Dear Readers,

Good morning. Today is the beginning of a new era for the Plymouth Observer.

We have researched, planned and planned some more for this day.

Our mission remains the same, to give readers community news that is unavailable anywhere else.

In today's newspaper you will find a Health section and business news. A new page in the Sports & Recreation section profiles a local snowmobiling club. Also featured are columns on bowling, running and nature.

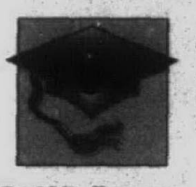

Other sections new to our Sunday publication include New Homes, Real Estate and Arts & Leisure. In addition our Employment section has been expanded.

Thank you for welcoming us into your home and for allowing us to "put a little sun in your Sundays." with the Plymouth Observer.

Sincerely,

Banks Dishman,

'Choice' is a budget option

Plymouth-Canton school officials have proposed enrolling "schools of choice" students to generate extra revenue so the district won't have a negative cash flow after building new schools.

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

For the third time in seven weeks, Plymouth-Canton school officials presented a multi-year financial projection; the latest one indicating the district won't have a negative cash flow after building new schools.

The board of education is expected to set an election date of March 22 at its 7 p.m. meeting Tuesday, Feb. 4.

Voters would be asked to approve a 25-year, $79.7 million bond issue to fund a new elementary school in southwest Canton, a new high school at Joy and Beck roads, and improvements throughout the district.

The most recent numbers show a surplus, or fund balance, of $4.5 million after six years. The district could realize extra revenue by enrolling 125 "schools-of-choice" students from other districts. School officials said that might not be necessary, depending on enrollment increases from within the district.

"I'm pleased. This proposal shows we don't have to enter into deficit spending," Superintendent Charles Little said at Tuesday's board meeting. "This projection is much stronger, because it takes advantage of the existing school code that allows school districts to become districts of choice if enrollment is off."

Adding 25 elementary students in 1999-2000 and 100 high school students in 2000-01 "would generate $800,000 in the second year, which in a $100 million budget is significant," said Little. "This should give people confidence that we can open buildings even if enrollment projections are wrong. I take a lot of courage from this."

The per-pupil state foundation grant is slated to increase 2.5 percent each year from the current level of $5,677.

The district's Dec. 10 projection

Residents say it's about community

What makes Plymouth a good place to live? We asked longtime and new residents what attracted them. We also asked planners what goes into a community, checked out gathering places and took a look at history.

BY LAURIE HUMPHREY
STAFF WRITER

Downtown Plymouth is the top jewel in the Plymouth area's crown of many gems according to residents, both new and old.

Coming in ahead of schools, fire and police service and proximity to family and friends, city and township residents extolled the virtues of the downtown area.

"It's the proximity," said Therese Gall, a 20-year township resident, when asked what attracted her to Plymouth. "All the services are available here.

"We have good grocers, good pharmacies.... There's something for everyone in Plymouth."

"I like to be able to walk to places," echoed Mark Oppat, a 12-year-resident of Plymouth's Old Village, who appreciates the closeness of services. "Within walking distance, there's the movies, a record store, restaurants..."

Business owner Fred Hill knows first hand about the benefits of downtown shop keeping. After living in the city for 31 years, Hill is still impressed with the area both as a businessman and a resident.

"I was drawn to Plymouth for business," he admits. "It was opportune at the time."

But "it is the quality of life" which has kept him there.

"It's the Arts Council, a symphony, a fourth of July parade, the Plymouth Ice Festival...I could go on and on."

Gall feels "it's the people who make the community," referring to the number of volunteers who come together to organize events like the Fourth of July parade and the Plymouth Ice Spectacular. She is one of those volunteers, and therefore, would never think of leaving Plymouth.

"I've gotten involved in the community and I don't feel like starting over again," she said.

More subdivisions are planned

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Plans for two subdivisions and a condominium unit won approvals varying from preliminary to final approval Tuesday from Plymouth Township trustees:

■Trustees approved a final plat for the Village Cove subdivision, to be built north of Wilcox Road, west of Shadywood Drive and east of Edward Hines Drive. The subdivision, to be built by developer Donald Treder, will contain 22 homes. Minimum lot size in the subdivision is 72,000 square feet.

■A modification to the final site plan for the Mallard's Pond condominium project was also approved. The condominium, under construction by S & S Homes, will have 55-58 units at the southeast corner of Ann Arbor Road and Hillcrest Drive.

A developer had taken the township to court in hopes of winning approval for commercial development there. The township administration and the developer settled on condominiums.

■Trustees also approved a tentative preliminary plat for the Woodlore South subdivision, on the east side of Beck Road north of Joy Road and west of Westbriar Subdivision No. 1. The subdivision, to be built by developer Multi Building Co. Inc., is to have 63 units. The minimum lot size will

Approval of the preliminary plat passed the board of trustees 6-1 with treasurer Ron Edwards voting no.

Edwards said he was concerned with an order pertaining to the project, from Wayne County road officials. They say a road should connect the proposed subdivision, Woodlore South, to Westbriar No. 1.

"My concern is with the taxpayers who live in the subdivision east of it," Edwards said, adding several have opposed a connecting road.

"The developer and the township worked out an agreeable solution, and the developer has been more than cordial with what he's supposed to do," Edwards said.

"But the county said no, you have to put the connector road in. Our public safety division said no, you didn't need it," he said, adding the issue won't be resolved until a final plat is presented.

"I think this is an issue between the developer and the county, hopefully it will get resolved with the county," Edwards said.

showed the district's surplus dropping to under $1 million from $4.5 million at the end of five years.

The Dec. 17 financial forecast showed a fund balance of $2.6 million. Re-examined at that time were transportation costs, Medicaid claims, parking revenue, and staffing at the proposed third high school.

This time, John Birchler, executive director for business, looked to other sources of revenue, as well as expenditures. He projects a "break even budget every year.

"We altered our teacher-student ratio from 25-to-1. For every 27 students, we will have an additional teacher," he said.

Start-up costs for the high school were changed to include one full year of principal/secretary time, previously budgeted at half a year, Birchler said. Also added was $250,000 for an athletic program (previously not budgeted) at the new high school; and $25,000 for shuttles to transport students from the new school to the existing high schools for classes like auto shop and drama.

Also included is a reduction to 1.5 percent from 3 percent in the Consumer Price Index applied to non-salary costs. "Not all such costs have historically received a CPI budget adjustment," said Birchler.

"Salary projections have been increased from 1.25 percent to 1.5 percent on schedule. Utility projections have been adjusted to reflect savings from the Performance Contract Energy Program," he added.

"Non-salary building allocations, such as block grants, field trips, supplies and staff development have been maintained at the 1996-97 level of $60 per stuSu

Board vice president Mike Maloney noted that the projected 4-percent fund balance for the year 2001-02 is below recommended levels of 5 - 6 percent.

"At some point, we need to have a conversation at the board level as to what is the appropriate level for us. Plymouth-Canton is relatively low, at least when compared to other districts around us. We have to balance what our cash flow needs are."

The fund balance needs to be available for short-term borrowing, as well as for contingencies, Maloney added.

Board treasurer Sue Davis said, "It seems we keeping changing these numbers. Are we going to stick with something?"

Maloney suggested "refining through budget time, and then adopting this for a six-month cycle."

Board president Mark Horvath recommended "looking at dates six months apart; just before the budget workshop, and when school starts.

"We all need to take part in this, and not look at it as something the board is going to do," Horvath said to a full house in the board's meeting room. "I would encourage you to get involved. Let's talk about assumptions in public."

History lessons hit close to home

STAFF WRITER

Area communities are looking ahead to the past.

The presence of museums and active commissions shows that the preservation of history is important around Wayne County.

Freeways and neighborhoods, businesses and shopping centers fill spaces once occupied by farmland and wild forests.

A sawmill, a post office, a blacksmith shop and a store made up the first business district in Garden City.

Plymouth was the site of the Alter Car Co. 1914-16, and the Daisy Air Rifle Co. was started there in 1886 (it gave Plymouth the title of "Air Rifle Capital of the World").

Redford Township once stretched over 30 square miles, from Inkster Road to Greenfield and from Eight Mile to Joy.

Such times may seem long ago, but communities haven't forgotten their roots. To visit area historical museums is to share in the pride felt about local history. Vital volunteers and groups are looking for ways to keep the past alive even as museums and ongoing programs are going strong.

"It's not so much important to preserve as it's a matter of human hope," said Jane Soltesz, vice president of the Livonia Historical Society and publicist for the Livonia Historical Commission.

"The people who lived 50, 100 years ago ... had it just as tough as we do. Man has gone ahead and made things better.

"You feel a connection," said Soltesz, who also chairs the Greenmead 2000 committee, a panel planning for Greenmead, the city's historical village at Eight Mile and Newburgh. "You know where you're coming from."

Livonia has two city commissions involved in historical preservation. The preservation commission is a watchdog for buildings and historic areas. The historical commission's responsibilities are archival.

Greenmead features buildings that show life from the 1850s to 1915. It is the site for such events as a Halloween walk, and a visit by Peter Rabbit in the spring. Teachers take classes to the old school building there. Every Christmas a different theme is presented.

History doesn't mean antiquity. For Beth Stewart, director of the Plymouth Historical Museum on Main Street, history reaches to as recently as 10 years ago.

"In the 20th century this community has changed so much as well," Stewart said. "We try to include things from past World War II. People don't think of that as history."

The Plymouth Historical Society works at collecting significant items and newspaper articles, and maintains archives, while the city's Historical District Commission has designated areas in the community as historical districts and works with residents planning renovations of old structures. This year the museum plans to complete raising $150,000 to acquire an Abraham Lincoln collection. The commission preserved the old bungalow style of a building when it was made into an ice cream parlor.

In the structure built specifically to serve as a museum, donated by Margaret Dunning 25 years ago, are featured permanent exhibits; a library of legal documents, journals, genealogies and personal letters; and a gift shop. Visitors may travel down an indoor "Main Street" from the mid 1800s to early 1900s, with a meeting house you can enter, a print shop, a dress shop, a school, a dentist's office, a drug store and other places. "Lift and sniff" boxes outside the businesses contain scents that help bring the scenes to life.

The museum offers educational programs in the schools, handouts and hands-on activities for youngsters, and lectures. An exhibit titled "Visions of Christmas," showing holiday scenes in different rooms, just ended; the next display, "From Her Heart to Her Hands," will include quilts, china painting and needlework.

Westland had been primarily a farming community from its earliest days, so it's appropriate that the historical collection of the community is kept in a farmhouse. The structure on Wayne Road housing the Westland Historical Museum was built around 1855 and was on an 80-acre farm bordered by Marquette and Cherry Hill roads.

Today, information – including school and township records, birth and death records, maps, biographies, election materials and newspaper clippings – is stored in acid-free boxes and protectors here. Information on local building preservation projects is available. Scouts, elementary school students and seniors are among those who go on museum tours. Historical books and reference materials may be consulted in a study area.

"It has to do with future generations coming up who want to see things from the past," said Ruth Dale of the Westland Historical Commission. "It's not just for the future but for the present too."

Demonstrations take place, and displays are rotated. A person attending a genealogy workshop contributed to the recent Christmas decor exhibit. The Garden City Historical Museum is in the Log Cabin in Garden City Park at Cherry Hill and Merriman, near the modern post office that was built a few years ago.

The museum is a treasure trove of items that represent their time, including typewriters, a hand-operated ice cream maker, computer cards, tools (among them a saw from the 1860s "used continually to build homes in Garden City"), a Civil War cavalry sword, World War II uniforms, the stump of an elm tree cut down in 1975 thought to be almost 200 years old, daguerreotypes, a postmaster's chair, toys, and glasses commemorating an Apollo moon flight.

"The only thing we're short of is help," commissioner Shirley Wettlaufer said.

The Redford Historical Commission recently moved into an old school building by the post office on Beech Daly. It was involved in U.S. Bicentennial events, prevented the school building from being torn down, and continually collects materials.

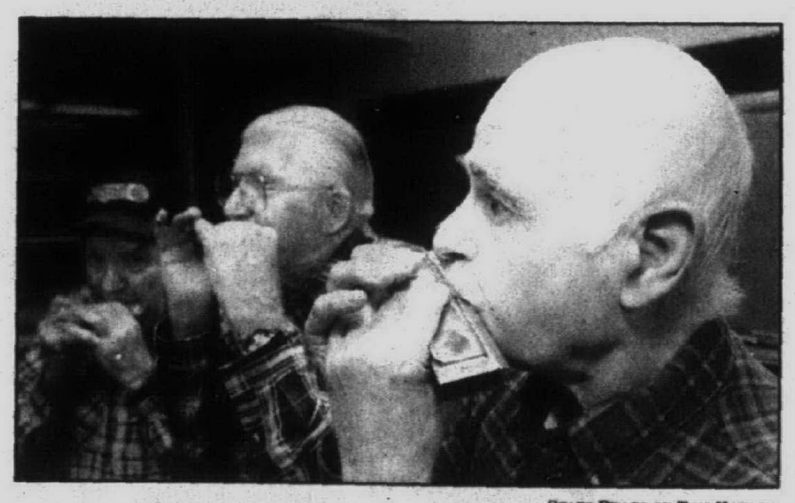

"Different articles are donated to us," said Sybil Raeside, township historian and a member of the commission. "We find so much history in the abstracts of people who lived in Redford Township."

Canton is active with two organizations: the Historic District Commission, a governmental body staffed by volunteers that works on preserving physical buildings, such as Sheldon School, and the Historical Society, which collects archival materials. The Canton Historical Museum is on Canton Center Road.

"One of the projects is an oral history ... of longtime residents," said Virginia Parker, a member of the historical commission.

Every community has its favorite gathering spots, those places where we can relax and rub elbows with a few of our neighbors. Maybe it's a favorite coffee house or neighborhood bar, a community recreation center or a climate-controlled mall with miles of space for winter walking.

In Plymouth, everyone with a taste for a cold beer, a juicy hamburger and a bit of conversation heads for the Box Bar. Located in the downtown area just across from Kellogg Park, the "Box" has been a favorite meeting place for families and friends since the early 50s.

"It's the local hangout. You meet people you normally deal with," said Plymouth resident Rick Jones, who was finishing up chili and a burrito with his wife JoAnn. "The Box is the central watering hole for getting something to eat and resting your feet."

"It feels kind of like home," said JoAnn. "And I don't like to cook."

Festivals contribute color to the fabric of community life, and Plymouth has its share. Every year, thousands of residents and non-residents attend the Fall Festival, Art in the Park and the International Ice Sculpture Spectacular.

Annette Horn, owner of Native West Gallery and organizer of Plymouth's first Chili Cook-off last fall, said festivals impact positively on community life. "It takes you back to a time when things were not so hectic. It makes you slow down."

If you live in Redford Township, you're likely to dine with friends at least once a week at the Redford Inn on the corner of Five Mile and Beech Daly Roads, the kind of place where everybody knows your name and what you like to eat.

"It's like a little gathering place for all the senior citizens," said Debbie Manteuffel, the restaurant's manager and a Redford resident for 19 years. "We have people who come in every day. If they didn't come, we'd worry. You get to know the people and you care about them, and they care about you."

In Garden City, if you're not meeting friends for Coney Islands at Plato's Place on Ford Road or coffee at Menka's Kitchen on Middlebelt Road, you're at the Maplewood Community Center on Merriman Road.

Patti Hubbard, a Plymouth Township resident since September, is also involved in the community, but in a different way. Her husband, Ken, is the senior pastor of United Assembly of God on North Territorial in Plymouth Township.

She explained how a job transfer brought the couple and their young children into the area, but it was the "small town atmosphere" that brought them to Plymouth.

"When we first moved here, we bought a fixer-upper in Canton," she said. Months later, they relocated to Plymouth for two reasons: to be in the same community where Ken worked and because she "loved the downtown area."

"It's so quaint and charming," she said.

Nancy Hillegonds is also relatively new to the Plymouth area. Her family moved to the township Dec. 24 from western Michigan where her husband former state Rep. Paul Hillegonds previously served as the state House speaker. He now works as president of Detroit Renaissance Inc.

"There were three things we were looking for: good schools, a feeling of community, and a community that had lots of kids.

"We looked in Plymouth first, I guess out of luck, and we just loved it," she said. "It felt comfortable."

Park to reopen in spring

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

■ TOWNSHIP NEWS

Improvements totaling $354,000 to Plymouth Township Park, begun last fall, will be wrapped up in spring.

Crews last fall repaved several park roads and parking areas and created new parking.

But while work was to be finished last fall, some rough weather forced a delay in completing some improvements.

That's what Michael Bailey, township engineer, reported to the township board of trustees at their regular meeting Tuesday.

The paving at the township park was completed last November in spite of some unseasonably cold weather mixed with periodic rain, Bailey reported.

"Work yet to be completed includes final tree relocations, fine grading, seed and mulch, wood bollards (thick posts) and gravel shoulders," he said.

While extensive repaving of several roads and parking lots forced the closing of the park last fall, it should remain open this spring.

"We should be able to get all the rest of the work done without closing the park," Bailey said.

Original park pavement was placed in the mid-1980s and provided an expected 10 years of service, Bailey said.

"During that time segments of the road and parking lots broke up due to wet base conditions," he said.

"The inclement weather required additional items of work to complete the subgrade preparation prior to paving," he said. "This was further complicated by shallow ground water and poor soils encountered in isolated locations."

"We have attempted to cure the wet conditions as best as possible and provide a pavement system that will last for at least 20 years without major service," Bailey said.

"We also attempted to resolve some other related drainage issues that should make the park more usable and easier to maintain."

A road was eliminated along the east side of the park. "The grand scheme was to direct the traffic flow from the east side, we swung that around to the middle," he said.

Paved parking has been expanded near the baseball diamonds and a parking area was added by shelter No. 2. "That helped accomplish barrier-free access to the shelter and bathrooms," Bailey said.

Some aging concrete flooring at the park pavilion was also replaced last fall.

Experts: Planning makes community

BY BETH SUNDRLA JACHMAN
STAFF WRITER

Whether it's older and established or newer and partially undeveloped, the success of a community is often in the planning.

"If a community is not clear on what it wants, it's never going to get it," said Jeffrey Goulet, Canton Township community planner. "Developers are going to do whatever they want to do," he added.

Change is the one thing that is constant in planning, according to certified planner Philip McKenna, president of McKenna Associates Inc. of Farmington Hills, the planning consultants for Garden City.

As an older city, Garden City is working on updating its master plan and that involves trying to estimate what the city will be like in the future, McKenna said. "If it becomes obsolete then people will abandon it." Keeping residents happy becomes a priority as their investment needs to be protected, he said.

"Cities spend a lot of money on their public facilities," McKenna said. "And also have the responsibility to plan for allocation of private land."

But, planning is more difficult in a city that is already built up, he said.

Livonia, also an established community, is working on keeping its single-family character. "Because the community is so well-established we are not going to change direction in any significant way," said John Nagy, Livonia planning director.

The goal is to try to preserve the character of the community as strong single family residential and not to try to expand the nonresidential component just to expand the tax base, Nagy said.

"We don't have a downtown area," Nagy said, so many developers are attracted to the mile roads. But Livonia is trying to discourage too much strip development along the mile roads, because it causes increased traffic and that takes away from the residential enjoyment, Nagy said.

An established community must keep up good code enforcement, have housing rehabilitation programs and maintain services especially in older sections of the community, Nagy said.

Older sections of the community can't begin to look like they're forgotten areas, Nagy said. If the city keeps up its end, that will encourage property owners to maintain property as well, he said.

Westland and Redford Township are also working on plans to keep property, especially rental property maintained.

Focal points

Creating special districts called Downtown Development Authorities is a way communities raise money for needed improvements in business areas.

Westland established a DDA in the area of the Wayne Road-Ford Road intersection last year and is working on plans for that area, Tod Kilroy, director of Westland's planning department, said. Canton, Livonia and Garden City also have DDAs.

As businesses leave parts of a city and properties become vacant, the challenge becomes to find another user. Livonia has successfully found users for the old Builders Square building on Plymouth Road with the arrival of Media Play, but faces the vacancies at the corner of Schoolcraft and Middlebelt with the closing of Handy Andy and a Chinese restaurant.

"It's just a matter of time and someone will come in and acquire that property," Nagy said.

Plans are on the books in Redford to redevelop Seven Mile from Inkster to Grand River, Leo Snage, Redford Township's director of public services, said. Some recent successful redevelopment projects in Redford Township are the new Home Depot and the new Pep Boys in Redford Township, he said.

Meanwhile, Plymouth and Plymouth Township officials are working together on the Ann Arbor Road corridor.

The plan will work on connecting the downtown which is pedestrian-oriented and the Ann Arbor Road area which is very driver-oriented. One way to do that is by establishing a focal point such as a clock tower or bell tower at I-275 and Ann Arbor Road as an entry way to the Plymouth area, James D. Anulewicz, Plymouth Township director of public services, said.

Going downtown

The challenges of a downtown are something architect and Plymouth planning commissioner David Schaff has looked at from both sides – the developer's side and the city's side.

Everyone has the same wishes for the community, he said. But many times it comes down to who's going to pay for all these dreams, he said. Schaff is chairman of the Plymouth Planning Commission and an architect at Architects and Planners Inc.

Developers often don't realize they have responsibilities and may not want to meet certain requirements, Schaff said. But ironically that same developer may be attracted to build in the community because others have met those requirements, he said.

In Garden City, changes in retailing styles have forced the city to adjust. Most of the major roads in Garden City are fronted by retail buildings, and many of those buildings were built for a pedestrian-oriented market of 50 years ago, McKenna said.

Some elements of an older community may seem like mistakes in planning, but often it is not a mistake, just that the times have changed, McKenna said. "You don't wear the clothes you wore 40 years ago," he said.

About 90 percent developed, Westland officials are looking to attract higher quality development than it has in the past, Kilroy said. Westland has plenty of apartments. "We are de-emphasizing them," and emphasizing single family home ownership, he said.

Other things older communities can do are to invest in streets, roads, parks and public facilities, enforce codes on deteriorating housing and make it easy for people to reinvest money in the city, McKenna said. The city might also have to assist the private sector to encourage redevelopment, he said.

The issue now is how to address the needs of the elderly, McKenna said.

Livonia will continue to attract single family detached housing, and begin to provide more housing for the elderly "as we become an aging population," Nagy said. In the future the city might have a few more condominium type houses for those who want to get out from under the responsibilities of a single family house, he said.

Development dilemmas

While older communities are working with what they have, in Canton Township, some areas are yet to be developed, and the community faces decisions on what will happen with future development, according to Jeffrey Goulet, Canton Township's community planner.

The township is now seeing more higher priced housing, Goulet said. In general, housing density decreases as you move westward in Canton Township, Goulet said.

But the push to develop has caused township officials to turn introspective. "Developers are really pushing the envelope" in terms of developing the western area, Goulet said. That has meant the township has begun the process of re-evaluating its plans for the western part of the township, including lot sizes, utilities and preservation of natural resources, he said.

Industrial areas go a long way in providing services for residents, Goulet said. "We're lucky to be located on the I-275 corridor," he said.

However, the building of Interstate 275 and M14 began to divide Plymouth Township community, Anulewicz said. But that has been changed into a positive element, he said.

Now business and industrial areas are on the north side where they are an advantage to the community, and the area is something to be proud of, Anulewicz said. On entering Plymouth Township's industrial complex, people are "shocked at the amount of development," he said.

Staying in tune with the wishes of the residents is a common concern locally. "We try to provide them the very best in services that we possibly can," Snage said.

ing, from exercise classes to providing meeting space for the harmonica club, the Maplewood Community center is busy. "The community center is serving the community in a diverse way," said Pat McKarge, the center's supervisor. "That's what a community is, a diverse group of people."

McKarge is especially proud of the center's drop-in program for kids who are not into organized sports. "They become friends with the adults who take an interest in them. Maplewood is more than a drop-in center, it's a caring center. Even our maintenance staff gets involved in people's lives."

Livonia residents often gather at Laurel Park Place, a self-contained metropolis of retail stores, offices, movie theaters, restaurants and a hotel with an adjacent health club. In many ways, the mall is Livonia's downtown.

"It's a gathering place for the community," said Michael Buescher, corporate marketing director for Schostak Brothers & Co., the mall's managing agent. "We try to go out of our way to be part of the community."

Besides hosting community events, Laurel Park Place sponsors a walking club in conjunction with Botsford General Hospital.

Livonia also lays claim to the best burgers in town. Mason's Lounge, on Farmington Road and the Jeffries Freeway, has been serving them to working-class folks for 50 years.

"We cater to working people, college guys, baseball teams, just about everyone," said owner Robert Kazanowski, whose family has operated taverns for 160 years, beginning in Poland. "You can bring kids into Mason's and not hear foul language. We get nuns in here. I have a picture of the Pope above my cash register."

Westland residents know where to go for that perfect cup of coffee to accompany their conversation. The appropriately named Mugs on Ford Road just west of Wayne Road in Westland serves plenty of it to a clientele that includes Mayor Robert Thomas, judges, police officers, city workers and "lots of regulars from the neighborhood."

Jack Dubay, who owns the restaurant with his wife Ann, said that in addition to coffee, super-sized toast and redskin potatoes at breakfast, people like the atmosphere. "They say it reminds them of up north."

Canton residents enjoy the best of the old and the new when it comes to gathering spots – Johnson's Restaurant on the corner of Ford and Lilly Roads, a popular eatery for almost two decades, and Summit on the Park, the community's year-old state-of-the-art recreational facility.

Carol Krause, Linda Jastrzebski, Carmen Laskowski, Eileen Vanderwill, and Margaret Newby are part of a group of women that meet at Johnson's every morning after attending Mass at Canton's St. Thomas A'Becket Catholic Church. Most of the women live in Canton.

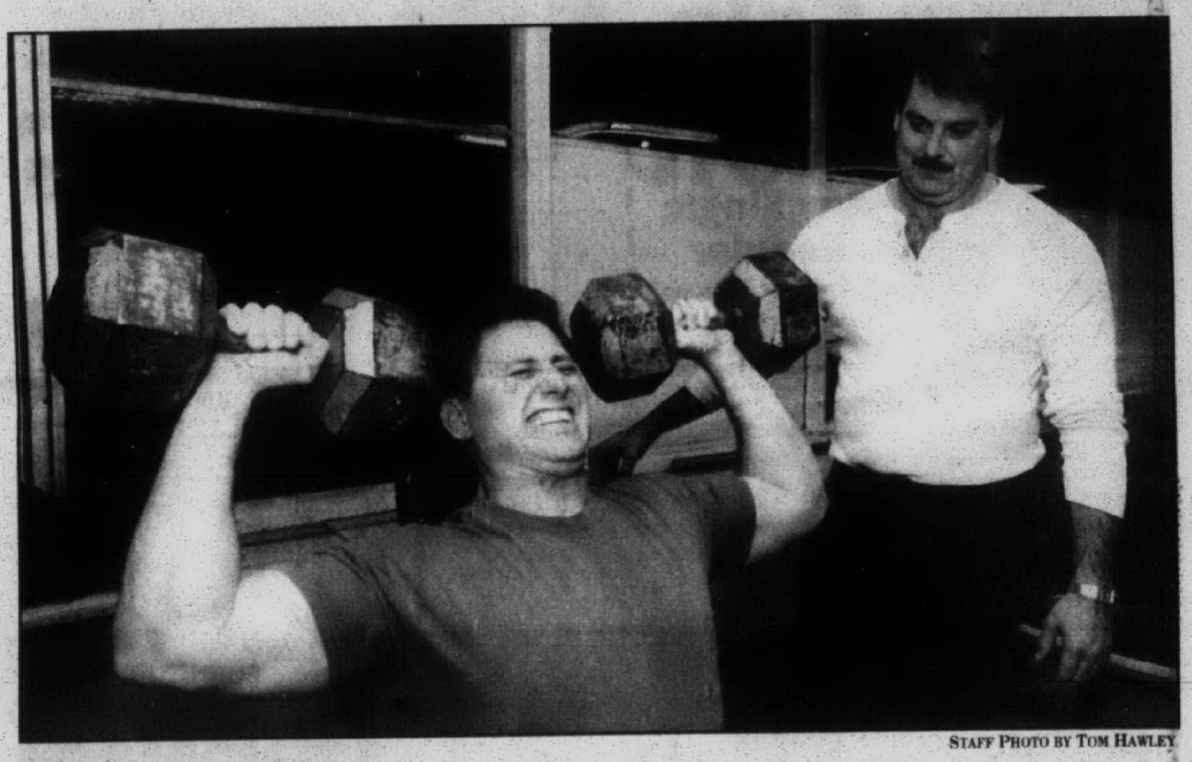

"We know everybody here," said Jastrzebski.

"We know their histories," said Krause with a laugh. "It's a nice way to start the day. We Yak."

You can find Canton senior Marilyn Werner behind the desk in the Summit's senior citizen center four hours a day, five days a week. According to Werner, the center is a busy place.

"They have so many activities and day and overnight trips. Every day the men come in to play pool (the center has two regulation-size tables). They also have congregate meals."

Werner also said seniors don't have to be activity-minded to enjoy the center. "Some like just to come in and read, to have other people around."

School board to vote on housing recommendations

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

A plan to continue sending siblings to different elementary schools and to house students in portable classrooms was criticized by parents at Tuesday's Plymouth-Canton Board of Education meeting.

Unforeseen growth in the Bentley Elementary School attendance area has been addressed by sending siblings of Bentley students to Hulsing Elementary.

Administration is recommending a modification of solutions suggested by Plymouth-Canton's Housing Committee.

The committee recommends two new portable classrooms for Bentley and four for Hulsing to maximize building space and help keep siblings together.

David Rodwell, executive director for research, told the board that administration is recommending one portable at Bentley; two at Hulsing, and two at Gallimore Elementary. All three schools are in Canton.

Should the proposed bond issue pass in March, a new elementary school would be built in southwest Canton, alleviating part of the problem.

"With a new elementary, we would be drawing new attendance areas. We don't want to draw attendance areas for the short term, and re-draw them year after year," said Rodwell.

The housing committee meets at 6:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 3 in the Curriculum Center, 1024 S. Mill Street in Plymouth. The school board is expected to vote on the recommendations at its meeting Tuesday, Feb. 4.

Housing Committee member Carol Bollman opposes administration's plan, citing the "safety and welfare of kids, and keeping siblings together. When the committee arrived at two portables, it was trimmed down from four," she said. "Teachers don't have prep areas or a lounge. There's no where to go to meet with students one-on-one. How can we expect teachers to provide good programming with no prep area?"

Judy Bendig's family is among the 30 split between Hulsing and Bentley. She asked why students in one subdivision can't attend two schools instead of three. "Right now, no one can say where a child moving into our sub is going to go. That isn't a solution; that is putting out a fire."

She suggested "setting up zones to temporarily accommodate the overflow. There could be a solution that hasn't been considered. I implore you to consider keeping those kids together."

Superintendent Charles Little said, "We are out of space. No one should think we can juggle kids around. There is a lot of building going on. This is a short-term deal to prevent us from setting up a tent city."

As growth continues, "it's going to be a Bird School problem, and a Farrand School problem," Little added. "Those who may choose not to participate (in supporting the bond issue) should be warned: Whatever we decide to do everyone is going to do. We have to pull together, or be pulled apart."

Coralee Ott said her kindergartner "rides the bus for 45 minutes, and the buses are traditionally late. I bet he hasn't been on time once this week. There are people upset already; you are just making me more upset."

Ione Skaggs has a kindergartner at Hulsing and a first grader at Bentley. "I asked if there is a spot for my son at Bentley next year. Judy Evola (community relations director) said yes there will be; Dr. Little told me the opposite. We need to know."

Chuck Blommaert said in other areas of the country where he's lived, growing districts have year-round school, and suggested it be considered.

Up until Aug. 1, the Blommaerts thought their children would be attending the same school. "My son is in kindergarten at Hulsing, and my daughter in third grade at Bentley. I go home to a wife every night who cries, it's so upsetting," he said. "School is a big part of a family, and the community is made up of families. I've received no empirical data supporting your recommendations. I received the notice about the Nov. 18 meeting on this the following day."

Board President Mark Horvath said that if the bond issue doesn't pass, "there will be a stakeholders' committee to address year-round school "to get out of the band-aid approach. There will be more concrete solutions. We are doing the best we can for all kids in the district."

Bendig said she's tired of getting the same answers to different questions. "Dr. Little alienates people because of his curt attitude. He's blowing us off. We're trying to come up with solutions. The only solution is the bond issue. That's the ultimate; no one can argue with that. But we have to do something in the meantime."

Talks continue in strike at township plant

Talks between Johnson Controls and the UAW which represents workers at Johnson's Plymouth Township plant continued Friday, and could continue over the weekend "as needs require," said UAW spokesman Karl Mantyla.

Mantyla declined to outline what the UAW is seeking in a contract for workers at the plant which makes truck seating for Ford Motor Co.

Around 2,100 picketers showed outside the plant at the Plymouth Corporate Park early Tuesday, as 300 employees struck the plant. Johnson Controls and the UAW have been unable to agree on a contract. The plant was organized last year.

The UAW, some members said, has sought wages from $12-$15 per hour. The company - which now pays from $9.50 to $10,50 an hour - has offered $12 per hour, after three years.

After Ford agreed Tuesday not to accept non-union seats, the number of picketers has fallen to no more than 20 or so, said Plymouth Township Police Lt. Robert Smith.

"The cooperation we've been getting is very good," he said, adding there have been no arrests or citations.

Johnson Controls declined comment on negotiations to end the strike, saying only that their next communication will be issued upon settlement of talks.

Phony prescriptions prompt arrest

A 23-year-old Detroit man was arraigned Thursday before 35th District Judge Ronald Lowe on charges of attempting to obtain a controlled substance, a two-year felony.

"We have some suspects going into different pharmacies. They have a special identifier from a doctor's office, and they're using it to phone in phony prescriptions," said Plymouth Lt. Wayne Carroll. "Guys or gals are sent it to make a pick up."

An incident involving the Detroit suspect, who was born in Nigeria, occurred Wednesday at Beyer's Drug Store, 480 N. Main.

"Beyer's called us regarding a suspicious situation," said Carroll. "Someone called in an order for Vicodin. They called the doctor, and realized it was a fake prescription. When he went to make his pick up, he got a little antsy and started to take off. He had no identification, and was arrested (initially) for driving without a license."

The suspect, who gave police false identification, was identified with the help of Livonia police who matched his fingerprints. The defendant is wanted out of Ferndale for writing a check with non-sufficient funds, Carroll said.

His preliminary exam is set for 9 a.m. in 35th District Court. The defendant is being held on $100,000 cash bond in Wayne County Jail. He stood mute, and a not-guilty plea was entered for him at his arraignment.

The offense is punishable by a $30,000 fine and/or two years in prison.

'Jailbirds' sought for annual fund-raiser

The Plymouth Cultural Center will host the third annual Plymouth-Canton Community "Lock-Up Against Muscular Dystrophy" Wednesday, Feb. 26.

City of Plymouth and Plymouth Township police are on the lookout for notoriously bighearted citizens to "arrest' for one hour between the hours of 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

"Jailbirds" will use AirTouch Cellular phones to raise bail money to combat neuromuscular diseases.

Call the MDA office, 313-981-6050 to request that an "arrest warrant" be issued for yourself or another caring person in your community.

DISCLOSING INFORMATION
To see if your child is doing an adequate job of cleaning his or her teeth, purchase disclosing tablets at the local pharmacy. These harmless agents are composed of vegetable dyes allowed to remain with poor brushing technique. Be sure to let your child in on your little "experiment" and together closely follow the directions provided on the label. Once the disclosing tablets leave their trace color behind, examine the areas of plaque residue with a mirror and bright light so that your child can become familiar with the areas in need of better brushing. Then, have your child use his or her toothbrush to remove the plaque from the disclosed areas. Repeat the process a few weeks later to allow your child to show improvement.
During February, "National Children's Dental Health Month," we would like to increase dental awareness and the importance of regular dental care. At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we believe that with preventive dental care, daily brushing and flossing, and a well-balanced diet, people can maintain their teeth and gums in good health well into their later years. Let us help you keep that dazzling smile. Call 478-2110 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 19171 Merriman Road. Smiles are our business.

Local duo matches students, families

BY LAURIE HUMPHREY
STAFF WRITER

Boundaries mean little to a Plymouth Township pair acting as matchmakers.

Gideon and Lynne Levenbach hosted a boy from Spain in 1988. Their two sons, aged 14 and 8 at the time, got along with the 13-year-old exchange student wonderfully. So good in fact, they felt more Americans would benefit from hosting exchange students and began recruiting local families.

"We still keep in contact with him," Gideon said about their Spanish "son". "He came back two years ago with his French girlfriend. They were on break from the university."

"My husband and younger son went to see him (five) years ago," Lynne added. "They all went to the Olympics in Barcelona."

Today, 15 exchange students later, Gideon and Lynne spend a lot of time matching up students with families in 21 school districts. They have helped place 150 students to date in Livonia, Westland, Redford, Garden City, Farmington and Plymouth-Canton schools to name a few.

"We even got a call today," said Lynne, during last week's interview, "from someone who had read an article in your newspaper." They are calls she said, the pair get quite often with the help of the newspaper.

She emphasized, however, that not everyone who calls necessarily signs up as a host family.

"People can call just to get information," she said. "We never put pressure on anyone."

Host families come in a variety of forms, according to the local couple.

"We've had seniors, parents whose children have moved out, we even have had single parents," she said.

"The key thing is that the family needs to have a good sense of humor and a sense of adventure," said Gideon. "These kids are not guests in your home, because someone can not be a guest for that long. They become a member of your family."

Students usually stay with the host family for 10 months, although some students prefer the 5-month option.

Lynne recommends the longer stay because it takes a while before students get acclimated to their new surroundings.

For Leonardo Navarro, a 16-year-old Chile native living with the Pund family in Canton Township, the transition started immediately.

"I never saw snow before," said the teen, who hopes to attend college for computer engineering someday. "Except on television."

A student at Plymouth-Canton High School, Navarro said he almost didn't come because his father had not originally wanted his son to participate in the exchange program. "But he changed his mind."

So, Navarro paid his $2 million Chilean pesos, about $5,000-$7,000, and boarded a plane for the United States. Although, he did not pick Michigan, he is happy with his new family and friends.

When Brazil native Carol Pasquali stepped out from the plane five months ago, she had but one wish.

"I wondered if they (host family members) would be there in the airport," said the aspiring journalist. "I was scared." She stayed with the McMullen family in Plymouth, and attended Plymouth-Salem High School, until returning home last week.

Before she left however, Pasquali "got to know a lot of new people and learned how to act independently. I got to make decisions on my own." She called the trip a learning experience.

Meanwhile, the host family is also learning, said Lynne.

"Hosting a student makes you look at everyday life in a totally new way. It's like having a toddler with the experiences of an adult."

"These kids come knowing nothing about our culture or what to expect," Gideon added. "It has changed our lives."

People interested in learning more about hosting students are encouraged to call the Levenbachs at (313) 453-8562 or (313) 453-6851.

SC offers business classes

Small business owners or aspiring entrepreneurs can find help getting ahead at Schoolcraft College.

Six one-day courses form the Small Business Entrepreneur Series, offered on Tuesdays at 6:30 p.m. and beginning Feb. 4. Students may register for the entire course or individual sessions.

The sessions include:

- Entrepreneurship: Do I Have What it Takes to Make it Big? (offered Feb. 4).
- Starting Your Own Business or Franchise Operation (Feb. 11).
- Detailing a Business Plan - Your Roadmap to Success (Feb. 18).
- Finding Money for Your Business (Feb. 25).
- Marketing Your Product or Service (March 11).
- Legal Issues for the Entrepreneur (March 18).

The fee for individual courses is $39. The entire series costs $154.

In addition, there is Tax Matters for Small Businesses which looks at the latest developments in employment taxes, new tax changes, case studies and completion of tax forms. Personal questions are encouraged and individual assistance will be provided.

The eight-week class begins Feb. 5, and the fee is $72.

First-week registration is Feb. 3, 4 and 5 in McDowell Center from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Schoolcraft College is located at 18600 Haggerty in Livonia.

Hines bike path to get longer

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Bicyclists, joggers and walkers can expect to wheel, run and move their way down Hines Drive between Dearborn and Northville on an extended bike path later this year.

The path will be extended 5.4 miles from Inkster Road to the Nankin Mills Way Station in Westland once the Wayne County Commission approves a contract to complete the work.

The Wayne County Commission approved a financial agreement with the Michigan Department of Transportation on Jan. 23. MDOT will pick up $336,000 of the costs using federal funds, while the county will spend $84,000.

A contract for the work is expected to be sent within the next few weeks to the commission for approval in time for the path's installation in the spring, according to Hurley Coleman, director of parks and recreation.

The contract - the path's third phase - will lengthen the path to 17 miles.

Hines Park extends from the border of Dearborn and Dearborn Heights near Ford Road near the middle branch of the Rouge River, and lies adjacent to or near the communities of Detroit, Garden City, Livonia, Northville, Northville Township, Plymouth, Plymouth Township, Redford Township and Westland.

"It fits into the master plan to create opportunities for people to get closer to the park," Coleman said. "It will fit in to the plans to make more picnic areas and play areas."

The path will not be funded by the one mill levied for parks, which was approved by county voters last year. Instead the project will be financed with $336,000 in federal funds and $84,000 from the county.

The federal money was distributed through a grant in the Intermodel Surface Transportation Enhancement Act extension between Wayne County and the state Department of Transportation. County commissioners approved that financial arrangement on Jan. 23.

Last year the path was extended from Haggerty to Ann Arbor Trail.

Coleman said this third phase of the path project will be constructed deeper into the park and away from Hines Drive in certain areas. He hopes access spurs can be constructed with the help of local communities.

Local commissioners oppose pledge to back stadium bonds

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Wayne County residents will be notified in a legal advertisement that tax dollars will be pledged in "full faith and credit" to cover bonds for the new baseball stadium should the car rental and hotel tax revenue fall short.

Wayne County commissioners approved legal language Thursday, 11-3, to inform county residents that the county intends to issue no more than $95 million in bonds funded by the hotel and rental taxes approved by county voters in November. The notice also states the county intends to enter into a lease with the Detroit/Wayne County Stadium Authority.

Commissioners were notified Wednesday that they had to approve the agreement by Friday.

For the bonds to be issued March 31, a 60-day notice of intent must be published first, according to state law, county officials said.

The commission approved a memo of understanding in August 1996 that pledged the full faith and credit of the county "to the extent necessary" on the bonds.

The pledge is $15 million higher than the $80 million in bonds to cover expenses including legal counsel, reserve requirements, legal fees and insurance, according to Mike Duggan, assistant county executive.

Duggan likened the additional costs to those in mortgaging a $100,000 house.

"You'll put down $20,000, and borrow $80,000, and add other costs like points," he said. Total payments amount to more than the $100,000 amount, Duggan said.

Duggan expects the car and hotel rentals will bring $5 million or $6 million annually for the county to use in paying off the 30-year bonds.

The only local commissioner to support the resolution was Vice Chair Kay Beard, D-Westland.

Commissioners Thaddeus McCotter, R-Livonia; Bruce Patterson, R-Canton; and Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, opposed the authorization.

The commissioners authorized publication of a notice of intent to enter into a general obligation contract with the authority and an application with the state Department of Treasury.

The contract allows the authority to acquire a new professional baseball stadium to be constructed and will issue one or more series of bonds to finance a portion of the cost not to exceed $95 million.

The commission must publish the notice and allow a referendum period of 45 days during which time a petition signed by 15,000 registered voters may be filed with the county clerk requesting an election on the county's "full faith and credit" pledge.

If no petitions are filed, the county could close on the bonds 60 days after the publication of the notice.

Board OKs commission for women

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

A Wayne County Women's Commission has been created to help women who own businesses or are seeking job opportunities.

On Jan. 23 the Wayne County Commission approved ordinance language to create the 15-member women's commission.

■ Members will be appointed by the chief executive officer from persons nominated by commissioners.

Commissioner Edna Bell, D-Detroit, first proposed the idea of a commission in December. Bell said the commission could help women have a support system while making the transition from welfare to work and also examine the needs of women who own businesses.

The Women's Commission also will encourage the study and review of the status of women throughout the county, and strengthen home life by directing attention to critical problems confronting women as wives, mothers, homemakers and workers.

The commission will recommend to the county commission and county executive methods and ways to discourage discrimination against women. It is expected to promote more effective methods of enabling women to develop skills, continue education, become business and professional persons and to be retrained.

Under the ordinance commissioners can survey and study, and appoint advisory committees in education, social services, labor laws and employment policies, law enforcement, health, new and expanded services, legal rights, family relations and volunteer services.

Commissioner Michelle Plawecki, D-Dearborn Heights, who also introduced the ordinance, said the commission would seek ways to improve the quality of life for all women.

"The commission will look to better understand the needs of women in employment, education or different ways to improve their economic status," Plawecki said.

Plawecki expected the group would be modeled after a similar state commission and seek state- and federally-funded programs.

"Welfare reform is important, but in my district, creating economic development and jobs are just as important," Plawecki said.

Members will be appointed by the chief executive officer from persons nominated by commissioners.

Each commissioner will nominate at least three persons and the chief executive officer will appoint one of those persons from each commissioner's district.

The appointments will last generally for a term of three years, except for the first five appointees, who will serve for one-year terms, and the next five, who will receive two-year terms.

Commissioners will not be paid, but may be provided with food for their meetings and may be reimbursed for expenses incurred in performing their duties. No money has been allocated to the commission.

Commissioners will provide an annual report to the chief executive officer and to the Wayne County Commission.

The ordinance is effective immediately.

Chinese cuisine and sherry are a fine pair

Conversation in the wine world today revolves around food and wine harmonies. They're also called match-ups or pairings. But one of the least touted may be the most stellar – oriental cuisine from China and fine sherry.

Much has been made of the pairing between oriental dishes and gewurztraminer wines. It's good, but nothing like the magic of sherry. And not any sherry will do. Go for it; get the world's recognized best. Remember this name — Emilio Lustau Sherries.

Emilio Lustau is one of the largest independent, family-owned sherry shippers. The oldest Lustau bodegas (wine cellars) located in the Jerez-de-la-Frontera heart of the sherry region, are constructed on either side of old Moorish ramparts. Because ancient and traditional is part of the firm's history, the most important element of Lustau sherry production in recent years, has been its revival of Almacenista Sherries. These are small quantities of great, old, privately owned sherry stocks purchased by a producer to enhance its blends.

The wine image of sherry doesn't hold a candle to the image of varietal wines in general, but your opinion will change if you sample the broad range of value-priced Lustau sherries available in this market. In celebration of the Chinese New Year beginning Feb. 7, drink them with Chinese cuisine and use them throughout the year in place of Chinese rice wine when cooking.

"Old amontillado and oloroso sherries bear an amazing resemblance to traditional Chinese rice wine and Japanese sake, all have a characteristically dry, nutty, aromatic pungency," said Christopher Cannan, whose company Europvin imports the Lustau Sherries. "Our experimentation has shown just how well dry sherry, with its higher alcoholic content and distinctive, intense flavor, can relate to many oriental dishes that may be too strong or spicy for normal table wines."

Wine Selections

- Cabernet sauvignon is warming with stews or other long-cooking meat recipes. Try these cabs on for size:
  - 1994 Bonterra (Fetzer)$13
  - 1993 Conn Creek, Limited Release $18
  - 1994 Hess Select $13.50
  - 1993 Silverado Reserve $50
  - 1994 Phelps $24
- Chardonnay and pinot blanc are "winter white" wines pairing handsomely with grilled or roast chicken, rabbit, sautéed pork tenders or pastas with light cream sauce. Best new releases include:

Chardonnays:
- 1995 Hess Select $13.50
- 1995 Geyser Peak $12
- 1994 Clos du Val $16
- 1995 Silverado $17.50 – the best we've tasted from '95 so far.

Pinot blanc:
- 1995 Murphy-Goode $15
- Crisp sauvignon blancs for grilled fish:
  - 1995 Fetzer Barrel Select $12.75
  - 1996 Rosemount $13
- Best buy at $10 and under:
  - 1996 Rosemount Semillon-Chardonnay $9, light, crisp and refreshing.

You're reading two "wok-ers" here. We've been in our Asian cooking phase for some time and we use Emilio Lustau Dry Amontillado Los Arcos Sherry $11 in place of Chinese rice wine.

If you'd like to learn about sherry, begin with Lustau Light Manzanilla Sherry, Papirusa $11. Its character, well suited to an aperitif such as Chinese dumplings or with soup, best explains its production. After traditional fermentation, young white wine called Mosto, is transferred to oak casks (butts) where a phenomenon occurs. Some butts develop a thick, white yeast layer called flor. It prevents the wine beneath it from oxidizing or becoming vinegar. Flor can neither be induced nor controlled. It's appearance and development are natural phenomena.

If it seems that the flor will remain, wine is fortified to about 15 percent alcohol and may be classified as a Fino. The coastal Spanish town of Sanlucar de la Barrameda produces a special kind of Fino called Manzanilla. If the flor doesn't remain, the wine may be fortified to 18 percent. After it ages, it is classified as Oloroso or the rare Palo Cortado and then can be blended to produce a Cream Sherry. At Lustau, all sherries go through the flor stage. While under flor, some Fino is classed for later development as Amontillado, Palo Cortado or Oloroso.

With that understanding and continuing with a tasting order, Lustau Fino Sherry, Puerto Fino $12, is great with egg drop soup. Go on to Lustau San Bartolomé $13, also good for Chinese cooking, and notice how more oak begins to show. Next is Lustau Rare Amontillado Sherry, Escaudrilla $17, delicate, dry and beginning to show the nutty character associated with sherry – fab-

Steamy soups, stews offer comfort

BY RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON
SPECIAL WRITER

Every country, every region, every ethnic group, has their own delicious soups, stews and warming dishes — whether they need the warmth or not. Soups, consommés, bouillons, stocks, stews, and porridge-type dishes have been around for centuries — well-known Chinese gastronome (often referred to as the Brillat-Savarin of China) Yüan Mei wrote, "Cookery is like matrimony. Two things served together should match. Clear should go with clear, thick with thick, hard with hard, and soft with soft."

Much like Escoffier's beliefs in harmony — "Soups should perform like an overture in a light opera (divulging) what is to be the dominant phrase of the melody throughout."

These warming dishes — thick or thin, have nourished the body, and the mind, throughout history.... famous authors, William Thackery, Lewis Carroll and Herman Melville (to name a few), have all written about soup — the fascination with soup, the need for soup, the delight in soup.

Unfamiliar and unusual names are given to soups and stews — they are only unfamiliar and unusual if we are not from the area of origin. Cawl is a tasty broth typical to Wales, especially on the farms — made primarily from welsh lamb, winter vegetables and sometimes, double cream. Many cawl recipes exist — depending on the farm or region of Wales — those cawls made without cream were often served in a basin or a bowl, with bread and the meat and vegetables served as a second course.

Borscht (Borsch) is a soup (can be stew-like) traditionally from Russia and Poland, made from fresh beets — and can be prepared by using an assortment of vegetables and/or meat, or both. Borscht can be served hot or cold and is usually garnished with a good-sized dollop of sour cream.

Gai Tom Kha is one of numerous soups that make up an integral part of Thai cuisine. This soup is a bold combination of flavors — mixed with meat, poultry, or fish. The base is coconut milk and chicken stock.

Albóndigas comes from the Spanish word for "meatball." Sopa de Albóndigas is a beef-based soup with meatballs, rice and vegetables. Stifado is a traditional Greek stew made with meat (lamb or beef) tomatoes, onions, white wine (or wine vinegar), and flavorful sweet and savory herbs and spices. This stew has variations in ingredients, again depending on the particular region from which it comes.

Cock-A- Leekie is a traditional Scottish soup made with chicken broth, chicken meat, leeks, and sometimes cream or oatmeal.

Tips for making stocks:

Soup Stock – a deep rich liquid developed from slow cooking of meats, bones, and vegetables in liquid.

- Bones can be roasted first to enhance the flavor of the stock.
- Always use cold water to cover the bones, meat and vegetables.
- Prepare large quantities at a time – use good time management, as making stock is somewhat time consuming, get a big batch done!
- Stock can be frozen in containers, or ice cube trays, to be used for flavoring foods as needed.
- Skim stock as it cooks – keep the liquid refined.
- Cool stock as soon as possible – and refrigerate or freeze. Stock can spoil quickly if left out. Place bowls or pot of stock in sink surrounded by cool water. Replace the sink water with cool, when it starts to feel warm.
- Once stock is cool (after refrigeration) remove fat, if any appears on the top. Refrigerate stock one to days, or freeze for three to six months. The sooner you use the stock, the better the flavor will be.

Burgoo (often called Kentucky Burgoo – this is actually one from the United States) is a thick stew full of a combination of meats (beef, lamb, pork, veal and poultry) and vegetables. Early recipes of Burgoo were made with small wild game, today the meats are usually more mainstream, but certainly can be made with game meats.

With thousands of soup recipes to choose from, we all seem to cling to our own favorites. Our own preferences can include: those that are thick, those that are thin, those that are clear, those that are hot, those that are cold, those that are spicy, those that are bland, those that are loaded with beans, those reminiscent of nursery foods (our comfort foods from childhood), and those filled with esoteric vegetables and fresh herbs we can't identify or remember how to pronounce.

This time of year hot soups and stews seem to fit the bill — perhaps our propensity for warming winter meals comes from our environmental desire to formulate body temperature through our palate. Soups, stews and one-dish meals, become the perfect fix for cold winters' evenings filled with blustery snow laden winds, ice covered trees, and impassable stalled cars. Returning home in the dark from a long day of work or school, and tasting that warming winter meal — restores our confidence in the concept of comfort, and the knowledge that winter only lasts for a season... and as Lewis Carroll said:

"Beautiful soup, so rich and green
Waiting in a hot tureen!
Who for such dainties would not stoop?
Soup for the evening, beautiful soup!
Beautiful soup! Who cares for fish,
Game, or any other dish?
Who would not give all else for two Pennyworth only of beautiful Soup!"

Elegant ball has menu with a heart

BY SANDRA DALKA-PRYSBY
SPECIAL WRITER

What do you serve at an elegant event that benefits the American Heart Association? When it comes to the 10th Anniversary Heart Ball, the chefs at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Dearborn, and planners decided that the meal not only needed to be delicious, but it had to healthy.

The AHA's Michigan Affiliate takes very seriously the mission to reduce death and disability due to cardiovascular disease and stroke, according to Anna Greenstone of Bloomfield Hills, who along with her husband Robert, is co-chairing the Feb. 14 black-tie fund-raiser. This mission translated even to the selection of the menu for the ball.

A shrimp-stuffed chicken breast was chosen for the entree and low-fat fruit tarts will be served for dessert. Other healthy considerations, such as using tarragon vinegar on the salad, went into the planning of this prestigious event.

February is American Heart Month, and the Heart Ball is just one activity marking the monthlong awareness programs. This year's theme — "Get in on the Action!" — urges everyone to make physical activity a part of their daily lives. According to Rhonda Welsh, metro communications director for the AHA, Michigan Affiliate, lack of physical activity has been clearly shown to be a risk factor for heart disease. Yet, only 22 percent of American adults get enough leisure time exercise to achieve cardiovascular fitness.

Someone in American dies every 33 seconds from cardiovascular disease, the number one killer in the United States today. Over 44 percent of all Michigan deaths in 1994 were caused by heart disease. That's 35 percent more than cancer, and almost 50 times as many as AIDS.

Tickets for the American Heart Ball are $200 per person. The evening begins with cocktails at 7 p.m. followed by dinner at 8 p.m. Guests will dance to the romantic sounds of White Lace.

Other upcoming Heart Month activities include:

- Healthy Families Day — 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8 at the Farmington YMCA, 28100 Farmington Road, Farmington. The event will feature: cooking demonstrations, basic fitness tips, and fitness screenings.
- Eat Well and Be Healthy — 7-8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 25, the Canton Public Library, 1200 South Canton Center Road, will host a local expert to discuss the importance of maintaining a healthy heart through proper nutrition.

For more information about American Heart Month activities in your area, including Heart Ball, or to learn more about exercise in the prevention of heart attack and stroke, call (810) 557-9511.

WELSH CAWL CENNIN A HUFEN
(LEEK SOUP CREAMED)

2 1/2 cups leeks, white part and light green part only
2 tablespoons butter (or margarine)
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 head celery, washed, trimmed and roughly chopped.
12 1/2 cups Mutton stock (lamb stock)
1/4 cup parsley, chopped
Salt and Pepper
2/3 cup double cream (heavy cream or half and half)
Lamb meat from stock for garnish (optional)
Garnish: diced meat (optional)
Sippets: small pieces of toast or fried bread — croutons

Clean the leeks thoroughly, chop them roughly, and set a little of the green aside for garnish. In a stock pot, French or Dutch oven, melt the butter and cook the leeks, onions, and celery under cover without browning them. Add the stock, bring to a boil, and simmer for 1 hour, skimming as necessary. Rub the soup through a fine sieve (chinois) or process in a blender, food processor or Vita Mix™. Reheat the soup, stir in the parsley, green of leeks, and diced meat (if used). Season with salt and pepper. Stir in the cream, correct seasoning, and serve with sippets. Serves 8.

This recipe comes from my friend Dee Dee Stovel's book — "Weekend! A Menu Cookbook for Relaxed Entertaining," by Edith Stovel and Pamela Wakefield, (A Storey Publishing Book, 1994 ($11.95)). Dee Dee mentioned that when traveling through Greece, she saw Stifado on many menus — all with slight variations depending on the region.

STIFADO

1 tablespoon butter
1 tablespoon olive oil
3 pounds lean stewing beef
2 1/2 pounds small white onions, peeled, or 2 pounds small frozen onions
1 (6 ounce) can tomato paste
1/2 cup red wine
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 clove garlic, minced
1 bay leaf
1 small cinnamon stick
1/2 teaspoon whole cloves
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
2 tablespoons currants (optional)
Salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste

Heat the butter and oil in a large Dutch oven or heavy kettle. Add the meat and stir with the butter and oil just to coat, but not brown. Arrange the onions over the meat.

Mix the tomato paste, wine, vinegar, sugar, and garlic together and pour over the onions and meat. Spread the bay leaf, cinnamon stick, cloves, cumin, and currants over the top.

Bring the stew to a boil, reduce heat and simmer covered for 3 hours or until the meat is very tender. Do not stir the stew as it cooks, but adjust the heat so it doesn't burn on the bottom. Remove the cinnamon stick and bay leaf.

Stir the stew as you serve it. Serves 8.

Tips:

■ To keep the onions from falling apart, make an X in the root end of each with a sharp knife.

■ If the stew bubbles while cooking, invert a plate on top of the ingredients to prevent excess movement.

ALBÓNDIGAS SOUP

12 cups beef broth (homemade or prepared)
1 can (28 oz.) crushed tomatoes (with liquid)
1 can (7 oz.) diced green chiles
1 large (about 1/2-lb.) onion, chopped
1 1/2 teaspoons dried basil
1 1/2 teaspoons dried oregano
1/2 -1 teaspoon liquid hot pepper seasoning (Tabasco or any similar type seasoning)
1/2 cup long-grain white rice
Meatballs (make your own favorite recipe or follow recipe below)
1/2 cup minced fresh cilantro leaves
Cilantro sprigs (optional)
Salt and pepper

In a large stock pot, French or Dutch oven, combine beef broth, tomatoes and their liquids, chiles, onion, basil, oregano, and hot pepper seasoning (to taste). Bring to a boil over high heat. Add rice; cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add meatballs; lid the pot and simmer until meatballs are not pink in the center (cut one to test). Cook 10 to 15 minutes longer. Stir in the minced cilantro. Ladle into bowls and garnish with additional cilantro sprigs (optional). Add salt and pepper to taste — adjust seasonings. Serves: 10-12

MEATBALLS

1 pound ground lean beef
1/3 pound bulk pork sausage
1/2 cup cornmeal
1/4 cup milk
1 large egg
1 small onion
1 clove garlic, pressed or minced
1/2 teaspoon dried basil

In a large bowl, mix together all ingredients until well blended. Shape the mixture into about 3/4-inch balls (a springed cookie scoop works great). If making ahead, return the meatballs to bowl, cover, and chill up to 4 hours.

GAI TOM KHA
(CHICKEN IN SPICY COCONUT MILK SOUP)

4 cups Coconut milk
2 cups Chicken stock (homemade or prepared)
3 pieces dried galangal, or 6 pieces of fresh Galangal
4 stalks fresh Lemon Grass bruised, cut into 2-inch lengths
Fresh Ginger root, peeled and sliced (optional)
1 large whole boned chicken breast cut into 1/2 inch pieces
4 tablespoons fish sauce (found in Asian Markets and upscale groceries in the Asian section)
5 kaffir lime leaves
4 fresh Serrano chiles sliced into rounds (or more to taste)
2 fresh limes, juiced
2 tablespoons fresh coriander leaves (chopped)

In a medium sized French or Dutch oven over medium-high heat, bring the coconut milk, chicken stock, galangal, lemon grass (and ginger root if desired) to a boil; reduce and simmer for 20 minutes. Strain stock; discard galangal, lemon grass and ginger root (if used). Return stock to a boil, add chicken and reduce to a simmer until chicken is tender. Add fish sauce, citrus leaves and chiles. Stir in lime juice. Adjust seasonings. Garnish with coriander leaves. Serve hot. Serves: 6

■ You may want to serve cooked rice on the side for those that think it's too spicy.

COCK-A-LEEKIE SOUP

4 parsley sprigs
1 thyme sprigs
1 bay leaves
Peppercorns
4 pounds chicken, raw
10 cups water
7 leeks
2 celery stalks
Salt
1/2 cup pearl barley (Pearl barley refers to whole kernel barley, not a quick
1 tablespoons parsley, chopped
Chicken bouillon (if necessary)

Tie parsley, thyme, bay leaf, and peppercorns in a piece of cheese cloth or place in a tea ball. Thoroughly wash leeks, then cut white and 2" of green stems into 1/2-inch slices. Chop celery stalks. Cover chicken with cold water in a large stock pot, French or Dutch oven - bring to boil over medium-high heat. Skim off any scum that rises to the surface. Add leeks, celery, tied spices (bouquet garni), salt and barley - reduce heat to low. Partly cover pan and simmer 1-1/2 to 2 hours until meat falls off bones. Remove pot from heat and transfer chicken to a cutting board or platter. Cool slightly. Skim fat off cooking liquid. Remove and discard bouquet garni. Carefully detach chicken meat; discard skin and bones. Shred meat and return to soup. Simmer over medium heat for 5 minutes to reheat thoroughly. Sprinkle parsley over soup, adjust seasonings (add chicken bouillon if necessary) and serve at once. Serves: 8

KENTUCKY BURGOO

2 pounds lean beef, cubed
Large soup bone
1/2 pound lamb, cubed
1 frying chicken, cut in pieces
16 cups water
Salt and freshly ground black pepper
1 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 cups diced potatoes
3 cups diced onions
2 cups lima beans
5 carrots, scrapped and diced
2 bell peppers (any color), stems removed, seeded and diced
3 cups corn (fresh — cut off the cob if possible)
2 cups okra, diced (or dried miniatures reconstituted)
6 cups diced seasoned tomatoes (Dei Fratelli if possible)
5 cloves of garlic, minced
1 cup fresh parsley, minced

Place the beef, soup bone, lamb, chicken water, salt, pepper, and cayenne pepper in a stock pot, French or Dutch oven. Place over medium-high heat and lid. Bring to a boil, then simmer, covered for two hours. Remove the pot from the heat, remove the chicken skin and bones. Add the potatoes, onions, limas, carrots, bell peppers, and corn. Simmer another two hours, stirring occasionally. Mixture will thicken — add water if necessary. Add okra, tomatoes, and garlic — continue to simmer another 1 1/2 hours.

Remove the soup from the heat source and add the chopped parsley. This soup tastes better the next day, or the day after, or the day after. Serves: 10 -12

Dei Fratelli tomatoes can be found at Shopping Center Markets (Hiller's Emporiums), Meijers, and Strawberry Hills.

Low-fat French toast

AP — Impressive and delicious, yet surprisingly easy to make, this French Toast is a low-fat twist on an old favorite. Each serving has 231 calories and 2.8 grams of fat.

FRENCH TOAST

Nonstick cooking spray
1/2 cup egg substitute
1/2 cup skim milk
1/4 cup orange juice
3 tablespoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/2 teaspoon rum extract
Dash ground nutmeg
12 slices French bread, 2 inches wide, about 3/4-inch thick
3 1/4 cups cornflakes, crushed to 1 1/2 cups
2 oranges

Preheat oven to 425 degrees F. Spray a 1 1/2-quart shallow, oval dish with nonstick cooking spray.

Combine egg substitute, skim milk, orange juice, sugar, grated orange peel, vanilla, rum extract and nutmeg in a shallow bowl; mix well. Dip bread in milk mixture, making sure all of the mixture is absorbed. Place cornflake crumbs in a shallow bowl. Dip bread into cornflake crumbs, coating both sides evenly. Place in prepared dish. Bake in a 425-degree F oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown, turning once. Garnish with orange slices. Top with butter and syrup, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Turkey burgers quick, easy

Garlic-Crusted Tuscany Turkey Burgers, a grand prize winner in the Kretschmer Wheat Germ "Healthy Eating Made Easy & Delicious" Recipe Contest, is an example of how wheat germ's nutty crunch adds a new flavor dimension to a main dish.

The yogurt and sun-dried tomato topper complements the savory seasoned turkey burgers. And the recipe is a snap to make — 30 minutes from start to finish.

Try coating boneless chicken breasts or fish fillets with wheat germ that has been seasoned with Parmesan cheese and fresh or dried herbs.

Or, use wheat germ instead of bread or cracker crumbs in recipes for meatloaf, meatballs and burgers made with lean ground or ground turkey breast.

Dinner in a hurry: Prize-winning Garlic-Crusted Tuscany Turkey Burgers are sure to please any time of year.

GARLIC-CRUSTED TUSCANY TURKEY BURGERS

Sun-Dried Tomato Topping

- 1/3 cup sun-dried tomatoes
- 1/3 cup plain nonfat or low-fat yogurt
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or 1 1/2 teaspoons dried basil leaves

Burgers

- 1 pound ground turkey breast
- 1/2 cup wheat germ
- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons water
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
- 1/2 teaspoon fennel seeds, crushed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt (optional)
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/8 teaspoon ground allspice
- 2 teaspoons minced garlic
- 6 lettuce leaves
- 6 whole wheat hamburger buns, split, lightly toasted

For topping, soften tomatoes in boiling water; drain and chop. Combine tomatoes, yogurt and basil; mix well. Set aside. (Topping may be made 1 day ahead and refrigerated until ready to use.)

Prepare grill or heat broiler. For burgers, combine all ingredients except garlic, lettuce and buns; mix lightly, but thoroughly.

Shape turkey mixture into six 1/2-inch thick patties. Sprinkle garlic evenly over both sides of patties, pressing gently.

Grill or broil 4 to 5 inches from heat source 3 to 4 minutes per side or until no longer pink and juices run clear. Line bottom half of each hamburger with lettuce; place burger on top. Spread top of burger with about 1 tablespoon topping; close with top half of bun. Serves 6.

LOW FAT FRUIT TARTS

- 1 3/4 cups one percent milk
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 vanilla bean, split lengthwise
- 2 tablespoons margarine
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 2 whole eggs
- 8 pre-baked tart shells
- Strawberries, blueberries, sliced kiwi, raspberries

In bowl, add eggs to cornstarch, whisk smooth; set aside.

In saucepan bring milk, margarine, sugar and vanilla bean (using tip of knife, scrape the seeds from vanilla bean into milk mixture; add the vanilla bean pod) to boil.

Temper in egg mixture and cook stirring constantly until filling again boils and thickens. Remove from heat. Remove vanilla bean pod. Cool.

Fill each tart with 1/8 of filling. On top of each tart arrange 2 strawberries, 3 blueberries, 2 slices of kiwi and 2 raspberries. Serves 8.

STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS WITH SHRIMP AND SCALLIONS

Honey Pistachio Crust

- 8 (6 ounce) boneless, skinless, chicken breasts
- 3 cups shrimp
- 2 tablespoons scallions, sliced very thin
- 8 teaspoons honey
- 8 tablespoons chopped pistachio nuts
- Salt and pepper to taste

To make filling: Chop shrimp in food processor. Season to taste and stir in scallions.

Season chicken breasts with salt and pepper. Pound chicken between pieces of waxed paper or plastic wrap to 1/4-inch thickness.

Put 3 tablespoons of shrimp filling on chicken breast and roll.

Brush stuffed chicken rolls with honey and roll in chopped pistachios. Bake in 450 degree F. oven for 20 minutes. Serves 8.

Feta Artichoke bites are appetizing

(AP) — If you're hosting a Valentine's Day party, plan a menu that's easy to prepare and serve. Savory appetizers, along with some fruit, cheese and crisp crudites, are ideal.

FETA ARTICHOKE BITES

- 1/3 cup butter, softened
- 1 large garlic clove, minced
- 6 1/2-ounce jar marinated artichoke hearts
- 1 cup seeded, diced tomato (about 1 large)
- 1-3rd cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 2 green onions with tops, thinly sliced
- 1 teaspoon dried oregano
- 4 ounces crumbled feta cheese
- 5 English muffins, split

In a small bowl, blend butter and garlic; set aside.

Drain artichoke hearts, reserving 1 tablespoon marinade. Chop artichokes and set aside.

In medium bowl, combine chopped artichokes, tomato, 3 tablespoons of the Parmesan cheese, green onions, oregano and reserved marinade. Gently stir in feta cheese; set aside.

Lightly toast English muffin halves; spread with garlic butter. Spoon artichoke mixture onto muffin halves, dividing evenly. Sprinkle with remaining Parmesan cheese. Broil 4 to 6 inches from heat until heated through, about 5 minutes. To serve, cut each muffin in half.

Note: Garlic butter may be made several hours ahead, or as long as overnight. Store in refrigerator tightly covered. Makes 10 appetizer servings.

Euro-style facials are salon's trade

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
SPECIAL WRITER

Mary Glancz credits her "honesty is the best policy" philosophy as the reason she's been in business for 30 years.

The Mary Glancz European Facial & Cosmetic Salon (offering facials, body massage, waxing, manicures and pedicures) has occupied the second floor of the same historic building on Pierce in Birmingham since Feb. 1, 1967.

Born in Transylvania and trained in beauty and skin care in Europe, Glancz immigrated to America from Romania in 1965. Her business success story began at once.

"I had just come to America and was learning to drive when I got lost and ended up in Birmingham. I fell in love with the town because Birmingham looked like Europe with people walking on the streets and the small shops," said Glancz, of Hungarian descent.

A pioneer in the salon business, Glancz was the first in Birmingham to introduce facials, waxing treatments including the bikini wax, and permanent makeup for eyes and lips. During the last three decades, the West Bloomfield resident witnessed tremendous changes in the salon and beauty industry.

"It's gone from fur coats to casual looks, from false eyelashes to a more natural appearance, but the people are the same. I have second, third and fourth generation customers."

In the early years, clients included the wives of corporate executives and actresses starring in shows at the Birmingham Theatre.

Today, working women comprise a sizable portion of Glancz's clientele, and 30 percent are men seeking facials and body massages.

"When I started, it was the rage to put eyelashes in one by one. But I was honest with clients and refused to do it because when they start falling off, your real ones come along with it. Honesty is very important if you want to stay in business and I never think of retiring."

Glancz creates individually-blended face creams using natural products with no preservatives. The newly-blended recipes are kept on file and dated for each client for future reference. Another unique service Glancz provides is waterproof camouflage makeup which allows clients with birthmarks, burn scars or excessive freckles to cover skin defects on the face and even capillaries on the legs.

Kathy Persha of Birmingham has come to the salon for facials and manicures for the last 15 years. She and friend Peg Huang of Huntington Woods were treating themselves to pedicures.

"I come because the people are warm and friendly and it's nice to be pampered once in a while," said Persha.

"They make me feel special," added Huang.

Glancz has trained more than 100 facialists who presently own salons around the country and in Montreal. Passing on knowledge is important to her. She frequently speaks to groups, armed with slides of the beauties found in portraits at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

"Women during the Renaissance knew nothing about vitamins and minerals. They put raw meat on their faces at night because the living organisms made their skin beautiful.

"Thirty years ago people wanted cream that was nice and heavy. But today we know that everybody's skin is different. Winter and summer skin care is different. It's always changing."

Glancz relaxes by gardening and taking pottery classes.

She welcomes inquiries at (810) 642-6787.

Store decor comes from around the globe

Retail decor items must add to the fascination of the merchandise, but not over power it. Most department stores have decorators who search shops around the world for interesting items and trendy accent pieces. If it inspires sales, a potted palm tree is worth its weight in gold.

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

The next time you're wandering through the mall admiring the decor – be it an unusual vase or a table set for four – rest assured filling that space took thousands of frequent-flyer miles.

"All of the individual pieces like frames, desks and pictures around the stores are collected from around the world by our visual display team," said Chris Morrisroe, Hudson's spokeswoman.

Hudson's visual director travels the globe picking up pieces that catch his eye, particularly when there is a renovation or new store about to open, explained Ray Boley, visual presentation chief for Hudson's stores.

"We go to lots of visual display markets in New York and it's interesting and always changing," said Boley. "At one time the displays had disco themes. Another time we found everything done in pink. Now it's much more casual and not as costly."

Marking his 26th year with Hudson's, Boley said each store display design is set-up based on the lifestyle image being projected. The trend may be towards a contemporary or traditional look.

"Our displays always center around the merchandising themes as well as trends," added Morrisroe. "Like at our Somerset North store, things are real elegant with lots of marbles and woods. We wanted decor for that store to reflect that image."

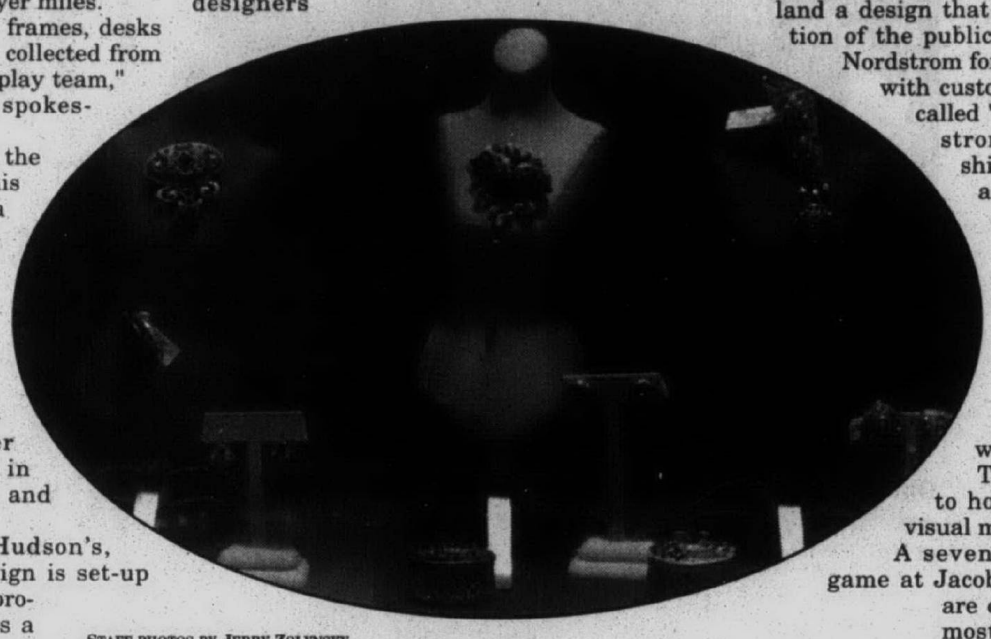

Other metro-Detroit Hudson's stores see the Casual Contemporary Look as the trend of the moment. Boley and staff are working hard to bring that feeling to displays in different parts of the stores.

"Right now we are doing an unusual display in our furniture area that's going to have a contemporary look that is cleaner and more relaxed. It has a loft to show simple living because so many of our guests' lives are on the run today. It's fun to do and there are a lot of repetitive accessories unlike traditional displays that have a lot of different accessories that require lots of dusting and cleaning."

Eyeing the runways

Preparing a look that will draw customer's eyes has display designers at Nordstrom scanning fashion runways in both Europe and New York.

"Our displays always start with fashion and designers pull their story boards from there," said Joann Holder, the company's Midwest display director. "We get a basic feel for where fashion is headed. We select the colors and then a designer comes in puts it all on paper and turns it into a cohesive story."

STAFF PHOTOS BY JERRY ZOLYNSKY

A display layout for this spring at Nordstrom features a nature theme complete with fresh flowers, stone arches, and oversized leaves.

"We really see displays as an endorsement of our great merchandise. They are not meant to overshadow the merchandise," said Holder.

Noting that Nordstrom showcases many unique items in all of their stores, Holder said there is a specific distinction between merchandise displays and decorative displays.

Small tables or chairs and couches set-up in various areas of the store are considered merchandise pieces that will stay put in definitely.

Decorative items are things that are in the store for a specific promotion. For example, benches will line store ledges this spring to promote the Back to Nature Look, but they will come down and go into storage once summer hits.

"Over the holidays we like to have the decorative displays all over the store say something wonderful and festive is going on," she said. "We always have real Christmas trees because that's a Nordstrom tradition. You can't beat the shape and smell of a real tree."

Every once in awhile between the day to day decor and the seasonal display, Nordstrom will land a design that really captures the imagination of the public. Holder, who has been with Nordstrom for 20 years, said the biggest hit with customers was a spring promotion called "Out of the Blue" at the Nordstrom in Chicago. "We had this shimmering blue fabric hanging all over the ceiling like waves, and in between the waves we had fiberglass dolphins. It really looked like they were swimming up there," laughed Holder. "It became the talk of the town."

A clean look

"Clear, crisp and graphic without a lot of propping."

That's the way Jacobson's likes to host its displays, according to visual merchandiser Janice Cecil.

A seven-year veteran of the decor game at Jacobson's, Cecil said the visuals are changed every two weeks and most props are limited to use in window displays.

"Wire pieces are really big now. We have wire chairs as props around the store," said Cecil. "But we can't let decor props overshadow the merchandise."

Slip covers are another big trend sweeping the display market. Jacobson's uses them on their torso-shaped costumers that reveal the latest fashions. They also slipped bright silk slip covers onto cone-shaped Christmas trees and the when the lights shone up through the silk, shoppers were treated to a unique and beautiful holiday scene, said Cecil.

"My experience is that the customer needs to have merchandise presented in a total package," she said. "Like in our home department, we have a dining table with linens, the place setting, and character rugs because we want to show a total lifestyle look," said Cecil. "And we really romance it so shoppers can see pieces and not wonder what type of accessories they will need to go along with it."

Do I know you?: Today's ideal mannequin doesn't detract from the merchandise.

Any 'body' can be a mannequin

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

Having life-size mannequins with petite frames and expressive faces clamoring for attention used to be the norm around area department stores – not anymore.

Today mannequins are not only used less as design tools, but they also sport looks that are meant to blend into the background so the merchandise can shine.

"The mannequins are definitely not as important to the display areas as they were in the past," said Janice Cecil, Jacobson's visual merchandiser. "Many of our "costumers" which are often used instead of mannequins, are headless and androgynous."

"Right now the mannequins have a whole new attitude," agreed Chris Morrisroe of Hudson's. "In the past they were designed to look like a real person but today the faces aren't really there, they have an abstract look. Shoes are built right onto the mannequin and most don't have a hair color."

Despite the fresh approach, having the right mannequin to accent a theme in a particular area of the store is still an important part of creating an attractive visual experience for the customers, said Morrisroe.

"We choose our mannequins from catalogs. For example, when we did a workday casual display, we had the mannequins designed just for that," said Morrisroe. "Even though they had red and blue hair to go with the fashion trend or theme, we wanted the faces to represent people in general. They look like anybody."

In the past, designers only used mannequins in sizes six or eight. Now they have them ready in all sizes – from petite to full figure models.

"I even think having a size eight was pushing it as I remember trying to pin up many a waist to fit clothing onto a tiny size six mold," agreed Nordstrom visual director, Joanne Holder.

"Now mannequins are much more like a real person and are sometimes nicer to work with."

Ray Boley, Hudson's display chief, said Ralph Pucci in New York designed an array of mannequins to use at the grand opening of the Somerset North store last August.

Down the mall at Nordstrom, all the mannequins that hit the sales floor are special-ordered with custom faces and make-up to make them totally unique to the chain, said Holder.

"We work closely with the manufacture on the poses we'd like," said Holder. "Dramatic poses, with wild arm gestures, used to be avant guard and desired, but now we have a more natural look which makes the clothes standout not the mannequin."

Having their mannequins tout a more refined look isn't all Nordstrom strives for when ordering new models. They also like to have the plastic bodies offer a look of ethnic diversity to represent the varied backgrounds of shoppers.

"Mannequins are like a silent salesperson," Boley said. "With the right shoes, handbag, hoses and accessories, the customer looks at it and knows what they want to go with that outfit."

News of special events of interest to shoppers is included in this calendar. Send promotion information to: Malls & Mainstreets, c/o The Observer & Eccentric 805 East Maple, 48009; or fax (810) 644-1314. The deadline is Wednesday at 5 p.m. for publication on Monday.

Where can I find?

Thanks to all the readers who phoned in locations for the hard to find items listed last week.

• We had three callers willing to part with copies of Warriner's English Composition and Grammar Complete Course and they were put in touch with the searcher.

• Judy Trumbull of Trumbull's Antiques in Royal Oak said she's collected Woodward memorabilia for years and has many restaurant photos for John Jamian. She welcomes inquiries at (810) 584-0006.

• Three callers responded to the quest for Mike Douglas' recording of "Happy Birthday Jesus". "Marie" said Hammell Music (Middlebelt, north of Five Mile) has a copy of the words inside The Reader's Digest Christmas Book, which must be special-ordered. "Alan" said the Temple Baptist Church in Detroit used the song during a holiday choral program and the music director had the words.

• One reader suggested owners of rain lamps use the heavy mineral oil Lub Laxative sold in drugstores. "That's what I used in mine, successfully," she reported.

We still need to find:

• Old restaurant photos, menus, signs and other memorabilia for a history book on the Woodward Corridor by John Jamian. Specifically, he wants information about the old Corning's, Ted's Drive-In, Devon Gables and May's Drive-In. He welcomes information at (810) 540-0605.

• Paula MaCue hopes to quickly locate an antique "Boy Scouts in the Wilderness," which is part of an old collection for a shopping buddy.

• Sarah Suzman is looking for a store that sells snack tables with trays of Lucite or glass.

• Victoria Kulis is trying to track down an old black and white videotape "March of the Wooden Soldiers," by either Laurel and Hardy or Abbott and Costello.

• Roz Novak needs a copy of Danny Kaye singing "Momma Give Me a Drink of Water."

• Terry Brown hopes to find an out of print book by Marjorie Cahn Brazer Well Savored Passage: A Guide to Lake Huron's North Channel.

• "Jennifer" wants to know who sells clothing by Smooth Ones.

• Toni Trudell is looking for a phone number for Eddie Jay's Art-O-Graph Co. of Royal Oak. She has autographs she wants appraised.

• A reader is looking for a copy of "Boy on a Dolphin" by David Devine.

• Ever see Magic Baking Powder made by Nabisco of Toronto on your grocery shelf? A caller doesn't want to travel to Canada any more to buy it.

• A Birmingham resident can't find the Almay hypo-allergetic all-over body splash that she used to buy at Montgomery Wards.

• Marion Rosinski of Canton is looking for a retailer who sells "Maine Woods" shoes. "I bought a pair at TJ. Maxx and they are the most comfortable shoes I've ever worn."

• Two callers are looking for out-of-print sheet patterns – king-size flat sheets from Martex in the Trade Blanket pattern, Wamsutta king-size sheets and pillow cases in the Textura pattern

If you've seen any of these items in your travels, let Malls & Mainstreets know and we'll print the answers. Please call (810) 901-2567 (and relate your message and phone number slowly and clearly!)

Street scene

State hood: Roots is selling a unisex, leather "Michigan" jacket in a rainbow of color choices, $390. Find the shop at Somerset North in Troy.

What a surprise! — Men shop differently than women

Women browse; men buy.

That's the skinny on shoppers from marketing directors at four area shopping centers.

They identified five characteristics that spotlight the difference between men and women shoppers:

1. Men know what they want.

Men are product specific. They don't simply ask customer service representatives where to find the perfume counter. They want detailed directions to the counter that sells a particular brand.

2. Men appreciate gifts made easy.

Those who come to the shopping center looking for a gift rather than a brand of perfume, are often eager for suggestions.

And those who ask for gift ideas are most likely to snap up prepackaged items in a coordinated and accessorized fashion display.

3. Men shop by habit.

Once they find a store that carries the product they want, men return time after time to the same place. When they return to the store, they'll even park in the same spot and enter by the same entrance.

4. Men spend less time shopping.

They don't browse or comparison shop as a rule.

5. Men are last-minute shoppers. They can be spotted choosing gifts the day before a special event. – Courtesy of the Taubman Co.

RETAIL DETAILS

Retail Details features news briefs from the Malls & Mainstreets beat, compiled by Susan DeMaggio. For inclusion, send information to: Retail Details. c/o The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers 805. E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009. Or fax (810) 644-1314.*

Mall dedicates family restrooms

Anxious to flush out a good story, Malls & Mainstreets investigated the new family restrooms at the Fairlane Town Center in Dearborn. Shoppers with young children will appreciate the spacious, private unisex stalls, kid-size toilet, diaper dispensers, changing stations and automatic faucets. The new facility can be found on the mall's lower level next to Saks Fifth Avenue.

Another Fairlane family feature is the Frog Hop Playland near center court.

Barbie show and sale

MeadowBrook Village Mall in Rochester Hills hosts a Barbie Day, Feb. 8 from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. with collectors items, appraisals, repair experts and custom clothes-makers on hand. Browse amid paper dolls, collectible dolls and Barbie Art. Norita Bergmann welcomes inquiries at (810) 816-8791.

Wild ideas for Valentines Day

• Fool your sweetheart with a gift from The Tie Man in Livonia. Owner Mark McClellan will place your chosen cravat in an elegant white rose box adorned with a satin ribbon – call 5130-TIE.

• And from The Breadsmith Stores, heart-shaped Chocolate Chip Cherry Bread baked fresh Feb. 13-14. $5.25 per loaf, reservations suggested. Call the Maple/Lahser store at (810) 540-8001 or the 14 Mile/Middlebelt store at (810) 855-5808 or the Long Lake/Rochester Road store at (810) 879-8997.

• Raphael's Magnificent Possessions of Berkley pairs fine chocolates with delicate handpainted china plates. They also carry Victorian cards at the shop, 1799 Coolidge, north of 11 Mile Road.

Patricia Miles liquidates

The self-appointed "citadel of chic" the Patricia Miles Boutique, is holding a store-closing sale Feb. 3 through March 1 at her shop on The Boardwalk in West Bloomfield. Inquiries welcome at (810) 932-5658.

Special events at Livonia Mall

You can help a blind child while shopping at the Livonia Mall, Feb. 13-30 – just toss a few coins into the fountain for "Seedlings Braille Books for Children." The money will be collected and given to the nonprofit agency to put special books into the hands of the seeing-impaired. While at the Seedlings booth, enter to win a weekend for two to Toronto, rail and $200 included. No purchase or donation necessary to enter.

Are you a good speller? The mall is teaming up with WCAR Radio AAHS (a radio format for children) to attract students from grades 1-6 for a spelling contest Saturday, Feb. 22. Entries must be received by Feb. 19 through the local libraries in Livonia, Redford and Farmington. Call (313) 525-1111 for more information. The grand prize is a multimedia computer system with Windows 95.

Soap is star at new boutique

Gloria Boyagian, owner of Aetheria in Ferndale, said handmade or limited run soaps combining herbs, essential oils and time-proven recipes are the hottest trend in natural healing. She offers customers 150 varieties of soaps – including 20 varieties of soap-by-the-slice! Soap products are priced from $2-$10.

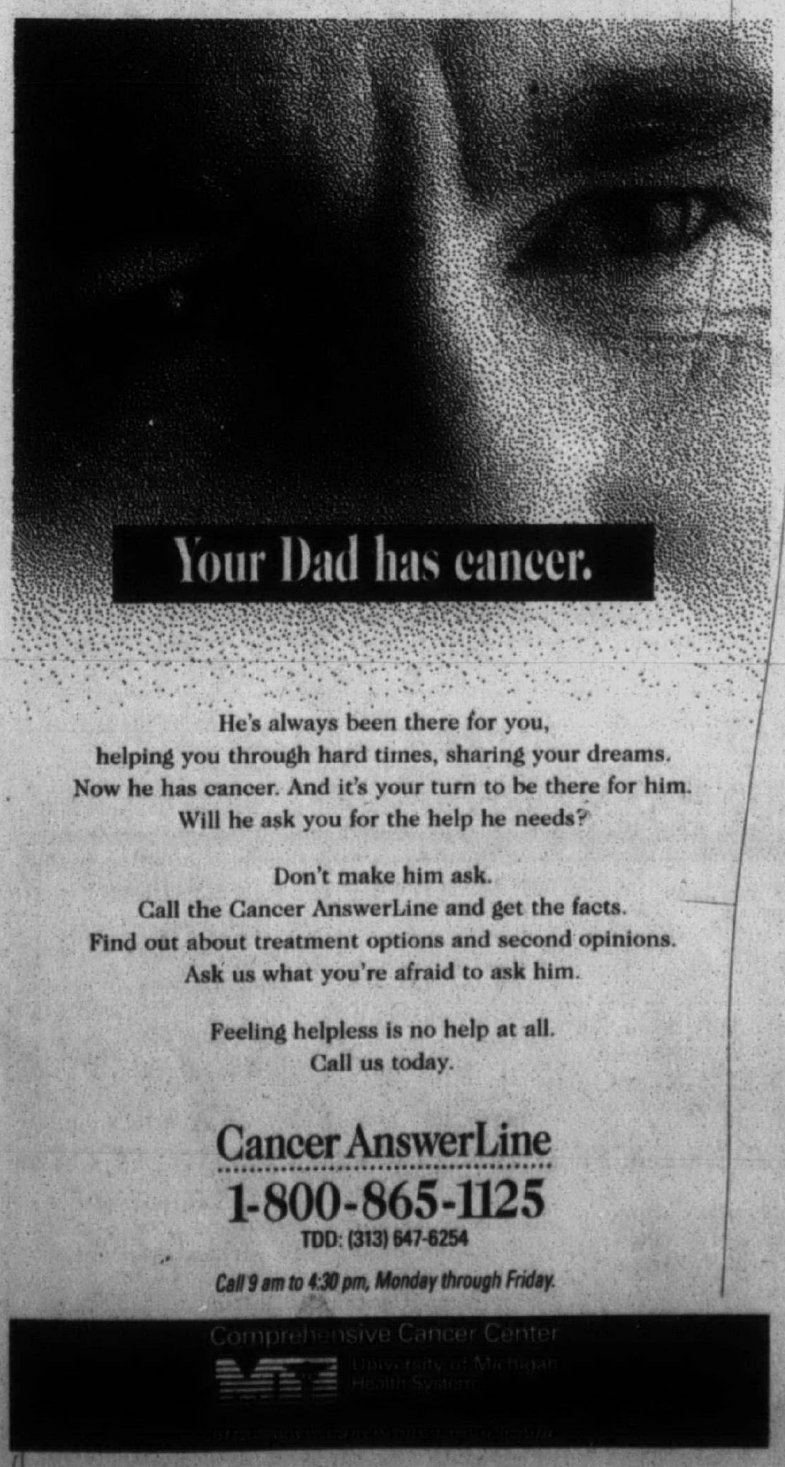

Hudson's hosts essay contest

Hudson's invites students to participate in a Black History month contest. Students must write (in 150 words or less) "What Black History Means to Me." Winners and runners-up will be chosen in three age groups: 6-9 years; 10-13 years; 14-18 years. Winners receive a $100 gift certificate and four tickets to Greenfield Village & Museum. Pick up entries at any Hudson store - contest deadline is Friday, Feb. 28. Details on the entry forms.

Makeup book is exclusive

Through the month of February, Neiman Marcus introduces "Bobbi Brown Beauty: The Ultimate Beauty Resource Book" available for $30 through the cosmetic department. Brown holds a degree in theatrical makeup from Emerson University in Boston.

Carvers warm up at local ice shows

As education coordinator for the Plymouth International Ice Sculpture Spectacular, Richard Teeple was doing everything he loved during the festival. The Plymouth chef, an ice carving instructor at Henry Ford Community College, Dearborn, loves to teach, and watch his students compete in ice shows.

They'll be doing that through Feb. 3 at Zender's Snowfest '97 in Frankenmuth. Teeple will also be competing. He knows how costly the art can be. Last year, HFCC spent about $3,000 per student for ice and tools. Those $30 to $45 blocks of frozen water add up fast.

"Carving displays for Plymouth and Birmingham is a win-win situation for the community and merchants who provide ice for students to practice their training that could otherwise be costly for them to do," said Teeple, whose most accomplished student, Ted Wakar of Canton, won the world championship in Japan last year with team mate Jim Bur Jr.

During the 1995-96 season, 37 awards in collegiate, amateur and professional competitions in seven cities throughout Michigan and Ohio went to members of the HFCC Ice and Snow Carving Club. Among the local winners last year were J.R. Lorentz of Garden City and Brian Riggs of Plymouth.

"Chef Teeple's classes are really exciting. I didn't know anything before I took the class. During this last year I've learned ice carving's a lot of hard work and takes a lot of dedication. If you're weak in your drawing you have to spend hours studying and drawing but I like competing. You just work full speed to finish your piece in the allotted time and hope you don't crash and burn," said William Rose who hopes to follow Wakar's winning ways when he competes at the U.S. National Collegiate Ice Carving Competitions in Frankenmuth this weekend.

Teeple's students will be at the Birmingham Winterfest Feb. 6-9 carving displays under the direction of Mark Scofield, a Livonia resident, part-time instructor at HFCC and chef for the Birmingham Community House.

French chefs originated the art of ice carving more than 200 years ago. Those first sculptures were used as functional food holders to keep food cold during elaborate buffets. Russian chefs learned the art from the French at the turn of the century. Japanese chefs picked up ice carving from the French in the last 30 years. Teeple wants to interest students in the art of ice carving because it's one aspect of being a chef but also because competing is a challenge.

For more information about the ice carving classes at HFCC call the continuing education office, (313) 845-9865.

Classical concerts programmed for families

BY CORINNE ABATT • SPECIAL WRITER

While focusing on the whole family isn't exactly new in the realms of classical music, right now, in our area, there's an increased emphasis on programming for all ages.

Underlying this welcome flurry of musical events designed for everyone from tots to grandparents is the awareness of the importance of building future audiences.

Detroit Symphony Orchestra

"The Detroit Symphony Orchestra has been giving concerts, in one form or another, for young people for over 70 years," said Jill Woodward, spokesperson for the DSO. "A lot of our present subscribers started by coming to young people's concerts."

DSO does five concerts for young people at Orchestra Hall in Detroit, and three for tiny tots at Mercy High School Auditorium in Farmington Hills each season.

"We try to make a lot of these concerts participatory, and there's always an educational element," said Woodward.

Children's entertainer "Rory" kicks off the DSO's three-concert Tiny Tots series Feb. 8. Host of "Rory's Place" on The Learning Channel (TLC), Rory is visiting the DSO with three of her puppet playmates — Reddy, an inquisitive six year old girl who loves animals; Duncan, a five year old boy who is fascinated by machines; and Buster the Alligator, a composing curmudgeon who writes songs, plays the keyboard and harmonica.

Rory and her friends will perform a mix of original music and childhood classics with the DSO, conveying important messages through songs like "It's A Great Big World" and "Take Care of Yourself," while having fun with songs like "I've Been Working on the Railroad," and "Take Me Out to the Ball Game."

Livonia Symphony Orchestra

Bringing the classics to the suburbs has been the mission of the Livonia Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Volodymyr Schesiuk of Garden City. "I try to grow my audience by exposing them to different works," said Schesiuk. He encourages families — grandparents, parents and children, to attend his concerts.

Family concerts

- Tiny Tots Concert, Rory with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra – 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, Mercy High School Auditorium, (11 Mile Road at Middlebelt) Farmington Hills. General admission tickets $10. Call (313) 833-3700.
- "Dance Internationale," Livonia Symphony Orchestra – 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, James P. Cantl Auditorium at Churchill High School, (Newburgh between Ann Arbor Road and Joy), Livonia. Tickets $10, call (313) 421-1111 or Ticketmaster (810) 645-6666.
- "Musical Carnival," Lyric Chamber Ensemble – 3:30 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 9, Millennium Theatre, Southfield (near Northland Shopping Mall on J.L. Hudson Drive). Two-for-one coupons for this and other LCE programs available at Hudsons and Target stores. Individual concert tickets $18 adults, $15 students and seniors; $5 children 16 and under. Call (810) 357-1111. Concert Prelude at 3 p.m. features students of LCE's Summer Chamber Music Camp.
- "Family Fantasia," Plymouth Symphony Orchestra — 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 16, Novi High School Auditorium, 24062 Taft Road (corner of 10 Mile Road and Taft Road). Tickets $8 adults, $4 children. Call (313) 451-2112.
  The first 250 people who purchase a ticket to "Family Fantasia" will receive a free ticket to the Detroit Whalers hockey game on Feb. 20. Limit four tickets per family.
- "Hot Buttered Pops," Farmington Area Philharmonic – 3 p.m. Sunday, March 2, Brighton Performing Arts Center, 7878 Brighton Road (Exit 147 off I-96). Tickets $12, call (810) 227-3998 for information, or (810) 229-1419 for tickets.
- "Hot Buttered Pops – The Sequel," Farmington Area Philharmonic, 3 p.m. Sunday, March 9, Redford Theatre, 17360 Lahser Road, Detroit. Tickets $15 general admission, $20 reserved. Call Metrobank (810) 474-6400 or (810) 478-2075.

"Classical music is not terrible, it's very interesting," said Schesiuk. "It can bring new pages to your life. Coming to these concerts is a first step toward introducing children to classical music. I would like to make this first step easier by presenting concerts that include some new and familiar music."

You'll be tapping your toes Feb. 8 when the orchestra presents "Dance Internationale," an evening of international dance selections featuring violinist Benjamin Robison, one of the LSO's Young Artist Competition winners.

The program is a mix of familiar and unfamiliar music including — Bernstein's "Symphonic Dances from West Side Story," Chopin's "Polonaise," and Zaporozhe Cossaks Dance by Gliere.

"We will be playing the music, with dance melodies, of different nations — United States, Ukraine, Romania, Poland, Armenia, Italy and Spain," said Schesiuk. Robison, a student at the Cleveland Institute of Music, will be featured on Waxman's "Carmen Fantasie," written with themes from "Carmen."

Plymouth Symphony Orchestra

The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra is taking a brave, new, exciting approach to luring youngsters and their families toward the classics.

"Family Fantasia" Feb. 16 at Novi High School Auditorium is truly a something-for-everyone event. It combines action, music, magic and rising stars in worlds of sports and classical music.

Magician Bill Heine is one of the guest performers. Young Artist Competition winner, Christopher Blossom, alto sax, will play Concerto da Camera by Jacques Ibert with the orchestra.

After that comes an actual tour of the orchestra when children in the audience are invited to walk-through the orchestra during the performance of Moussorgsky's "Night on Bald Mountain."

"We've done this before. It's so popular a lot of kids go through twice," said Bonnie Holyoak, PSO executive director.

Before the concert there will be rising sports stars in the auditorium lobby. Members of the Whalers Hockey Team, based at Compuware in Plymouth Township, will be on hand to greet folks and sign autographs.

Lyric Chamber Ensemble

Consider the family-oriented concert, "Musical Carnival" to be held at the Millennium Theatre in Southfield on Feb. 9 a test case. It's the second one of this kind on the current Lyric Chamber Ensemble Series.

Artistic director Fedora Horowitz said she's anxious to see if parents and grandparents will forget about baby sitters and brings their kids and grandkids with them to a concert.

"We always try to combine two different artistic groups in our concerts and use metropolitan area talent. . . we would love to continue to do these family-type programs. This one will tell us if its' desirable to continue."

"Musical Carnival," Horowitz says, is designed to appeal to all ages. The Detroit-based Atlantis

Twenty-five years ago Jeffrey Roth wanted to buy a sports car. Instead his wife Wendy suggested they collect art. Now the West Bloomfield couple owns an extensive collection by contemporary American artists Roy Lichtenstein, Frank Stella and Alex Katz. Two of the Roths' prints are currently on loan to the University of Michigan Museum of Art for the Michigan Collectors exhibition.

If you've ever wondered what it would be like to glimpse into the home of a private collector, now's your chance. In celebration of the Museum of Art's 50th anniversary, major art collectors, with ties to Michigan, will loan their works for the Feb. 8 to April 13 exhibition of more than 125 paintings, sculptures, prints and photographs.

DIA lectures, classes 'Celebrate Black Cultures'

The Detroit Institute of Arts, 5200 Woodward, offers a variety of programs.

Call (313) 833-7900 for information.

The DIA presents "A Celebration of Black Cultures," a variety of activities and events marking Black History Month, through March 2. Programs include lectures, gallery discussions, classes, videos, storytelling, a recital and a film. Docent-guided tours of the African galleries are offered noon Saturdays and 3 p.m. Sundays through February.

One of the events is storytelling by Barbara Clark 2 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, in Lecture Hall. Clark will tell tales from West Africa and the African-American experience. Sign-language interpretation featured.

A watercolor seminar, which may be taken as an individual, one-day class, concludes Saturday, Feb. 8. In Saturday's session, painter and Wayne State University professor Jim Nawara will discuss his work, demonstrate basic transparent watercolor methods and assist participants with color painting. Call (313) 833-4249 for fees and other information.

A class, "Survey of World Art III," will take place Thursdays, Feb. 20 to May 15, in the Holley Room (no class Feb. 27 and April 3). The class begins with 20th century art of the Western world, then turns to non-Western cultures, emphasizing African, American Indian, pre-Columbian, Islamic and Asian art. Instructors are DIA staffers. Call (313) 833-4249 for fees and other information.

Learn to use watercolors to create your own paintings inspired by works in the DIA's Michigan Water Color Society 50th Annual Exhibition in a drop-in workshop noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, in the Education Classroom.

Michigan Water Color Society chairman and WSU graphic arts professor Stanley Rosenthal will discuss the Michigan Water Color Society 50th Annual Exhibition in a gallery tour 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 9, in the Knight Gallery.

A lecture, "Starting Over," will take place 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 13, in Lecture Hall. Charles Gwathmey of Gwathmey Siegel and Associates will discuss contemporary architecture.

Video Presentation: Narrator Wynton Marsalis demonstrates parallels between Bearden's art and jazz exploring Bearden's creative genius, his philosophy of art, and unique use of the collage medium in the video "Romare Bearden: Visualize Jazz," to be presented 2 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 2 and Saturday, Feb. 22 in the Lecture hall at the Detroit Institute of Arts.

Canaletto, and Christo, was through the courtesy of collectors from across the country including 14 from Birmingham, West Bloomfield and Bloomfield Hills.

All contributors have connections to Michigan either as former alumni of the University of Michigan or as a resident of Michigan.

The Roths, whose son and daughter attend the University of Michigan as did Wendy, are loaning two works to the Museum of Art: one a mixed media print by Stella, the other a print by Katz titled "The Wedding Dress."

"I think it's very important for the public to see the work of different artists. I'm happy deriving pleasure from it so why not make others happy," said Jeffrey Roth, who established the Rita Roth Memorial Scholarship at the University of Michigan School of Art & Design in honor of his mother, a U-M graduate.

Former Sen. Jack Faxon, a longtime supporter of the arts who initiated legislation for the founding of the Michigan Council of the Arts, lent two African carvings: a 48-inch Epa mask from the Yoruba tribe featuring the figure of a high priest holding horns that contain magic, and a 36-inch Ibo male figure.

A painter himself with a loft in New York, Faxon initially collected modern art but gradually switched to African art nearly 30 years ago after realizing artists like Braque, Picasso and Brancusi were looking to it for inspiration. Even though Faxon holds a master of arts and history degree, the purchase of pieces from New York auctions and dealers around the country continues to be an educational process. When in doubt of authenticity or value, the University of Michigan graduate consults the experts at the Detroit Institute of Arts for confirmation.

"It is a tremendous challenge to learn and develop through the acquisition of objects that are not only aesthetically pleasing but historically related. Collecting is a form of lifelong learning. Each time you become knowledgeable. I research and read the literature about each acquisition. I'm always challenged by what I haven't seen or known before," said Faxon who lives in Birmingham.

For the last six months museum director William Hennessey traveled to New York, Chicago, Virginia and Oakland County in search of the drawings by Egon Schiele, a Greek bronze vessel dating from around 300 B.C., and a collage Christo created in preparation for his renowned California "Running Fence" installation.

Frequently playing the game "which one would he take home if he could," Hennessey let the selection grow naturally out of the visited collections.

"The show was curated in collaboration with the collectors themselves. We began with a small list of people we already knew and asked who else should we talk to. For me it was such an enjoyable experience to walk around the homes of passionate collectors and see the light shining in their eyes and excitement coming into their voices when speaking about their art," said Hennessey, concurring with Roth that the general public should have the opportunity to be exposed to work they might not otherwise see.

"I think most collectors take delight in owning these works and in sharing them with others. And that's what good art is all about, that sense of sharing."

As he approached collectors, Hennessey found them very gracious. He sees each work loaned as a tribute and gesture of recognition for one of America's finest university art museums.

"The surprise that came is that we're already talking about a Michigan Collectors II and III. There is no Asian art in the exhibition but in the future it will have its own show as will the decorative arts," said Hennessey.

In addition to the Roths and Faxon, local residents loaning art to the exhibition include A. Alfred Taubman, Stanley and Margaret Winkelman, Robert Sosnick, Maurice Cohen, Oscar and Dede Feldman, Eugene Applebaum, and Alan and Marianne Schwartz of Bloomfield Hills; Dr. Garabed Belian, Kempf Hogan, Ruth Rattner, Marc A. Schwartz, and William and Ellen Taubman of Birmingham, and William and Ellen Kahn of Franklin.

In honor of its 50th anniversary, the museum will unveil its latest acquisition on Feb. 8. Hennessey spent the last year looking in London, Paris and New York for Gaspare Traversi's portrait of the biblical heroine Judith. The painting by the Naples artist is from the 1740s.

Although the museum adds more than 100 works to its collection annually, the purchase of a major painting happens only every couple of years. One the magnitude of Traversi's hasn't occurred in 10 years. Hennessey hopes the Michigan Collectors exhibition will inspire more gifts to the museum.

"The exhibit is important because you get a glimpse into the homes of people who collect but also because we hope works will find their way to the museum as gifts," said Hennessey.

"We're a small museum and don't have a huge amount of money so we depend on members of the community to add to our collection."

Expedition Puppets will perform while The Cuttime Players, all members of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, play "The Comedians" by Dmitri Kabalevsky, Polka and Fugue from "Schwanda the Bagpiper," by Jaromir Weinberger.

"I worked with Nancy Hanks (artistic director of Altantis Expedition) years ago and they are as much for children as for adults. That time we did Stravinsky's "Firebird." Atlantis Expedition, founded in 1976, has always focused on the animation of classical music.

There will be a Mardi Gras theme after glow to benefit the summer music camp. Tickets are $40 per person. Call (810) 357-1111.

Farmington Area Philharmonic

The subject of family concerts is a hot one to Karen Nixon Lane, music director of the Farmington Area Philharmonic. "Since our group was founded in 1990, that was our specific purpose — to fill that void in family entertainment," she said.

Audiences that loved "Hot Buttered Pops" last season will have another chance to savor more of the same at "Hot Buttered Pops — The Sequel," at the Redford Theatre on March 9.

"Hot Buttered Pops," which featured music from "Rocky," "Schindler's List," and other popular movies will be presented at the Brighton Performing Arts Center on March 2. That concert, sponsored by the Brighton Rotary Club, is to benefit Brighton Senior Centers.

"Hot Buttered Pops was the most well-attended concert we've ever done," said Lane, who grew up in Livonia. "

Like a movie sequel, the March 9 concert will include music from popular movies — "Toy Story," "Babe," and "Star Wars," and some surprises. Stay tuned for details.

New, improved 'Star Wars' brings back thrill of youth

BY JOHN MONAGHAN
SPECIAL WRITER

I was 14 when "Star Wars" first arrived in 1977 and I haven't been as thrilled by a movie since. That was until recently when I saw it again on the big screen in its much-hyped rerelease.

It opened at theaters everywhere Friday. Few people believed in the project when George Lucas weaved his complex story set a long time ago in a galaxy far, far away.

Part of the movie's legend is how numerous studio executives turned the project down only to see it gross more than any film before it. More significant is how it changed the way movies are made and marketed.

Special effects, once represented by Irwin Allen's disaster epics, were now sophisticated to the point that every blockbuster after it was forced to up the ante. It proves beyond a doubt the limitations of watching a movie on video.

Twentieth Century Fox has put some $35 million into the restoration and rerelease of the "Star Wars" trilogy, which includes "The Empire Strikes Back" and "Return of the Jedi" over the next two months. Its success at the box office is ensured: an entire generation of fans were in diapers when the movies last hit the big screen.

For the one or two of you in the galaxy that don't know the story: Luke Skywalker, reluctant farm boy and orphaned son of a Jedi Knight, is recruited to rescue a princess and save the universe from black-cloaked Darth Vader. Part "Wizard of Oz," part Joseph Campbell hero legend, the movie is most closely based on Akira Kurosawa's 1958 adventure epic "The Hidden Fortress."

Is the movie all that different in the digitally remastered version? Not really when you get right down to it. Sound has been improved, special effects enhanced, and a handful of scenes from the cutting room floor have been worked back in.

One of the new scenes that works: Han Solo talks with a new and improved Jabba the Hut, a gelatinous loan shark who pressures the financially strapped pilot to repay borrowed money or else. It brings more urgency to Solo's desire to be well paid for his efforts throughout the film.

A scene that sort of works: At the end, the relationship between Skywalker and fellow fighter pilot Biggs has always been unclear.

A scene right before the climactic battle now establishes them as friends from home, but an earlier meeting is still missing.

And something not entirely necessary: Lucas thought that Solo shooting a green-skinned bounty hunter under the table was less than chivalrous. The creature now gets a shot out that deflects over Solo's head.

Lucas was always dissatisfied with the special effects at the Mos Eisley space port where Skywalker, his robot companions, and Obi Wan Kenobi (an amazing bit of work by the late Alec Guinness) seek transport. The scene in the cantina still looks like a Muppet movie, but the street outside is now teeming with strange creatures and more traffic.

Probably the most amazing thing about "Star Wars" this time around is how well the whole thing holds up. For a movie made in the era of Farrah and the Bee Gees, the white plastic and polyester set design looks surprisingly timeless. Only the feathered hair styles on actors Mark Hamill and Harrison Ford give it away.

I suspect that the other two films in the series won't stand up quite as well.

Though 1980s "Empire" was a worthy sequel with even-better special effects, Lucas lost me completely when he handed the action over to the bear-like Ewoks in 1982s "Jedi."

Even bigger than these rereleases is the buzz about George Lucas directing his first film in 20 years (the sequels were directed by others, though Lucas still pulled the strings). He will actually helm the first in a trio of "Star Wars" prequels, scheduled for release shortly after the millennium. And here's the thing that never fails to blow me away: the credits of "Star Wars" open with the words Episode IV, a reminder that Lucas wasn't just one of the '70s most entertaining directors; he was also a wizardly prophet. He looked ahead 20 years to see the future of his science fiction franchise.

John Monaghan welcomes your calls and comments. You can listen to him on Dave Dixon's Radio Show AM 1270, 8 p.m. to midnight Saturdays. To leave John a voice mail message, dial (313) 953-2047 on a touch-tone phone, mailbox 1866.

Win tickets to 'That Darn Cat' remake

Be one of the first 40 readers to correctly answer the questions in our "That Darn Cat" trivia quiz to win a family four pack of tickets to a preview screening of "That Darn Cat," opening Friday, Feb. 14 at metro Detroit movie theaters.

The preview screening is 10 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 8 at AMC Old Orchard, 12 Mile Road at Orchard Lake Road in Farmington Hills.

"That Darn Cat," a remake of the 1965 Walt Disney comedy, is about a slippery feline who helps the FBI solve a kidnapping case.

Christina Ricci stars as 16-year-old Patti Randall, whose boredom with her sleepy hometown awakens to feverish excitement when her tomcat D.C. (Darn Cat), delivers an important clue in a mysterious kidnapping.

With novice FBI Agent Kelso (Doug E. Doug) at her side, Patti must track D.C. through all his favorite hangouts, hoping to solve the mystery.

The would-be detectives are led into hilarious entanglements, complete with double identities and outrageous misunderstandings.

Directed by Bob Spiers, "That Darn Cat" is rated PG.

Fax your trivia quiz responses to: Keely Wygonik, Arts & Leisure Editor, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Inc., (313) 591-7279, or send them to Wygonik's attention at the Observer, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150. Only one entry per family.

DANCE

American Ballet Theatre presents 'Apollo,' 'Swan Lake'

Michigan Opera Theatre's "Season of Dance" at the Detroit Opera House begins with American Ballet Theatre with a mixed repertory program Feb. 4-5, and a special performance of Tchaikovsky's "Swan Lake," Feb. 6-9. American Ballet Theatre has not performed in Detroit since 1984.

The mixed program includes performances of George Balanchine's "Apollo," Kevin McKenzie's newly choreographed "Transcendental Etudes" and Agnes de Mille's "Rodeo."

Tickets are available at the Michigan Opera Theatre Ticket Office or phone calling (313) 874-SING. Tickets are also available at Ticketmaster outlets, (810) 645-6666.

In the 1940s American Ballet Theatre's promotional posters proclaimed the company as "America's first ballet theater, presenting the greatest collaboration in ballet history."

Since that time American Ballet Theatre has presented some of the greatest ballet in this century. It is not surprising that the 1995 revival of George Balanchine's "Apollo" was received with critical acclaim.

American Ballet Theatre stars Jose Manuel Carreno, Susan Jaffe, Julie Kent and Paloma Herrera will dance the complete version of Balanchine's first masterpiece at the Detroit Opera House.

American Ballet Theatre Artistic Director Kevin McKenzie has choreographed a new ballet "Transcendental Etudes," to the music of Franz Liszt's "Transcendental Etudes," for Piano.

Of the Company's performance of Agnes de Mille's "Rodeo," the "New York Times," proclaimed, "The story of a cowgirl who wants to be one of the boys, until she discovers it is one of the boys she wants, is amusing...a pleasing evocation of that cowboy never-never land of childhood nostalgia."

"Rodeo" is danced to the music of Aaron Copland.

American Ballet Theatre will present five performances of "Swan Lake," Feb. 6-9. It has been said that dance studios around the world are filled with children who take ballet lessons because of seeing a performance of "Swan Lake."

The story, in its simplest form, is of a beautiful princess who, under the spell of a wicked sorcerer, meets a brave prince who swears to love her forever and save her from the fate of living the rest of her life as a swan.

Choreographed after the original Petipa/Ivanov version, and set to music by Peter Ilyitch Tchaikovsky, this production is sure to please.

The series continues March 11-16 with the Dance Theatre of Harlem's "Detroit Residency Program."

April 15-20 features the Cleveland Ballet's "Blue Suede Shoes" in a production designed by Hollywood star Bob Mackie, accompanied by 36 songs by Elvis Presley.

PAUL KOLNI

Ballet: Susan Jaffe and Jose Manuel Carreno in the American Ballet Theatre presention of George Balanchine's "Apollo" at the Detroit Opera House.

Artbeat features various happenings in the suburban arts world. Send news leads to Linda Ann Chomin in care of Keely Wygonik, Arts & Entertainment Editor, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, Inc., 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI 48150, or fax them to (313) 591-7279.

RECEPTION RESCHEDULED

Due to treacherous weather conditions on the original date earlier this month, the Madonna University art department has rescheduled its "Origami V" reception for 4 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 6 in the library wing Exhibit Gallery on the Livonia campus.

A free demonstration and lesson in the ancient art of paper folding will take place by members of the Ann Arbor Society 4 Origami whose origami is on display. The public is invited to the free event. This is also the final opportunity to view the exhibit which closes after the reception.

ARTISTS OF THE MONTH

The Livonia Arts Commission features diverse exhibits of basketry and watercolors in two of its three venues during the month of February.

Opening Feb. 3 in the second floor showcases at the Livonia Civic Center Library is basket making by Kathi Fricke of Eaton Rapids. A third generation fiber artist, Fricke designs baskets influenced and inspired by the Native American culture and her love of the great outdoors. Her work has been exhibited at the Dayton Institute of Arts' Oktoberfest and the Michigan Renaissance Festival.Although Fricke is primarily self-taught, she has studied with nationally known weavers. She has shared her knowledge and talents as a guest instructor in West Bloomfield schools.Fricke's basketry remains on exhibit through Feb. 26.

Farmington Hills artist Edee Joppich opened her 26th one woman exhibit Jan. 26 at the Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery. Joppich, an instructor at the Visual Arts Association of Livonia and owner of Joppich's Bay Street Gallery in Northport, uses her large scale paintings as a vehicle to communicate human experiences and thereby provoke thought in viewers.

Joppich's work continues on display through Feb. 22 in the Fine Arts Gallery.

The Livonia Civic Center Library is at 32777 Five Mile Road east of Farmington. Hours for both shows are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, until 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

POETRY READINGS

Just in time for Valentine's Day, the Plymouth Poets present the second of a four part Winter Writer Series 7-11 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 13 at the Coffee Bean Company, 884 Penniman, at Harvey, in Plymouth.

"A Night of Women Poets: Love That Went Right and Love That Went Wrong" will feature Reba Devine, Monica Pope and Ann E. Horvath, who will read her poems "Thirsty" and "Serial Relationships."

"Poetry opens emotions in people whether you write or simply listen," said Ann E. Horvath.

The Winter Writer Series continues the Plymouth Poets' five year tradition of bringing Michigan poets and writers to Plymouth every second Thursday until July. There is an open microphone at all shows and taping of the live event for the Plymouth Poets' cable TV show "The Poet and the Power."

Upcoming readings include the well-attended Irish Writers Night at the Box Bar (Ann Arbor Trail and Main Street in Plymouth) on March 13 featuring Rod Reinhart, Tony Johnston, Jerry Malonie, Kim Webb, and Bill Joyner.

To learn more about the series or reading your poetry during the open microphone segment, call Rod Reinhart, (313) 459-7319, or Ann Horvath, (313) 728-5734.

CALL FOR ARTISTS

The University of Michigan-Dearborn Art Museum Project is looking for artists who live or work in Michigan to participate in an art competition. Deadline for entry is Feb. 28.

Selected works will be displayed in the "Exotics: Botanicals by Michigan Artists' exhibition in the newly created Alfred Berkowitz Gallery at the UM-Dearborn in April and May.

Kenneth R. Gross, director of the art museum project at UM-Dearborn, is specifically seeking two dimensional artworks depicting exotic floral subjects such as orchids, calla lilies and jack-in-the-pulpits created in various techniques and media including drawing, painting, photography, print making and collage.

Works will be selected from slide entries by artists age 18 and older.

For more information or to request a competition prospectus call Gross at (313) 593-5058.

WINNERS ANNOUNCED

Organizers of the Plymouth Ice Spectacular recently released the final results of the competitions which took place Jan. 15-20. Among the winners were many Observerland ice sculptors including J. R. Lorentz of Garden City who with his partner Matt Cooper (Fenton) took the Third Place Bronze Medal in the Professional Team category.

Jim Bur, Jr., a graduate of Livonia's Churchill High School, won the First Place Gold Medal for Professional Individual; Dana Leja of Livonia placed fourth for a Silver Medal.

In the College Team competition Paul Litton and Lawrence Nault of Schoolcraft College in Livonia took Third Place Bronze Medals, and in College Individual Clayton Ealy, also from Schoolcraft, won a Third Place Silver Medal.

Students from Catholic Central High School in Redford dominated the High School category. Taking First Place in the High School Individual division for a second year was Nicholas Watts, a Plymouth resident and student at Catholic Central High School in Redford. Chris Ford of Plymouth won Second Place and Steven Watts, also of Plymouth, placed Third. Brothers Nicholas and Steven Watts teamed with Ford to win First Place in the High School Team division.

Inspiring area writers offer prescription for change

ESTHER LITTMANN

Two well-known local authors combine personal and professional experience to help us reconnect with ourselves and our loved ones.

"Change," writes motivational speaker and workshop trainer Joyce Weiss, "is inevitable in this fast-paced world." In response, you can either languish or go "Full Speed Ahead" by taking the driver's seat in your personal and professional life.

The author's transportation metaphor — appropriate for a girl who grew up in an automotive town — is the title of her first book (Bloomfield Press, 1996, $16.95). It also reflects an optimism and zest for life that challenges us to equate daily stress with the power of the wind. If used creatively, both can be channeled "into a force of positive change."

Yet too often we get bogged down by negative feelings. Take "fear," for example. It saps our energy and consumes valuable time. Yet according to Weiss, fear is often nothing more than an acronym for "False Evidence Appearing Real."

Likewise, worry is simply "mentally rehearsing a potential disaster," while failure is "only a temporary setback." Conquer these "Control Busters," says the Bloomfield Township resident, and you'll be on your way to personal growth and opportunity.

In language that is concise, upbeat, and seasoned with proverbs, the woman who's known as the "Corporate Energizer" also teaches us to build rapport and networking skills, communicate effectively, appreciate diversity, and — best of all — simply get more fun out of life. Using a bit of reverse psychology and tongue-in-cheek humor, Weiss asks us to brainstorm the following question: "How can you guarantee yourself a life that is totally serious and dull?"

In a chapter on creativity, Weiss points out that "Creativity is not the exclusive property of geniuses, but an outlook, a set of skills and habits anyone can develop." Like Thomas Edison, who learned 1,800 ways how not to build a light bulb, we need to strengthen our "risk muscle . . . or it will atrophy."

"Full Speed Ahead" is inspirational, sensible, and fun. Reading Weiss's words of empowerment and following her action plans at the end of each chapter is an excellent way to tune up your psychic engine whenever it runs down.

Parenting

Now, what if you're ready to seize the day, but your pint-size toddler stamps his smartly sneakered foot and bellows "No!"? What if a "stubborn, oppositional, or defiant child" competes for control of your home?

James Windell, psychotherapist in private practice and frequently published and quoted author ("Discipline: 50 Failsafe Techniques for Parents" and "8 Weeks to a Well-Behaved Child"), explores the problem of rebellion in his recent publication "Children Who Say No When You Want Them To Say Yes" (Macmillan, 1996, $22.95).

Windell is no stranger to defiance in the young — nor to its solutions. The author admits that his book was largely inspired by his personal experiences with his son Jason, when the latter was a recalcitrant tyke who frequently challenged parental authority and patience.

What Windell learned on the homefront as well as in years of private practice and as clinical psychologist with the Oakland County Juvenile Court Clinic is recorded in a book that helps parents deal with all kinds of stubborn behavior, from normal obstinacy to conduct disorder caused by stressful circumstances.

Windell's bottom line is that defiance is a part of growing up. It is the wise parent who makes allowances for acts of rebellion and autonomy, but within prescribed limits.

At each developmental stage, writes the author, parents need to balance lessons in delayed gratification with encouragement for age-appropriate independence. To help Moms and Dads stay the course, Windell teaches rational and creative communication skills through modal dialogues. Stay firm, he advises, but use face-saving techniques like shared decision-making, reasoning, and humor so that parent-child encounters don't become a "Battle of Wills."

"Children Who Say No . . ." provides a no-nonsense approach to parenting, one that affirms the child's dignity without sacrificing parental authority.

"Full Speed Ahead" by Joyce Weiss can be purchased at Barnes and Noble in West Bloomfield or by calling (810) 681-5831. "How To Say No . . ." by James Windell can also be purchased at Barnes and Noble.

Esther Littmann is a resident of Bloomfield Township. She is a private tutor for Una Dworkin and Associates. You can leave her a message from a touch-tone phone at (313) 953-2047, mailbox number 1893. Her fax number is (810) 644-1314.

TRAVEL

Michigan ski slopes expanding to meet demand

Michigan's ski areas are expanding both on the slopes and off, to lure new eager learners, as well as, steady customers.

"To meet the growing recreational pursuits of families, seven ski areas are building new snowboard parks or enlarging existing ones," said Bill Best, AAA Michigan's Travel Service director.

The focus on family continues at most Michigan ski areas. At least seven ski areas are also introducing rentals of new "super-sidecut" skis, designed to allow nearly effortless turning. The industry hopes these new skis will revitalize long-term interest in skiing and build on last winter's success.

The state's largest ski development news comes from Boyne Mountain near Boyne Falls, which didn't end the previous season until May 12. In its largest expansion ever, Boyne opened 12 new runs this winter, increasing its terrain by nearly a third.

Runs as the new Disciples Ridge include five beginner, or "green" runs, three intermediate, or "blue" trails, and three advanced, or "black diamond" runs. The 12th new run, billed as Michigan's steepest trail, named Devil's Dive, is rated double-black diamond, with a 61 percent grade. The area is served by a new three-person chairlift.

Boyne added beginner's "carousels" at Boyne Mountain and Boyne Highlands, near Arbor Springs, which expanded its runs in 1992. First timers are towed in a circle by four revolving booms while gaining their balance and confidence. Boyne Highlands also created a second snowboard half-pipe, serviced by a rope tow.

In the Upper Peninsula, Indianhead Mountain, near Ironwood, cut three mile-long downhill trails, while Marquette Mountain, near Marquette, has a new all-terrain run for skiers and snowboarders, two glade trails, and a second snowboard half-pipe.

All aboard: These three young skiers ready for the chairlift in anticipation of what rests ahead.

Nub's Nob, near Harbor Springs, is featuring 10 more runs and a new four-place chairlift. This season, two beginner runs have been added, and a glade created in an intermediate area, adding 11 acres of terrain.

Just for families, Nub's also doubled the size of the children's terrain garden, rebuilt on four-place chair lift and increased snowmaking capacity. Cross-country skiers will find nearly four more miles of trails for striders and skaters.

Other improvements by region include:

SOUTHEASTERN MICHIGAN

Alpine Valley, near Milford, revamped its entire snowmaking system for greater efficiency and is offering day care for parents purchasing lift tickets.

Regulars at Mount Brighton, near Brighton, will return to an advanced ski hill that's up to 25 feet higher, plus sidecut ski and snowboard rentals.

Pine Knob, near has a new snowboard terrain park served by a rope tow.

WEST MICHIGAN

Bittersweet, near Otsego, added a rope tow to its terrain park and increased snowmaking 10 percent. At Crystal Mountain, near Thompsonville, construction is underway on the 50-unit Inn at the Mountain. The first 28 units will open next season, increasing hotel rooms by nearly 40 percent.

Crystal is offering snowshoe rental this season, with 1,200 acres of woods to explore. Downhillers can try "Sidecuts to Success," a new ski school program featuring super-sidecut skis.

Mount Holiday, near Traverse City, expanded its lodge for extra ski school and locker room space, upped snowmaking capacity 10 percent and enlarged its snowboard park, adding a rope tow and a second slide.

Shanty Creek, near Bellaire, is offering sidecut ski rentals and special five-day ski packages to emphasize midweek skiing, and is enhancing its children's terrain area.

The Homestead, Glen Arbor, will introduce guided cross-country telemark ski day and moonlight trips through private property in Leelanau County, geared to all ability levels (telemark cross-country skis allow easier downhill skiing.) Snowshoe rentals also will be available.

Swiss Valley, near Jones, increased its snowmaking capacity. Treetops, near Gaylord, is expanding its children's ski program for 4- to 10-year-olds to offer full and half-day lessons, and will feature high performance and sidecut ski rentals at its ski shop as well as snowboard rentals.

UPPER PENINSULA

Blackjack, near Bessemer, is in the second phase of snowmaking expansion, added a skier's terrain trail with jumps, tunnels and waves, as well as new snowboard rental equipment for its half-pipe and terrain park.

Norway Mountain, near Vulcan, opens a three-acre snowboard terrain park this winter. Half its downhill runs have been widened by up to 50 percent, and it will offer sidecut ski rentals.

Pine Mountain, near Iron Mountain, will open an eight-acre terrain garden and snowboard park served by a paddle lift. Sidecut skis are available for rent.

At Ski Brule, Iron River, the rental center and equipment have been expanded by 60 percent, with 100 sets of boards and boots. The ski shop will offer sidecut ski rentals.

EAST MICHIGAN

At Apple Mountain, near Freeland, children ages 4-6 ski free, and there are special learn-to-ski family packages. Snowsnake, near Harrison, sports a re-contoured snowboard area for easier chairlift access, and upgraded rental stocks.

TRAVEL

Canada via rail is the leisurely way to go

BY PATRICK IVORY
SPECIAL WRITER

Want to go on a train trip, eh? Maybe leave the country, meet people from around the world and see some beautiful scenery? If so, a Can Rail pass on Canada's VIA Rail would be all you would need.

A Can Rail pass allows 12 days of travel in a 30 day period. In low season which is Oct. 15 to May 15, with the current rate of exchange, the cost is $286 U.S.. In high season, which is May 15 to Oct. 15, the cost is $420 U.S. .

Rooms in the sleeper cars are available, but for the average traveler the cost is a bit pricey. For instance, for the trip I took from Toronto to Vancouver and back – the price would have been over $2,000.

So, for me it would be the economy class which provides a nice wide seat that reclines 45 degrees.

When I was booking the ticket I asked the ticket agent if it was possible to survive the four day and 3 night trip without a sleeping berth. In a charming French/Canadian accent he deadpanned, "Well, we haven't lost anybody yet."

Having completed the trip to and from the west coast, I can verify that on the trains I was on there were no casualties. Sleeping in a chair is not easy, but it is also a part of what makes it an experience.

I had the benefit of two seats to myself and was able to lay down with my head on my armrest and put my legs wherever I could fit them. It was far from perfect, but with the help of some ear plugs and with the confidence of having survived a couple of nights I eventually learned to let the motion of the train rock me to sleep.

Older passengers, whether it was because they were more experienced train travelers or because they simply had more patience, were better at getting themselves to sleep. There were men and women in their 50s on up that would be out like lights and snored through the night (remember ear plugs!) and looked refreshed in the morning.

The younger ones, which included college students from across Canada, couples from Europe and several solo sojourners from Australia and New Zealand, would writhe and contort in an effort to get comfortable at night and take naps throughout the day to compensate.

But sleeping was the only hard part and it also made it a bonding experience. Everyone on the train, young and old, was extremely friendly. By the time I reached my destination I felt I had gotten to know a lot of people. Several people from Canada and even Switzerland invited me to their homes. I had a French lesson as the train crept through the mountains and there was plenty sharing of food, magazines and CDs.

The tables in dining cars were covered with cloth. The silver ware tinkled whenever the train would pick up speed. Limited space meant having to share a table. This took a little getting used to, but it was great for meeting and talking to interesting people. There was a man on his way to Sioux Lookout in Northern Ontario, almost 90 years old, who shared his memories of when he was a child in England during World War I; there was a man in his 20s who was a Royal Canadian Mounted Police officer in the Yukon Territories; and there was a miner from New Zealand who was working his way around the world, just to name a few.

The food was surprisingly good although nothing very fancy. And considering we were captive customers, the prices were quite reasonable. A meal was usually $5-$6 Canadian. The first meal I had, I paid for it with an American $20 bill. With the rate of exchange at 30 percent in favor of the U.S. dollar, I received more than $20 change in Canadian currency.

While all of this was going on inside, on the outside the continent was slowly changing shape.

There are more lakes in Canada than the rest of the world combined. I suggest this trip if you need any convincing. Between Toronto and the Ontario/Manitoba border – a stretch that takes almost 26 hours – the train snakes its way through a thousand miles of rocky hills, lakes and streams. It is rather slow going due to the lack of straight aways, stops to let freight trains pass and picking people up and dropping people off in the little towns along the way. There were stops in towns like Hornpayne, Gogama and Sioux Lookout. Once, the train stopped, two backpackers got off and vanished into the woods.

Just before reaching Winnipeg, the Great Plains begin. With the perspective of riding in a train, which is higher than riding in a car, the prairies seemed even more immense than I remembered them to be. There were several farms where there was not a barn or farmhouse anywhere in sight. The only variation in the landscape was what looked like huge white sand dunes in the distance, but what was really potash being mined.

The scenery was not as interesting, but it felt good to be making time. The train rolled across Manitoba, Sasakatchewan and into Alberta through the course of the night. It is roughly the distance between Toronto and Manitoba but took about half the time.

In the morning the train was about 150 miles from Edmonton and the landscape began to change. We were still in farmland, but the farms were on rolling hills with an occasional river or lake. It was in this area I saw a gray wolf running at full tilt about 200 yards from the train.

On the other side of Edmonton there is a stretch that is surprisingly similar to Northern Michigan. It featured gently rolling hills, forests and farms and some large lakes surrounded by cottages.

The comparison stopped around the town of Hinton, which is where we got our first glimpse of the Canadian Rockies. At that point the train trip became a scenic tour. First, there were rocky cliffs and by the time we reached Jasper, some 30 miles later, we were surrounded by snow covered peaks. By the side of the railroad tracks were elk and big horned sheep.

Jasper is the highlight of the trip and for many of the train's passengers was their destination. Jasper offers skiing, mountain climbing, mountain biking, bus tours, restaurants and lodging. It is touristy, but it isn't overbuilt.

It you are not in a big hurry it might be a good idea to get off the train and spend some time sightseeing. But if you do get off it will be a couple of days before the next train comes through.

Just beyond Jasper the train crossed the continental divide and into British Columbia. It also began its long descent toward the Pacific Ocean. Just to the north at this point we could see Mount Robeson, the highest point in the Canadian Rockies.

Unfortunately, a good amount of time in this part of the mountain is in the dark both coming and going, although on the way back, a full moon silhouetted these huge hills all night long.

When I awoke the next morning on the trip west, we were near the town of Hope, British Columbia. It is the beginning of an area known as the Fraser River Valley. It is one of the fastest growing areas in Canada and it is easy to see why. When I was there, in early May, this area was lush and green.

Vancouver is similar to Seattle, which is only 140 miles south, in style and vibrancy. The downtown features sparkling modern skyscrapers and miles and miles of new housing developments around the city.

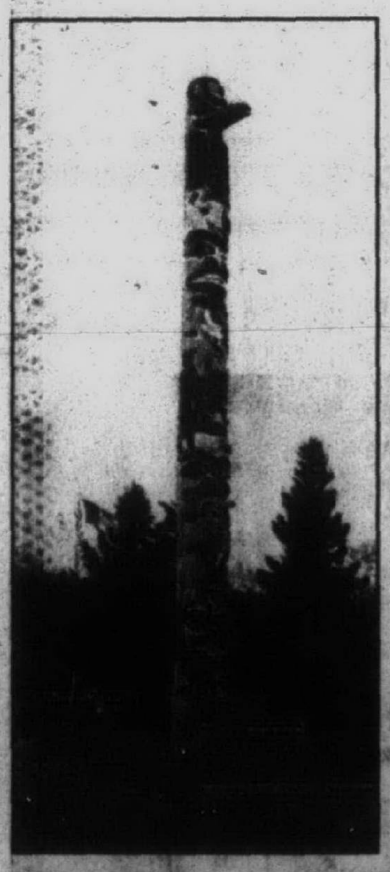

Unlike Seattle, mountains rise up immediately to the east of the city. The combination of the skyline and the mountains is stunning.

It may say more about the modern traveler than it says about train travel that four days on the train might seem daunting. We have become accustomed to hopping on a plane and in no more than a few hours arriving at our destination. And when you are given only two weeks vacation it's hard to decide on spending half of it getting to and from where you are going. But if you've got the money, the time and are willing to give up a little comfort in return for an interesting experience, a trip on the VIA Rail is a trip you'd never forget

Rocks rebound, rip Glenn

BY NEAL ZIPSER
STAFF WRITER

For the first time this season, Plymouth Salem coach Bob Brodie inserted Tony Jancevski into the starting lineup — and the sophomore center didn't disappoint.

Jancevski recorded a career-high 16 points Friday in helping lead Salem to an impressive 87-72 victory over visiting Westland John Glenn.

Salem's victory increases the pileup in the race for the Western Lakes Activities Association regular-season title. The Rocks and Glenn are now 5-2 in the league — one game behind Walled Lake Central (6-1).

Farmington Hills Harrison and Plymouth Canton are also in the hunt with 5-2 records.

The victory kept the Rocks (10-3 overall) alive after two straight losses to Central and Canton.

"I was wondering if the team would bounce back after two tough losses, but they met the challenge," Brodie said. "We finished our toughest stretch of the season, but it doesn't get any easier in the league this year.

"This game was pivotal for us and we turned in a great team effort. The win keeps us alive."

Jancevski admitted he wasn't sure he would start, but was sure the Rocks would bounce back.

"We were down after the Canton loss, but we just weren't hitting our shots," Jancevski said. "We let that loss go, but we hope to see Canton in the districts."

Jancevski's inspiring play wasn't the only difference Friday. No matter who they had on the floor, the Rocks were hitting on all cylinders.

Nine players scored, led by Andy Power's 18 points and six assists. Nate Gray, who made 8-of-9 free throws in the fourth quarter, finished with 17 points.

But it was Jancevski's play that threw Glenn off early. Jancevski scored six of Salem's first 12 points, to the surprise of Glenn coach Mike Schuette.

"We scouted them and Power and (Andres) Lopez had great games," Schuette said. "Tony played well but I didn't realize he'd score so much tonight. He was impressive."

The Rocks jumped out to a 20-12 lead, but three-pointers by David Jarrett and Bryce Loughlin closed the gap to two entering the second quarter.

A three-point play by Reggie Spearmon gave the Rockets their only lead of the game, 23-22. But the Rocks went on an 21-10 run to end the first half, sparked by a pair of Power treys.

Triples by Power and Matt Mair gave Salem its biggest lead at 59-42 late in the third quarter.

Salem then got a big lift off the bench from Ben Szczepanski, who scored seven-straight points and grabbed four rebounds.

A 10-0 run by Glenn to start the fourth quarter cut the Salem lead to 65-57 with 4:50 left. The Rockets couldn't get any closer and were forced to foul.

Salem converted 16-of-20 free throws in the fourth quarter to hold off Glenn. For the game, the Rocks hit 21-of-28 attempts.

A courageous effort by Jarrett wasn't enough for Glenn, which fell to 6-6 overall. The senior forward poured in a game-high 23 points and grabbed seven boards.

The Rockets perhaps deserved a better fate. They shot 46 percent from the floor (26-of-56) and outrebounded Salem 32-29.

But the Rocks shot even better, finishing at a 51 percent (30-of-59) clip. Salem also took care of the ball (only 11 turnovers to Glenn's 22).

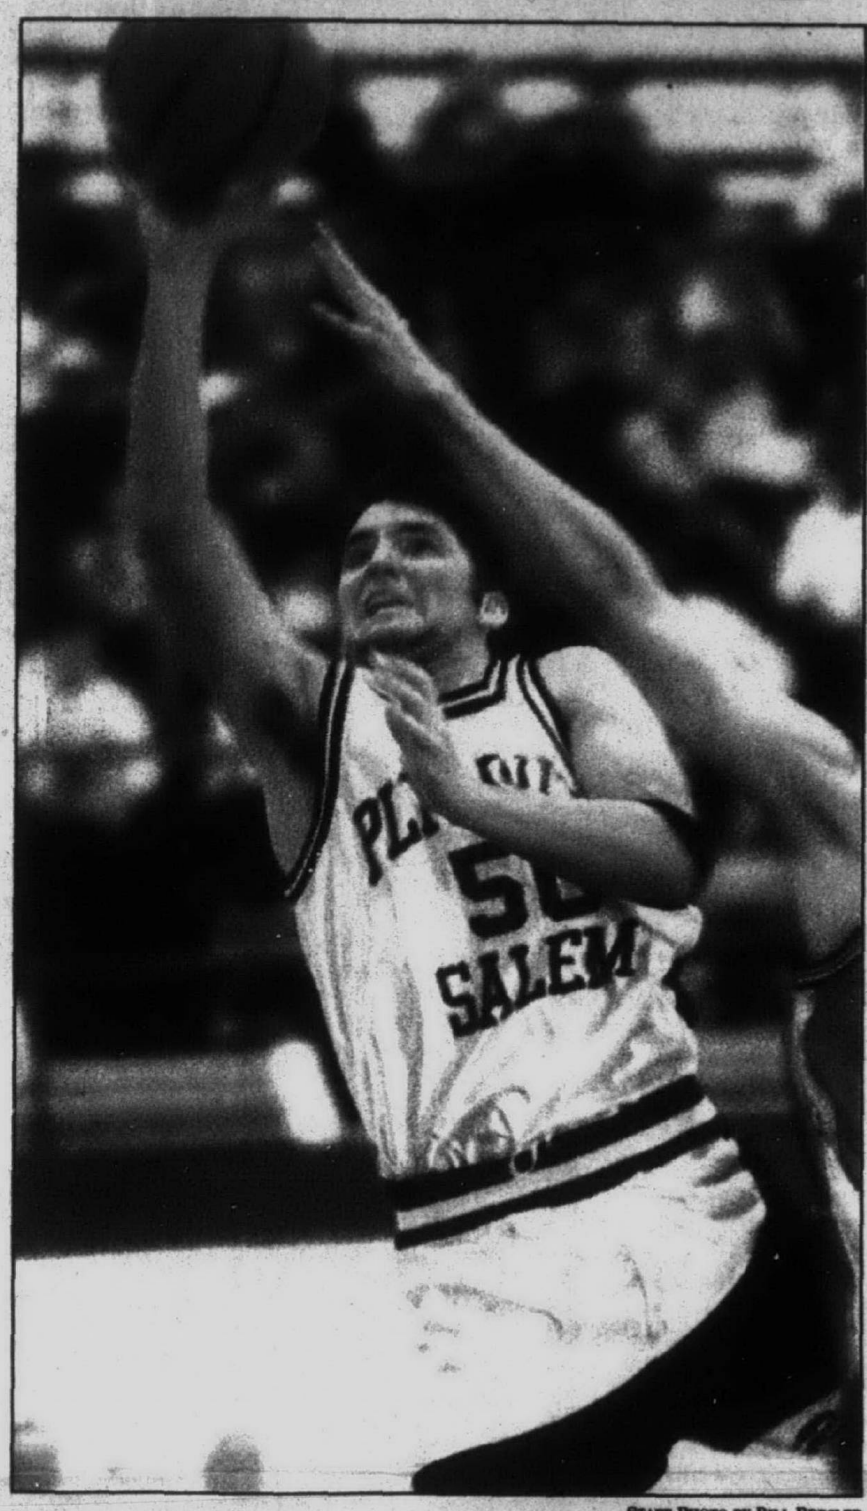

Knowing Glenn had the bigger and perhaps quicker team, Brodie figured defense would be imperative.

"We switched our defenses quite a bit and I think that gave them problems," Brodie said.

Glenn received 12 points from Brad Wilde, who came alive in the fourth quarter. Spearmon came off the bench to add 11 points and seven assists. Jon Becher chipped in with 10 points.

Salem held Glenn's impressive freshman, Eric Jones, to seven points. Jeff McKian added nine points and eight boards for the Rocks.

"They just scored too many points and got too many second chances," Schuette said. "I thought we matched up nice with them, but they played real well tonight."

Back in stride: After suffering two-straight losses, Salem was back in gear Friday, thanks in part to Nate Gray's 17 points. The Rocks win over Glenn puts them a game out of first.

OBSERVER SPORTS SCENE

Signed up

Two of the bigger reasons for the success Plymouth Canton's volleyball team has enjoyed this season will, in a manner of speaking, follow their coach.

Jessica Orleman and Nikki Kovachevich, two senior standouts for the 24-4-2 Chiefs, have committed to play volleyball at Henry Ford Community College in the fall.

Kovachevich, also a softball standout, will play that sport as well for the Lady Hawks.

Both have been key elements in Canton's season. At the University of Michigan-Dearborn Invitational Jan. 25, they were each named to the all-tournament team.

It helped that the Canton coach, Steve Anderson, also serves as an assistant coach of volleyball at Henry Ford CC.

But Anderson said the recruitment of the two standouts was no big problem, because no one else showed much interest — which befuddled Anderson.

"We're thrilled to have (Orleman)," he said. "Some people see her as tempermental, but she's really just hard on herself."

Orleman, a second team all-Observer choice as a junior, has the makings of a solid outside hitter. Her only drawback: She's only 5-foot-8.

However, Anderson said "she plays against the best big people in the league. And she's great defensively."

Orleman leads Canton in kills (255, with a .247 kill percentage), blocks (43 solos, six block assists through 67 games) and digs (276).

As for Kovachevich, Anderson said, "We're estatic to take her. She's never set before in her life but she's done well."

Kovachevich stands just 5-3, but she has more than made up for her "shortcomings". She has 210 assists to kills and ranks third on the team in digs with 224. Kovachevich is also an exceptional server: She tops the Chiefs in service aces with 69.

Both should help keep Henry Ford CC as one of the premier volleyball teams in the Eastern Conference.

Best coach

The Basketball Coaches Association of Michigan (BCAM) has selected its best high school coaches of the year, and Rod Windle of Plymouth Chrisitan Academy is one of them.

Windle was the Class D choice in Region I as coach of the year. The BCAM picks a coach in each of the four classes in six regions from across the state. Redford Bishop Borgess' Dave Mann was the Class C selection in Region I.

From the regional picks, the BCAM then chooses a statewide coach of the year in each class and, finally, an overall coach of the year for the state. This year's overall selection was Kathy McGee of Class B Flint Powers Catholic Central.

Windle guided PCA to a 10-10 regular-season record. The Eagles were eliminated in their first state district game by Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard, 44-21.

Fast track

Sarah Hamilton, a University of Michigan sophomore from Canton (Plymouth Salem HS), finished first in the 800-meter run at the Michigan Intercollegiates women's track meet Jan. 25.

Hamilton was clocked at 2:13.89, the second-fastest time by a Wolverine runner this season. Hamilton also has the fastest time among the Wolverines this year in the 600-meter run (1:33.57).

Another U-M sophomore, Olive Ikeh (from Plymouth Canton), has made her mark in several events. Ikeh has the Wolverines' third-fastest time in the 55 hurdles (8.70), has the fifth-best shot put (32-feet, 8 1/4-inches) and is tied for the fifth-best high jump (4-11).

Michigan finished second at the Michigan Intercollegiates, scoring 135 points. Eastern Michigan won the six-team event with 143.

Qualifying dive

Kari Jackson, a sophomore at Hope College from Plymouth Canton HS, surpassed the NCAA III standard for diving on the one-meter board during Hope's 111-92 dual-meet triumph over Albion College.

Jackson has the team's best scores for both six dives (261.00 points) and 10 dives (380.50 points) off the one-meter board this season. She also has the Flying Dutch's best performance for six dives off the three-meter board (224.95 points).

Hope was unbeaten in the dual-meet season for the fourth-straight year. Since starting women's swimming competition in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association in 1978-79, the Dutch are 95-5; they have won 15 of 17 MIAA championships, including the last five.

Family skate night

Canton Parks and Recreation Services is sponsoring its second Family Skate Night from 7-9 p.m. Thursday at the Heritage Park ponds, located behind Township hall.

There is no charge and there are no residency requirements. Warm refreshments will be available, and the ponds will be lighted. Call (313) 397-5110 for questions regarding skating conditions.

Ready and steady

Chiefs stay on title course with victory over Northville

BASKETBALL

It's all too easy — and common — to look ahead, and beyond, in sports. In Western Lakes Activities Association basketball, it can be catastrophic as well.

So it's easy to understand how Plymouth Canton coach Dan Young felt going into Friday's game at Northville. "I was real nervous going in," he said, "coming off that big win over Salem (last Tuesday)."

It did seem a perfect setting for an upset. After the Chiefs impressive performance against Salem, a letdown would be predictable. Plus, Northville was no slouch (no one in the WLAA is this season); on Tuesday, the Mustangs had jolted previous league-leader Westland John Glenn.

But there was to be no repeat for Northville. Canton started well and stayed with it throughout Friday's game, building a 17-point lead by halftime on the way to a 67-48 triumph.

"We were pretty focused tonight," Young said. "We got off to a good start, we played good defense , we rebounded well and we passed well. And when we pass well (21 assists in the game), we usually play well."

The Chiefs did everything just right against Northville. By the end of the first quarter, they had a 15-6 lead; by halftime, they had increased it to 35-18. With only the fourth quarter remaining, their lead was nearly insurmountable: 52-30.

Rob Johnson and Nick Hurley each scored 17 points to lead Canton. Joe Cortellini added 10. Mike Elsner contributed six points and a team-best six rebounds (Canton outrebounded Northville 27-14), and Matt Ammons totaled five points, four assists, three rebounds and two steals.

For Northville, Dave Terekadis poured in 25 points — 18 coming in the second half. No one else had more than six.

The win pushed Canton's record to 5-2 in the WLAA, 9-4 overall. Northville fell to 6-7 overall, 3-4 in the WLAA.

Agape 77, Cornerstone 58: Plymouth Agape Christian improved its Metro Christian Conference record to 5-1 with a lopsided win over visiting Detroit Cornerstone Friday.

The Wolverines are 7-3 overall. Cornerstone fell to 4-5 overall, 2-4 in the MCC.

Matt Major's 27 points paced Agape. Rick Guttersohn added 14 with eight rebounds;

Canton stumbles; Salem downs Falcons

The Plymouth Canton wrestling team ended the conference part of its season on a losing note Thursday as the Chiefs were handed a 57-16 defeat at Northville.

However, Canton did finish with a 2-3 record in the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division -- a one win improvement from last year's squad. The Chiefs are 3-5 overall.

Walled Lake Western was the Western Division champion.

The good news against the Mustangs was that Brent Buttermore and Kevin Stone finished the conference season with perfect records.

Buttermore improved to 4-0 at 130 pounds with an 11-2 majority decision. Stone finished a perfect 5-0 after a late pin against the Northville wrestler.

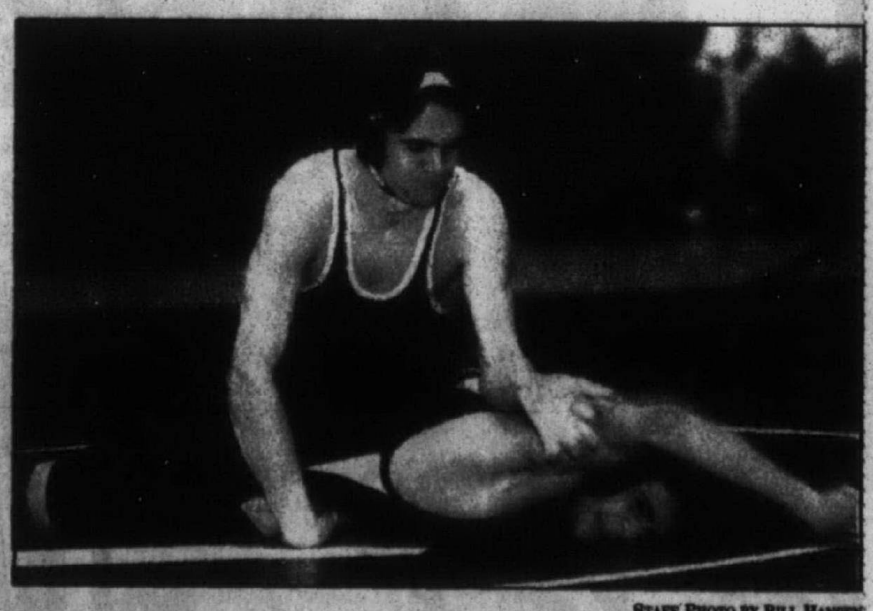

The only other victory for Canton was turned in by Josh Pinion at 171 pounds. He recorded a pin in 5:08.

Salem 49, Farmington 30: Nine weight divisions were won by Plymouth Salem wrestlers Thursday at Farmington, six by pin and another on a void, which allowed the Rocks to boost their dual-meet mark to 7-1-1.

Salem winners by pin were Jon Mervyn at 103 pounds, in 40 seconds over Joe Seymour; James Greene at 135, in 1:24 over Martin Spinks; Jeremy Wolschlager at 145, in 1:36 over Aram Sahiner; Anwar Crutchfield at 152, in :51 over Ben Lukas; Teono Wilson at 215, in 3:19 over Jake Lawrence; and Charlie Hamblin at heavyweight, in 5:40 over Jung Kim.

In addition, Eric Coburn beat Sevan Sahiner 14-0 at 119; Josh Henderson topped Tony Lema 13-10 at 125; and Dan Morgan won on a Farmington void at 112.

The loss left the Falcons at 5-10 in dual meets, 1-4 in the Western Lakes Activities Association's Lakes Division.

Crusaders clip Cedarville

The Madonna University men's basketball team went on the road Thursday and earned a much needed 90-85 overtime victory at Cedarville (Ohio) College.

Trailing 37-33 at halftime, the Crusaders rallied to send the game into overtime tied at 79-79.

In the extra session, Madonna outscored Cedarville 11-6 to improve its record to 7-17.

The Crusaders won despite shooting only 34 percent from the field and being outrebounded 49-39.

Center Mike Maryanski paced Madonna with 26 points. Kristian Magro poured in 21 points and grabbed 11 rebounds.

Magro was 13-for-16 at the free throw line. The Crusaders had the edge at the charity stripe where they converted 29 of 39 tries. Cedarville hit 13-of-17 attempts.

Also playing well for Madonna was John-Mark Branch, who chipped in with 10 points and 11 boards. Christian Emert tallied 16 points.

Brandon Slone (Plymouth Salem) came off the bench to contribute 14 points, including four three-pointers.

Madonna nailed 15 treys to only four for Cedarville.

John Krueger's 23 points paced Cedarville (9-12 overall).

Siena Heights 108, Madonna 74 (men): If this game was any barometer to how the Madonna University rates with the NAIA's top teams, then the Crusaders have a long way to go.

The Saints (18-4), ranked fifth in the NAIA, broke out to a big first-half lead and were never threatened by Madonna.

The Crusaders trailed 50-28 at halftime.

Sienna Heights shot a sizzling 54 percent from the field and 50 percent from behind the three-point arc (11-for-22). Madonna made just 38 percent of its shots from within the three-point line, and just 26 percent (five-for-19) from behind the line.

All 13 Saints scored, led by Joe Dettling's 18 points (scored in only 15 minutes of action). Anthoney Staffney and Sam Lofton added 13 and 12 points, respectively.

Leading the way for Madonna was Emert, who netted 16 points. Magro added 14 points and Maryanski chipped in with 11 points and 11 rebounds.

Mike Slone (Plymouth Salem) came off the bench to score 10 points, including two triples.

SC 72, Alpena 43 (women): Tough defense has helped push Schoolcraft College's women's basketball team back toward the top of the Eastern Conference standings.

The Lady Ocelots held their last two conference foes under 50 points in posting road victories. Last Wednesday at Alpena, the Lady Jacks managed just 16 points in the first half (10 by Marsha Stoppa; she led Alpena with 15) as SC built a 39-16 halftime advantage.

Julie Schmidt paced the Ocelots with 21 points (12 in the opening half). Christine Edwards contributed 11 and Alana Caver — a transfer from Henry Ford CC who became eligible for the second semester — scored 10.

The win boosted SC's conference record to 6-2; the Ocelots improved to 15-5 overall. Going into last weekend's action, St. Clair CC led the conference with a 7-1 mark, with SC second. The Skippers only conference loss came at home against SC; the two teams have a rematch at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday at SC.

On Jan. 25, SC visited Henry Ford CC and obtained a 68-49 victory. This game was the opposite of the Alpena match — the Ocelots surrendered 27 first-half points to the Lady Hawks (although SC still led 38-27 at the break), then clamped down defensively, giving up just 22 over the last 20 minutes.

Sheilah Coulter's 29 points (21 coming in the first half) led SC. Esther Ross added 10, and Kristi Engel (Redford Thurston), Christine Edwards and Schmidt chipped in with eight apiece.

Joanne McComb was high scorer for Henry Ford (3-5 in the conference, 7-13 overall) with 24 points. Becky Vachour added 11.

Falcons' strong effort still can't stop Rocks

SWIMMING

In describing Plymouth Salem's hold over the rest of the Western Lakes Activities Association swim teams, all one need do is understand nearly every team in the league saves its best effort of the dual-meet season for Salem.

And it still isn't enough.

Things like the performance Farmington diver Jeff Thomas gave Thursday against the Rocks — he broke the school point record (311.45) and the pool record at North Farmington — happen often.

Still, Salem keeps plugging along, searching for its fifth-straight WLAA championship. They showed that form against Farmington, slamming the Falcons 121-65.

"We swam pretty well for an away meet," said Salem coach Chuck Olson, his team now 6-0 overall and 2-0 in the WLAA. "It was good competition."

Brent Mellis won two individual events (the Rocks collected nine firsts) and was part of the first-place 200-yard medley relay, with Andrew Locke, Mark Dettling and Nick Corden (1:51.68).

Mellis' other wins came in the 200 individual medley (2:01.84) and the 100 backstroke (58.58).

The Rocks swept the relays, taking the 200 freestyle with Locke, Dan Kelly, Dan Jones and Kevin Dorogi (1:37.66) and the 400 freestyle with Tim Buchanan, Corden, Dettling and Petroskey (3:24.92).

Other individual winners for Salem were Buchanan in the 200 free (1:51.68); Corden in the 50 free (23.24); Dettling in the 100 butterfly (55.69); and Petroskey in the 500 free (5:02.21).

The Rocks host Livonia Stevenson at 7 p.m. Thursday in their final WLAA dual meet of the season.

Canton crushes WLAA foes; Salem stays hot

VOLLEYBALL

The trip through the Farmington schools produced no major surprises — which Plymouth Canton's volleyball team is thankful for.

After all, the Chiefs were heavy favorites to defeat both Farmington Wednesday and Farmington Harrison last Monday. Anything less would be considered an upset.

Well, there were no upsets. Canton handled both with relative ease — and in straight sets. The scores against host Farmington Wednesday were 15-4, 15-8, 15-12; against visiting Harrison last Monday, the Chiefs prevailed 15-7, 15-5, 15-12.

The wins raised Canton's overall record to 24-4-2; in the Western Lakes Activities Association, the Chiefs are 5-1.

In the win over the Falcons, Jessica Orleman and Stephanie Chefan combined for 26 kills — getting 13 apiece. Orleman also had 10 digs, while Chefan got three solo blocks.

Jenny Sikora led the Chiefs with 16 digs. Nikki Kovachevich got 11 digs and nine assists to kills; Courtney Wells had 10 assists to kills and two service aces; and Amy Plagens chipped in four aces.

The opponent changed, but the results — and the names responsible — were the same in Canton's win over Harrison. Orleman had 10 kills and 10 digs; Chefan got eight kills; Kovachevich totaled 11 digs, 10 assists to kills and three aces; Sikora had 10 digs and four aces; and Wells got 10 assists to kills.

If that was the easy portion of the WLAA slate for Canton, what's remaining should provide a challenge. The Chiefs host Livonia Franklin at 7 p.m. tonight, then play at always-tough WLAA Western Division rival Livonia Churchill at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Salem still going

Like the Energizer bunny, Plymouth Salem's regular-season winning streak in the WLAA keeps going and going and going . . .

The Rocks had no problem last Wednesday against visiting North Farmington, rolling past the Raiders 15-0, 15-8, 15-2.

That makes it 40 in a row. The Rocks improved to 21-4-4 overall, 6-0 in the WLAA this season.

"We had a rough couple of weeks there in the middle of the season, but I really think this team is coming together," said Salem co-coach Allie Suffety. "The kids are starting to step up and take over spots that have been open for a while."

Against North, it was just a matter of solidifying positions. Jenny Trott topped Salem with seven kills. Amanda Abraham got five, and Jennie Storm, Angie Sillmon and Jill Peterson each collected three. Kari Flynn got 13 assists to kills and five aces, while Storm led the defenders with six digs.

The upcoming WLAA schedule, while no sure thing, favors Salem. The Rocks play at Farmington Harrison at 7 p.m. Monday, then host Livonia Franklin at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

But challenges to their streak remain. On Monday Feb. 10, Salem hosts Canton; two nights later, the Rocks take a trip to Walled Lake Central.

Hoop from D1

Adam Martin had 13 points, nine boards and eight steals; and Jeremy Austion got 12 points and 11 rebounds.

Jeff Coaty topped Cornerstone with 28 points.

The Wolverines led 28-8 after one quarter and 50-23 by halftime.

CC 77, DeLaSalle 52: Senior guard Marc McDonald paced the junior-dominated Shamrocks to their eighth win in 12 tries with 25 points Friday against visiting Warren DeLaSalle.

Host Redford Catholic Central got off to a 19-11 start, increased it to 37-22 by halftime and turned on the cruise control from there.

The Shamrocks are now 6-2 in the Detroit Catholic League

Junior forward Joe Jonna and junior center Chris Young notched 15 points apiece.

DeLaSalle was led by senior forward Tom Dombrowski, who scored 12 points.

Hockey a hit for ladies

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

If you thought competitive hockey was a male-only game played by professionals, young sons and college kids, think again.

The popularity of the sport is increasing among members of the opposite sex as career women, moms and coeds put on skates and play the game, too.

The all-female Nighthawks of Farmington Hills, complete with uniforms, full equipment and team sponsors, are representative of the trend.

The Nighthawks are a first-year entry in the 16-team Metro Skater Women's Hockey League and a testimony to the willpower of Stephanie Henkel.

"I wanted this to happen real bad," said the 45-year-old Henkel, who played three years in Howell and undertook to organize a local team when the Farmington Hills Ice Arena opened.

Henkel's teenage sons play hockey, and it was her parental involvement that led to her being a player, too.

"At my son's first practice, you could say I felt the cold; I smelled the ice, and I needed to play," she said. "The next week I was on the ice. Most women say 'My son did it and it looked like a lot of fun.'

"It's the greatest sport in the world. It's the greatest rush I've ever had."

The Metro Skater League began six years ago with 20 women playing pickup games at the Inkster arena.

The number of teams has doubled in the last two years, and the league went to a two-tier format a year ago. It costs $150 per team to join league.

The Red Line is the top division. The Nighthawks compete in the 10-team Blue Line with the Melvindale Ice Pack, University of Michigan-Dearborn Hot Ice and Lady Vipers, Mount Clemens Goaldiggers, Lady Rebels of the Detroit Skate Club, Howell Flash, Ann Arbor Pond Rockets and Iron Maidens and the Fraser Thunderblades.

The third-place Nighthawks boasted a recent record of 10-2-2. They play a 22-game schedule that doesn't include several tournaments.

"There are more teams springing up that are more geographically located for a lot of people," Henkel said, adding a new women's hockey magazine is also on newsstands and the University of Michigan and Michigan State University have club teams now.

But a lot of people still aren't accustomed to women playing hockey.

"They ask if we spit, mostly," Henkel said.

That women's hockey will be an Olympic medal sport at the 1998 Games and the U.S. team has appeared on television is helping to give the women's game credibility, according to Kathy McCormick, 31, the leading scorer on the Nighthawks.

"We're still trying to establish ourselves and be taken more seriously," she said. "There are probably people who think of us as a joke, but we don't as players think so."

Players in the Metro Skater League must be at least 20 years old. The oldest is 68; the average age is between 25 and 30.

Ninety percent of the Nighthawks are professional women, and most are mothers, too. Most of the players hail from southwest Oakland County and western Wayne, but the roster also includes one from St. Clair Shores and another from Ypsilanti.

The team name seems appropriate since the Nighthawks have their ice time at 9:30 p.m. once a week .

"Someone suggested Farmington Ferrets, and one of the coaches thought Farmington Hills Foxes was too girlish," Henkel said. "We like the Nighthawks because it's powerful, a bird of prey. We had a list of 50 names, and this one kept popping up."

Late-evening games also afford working women and moms a chance to unwind and let off steam.

"That's why we like our hockey," Henkel said. "The ice time is perfect; the aggressions come out.

"It's our winding down time. The ones with little kids have put them in bed and don't feel guilty. It's like your job is done, and now it's your turn.

"It gets you out of the house, and hockey is an acceptable reason, unlike going to the mall."

In this era of personal fitness, hockey is good exercise, too. Instead of going to the gym, these women go to the rink.

"It's a great physical workout for yourself, like aerobics," said McCormick, a paramedic/firefighter. "It requires more skill than other sports. When you work together as team to score a goal, it's very exciting.

"I just think it's the athletic thing to do," Henkel added. "If you play softball in the summer, what do you do in winter? Ski? I'd rather play hockey."

The women's games consist of 10-minute periods with a stop clock and have a 50-minute time limit.

Slap shots from the blue line are allowed but checking is not; however, that doesn't mean things don't get rough at times.

"There still is a lot of contact," said Troy McCormick, one of the Nighthawks coaches and Kathy's husband. "You can't just skate across the ice and go into somebody. It's more subtle than that."

Added Henkel: "My husband has dropped the puck for us, and he says (the women are) vicious. It's like two different personalities.

"This is a rec league; it's supposed to be a fun thing, and most of the time it is. But tempers do flare."

Henkel also hopes to promote the sport to younger females and build a bridge for teen girls between the youngest youth programs and the adult league.

Girls who play mini-mite and squirt hockey with boys are turned away at the pee wee level when checking is allowed, she said.

"Coaches don't want girls because boys can do a lot more damage," Henkel said. "If parents don't drive them to Ann Arbor, they quit; they give it up. There's that space in between.

"The president of the league is working with midget teams. We're hoping to have a strong Metro Skater League to break the ice for younger girls."

The Nighthawks are sponsored by Areations, Areations! Detmar Corporation, Carl Henkel, Architect; G/B Sales & Services, Farmington Family Physicians, Amstaff Inc. and Ram's Horn Family Restaurant.

A more low-key spring season starts the first Thursday in April. Players meet once a week and organize pickup games for a $10 fee.

PCJBL in an expansive mood for new season

Two new divisions have been added to the Plymouth Canton Junior Baseball League for the 1997 season as the league embarks on an ambitious field improvement program.

Registration dates for the 1997 season are Saturday, March 1, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Wednesday evening, March 5, from 7-9 p.m. in the Plymouth Canton high school cafeteria.

"Our aggressive expansion is possible because Canton Township and the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education are aware of the communities' needs," PCJBL President Harry Hill said today. "We all have to work together.

"We're not affiliated with either the Plymouth or Canton governments, though many people think we are. "We're a strictly non-profit, volunteer organization.

"And if we're not the biggest baseball league anywhere, we're among them. We had more than 1,800 boys and 600 girls in our programs last year and that number is only going to go up in the near term."

The PCJBL is inaugurating a Fast-Pitch girls softball travel program to complement its burgeoning boys travel program.

The PCJBL will field 16-under and 14-under teams in a travel league it is currently setting up involving teams drawn from neighboring communities.

Girls interested in tryouts or for more information on the travel program should call Girls Vice President Ray Barnes at 981-5170.

Surging league enrollment percolating to the top age levels has prompted the PCJBL to add a new Senior League for boys ages 16-18.

"There are a lot of kids now who might not make their high school teams but who still want to play baseball," Hill said. "This will give them that option.

"If there's enough interest, we'd like to institute a travel team from that age group in the near future."

Hill also announced PCJBL involvement in the Youth Character Counts program, which helps teach youngsters the six pillars of character.

"We started our field upgrade programs last year because we're strained to capacity as far as playing fields go," Hill said. "We're working on obtaining more fields to accommodate our new leagues, as well upgrading existing facilities at all levels.

"We need practice fields, too. And we need all this yesterday."

The league is arranging to bring in a former Detroit Tigers' pitcher for an autograph fund-raiser at registration and is raffling off a 1997 Chevrolet Malibu this summer to help fund the field improvement program. Tickets for the Malibu raffle will be available at registration.

"We still need help," Hill said. "Anybody who works for a business, runs one or is one can help us help more kids enjoy the benefits of baseball."

ON THE RUN

MARY BETH DILLON

A prime highlight of the winter running season arrives at 10 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 9, with the Riverview Winterfest Four-Mile Run at Seitz Junior High School.

Known for its fast, flat certified course and strong field, the race features a pancake breakfast, hot showers, raffle, awards, and long-sleeved T-shirt. Late registration at Total Runner, 15355 Dix-Toledo Road in Southgate, is $15 through Feb. 8.

Race day entry at Seitz Junior High, at Williamsburg and Kennebec in Riverview, is $18.

Race director Eve Soltesz is expecting a good field of runners numbering about 600.

"There's such a gap between the New Year's Eve run and the spring races," said Soltesz. "We think it's a nice way for runners to test their training ability and to see their fellow runners at the same time.

For more information, call (313) 282-1101 or (810) 354-1177.

METRO MACOMB RUNNERS host a three-mile Think Summer Run at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, at Metropolitan Beach Metropark, on Metroparkway (16 Mile Road) on Lake St. Clair.

The route follows a paved path through the park with sweeping views of Lake St. Clair – a sight to behold in winter.

Entry fee is $6; awards go to all finishers. For more information, call Jeff Seegert, (810) 426-7221.

RUNNERS, WALKERS AND CYCLISTS are headed for a marathon in Anchorage, Alaska, and 100-mile ride in Lake Tahoe, Nev., with the Leukemia Society of America's Team in Training.

Athletes who meet fund-raising goals will take part in a four-month training program and receive an all-expenses paid trip. Interested athletes are invited to free, no-obligation informational meetings this week.

They're set for 6 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 6, at the Livonia Marriott, 17200 N. Laurel Park Drive north of Six Mile and west of Newburgh; 8 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 8, at Jimi's Restaurant, 714 S. Washington in Royal Oak; and 6 p.m. Monday, Feb. 10, at the Holiday Inn on the University of Michigan's North Campus, 3600 Plymouth Road in Ann Arbor.

For reservations, call 1-800-456-5413.

M.B. Dillon is a reporter for the Observer Newspapers and is rated as one of the top master runners in the nation. Information about runs coming up can be faxed to her at (313) 459-4224.

NATURE

TIM NOWICKI

To most people it's white cedar, to the botanist it is arborvitae, the tree of life. This evergreen is a common resident of river banks and frequently makes up forests in low, wet areas of land. It does not like to be saturated like the tamarack, but it does like very moist conditions.

I was reminded of this majestic tree while wading along a northern Michigan stream. Several fallen logs laced the stream underwater, while overhead the leafy branches formed a canopy that shaded the river below.

Along the edge were the exposed roots of some mature trees. Soil had been washed away, exposing the roots and allowing floating debris to wear away the outer protective bark.

Moistened by the water and polished by particles flowing in the water, the roots showed a beautiful jasper color.

The thick canopy didn't allow much light penetration to the forest floor. This limited the number of green plants growing beneath.

Scattered ferns were growing and in some sunny spots nettles were beginning to grow, but the two fawns I saw along the edge of the river did not have much to nibble on.

In winter, this thick canopy will reduce the snow accumulation beneath and allow deer to move around more easily. Cedar swamps are traditional wintering areas for deer in northern Michigan.

Deer use the leaves for food and reach as high as they can to feast.

Man also used the leaves to add Vitamin C to his diet. Early French explorers suffering the effects of scurvy learned from Native Americans that a tea made with white cedar cured their illness.

As a result, they called it the tree of life, which when translated into Latin is roughly translated to arborvitae.

Arborvitae was used by Native Americans to build canoes because it is a tough, yet light wood.

They used the wood to build the supports of their canoes and sections of bark were used as shoulder and head supports for portages.

Colonists split the wood into small, thin strips used for making baskets. Arborvitae wood is rot-resistant and easily split, making it ideal for shingles on homes.

Northern or Eastern white cedar doesn't grow as tall as the Western red cedar. A 60-foot arborvitae is considered tall. The trees are long lived, many known to live 200-300 years.

Those along the stream I was wading in were not quite that old, but their arching trunks, colorful roots and shading branches provided a grand beauty that comes with maturity.

Tim Nowicki is a naturalist at Independence Oaks Park in Oakland County. He lives in Livonia.

SNOWMOBILES

Making a path to winter activity

BY MARIE CHESTNEY
STAFF WRITER

In 1927, J. Armand Bombardier, a Canadian living in Quebec, hitched a motor to a toboggan sled so doctors could get to patients in winter. In doing so, he revolutionized the way people travel in the back country over miles of snow.

In Alaska, even native Inuits have given up their dog sleds for the sleek machines called snowmobiles.

Because of snowmobiles, Michigan's Upper Peninsula bustles with activity as much in the winter as in the summer.

Towns that once hibernated for six months now vibrate. Communities that once collapsed economically during the long winter months now thrive as snowmobile fans sleep in motels, eat in restaurants, buy groceries at the IGA and gas from the corner station.

Whether they love or hate the noisy machines, those who live in the North County know how vital snowmobiles are to the local economy.

"We just had a snowmobile endurance run that brought up couple of hundred people, many from around western Wayne County. They filled up the motels and bars," said Kathy Ballard, formerly of Plymouth, who now along with husband Mike runs the Hilltop Cabins in Grand Marais in the eastern Upper Peninsula.

Snowmobilers spend thousands of dollars to buy a motorized sled that will speed them across the wintry countryside.

They share the same passion felt by the skiers and snowshoers who prefer less costly, quieter ways to conquer the snow.

The passion? How incredibly beautiful is the forest draped in the white and quiet and cold of winter.

Thousands from western Wayne County who troop up north during the summer see a land painted in green. Only the truly obsessed love that same land when it's buried under layers of frozen white.

In Observerland, some of these hardy souls belong to the Livonia Snowmobile Club. For them, weekend trips on miles of snowy trails are as de rigueur as boat trips are for the summer crowd.

From January to March, club families haul their rigs up I-75 to places hidden under tons of snow.

They don't avoid the white stuff; they seek it out.

Journey's end is places like Mancelona, Indian River, Atlanta, Houghton Lake, St. Ignace, Kalkaska, Marquette, Grand Marais and Paradise.

Imagine riding the frozen ice that links St. Ignace with Mackinac Island, following the line of Christmas trees stuck in the ground by islanders so travelers don't get lost in the swirls of white.

Connie Richart, a surgical nurse for Grace and Garden City hospitals who lives in Redford, did this last year on her Ski-Doo.

Imagine seeing a bull elk, antlers held high, lumbering in the brush.

Frank Ward, an auto repair technician who lives in Farmington Hills, spied the elk from his Yamaha.

Imagine, in -25 degree weather, following the same trail Louis and Clark took in the Rocky Mountains, from Montana to Idaho.

Rick Sawicki, a Ford Motor Co. manager, followed in the two explorers' footsteps on his Ski-Doo.

Imagine riding from Marquette along Lake Superior to Big Bay.

Jeff Williamson, an engineer with General Motors Corp. who lives in New Hudson, took the scenic trip on his Arctic Cat.

Imagine crossing Ontario's North Channel when it's frozen in ice.

Jerry Lalonde, a General Motors employee who lives in Commerce Township, crossed the ice on his Arctic Cat.

All are members of the Livonia Snowmobile Club, which meets at the Senior Citizens Center at Five Mile and Farmington during the winter months to plot out weekend trips.

Besides the camaraderie of pursuing an adventure together, one of the reasons the club exists is because of this main tenet of snowmobiling: Don't ride alone.

The rule exists because of the very nature of machines: they break down.

In asking club members how they got involved in snowmobiling, two themes emerged. They like motors, engines and "going fast."

And there's a family history of cottages up north, of first trips taken long ago with grandfathers and other family members.

Last year, Jeff Kolar, of Livonia, traded his boat for two jet skis and two snowmobiles.

Fifteen years ago Lynn Ward, a computer programmer for Ford Motor Co., got around the northern back country in a three-wheeler. One day, she traded it in for a snowmobile. And it was only natural that when dating her future husband, Frank, he would learn to like the sport.

It was a love match.

The Wards now have six machines.

Tips for a safe winter outing

- Take a safety course to learn rules.
- Join the Michigan Snowmobile Association. Dues help build new trails.
- Never go out alone. Ride with experienced persons or groups and stick together. Listen to those who have more experience than you.
- Carry such emergency gear as tow rope, first aid kit, communications equipment and matches.
- Buy quality clothing. Get advice on the best items to buy.
- Spend the extra money and buy quality carbide steering and traction equipment.
- Go out with a travel plan. Tell someone where you are going and where you plan to end up.
- Start out small when buying your machine. Match it to your ability.
- Know your machine well, how it handles at various speeds and in different conditions.
- Start out slowly on your trip. Take it easy at first.
- Know your limits, such as how long you can ride.
- Don't go out in -20 degree weather if you never did it before.
- If you have back problems, don't go on a 50-mile trip.
- Don't stay out all day if you're riding with little children. They get cold.
- Don't override trail conditions or use excessive speed.
- Use common sense and good trail etiquette.
- Don't tailgate.
- Use proper hand signals to turn or stop.
- Stop and check traffic at main roads.
- Don't drink and drive.
- Stay on trails or private land leases may not get renewed.
- Use caution on lakes at night. Know your machine's stopping distance; don't over-drive your headlights.
- Stop at every gas station, especially if you're riding in the Upper Peninsula.

AL HARRISON

Now that this is a Sunday paper, there are bound to be new bowling readers.

Our Observer communities have the greatest numbers of bowlers per capita than just about anywhere in the nation. There are 30 bowling centers in the area and about 50,000 bowlers.

Bragging rights: Grandfathers love to brag about their grandchildren, and John Berci, owner of Berci Printing in Southfield is no exception. He bowls in the Senior Men's Classic League at the Mayflower Lanes, and was talking about a terrific young bowler named Eric, his grandson. On my rounds to collect bowling scores at Merri Bowl, there was Berci's grandson's name being hoisted on a banner for a 300 game he rolled in a YABA league. Eric Gambrell, 16, was the first YABA bowler to roll a perfect game at Merri Bowl. His series was 691. He failed to hit a 700 series, so the next day he bowled a 723 with a 289 game in the Parent/Child League.

Gambrell was well-taught. First by his grandfather, John Berci, and by his uncle, Rick McCaffery, an All Star bowler.

Gambrell is an 11th-grade student at Stevenson High School in Livonia and a baseball player.

Hypothetical case: The story is true, but the names have been changed to protect the innocent. There's a mixed league, the Friday Funsters. On it, the team of Agnes and Horace Pickleberry and Ophelia and Juan Moonshine are among the top teams. One night, Horace put together 12 strikes for a 300 game. But on the automatic scorer, he used the nickname Egg. Nobody checked the rule book, so he was awarded his 300 ring. If anyone had checked, they could have called a rule violation. The ABC/WIBC book states: No person shall bowl under an assumed name or under the name of another person scheduled to bowl on a sanctioned league or tournament. The penalty is forfeiture of the games.

Think twice before you fool around with the names on the scorers. Horace was lucky. You may not be.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Mammograms essential

At Oakwood Hospital & Medical Center in Dearborn, Dr. Thomas Siegel believes that all women in their 40s should receive a mammogram every one to two years. Siegel is associate director of the breast program for the Cancer Center of Excellence.

The National Institutes of Health recently issued guidelines on mammography.

"The policy we've set forth (at the Cancer Center of Excellence) is that women in their 50s and older should receive a mammogram every year," said Siegel. "Women in their 40s should receive a mammogram every one to two years."

Although concerns have been raised about the radiation safety of mammography and the visual limitations that come from young women's dense breast tissue, Siegel feels that these concerns are unwarranted.

"The radiation that a woman receives from a mammogram is about the same as a transcontinental flight," he said. "As for dense breast tissue, calcifications usually appear on a mammogram."

These serve as a warning sign to a doctor that changes in the tissue are occurring and cancer could be a factor. "There have been many technological advances that have been made in the fight against breast cancer; the NIH guidelines do not keep up with advances we are seeing today," Siegel said.

Siegel emphasizes that "early detection of breast cancer can offer a cure to women. That's why mammograms are important to women of any age."

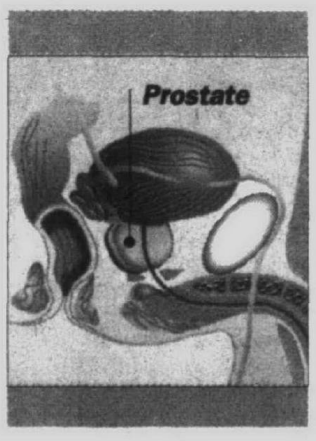

Prostate cancer detection

Researchers from the Michigan Prostate Institute of the University of Michigan and elsewhere have found a way to increase the sensitivity of the PSA (prostate-specific antigen) blood test. The findings will improve the detection of prostate cancer in its early, most curable stages and eliminate many of the unnecessary, invasive prostate biopsies done in this country every year.

The findings appeared in the January issue of Urology.

"By having established when and how to use this new test, we can now find many more curable cases of prostate cancer and thus decrease the death rate from this disease," said Dr. Joseph E. Oesterling, M.D., director of the Michigan Prostate Institute, urologist-in-chief at the U-M Medical Center, and an author of the report.

"The regular old-fashioned PSA test is just not specific enough to always pick up an early, curable cancer out of an ocean of benign conditions that may also be elevating the PSA level. This has caused us to miss cancers in their early stages and to do many unnecessary negative biopsies."

In the Urology study, the Oesterling team studied hundreds of patients with prostate disease and found that the percentage of "free PSA" (one of several molecular forms of PSA) in patients with prostate cancer was lower than in those with benign disease. Using this information, they developed guidelines for the percentage of free PSA in the blood that corresponds to a strong likelihood of cancer.

With this added information, physicians can now detect cancer in men with PSA levels between 3 ng/ml and 4 ng/ml. (Traditionally, any PSA level below 4 was considered normal.) Also, for men with levels between 3 and 10, these guidelines will identify whether the elevated PSA is due to cancer or a benign prostate condition that does not warrant biopsy.

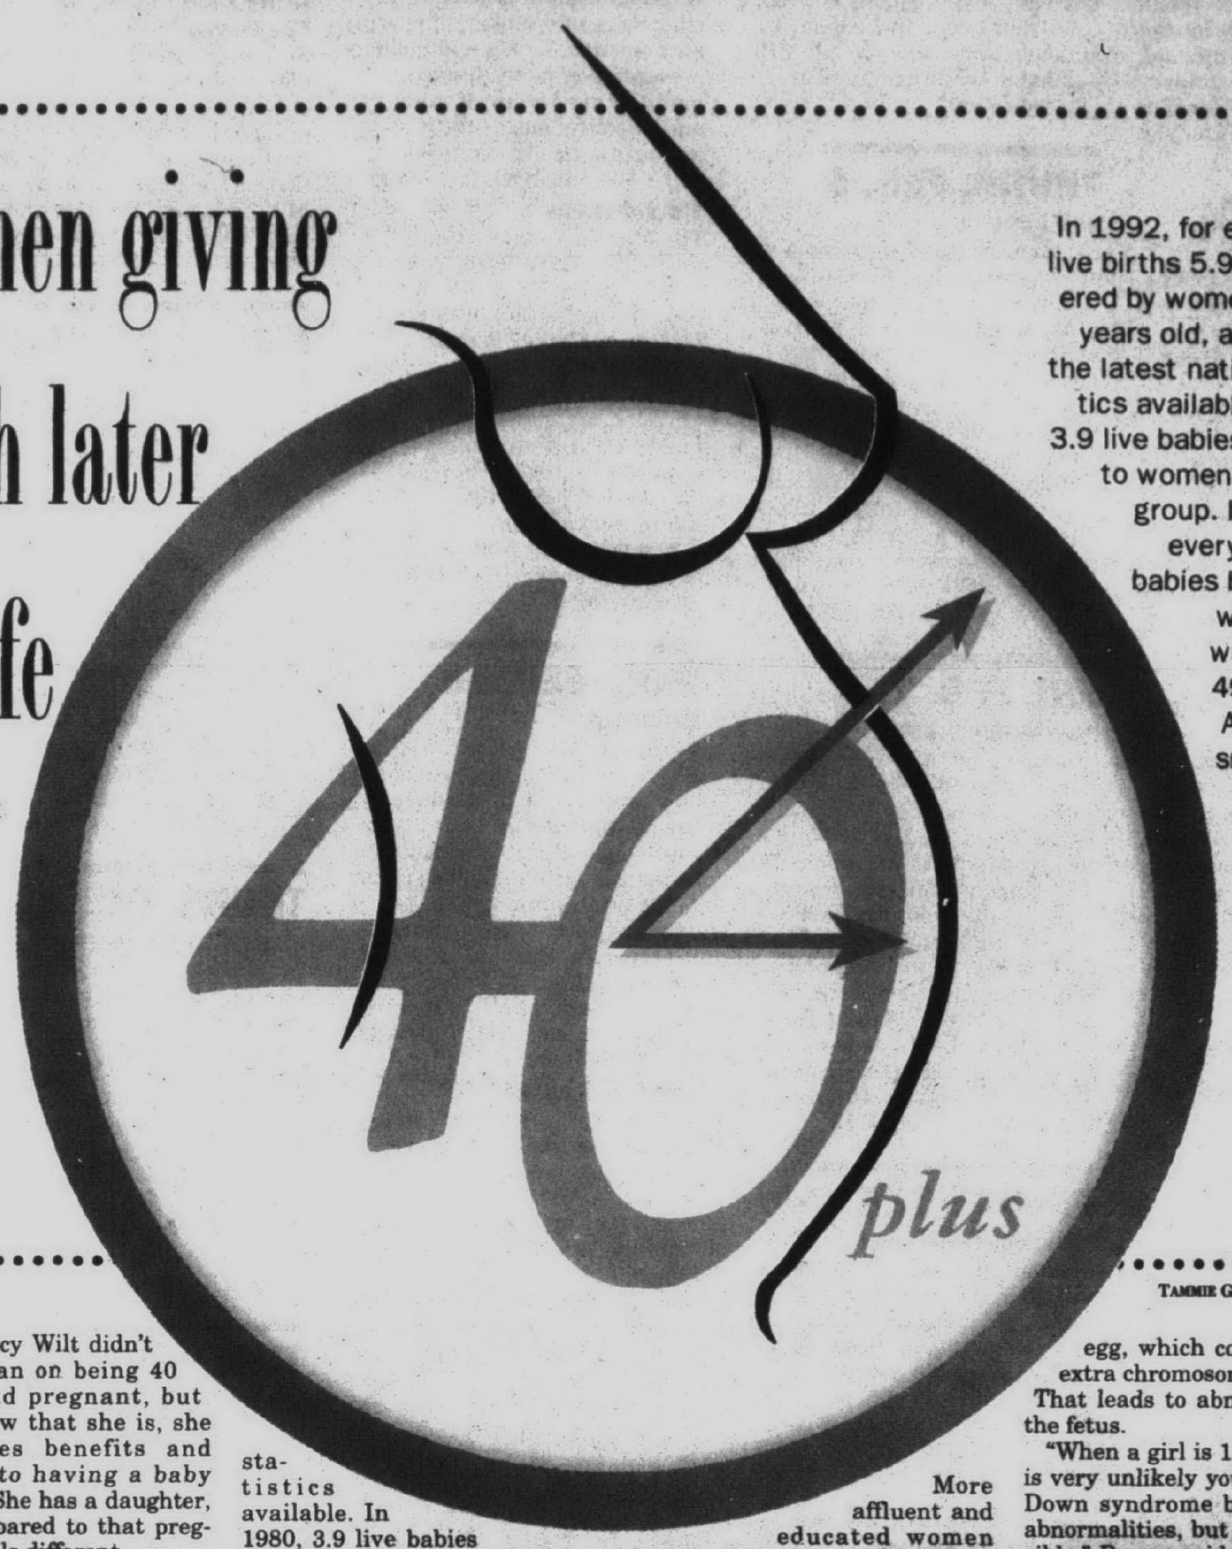

Oesterling estimates that this new technique will enable physicians to detect 44 percent more early-stage prostate cancers and eliminate unnecessary prostate biopsies by 15 percent, thereby saving the health care system millions of dollars.

"This study has determined the correct situations for using percent-free PSA and has established its upper limits of normal. Ultimately, this information will help save lives," Oesterling said.

Women giving birth later in life

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

In 1992, for every 1,000 live births 5.9 were delivered by women 40 to 44 years old, according to the latest national statistics available. In 1980, 3.9 live babies were born to women in that age group. In 1992, for every 1,000 live babies born only .3 were born to women 45 to 49 years old. And an even smaller number were born to women 50 and older.

Nancy Wilt didn't plan on being 40 and pregnant, but now that she is, she sees benefits and drawbacks to having a baby later in life. She has a daughter, 12, and compared to that pregnancy she feels different.

"Physically it's a littler bit harder," according to the Westland resident. "It seems to take a lot more out of me this time. I'm more tired." But on the other hand, she and her husband, Ron, 39, are more established.

"And I don't feel like I'm in the hurry all the time that I was when I was younger," she said. Being pregnant, she said, "makes me want to take better care of my health." Wilt also says she worries about health problems for the baby, which is due in May. Wilt will be 41 in April.

"That's the thing. there's a whole lot of worry," Wilt said. "But I worried that much the first time, too. There's a lot more tests and things available now than when I had my daughter.

"I feel a little awkward even when I go into a store looking at maternity clothes," she said. "My doctor said you're not too old until you stop ovulating."

Wilt is part of a nationwide trend among women 40 and older having babies. In fact, women between 40 and 44 years old are giving birth to live babies 50 percent more often than they were a decade ago, according to statistics provided by Steve Gold, director of planning and evaluation for the Wayne County Health Department.

In 1992, for every 1,000 live births 5.9 were delivered by women 40 to 44 years old, according to the latest national statistics available. In 1980, 3.9 live babies were born to women in that age group. In 1992, for every 1,000 live babies born only .3 were born to women 45 to 49 years old. And an even smaller number were born to women 50 and older.

In Wayne County, of the 32,872 live babies born in 1995 500 were born to women 40 and older. Twenty of those 500 babies were born to women 45 and older.

"Compared to past eras there is a greater expectation that women get higher education and that they can have rewarding professional careers and not simply jobs and these oftentimes require them to pay their dues while they're in their 20s and 30s," according to Dr. Arline Geronimus, University of Michigan School of Public Health associate professor. "As a society we haven't really figured out good ways for women and parents to combine childrearing and work," she said. "I think in order to pay those dues women often feel they need to postpone childrearing."

People in general tend to think having babies later is all right, she added. "As a society, we may want to think about whether this is the best we can do to help women and parents fulfill both family and career ambitions," Geronimus said. "I don't know if postponing childrearing to their 40s is the best idea and I don't think we've wrestled with all these conflicts."

More affluent and educated women also tend to be quite healthy and have access to the best medical services. Advanced medical technology helps women who may have been infertile in the past and for those who would have miscarried. Medical strides also saves babies who are born prematurely and would have died years ago. Some risks remain even though technology has improved.

"There are health risks for mother and child for all pregnancies, but risks for problems with the mother and the fetus are increased with increasing maternal age," according to Dr. James O. Brown, III, an obstetrician/gynecologist who is a St. Mary Hospital staff physician and is part of a group practice, Westside Obstetrics and Gynecology, with offices in Canton and Novi. One risk to mothers is that due to advancing age there is a bigger chance of heart disease and high blood pressure. Also, older women have a more difficult time achieving pregnancy.

The highest risk to babies born to older women is chromosomal abnormalities and this happens during the development of the mother's eggs, which occurs in two stages. In the first stage, the woman's egg is partially made while she is developing, herself, as a fetus. The second happens when the mother ovulates during her menstrual cycle before conceiving. The older the mother is the stickier the later stage of the egg, which could cause an extra chromosome to develop. That leads to abnormalities in the fetus.

"When a girl is 15 years old, it is very unlikely you would get a Down syndrome baby or other abnormalities, but it is still possible," Brown said. "At age 40 it is substantially more likely."

When a women is over 35 an amniocentesis is ordered. This test reveals fetal abnormalities. Consider that one in every 384 births to a 35-year-old woman is born with Down syndrome and one in 204 births born to a woman in that age group has one of many different types of chromosomal problems. At age 40, the risks rise.

One in every 106 births born to a woman 40 years old has Down syndrome and 1 in every 65 births born to women in that age group have some type of chromosomal problems. The numbers continue to rise as the woman ages.

"Certainly more women over 35 are having babies," Brown said. "I think that it's important that they understand there are no guarantees at any age that things are going to have a good outcome, but the chances of a problem are increased with advancing maternal age."

It is important to have a preconceptual visit with a gynecologist to be advised of risks and to know what to expect, Brown said. The doctor will review medications that could harm a developing fetus, review genetic diseases in the family and consider existing medical problems. Also, the woman would likely begin taking prenatal vitamins before conception. Lectures on prenatal care are available at local hospitals. Call the hospital nearest you for more information.

Contest helps students put best foot forward

The 10th annual Michigan Foot Health Poster Contest is taking place through April 25 and is open to all Michigan students in kindergarten through 12th grade. The contest promotes Foot Health Month, April, by having students construct creative posters depicting the importance of proper foot health.

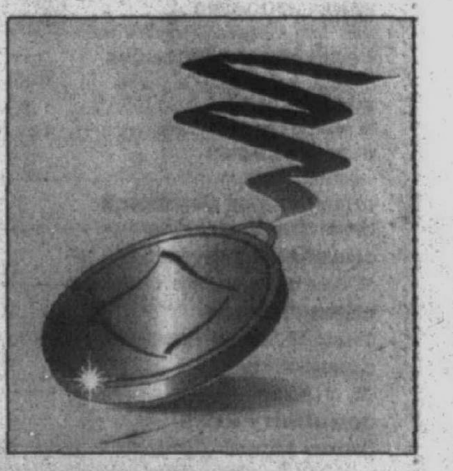

The contest is co-sponsored by the Michigan Foot & Ankle Health Foundation and Michigan Podiatric Medical Association, statewide organizations of physician specialists of the foot and ankle.

Every student who submits a poster will automatically receive a certificate of recognition and a chance to win cash prizes totaling over $2,500. Also, the first 1,000 students who submit posters will receive a free T-shirt. Nine winners will be selected from the three categories and the winners will be honored at an awards presentation in Lansing.

Poster judges include Michigan legislators and podiatrists. Winning posters will be displayed at health care conferences and in doctors' offices.

The deadline for entries is April 25. Posters cannot exceed the maximum measurement of 16-by-20 inches and the phrase "MPMA Foot Health Month, April 1997" must appear on the poster. Each poster must also contain a slogan or phrase promoting foot health or podiatry.

The contestant's name, age, address, phone, school, teacher and category must appear on the reverse side of the poster. Categories will be: kindergarten through fifth grade; sixth through ninth grade; and 10th through 12th grade. Posters should be submitted to the MPMA, 1003 N. Washington Ave., Lansing, Mich. 48906. For contest rules, foot health brochures or more information, call the MPMA at 1-800-968-6762.

Kids learn about fitness

For the second year in a row, SelectCare and Kmart are teaming up to improve the health and fitness of elementary school students in the metro Detroit area. This year they are again sponsoring, with additional support from Star Theatres, a program called "SelectStudents: Fit for the Future."

The program, which last year involved more than 6,000 students from more than 50 schools, will run through May.

The "Fit for the Future" program asks students in kindergarten through sixth grade to devise a plan – as a group – to be healthier, and to implement this plan into their lives by reaching out with their idea to their peers, schools and communities at large.

The children send their plans to SelectCare with their estimated budget. SelectCare provides them with the money to conduct these plans and then awards further prizes for winning entries.

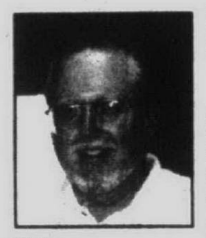

Mini-grant applications must be postmarked by Feb. 5. Student projects at local elementary schools are expected to run through March, and project evaluations are due back for judging by mid-April. First-, second- and third-place prizes will be awarded to student teams at each grade level.

For information, contact program coordinator Dan Saad at (810) 583-1400.

Richard III has his day and say on the Internet

EMORY DANIELS

O&E ONLINE

One of the new films released is Al Pacino's "Looking For Richard," which puts Shakespeare's "Richard III" in the filmmaking news for the third time in the last year.

Because Hollywood is what Hollywood is, there's little resemblance between "Richard III" as seen in the movie houses and the version written by Shakespeare. And that upsets the folks from the Richard III Society.

Compton Reeves, a professor of history at Ohio University and chairman of the American Branch of the Richard III Society, is pleased that the current focus on the classics returns Shakespeare to the hearts of the people. But, at the same time, Reeves is dismayed that "Looking for Richard" perpetuates a lot of myths about a historical person who was well-thought of by his contemporaries.

Shakespeare's demon-king, who murders family and friends to capture and keep the throne, bears little resemblance to the historical Richard, according to the society. "We are not anti-Shakespeare," said Reeves. "As a matter of fact, many of our members relish a rousing performance of 'Richard III.' Anything that increases interest in the humanities is important to us, and we applaud Al Pacino's efforts to make Shakespeare more accessible. But setting the historical record straight is also very important to us."

This column is not the place to set the record straight, but Internet users can examine online texts including 15th- and 16th-century documents long out of print by pointing to http://www.webcom.com/blanchrd/gateway.html.

Information on the Richard III Society, founded in England in 1924, was forwarded to our newspaper by society member Janet Trimbath of Rochester Hills and passed on to me. The society is dedicated to the noble purpose of the study of late 15th-century English history and culture and to a celebration of the life and times of Richard III. It has more than 4,000 members of whom 750 are in the U.S.

Vital records online

Applying for vital records such as birth certificates is now much easier by simply visiting the Michigan Department of Community Health's Office of the State Registrar Web site at http://www.mdch.state.mi.us/.

Applications for birth, death, marriage, and divorce certificates can be printed while online or downloaded from the Web site. "MDCH will be continuing to develop ways to make it more convenient for citizens to request copies of vital records," said James Haveman, department director. "It's important for people to be able to get these documents with a minimum of red tape."

Personally, I found the site quite useful. Last summer, I learned that what I thought was an official birth certificate was really only a hospital certificate not legally recognized. So I visited this site and printed out the application with ease. It saved me a couple phone calls and waiting for the form to arrive by snail mail. It printed out with complete instructions and the address where to send the form.

The site also provides interesting stats such as rates of cancer cases for the state and counties, leading sites of cancer, county and state death rates, infant death rates, leading causes of death, fertility, abortion and pregnancy rates, hospitalization rates, and estimates of the number of physicians by county.

The site also includes reports on early diagnosis of breast cancer, the leading causes of death, availability of nurses in Michigan, and the changing use of MRIs.

Help with repairs

Autosistance provides unbiased professional help with auto repair questions, product recalls, safety recalls, warranties, consumer rights in auto repair matters, and much more.

"Today people would rather endure a root canal without Novocaine than take their car in for service," said Roy Sutfin, president of Autosistance. "This is primarily because they feel they will be taken advantage of, and rightly so."

Autosistance helps consumers avoid auto repair fraud by helping them become informed consumers and by placing experts in their corner. The Plymouth-based firm works only for its members who have phone access to ASE-certified automotive technicians with a minimum of 10 years experience.

Anyone interested in the services provided by Autosistance can visit its Web site at http://home.earthlink.net/~autosistance/ for a picture of what the firm does and how it does.

AutoConnect

Speaking of automobiles, a joint partnership recently has been formed to promote the use of the Internet as an automotive retailing medium.

Joining hands were Hall Auto World, one of the largest automotive dealership retail chains in the U.S., and ADP AutoConnect, a new one-stop free automotive Internet service.

Point to http://autoconnect.net and you will find AutoConnect which allows consumers to find easily and conveniently answers to virtually any automotive question. This site has links to nearly 4,000 auto dealerships, more than 90 auto manufacturers, auto clubs and associations, parts and service sites, and online auto industry publications.

With direct access to a dealership home page, potential car buyers and service customers can access information on sales, service, location, personnel and hours of operation.

Savings Bond online

The Savings Bond Informer Inc., a company that has tried to educate U.S. Savings Bond owners since 1990, has made its expertise and insight available on a Web site.

The TSBI Web site contains tips and information for bond owners on such topics as common misconceptions, tax traps, and savings bond resources. Dan Pederson, an author and savings bond expert, also is featured on the site. Point to http://www.bondinformer.com.

Peer recognition

The Michigan Nursery and Landscape Association recently announced that Dan Bywalec, president of D & B Landscaping in Detroit, was recognized by his peers in Michigan's nursery and landscape industry. Bywalec, a Canton resident, was inducted into MNLA's Quarter-Century Club during the 1997 Great Lakes Trade Exposition in Lansing.

More than 3,600 nursery and landscape industry personnel attended the expo.

The Quarter-Century Club recognition honors those individuals who have made contributions to the professional development and growth of the nursery and landscape industry by having been employed in it for at least 25 years.

GETTING CREDIT WHEN IT'S DUE

Anyone whose loan request has been turned down is entitled to a free credit report if he or she requests it within 30 days. The first thing on the minds of many of those who do make this request is whether or not the report is accurate. According to one Wall Street Journal report, about one third of those who requested their credit reports challenged the information they received as being inaccurate or outdated. Another survey found that nearly half of the reports had errors and 19 percent had major mistakes. Common errors include: confusing the name on the credit report with someone else with the same name or similar Social Security number, failing to incorporate comments or changes based on information provided by creditors, and/or failing to remove damaging information after the issues have been resolved.

We are increasingly aware of the problem of erroneous credit reporting and the effect it has on our clients. Even when you are dealing with reputable creditors, human error always exists. If you have been faced with a denial of credit due to an error, PAIGE & COMPANY, P.C., Certified Public Accountants and Management Consultants, are fully aware of the strain it can put on your financial picture, and can assist you in rectifying the problem. Call us today at (810) 540-0250 to schedule a consultation, or visit our site on the World Wide Web at WWW:http//paigecpas.edict.com. We are conveniently located at 30850 Telegraph Road, Suite 100 in Birmingham.

HINT: Credit reports tell, in essence, how much you have borrowed and how faithfully you have repaid.

NEW HOMES

It's a team collaboration at Fairway Pines

Three builders have combined to design nine different floor plans – colonials and Cape Cods – containing just about anything a buyer might want for the second phase of Fairway Pines in Pheasant Run.

Curtis Building, Orloff Homes and the Richard Group will construct 156 houses on a rotating basis in the platted sub off Canton Center Road south of Cherry Hill in Canton.

Base prices range from $252,500 for a colonial of 2,600 square feet to $289,500 for a colonial of 3,319 square feet, each containing four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

"We felt it was necessary for aesthetics and for architectural control to offer a variety of plans for the market," said Melvin Menuck of Curtis. "We customize. We won't be the cheapest. We're trying to be the best."

"You have three builders here who not only have experience in production housing, but also custom housing," said Robert Orloff. "Almost all of our homes here we're tweaking, modifying."

"We've tried to take proven plans and improve them," said Richard Cherkasky of the Richard Group. "This is the upper end of Canton. The main thing I see is experience and quality they (buyers) can draw on here."

The three builders combined have a 120-year family history in the business.

Freeway access, I-275, M-14 , I-96 and I-94, is readily available from Fairway Pines. Metro airport is 15 minutes away. A host of shopping and dining opportunities are nearby.

"I think the key is we're close to all facilities Canton has to offer," Orloff said. "We're within walking distance to city hall, the library, baseball fields, soccer fields and the new Summit indoor sports facility."

A three-car garage, fireplace, dishwasher, range and microwave, basement, and first floor laundry with tub and sink are standard inclusions in all floor plans.

Primary exterior materials are brick and vinyl siding with wood accents.

Each of the builders has constructed a model.

The Augusta II, a 2,660-square-foot Cape Cod, situates a luxurious master suite on the main floor. The master with cathedral ceiling has a pair of walk-in closets, dual sink vanity with make-up area, separate tub and shower and plant shelves.

A curved staircase and plant shelves over a hall closet accentuate the foyer.

The main living area also includes a library with cathedral ceiling, kitchen/nook with island and sloped ceiling, great room with cathedral ceiling and dining area.

Two bedrooms and a full bath are upstairs.

"It's open, spacious and private," said Menuck, who built the model.

The Augusta II carries a base price of $264,900. The model with upgrades including wall and window coverings, landscaping, premium elevation and air conditioning goes for $307,760.

Augusta II: This Cape Cod situates the master bedroom suite on the first floor, two bedrooms and a full bath upstairs.

The Turnberry is a traditional 2,930-square-foot colonial.

The main floor features a library, living room, dining room, kitchen/nook with island and family room.

All bedrooms are upstairs.

The master, with an unusual geometric-shaped ceiling, a cross between pan and cathedral, also has a separate tub and shower, dual sink vanity with make-up area and two walk-in closets.

Three other bedrooms and a second full bath also are up.

"The thing that's consistently nice is all rooms are good size," said Cherkasky, who built the model.

Base price is $270,500. The model with upgrades is $317,866.

The Pinehurst II is a fancier colonial of 3,319 square feet with two staircases, one off the foyer, the other where the nook/family room converge.

The step-up master with cathedral ceiling has two distinct vanities and separate tub and shower.

Two of the other three upstairs bedrooms have walk-in closets. A second full bath services those bedrooms.

A library, living room, dining room, kitchen/nook with island and built-in desk and family room with two-story ceiling are on the main floor.

"The home has all the luxury features you would find in a much more expensive home," said Orloff, who built it.

The base price of the Pinehurst II is $289,500. The model with upgrades is $338,654.

Fairway Pines is serviced by city water and sewers. It has sidewalks and is within the Plymouth-Canton school boundaries.

The property tax rate currently is $31.22 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of $287,000 house, the average buyers are so far spending, would pay about $4,480 the first year.

The annual association fee to maintain common areas is $250 per house.

Phyllis and Craig Coulter bought a colonial.

"My husband and I recently relocated from Minneapolis," Phyllis said. "Canton is a straight shoot to Detroit and Ann Arbor. Canton is a growing area with lots of conveniences. We felt the value, price of the home compared to other subs, was better.

"We like the openness, traditional floor plan," she said. "The quality, workmanship, has been very good."

The sales office at Fairway Pines in Pheasant Run, (313) 844-2230, is open noon to 6 p.m. daily.

Buyers and sellers raise FHA questions

MORTGAGE SHOPPING

DAVID C. MULLY

Last week I began discussing the features offered by the FHA and how they differ from conventional loans. Let's continue reviewing FHA loan features and cover some of the advantages for both buyers and sellers, using some of the most frequently asked questions I hear about FHA loans.

What are "points" and do I have to pay them?

"Points" (also referred to as "discount points") represent the amount of money that is being charged by the lender to give a loan. A point represents 1 percent of the mortgage amount, 3 points equals 3 percent, etc.) Generally, points are paid on all financing. Either the buyer or the seller may pay the points. This means the decision about who pays the points is negotiable between the buyer and seller and should be clarified when you sign a purchase agreement. It is best for the buyer to shop around for a "Direct Endorsement Lender" for the lowest interest and point deal.

Does a buyer have to be a first time home buyer to qualify for an FHA loan?

No. The FHA program is open to anyone. There are no restrictions on who may apply or how many times a home buyer may obtain an FHA loan. Single people, married couples and people who have previously purchased homes using FHA loans or other financing methods are eligible to obtain an FHA loan. FHA also has special programs for senior citizens and young families.

Are there loan amount limitations for buyers who are interested in FHA loans?

Yes. There are maximum loan amounts depending upon the area in which the home is located. The amounts are approved by FHA for each are based on average home prices. In most cases, the maximum loan amount is more than adequate for the area in which the home is located. There are no income limitations of any kind. Call me at the number below for loan amounts in this area. This opens a wide door to the people of our eight-county southeastern area who have been wanting to purchase a new home, but have trouble coming up with a down payment. These limits are periodically reviewed and updated.

Can FHA financing increase the number of potential buyers?

Yes. Sellers who consider FHA financing terms increase their number of potential buyers by 25 or 30 percent. Since FHA buyers need less cash to purchase a home, more buyers are eligible to make an offer on the home. This means the home may sell more quickly and at a higher price than for a seller who does not offer FHA terms. FHA, after all, has more programs to offer to more buyers and sellers than any conventional product out there today.

If FHA is so advantageous for both buyers and sellers, why don't more people know about the program?

FHA is a 60-plus year old government program that invented the modern home mortgage. There are a great many people who have learned about FHA and have successfully used the programs to buy or sell their home. However, there are an even greater number of people who simply have not inquired of who have been misinformed about there new financing methods. FHA is still the best method by which a buyer and seller can reach an agreement that is mutually beneficial.

The employees of FHA/HUD have been working hard to overcome the mythical stories about FHA. They have placed many people in their first, second or subsequent homes in less than five weeks of processing time. Most of these people had never heard of FHA and are now happily living in their new home.

In next week's third article in this series on FHA loans, I'll continue with more information, look at which buyers would be interested in FHA loans and consider buying qualifications.

Job-safety video aimed at kids

More than 30 of Michigan's construction associations have joined forces in a collaborative effort to produce a one-of-a-kind construction job-site safety video for children.

The video, aimed at young people kindergarten through sixth grade, warns about the risks of playing on or near construction job sites.

"I've talked to a number of contractors over the past several months, and almost every one of them has recounted at least one incident involving kids trespassing on job sites after hours," said Brenda Zimmerman, director of industry affairs for the Construction Association of Michigan.

"The results can be costly, including injuries and malicious mischief like vandalism and theft," she said.

"Anyone who has spent time with kids knows that it's almost impossible to keep them from getting into places they shouldn't be, no matter how many precautions are taken," Zimmerman said. "We're trying to educate children about what can happen when they make a decision to trespass on a construction site."

The new video, entitled Smart Kids Play It Safe, is scheduled to be formally introduced next week at Design & Construction Expo '97, the largest annual construction event in the Midwest.

More than 200 third graders from Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties have been invited to the premier at the Pontiac Silverdome.

The kids will be treated to breakfast at the Main Event Restaurant, a special screening of the video and a guided tour of the show to see the big equipment displays.

"Following the premier, the associations plan to take the safety video to every elementary school in the state using a group of volunteers from each organization," Zimmerman said.

"It will be a massive effort considering that there are over 2,000 public elementary schools in the state," she said.

Following are sponsors who contributed $2,000 for the Smart Kids Play It Safe video.

Rag-rolling: Express style and cover up imperfections, too

A fresh coat of paint can inexpensively refresh a tired space, disguise imperfections or add the beauty of color. Decorative painting is a creative way to further customize the finish of the room, as well as express personal style.

Simple items which you already may have around the house oftentimes achieve the best results. Rags, sponges and even plastic bags rolled or dabbed on newly painted surfaces give a soft, mottled look. These methods work well for walls and can be used on flat surfaces, such as dresser tops, drawers and shelves.

"Choose the base-coat color carefully," says Tracy Lovejoy, a design expert with The Home Depot. "Make sure your base coat and all of your accent coats work well with your furnishings and floors, or that the colors won't make the room appear smaller."

1. Apply a base coat of low-luster latex enamel, using a paintbrush or paint roller, then allow to dry.

2. Mix the basic glaze with the paint – you will be using about 3 parts glaze into 1 part paint. To do this, take a neutral wall glaze and mix well. Pour 3 parts glaze to a container. Take your top coat latex color paint and stir it up, then pour 1 part paint into the container with the glaze. Test the color over a sample board painted with your base-coat color, or on white paper. Add more glaze, water or paint to achieve your color.

3. Pour the glaze mixture into the paint tray. Apply over base coat with roller, criss-crossing your strokes to get an even finish. Work in floor-to-ceiling strips, no more than 3 feet wide. If glaze dries too quickly, work in a smaller area.

4. Crumple up a lint-free rag in your hand so that most of the wrinkles are on the side that will face the wall. Press the rag lightly on the wall surface, taking the glaze off as you go. Touch the rag randomly throughout the section to achieve a uniform look. To get into corners and tight spots, use a smaller rag.

Fireplace, kitchen efficiency highlight this plan

Gently arched windows and a combination of hipped and gabled roof lines draw the eye to the Clarkston, a mid-sized family home with a vaulted great room. Its dramatic entry portico, supported by a massive square brick column, adds to the attraction. The arched transom window over the door mirrors the shape of the exterior brick arch.

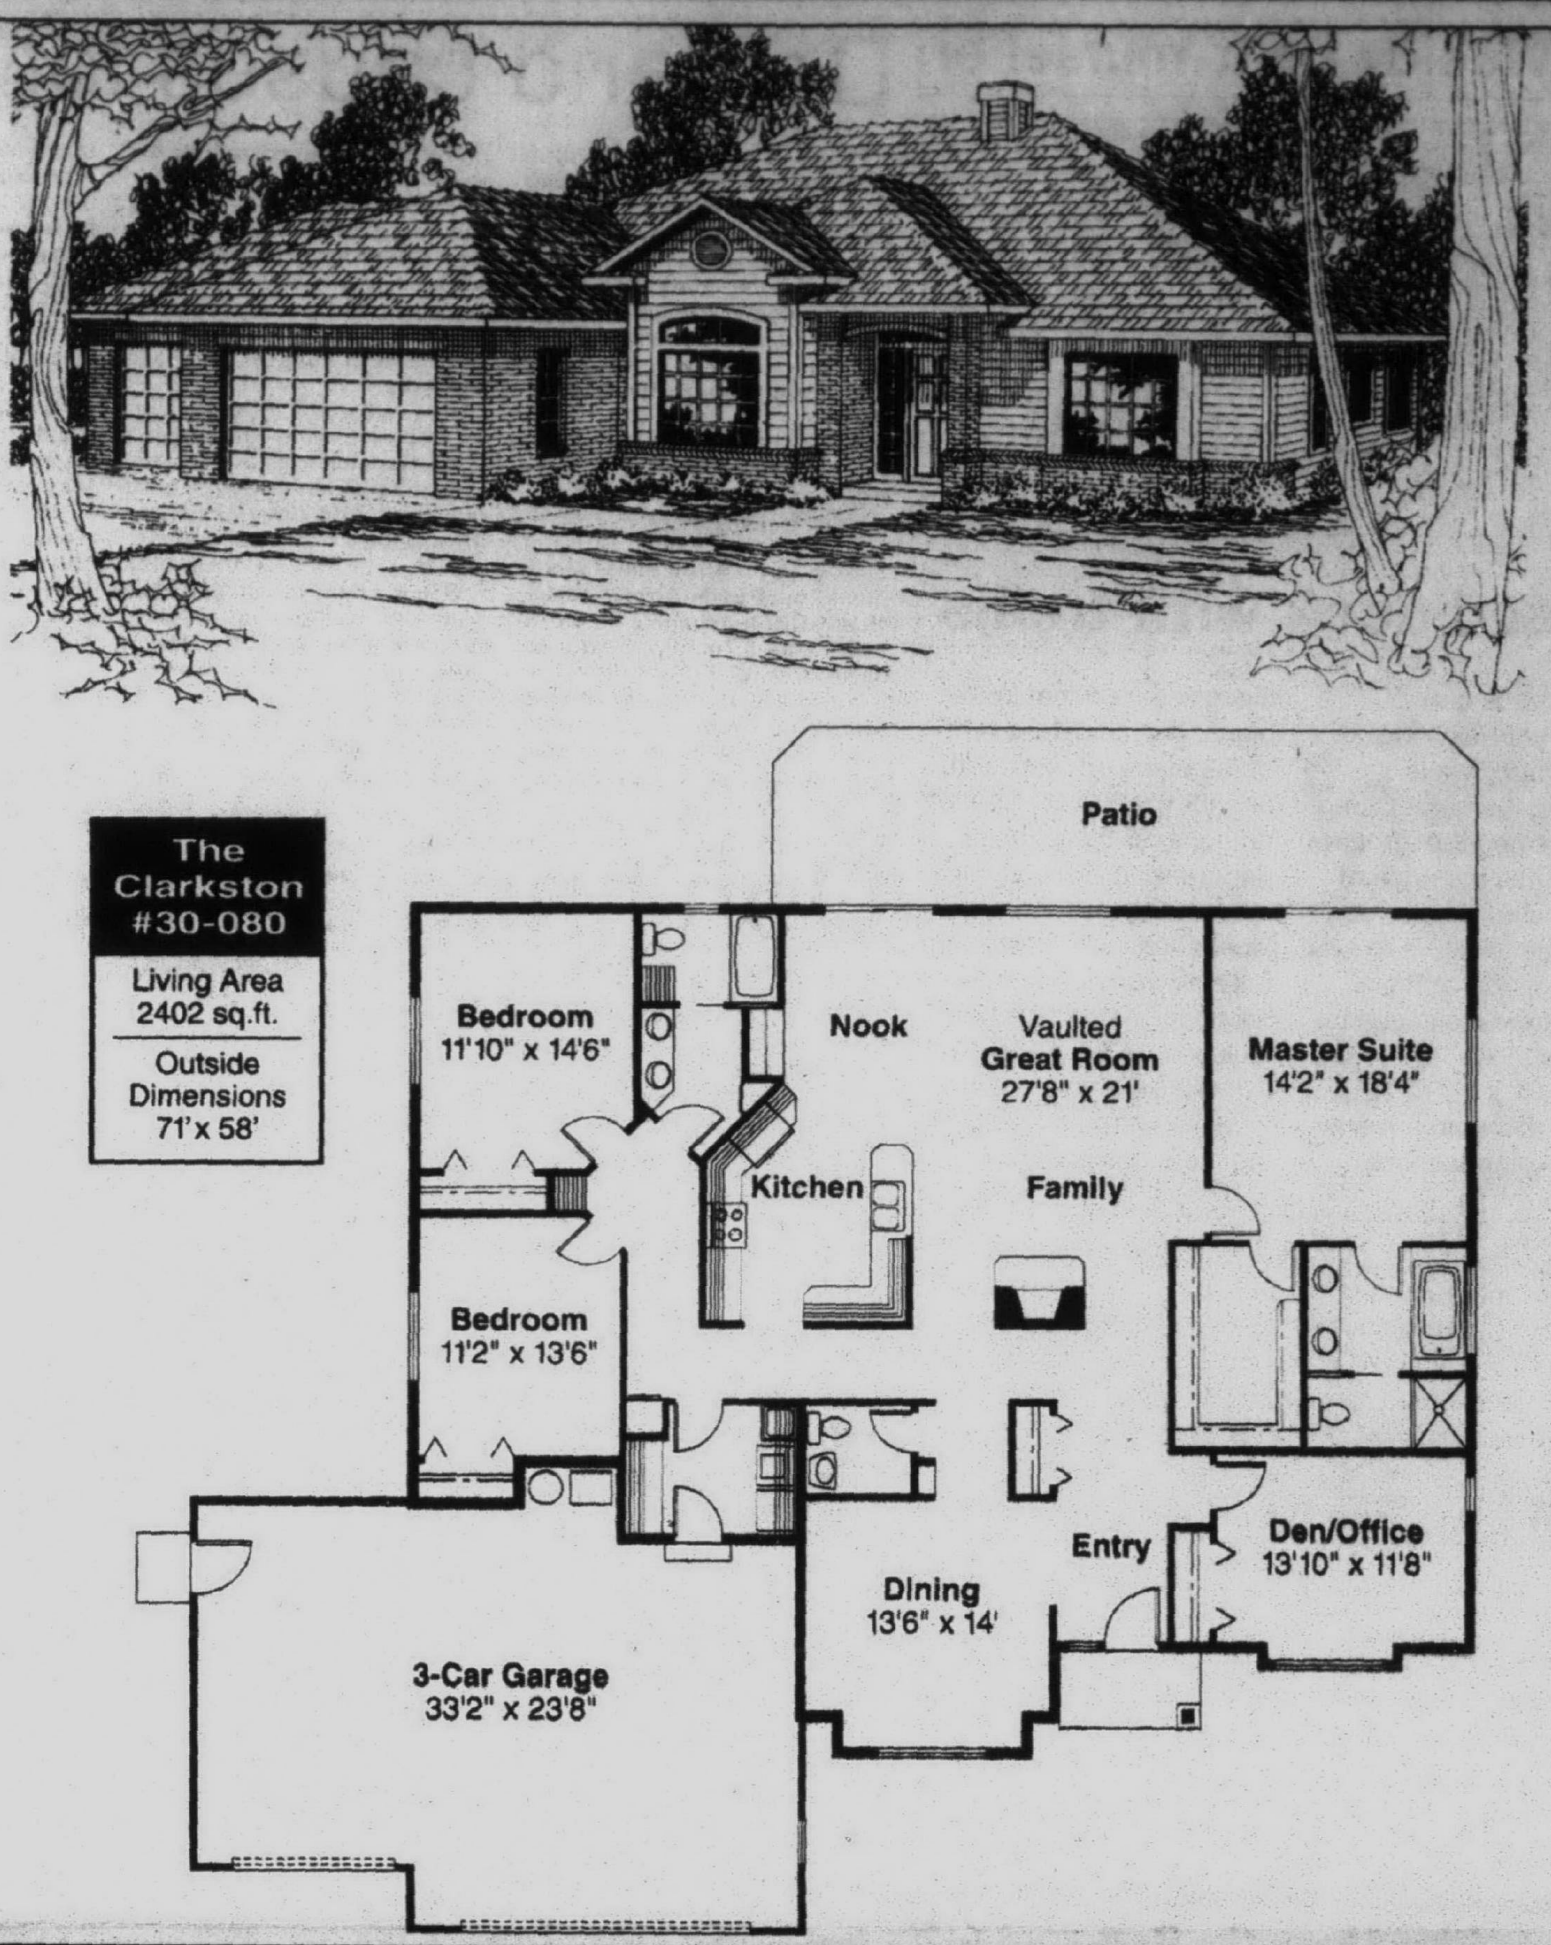

A freestanding fireplace is at the core of this informal plan. Its central location allows enjoyment of the warmth and colorful flames from the kitchen, nook and family room. The home has no living room, which many contemporary families see as a plus. But it does boast a large dining room facing the street, along with another bright room that could be outfitted as a home office, den, or a fourth bedroom.

Efficiency was a major consideration in designing this kitchen. Range, sink and refrigerator are set in a tight triangle that minimizes wasted steps. Sliding glass doors provide patio access for outdoor dining. Utilities are tucked in a pass-through space that connects the house with a three-car garage. A small powder room is nearby.

Master suite and secondary bedrooms are on opposite sides of the great room. Master suite amenities include a huge walk-in closet, and a private bathroom. A pocket door separates the toilet and shower from the tub and double vanity, while sliders in the sleeping area open onto the patio.

The Clarkston's secondary bedrooms share another dual-compartment bathroom. The double vanity in the outer section allows teens the luxury of extended mirror use without blocking access to the toilet or tub.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Clarkston 30-080 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

Demand causes lot prices to soar

Prices of residential building lots rose last year, driven higher by persistent demand for new housing and the increasing costs of land development.

U.S. Housing Markets, a tracking/reporting service based in Canton, said development of new sites appears to be keeping pace with absorption in most major markets.

Southeastern Michigan, however, is one of the few busy locales nationally with a shortgage of building lots.

"It has been amazingly hot here in terms of all major metro areas," said Brian Bragg, editor. "It's really outstanding as far as this being a colder climate, an older market."

"Good lots at times have been coming on stream at prices half again higher than similar lots in the same neighborhoods a year earlier," Bragg wrote in his report.

"This has been the case in some parts of the Detroit metro area, where employment growth has been tremendous in the past few years," he wrote. "Demand for one-family lots in northern and western suburbs has been relentless."

Here's what U.S. Housing Markets reported about our market.

"Southeast Michigan's housing boom has rocketed the price of raw land and developed lots throughout almost the entire region.

"Some easing is likely as the economy moderates in 1997; meanwhile, building sites are in short supply in many locales. Land speculation is evident by quick flips; turnover is high throughout the market.

"Employers have been generating some 50,000 to 80,000 net new jobs annually for the past few years. Such expansion has fueled southeastern Michigan's strongest economic boom in nearly 20 years.

"Single-family builders in 1996 worked at their fastest pace since 1978. Through it all, housing prices continued to rise. Inflation of existing home prices hit double digits, and builders werre able to command ever-better prices for their products.

"Prices of finished lots are escalating, particularly in Detroit's western suburbs. Preservation of wetlands and tree regulations have curbed new supplies.

"In most subs, a low-end 60-by-120 lot for starter product will cost at least $20,000. In more popular transportation corridors north and west, 60-foot lots will command $32,000-$40,000. Builders note a distinct shortage of these sites.

"Lots of 70 to 80 feet will seldom be found for less than $30,000, and will often run up to $50,000 in the most desirable neighborhoods.

"Raw single-family land on the edges typically sells for $8,000 to $20,000 per acre. Multi-family dirt will bring $25,000 to $40,000 per acre in most situations.

"Regulators of Macomb County have slammed the brakes with a two-year moratorium on sewer permits in three busy townships in the northeast suburban area.

"The heated pace of development has spawned more restrictive zoning. Large-lot regulations are being applied in Novi, Milford, Brighton and Ann Arbor."

Don't neglect lighting features

When redecorating a room, colors are taken into account, space, furniture, carpeting and even wall sockets.

One thing that's sometimes forgotten is the feature that allows you to see all your improvements – the lighting.

With all the different options available to today's decorator, there's enough variety to satisfy even the most demanding homeowner. The important thing to remember is to pick lighting that meets your needs as well as looks good.

It won't do any good to have great looking lighting fixtures if you can't see them because the light's too dim.

Before you decide the style of lighting you need, consider the kind of light that can be produced.

■ Direct light is harsh and produces sharp shadows and contrasts.

■ Indirect light is reflected either from the ceiling or the walls and produces a softer light.

■ Semi-indirect light combines both direct and indirect light with the major portion of light reflected off the ceiling.

■ General illumination refers to overall illumination where shadows are at a minimum.

■ Localized lighting refers to lighting for a specific area.

■ Decorative light is used to identify to a fixture important in the lighting plans because of its appearance.

■ Accent lighting refers to dramatic or unusual lighting effects without drawing attention to the light fixture itself.

Once you determine the kind of light you want to use, you can choose from a variety of fixtures to meet your needs.

Recessed lights are incandescent or fluorescent fixtures set into the ceiling or wall so that the fixture is flush with the surface. This type of light is used for accent or general illumination.

Ceiling-mounted fixtures are installed close to the ceiling and are attached directly to the outlet box. These types of fixtures with glass shades provide both direct and semi-indirect light. This fixture is used primarily for general illumination.

Stem or chain fixtures are suspended from the outlet box. Depending upon the fixture, they provide direct, indirect or semi-direct lighting or a combination. These lights are used for general illumination and when hung low can be used for downlight local lighting.

Reel fixtures are similar to stem fixtures but are suspended from the ceiling on an enclosed reel that permits the light to be raised or lowered.

Cove lighting is indirect light produced by lamps concealed in a molding of wood, metal, plaster or glass fastened to the upper wall or an actual part of the wall itself.

Wall lights are equipped with fluorescent lamps and are primarily used for general illumination, but they also are used as window valances, bed lamps, over-the-sink lamps and desk lights.

Wall brackets are fixtures that mount on the wall.

Wall bracket lighting can provide any of the three types of lighting or a combination of the three. They are used for localized lighting, decorative lighting or background illumination.

Accent lights are adjustable lights that can be mounted on the walls or ceiling. They direct light to a specific location. These lights are used to create dramatic and interesting effects.

Mortgage rates dip slightly

WASHINGTON (AP) _ Thirty-year, fixed rate mortgages averaged 7.85 percent this past week, down from 7.87 percent last week, according to a national survey released Thursday by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp.

It was the lowest since Jan. 9, when rates also averaged 7.85. Last week"s average was the highest since April 18, when rates averaged 7.88 percent.

On one-year adjustable rate mortgages, lenders were asking an average initial rate of 5.57 percent, unchanged from last week.

Fifteen-year mortgages, a popular option for those refinancing mortgages, averaged 7.35 percent this week, down from 7.38 percent a week earlier.

The rates do not include add-on fees known as points.

Mirrored walls make rooms seem bigger and brighter, and mirrors in decorative frames offer an economical alternative to expensive artwork.

Pamela Heyne, a Washington, D.C., architect and author of "Mirror by Design" (John Wiley & Sons, $49.95), says mirrors shine especially bright in a house with very little natural light. She knows firsthand, from remodeling her rather dark Georgetown townhouse.

Heyne started in the kitchen, mirroring the ceiling inside the hanging cabinets and the wall behind the sink.

She says the cabinet mirrors make it easier to see what's on the top shelves, while the mirrored backsplash doubles the light around the sink and visually enlarges the room.

She used mirrors to advantage elsewhere in the house, too.

"To bring in light from outdoors, I placed a mirrored three-panel screen near the window in my dining room, which is very dark," Heyne says. "I also often use mirrored place mats that reflect the sky on the dining table."

In the living room, she mirrored the walls on either side of the fireplace rather than making the more obvious choice of hanging a mirror over the fireplace.

While mirrors visually expand space, they should be used with care. Make sure they reflect the most attractive portion of a room, not an eyesore. And, Heyne suggests, avoid putting a mirror directly opposite an entrance. Few people enjoy seeing themselves entering a room.

As a design consultant to the North American Mirror Manufacturers Association in Potomac, Md., Heyne is in a good position to talk about what's happening in the market.

One thing is tinted mirrors. While not new, they're currently popular. The glass, in colors such as bronze, gray, pink and blue, is tinted before the back is silvered.

Blue is the color of choice in Florida, she says, "perhaps because it makes a room look cooler and suggests the color of the water."

Two recent manufacturing techniques for mirrors are more practical than decorative. A pyrolytic process replaces silvering, which has a tendency to corrode in damp areas such as the bathroom. Ultra-clear mirrors, devoid of the usual hint of green in the glass, make colors truer. That's particularly handy when applying makeup.

Many creative uses of mirrors are centuries old, pre-dating the electric light. The Hall of Mirrors at Versailles, installed in the late 17th century, was the first major use of built-in mirrors. The look was widely imitated in palaces throughout Europe in the 18th century.

In the 19th century, Sir John Soane of London had slivers of mirror placed in the woodwork and circular mirrors mounted in the upper walls of his townhouse, which is now a museum.

Heyne says it is well worth borrowing the 18th-century idea of installing mirrors on the walls between windows. These so-called pier mirrors double the apparent size of the room and make the window wall a focal point.

In Shakespeare's time, "ghosts" appeared on stage, thanks to the use of angled mirrors. Such mirror tricks can be played at home.

"It's fun to take a small mirror up to a window," Heyne says. "You can often grab a better view by placing the mirror to the side of the window."

New breed of gas furnace heats homes more evenly

Every wish you could just take the chill out of your home's air without being overwhelmed with a full blast of heat from your furnace?

Well, now you can, thanks to a new development in gas furnaces called two-stage, variable-speed heating.

According to the Trance Home Comfort Institute, most older furnaces are single-state, single-speed furnaces. This means the valve that controls the flow of gas into the furnace has just one setting, high, and the blower that distributes heated air through the home has just one speed, maximum.

Two-state, variable-speed furnaces, on the other hand, have a gas valve that automatically operates at either high or low to provide the correct level of furl with the most efficiency and a blower that automatically adjusts its speed according to the home's heating needs.

Heating experts at the Trane Home comfort Institute explain that, in conventional furnaces, the blower is either on or off. And, any time the blower is on. it's running at full capacity. This frequent on-again, off-again cycling can result in uncomfortable temperature fluctuations, especially if the furnace is a lot larger than it needs to be for the coldest weather.

It can also result in higher-than-normal operating costs. Compare it to the operation of a car, and it's similar to the difference in fuel economy between highway driving and stop-and-go driving.

Instead of starting with a full blast of heat from the outset, the blower in a variable-speed furnace starts at a low speed to gently warm the home and then gradually builds up to a high speed if more heat is required for maximum comfort. This means there are no sudden bursts of air, ensuring a more even and comfortable flow of heat.

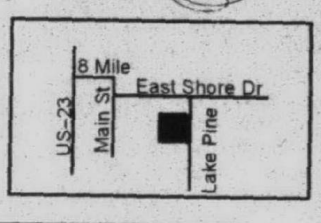

It also means quieter operation and improved indoor air quality. A variable-speed blower produces less noise because it operates at slower speeds most of the time. You won't hear a "thunking" noise when it comes on.

And, because it operates at slower speeds, more unwanted particles cling to the filter, allowing cleaner air to flow into the home. In a conventional furnace, air is pulled through the filter at a consistently high rate of speed. This lessens the filter's ability to collect dust and allergens.

Power surge damage can be controlled

Many people can go through life without a surge suppressor. The problem is that you don't know if you're one of the many.

You may live in a town or certain area this is prone to spikes and surges in the power going into your house, blackouts, lightning storms, or a number of other factors that can affect the steady, measured stream of power into your outlets.

Almost any electronic gadget plugged into an outlet can be damaged or ruined by a power surge. Obviously, the stakes go up if you are operating an expensive computer system, stereo system or home-theater system.

This is why buying a surge suppressor may be necessary. It could be considered as an investment as insurance against having the circuitry of your computer burned to a crisp – even for computers with some degree of built-in protection.

For a decent suppressor, you can expect to pay more than $50. Most of the models have at least six outlets, a light to show when some form of protection is ineffective, a resettable line-current circuit breaker, some type of warranty and compliance with the UL 1449 standard. (The best rating is 330 volts; a rating higher than 500 volts can be unnecessary.)

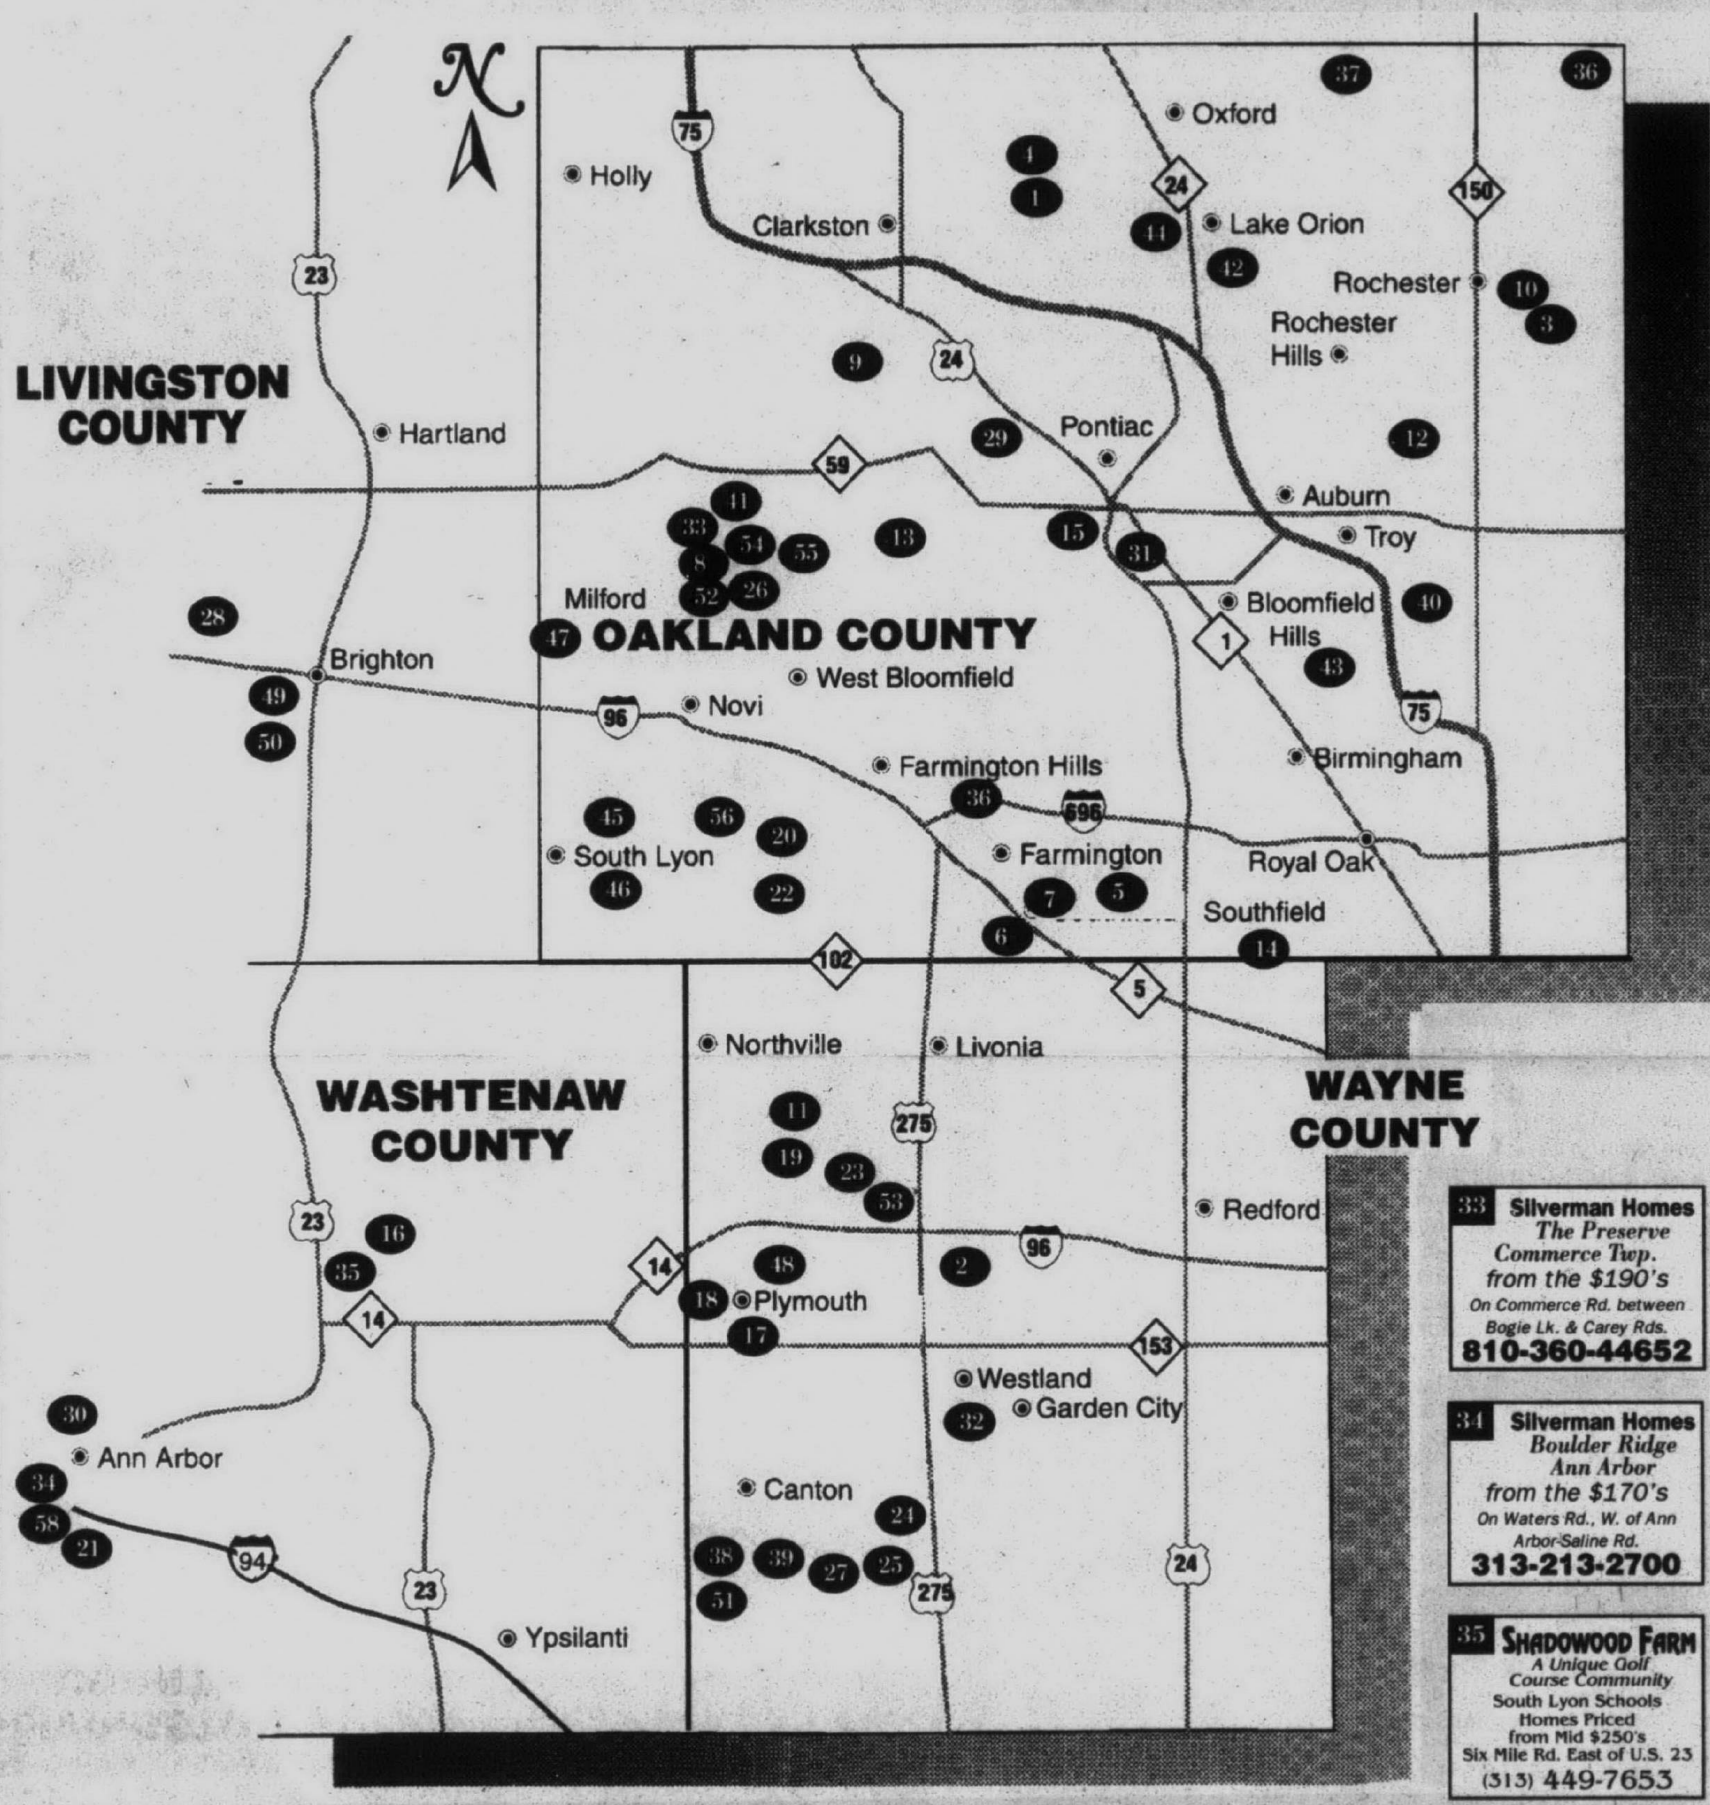

If you have a fax/modem, there are may brands that offer a simple connection to protect anything on the telephone line from surges.

By stopping power to the computer when the flow gets too low, the equipment is shielded from irregular spikes that occur at the time of failure and when the power comes on again.

There are even suppressors that utilize batteries during power failures to retain a power supply, so you don't lose information.

Elegant French-Chateau overlooks lush landscape

335 Sycamore Ct.
Bloomfield Hills
Real Estate One
$774,900

This elegant French Chateau-style home has soaring ceilings, crown moldings and exquisite marble and wood flooring throughout. From the beautiful private grounds with a bridge over a fish pond to the elegant decor, this custom estate sized home is one of a kind.

The dramatic two story foyer/reception hall has also been referred to as the parlor or music room, once housing an exquisite grand piano.

Amenities include four bedrooms, three full baths and two powder rooms, a huge gourmet kitchen with full wall garden window and luxurious master suite.

Highlights of the master bedroom include a 24-foot by 10-foot double wide walk-in closet, master bath with oversized whirlpool tub, separate shower and a balcony overlooking the lush, beautifully landscape grounds.

The two story living room with soaring 24-foot cieling and full height palladium windows is light and bright with marble fireplace and mirrored wet bar.

Bloomfield Hills is convenient to the many shops and amenities of downtown Birmingham.

Located in the city of Bloomfield Hills with Bloomfield Hills schools.

Custom built house ideal for in-town Birmingham

819 Greenwood
Birmingham, Michigan
(South of Oak and west of Woodward)
Weir, Manuel, Snyder & Ranke, Inc.
$610,000

This sensational one-of-a-kind, custom built (1988) in-town home is within walking distance to Quarton Lake, where you can enjoy its quiet banks and watch the ducks, geese and swans, go fishing, ice skate or walk to the downtown shopping district.

Birmingham is known as an upscale community offering a wide array of interesting, charming homes. The downtown shopping district is just large enough to boast many fine bookstores, small boutiques, jewlery stores, children's shops, art galleries, coffee shops, restaurants and the beautifully restored Birmingham movie theater, but still small enough to walk the entire area.

The more than 100 community organizations greatly add to the character and culture of this city. Shain Park is in the heart of downtown and fills the area with art, music and other cultural events several times a year.

This is the perfect condo alternative for a carefree lifestyle. The very open floor plan accommodates a wide range of tastes from traditional to soft contemporary. It was built with exceptional attention to detail and quality throughout. Extensive use of solid oak, hardwood floors, gourmet white kitchen. The master suite features built-in oak dressers, huge bath with Jacuzzi tub and dressing room (19 feet by 14 feet) and his and her walk-in closets.

The home is 3,200 square feet with two bedrooms, three full and one half bath, great room with fireplace, a family room, library, breakfast area and two car detatched garage.

Birmingham schools serving the neighborhood are Pierce Elementary, Derby Middle School and Seaholm High School. Many appliances included.

Open today 1-4 p.m.

Test drive your new business.

We're so sure of our business system, we'll let you try out your 7-Eleven® store franchise for six months before making a final commitment. No kidding.

As our 3,000 current franchisees have discovered, there's no other franchise with as many benefits as a 7-Eleven convenience store. At $53,000, the 1995 average initial cash requirement was surprisingly reasonable. Especially when you consider the proven business system and ongoing support offered by 7-Eleven.

After repositioning the company to meet the challenges of the '90s, 7-Eleven continues to be the best convenience retailer in the world. When you discover all the benefits we offer, you'll find nothing else compares with 7-Eleven. Call today.

The world's #1 convenience store franchise.

The six month trial offer is not available in the state of Ohio. The initial franchise fee may vary for each store. The method of computing the franchise fee is fully disclosed in the Uniform Franchise Offering Circular. Franchisees who are selling the franchise interest in their 7-Eleven stores may also seek an additional payment. This is not an offer to sell or solicitation of an offer to buy a franchise. An offer is made by prospectus only. Franchises are only available in certain states. An equal opportunity organization.

Application Development Director

Come and join Michigan's largest health insurer's progressive application development team as an Application Development Director. Lead from 100-220 staff in 6-9 departments in building and managing systems in a multiple platform environment. Take on the responsibility of teaming with business partners to develop strategic plans and technical solutions to achieve a competitive advantage. Direct key projects, participate in new technology decisions, and develop staff to use the new technology, our methodology and project management tools. Grow with us as we expand our networks, development platforms and Internet presence.

A Bachelor's degree is required; a graduate degree in a related field is strongly preferred. Experience in leadership and communication, project management, mainframe, client/ server, development methodologies, and leading a large organization in a multiple project environment are key to this position. Insurance or health care related experience is preferred. Application reengineering, migration to client/server platforms and consulting experience a plus.

Auditor Opportunities

Outstanding auditor opportunities are available with Michigan's largest health insurer, Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Michigan. We have the following exciting career opportunities for experienced professionals to join our Audit Team:

Senior Auditor

Seeking a seasoned Senior Auditor to conduct audits for our national accounts. Responsibilities include performing complex and sensitive special audits, leading team audits, and reviewing claims processing systems to ensure appropriate controls are in place.

Qualified candidates will possess at least 5 years' business experience including 2 years' auditing claim processes and a Bachelor's degree in Business Administration or a related field. Statistical sampling principles/applications, EDP principles, strong written and verbal communication skills and an in-depth understanding of health care delivery systems are also essential.

Provider Auditors

Opportunities exist for Provider Auditors to join our Audit Team. You will assist in conducting field audits and making recommendations on audit findings relative to provider cost reports.

Requirements include a Bachelor's degree in Accounting, Finance or a health care related field and at least 2-5 years' experience in public accounting, hospital accounting or hospital reimbursement.

Our successful Audit Team candidates must be self-motivated, dependable individuals who uphold the highest ethical standards in working with the hospital provider community.

Excellent salaries, benefits and growth opportunities exist within these two challenging working environments. Qualified candidates should send a resume, indicating desired position, to:

EMPLOYMENT

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 1997 • PAGE 1 SECTION H

Surveys offer optimistic outlook for '97

BY SHERYL SILVER

Is "changing jobs in 1997" one of your New Year's resolutions? If so, two recent surveys suggest you're likely to encounter a pretty healthy job market for at least the first six months of the year.

One survey, which polled 1000 Chief Financial Officers (CFOs), found 43 percent of those polled expect to grow their businesses in 1997. The survey, conducted by Robert Half International, a California headquartered staffing service with 190 offices in the U.S., Canada, and Europe, found only 8 percent of respondents forecast any cutbacks.

The survey revealed some variation in projected hiring levels by industry. It was CFOs in the retail, transportation, public utilities, and construction industries who predicted especially strong growth.

Projections also varied somewhat according to the size of the organization responding. CFOs at companies with 50-99 employees anticipated the most active business expansion with 50 percent reporting plans for at least some growth in 1997. "Companies with 50 to 100 employees make up one of the fastest growing and strongest segments of the small business market," noted Max Messmer, chairman and CEO of Robert Half International. "Their expansion plans are geared toward keeping pace with heightened competition and accommodating internal growth."

Commenting generally on the survey results, Messmer added, "Businesses are optimistic about 1997. This healthy outlook for corporate expansion bodes well for job growth in the year ahead."

A survey that appears to support that optimistic outlook for job growth was conducted by Management Recruiters International (MRI), an Ohio based international recruiting and search firm with offices throughout California. This survey, the 38th in a series conducted by MRI, found an increase in projected hiring for executive, managerial and professional level positions during the first half of 1997.

According to MRI, of the nearly 2000 executives surveyed, 49.6 percent indicated plans to increase their middle management and/or professional staffs during the first six months of this year. This figure represents and increase of 1.7 points from projections for the last half of 1996, when new hire projections reached what was then the survey's record high of 47.9 percent. An MRI spokesperson says this level of projected new hires is the highest the company has seen for these job categories in 16 years of conducting its semi-annual hiring survey.

Of the survey results, MRI's president Alan Schonberg said, "New hire projections for the last half of 1996 reached an historic high, and now that high has been exceeded. Businesses are hiring at an unprecedented rate at a time when the pool of qualified candidates is shrinking. Competition for workers in this segment of the work force is already tight and promises to become fierce during 1997."

Also worthy of note were the regional differences in projected hiring revealed by the MRI data. The West led the nation in projected hiring increases with 64.5 percent of respondents for the region indicating plans to add to their current ranks. According to MRI, this is the third consecutive hiring survey in which the West emerged as the region with the highest projections. Ranking second and third this time were the Southwest and North Central regions with projected hiring levels of 52.7 percent and 48.8 percent respectively.

Keeping your job search on course

BY DEBORAH L. JACOBS

How long does it take to find a job? One month for each $10,000 of salary is the stock answer career counselors and head hunters usually give. But in truth, no one can really predict how quickly you'll land the next spot. The longer this tough mission drags on, the greater the risk you'll lose focus or (worse yet) slip into the doldrums. Here are some ways to keep your job search on track:

• Use more than one job-hunting technique. Rather than just relying on the want ads, try more individualized methods that don't generate as much competition from other job hunters.

Most people get jobs because they hear about an opening from someone they know. You can start by making a list of friends, family, neighbors and former coworkers. Set a goal to call a certain number of them each day (say, five if you're currently working, and 12 if you're unemployed).

No matter how bummed out you may feel, try to sound upbeat when you call. Highlight your credentials and the kind of job you hope to land (it helps to give a few examples of places where you think you might fit in). Ask everyone you talk with about giving you the names of other people to contact.

Another way to up your odds is by getting in touch with businesses directly. The best gateway is not the personnel department, but going through company managers.

Ideally, you'll have leads to them through someone you've already contacted. If not, you might have to make some extra phone calls. For instance, someone with a marketing background would want to find out who's in charge of selling each of the company's major products.

Using index cards or computer software, maintain a log of contacts. You'll want to include the date you spoke, the gist of the conversation, any correspondence that followed, and how you plan to follow up. Send thank-you notes to people who spend a half hour or more talking with you by phone, who meet with you in person, or who refer you to another helpful lead.

• Stick to a schedule. Looking for work is a full-time job. If you're still employed, you may need to start the day earlier, and end later to make time for phone calls and meetings. You can use evenings and weekends to write letters and do library work — like reading business magazines that can give you ideas about where to apply.

To ward off the job-hunting blues, people who are out of work should also adopt a routine. That means getting up and going to bed at the same time every day (which helps you sleep better), and using a calendar. At the end of each day, make a realistic list of tasks (in order of priority) you'd like to accomplish on the following one.

If you're conducting a job search from home (as opposed to spending time at an outplacement center), try to set up a work space free from distractions.

• Build a support system. Even with all the layoffs in recent years, many people are still ashamed of being unemployed. One way to overcome that is by tapping into a job-support group. Coworkers laid off together have an instant source of camaraderie. Other possibilities are groups forming through churches, synagogues and community organizations. Or, check the phone book for the nearest branch of Forty Plus, a nationwide network for displaced workers.

Finally, when you do land a spot, don't let the contacts go stale. In today's volatile job market, you never know when you'll need them next.

Catera brings entry buyers to Cadillac

CAReport

Powered by a 200-horsepower 3.0-liter dual overhead cam V6 mated to a 4-speed automatic transmission, the Catera performs well. Acceleration is constant and passing power is adequate. The car is rear-wheel drive and equipped with 4-wheel disc brakes, stndard anti-lock brakes and the tried-and-true traction control that keeps you sure and steady in inclement weather.

By Anne Fracassa
Avanti NewsFeatures

Let's go back a little bit. Back to when there was a shortage of gasoline and the need for smaller cars that got great mileage drove the market. And Cadillac entered the fray with Cimmaron. It sold, but not well, and, well, probably the last one around is in the Cadillac museum.

Although the 1997 Cadillac Catera can't be compared to the other thing, it is like the Cimmaron in that it's such a departure for Cadillac. Don't get me wrong. There are Cadillac appointments throughout the Catera. There's the Cadillac badging. There's even the optional comfy leather heated seats (both front and rear). It just doesn't feeeeeeeel like a Cadillac. The kind of Cadillac I'm used to, anyway. You know, the engine that can kick you-know-what, the ride that's just so superb you'd think you're riding on a cloud, the response and handling that's just oh-so-Caillac.

The Catera is a joint effort by Cadillac and Germany's Adam Opel AG. The Catera is even built by Opel in Ruesselsheim, Germany, and shipped over here. And maybe that's why it just doesn't feel like a Cadillac. The Opel was built for Europeans. The Catera was supposed to be built for us. What the Catera is, however, is an affordable Cadillac. As Cadillac's entry-level 5-passenger 4-door sedan, it can be had for under $30,000. And that's where I had to wake up. This was not the STS in miniature. Or the DeVille, even. The Catera is a way for you to get into a Cadillac and not spend more than $37,000. It's a way to bring a whole new generation of customers into Cadillac showrooms — you know, the baby boomers entering their 40s — the ones who drive entry-luxury and ill move up to the DeVille or STS next time.

Great marketing strategy, if you ask me. The itty-bitty duck commercials make me smile every time I see them. Competition for the Catera isn't lame. It includes the Mercedes-Benz C280, BMW 328i and Lexus ES300. It's the first time a domestic automaker will compete in the fast-growing entry-luxury market segment. The safety equipment is all there and includes dual airbags, dual steel beams in each of the four doors, reinforced body pillars, a rigid roof and cross-car beam. Side airbags will become standard equipment this spring as well. The Catera has a cozy interior. Opt for the leather seats. In front, there are adjustable buckets. In the rear, there is a three-section bench seat that folds down. If you need to carry some skis, fold the middle armrest. Need a bit more, fold them all own.

The real surprise comes when you open the trunk. With the seats all up, trunk space is a whopping 14.5 cubic feet. A feature I really liked was the low, lift-over floor. No need to lift more than you have to get your heavier cargo in.

Instrumentation and controls are not a problem to read or understand. There are analog gauges galore, including speedometer, tach, coolant temp gauge, voltage gauge and fuel gauge with low-fuel warning. It's all white-on-black, which is really pleasing o the eyes.

Standard equipment on the inside includes tilt steering wheel, heated windshield washer nozzles that don't allow the fluid to freeze, electrochromic inside mirror that dims automatically, heated rearview mirrors, power windows and door locks, an engine isabling theft-deterrent system, AM/FM stereo, remote keyless entry, illuminated entry, lighted vanity mirrors, map lights, rear reading lights and a lighted glove box.

In the center console up front are dual cupholders, a box to store whatever and the parking brake is just in front of it. On the steering wheel are buttons to operate the stereo and climate controls. The Catera is ultra modern in its uniquely designed window buttons and door lock buttons. Everything is backlit so you can see it all in the dark.

The climate-control system features a filter that helps remove irritants from the outside air. There are floor ducts for rear passengers. A really cool feature — an air-conditioned glove box so you can store film or your favorite Hershey bar inside. Optional is a Bose sound system with eight strategically placed speakers and 12-disc trunk-mounted CD changer. The test Catera had the system, which was music to my ears. The sound that came out of the system was so superb, so soothing and could be veryloud. Really nice sound system.

Cadillac's Twilight Sentinel system automatically turns on the headlamps when the sun goes down. The headlamps are automatically turned on when the windshield wipers are on for more than 20 seconds. Front fog lamps and daytime running lamps are also stadard.

On the exterior is smart, efficient styling that easily sets the Catera apart from anything else on the road. It's understated, however, and comfortably fits in with the rest of the crowd. Its large wheel wells show off the Catera's unique 16-inch alloy-wheels.

Cadillac has gone out on a limb with the Catera. Only time will tell if the company that made its name selling American-made luxury cars to Americans had a good idea when it decided to seek out entry-level buyers with a car it assembles in Germany.Anne Fracassa is senior editor of Avanti NewsFeatures.1997 Cadillac CateraVehicle class: 5-passenger, 4-door sedan. Tracey Needham

Q: We are delighted to see JAG back on the air, but wonder what happened to Tracey Needham, who played Meg last season. Did she choose to leave the show? –JAG fans via e-mail.

A: No. JAG creator Don Bellisario cast another actress (Andrea Parker, now on The Pretender) opposite star David James Elliott in the original pilot, but NBC, he says, insisted he cast an attractive blonde instead.

While emphasizing that Needham was "very nice" and professional, Bellisario says she never was the character he had in mind for the female lead.

"We have added Catherine Bell as the new female lead, Maj. Sarah MacKenzie, who will be going more head to head with Harm (Elliott) rather than just letting him do his own thing," he says. "I cast Catherine in an episode last season, which ultimately never aired. ... I liked her performance, I liked her military bearing (and) the way she stood up to Harm."

While a romantic involvement between the two characters may develop eventually, Bellisario says that's not in the cards right now.

Q: Is the actress who does the Tic Tac commercials related to Mark Harmon? The resemblance is uncanny. –W. Neal, Mansfield, Ohio.

A: Yes, Kelly Harmon is Mark's sister.

Q: Am I right that there was once a Burl Ives-James Farentino series about lawyers? What was its title? Please print a list of Ives' movies. –Joann Blaeser, Eau Claire, Wis.

A: Actually, it was called The Lawyers, and it was a rotating element in an "umbrella" series called The Bold Ones. Ives played senior partner Walter Nichols; Farentino and Joseph Campanella played siblings Neil and Brian Darrell. The series ran from September 1969 to August 1972 on NBC.

Ives has made too many films to list here, but highlights include Cat on a Hot Tin Roof, The Big Country (for which he won an Oscar™), The Brass Bottle and The McMasters.

Q: Please identify the music played in the Infiniti commercial featuring people in fantastic masks. –Helen K. Nealy, South Harwich, Mass.

A: That's a haunting number called "Bolero" from one of Cirque du Soleil's earlier tours. You'll find it on the recording Nouvelle Experience, which any store with a decent showmusic section will have in stock.

Q: I say Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee Gifford are husband and wife. My husband disagrees! Who is right? –Blanca Stokes, Nashville, Tenn.

A: As Gifford has mentioned a few times, she is married to sportscaster Frank Gifford. Philbin's wife is named Joy.

IN FOCUS

George Hamilton and Marla Maples Trump host the Miss USA Pageant, airing Wednesday, Feb. 5, on CBS.

The 46th annual event includes 51 participants competing for the crown of Miss USA 1997. The program airs from Shreveport, La.

Ali Landry of Louisiana, last year's Miss USA, will be on hand to pass the torch to her successor. Miss Universe 1996 and Miss Teen USA 1996 also will appear.

Billionaire Donald Trump is the executive producer.

NBC's Profiler is not afraid to face the millennium

By John Crook
TVData Features Syndicate

The cast and producers of the NBC Sunday drama Profiler must have been dismayed last September.

Through nothing more than bad luck, their new series about a brilliant forensic psychologist was about to debut during the same fall season that red-hot producer Chris Carter (The X-Files) was launching his highly touted-and similarly premised-Millennium on Fox.

Although no one associated with Profiler had seen anything or heard much at all about the Carter series, some TV critics blithely dismissed the NBC show as a Millennium ripoff.

Well, who's laughing now, press boys?

At just past the midseason point, Profiler has seen its solid start build steadily through the fall to reach the stature of a bona fide hit.

The show's executive producer, Ian Sander (I'll Fly Away), admits the show's success is sweetened by the fact that it's pulling in roughly twice the audience of "that other show."

"You mean Touched by an Angel, right?" he says with a laugh. "No, Chris Carter is a very talented man. . .and I certainly don't wish Millennium not to do well. It's not opposite us, so there's no direct competition.

"Clearly, we are the same genre. And yes, I'd rather be the one with the higher ratings. And I'm not going to tell you that I don't check the overnight ratings on Saturday (the morning after Millennium) as well as Sunday."

For the uninitiated, Profiler stars Ally Walker (While You Were Sleeping) as Dr. Samantha "Sam" Waters, a forensic psychologist with a knack for getting inside the minds of serial killers. When the series opened last fall, Sam had retired after her husband was murdered by "Jack," a serial killer whom she was getting close to catching.

Her old friend Bailey Malone (Robert Davi, Die Hard), head of the FBI Investiative Support Unit, coaxed her out of seclusion to help with a baffling string of murders. She solved the case, but in doing so once again attracted the attention of "Jack," who continues to play a deadly cat-and-mouse game with her.

It sounds dark on paper, as it is intermittently on the TV screen. But the show seems to have tapped into something with U.S. viewers. While Profiler comes in strong second to CBS' Walker, Texas Ranger in the overall national ratings, advertisers are looking at something else: In the "big money" demographics of viewers ages 18 to 49, Profiler is winning its time period handily.

"(Recently), in that 18-to-49 demographic, we are the No. 2 drama on television," Sander says proudly. (No. 1, no surprise, was ER.)

"(Our show does go to some dark places, some spooky places, some thrilling places. But. . .we seem to have struck a chord with vulnerability and heart. I think (Sam) and the people around her, you feel, are people who care - and they are not unaffected by what's around them. That gives the show an accessibility.

"To do a show in which you have a serial killer at the heart of a plot, and yet at the end of the show you feel choked up, I think is somewhat unique."

Expect female viewership to go up even higher starting in mid-February, when A Martinez joins the cast on a permanent basis playing Nick "Coop" Cooper, a bomb expert from the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms who becomes a romantic interest for Sam.

That character wasn't in the cards when the show premiered last fall, but Sander quickly noticed Martinez's chemistry with Walker when he made a guest appearance last November.

"We initially had planned to use him for just a couple of guest shots," Sander explains, "but when we saw the film from the very first day of shooting, I was on the phone to the network and the studio saying, "I think we've got something special."

Regardless of how smitten Sam may become with Coop, there are no plans to write off the other man in her life: the sly, shadowy "Jack," who poses no immediate threat to Sam herself, but is a very real danger to anyone close to her.

This elusive character, whose face has never been seen, fascinates viewers who are trying to figure out who he is and why he does what he does.

Only the producers and the writers, however, are privy to Jack's identity and his motivation. Cast members are being kept in the dark to prevent the information from subconsciously coloring their performances.

"We and the audience seem to be getting a lot of mileage out of it," Sander says. "All the feedback that we get back about that character and that stody line is really positive.

"We have a show coming up called 'The House That Jack Built' where you will learn a lot more about him. So that continuing story line does have a lot of twists and turns left in it."

Ally Walker, Robert Davi and Julian McMahon (from left) star in Profiler, NBC's gripping Saturday thriller that has blossomed into an authentic hit for the network.

IN FOCUS

Morgan Fairchild stars as Diana Astin, a mother determined to find her missing daughter, in Into the Arms of Danger, A Moment of Truth Movie premiering Monday, Feb. 3, on NBC.

When Diana's fiance (Michael Woods) makes advances toward her daughter (Chandra West), the girl runs away and becomes entangled with a con artist (Ricky Paull Goldin) who promises to make her a model.

After Diana discovers what her fiance did, she sets out to find her daughter before it's too late.

The Reader's Digest World series The Living Edens premieres Wednesday on PBS with "Denali, Alaska's Great Wilderness," a look at the wildlife in Alaska's Denali National Park.

The Living Edens looks at life in its most natural state

Alaska's Denali National Park is the first location to be explored in Reader's Digest World's new series The Living Edens.

Premiering Wednesday, Feb. 5, on PBS (check local listings), "Denali, Alaska's Great Wilderness" travels to the harsh yet beautiful landscape surrounding the highest mountain in North America, referred to by the natives as Denali and commonly known as Mount McKinley.

The Living Edens aims to document areas of the world still unspoiled by human development.

Twenty hourlong specials are planned over the next five years, with presentations focusing on such far-off locales as Patagonia in South America, the Amazonian jungles of Peru and Africa's Namib Desert.

Actor Peter Coyote (E.T., Cross Creek) provides the narration for the first episode.

The program follows the effects of the changing seasons on the 600-mile mountain range and its wildlife, beginning with the brutal cold of winter, when temperatures can reach 60 degrees below zero.

Moose, wolves, arctic squirrels and grizzly bears are shown in their struggles against the bitter cold.

While the area's animals were braving the elements, so was the show's film crew.

Led by natural history filmmaker Bruce Reitherman, the crew traveled the area for 18 months – often by skiplane or dog sled – to capture the extremes of the region on film.

"Changing film can be difficult because bare skin can freeze to the metal camera," Reitherman says. "The film turns brittle with edges so sharp that it can cause severe 'paper cuts' on fingers already numbed by the cold."

The program also shows the beauty of Alaska's summers, when wildflowers proliferate and July is filled with more than 20 hours of daylight. But for those who don't enjoy experiencing such extremes in weather firsthand, watching "Denali, Alaska's Great Wilderness" may be the best way to visit this untouched Eden.

TRIVIA

As a high-school senior in Pineville, La., Faith Ford (Murphy Brown) was selected as a finalist in the annual Teen Magazine model search.

Besides Barney the dinosaur and Deputy Barney Fife, TV has been graced by Barney the Yorkshire terrier from the series Lou Grant.

Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny, stars of The X-Files, celebrate August birthdays only two days apart.

MONDAY

Craig (David Charvet) learns the hard way how devious Amanda (Heather Locklear) can be in a special two-hour episode of Melrose Place, airing Monday on Fox.

Sarah Michelle Gellar slaying vampires

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

When Sarah Michelle Gellar hit the daytime scene as Kendall on All My Children, she played one of the youngest and nastiest witches on the show. Now she's slaying witches, vampires and monsters in Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

The new series is expected to air this spring on The WB Network.

The Emmy-winning actress plays a teen-ager who has been chosen to save the world from evil. Buffy is a cheerleader and faces many of the same traumas that most high-school students do, and slays a few monsters in the process. The producers tout it as Beverly Hills, 90210 meets The X-Files.

For once Gellar is playing a role that is slightly younger than her age and she's happy about that. "It's great to play a character that is a little closer to where I am now," says Gellar.

Leaving AMC was hard for Gellar, but she says it was necessary.

"I began on that show when I was 15," the actress says. "Soap operas are so demanding. At the time, I was the only contract player on the soap under 18.

"I was in an environment surrounded by adults with an immense amount of work. Not only was I learning 40 pages (of dialogue) a day to shoot an episode a day, but I was still trying to graduate high school at the same time."

She ended up graduating a year and a half ahead of schedule. Pretty impressive for such a young person.

"It was a difficult time and I loved it. AMC was a wonderful training ground for me," she says.

"But after a few years, it was just time to move on."

Gellar has found the pace of prime time much more to her liking. She only has to film one episode a week, but now she finds herself in a more physical role.

She often uses moves she learned from her years in tae kwon do.

"It is a very physical role," Gellar says. "The only thing that really frightens me is that they made me a cheerleader and I'm really bad at it."

NBA's Team Up recognizes teens' assists to communities

Picture 10,000 screaming teen-agers packed into an arena with their heroes from sports, music and television. These kids aren't mall mulch; they've earned their tickets by helping others.

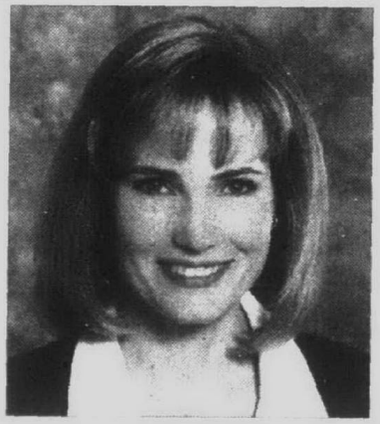

Now add to the free throws, the songs and the jokes the message that it's fun to serve your community and you have the NBA Team Up Celebration, the National Basketball Association's rally for kids taking place on Saturday, Feb. 8. The program will be broadcast simultaneously on NBC, TNT, Nickelodeon, BET, YTV (Canada) and Telemundo.

"Team Up is a universal concept," says Gregg Winik, vice president of NBA Entertainment for programming and broadcasting. "Everyone understands about getting involved in your community and giving back."

The dazzling celebrity lineup for the hourlong special includes Olympic gymnast Dominique Dawes, singer-actress Brandy, rap artist L.L. Cool J, the singing duo Groove Theory, basketball star Shaquille O'Neal and his music group Shaq and SHE, Daniella Deutscher and Anthony Anderson (NBC's Hang Time) and a host of NBA and WNBA players.

NBA Inside Stuff co-hosts Willow Bay and Ahmad Rashad host the event.

"This is one of the most exciting events that we do because of the energy generated by the kids," Bay says. "They're excited and wide-eyed. They scream, they yell and they cheer. They don't have any inhibitions. It's deafening and wonderful."

Willow Bay

The program will feature three teen-agers who have contributed significantly to their communities: a young man from Portland, Ore., who survived a brain tumor and now raises money to enable children's hospitals to entertain their patients; two young women from Mesa, Ariz., who teach children on nearby American Indian reservations to read; and a former gang member from Cleveland who advises other teen-agers not to travel the same road he did.

"I'd like for the audience to see that it's not hard work, it's not a chore," says Danny Meiseles, senior producer for NBA Entertainment. "These kids are having fun giving back to their communities."

The NBA introduced Team Up in October as its community service project for the 1996-97 season. Since 1991, the league has led the "Stay in School" project, which encourages middle-school students to remain in the classroom. But NBA Commissioner David J. Stern wanted an audience with a broader age range, Winik says. When Stern announced this project, he noted the link between academic achievement and community service.

During the fall kickoff, all 29 NBA teams visited schools and youth organizations to stress to students in grades 6 through 12 the importance of helping others. Players, coaches and staff worked with teen-agers on such projects as refurbishing a city park and renovating a homeless shelter.

"I think children understand more than we give them credit for about the problems of our society in a basic way," Bay says.

"When seen through the eyes of children, it becomes not a policy issue, but a basic human issue."

Team Up is a reward for those students who have already served their communities and encouragement for their peers nationwide to join.

The program is part of the 1997 NBA All-Star Weekend being held at Gund Arena in Cleveland.
