover with the second layer, placing it right side up (both flat sides meet in the middle), pour the remaining icing over the cake, and with a long, narrow metal spatula spread it over the top and sides of the cake. If you wish, form large swirls on the top, using the spatula to indent the icing from the outer rim toward the center in a rather abstract daisy shape.

Flower power: Careful composition allowed Monte Nagler to produce this interesting and impact-filled picture of a building detail in Avebury, England.

MONTE NAGLER

When we see an interesting building, we often photograph the entire structure, thinking this is the best way to capture it on film.

Yet buildings provide many opportunities for the photographer to create exciting and, in many ways, unusual images of scenes that are always present that the majority of people pass by without seeing. Even buildings that overall may be quite dull may offer terrific photographic potential.

What I'm referring to is photographing building details.

An ornate door handle, an unusual window arrangement, the graphic quality of a fire escape, a pattern of bricks or a section of peeling paint – all can provide excellent picture potential.

Churches, in particular, contain many photographic opportunities. Details of statues, columns, stained glass and stonework all would work well and could form the basis of a photographic essay.

You'll most likely need a telephoto lens to enable you to "move in close" to your building detail. Use a tripod to get your camera steady and fine tune the composition.

Time of day can play an important part in photographing details. When the sun is low or at an acute angle to the subject, textures are enhanced and shadows will play an important role in the final result.

They're wizards by design

BY MARY KLEMIC • AT HOME EDITOR

Those Art-Harrison people are wizards by design. That's the Art-Harrison Interior Design Studio, where they work wonders transforming or enhancing old pieces and creating others. Their handcrafted items are made specifically for the customer's space and needs.

"We're designers, we're not just decorators," said Arturo Sanchez, who is a partner in the Birmingham business with Barry Harrison.

A retrospective of Art-Harrison designs is displayed throughout Neiman-Marcus at the Somerset Collection, Big Beaver Road and Coolidge in Troy, through the first week in September. Art-Harrison designed exclusive furnishings for the store.

Art-Harrison also consists of Roberta Murray and Shane Inman, an intern from Michigan State University. The designers have tackled a wide variety of projects, for clients including a small family on a budget and a large law firm.

"It doesn't take any skill to throw gold at a project," Sanchez said. Rather, it takes thought to work within budget constraints, he said.

One project stayed within a $300 range.

"We did a real simple cottage-type look," Murray said. "We made (the client) so happy."

Fun in style

The designers convey a sense of fun as well as of style. Old cedar chests or bureaus become functional flights of fancy, painted with scenes that include family members or family history. A child's desk features flat "flowerpots" that fit into grooves to stand as adjustable bookends, and a drawer that swings out in an arc to the side rather than straight ahead.

"We strive to make things different, that have never been seen," Sanchez said.

Among the pieces on display at Neiman-Marcus are zebra hide stools with bronze hardware and nickel head trim. The stools are flat so they can be used as tables as well as for seating. The hides belonged to the client.

Also featured at the store is an ottoman called "Little Miss Muffet Meets Judy Jetson," with hand painted fabric and silver-leafed, futuristic-looking legs; benches and tables with curved legs and hand brushed finish; and sconces with hand painted wood and shades made of coleus leaves from the front walk of the designers' office.

One customer had a marble piece from France. The designers used it as the top of a vanity table. The legs of the table were covered with suede, secured with tiny nickel tacks arranged in a curve to conceal the seam. The pastel tones of the marble matched the soft colors of the dressing room (converted from a spare room) where the table was placed.

For another client who collected lace, the designers fashioned an unusual display piece. The furnishing is like a ladder that hangs on a wall. Longer items can be draped in the back, while shorter ones can be arranged on shelves with copper backing, tilted for view.

In other projects, a kitchen was given a personal touch, with family members selecting different pieces of Pewabic tile to be arranged on the wall; and the designers devised a way to hang a large tapestry. Instead of laying flat against the wall, the tapestry curves – it has a forest scene, and the effect is like being in a forest.

Put to use

These wizards work their magic with a number of tools and equipment.

"Tim Allen would be jealous," Sanchez said.

Nothing goes to waste, and almost anything can be put to use. A mahogany day bed Art-Harrison designed for a Detroit Symphony Orchestra Showhouse featured a seagrass mattress.

"We like to use all different (types) of material," Harrison said.

The designers are particular about every detail. They painstakingly knotted material by hand to form a basket-weave look on some tuffets.

"We make sure everything's right," Harrison said.

"We both work on every project."

They will present clients with gifts, such as a furnishing or accessory made of odds and ends from the project.

The business partners balance the avant-garde and the conservative. Sanchez studied industrial design at Center for Creative Studies and interior design at Wayne State University. Harrison, a member of the Kentucky Department of the Arts, studied fine arts at Eastern Kentucky University and at Morehead. The two have paintings at the Ashley-Chris Gallery in Grosse Pointe.

Their future plans include developing a line of china and stemware, but they will continue delighting clients in residences and businesses.

"Half of our customers (become) our best friends," Sanchez said.

Choose wallpaper that's easy to install

(AP) - If you can survive scanning endless pages of wallpaper books and find a pattern that suits your decor, color scheme and budget, hanging the wallpaper will come easy.

For your first job, choose a wallpaper that is easy to install, such as an inexpensive (less than $20 a roll) pretrimmed vinyl paper. Vinyl wallcoverings come paper-backed and fabric-backed, and both go up nicely. These papers don't stretch out of shape, even if you reposition them several times on the wall. Fabric-backed papers are more expensive and well suited for bathrooms or kitchens, where humidity can be a problem. Fabric-backed vinyls can be scrubbed and easily stripped off walls at a later date.

You can choose between prepasted wallpaper and those requiring adhesive. Prepasted paper only needs to be dunked or soaked in warm water to activate the paste impregnated in its back. Other wallcoverings are hung on the wall with an adhesive applied with a roller. If you use one of these papers, ask your wallpaper dealer for an appropriate adhesive.

Look for paper with a pattern repeat or drop of 10 inches or less. Pattern drop or repeat refers to a pattern's length (a repeat or drop of 10 inches is a pattern that repeats itself every 10 inches). The larger the drop, the more paper is wasted getting the pattern to align between the pieces.

You'll find the pattern repeat on the back of each pattern in your wallpaper sample books and on the roll's wrapping. By choosing a pattern with a small repeat for your first project, you can avoid excessive waste.

Build success into your first attempt by choosing a simple bedroom. Don't try a bathroom, kitchen or two-story hallway at first.

First, look in the back of the wallpaper book for a notice that tells you the area of each roll. Most rolls of American wallpaper contain about 36 square feet of material. Allowing for waste due to the pattern drop and trimming, the roll covers about 30 square feet. A roll of European (metric) wallpaper contains about 28 square feet and covers about 23 square feet of wall (these are based on wallpaper with a drop under 18 inches).

To calculate how much paper you need, first find the wall area. Add the length of each wall, and multiply this total by the ceiling height. Multiply the height of each door and each window by its width. Add the door and window areas and subtract this from the wall area. This gives you the surface area to be papered. Add about 20 percent to the total papered area to allow for the few bad cuts (inevitable on your first job).

Divide this number by the area that your wallpaper roll covers, and that's the number of wallpaper rolls that you need. Make sure the paper is from the same lot or batch. The batch number is stamped on each roll, and all the rolls should have the same number. If you run short and have to order extra paper later, you might get a roll from a different batch run. The color or repeat pattern might not match exactly, even if you order the same pattern from the same store.

Clean the walls thoroughly and repair holes, cracks or dents.Wash or paint the room's woodwork and trim. Unless the woodwork is natural or its paint is in good shape, it will probably look dingy next to the new paper. It's easier to paint it now than after the paper is in place.

LET'S REMODEL

The right windows save energy cost.

Q. My husband and I plan to build a new home next year when we retire. Can energy efficient construction techniques make that much of a difference in comfort and energy costs down the road? We plan to stay in the house for many years.

A. Energy costs do affect a homeowner's monthly budgets, so it makes sense to take some time to formulate an energy-efficient plan for new home construction or even just a room addition to an existing house.

An obvious way to improve energy efficiency would be to replace your furnace with a 90-percent-plus-efficiency unit. Basement walls can be insulated to four feet below grade on the exterior or interior, and house wraps and better insulation are good options. Even caulk around windows, doors and at sills will reduce air infiltration into the home.

The selection and quality of windows and doors is often overlooked as more homeowners are becoming involved in the design and construction decisions for their new houses and remodeling projects. This is due to the bewildering array of choices available in this product category.

The subject warrants more research than others because windows and doors account for approximately 40 percent of the energy losses in your home. Additionally, window and door designs are limited only by your imagination and play a dramatic role in the look of the new house or room addition. When selection windows and doors, the following three factors should be considered:

- glass options
- type of framework
- air infiltration

Consumers no longer choose just one type of glass (glazing) for the openings in their entire house. For instance, windows on the sunny southern or western sides of a house should have solar-protective glass to help limit heat gain and ultraviolet fading problems. Windows on the north and east sides may need glass with high insulating properties to protect from blustery cold winter winds.

Other windows may face heavy street traffic or active play areas, so glass with noise-insulating properties may be needed. This type of designing will make you more comfortable, lower future energy costs and allow designs with large windows to be used without sacrificing efficiencies

Framework incorporates the construction, insulation, exterior cladding, hardware, weather-stripping and thermal breaks of the windows or doors. Look for a manufacturer that offers top-quality manufacturing, freedom of design and trouble-free performance year after year and backs his promises with a good written warranty on components and glass.

Obviously, you should buy your windows from a company with an established reputation so it will be able to service your warranty.

Comparing different windows in terms of air infiltration can be a simple and accurate process since the National Fenestration Rating Council has established standard testing and labeling for manufacturers. All windows should come with an easy-to-read label.

The lower the "U" value, the better the energy performance.

Modern construction techniques make the home a thermal envelope. Homeowners make openings in their thermal envelope to allow natural light to filter in, ventilate in a controlled way and meet their personal design objectives.

The choice regarding windows and doors is an important one and well worth the extra time and investment up front. These decisions can help save you money in energy costs down the road.

Symposium shows how to place trees

By Marty Figley
Special Writer

Many people are aware of the benefit of using trees in our landscapes, and it is important to make the right selection when we plant one on our property.

By learning the requirements of the tree we are considering, whether it is a native or a new cultivar, we can better assure our success.

With this in mind, our Ohio neighbors in Columbus will conduct a one-day tree symposium that should be of great interest to many. Ohio State University's Chadwick Arboretum and the American Horticultural Society will host the second annual Great American Garden Lecture Series 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 15, at the OSU Fawcett Center, 2400 Olentangy River Road. "Trees are Terrific: Putting Them in Their Place" will focus on selection, design, maintenance and survival of trees in urban landscapes.

A $60 registration fee includes a box lunch if pre-registered. Members of the American Horticultural Society can register for $45. For information, call the Chadwick Arboretum at (614) 292-4678 or (614) 688-3479, or the AHS at (703) 768-5700.

"Participants will discover the diversity and beauty of new and native trees that are used to create contemplative wooded retreats in a small-scale garden," said Janet Oberliesen, program coordinator and development officer at the OSU Chadwick Arboretum. "The speakers will absolutely capture your imagination and give you a new appreciation of trees!"

Topics and speakers are: "Designing Their Space," landscape architect Warren Byrd Jr. of the University of Virginia; "Rediscovering Our Native Trees," plantsman Jim Wilson of "Victory Garden"; "Engineering Our Future Trees," Frank Santamour of the U.S. National Arboretum; "Maintaining Healthy Trees," horticulturist Nina Bassuk of Cornell University; and "I Look at Trees from Both Sides Now," associate professor Jim Chatfield of OSU Extension. A tour of the OSU Tree Research Program is included.

Proceeds from this symposium will benefit the educational programming of the OSU Chadwick Arboretum and the AHS.

Quick, easy decorating ideas beautify home

Are you plagued by unsightly rings on your coffee table? Distressed by the scratches on your favorite rocker or the burn on the antique dining table that has been in your family for generations? Perhaps you're looking to redecorate an old room, but just don't think you have the time. Never fear – help is on the way, and her name is Leslie Linsley.

One of the most trusted craft experts in America, Linsley has published more than 45 craft books and writes two syndicated columns on home decorating for First magazine. Her latest book, "Leslie Linsley's 15-minute Decorating Ideas" (St. Martin's Griffin), is simple enough for the novice, yet imaginative enough to appeal to the expert. The topics covered include:

- Instant and weekend makeovers
- Yard-sale chic and bargain shopping
- Quick and easy changeovers for every season
- Holiday decorating
- Quick fix-ups

Readers can learn everything from selecting the right paint to setting the table for a seashore dinner. This book is a must for anyone looking to add a little beauty to a home. Here is an example of the helpful hints you will find:

QUICK FURNITURE FIXES

- Scratches – To quickly conceal minor scratches on cherry, maple or mahogany, use Mercurochrome or iodine. Use liquid shoe polish in a color to match walnut or oak.

If there's a deep scratch, touch it up with stain. Then fill the cavity with polyurethane. Let dry, and sand lightly with extra-fine sandpaper. Go over the area, and the entire surface if needed, with paste wax.

- Gouges – Plastic wood can be used to fill deep gouges. If the gouges are shallow, they can easily be sanded and restained.
- White marks – Water rings don't have to be permanent. It's easy to remove them with a mixture of toothpaste and baking soda. If the white ring was caused by heat, rub with a cloth and mayonnaise. Wipe, let dry, then rub with furniture oil.
- Burns – Use a cotton swab dipped in nail polish remover to rub the darkened area. Take care not to touch the surrounding surface. Mix equal parts of nail polish remover and clear nail polish, and dab with the brush over the scarred area.

The wall-to-wall carpeting is threadbare and stained in high-traffic places, but it's still good around the edges.

Or the hardwood floors, just redone, are worth showing off.

Either case calls for an area rug, or rugs. Area rugs _ especially those that reek of old money _ are more stylish today than carpeting.

To some extent, this is merely a turning of the wheel of floor fashion. But it coincides with an abundance of affordable reproduction rugs _ Orientals, Aubussons, needlepoints and more _ and consumer desire for ``conversation rugs'' that reflect personal interests.

"The reproductions in some cases are so well done that they can fool even the keenest eye," says Bebe Winkler, an interior designer in New York.

The ample supply also coincides with the increasing scarcity _ and rising prices _ of antique rugs, and with a growing interest in antiques in general, according to David Amini, president of Beauvais Carpets Inc., a to-the-trade importer in New York.

With so many appealing designs, there's a temptation to use more than one in a room. Winkler put two Arts and Crafts style rugs in her living room _ a 9-by-12 and a 6-by-9 that share general design and color themes.

Rather than reproductions, Winkler prefers antique Orientals which have faded to a fine patina, but budgets rarely permit such extravagances. Amini says a 10-by-14 antique Aubusson might sell for $50,000, an excellent copy for about $14,000. Good copies of needlepoints and early 20th-century Arts and Crafts rugs are in the $3,000 to $5,000 range.

Even more affordable are area rugs found in carpet departments, specialty stores and mail-order catalogs. Rugs that buck tradition and are alive with color and pattern beckon the buyer.

"Consumers seem to be looking for rugs that reflect their personal interests, whether it be fruits and vegetables, birds, golfing, flowers, dogs or anything else," says Pam O'Toole, carpet fashion coordinator for Shaw Industries of Dalton, Ga.

Several new patterns were shown recently in New York by the Carpet and Rug Institute. From Milliken & Co., LaGrange, Ga., comes a field of quirky birdhouses with a border of birds. Joy Carpets Inc., of Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., introduced a rug featuring brightly-colored balls with letters and numbers.

There's no rule on whether you should shop for furniture or floor coverings first, but those in the know generally start with furniture. A furniture plan helps determine rug size, andupholstery swatches can be carried along while rug shopping to helpin pattern and color selection. Make sure the fabric swatches are of good size. Little can be learned from a 2-inch square, Winkler says.

"People will find that stripes and small pattern fabrics will work with almost any patterned carpet, but large multicolor floral prints will present more problems," Winkler says.

If you're doing more than one room, she says, don't worry about using the same period or similar colors. A different type of area rug in every room is not only acceptable, it is more interesting.

To make the most of your money, choose rugs smaller than 12-by-18 feet because reproductions generally are made in smaller sizes. Therefore, large sizes are disproportionately expensive because they are either custom or antique.

Room-size rugs typically leave a 12-to 16-inch border of wood floor showing. But smaller sizes can be used if you cluster furniture around an area rug, rather than on it. Winkler usually allows about 4 inches of bare floor in front of the sofa. A rubber pad under the rug and a coffee table or ottoman on the rug can anchor it.

Lighten up your life with a sunroom

(NAPS)—Studies show that as Americans are spending more time at home, they are investing more in home amenities to help them better enjoy free time. Sunrooms are one such amenity. Ranked as the top feature in new homes by more than one-third of consumers in a survey by Professional Builder & Remodeler, sunrooms have become the room of choice for many families.

The natural light, open airy feeling, and view of the outdoors create a unique and refreshing environment in the home that appeals to those looking for a retreat. In fact, relaxation is the number one reason homeowners add glass enclosures, according to a survey by Patio Enclosures, Inc., the nation's largest sunroom manufacturer.

When considering a glass enclosure, consumers should consider three types of rooms: three-season rooms, year-round insulated rooms and solariums.

■ Three-Season Enclosures

Three-season rooms are glass enclosed, with large windows or sliding doors and screens on all sides, and a solid roof which may contain glass panels. This type of room is the most popular due to its moderate cost and versatility. Three-season rooms are not designed to be heated, and are typically closed off from the rest of the house in the winter.

■ Year-Round Enclosures

A year-round insulated enclosure looks similar to a three-season room, but it is built with insulated glass so it can be heated and cooled for use in every season.

■ Solariums

Solariums are made with glass on all sides with a curved or straight-eave glass roof for a complete feeling of outdoors. Because they are made entirely with insulated glass, they can also be used throughout the year. Solariums are the most expensive sunroom option, and they are considered the most stylish.

Common to all sunroom types is a good return on investment. The National Association of Remodelers reports glass enclosures provide a 70-percent return nationwide.

And to maximize energy savings, Patio Enclosures, Inc. recommends separating your sunroom from the rest of the house with a door.

For a free booklet about sunroom types, and how to choose a sunroom contractor, call Patio Enclosures, Inc. at 1-800-480-1966. Or write Patio Enclosures, Inc., Free Booklet, P.O. Box 186, Macedonia, Ohio 44056.

Shade challenges gardeners

BY J ROBERT NUSS
FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) – Shady gardens and landscapes often present the greatest challenges to the home gardener. With a better understanding of the types of shade you have, the nature of the site, and the plants you choose, it is possible to create an attractive landscape in all settings.

Before you begin to plan and plant, you need to know the types of shade you have and their limitations so you can select plants that will grow under those specific conditions.

Full shade under trees with heavy foliage presents the biggest challenge. Such areas get almost no direct sunlight during the growing season, allow for little air circulation, and rarely have enough ground moisture to support additional plants. These conditions can be improved by pruning trees high for more light and air, but be selective and don't destroy the shape of the trees. There will still be competition with tree roots for moisture.

To enhance the interest of full shade areas, apply a mulch around trees and define the edges between the mulch and the lawn where the shade pattern is the heaviest. Large mulched beds under trees serve to unify a planting and provide a growing area for surface ground covers like English ivy (Hedera helix). This is one ground cover that seems to tolerate the low light and moisture levels often found under dense tree canopies.

Open shade is found in areas open to the sky but shaded by high walls, buildings, rows of shrubs, or trees. Some deciduous flowering shrubs do nicely in these areas, but most will have fewer flowers than they would in sun or lighter shade. Select light-colored flower varieties for best results. Coralberry (Symphoricarpos species), warty barberry (Berberis verruculosa), Japanese holly (Ilex crenata), and Oregon hollygrape (Mahonia Aquifolium) will all do well in open shade.

Half-shaded areas get some direct sunlight in the morning or afternoon. Many broadleaf evergreens, such as Japanese andromeda (Pieris japonica), drooping leucothoe (Leucothoe fontanesiana), many varieties of rhododendron, and mountain laurel (Kalmia latifolia), do well in open shade as long as the site is protected from winter wins.

Areas with light shade get a broken flow of sunlight throughout the day from light filtering through the leaves of trees on adjacent properties. Nearly all species of viburnums and most deciduous flowering and evergreen shrubs perform well in light shade. Some plants to consider here would be arrowwood viburnum (Viburnum dentatum), mapleleaf viburnum (Viburnum acerifolium), witchhazel (Hamamelis species), or chokeberry (Aronia specie).

Firms learn how to handle disaster

BY ARLENE FUNKE
SPECIAL WRITER

Helping out: Firefighters help victims of the the mock disaster, which was staged so businesses can learn to deal with disaster.

Hundreds of people are working in their eight-story, mostly glass Troy office building when emergency sirens begin shrieking.

Outside, a blackened sky and high winds present the possibility of a tornado coming.

Confused and panicky people jam elevators, rushing to the downstairs lobby. There, crowds of people are jammed up against doors and windows, oblivious to the danger of injury by shattered glass.

"In an emergency, would you know what to do?" asks Jane Buiting, a Bloomfield Hills emergency preparedness consultant.

"As a property manager, you are responsible," said Buiting, 45, who formed Disasters by Design, Inc., a consulting service, four years ago.

Buiting experienced that Troy incident a few years ago, recalling a scene of "absolute, mass confusion."

Fortunately, the storm didn't spawn a tornado, and no one was hurt, but "the potential was there," she said.

Managers of office buildings, apartments and other structures where people work, live or spend time have "minimal" knowledge of what to do in an emergency, according to Buiting.

"Most employees are told nothing, and assume everything is okay," Buiting said. "That's a mistake."

People don't like to think about how they would respond to an emergency, said Pete Baldwin, deputy fire chief in Farmington Hills.

"The biggest problem we have in emergency management is convincing people they need it," said Baldwin, 43.

Buiting is a former property manager with 16 years' experience. She formed her company after hearing how colleagues in other cities suffered after hurricanes and earthquakes.

Buiting works with companies, property-management organizations, units of government and police and fire teams on ways to protect people and buildings.

Her specialty is organizing mock disasters. Most are sponsored by professional property-management organizations as training for its members.

"Seeing is believing," Buiting said. "It's prevention. The emphasis is on saving lives."

Managers of office, commercial and residential buildings recognize safety needs, said Robert Gerholz, president of a 130- member local chapter of the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM). Members of this organization earn, through education and training, the designation certified property manager.

"I think the whole idea is good one, either in-house or with a mock disaster," said Gerholz, 40. "There is always concern about the safety of tenants."

So far, Buiting has organized 14 mock disasters, mostly in other states. Her only local job was in 1992, when she coordinated a mock gas line explosion at a Farmington Hills Clarion Hotel, now a Best Western.

In Farmington Hills, many safety features were incorporated during the construction boom of the 1980s, there is always a potential for emergency evacuation, said Baldwin, whose department took part in the mock disaster at the Clarion.

Property managers typically worry about fires, natural disasters tornadoes, earthquakes or hurricanes, depending on the area and explosions.

More disturbing, in recent years, has been the increase in shootings in the workplace, and fears about bombings and other terrorist activity.

Potential clients are corporations. managers of office buildings and apartment complexes and units of government. Buiting obtains most of her clients through referral.

Buiting works closely with police and fire experts, and rescue response organizations such as the Red Cross which have great combined expertise.

"There is a real need to bridge the link between the private and public sectors," Buiting said.

Buiting's fees depend on the complexity of the job, ranging from a few hundred dollars for a simple response plan, to thousands of dollars for a mock disaster. Her most costly project was $15,000.

"Most property owners do care about safety," Buiting said. "They're not sure of their expertise."

When Buiting organizes mock disasters, she creates a script. Special effects, such as loud noises, fake smoke and theatrical "blood" for dramatic effect. Rescue workers, emergency officials and Red Cross personnel must respond quickly to evacuate people and treat "victims."

Emergencies cause panic, said Ed Amos, American Red Cross director of emergency response for Southeast Michigan , who took part in the mock disaster at the Clarion.

"Without a plan, it's difficult to respond effectively," said Amos. "Drills reinforce our preparedness (and) give us an opportunity to work with other response agencies."

At the Clarion, fake smoke billowed through the hallways. Police and firefighters from Farmington Hills and surrounding communities rushed to the scene.

Ladders and special equipment were used to evacuate students who posed as victims, some of whom stood at windows screaming.

The "victims," who "originally thought it was a joke" got caught up in the drama, Buiting said.

"It was a good drill," Buiting said. "There are so many problems with disaster. If you don't know what to do, at least you can learn what not to do."

Each drill includes a critique to see how rescue attempts could be improved.

"I'd like to think that things would run that smoothly in a real incident, but I'm not sure it would," said Baldwin.

George Bonk, executive director of Building Owners and Managers Association of Metropolitan Detroit (BOMA) is hoping to schedule a mock disaster for the 260 members of his organization.

"I think this would be a fantastic learning experience for everyone, not just my members," said Bonk, 61. "I have a plan, but we just can't pull it off."

Planning a successful mock disaster requires six to nine months of planning, finding a suitable location, and obtaining cooperation with governmental units and rescue organizations, according to Buiting.

Bonk believes fears about possible adverse publicity, and fears about the bombings in New York, Oklahoma City and Atlanta are blocking his efforts.

For information about Disasters by Design, call 810-334- 2843.

Amid the action: Jane Buiting walks through the mock disaster outside the Clairion Hotel in Farmington Hills.

What to look for:

All commercial office buildings and apartments should have an emergency response plan, say experts.

People may need to be evacuated from buildings because of fire, natural disasters such as storms and earthquakes, explosions or other emergencies. A quick, correct response is essential

"In case of a fire, most people die in the first five minutes," emergency preparedness consultant Jane Buiting said. "Most people haven't gone through a fire drill since they were in school."

Some factors Buiting takes into consideration when preparing an individualized response plan include:

- Layout of building and location of exits.
- Possible storage of hazardous materials in building.
- Location of emergency shelters.
- Whether someone has been designated responsible for calling 911.

Acapulco condominium could be problematic

REAL ESTATE QUERIES

ROBERT M. MEISNER

Q. I am interested in buying a condominium in Acapulco on the bay. I am wondering if you have any information concerning the availability of such a high rise.

A. As in most resort areas in Mexico, condominiums are being promoted by developers. Unfortunately, when you buy a condominium in Mexico, you are not able to get title to the property if you are a foreigner. However, you basically have ownership rights. Another problem with buying in Acapulco is that it is almost impossible to obtain financing because of inflation. A new set of high rises that are going up in Acapulco which I recently have inspected can be purchased for $344,000 in U.S. dollars with a downpayment of $120,000 and 36 payments of $6,222. There would also be an insurance obligation to pay $3,860 with respect to the land contract payments. The condominiums have a number of fine amenities and are on the ocean. There are opportunities for purchase, but, again, caution may be the better part of valor in regard to buying real estate in Mexico at this time.

Q. We are having problems with our exterior siding and wonder against whom we might have recourse. The developer says that the manufacturer is responsible, and we are not sure who we should be pursuing. Do you have any recommendations?

A. Normally, the developer/builder, as captain of the ship, is responsible for the product that is being sold to the consumer. Even though the manufacturer may be culpable, while the consumer may have a claim as well against the manufacturer, its most direct claim is with the builder/developer that presumable provided it with an express warranty and/or a warranty implied by law regarding the purchase of the house.

The builder/developer may seek recourse against the manufacturer if there was a manufacturing defect as opposed to a problem with installation. In any event, you should consult with an attorney knowledgeable in these affairs who can examine your particular needs in your particular situation.

Robert M. Meisner is an Oakland County area attorney concentrating his practice in the areas of condominiums, real estate, corporate law and litigation. You are invited to submit topics that you would like to see discussed in this column, including questions about condominiums, by writing Robert M. Meisner, 30200 Telegraph Road, Suite 467, Bingham Farms MI 48025. This column provides general information and should not be construed as legal opinion.

Housing starts fall

BY JOHN D. MCCLAIN
ASSOCIATED PRESS WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) – Housing starts fell 1.3 percent in July to the lowest level in four months but remained relatively high despite higher mortgage rates.

The picture was mixed regionally. Starts rose in the Northeast and the Midwest but fell in the South and West.

The Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments totaled 1.46 million units at a seasonally adjusted annual rate, down from a revised 1.47 million in June. The June estimate originally was 1.48 million.

It was the smallest number of starts since last March, when builders laid foundations at a 1.44 million rate. It also was the third straight decline, the first time that has happened since January-March 1995.

The downward trend was consistent with the recent performance of most other sectors of the economy. It also gave the latest suggestion the Federal Reserve will not feel compelled to raise short-term interest rates next week to head off inflation pressure. Despite generally rising mortgage rates and the recent slowing, starts during the first seven months of 1996 still were 12.4 percent above those of a corresponding period a year earlier. Starts for all of 1995 totaled 1.35 million.

But as the most interest-sensitive sector of the economy, housing was bound eventually to respond to higher rates.

In July, 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages averaged 8.25 percent, down from 8.32 percent a month earlier but well above the 7.03 percent average last January, according to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

The monthly payment on a $100,000 mortgage with a 7 percent interest rate is $665, while the payment on the same loan with a 8.5 percent rate is $769 – a difference of $104.

The National Association of Home Builders' Housing Market Index fell 3 points to 57 in August, suggesting further slowing to come. It was the third consecutive decline in the index, based on surveys of association members.

"What we're seeing now is the negative impact of higher rates on demand for new homes," said association president Randy Smith of Walnut Creek, Calif. "Builders are definitely experiencing fewer sales and less traffic."

Still, new home sales remained above a 700,000 annual rate for a fifth straight month in June, the first such five-month string since the November 1986-April 1987 period.

Analysts contend that job and income growth and upbeat consumer confidence often offset the effects of higher mortgage rates.

Applications for building permits, often a gauge of future activity, rose 2.6 percent to a 1.45 million rate. It was the first advance in three months.

Single-family starts – 80 percent of new home construction – plunged 5.7 percent in July, to a 1.13 million rate.
