No tax hike is eyed in budget

■ A hearing is set at 7 p.m. Monday to review the proposed city budget that has no tax hike for general operations.

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

The proposed $5.39 million budget going before Plymouth city commissioners on Monday calls for no general operating millage increase.

But taxes paid to the city will rise slightly, because of rising property values and because voters approved increased millage to improve city streets.

The 20-year street improvement plan approved by voters begins this year. It called for levying no more than 2 mills each year for street improvements.

This year 1.88 mills is to be levied, raising $513,240. The city government is to contribute $180,000 each year from city funds to pay for street improvements.

City residents in the current fiscal year pay 13.01 mills. With the 1.88 street millage added in 1997-98, they'll pay 14.89 mills as proposed in the city budget.

What that means is the average city homeowner - with a house that could sell for $124,040 and valued at 62,020 for tax purposes - would pay $923 in city taxes this year.

That city tax payment would be up $138 from last year, when the house was valued at 60,330 for tax purposes.

■Property taxes - nearly $3.17 million in fiscal year 1997-98, up from nearly $3.1 million in the current fiscal year.

■State shared revenues - nearly $1.04 million in fiscal year 1997-98, up from just over $1 million this year.

The city also gets money from sources including: license and permit fees, projected at $95,300 in

Ecclesiatical court demands answers from psychic

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

An organization calling itself the Ecclesiastical Court of Wayne County is questioning the psychic whom Plymouth-Canton seniors attempted to hire for their recent prom.

"Interrogatories" sent to Elizabeth DeSouza of Westland's Psychic Connection ask her to "Describe, in detail, your reasons for thinking that psychic powers are compatible with Christianity."

DeSouza also is being asked to "Identify every reason why you feel that occult powers, such as psychic power, are consistent with the teachings of Jesus the Christ."

The so-called interrogatory is signed by Peter James, "Court Clerk in the Ecclesiastical Court of Wayne County." The court's letterhead address is a post office box in Westland. Members of the ecclesiastical court could not be located for comment.

■ 'It smacks of Waco, Texas. It smacks of people who really don't have anything better to do with their time, and who absolutely don't follow the same God I follow.'

Ellen Paynter

DeSouza was hired to do readings at the May 16 prom at Burton Manor. Her appearance was cancelled by school administrators after parents learned of the plan and objected on religious grounds.

DeSouza referred inquiries to her attorney, who advised DeSouza to contact police.

"I do not give any credence to this," said Farmington Hills attorney Ellen Paynter. "First of all, this is not Wayne County Circuit Court. It is not a legal court. It's a kangaroo court.

"I don't know what this is. I've never seen anything like this. We do find it to be a harassing document."

Paynter said she called information to see if the court or a Peter James is listed, "and there is nothing.

"It smacks of Waco, Texas. It smacks of people who really don't have anything better to do with their time, and who absolutely don't follow the same God I follow."

Downtown: NBD branch checks out

In an efficiency move, NBD Bank announced Thursday it will close its downtown Plymouth branch on Main Street sometime later this year.

NBD Public Relations Manager Rob Darmanin said the closing is one of several planned this year.

"When we created our branch system in the '50s and '60s, people banked differently than they do today," he said, adding 60 percent of bank transactions are now done electronically.

"As part of this program we're anticipating no layoffs," he said, adding NBD plans on investing $28 million to upgrade its banking network.

"We have another branch .6 miles away from that one (on Ann Arbor Road.) Part of this program is to operate more efficiently, removing redundant branches is one way of doing that," Darmanin said.

While NBD plans on opening some new branches, none are planned for Plymouth city or township.

The bank announced it will introduce Customer First Centers where customers can handle non-cash banking needs such as account information, loan applications, check orders and deposits. Actual bank branches around metro Detroit are to be reduced from 163 to 138.

Downtown Development Authority Director Steve Guile was unavailable for comment.

Hearing on school bond postponed

A hearing challenging the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools' March 22 election has been adjourned.

Wayne County Circuit Judge James Rashid was to have heard the request for a re-election filed by Plymouth's Jerry Vorva, former state representative, Friday, May 30. The hearing is now set for 9 a.m., Friday, June 6.

Voters passed by 96 votes a $79.7 million bond issue to construct new schools and make capital improvements. The ballots of 716 voters weren't counted because of errors made while using the district's new touch-screen voting machines.

Vorva, represented by Plymouth attorney Stephen Boak, contends that the election process was defective, with the result that 7 percent of voters weren't able to exercise their right to vote.

Use step-by-step process for touch-screen

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

Plymouth-Canton school officials hope that in the June 9 election, there'll be less confusion surrounding the district's new touch-screen voting machines than there was in the district's last election.

More than 700 ballots were spoiled in the March 22 special bond election due to errors made on the computerized touch-screen machines. The under voting resulted in an ongoing court challenge of the $79.7 million bond issue, which won by a slim 96 votes.

A number of residents charged that 7 percent of the 12,000-plus Plymouth-Canton voters were disenfranchised because their votes were not counted in the single-issue election.

On June 9, voters will elect one of three candidates to a four-year term on the Plymouth-Canton Board of Education. Vying for the seat being

Student art on exhibit

An exciting exhibition of student art work is currently being held at the Plymouth Community Arts Council and will continue through June 12.

The winning entries in the Plymouth Rotary Foundation Isbister Memorial Art Competition are displayed along with a collection of batik poetry banners created with funds from PCAC teacher assistance grant.

The art work can be seen Monday through Friday from 9 to 3 at 774 N. Sheldon at Junction in Plymouth.

The purpose of the Rotary-Isbister competition is to encourage young artists within the school district by according them public recognition. On display at the PCAC are the first place to honorable mention winners in each grade level from elementary through high school.

The first place winners are framed and circulated within the district for two years. Certificates of recognition will be awarded at the annual Arts Awards Festival to be held at the Arts Council June 4 at 7 p.m.

A PCAC teacher grant provided the funds for a week long immersion in the creation of art.

The class was coached by former Salem High School art teacher, Kris Darby, who taught the students and interested parents the process of batik. The idea was to transform a few words of poetry into a visual image of nature. The results are well worth seeing.

Voters also will elect two Schoolcraft Community College trustees.

"Our goal is to have a video with step-by-step instructions on how to use the machines at every precinct," said Liz Adams, school elections clerk.

"A flyer will be available for every person who comes to vote," said Judy Evola, community relations director. "Everyone in the district will receive information about the machines in the next issue of Newsline in the mail. There will also be directions in every booth."

It's hoped that a modification in the UniLect equipment's software will help clarify the process for voters. Being added is a screen instructing voters to "Press Here for Your Vote to be Counted."

The electronic touch screen is much like that of an automated teller machine. Upon entering the booth, voters will view on the screen text which reads, "Plymouth-Canton Community Schools, Wayne and Washtenaw Counties, Michigan. Regular Election - June 9, 1997." There'll be a precinct number and an area reading "Press Here to Begin Voting."

The ballot, with the names of candidates in both elections, will then appear on a single screen. The voter's selection will light up when pressed.

If the voter makes a mistake and wishes to change his or her vote, that can be done by pressing the same selection again. The light will go off. The voter then presses the box desired. The selection will light up.

Residents may vote for a write-in candidate by pressing the letters of the person's name on an alphabetized panel. Voters must then touch the box at the top of the screen which reads "Write-in Complete." The second screen, with the candidates' names, will reappear.

To complete voting, the "End All Voting" box at the top of the screen must be pressed. Voters will then see a screen reading "Press Here for Your Vote to be Counted." The other selection is "Press in the Dark Area to Continue Voting."

Pressing in the dark area will return the voter to the ballot. When the voter presses "End All Voting" and "Press Here for Your Vote to be Counted," the process is complete. The last screen will read "Your Ballot Has Been Cast. Thank You For Voting."

Neither Adams nor Evola are predicting a lesser percentage of under votes. "People might come in and choose to vote for Plymouth-Canton candidates, and not Schoolcraft candidates," said Evola. "If they just vote for local candidates and not for Schoolcraft candidates, their vote will be counted as an under vote." The votes cast for a Plymouth-Canton candidate by such individuals will still be counted.

Adams said precinct workers will be warned by a flashing red light on the public counter should a voter fail to press "End All Voting" and "Press Here for Your Vote to be Counted."

"They will call the voter back and inform them that they need to complete the procedure. If the person has already left, two poll workers will go in," and record the vote, Adams said.

Plymouth Township Clerk Marilyn Massengill has overseen the use of the state-approved touch-screen machines in recent elections in her municipality. "Granted, it's new, and there are going to be kinks," she said. "I have a lot of faith in this equipment. We went through this when we first went to punch cards. This is much simpler than the punch card."

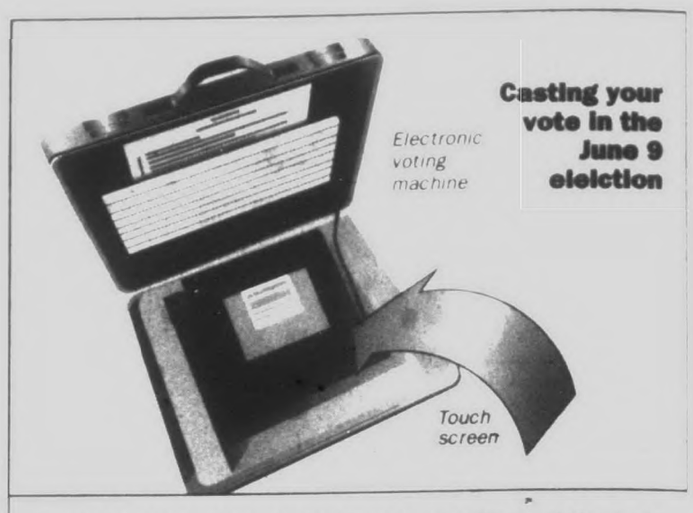
Massengill said voters have made the mistake of continually pressing an area on the screen "thinking they are voting. But they're not doing that. They are taking their vote on and off. You don't cast your vote until you press "End All Voting," she said.

Massengill has demonstration touch-screen units set up at township hall. "We welcome people to come in any time if they want to familiarize themselves with the equipment," she said. Office hours are 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. weekdays.

"If a homeowners or other group wants to come in at another time, that can be arranged," she said. Anyone interested may call (313) 453-3840.

Adams welcomes calls at (313) 416-3095.

Those interested in voting absentee have until election day to return ballots. The last day absentee voter applications may be picked up is Saturday, June 7. "However, the voter will have to vote here that day," said Adams, whose office at the E.J. McClendon Educational Center, 454 S. Harvey in Plymouth, will be open from 9 a.m.- 2 p.m. June 7.



Casting your vote in the June 9 eleiction

You will be voting in the June 9 Board of Education and Schoolcraft College election using the touch-screen electronic voting devices. Here is a review of the five-step voting process using this touch screen device. If you have any questions about using the electronic voting equipment, please ask a poll worker for assistance.

Step 1:

- Enter the voting booth.
- A touch screen will have a rectangular box that reads: Press here to begin voting.
- With the tip of your finger, Press the box that reads:

Press here to begin voting

Step 2:

- A ballot appears on the screen.
- Press your selection(s).
- Your selection will light up.

If you make a selection you do not want, simply press or touch the same selection again - the light will disappear. Then you are free to press the box that has the selection you desire - it will light up.

Follow these directions ONLY if you wish to vote for a candidate who is not on the ballot.

If you are voting for a Write-in candidate you will need to:

- Press the box that reads:

Write-in candidate

- The alphabet will appear on the screen with each letter in an individual box.
- Press the letters to spell out the candidate's entire name.
- Press Write-in complete when you have spelled out the candidate's name.
- You are now back to the previous screen ... go on to Step 3.

Please note: Write-in candidates were required to sign a declaration form of intent with the district elections office to be considered as a write-in candidate. If your write-in candidate has not done so, your selection will be recorded but not valid.

Step 3:

- Review your ballot.
- Your selections are lighted.
- To cast your ballot you must now press the box that reads:

End all voting

- Once you've pressed End all voting ...

Step 4:

- A screen will appear that reads:

Press here for your vote to be counted

and

Press in the dark area to continue voting

- By choosing, Press here for your vote to be counted, you will see a box that reads, Your ballot has been cast. Thank you for voting!
- When you see this message you have completed voting.

Step 5:

- If you choose, Press in the dark area to continue voting, you will be returned to your ballot. Continue the voting process until you have finished and then press the box that reads:

End all voting

- Subsequently choose, Press here for your vote to be counted. You have completed your ballot. This is the last screen to appear.

Plymouth equestrian to take a ride to Ireland

Lucky: Annie Bolognino of Plymouth is counting herself that to have the opportunity to travel to Irelenad to train with European riding champion Derek McConnell. The Ladywood High School student is part of the school's fledgling equestrian team, coached by Plymouth resident Charlotte Austin. There's a good chance students will get the chance to ride a grey Irish warmblood seen in the movie "Braveheart," Bolognino said.

BY M.B. DILLON
STAFF WRITER

With a little help from friends and strangers, Ladywood High School's fledgling equestrian team plans to travel to Ireland this summer to train at a world-renowned pony club under European riding champion Captain Derek McConnell.

"It most definitely will be an experience of a lifetime. Kildare Pony Club is one of the finest in the world," said Ladywood equestrian coach and Plymouth resident Charlotte Austin. "I believe it's the largest in Europe. To ride under McConnell's direction is an honor, because he is so good."

McConnell will ride at the Bloomfield Open Hunt Club's Motor City Horse Show in June as an invited guest. Ireland's representative at numerous international horse shows, McConnell was asked earlier this year to serve as coach to the U.S. Armed Forces Equestrian Team. He'll travel with the U.S. to India in 1998 and to Argentina in 1999 for the World Military Equestrian Games.

Students Annie Bolognino of Plymouth and Stephanie Marcus of Farmington Hills couldn't be more excited about their upcoming trip.

"Captain McConnell is an incredible trainer," said Marcus, an accomplished rider and pianist whose father is hosting a golf outing to help raise funds for the trip. "People from all over the world go to his pony club. We'll be the second American school to go. A California high school went once before."

There's a good chance students will get the chance to ride a grey Irish warmblood seen in the movie "Braveheart," said Bolognino, lead-off hitter on Ladywood's softball team. "We're going to be able to ride on the same sort of land we saw in the movie, steep, hilly terrain with ditches, shrubs, streams, and logs. It tests all your skills as you ride."

While in Ireland, students will compete in Punchestown, venue for next year's riding and jumping world championships.

They'll learn equitation, or proper riding style; jumping; and cross-country riding, said Austin, owner of three award-winning Arabian showhorses and a volunteer often seen at area parades. "Two days will be devoted to competing and jumping in horse shows." Students will receive private lessons from McConnell the second week, " added the coach, who will accompany the students.

Marcus and Bolognino say they're looking forward to riding Irish warmbloods, which average 17 or 18 hands compared to their American counterparts of 15 and 16 hands.

"In Ireland, they breed thoroughbreds and draft horses. The result is a horse that's strong, agile, sure-footed and very big compared to our horses," they said.

"I will probably come home and tell my mom I want one," said Bolognino.

To defray the $2,000-per-person expense, Ladywood equestrians are conducting a can and bottle drive door-to-door. They're also staging a car wash and a raffle as well as a cookbook sale. The Ladywood Dads' Club and Athletic Fund also are pitching in.

The golf outing is planned for Monday, June 9 at Cattails Golf Club in Novi. Cost is $100 per person. Included are breakfast, golf, lunch and awards. Call Mike Marcus (810)478-1714 for more information.

"We're looking for sponsors," said Austin. "Anyone interested may send checks to Ladywood High School, payable to the Ladywood Equestrian Team."

The Ladywood squad made its debut this year, with just five competitors. Jennifer Nagarah - winner of the team's scholar-athlete award - said the equestrians held their own.

"We competed with Ann Arbor Pioneer, Chelsea, Dexter - usually about nine or 10 schools all together. Most schools had up to 20 kids. We ended up second to last. But for being outnumbered, we did really well."

Bolognino and Marcus say they're grateful to Austin for agreeing to coach them, and for organizing the trip to Ireland. "I think Charlotte is an excellent coach. She put so much effort into putting this Ireland trip together," said Bolognino.

"She went over and above anything you would expect her to do," said Marcus.

Skeleton is that of a man in his late 20s, early 30s

The skeleton found in a Plymouth Township field May 10 was likely a man in his late 20s or early 30s with brown hair, the Wayne County Medical Examiner has found.

Plymouth Township Police Detective David Hayes said the skeleton found rolled in a carpet possibly wore dentures and had been in poor physical condition, according to the medical examiner.

The man had several fused finger joints suggesting broken fingers and a pin in his shoulder, suggesting an injury there, according to the medical examiner.

An anthropologist is to examine the remains found north of railroad tracks and just west of Haggerty Road.

Investigators have also determined the man was likely dead several years and was wearing socks with "USA '80" on them.

■ COP CALLS

Hayes said that following the anthropologist's review, a report will be made to the Michigan State Police in Lansing to determine if the remains can be linked to any missing persons.

Police say there are no unsolved local missing persons cases to which the remains can be linked.

Proposed subdivision prompts ire from neighboring residents

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

A planned subdivision with smaller lot sizes than some neighboring homes drew objections from current residents, but won approval from township planning commissioners recently.

Plymouth Township planning commissioners recommended to the township board of trustees that the five acre rezoning to allow development be approved.

The land is on the north side of Ann Arbor Trail west of Beacon Hill Drive and east of Beacon Hollow Condominiums and Pinecrest Court. The developer has yet to state the number of dwelling units in the development.

Township planning consultant Sally Hodges said a review of the request from developer Frank Bauss followed the township master plan. She said it was also consistent with planning policy that allows for graduated decreased lot size, from the 1-3 homes per acre zones to the east and the condo development to the west.

■ 'The purpose of zoning is to try to keep things compatible. It does not fit in with anything you see to the west side.'

Dean Swartzwelter
-resident

Dean Swartzwelter, who lives on Lighthouse Court just west of the north end of the planned development, told planning commissioners, "The purpose of zoning is to try to keep things compatible."

"It does not fit in with anything you see to the west side," he said.

Murray Strand of Pinecrest Drive told planning commissioners, "For 18 years we have had to deal with a storm water drainage problem," adding he's had to have sewer line work performed to ease the problem. Two other neighbors reported similar problems.

Should the township board of trustees approve the rezoning, 12,000 square-foot lots would be allowed in the area now zoned for 21,780 square foot (half acre) lots.

Planning Commission Chairman Dennis Cebulski asked Township Engineer Mike Bailey how development might affect such drainage.

"We would have a lot of confidence that we could cure this problem if the land was developed," Bailey said.

"This particular parcel is master planned to be a high density parcel," said Shirley Barney, township community development director.

Planning Commissioner Donald Skinner, who lives near the planned development, said, "I personally have no problem with this."

"If we don't allow some development, there never will be," he said, adding some of the land is becoming overgrown with trees and could eventually be deemed too hard to develop.

months later, he asked, "Has there been any determination if a sidewalk should go on North Territorial?"

Township Supervisor Kathleen Keen McCarthy said a board subcommittee that reviews sidewalk issues had studied the request and was finishing a report to the full board of trustees. Jim Anulewicz, township public services director, met Thursday with Kompoltowicz.

"It appears the township has been doing research, they certainly are not ready to buy the concrete," Kompoltowicz said. "He said he will certainly will call me when there's any progress. He made me comfortable I can call him anytime to check on progress. It's a start."

While he'd prefer a sidewalk on the north side of the road, "Anything that makes safe passage is good with me," Kompoltowicz said. "The traffic is vicious and something must be done."

"In 1976 I had a brother killed in a bike-car crash," he said, adding he could recall his own parents anguish over the tragedy. "I felt part of that parent anguish, when I saw my son's bicycle laying mangled in the roadway," he said.

After he appeared before township trustees to alert them to the problem in November, a resulting newspaper story sparked lots of calls. "We stopped answering the phone. A lot of people were asking how they could support getting this done. Everyone believes a sidewalk should be there," Kompoltowicz said.

It was on Nov. 5, election day, that Kompoltowicz' two sons, riding their bikes, were struck by a turning bus. "Brad crashed into the front quarter panel and broke a bone in his hand and caused several bruises and cuts," he said.

"You must put in a sidewalk, to afford safe passage to school. The middle school students on Ridgewood are not bused to West Middle School."

"North Territorial is the only route, without crossing private property. With traffic increasing every time a new house or condo is completed, the chance of real tragedy increases.

"An incapacitating or fatal injury or traffic crash to a student would cost this community much more than a half mile of sidewalk," he said.

Paynter added that if "anything further along this line happens, we will be taking the proper legal action in the proper courts of law."

James' letter to DeSouza says, "Your organization has been brought to the attention of the court by a parent in the Plymouth-Canton school district. Chief Justice Curtis has read the Observer article featuring you and has determined that our fact-finding committee needed to look into this case.

"The fact-finding committee is submitting three sets of documents for your prompt response, including a set of interrogatories, a request for production of documents and a consent for jurisdiction of our court to hear this complaint. Should you fail to execute and return any of these documents, our investigation will continue without your participation. We strongly urge you to execute a consent form and to comply with the discovery request so that you will be offered your opportunity to be heard."

A document entitled "Declaration of Formation" indicates that the court's purpose is to "encourage God-fearing men and women of all counties in the 50 states to implement the formation of similar courts and to educate the community concerning Biblical Law; to expose evil and corruption on Earth; and to serve as agents of God to protect the people of the country from harm."

DeSouza was asked whether she belongs to any religious societies; whether she was baptized; and whether she allows children under 18 to hire her.

She also was requested to produce within 30 days "each and every item of correspondence between you and Plymouth-Canton schools; each and every document you have ever written regarding your psychic powers and Christianity," and "any other documents you want the Ecclesiastical Court to consider in your favor."

A dispute involving DeSouza's fee for the evening has been resolved. Initially, students agreed to pay the psychic $600.

When her appearance was cancelled, attorney Errol Goldman, the district's assistant superintendent for employee relations, informed students "we did not have to pay her because we never actually made an agreement with her. There was a verbal contract, but never a signed contract," said Brian Godfrey, president of the Canton High School senior class.

"After the attorneys for her and the district talked, we made an agreement to pay her a partial sum. She ended up being paid less than $600," he said.

Godfrey said he shared the opinion of some teachers and students that DeSouza should have received the full amount because she'd been booked for the night.

"I do think when you make a verbal agreement, your word should be as good as your signature," said Godfrey. "The only difference in this case is that it was partially her fault because of the way she came across in the paper. In the Detroit News, she seemed extreme and into her beliefs and very serious."

1997-98, down from $149,000 this fiscal year; federal grants, $75,000 this fiscal year, same as last; $375,000 in charges for services including water charges; cemetery revenues, $121,500; parking revenues, $52,300; district court revenue, $120,000; investment interest revenue, $120,000; and cable TV royalties, $42,000.

- Police, more than $1.61 million.
- City administration, $897,330 including city administrators and staff.
- Public works, $761,230.
- Plymouth Community Fire Department, $645,900.
- Buildings and grounds, $425,610 which pays for upkeep of city hall, parks and public property and Riverside Cemetery.

The 1997-98 budget also calls for spending $2.16 million on the major street fund, $714,980 on the local street fund, and $1.03 million on recreation. The recreation budget is down nearly $108,000 from the current year, as city officials have chosen not to replace two staff positions and seek outside agencies to run recreation classes, where possible, to save money.

Other city funds include the $568,120 Downtown Development Authority operating fund, paid for from taxes captured by the DDA from downtown businesses.

The proposed budget includes a $298,966 balance, up from the projected $292,466 this fiscal year.

Some major equipment purchases planned for the 1997-98 budget year include $38,000 on voting equipment, $27,000 on a police-fire dispatch camera and monitor and dispatch area renovation, $35,500 for a cemetery garage and vault lowering device, $23,000 for a sewer TV camera, and 29,000 for a dump truck.

Equipment purchases requested by city department heads but not approved by city commissioners included a request for a $22,000 police car, $28,000 for garage heaters, and $125,000 for a band shell.T

City tax payment rising

1997-98:
That house now sells for $124,040 and is valued at $62,020 – homeowner will pay $923 in city taxes (up $138 from last year).

Volunteers needed to 'rescue' Rouge on June 7

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

If you'll volunteer a few hours on Saturday, June 7, Friends of the Rouge will supply the gloves.

That's the day of Rouge Rescue '97, the 12th annual cleanup of the Rouge River. More than 2,500 people are expected to converge on the river to remove fallen trees, logjams and items ranging from grocery carts to automobile tires.

In addition to removing trees and other debris from the river, as they have since 1986, volunteers at cleanup sites throughout Wayne, Oakland and eastern Washtenaw counties will also plant trees, build and groom wood-chip walking paths, and build nesting boxes for wood ducks, bluebirds, and brown bats.

Volunteers will stencil storm drain inlets with a warning against dumping toxic materials like used motor oil, paint, and lawn or household chemicals.

Participants will be asked once again to avoid contact with the water. Health advisories issued by Wayne and Oakland counties continue for the river, as a precaution against water-borne illnesses.

Participants should wear gloves, long pants, long-sleeved shirts and boots with sturdy soles, said Jim Graham, executive director of the Friends of the Rouge.

"We're always pretty cautious, and we try to keep people out of the river," Graham said. "We are pretty careful and have clean fresh water there for people to clean up their faces and hands.

"We have to keep reminding people that it is still a contaminated river, especially after a rainstorm, because the storm water contaminates the river from the runoff."

Friends of the Rouge will supply gloves and trash bags.

For the third consecutive year, Rouge Rescue also includes the collection of returnable bottles and cans, which can be redeemed at Farmer Jack supermarkets to support the Friends of the Rouge Education Project, a school-based environmental education program.

Rouge Rescue sponsors are Ford Motor Co., Waste Management Inc., the Detroit Water & Sewerage Department, City Management Corp. and WJBK Fox 2.

For the location of cleanup sites, and sites where returnable bottles and cans can be dropped off, please contact Friends of the Rouge at (313) 961-4050. Cleanup hours will be from 8:30 a.m. until about 1:30 p.m.

Plymouth: Smith Elementary School, 1298 McKinley

Plymouth Township: Western Wayne Conservation Association/Johnson Creek

Westland: Holliday Nature Preserve, Newburgh Road.

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

■ Individuals or groups also can adopt a section of the Rouge, wetland, lake or other type of waterbody within the Rouge River Watershed. Activities may include testing the water quality, pollution monitoring, litter cleanups, pollution prevention and river restoration projects.These activities can be performed as an independent activities or as part of the Rouge Friendly Neighborhood program.

Whether you wash your car, fertilize your lawn or even landscape your yard, your actions affect the Rouge River.

That's because that water you used to wash your vehicle or fertilizer on your lawn can wash into storm drains and end up in the Rouge River, and contributing to the river's degradation.

Even if you leave your ground bare around vegetation and shrubs, you contribute to erosion, as soil can wash into the river.

■ Lawn and garden maintenance: Keep fertilizers, pesticides and herbicides off paved surfaces and out of drainage paths. When choosing a fertilizer, select a slow-release formula.

■ Washing your vehicle: Direct polluted wash water away from streets and storm drains. Wash your car on your lawn, or better yet, go to a car wash.

■ Repairing your vehicle: Only repair vehicles in areas where leaks and spills cannot flow toward storm drains, or better, take it to a mechanic.

■ Caring for pets: Clean up animal waste before it rains. Throw it in the trash.

■ Disconnect and redirect downspouts: Disconnect downspouts from sewer systems. Direct them to a vegetated area away from building foundations.

■ Join Friends of the Rouge: Participate in Rouge RiverWatch, storm drain stenciling or other Rouge Friendly Neighborhood activities.

■ Clean up debris, spills and leaks: Do not use your hose to wash or sweep debris, spilled or leaked materials into storm drains.

■ Landscaping: Cover bare ground around vegetation with mulch and seed bare ground as soon as possible to reduce erosion.

■ Managing household hazardous waste: Properly dispose of household hazardous waste and use non-toxic alternatives when possible.

■ Installing and repairing plumbing: Only connect plumbing in your home to the sanitary sewer.

■ Installing driveways, walkways and patios: Use paving materials that are porous and/or sloped toward vegetated areas.

■ Maintaining septic systems: Properly operate, maintain and clean septic systems.

Friends of the Rouge offers other programs in which the public can get involved:

Storm drain stenciling: This program offers an opportunity for interested individuals, Boy and Girl Scout troops, or community groups to help prevent pollution by stenciling "Dump No Waste Drains to Rouge River" on storm drains in their community.

Rouge RiverWatch: Individuals or groups also can adopt a section of the Rouge, wetland, lake or other type of waterbody within the Rouge River Watershed. Activities may include testing the water quality, pollution monitoring, litter cleanups, pollution prevention and river restoration projects.

These activities can be performed as an independent activities or as part of the Rouge Friendly Neighborhood program.

Downspout disconnection educational outreach: Many homes have roof gutter downspouts connected to the sewer system or directed onto impervious areas, such as sidewalks and driveways, that lead directly to storm drains.

Senate likely to kill bill to toughen charter school rules

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

A bill to require stiffer regulations of so-called "charter schools" passed the House of Representatives on almost a party-line vote, giving it dim prospects in the state Senate.

Public school academies are small and organized without elected boards. They obtain charters from either universities or the state Jobs Commission.

House Bill 4395 would require much reporting and more improvement plans to be filed with the State Board of Education.

The House passed it on a 55-48 vote.

Favoring it were 54 Democrats and Republican Glenn Oxender of Sturgis. Opponents were all Republicans. Six didn't vote – three from each party.

Tired of alibis

Freshman Rep. Bob Brown, D-Dearborn Heights, said he was frustrated at the alibis and lack of information he was getting on charter schools, a two-year-old phenomenon in Michigan.

"I've been told the report is on its way. The superintendent of public instruction (Art Ellis) said it doesn't tell you anything," Brown said.

"They (charter schools) say we're in transition; that they're inheriting public school problems (with low MEAP scores)," Brown said. He said it was all the more reason for charter schools to submit reports on their successes and failures – so that others can adopt the good techniques and scrap the bad ones.

The bill is sponsored by Rep. James Agee, D-Muskegon, a former school superintendent and once a finalist for appointment as state superintendent of public instruction. Agee is an announced candidate for governor.

"Charter schools have nothing to fear," said Agee. His bill:

- Requires each charter school to submit an annual report on oversight activities, non-compliance with the charter, areas of performance that need to be improved, assurances the school has no religious affiliation, and a plan to improve performance.
- Allows the State Board of Education to revoke the charter if a charter school fails to provide an annual oversight report.
- Specifies that, if the school closes, its real estate and personal property become the property of the state.

"It will improve schools that need improving. It will reward those who deserve rewarding," Agee said.

Added Rep. Rose Bogardus, D-Davison: "Public schools have accountability through their elective boards." Charter school boards are self-appointed under a non-profit corporation law.

Cropsey called the bill "a witch hunt aimed at closing them down."

Cropsey complained that Democrats shot down two of his amendments – one to raise the cap on charter schools where one-third of public school students fail to graduate; another to raise the cap where two-thirds fail to graduate. State law authorizes 77 charter schools.

Republicans attempted a counter-attack with an amendment to require more reporting by public schools. It was defeated.

The Senate, with a 22-16 Republican majority, is likely to be cool to the bill.

Meanwhile, lawmakers are awaiting a state Supreme Court decision on the constitutionality of the charter school law.

The high court heard oral arguments March 5 and is expected to decide by the end of August, when Justice Dorothy Comstock Riley is scheduled to resign.

SC tax levy will yield $15.8 million for college

BY KEN ABRAMCZYK
STAFF WRITER

Schoolcraft College Trustees set the 1997 tax levy Wednesday for residents in the college's district at 1.8521 mills, which represents no change from last year.

The levy will cost the owner of a home sold for $100,000 or a taxable value of $50,000 about $92.60 annually.

Schoolcraft's district includes the Wayne County portions of K-12 districts of Clarenceville and Livonia Public Schools; the Northville district; Novi Community Schools, excluding the portion covered by Oakland Community College and portions of the Plymouth-Canton school district.

Butch Raby, Schoolcraft's vice president of business services, told the board the college district's state equalized valuation – or the assessed value of all taxable property – was up 5 percent, which meant the budget approved by trustees in April would need revisions.

"It was slightly more than was indicated, but we always want to be conservative when we work with the budget," Raby said.

That figure may be revised if the State Tax Commission changed final equalization values of Wayne, Oakland and Washtenaw counties.

"There's always a possibility that they changed county SEVs, but it hasn't happened," Raby said.

Western Wayne County residents should receive summer tax bills some time in June, depending on when tax bills are printed and mailed in their local communities.

The taxable value of the Schoolcraft College district is $8.52 billion with $7.9 billion in Wayne County, $528 million in Oakland County and $55 million in Washtenaw County.

That will net a tax yield of approximately $15.8 million to the college, higher than the $15.3 million in the budget.

A roll call vote was required to set the millage. Board chairwoman Patricia Watson, vice chairman John Walsh, and trustees Brian Broderick, Richard DeVries and Carol Strom backed the levy.

Organizational meeting

Schoolcraft trustees also scheduled the board of trustees' organizational meeting for 7 p.m. Monday, July 7, to appoint board officers for the next two years.

Trustees are expected to elect a chairperson, vice chairperson, secretary and treasurer. The board is expected to select a temporary chairperson on June 25 to run the July 7 meeting.

On June 25, the board also is expected to review bylaws for trustees. Trustees received proposed bylaws Wednesday for approval that outlined their duties, with changes only in the time and date of meetings.

The bylaws will be reintroduced with the time and a minor language change so that trustees can have more flexibility in scheduling meetings. The board meets to conduct business, usually at 7 p.m. on the fourth Wednesday of each month in the conference room of the Administration Building.

Enrollment is up

College President Dick McDowell reported to trustees that enrollment for the spring session increased 26 percent for continuing education services over last year. The college counted 4,097 enrollees, up from last year's 3,252. Credited students were 3,795, up from last year's 3,754.

Senate bill aims to curb special assessments

BY TIM RICHARD
STAFF WRITER

Voters may get a chance to put a lid on so-called "special assessments" levied for local public improvements.

A constitutional amendment and a package of bills will require that special assessments be levied on the so-called "taxable value" of property rather than the higher "state equalized value" (SEV).

Taxable value is lower because Proposal A of 1994 caps increases at 5 percent or the rate of consumer price inflation, while SEV grows with real estate inflation. Biggest savings go to suburban residential property.

"Homeowners will be better protected for years to come since special assessments will increase at a lower rate," said Sen. Bill Bullard Jr., R-Milford.

The package, adopted on votes of 37-0 and 38-0 May 28, goes to the House. All area senators voted yes on all items.

But a warning was issued by veteran Sen. Harry Gast, R-St. Joseph. He said townships are misusing special assessments, which were designed for improvements such as sewers, sidewalks, lighting and paving in a limited geographic area.

Instead, boards are levying township-wide special assessments for such services as police and fire to get around low property tax limits without voter approval.

"When we have an ad valorem special assessment by a board without a vote of the people, aren't we avoiding the will of the people?" Gast asked. "I have serious reservations about what we've done."

The issue was raised earlier this year when Attorney General Frank Kelley ruled that special assessments weren't "taxes" and couldn't be capped by Proposal A. An attorney general's ruling has the force of law until a court rules otherwise or the Legislature changes the law.

Senate Joint Resolution L, sponsored by Michael Bouchard, R-Birmingham, would amend the Michigan Constitution's Art. IX, the financial article. Bouchard said Kelley's ruling "created a loophole."

SJR L requires a two-thirds vote of each chamber to put it on the November 1998 ballot and voter approval for it to become part of the constitution.

Bullard sponsored Senate Bills 428-432 amending various tax and local governmental laws.

Sen. Gary Peters, D-Bloomfield Township, won approval of an amendment to protect townships for two years. He said Royal Oak Township has a court-ordered special assessment for police and fire, and an area of Bloomfield Township called Bloomfield Village has an assessment for police.

Area resident among new crop of assistant prosecutors

Ten new assistant prosecutors were hired by Wayne County Prosecutor John D. O'Hair.

The assistant prosecutors bring a variety of legal experience and education to the prosecutor's office

Deborah Blair, of Wyandotte, worked as an executive staff member of the Wayne County Sheriff's Department, converting records to Microsoft Access database; law clerk for general counsel for the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, AFL-CIO, and legal intern for Michigan Supreme Court Justice Patricia Boyle.

Blair received a juris doctorate at Wayne State University Law School and a bachelor's degree in economics from Western Michigan University.

Sally Moore, of Detroit, worked as a law clerk for Chief Judge Julian A. Cook Jr. of U.S. District Court; law clerk for Prisoner's Abroad International Charity and judicial assistant for Recorder's Court.

Moore received a law degree at University of Detroit-Mercy and a bachelor's degree in English literature at Marygrove College.

Bradley Cobb, of Westland, was a prehearing attorney with the Michigan Court of Appeals, law clerk with Garan, Lucow, Miller, Seward, Cooper & Becker, and law clerk with the U.S. Attorney's office's appellate division.

Cobb earned a law degree at Wayne State University Law School and bachelor's degree in accounting at Wright State University.

Duane Brown, of Wayne, worked as an attorney with the Wayne County Neighborhood Legal Services, a law clerk for U.S. Magistrate Lynn Hooe Jr. and a SPC coordinator with the truck and bus division of General Motors.

Brown earned a juris doctorate at Thurgood Marshall School of Law in Texas and a bachelor's degree from the University of Detroit.

Vincent Van Tiem, of Detroit, worked as an attorney at Recorder's Court, a law clerk at Robert H. Pytell & Associates, and associate director of development with Detroit College of Law.

Van Tiem earned his law degree at Detroit College of Law and a bachelor's degree in sociology at the University of Michigan.

Sabrina Johnson, of Livonia, worked as an associate attorney with Meganck and Cothorn law office, assistant to the dean of admissions and recruitment at Wayne State University Law School, and consumer relations specialist at Electronic Data Systems Corp.

Johnson earned her law degree from WSU Law School and a bachelor's degree from Michigan State University.

Christina Ann Daskas, of Grosse Pointe Shores, formerly worked as a special assistant prosecuting attorney in the Wayne County juvenile division, labor management and contract negotiator at Chicago Beef Company, and financial litigation unit assistant at the U.S. Attorney's office.

Daskas earned a law degree from the Detroit College of Law and a bachelor's degree from Michigan State University.

Abed Hammoud, of Dearborn, was employed as a law clerk at the University of Michigan, Technology Management Office; marketing director at the Energy International Corp., and mechanical project engineer at Entreprise Industrielle, SEITHA, France.

Gary Bresnehan worked as a student attorney with the misdemeanor defenders office in the 36th District Court; research assistant for Harry Barnes at the British House of Commons, and intern for U.S. Rep. Silvio Conte.

Azzam Elder of Dearborn worked as a judicial attorney for Wayne Circuit Judge Susan Borman; partner and operator for Aamdak Corp., and bookkeeper at Baskerville & Company Accountants.

Elder earned his juris doctor at Detroit College of Law and bachelor degrees in psychology and political science at the University of Michigan.

Schoolcraft College

Faculty members receive national honor

Dottie Witten, professor of child care and development at Schoolcraft College, and Charles Gibbons, associate professor of metallurgy, have received a 1997 National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development Excellence Award.

The award recognizes their outstanding contributions to teaching and learning and was presented May 28 in Austin, Texas.

Witten, a Livonia resident, designed the college's new Children's Center which serves the Child Care Development Program. Witten also created the Child Care/Special Education Associate Degree Program and wrote the curriculum which received State Board of Education approval.

Witten is an active participant in local, state and national organizations, serving as secretary to the Michigan Early Childhood Educators Consortium and as chair for the Community College Consortium on Disabilities. She makes frequent presentations at conferences and professional meetings and is a member of several community and public service boards.

Witten introduced a program in the classroom whereby experienced students and staff at the Children's Center mentor new practicum students which resulted in a high level of group cooperation and team work.

Witten has served on a number of College committees, provides assistance for all part-time child development instructors, and has served as a mentor for new faculty.

Gibbons joined the Schoolcraft faculty in 1976 and has had an extensive industrial background with positions in several companies. Gibbons has been responsible for industry-related instruction at General Motors, and has conducted in-plant training at Borg-Warner Automotive. Added to this real-world experience, Gibbons is "passionate" about his teaching and the Metallurgy and Materials Science Program at Schoolcraft, according to his students.

He "parents" his students, and they call him "Dad."

In the classroom, he maintains a relaxed atmosphere and sets up problems for teams of students to solve. Gibbons is available to answer student questions, gives his students permission to call him at home, has a research team assembled that solves real-life industrial problems, and helps students find quality jobs at appropriate salaries. Most Saturdays and Sundays, he is on campus in "open" laboratories for his students.

Gibbons holds a Faculty Service Award and Letter of Commendation for his interactions with industry and community, has published several papers on metallurgy topics and is a member of several professional societies.

Award winners: Dottie Witten, a Livonia resident and professor of child care and development at Schoolcraft College, and Charles Gibbons, associate professor of metallurgy, have been honored with the 1997 National Institute for Staff and Organizational Development Excellence Award.

FOCUS ON WINE

RAY AND ELEANOR HEALD

Michele Chiarlo wines focus on vineyard expression

Michele Chiarlo represents the seventh generation of a winemaking family in Italy's Piedmont region. In addition to the region's highly-touted wines barbaresco and barolo, Chiarlo crafts a handsome portfolio of wines that are the ultimate expression of their vineyard origin.

In 1955, armed with a degree in winemaking, Chiarlo joined his father's small winery. Today, he and his sons Alberto and Stefano have ownership or control over 265 acres of vineyards, the most prestigious of which are located in Barbaresco and Barolo. The 1995 purchase of the Aluffi estate with its holdings of La Court and Il Castello in the heart of the Barbera d'Asti zone, added over 50 acres of exceptional vineyards to produce barbera, a red wine beginning to excite the palates of American wine consumers.

Among the white wines in the Michele Chiarlo portfolio is the outstanding 1996 Gavi from Rovereto $26 with its big jasmine floral rush and flavorful fruit balance. Chiarlo explained that Rovereto translates from Italian as oak forest.

"This is the best area for Gavi because of the volcanic and marl, clay soil," he explained. "It's rich in iron and manganese and also quite stony."

Gavi is one of those wines with which Americans can have a love-hate relationship. This is understandable. Many bottlings of Gavi (produced from the cortese grape) are tart, lean and characterless. When it's good, it's very, very good, but when it's too tart, it's horrid!

"Gavi from Rovereto, in the southeast sector of the Piedmont, 20 miles from the Mediterranean Sea and 10 miles from the Apennine Mountains is ideal for growing cortese," Chiarlo contended. "Sea breeze mixes with cold mountain air to provide the correct climate for cortese to develop the grapefruit, licorice and anise character which is enhanced by mineral elements from soils at an elevation of 1,000 feet."

In general, Italian white wines do not age well. A great Gavi can be cellared for four to five years.

If you're of the opinion that it is the first job of a wine to be red, then an overview of new red wine releases from Michele Chiarlo is in order. At a recent tasting, the 1996 Barbera d'Asti $12.50 was teaming with red fruit aromas and flavors accented by toasty oak and vanilla notes.

The 1994 Michele Chiarlo Barilot $38 (blend of 60 percent barbera and 40 percent nebbiolo) is violet scented, balanced and approachable. The 1994 Chiarlo Countacc! at $66 is a blend of 35 percent nebbiolo, 35 percent barbera and 30 percent cabernet sauvignon. It is an innovative wine expressing its translation of "surprise" or "marvel." We call it "awesome!" Aging 24 months in new French oak was followed by one year of bottle aging before release. It's a wine for both long cellaring and steak!

When we thought we hit the highlight, the Michele Chiarlo Barolo's were poured for tasting. The 1993 Barolo $37 has depthful red fruits with accent of black currants. Its big oak grip portends cellaring. The 1993 Cerequio Barolo $80 is a reserve selection with floral hints and anise accents. Spice and mint develop. It has firm structure, but rounder tannins than the "regular" Barolo. Red stone fruits and floral, sweet oak set the introduction of 1993 Cannubi Barolo $80. It comes across generous with a plump middle, ripe, round tannins and rich, lengthy finish.

'Reel' simple tips bring out flavor of fish

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND
SPECIAL WRITER

Who knows how to cook fish better than a chef who sailed the seas for almost 30 years? Especially one who created seafood buffets for his mates that included Oysters Rockefeller and pompano stuffed with crab meat.

"When you cook seafood, you want to be a gentle person," said Scotty Leggat of Plymouth, the chief steward on an ocean-going tanker from 1966 to 1993. "Don't over-accent because fish has a flavor of its own. Just bring out the flavor it already has."

Warning! Spice overboard! Go easy on the garlic. "Seafood will absorb anything you put on it. It draws it into its tissues," said Leggat.

Leggat began his career at age 7 at his uncle's restaurant, the Seafood Grotto, which preceded Topinka's, once located on the corner of Telegraph and Seven Mile in Detroit. "I stood on a wooden crate shucking oysters," he said.

Leggat's cooking adventures at sea began when he was contracted to work for Coastal Corporation through the U.S. Coast Guard. He'd start his day in the galley at 5:30 a.m. Leggat was responsible for feeding 135 men two shifts of breakfast, lunch and dinner, including a mid-watch buffet at midnight.

In addition to the oysters and the pompano, Leggat's famous seafood buffet included Dover Sole Popliati, which he baked in a paper bag stuffed with sauteed seaweed, garlic, olive oil and lemon pepper.

"It's delicious. It (the seaweed) makes the seafood so tender."

Leggat, who now works for the Main Street Deli in Plymouth, said if you want to marinate fish, use the best olive oil. "It seals in the flavors." His marinade is simple: olive oil, a pinch of lemon pepper, thyme, dill weed and some peppercorn. Sprinkle the fish with some Hungarian paprika, then saute, broil or pan fry.

"There isn't one seafood you can't do with this marinade. All you do is get the effervescence on the surface, but you'll still taste the quality of the meat."

Chef Willie Jackson of the Ocean Grille in Birmingham was quite emphatic about his cooking prowess: "Fish is one of my strong points,"

Jackson said seasonings are the key, but they don't have to be exotic to produce a great fish entree. "Fresh cracked pepper and kosher salt bring out the best in the fish."

Jackson prefers the versatility of grilling. He suggests brushing the fish with a mixture of olive and vegetable oil, then seasoning lightly with cracked pepper, kosher salt, and a bit of fresh thyme, tarragon, or basil to taste.

"One of my favorites is Alaskan halibut. I like to do it grilled with fresh herbs and serve it with a cilantro butter sauce," he said. A simpler dish he prepares is grilled salmon with cucumber and tomato vinaigrette. "Everybody has tomatoes and cucumbers and a blender."

I like much of my fish, like trout, pan fried, so I asked Jackson: How do you fry the perfect fish? "Pan sear it, flesh side down. Once brown, flip it over. Finish it in the oven at 400 degrees for four or five minutes," he said.

Chef Mike Dopkowski of the Water Club Grill in Plymouth Township grew up in Baltimore and cut his teeth on shrimp and crab. His newest specialty is a Parmesan cheese-breaded sauteed Coho salmon with a tomato-basil sauce.

Not all the fish in the sea are adaptable to the same cooking methods, said Dopkowski. In other words, a beer batter and a quick dunk in the deep fryer doesn't work for all our finned friends.

"Fish like scrod is too delicate to fry or grill. Just bake or broil it," he said. "Lake perch can be deep fried at a very high temperature or sauteed in a little bit of oil and finished off with bit of garlic butter."

Dopkowski doesn't recommend baking swordfish and tuna. They tend to dry out and acquire a grainy texture in a hot oven. These meaty fish do better on the grill, as does salmon, halibut, mahi mahi and snapper.

Dopkowski dispelled one myth about deep frying: It doesn't automatically add more calories. "Deep frying seals. The fish doesn't absorb much oil."

As for spices, Dopkowski likes to use salt, pepper, tarragon, and a little basil and oregano He will use these spices dried at times.

Sounds simple. Then again, Leggat, Dopkowski and Jackson consider themselves simple cooks blessed with intuitiveness. "I am not a textbook chef," said Jackson. "I go by what my taste buds tell me. There are no rules when it comes to cooking."

Meatless diet no cause for alarm

LIVING BETTER SENSIBLY

BEVERLY PRICE

"My daughter is a terrible mother," one of my clients confided in me. "Why is that?" I asked. "She's allowing my 13-year-old old granddaughter to be a vegetarian."

Trying to console my client, I explained that her daughter was not remiss in child rearing by allowing her granddaughter to eliminate meat or even dairy products from her diet. From my experience with the new wave of vegetarian children, teenagers and college students, it seems as if their parents are more in need of education when it comes to nutrition than their children.

When I was a college student in the early 1980s at Michigan State University (and a dietetics major to boot), my classmates and I thought vegetarians were 1960s leftovers who still wore their hair long and T-shirts with peace symbols. These were the people, of course, who ran the food co-op in East Lansing. I was raised on meat and dairy like the rest of the boomers, but it is the offspring of my generation who are environmentally concerned, health conscious, animal rights activists.

Should parents be concerned about their teens not getting the proper nutrients from a vegetarian diet? All teens are susceptible to iron deficiency anemia, and studies show that anemia is no more prevalent in vegetarians than among those who eat meat. Although iron in meat products is more readily absorbed, great non-meat sources of iron include beans, green, leafy vegetables, fortified cereals and dried fruits.

Calcium is a key nutrient needed to develop strong bones. It is also needed to help protect you from osteoporosis in later years. Osteoporosis is not just a disease of calcium deficiency but also a disease of calcium loss.

Many teens, especially girls, have dietary habits that facilitate calcium loss – dieting, drinking too much pop, not eating enough vegetables and fruits, and not eating enough calcium-rich foods.

The American Dietetic Association endorsed the health properties of the vegetarian diet in their 1987 position paper – "It may be easier for some individuals to meet the Dietary Guidelines for Americans by following a vegetarian diet rather than a non-vegetarian diet."

However, "Poorly planned or haphazard diets (vegetarian or non-vegetarian) increase the likelihood of diet-related disorders of deficiency or excess." Any diet needs to be based on variety and wholesome foods regardless whether vegetarian or not. If the diet is based on junk food, it will be missing many key nutrients needed for optimal health.

Sarah Grogan, 16, of West Bloomfield has begun moving toward a vegetarian diet for the past year. "Just about all my friends are vegans (they do not eat meat or dairy products) out of concern for animals," she said. Sarah wants to be a vegetarian for health reasons. "In the last year, meat started looking very unappetizing to me," she said. "I became worried about what was going into animals' feed (such as hormones and chemicals), so I started eating more pasta, vegetables and fruit."

Her mother, Andrea Bronson Grogan, enrolled Sarah in our vegetarian cooking classes and started changing her own cooking and eating habits as well. As a single working mom, Andrea finds quick and easy vegetarian recipes that she can "throw" together after her busy day as a high school art teacher.

June Vegetarian Menu:

See recipes inside

- Pasta Primavera
- Fruit & Nut Coleslaw
- Blueberry Crisp

The following menu was teen-tested by a class of Roseville high schoolers who heartily approved. Just about all of the ingredients can be found at major supermarkets. If you have trouble finding the maple syrup granules called for in the Blueberry Crisp, use equal amounts of refined sugar.

The sauce in the Pasta Primavera is a low-fat cream sauce. For those of you who don't eat dairy products, the Pasta Primavera may be altered by using soy milk, non-dairy cream cheese and tofu Parmesan cheese in place of the dairy products. For the serious vegetarian, the honey in Fruited & Nut Coleslaw may be substituted with equal amounts of brown rice syrup.

So, let the decision on the type of food that your son or daughter wants to eat come from them. Don't make mealtimes an unpleasant experience, go with the flow. PASTA PRIMAVERA

- 8 ounces whole wheat fettuccine
- 2 cups broccoli florets
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 cup chopped red pepper
- 1 cup sliced mushrooms
- 1/2 teaspoon oregano
- 1/2 teaspoon basil
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1 tablespoon pine nuts, toasted
- 1/2 cup evaporated skim milk
- 1/2 cup Parmesan cheese
- 2 tablespoons fat-free cream cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon cayenne pepper

Cook pasta according to package directions. Saute onion, bell pepper, mushrooms, oregano, basil and garlic in a skillet, coated with non-stick cooking spray, 5 to 8 minutes, or until vegetables are tender.

In a small saucepan, combine milk, cream cheese, Parmesan cheese, salt and cayenne pepper. Over medium-low temperature, heat until cream cheese melts. Toss well with vegetables and pasta; sprinkle with toasted pine nuts.

Makes 4 servings: Per serving: 332 calories, 7 g fat, 7 mg cholesterol, 435 mg sodium.

FRUIT & NUT COLESLAW

- 1/2 cup dried cranberries
- 1/3 cup chopped green onions
- 2 tablespoons slivered almonds, toasted
- 3 large carrots, shredded
- 1 (16-ounce) package coleslaw, or 6 1/2 cups shredded cabbage
- 1 (11-ounce) can mandarin oranges, drained
- 3 tablespoons honey
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon basil
- 3/4 cup white wine vinegar
- 3 tablespoons orange juice
- 1 tablespoon extra virgin olive oil

Makes 12 servings: Per serving: 75 calories, 2 g fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 112 mg sodium.

BLUEBERRY CRISP

- 1/2 cup water
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 3 1/2 cups fresh blueberries
- 3/4 cup whole wheat pastry flour (or sifted whole wheat flour)
- 1/3 cup pure maple syrup granules
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
- 1/4 cup canola oil

Preheat oven to 375°F. In a cup, combine water and cornstarch; stir and set aside. Pour blueberries into medium-size saucepan and set over high heat; cook until blueberries are soft and juices begin to boil, about 5 to 7 minutes. Stir in cornstarch.

Lower heat and cook until mixture is thick and clear, stirring constantly, about 2 minutes. Pour into 1 1/2 quart or 8-inch square baking dish.

In a small bowl, combine remaining ingredients; mix together with fork until crumbly. Sprinkle over blueberry mixture. Bake until topping is golden, about 25 minutes. Cool completely (blueberries will set up as dessert cools).

Makes 12 servings. Per serving: 120 calories, 4 g fat, 0 mg cholesterol, 4 mg sodium.

Focus on Wine from page B1

Sporting the biggest fruit profile is 1993 Vigna Rionda di Serralunga Barolo $69. Fruit flavors are exceptionally complemented by oak. This is a cellar keeper!

If you're wondering about vintages for these expensive Piedmont reds, this is Chiarlo's assessment in the 1990s. He ranked 1990 as exceptional and the best in the last 20 or 30 years. Average quality in 1991 and 1992 lead to some medium-bodied barberas and barolos with good approachability. Best after 1990 so far is 1993.

"It's now assessed as better than the highly-ranked 1988 vintage," Chiarlo added. Low yields characterize 1994 similarly to 1991 and 1992. The 1995 barberas can be compared to the outstanding 1988s and for barolos, the comparison is with the very good 1989s.

A hot June in 1996 was followed by a cooler July and August. The three summer months saw little or no rain and thick grape skins formed. September had four or five days of rain. "Those producers who delayed their harvest decisions, made the best wines," Chiarlo said. "The La Court Barbera will have the quality of a 1990."

GRILLED FRESH ATLANTIC SALMON WITH FRESH HERBS AND TOMATO AND CUCUMBER VINAIGRETTE

- four 8 oz. salmon filets
- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1 tablespoon fresh basil, chopped
- 1 teaspoon fresh tarragon, chopped
- salt and pepper to taste

Mix olive oil, basil, tarragon, salt and pepper. Rub on both sides of salmon. Grill salmon about four to five minutes on each side, turning once, left to right. When salmon is slightly firm, remove from grill. Spoon vinaigrette over fish and serve.

TOMATO AND CUCUMBER VINAIGRETTE

- 3/4 cup chopped fresh tomatoes
- 1/4 cup peeled, seeded and chopped cucumber
- 1/2 clove or 1/2 teaspoon minced garlic
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1/8 cup balsamic vinegar

Mix all ingredients in blender until liquefied. Add salt and pepper to taste.

SESAME SEED FRIED CATFISH WITH ROASTED RED PEPPER MAYONNAISE

- 1 cup sesame seeds
- 1/2 cup plain bread crumbs
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1 tablespoon basil
- four 6-8 oz. catfish
- 1 egg and 1 cup milk beaten together for egg wash
- 1 cup flour

Mix together sesame seeds, bread crumbs, salt, pepper and basil. Set aside. Place fish in egg wash, remove and coat lightly with flour. Place back into egg wash, remove and coat with sesame seed crust mixture. Deep fry or saute in oil until golden brown. Finish in oven if needed. Garnish with roasted red pepper strips and serve with red pepper mayonnaise.

RED PEPPER MAYONNAISE

- 1 large red pepper, roasted
- 2 cups mayonnaise

Puree pepper in blender. Add mayonnaise and mix well.

Strawberries will be late this year

BY KEELY WYGONIK
STAFF WRITER

It's been a cold spring, and I still have flats of flowers, herbs and vegetables in the backyard and garage to plant. It's hard to get motivated when a chill wind is blowing. How are you doing with your gardens? Keep in touch, send us your favorite recipes, tips and stories about visiting u-pick farms.

Fresh-picked Michigan asparagus is available at May's Greenhouse, 685 County Farm Road, Howell, (517) 552-0015; Long Family Orchard at Commerce and Bogie Lake roads in Commerce Township, (810) 360-3774; Blake's Big Apple Orchard, North Avenue and 33 Mile Road, Armada, (810) 784-9710; and Wiard's Orchards Inc., I-94 to Huron Street (exit 183) then south 4 miles, follow the signs, (313) 482-7744. Call for information before heading out to the farm.

Because of the cold spring, local farmers are predicting Michigan's strawberry season will begin in the middle of June. Farmers said to call after June 10 or 15 for u-pick strawberry information. Traditionally, the season begins a week earlier in Wayne and Washtenaw counties. Here are some farms to call:

■ Blake's Orchard and Cider Mill – 17985 Armada Center Road, (3 miles west of Armada), (810) 784-5343.

■ Middleton Berry Farm – 2120 Stoney Creek Road (3 miles east of Lake Orion at north end of Adams Road), (810) 693-6018 or (810) 693-6124.

■ Glenn Rowe Produce Farm & Market – 10570 Martz Road (I-94 to exit 197, Rawsonville Road, south 2-1/2 miles to Martz Road), (313) 482-8538.

■ Spicer Orchards – Take U.S.-23 (3 miles north of M-59, Clyde Road, exit east), (810) 632-7692.

■ Wiard's Orchards, Inc. – I-94 to Huron Street (exit 183) then south 4 miles, follow the signs, (313) 482-7744.

California strawberries are still available at grocery stores and produce markets, and if you have some rhubarb growing in your backyard, here's a recipe you're sure to enjoy.

HOME GROWN

SPICED STRAWBERRY RHUBARB JAM

- 1 quart stemmed, washed strawberries
- 3 cups chopped rhubarb
- 2 tablespoons fresh orange juice
- 1 teaspoon grated orange peel
- 1 package powdered pectin
- 6 cups sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

Prepare home canning jars and lids according to manufacturer's instructions.

Slice strawberries, measure 4 cups into large saucepan. Add rhubarb, orange juice and peel. Stir in pectin. Bring to a rolling boil, stirring frequently. Add sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg and return to a rolling boil. Boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat.

Skim foam, if necessary. Carefully ladle hot jam into hot jars, leaving 1/4-inch head space. Wipe jar rim clean. Place lid on jar with sealing compound next to glass. Screw band down evenly and firmly. Do not use excessive force.

Process 10 minutes in a boiling-water canner; Yield about 6 half pints.

Berry Pointers

■ Wash strawberries before hulling

■ One pint strawberries equals 1 1/2 to 2 cups sliced or chopped

■ When making strawberry pie, always wash, then hull the berries, letting them drain upside-down on paper towels for 30 minutes. That way, you'll remove as much excess moisture as possible and not end up with a soggy pie.

■ Sugar softens berries – particularly strawberries – so don't add it too far in advance of serving.

Ripe idea makes summer fruit drip with flavor

(NAPS) – This summer, consumers around the country are expected to reach for the one thing that can guarantee them sweet California peaches, plums and nectarines: an ordinary paper bag. About 10,000 supermarkets will display complimentary paper bags where they sell peaches, plums and nectarines so that more consumers will learn to use them to ripen their fruit the right way.

These ordinary paper bags have the power to transform a firm piece of fruit into a succulent delight, dripping with sweet, aromatic nectar. What appears to be a slight-of-hand is actually the natural exchange of "ripening vapors." The organic vapor called ethylene plays a key role in ripening fruit. And when peaches, plums and nectarines are placed in a closed paper bag, the exchange of trapped ripening vapors dramatically speeds the ripening process. Consequently, the acid content drops and the fruit softens. The result is sweet, delicious fruit.

To get the sweetest, ripest peaches, plums and nectarines:

■ Place fruit in a paper bag for two or three days. Doing this will allow the fruit to ripen quickly and evenly.

■ Take fruit out of the plastic bag and put it into the paper bag. Moisture forms on the surface of fruit kept in plastic bags and can cause the fruit to decay. Also, because carbon dioxide cannot escape from a plastic bag, the fruit can have an unpleasant taste.

■ Keep fruit off the window sill and out of the sun. Heat above 80 degrees slows the ripening process and can leave fruit mushy or shriveled.

■ Keep fruit out of the refrigerator before it is ripe. Temperatures below 50 degrees inhibit the enzyme activity necessary for ripening and can damage the fruit, making it flavorless, and eventually mealy and brown. After the fruit completely ripens in a paper bag, it is alright to refrigerate it.

As more people are reaching for ordinary paper bags to ripen their peaches, plums and nectarines, they also will be reaching for napkins to blot their faces and hands as they enjoy sweet, juicy fruit that is perfectly ripe.

For more information on peaches, plums and nectarines or to receive a free brochure with recipes and tips titled: "How Sweet it is...Finally, the Secret to Really Ripe Fruit Revealed," call this toll free number: 1-888-RIPEN-IT.

Elegant Italian sandwich simple to prepare

AP – Tomato Mozzarella Toast is elegant, yet simple to prepare and serve. Toasted Italian rolls absorb the juices of chopped tomatoes, fresh basil and garlic. The sandwich is layered with prosciutto, and mozzarella cheese is melted over the top.

TOMATO MOZZARELLA TOAST

- 2 pounds fresh tomatoes
- 1/4 cup olive oil
- 1/3 cup thinly slivered fresh basil or chopped parsley
- 1 teaspoon minced garlic
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/8 teaspoon ground black pepper
- Two 8-inch-long Italian rolls
- 8 thin slices Prosciutto di Parma or baked ham (about 4 ounces)
- 1 cup (8 ounces) shredded mozzarella cheese

Core tomatoes; chop (makes about 5 cups).

In a large bowl, combine tomatoes, 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, the basil, garlic, salt and black pepper; let stand at least 30 minutes.Slice rolls in half horizontally, then vertically. Brush cut sides of bread with the remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil; place on a shallow pan; broil until golden.

Reserve about 1-3rd cup of the tomato mixture; spoon remaining tomato mixture on rolls, dividing evenly. Top each with 2 slices of prosciutto, 1/4 cup mozzarella and an equal amount of the reserved tomato mixture. Broil until cheese is just melted, about 3 minutes. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Grads pick gifts they really want

BY DONNA MULCAHY
SPECIAL WRITER

When Holly Tomasik of Livonia graduated from high school, she received a memorable and useful package from a cousin who lives in North Carolina.

"She sent me a backpack filled with everything I'd need for college — pens, pencils, paper, note cards, Scantron forms – even aspirin," said Tomasik, 22, a senior accounting student at Madonna University in Livonia.

Everything came in handy, including the aspirin, which Tomasik said she used for the first time "right after student orientation."

Other items that could be placed in a book bag of backpack as a gift include a daily planner and three 1/2-inch computer disks, Tomasik said.

For students who do have their own computer, accessories like print cartridges and paper also make nice gifts, she said. But it's important to the gift-giver to know what's compatible with the student's equipment.

Items like T-shirts, sweatshirts, coffee mugs, notebooks and pencils featuring the name of the college or university that a student plans to attend also make great high school graduation gifts, said Tomasik, who lives off campus and commutes to college.

When a student will be living in a dorm, it opens up a whole other world of gift possibilities.

Sandra Overholt, 29, of Toledo, Ohio, is majoring in sign language and English at Madonna University, and has been living in a dorm there for the past year.

"One of the things that people may not know about, unless they've lived in a dorm before or know someone who has, is that it's really useful to have a dry-erase board for the outside of your door. You can use it to tell people where you're at and when you'll be back, or if you're sleeping or studying," Overholt said.

Dry-erase boards are the modern equivalent of chalk boards. But instead of chalk, they come with erasable-ink markers.

"It helps especially if there is a fire drill, because everyone knows then not to search for you. It's a great communication device," she said.

Power strips make practical gifts for dorm students, "because you never have enough electrical sockets for all the things you need to plug in," she continued.

Phone cards are also useful – "especially if parents want you to call home on a regular basis," she said.

For a clever gift package, why not buy a plastic, rectangular, carry-all container — the kind with the handle in the center and deep wells along the sides — and then fill it with shower items, cleaning supplies, or instant food and eating utensils?

Overholt said she uses a container like that to carry her soap, shampoo and towels to the shower. In general, dormitories do not have in-room showers.

Another nice gift package, she said, would be a laundry basket or bag filled with detergent, fabric softener, stain remover, and quarters for coin-operated washers and dryers.

Stackable plastic crates are also useful, said Kathleen Deschoff of Farmington Hills. Her daughter, Christina, a senior at Eastern Michigan University, uses them to organize books, clothes, and other things in her room.

"And when the semester is over, she uses the crates to lug everything home," Deschoff said.

A dolly — not the kind you play with, but the kind that's used to haul stuff — is a very useful gift for parents who will be helping their children move into a dormitory, she added.

I know a college student who doesn't like coffee, but he loves his coffee maker. It's a quick source of hot water for Ramen Noodles, Lipton Cup-of-Soup and other instant foods he can make in his dorm room.

Small refrigerators and microwaves also make good gifts, provided that students are allowed to have them in their dormitory. "We're not really supposed to have them here," Overholt said, "but I can't say that some students don't have them."

When in doubt, jewelry and keepsakes featuring the year of the student's high school graduation make nice gifts. So do gift certificates for restaurants, stores and Ticketmaster, Tomasik said.

But the best high school graduation gift by far, according to everyone I've talked to, is money. It can't buy happiness, but it can pay for lots of other things graduates will need as they enter "the real world."

Grocers move into the meal business

"Can you stop at the grocery store after work?" used to mean mom needed a quart of milk or loaf of bread. Today it may mean mom wants the entire family dinner – ready to set down on the table hot and hearty.

BY BARB PERT TEMPLETON
SPECIAL WRITER

It's no secret that the fast and full lifestyles of the 1990s have forced home cooking to the back burner for most folks. Still, people are thrilled to have that hot, delicious meal at the end of the day.

Keeping these busy consumers in mind, many area food stores are tapping into the restaurant biz – offering salads and hot entrees to go.

Vivian Shouneyia, manager of Market Plaza in West Bloomfield, attests to the public's desire for fresh pre-cooked dinner entrees that don't include a side of fries.

"We have people coming in here every night, men dressed in suits and women who are all dressed up, and they're looking for the prepared foods," she said. "That market is definitely a big part of our business."

The Shouneyias of Bloomfield Township opened the grocery/convenience store in March at Commerce and Green Lake Roads. After operating the shop for several months, they decided to expand the deli counter and increase the take-out foods section.

They hope to use their 5,800-square feet to offer products that cater to customers who are short on time but heavy on hunger.

Breads and pastries, prepared by baker Emily Curioca, are offered hot out of the oven. Coolers adjacent to the bakery offer a variety of complete meals ready for shoppers to take home, heat and enjoy.

These 15 entrees are made in-house fresh by Market Plaza's full-time chef Jeannie Zanowski. Chicken Wellington, Dijon Sirloin Tips and Stuffed Seafood Shells are among the entrees packaged to go.

Customers can compliment their hot plate with a specialty salad or any one of a number of fresh pastas such as Sundried Tomato Pesto and Mushroom Broccoli Alfredo.

For those who eat on the road or can't spare the time to re-heat a dish, Market Plaza offers rotisserie chicken, hot pizza and even mini-turkey breasts that can be consumed on the spot.

Village Market changes

That list of ready-made meals would certainly appeal to Rich Heathfield, owner of Birmingham Village Market.

"I'm single and after work I'm always looking for a dinner that I can just stop and grab and go," he said. The Village Market offers several easy meal options although they are presented on a smaller scale.

"We carry deli products, like subs and salads, and those sell very well," said Heathfield. Frozen foods, too, are in demand as customers on-the-run purchase cart loads of Stoeffer's and Lean Cuisine entrees and frozen pizzas.

Beyond the frozen food aisle, Village Market hasn't done a lot to address the quick meal menu but all of that will change when the store is opened under new management later this month. The new owners plan to remodel and expand the store to meet customer desires to have pre-made hot foods at their finger tips, Heathfield said.

Merchant of choices

Matthew Jonna, one of the owners of the Merchant of Vino stores in Troy, Farmington Hills and Rochester Hills, said his stores offer ready-made salads and party dips but don't really offer pre-made meals to go.

"We call that the 'Home Meal Replacement Market' and it is a growing market," he said. Still, Merchant of Vino takes pride in the fact that they are a modern store, stocking a huge variety of produce, specialty foods and wines in just 25,000-square feet of space.

Produce markets like Nino Salvaggio's, Vic's, and Papa Joe's, are also expanding their selections of prepared foods to go.

Hudson's spokeswoman Chris Morrisroe said the Marketplaces in most of the Detroit area department stores, were recently redesigned to provide take-home meals for time-crunched shoppers.

Senate considers legislation restricting kids' mall visits

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
EDITOR

If the state senate approves the budget this week, the next item on their agenda is a bill by Sen. Michael Bouchard (R-Birmingham) that would provide shopping centers with the right to restrict visits by young shoppers.

Bouchard said the legislation was developed at the request of area mall officials who were looking for a "tool" to help them cope with the developing issue of teen groups loitering at their centers on weekends.

Bouchard would like to see kids, 16 and under, banned from shopping centers Friday and Saturday nights after 6 p.m. if they are not with a guardian over 19 years old. The area around mall movie theaters is exempted.

He said incidents of kids using profanities, threatening security officials and shoppers, blocking entrances to stores, and fighting in food courts, prompted the bill.

"These measures are not meant to ban young people from shopping," Bouchard explained. "As a group they spend $50 million annually across America. The bill is meant to serve the shopping centers by repealing parts of old laws that stand in the way of allowing malls to deal with this new issue."

Cathy O'Malley, manager of Twelve Oaks in Novi, said she is part of an International Council of Shopping Centers (ICSC) committee working with legislators to develop a "mall curfew" law. She said if passed, Michigan's bill could become a prototype for the country.

"We've seen more and more parents dropping off youngsters on the weekends with the hope that the mall will entertain and amuse them," she said. "But if something happens or there is an accident, we have a hard time tracking down the legal guardians.

"No one wants to prevent young people from visiting a mall. It's part of their socialization. But, a mall is private property. This bill would allow each shopping center the tool it needs to go before the city council and get a curfew rule – if necessary."

Rebecca Maccardini, operations manager at the Somerset Collection in Troy, has served as president of the ICSC, addressing the issue of 'troublemakers at the mall' for many years and at many different centers.

"It's very disturbing and not simple," she said. "It boils down to a question of rights. But whose rights? The teens? The merchants who pay rent to do business at the mall? The mall owners? The customers who expect a safe and pleasant shopping experience?

"I don't have a firm opinion on this bill yet. But, there are times you have to do something when a situation interferes with commerce or creates a problem where business is impeded."

Richard Fair, manager of Tel-Twelve Mall in Southfield, said he would prefer that blanket legislation on the issue be avoided.

"Personally, I believe you can't legislate everything," he said. "Whatever situation arises should be dealt with individually on its own terms by those in charge locally."

Fair said a mall's best defense against teen trouble is a close relationship with the police department and strict and frequent enforcement of trespassing and loitering laws.

Joe Maicki, 14, of Troy, spared no emotion in blasting the bill.

"I'm totally against it," he said. "Those restricted times are the hours I usually shop at the mall. I love to go up to Somerset on Friday or Saturday nights. Maybe some malls in other parts of town need the law. But not here in Troy."

Troy police chief Lawrence Carey echoed the sentiment. "Our jurisdiction has enough ordinances to cover anyone of any age causing trouble in public," he said. "We have truancy, loitering, trespassing and parental responsibility codes. I don't want to see kids banned from the malls. They have money to spend. They buy things. However, there may be some communities that may need this tool."

Where can I find?

Thanks to all the readers who phoned in locations for the hard-to-find items listed last week!

What we found:

• Two callers said Jacobson's sells the nylon gloves you wear while putting on pantyhose to prevent snags and runs.

• Several readers called in sources for wooden, six-story Purple Martin birdhouses. These folks build them as a hobby and accept orders: J. Walker at (313) 425-9347; Judy at (810) 254-4933; or write for a bird-lovers catalog "Birds in Bloom" c/o Edinboro University of Pennsylvania, Edinboro, PA. 16444. The catalog is printed by the Purple Martin Conservation Association.

• "Florence" spotted Disposercare at the Aco Hardware store, 13 Mile/Orchard Lake Road in Farmington Hills and another caller found it at Hiller's, 5 Mile and Haggerty in Plymouth.

• "Sharon" said the craft mall on Middlebelt Road north of Ford Road has both a glass bowl and pitcher in the shape of a fish. Another caller offered to sell hers.

• "Barbara" said Hiller's at Haggerty/5 Mile in Plymouth carries the Betty Crocker date bar mix. "Sherry" reports the item can also be ordered from the manufacturer (General Mills) by calling 1-800-328-6787. "Ruth" said the mix can be ordered by bulk from General Mills, $25 for a case of 12; $15 for a case of 4 packs. Write: General Mills Inc. Consumers Services, 900 CT. P.O. Box 113, Minneapolis, MN 55440. Ruth said she spent six years trying to track down the elusive mix that serves as the base of many holiday recipes.

• The address to the Niagra Manufacturing Corp. is 8806 Highland Ave. Brockton, N. Y. 14716.

We're still looking for:

• An old record, cassette or 8-track of "Fun For The Road" for "Gretchen."

• A source for summer art lessons for a Bloomfield Hills teen who wants to learn about working with oils and acrylics.

• The out-of-print "Encyclopedia of Cooking" by Mary Margaret McBride for Lorraine Bower.

• A make-up mirror with a wire attachment that fits around the neck to free hands for Susan Schoen of Livonia.

• Three old paperbacks "The First Christian" by somebody/Davis; "The Miracle of Rebound Exercise" by Albert Carter; and "God's Recipe for Ezekiel Bread" author unknown, for Georgia.

If you've seen any of these items in your travels, let Malls & Mainstreets know and we'll print the answers. Please call (248) 901-2567 and relate your message and phone number slowly and clearly!

DSO garden shop

Available are: DSO signature items, tapes and CDs, many varieties of lilies, birdhouses and unique garden accessories. From Woodward, turn west on Boston Blvd. Open Tuesday-Sunday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Admission is $15.*

Summer chic

Keep it cool and casual

During the hot, sunny days of summer, staying cool and comfortable takes top priority. But how can women get through the season in comfort and style?

According to Talbots, the women's classic clothing retailer and cataloger, summer chic is all about simple, pared-down styles in updated fabrics, shapes and colors:

Relaxed business casual

In summer, when the term 'Casual Friday' seems to apply to the entire week, lightweight fabrics like Irish linen, cotton pique and silk are a smart investment.

This season features breezy, A-line skirts, wrap-front sarongs and a range of trouser silhouettes – from slim, side-zip pants to full-leg, drawstring styles.

For toppers, V-neck silk and cotton sweaters are cool bets on warm days. A linen jacket or cardigan also provides light cover in air-conditioned spaces.

Weekend traveler

The safari trend has left its mark on summer fashion. Self-tie vests, khaki twills, camp shirts and cargo shorts in neutral tones all lend everyday wardrobes an adventurous spirit.

For effortless dressing at home or on the road, Talbots recommends selecting classic styles that coordinate in color, and that can be dressed up or down with a few different accessories.

Comfort-minded professionals who travel frequently should opt for silk twill, crepe or other seasonless fabrics that pack well and take up little room in a suitcase.

Backyard basics

Summer staple items like cotton T-shirts, rib-knit tanks, drawstring shorts and skirts take on a whole new flavor in delicious shades of mango, chili red and raspberry, and earthy neutrals like moss green, stone and oatmeal.

Other classic summer essentials a woman can't go without this season include sleeveless denim shirts, polo dresses, khaki pants and five-pocket jeans and jean-shorts.

Beachgoing style

Batik-print sundresses, Mandarin-collar tunics and Asian-inspired sarongs in tropical florals play tribute to faraway places and help capture summer's exotic look without leaving home.

Must-have accessories that create islandic charm include natural straw totebags with bamboo details, wide-strap sandals, woven mules and silver jewelry.

Simple, party chic

This season features bright watercolors like water blue and apple green, and exotic floral prints in lightweight linen, silk and cotton pique.

A natural straw hat and strappy sandals add drama and the perfect finishing touch to update any summer outfit.

Talbots has stores at Laurel Park Place in Livonia; Somerset Collection South in Troy; Twelve Oaks in Novi; Grosse Pointe, Ann Arbor and East Lansing.

UPON FURTHER EXAMINATION

Statistically speaking, only 43% of Americans over the age of 65 visit their dentists for routine examinations and cleanings. The other 57% delay their visits until they can no longer bear the pain of a toothache. At that point, the care required is likely to be both invasive and more costly. Moreover, many older adults have dental conditions, of which they are not aware, that can compromise overall health and the ability to eat a healthful diet. Studies show that while only 42% of older adults believe they have a dental problem that requires treatment, more than 70% have such conditions as ill-fitting dentures, gum disease, or cavities that can make eating difficult. These problems should be addressed before they lead to further difficulties.

At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we stress preventive health care for the entire family. We invite you to call 478-2110 to schedule an appointment for experienced and comprehensive dentistry. We're located at 19171 Merriam Road, where we feel a deep responsibility and commitment to provide the very best care with state-of-the-art technology. We strive to teach you good oral hygiene. In the long run, you will have better dental health. Smiles are our business.

Other top fur markets, in order of retail sales, are: Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Washington D.C./Baltimore, Boston, Detroit, Cleveland, Dallas/Ft. Worth, San Francisco, Milwaukee and Seattle.

By region, the East (51 percent) and the Midwest (25 percent) lead the country in fur sales, followed by the Southeast, West, Southwest, and mountain regions.

In 1995, sales were up 10 percent to $1.2 billion. That year, fur sales out paced the sales of Mercedes-Benz.

A Bugs Bunny stamp

Kids of all ages are invited to the Warner Bros. Studio Store on the third level of the Somerset Collection North in Troy, Wednesday, June 4 to celebrate the release of the first stamp ever to feature an animated character – Bugs Bunny leaning against a rural mailbox with his trademark carrot in hand.

The wascally wabbit himself arrives at 10 a.m. to pose with children and hand out coloring books and crayons.

Bugs, whose image and voice are recognized worldwide, made "A Wild Hare" his first feature, in 1940. During WW II he helped promote the war bond effort. He's appeared in 175 cartoons, been nominated for three Academy Awards, and received a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame in 1985.

Animal gallery owners wild about local artists

African wildlife painted on porcelain tiles, whimsical animal sculptures, stained glass panels of polar bears: The Animal Odyssey Gift and Art Gallery in Plymouth offers everything to make animal lovers smile.

Sharon and Celia Atma opened the animal-related gift and art shop in November. The cozy space overflows with designer cat dolls, ceramic dinnerware handmade in Zimbabwe, jewelry, decorative accessories, T-shirts, leopard print vests, scarves and hats, toys and gifts. Much of the art displayed supports local artists.

"It's all unique," said Celia Atma, co-owner with daughter Sharon. "You won't find this merchandise anywhere else. If any artists are interested, we'd be glad to exhibit their work if we have the room."

Diane Dunn painted the bas relief tiles featuring elephants, rhinos, cheetahs, tameran, deer and eagle. The Livonia resident is mostly self-taught. Her formal training was painting classes at David Messing's Art Store and More in Livonia, and a pottery class at the Ann Arbor Art Association.

Art evolution

Dunn came up with the idea for the tiles while painting nature scenes in oil. Tired of trying to bring a flat dimension to life, Dunn experimented by adding modeling paste to the paintings.

Animal Antics: Diane Dunn's oil-painted, porcelain tile of a cheetah is on exhibit at the Animal Odyssey in Plymouth's Old Village.

Unsatisfied with the results, her next step was to model animals in clay.

Over time, the paintings evolved into tiles. After making a negative mold with plaster and letting it dry, Dunn pours a casting of liquid porcelain to produce the tiles. Then, she fires the tiles in a 2,300°F. kiln before painting the raised image of the animal in oils.

"I always liked ceramics and oil painting, and decided to combine the two," said Dunn, a graduate of Franklin High School in Livonia. "I thought it would be nice to build up the paintings."

Dunn has always been an animal lover. Over the years, she worked for veterinarians and at a horse farm. In December, she showed her bas relief tiles at the Morris Hospital for Veterinary Services in Redford to raise money for the Detroit Zoo Veterinary Clinic.

"Art in the Village" June 7-8 at Greenmead Historical Village in Livonia brings fine art and crafts together for the first time.

Fifty-one artists will show paintings, pastels, photography, intaglio prints, mixed media and three-dimensional art works in the Shaw House, Quaker Meeting House, and Newburg Methodist Church and School. At the same time, more than 190 artists will exhibit their wares in the 21st annual Arts & Crafts Festival hosted by the Livonia Arts Commission.

Former arts commissioner Pat Gutierrez came up with the idea for the fine arts exhibit last year. This is the first time since the 1980s that the arts commission is hosting a statewide competition/exhibition. Chairperson Billie Thompson and arts commission president Bob Sheridan are both artists who strongly support the fine arts exhibit.

"There seemed to be a lack of appreciation for the arts and cultural events," said Sheridan. "We didn't think the fine arts exhibit could draw enough visitors on its own. We're hoping the fine arts and the arts and crafts festival, which is established, would feed off and support each other."

Combining the historical allure of the village area of Greenmead with a fine arts exhibit, and an arts and crafts festival, should entice a broader audience to the historical grounds. The village is a recreation of the Newburgh Road/Ann Arbor Trail intersection as it existed between 1910 and 1925. The crossroads of Newburg Corners anchored a prosperous farming community.

Greenmead rests on 104 of the 160 acres deeded to Joshua Simmons by President John Quincy Adams for $225 in 1825. The grounds are divided into two time periods, the village of the early 1900s, and the farm complex, which contains homesteads from the 1850s.

"I think it's wonderful; we've combined the historical buildings with fine art," said Thompson. "It's a wonderful opportunity to see fine art in historic homes. While the traditional art will complement the furnishings, it will be interesting to see abstracts in such a setting."

Award-winning watercolorist Toni Stevens looks forward to exhibiting her portrait "Sophia with Apple & Pear" at Art in the Village. The Plymouth resident painted the work during a class with Mary Aro at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association.

"I think it's a great idea for Livonia to institute a fine arts exhibit," said Stevens, who won first place in the Scarab Club's watercolor show last fall. "It's sounds like a lovely idea to have a fine arts show in historical buildings."

Wayne State University art professor Stanley Rosenthal judged the Art in the Village competition awarding $2,500 in cash prizes. Darcy Scott of West Bloomfield won the First Place ($1,000) award for "Communion with Nature." The surreal watercolor features a table set with bread and wine against a desert background.

"I was extremely excited to win," said Scott, "and think the idea for the show is great. There's never enough art shows, in my opinion."

Jeri Fellwock of Farmington Hills has exhibited paintings at Farmington Artists Club shows in the historic Spicer House in Farmington Hills; Atrium Gallery, Northville, and Swords into Plowshares Peace Center and Gallery, Detroit. Fellwock will display a 30- by 38-inch watercolor entitled "Horse Parade" from a series on horses.

"I've been in many shows," said Fellwock. "We show art in a lot of different types of buildings. When we exhibit at the Spicer House, people enjoy coming to see that beautiful, old house and walking through the park. I think Art in the Village at Greenmead will get a lot of traffic from people who like historic buildings."

Mary Jordan Ehlert of Livonia toured the buildings at Greenmead several years ago. A retired Livonia Public Schools art teacher, Ehlert will greet visitors to the Newburg School 2-5 p.m. Sunday, June 8.

Artisans, entertainers bring village to life

Woodworker Ken Carter grows timber for his handmade furniture in 100 acres of hardwoods north of Nashville, Tenn. A 1969 graduate of Bentley High School in Livonia, Carter will bring his wares to the 21st annual Arts & Crafts Festival at Greenmead Historical Village, June 7-8.

Livonia arts commissioners chose 195 artists to exhibit in the festival from 350 entries. Chairperson Stephanie Skaggs thinks visitors will marvel at the variety and quality of glass, print making, pottery, metal, jewelry, fine art, country, and textiles on hand.

"It's exciting, the fact we're doing something totally different this year in the village," said Skaggs. "The show had previously been held in the farm complex. I'm sure there's plenty of people who've never been in the village. This gives them the opportunity."

Skaggs spends her summers visiting all the art fairs searching for one-of-a-kind arts and crafts to exhibit in the arts commission-sponsored festival. This year, artists and craftsmen from New York to Ohio, Georgia and Michigan will fill the village with stone etching, lacquerware, oil paintings of Indian cliff dwellings, and jewelry created with the lost-wax process used by ancient Greeks and Chinese more than 2,000 years ago.

Entertainers will mingle with the crowds playing jazz and Ecuadorian music, and telling stories. For fairgoers not afraid to poke a little fun at themselves, Detroit artist William Szaro will do cariactures from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8.

Pain leads artist to making prints, painting

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

Jeanne Poulet is beginning to see the light at the end of the tunnel at age 64. Born in Montreal, Poulet was just nine years old when her mother died and left her surrounded by "evil people." As a child she was shuffled back and forth between her father and the homes of friends, acquaintances and strangers. Initially, Poulet's print making and paintings dealt with pedophilia and women's justice issues.

"I wanted to teach people about the evils happening to children," said Poulet, who considers herself a survivor.

"For all those years, I recorded peace and conflict issues. As of the last year, I had a request from Sherry Washington to paint landscapes for her Detroit gallery. Among the pieces is a landscape painted after a photograph my grandfather took on a Swiss camping trip in the 1800s. The palette is much like the patina on a bronze statue."

Thirty of Poulet's paintings and prints are on display in a one-woman show in the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery through June 27. Her video, "Jeanne Poulet Studio Present/ Studio Past" will be shown during receptions to meet the artist June 10 and 17. Copies of the soft-cover "Prose, Poems and Etchings by Jeanne Poulet" will be offered for sale.

The show, sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission, spans nearly 20 years. Among the oldest works is an etching dating back to 1979. A book on German etching was Poulet's only book as a child. Print making seemed to spring naturally from her creative spirit. She etched her first print in 1971.

"Printing came easy to me because images are etched backwards on a plate," said Poulet. "I'm dyslexic, so when I paint I have to use a mirror to reverse the image. This is the first time I'm doing flowers in years."

Disney artists demonstrate art of the Mouse

If you've always wondered how Mickey Mouse and the rest of the Disney characters come to life in full color on the big screen, you won't want to miss the Disney Ink & Paint Tour at the 14th annual Art on the Pointe June 7-8 on the grounds of the historic Edsel & Eleanor Ford house, 1100 Lakeshore in Grosse Pointe Shores.

You'll enjoy the works of more than 100 artists from across the U.S., and discover how the Disney artists add color to Mickey and all your favorite cartoon characters.

Gallery Animato of Birmingham will host demonstrations of the American fine art of inking and painting animation cels by artists from Walt Disney Studios in Burbank, California 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and 2:30-4:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, June 7-8.

The Disney ink and paint artists will produce images from such classic animated films as "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," "Pinocchio" and "Hercules." They will also be creating a special limited-edition cel to commemorate the tour.

Admission to Art on the Pointe is $3, ages 10 and under free. Proceeds benefit the community mental health programs of the Northeast Guidance Center. For more information call, (313) 824-5699.

The American art form of hand-inking and painting animation cels thrives today through the painstaking hand-inking and painting of some of the most beloved scenes from classic animated motion pictures produced by the Walt Disney Studios over the last 70 years.

What begins as an animator's pencil drawing on paper is carefully transferred onto acetate celluloid sheets by artists especially trained to trace the lines using colored inks and special pens. From there, another artist applies paint to the back of the cel to complete the magical image.

Due to the growing popularity of collecting original animation art, which dates back to the late 1930s and brings prices at auction of $100,000 and more, Walt Disney Art Classics began in the early 1970s to create more affordable limited-edition artwork.

Walt Disney Art Classics, in conjunction with the ink and paint department at Walt Disney Studios, recreates some of the classic scenes exclusively for collectors. Guests to Gallery Animato and the Disney Ink & Paint Tour will have the opportunity to purchase limited edition images of Walt Disney Studios Animation Art which had been previously created by artists at the Disney Studios.

Hours for Art on the Pointe are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., June 7-8.

"I liked the Animal Odyssey shop very much because I love animals and have always had dogs," said Dunn.

Currently employed by a pet supplies distributor in Ann Arbor, Dunn would like to become a full-time artist. A member of Artifacts Art Club, she has shown her oil paintings and tiles in the group's annual show at Livonia City Hall.

"I think the realism is what attracts people to Diane's tiles," said Atma, a Bloomfield Hills resident. "Most people are fascinated with the 3-D effect."

Trina Riordan's whimsical animal sculptures and door/drawer knobs have been on display in the Animal Odyssey shop since February. My favorite is a horse sitting on his haunches. Dog and bunny candle holders run a close second.

Riordan, a Farmington Hills artist, has more than 10 years experience creating sculptures and watercolors. She is a member of the Pontiac-Oakland Society of Artists.

"Trina's clay animal sculptures are so much fun," said Atma.

Other local artists exhibiting work at the Animal Odyssey are Jenn of Plymouth, stained glass panels and sun catchers; Bob Perrish, Livonia, cold cast bronze ducks; Phyllis Hochlowski, Plymouth, watercolors and reproductions; Jeannette Pugliese, Lathrup Village, Cool Cat Creations earrings and pins, and Jana Conger, Brooklyn, limited-edition prints of a cat, giraffe and toucans.

Also of note is the hand-painted, thrown porcelain tableware by Karen Donleavy, a California potter. Donleavy's work is featured in more than 100 stores and galleries including Henri Bendel and the Museum of Folk Art in Manhattan. Celebrities such as Lauren Bacall, Luciano Pavarotti, Shari Lewis, Cindy Williams, Anthony Perkins, Charles Bronson, and Tracey Ullman have purchased or requested Donleavy's work.

Prices for original art works range from $6 for a hand-painted "cat" stone by Pugliese to $550 for the award-winning stained glass panel "Panther Eyes" by Jenn. An adult-size stuffed llama rocker by Bev Blanchard of northern Michigan is $250.

Ehlert will display her painting of Deer Isle Bridge in Maine. Among the exhibits in which she's taken part are the Michigan Fine Arts Competition at the Detroit Institute of Arts; Our Town exhibit, The Community House in Birmingham; Visual Arts Association of Livonia, Livonia City Hall; Michigan Watercolor Society, and the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association.

"I think, it's about time we had fine art involved with the arts and crafts show," said Ehlert.

Village Buildings

Although the Hill House Museum will not be open for tours as at past Arts & Crafts Festivals, interpreters stationed in the four village buildings will talk about the historical aspects, according to Greenmead program supervisor Marian Renaud.

"The museum, while not open during the festival, is open every Sunday from 1-4 p.m. ($2 adults, $1 children)," said Renaud.

"The arts and crafts fair and fine arts exhibit will enable people to tour the village buildings for free although donations are always accepted.

"It's a unique opportunity and some of the interpreters will be dressed in historic costumes."

Art blossoms

Grandchildren Sydnee and Pierce triggered Poulet's interest in painting flowers one afternoon about three years ago as she instilled the basics of painting in the two. Poulet's new floral works vibrate with warm colors like red, the landscapes with cool greens and blues.

Poulet began inventing the creatures in "Jenika's Animals" in 1990. Jenika was Poulet's nickname for her mother, a concert pianist. The images in the paintings flow one into the other. Strange creatures, some half human, others looking like elephants, prance and pose in all sorts of positions.

"I don't want to be a camera," said Poulet. "I want to be an artist. My paintings and prints come from my imagination."

Poulet came to the U.S. at age 25. A bad first marriage left her in despair. Throughout her art career, Poulet has battled depression. Son Peter Kirsh, a Plymouth contractor, brought the sun back into her life when he built a solarium/studio onto the back of her Livonia home.

"The solarium is what inspired me to paint flowers," said Poulet, a member of the Scarab Club in Detroit. "Until then, I'd painted in the basement."

Poulet credits her husband of six years, Jose Cesareo-Perez, with making it possible to pursue her art.

"Jose's been so generous and allowed me to have that peace and contentment to work as an artist," said Poulet.

Since 1983, Dennis Kapp has been a strong supporter of Poulet's. Three years ago, Kapp loaned her a studio in Detroit. The space allows her to paint 40-by 60-inch works.

Poulet has a long list of accomplishments as an artist. She has exhibited at the Swann Gallery, Urban Park-Detroit Art Center, Galerie Biegas, and Swords into Plowshares Peace Center and Gallery in Detroit. Poulet is also a dedicated volunteer for the arts. In January, she was appointed to the board of the Wayne County Council for the Arts. Seven years ago she joined the Windsor Printmaker's Forum and now serves on the board. She is represented by the Sherry Washington Gallery and the National Conference of Artists Gallery in the Fisher Building in downtown Detroit.

"We decided to show Jeanne's work because of her reputation in the arts community, and because the abstracts bring something new to the library fine arts gallery," said Bob Sheridan, commission president.

in for children," said Skaggs. "We'll have sand art and students from the Stevenson High School art department doing face painting."

The Arts & Crafts Festival is the primary fundraiser of the Livonia Arts Commission. A little over $20,000 was raised last year, according to Suzanne Montambeau in the community resources department at Livonia City Hall. In the past, proceeds were spent to buy the bronze "Wisdom and Innocence" sculpture in front of the Livonia Civic Center Library, give money for fine arts scholarships for high school and college students and grants for the Livonia Symphony Orchestra.

"The money goes for a number of arts programs and projects including Music Under the Stars, improvements to the environmental sculpture at city hall, grants to independent groups like Trinity House Theatre and the Livonia/Redford Theatre Guild, expenses for the library art gallery, and to purchase art works for the city's collection," said Montambeau.

Visitors feasting on a variety of foods will also be contributing to a good cause. A portion of the food vendor sales during the festival go to nonprofit organizations such as Very Special Arts (gyros, grinders and corn dogs), Livonia Symphony Orchestra (chicken), Redford/Livonia Theatre Guild (strudels and fruit shakes), Friends of Greenmead (Polish and Italian sausage), and the Livonia Historical Commission (pizza and fresh lemonade).

Author Kirsch reveals provocative, disturbing Bible

By Jonathan Kirsch
(Ballantine Books, $27)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

In a promotional note on Jonathan Kirsch's provocative new book, religious writer Karen Armstrong writes, "This ... book is an important reminder that God cannot always be identified with respectable middle-class morality, and that some of the more shocking stories in the Bible have hard but necessary lessons for us today."

Kirsch

Kirsch has chosen seven disturbing Old Testament stories to show that the Bible is considerably more complex and challenging than our Sunday school ideas allow.

"The Bible is thought of as prim and proper – and it's not," Kirsch said in a telephone interview. "It wasn't written as Sunday School stories for children. These stories were written for an adult audience by sophisticated, worldly people."

Kirsch is a lawyer who specializes in intellectual property law, a writer and a Bible scholar and book columnist for the Los Angeles Times who often writes about religious subjects. A practicing Jew, Kirsch belongs to a conservative congregation.

"I am an observing and believing person of the Jewish faith. I would add, too, that I come to the Bible with open eyes and an open mind," he said. "I'm willing to entertain the notion that the Bible has something more going on."

An open mind and a willingness to give up notions of God as a genteel spirit who demands strict moral behavior is necessary to fully understand the often bizarre behavior of the biblical God. Kirsch's book retells the Bible stories in a sprightly modern language and then explores the multiple meanings of each story as explored by biblical scholars over the centuries.

And what strange stories they are. In "Lot and his Daughters," the daughters seduce their father to preserve the human race; in "The Rape of Dinah," Dinah's brothers extract a spectacularly vicious revenge for what might not have been rape at all; in the title story, Tamar disguises herself as a prostitute to seduce her father-in-law to assert her family rights.

In each of these and the other stories, right and wrong, good and evil are not clear cut. The role of God and what God wants are also murky. As presented by Kirsch, the Bible is a continuing discussion with the Deity about what is right and what is wrong.

"It's fundamental in the Bible that humanity is invited to engage in a dialogue and even in a debate with God," Kirsch said. "It starts with Abraham when Abraham engages in a debate with God about the fate of Sodom. He has the audacity to haggle with God. And this happens again and again in the Bible."

Kirsch is aware that others have a different view of the Bible. He said he respects the view of those who believe the Bible to be the revealed word of God, but he said scholars have long believed the Bible is a collection of books and stories created over a long period of time by different people.

"That's not an impious or irreverent way of looking at God," Kirsch said.

"If you believe God is mysterious and ineffable – and the Bible, itself, says He is – we can only get sideways glances at God. It's like the story of the blind men and the elephant."

The strangest story is that of Zipporah and Moses. In a few brief lines (Exodus 4:24-26) the Bible tells us that God tried to kill Moses but was restrained when Moses' wife Zipporah performed circumcision on their infant son.

Kirsch quotes philosopher Martin Buber as saying we have a moral duty to stand up to God as Zipporah does in this story.

But the story itself is mysterious and vague, even as to who is doing what to whom.

"That's the central question," Kirsch said. "What's going on here. There are secret and hidden meanings to many of the sacred texts."

Kirsch provocatively discusses the meaning of circumcision and the meaning of sexuality in the Bible. Many acts that are considered sinful in conventional morality are condoned and even lauded in the Bible. In the title story, Tamar's seduction of Judah leads to the continuance of the family line that results in David and eventually the Messiah (in both Christian and Jewish understanding of that word).

The Bible also presents David (God's favorite) as a deeply flawed man whose sins are constantly forgiven because he serves God's higher purpose. And God is also presented in ways that seem cruel, capricious, amoral.

Kirsch said the overarching message of the Bible is the preservation of life and that many of these stories suggest that this principle often supersedes all others.

Kirsch will sign and discuss his book 7:30 p.m. Monday at the Border's in Farmington Hills, 30995 Orchard Lake Road

BOOKS

Journalist's first novel engrossing thriller

Dark Rage
By Lowell Cauffiel
(Piannacle, $5.99, 349 pp)

VICTORIA DIAZ

Readers are probably most familiar with Lowell Cauffiel via his true crime stories. The most recent, "Eye of the Beholder," is the story of a Battle Creek news anchor woman murdered by her husband. "Dark Rage" is the Chelsea writer's first novel, and though it may not match the depth of the true crime accounts, it has its moments and makes for an engrossing, even eye-opening read. I'd advise not delving into it while winging across the friendly skies, however, especially if you feel more secure with both feet firmly planted on terra firma.

The story opens in a Detroit suburb on the day before Thanksgiving as a deeply disturbed Vietnam veteran coolly and methodically shoots his wife in the head with a Mini-Master Black Widow .22 revolver.

Soon after, he's packed three more revolvers, one rifle, and four boxes of ammo and headed for Detroit Metro Airport. It's the busiest flying day of the year, and he's chosen the time carefully. Laurel King, a disgruntled air traffic controller (and quintessential control freak) is clearly a man with a score to settle. We will see what it is, and the bizarre way he intends to settle it.

Much of this book's strength lies in Cauffiel's extensive background research, which lends substantial plausibility and immediacy to the story. By the time you've finished reading, you may feel almost as if you could recognize an air traffic controller on sight.

Also, you may feel as if you could sit down in one of the those dimly lit airport towers and do a little air traffic controlling yourself. You'll know how ground traffic is handled vs. planes newly aloft vs. planes leaving Detroit's air space. You'll learn how different objects are represented by slightly varying shades of green on that flashing radar scope. You'll find out just how much redundancy is at work in a control tower, what happens to avoid disaster when a radar system fails, what's available for back-up even when all else fails. You'll also get a crash course in police work, too – especially what goes on during a hostage situation these days. Although airport/police jargon and countless acronyms get in the way occasionally, Cauffiel has a way of weaving in most of the information so that it's a seamless part of the nail-biting drama.

Some crackling dialogue and straight-forward prose go far to keep things moving apace, although the story is at times hindered by a scattershot format that can be as confusing as the overcrowded cast. Some players (tough-talking union boss, thick-headed cop, loquacious Hispanic, womanizing airline pilot etc.) seem too much like types straight out of central casting.

Cauffiel's leading men fare better. The explosive Kring (nicknamed, appropriately, "Bat") is a rather complex villain with a heartbreaking past, painted not in blacks and whites, but in shades of gray. The author's insight into a twisted mind and how a murderous fantasy can take shape there is fascinating and altogether convincing, making the bad guy ultimately the most credible character in the story.

Kring's main nemesis, Detective Sgt. Jack Riker (of the Metro Airport Police), has his own shades of gray, plus plenty of rough edges, too. In a sense, these two are opposite sides of the same battered coin. Weapon-carrying, 46-year-old Vietnam vets, scarred by alcohol, they are nostalgia prone loners traveling different routes – one the cop, one the criminal. Each is marked, above all, by a singular dedication and attachment to his work.

Probably due in large part to his experience as a journalist and a true crime writer, Cauffiel possesses a special knack for working real-life events into a tale of fiction. Here, most notably, Metro Airport's Flight 255 disaster and its aftermath plays a significant role. If you've ever visited the Nomads' travel club hangar at Metro (which served as a temporary morgue after the crash), you may never look at it quite the same way after reading of it here.

Though comments about printing glitches in the production of a book rarely find their way into a book review, I feel obligated to remark on it here since it's so appallingly extensive on these pages. Actually, I've never seen anything quite like this. Did nothing with a pulse proof this copy? Such a cavalier approach to words on the part of a major publisher may not be illegal, but it should be.

Janet Kauffman, poet and fiction writer, will speak at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 1 at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association, 1516 South Cranbrook Road in Birmingham. For information, call (810) 644-0866.

Born in Pennsylvania, Kauffman grew up on a tobacco farm and now lives in Hudson, Michigan. She is the author of three collections of short fiction- "Characters on the Loose," "Places in the World a Woman Could Walk" and "Obscene Gestures for Women, two novels- "Collaborators" and "The Body in Four Parts," and two books of poetry- "The Weather Book" and "Where the World Is."

She is the recipient of numerous awards including a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts, two Pushcart Prizes, and the Rosenthal Award for Fiction from the American Academy-Institute of Arts and Letters.

CLASSES BEGIN

VAAL will also offer workshops on marbling, watercolor monotypes and exotic still life during the summer session.

Class fees range from $30 to $80. VAAL members receive a discount. To register or for more information, call (313) 427-9767 or 427-9683.

OPENING RECEPTION

The dress code for the opening reception of "The Clothes Show: Objects For and About Clothes" at the Center Galleries is retro, radical chic, drop-dead glamour, fashion victim, gender bender, clotheshorse, creative black tie, and grunge- take your pick.

The reception takes place 5-8 p.m. Friday, June 6 at the Center for Creative Studies gallery, 15 East Kirby in Suite 107 of the Park Shelton Building in Detroit.

Among the artists exhibiting work are Urban Jupena, Tracy Gallup, Stanley Rosenthal, Claudia Shepard, Ed Fraga, Robert Bielat, Judy Eliyas, and Boswell.

The show continues through July 18. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Call (313) 874-1955.

POTTERY SALE

Faculty and students of the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association will sell functional wares and decorative ceramics at their semi-annual Pottery Sale 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, June 7.

Cups, bowls, plates, platters, pitchers, bird baths, and candle holders are among the items available for sale.

Also of note: The Palette and Brush Club exhibit more than 50 art works through June 14. The show was juried by Elaine and Eve Redmond, owners of the Clique Gallery in Royal Oak.

The BBAA is at 1516 South Cranbrook Road, north of 14 Mile in Birmingham. Call (810) 644-0866.

BEGINNING CERAMICS

The Garden City Fine Arts Association is sponsoring classes in basic ceramics beginning Saturday, June 7 at The Art Gallery, 29948 Ford Road in Garden City.

Carol Taft will teach ages 6-8 from noon to 2 p.m., and ages 9-12 from 2:30-4:30 p.m. The cost is $50 for four weeks.

Taft will also instruct adults in the basics of ceramics 6-9 p.m. Thursdays for four weeks starting June 5. Beginning June 6, Detroit artist Lin Baum teaches adult drawing and painting 1-4 p.m. Fridays for four weeks. The cost for adult classes is $50.

COLLEGE CONCERT

Schoolcraft College's music department and continuing education services will present a recital by pianist Logan Skelton 7 p.m. Tuesday, June 10 in the Liberal Arts Theater on campus.

The recital, part of a two-day workshop for piano teachers, is free and open to the public. The program includes Beethoven's "Sonata in A major, Op. 2, No. 2," Skelton's "Civil War Variations," Bartok's "Dance Suite," and Albright's "The Dream Rags."

Skelton is a professor of piano at the University of Michigan School of Music and has served on the faculties at Manhattan School of Music and Southwest Missouri State University. He holds degrees from Loyola University, Eastman School of Music and Manhattan School of Music.

CREATIVE DRAMATICS

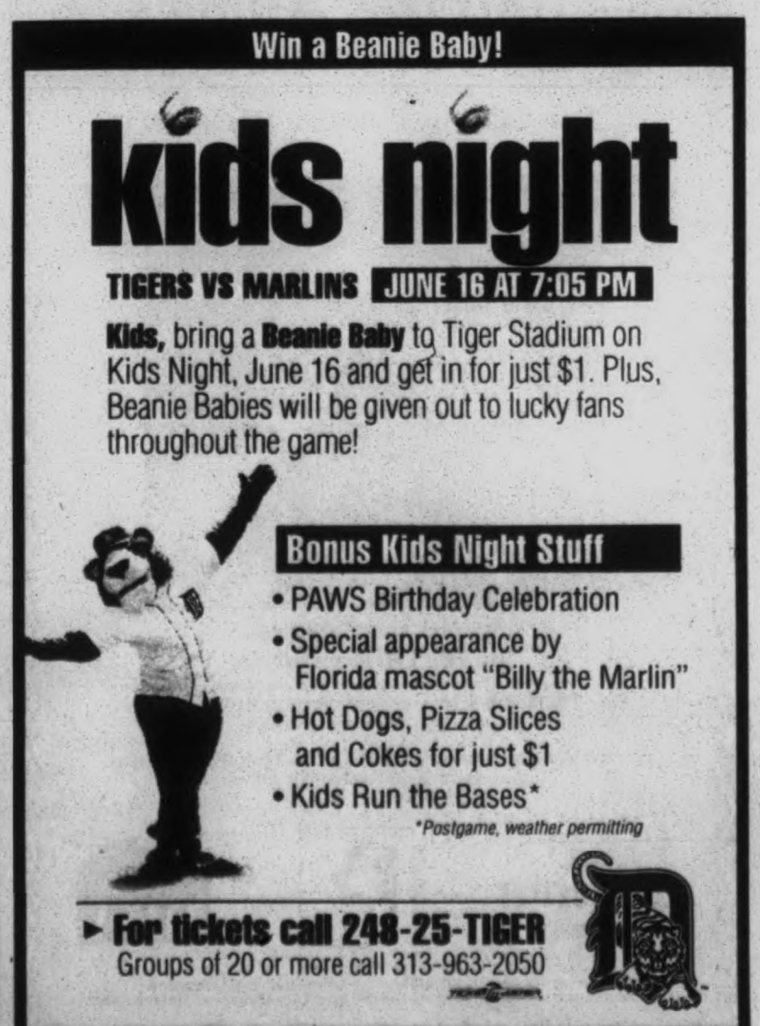
"Edgewise" will air tonight at 8 p.m. and 11 p.m. on the MS-NBC cable network.



SPECIAL EVENT

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

Weeks before the grand opening, large pieces of plywood were placed over the broken stained-glass windows at the Southfield Centre for the Arts. Vandals left their mark – again. Skeptics probably shook their heads and warned, "I told you so."

Yet for those who've stood steadfast for as long as 20 years to see the center become a reality, it was another moment to endure.

Without missing a beat, an idea was readily accepted to transform the shards of colored glass into a sculpture held together by copper wire. The art work will hang along the walls and ceiling near the entrance to the refurbished auditorium.

Perhaps endurance has given the center's supporters a perspective of what's possible where some see only despair. After all, few projects in the city's recent history embody that spirit of possibility as the Southfield Centre for the Arts on Southfield Road, just north of the expressway, opening Friday, June 6.

What: Southfield Centre for the Arts Grand Opening sponsored by the City of Southfield Parks and Recreation and the Cultural Arts Division
When: Friday-Sunday, June 6-8. The center opens 7 p.m. Friday, June 6. Opening weekend hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, June 7, and noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, June 8.
Where: 24350 Southfield Road, just south of 10 Mile.
Entertainment: More than 30 free performances of dance, drama, and music including blues, jazz, choral, and orchestral will be presented during grand opening weekend. Call (810) 424-9022 for information.
Highlights:
■ Mosaic Youth Theatre's "Mosaic Tales" with Michigan Opera Theatre's "Broadway to Hollywood Revue" 8 p.m. Friday, June 6; $10 general admission.
■ The Coasters, The Platters, The Drifters with special guests Heidi Hepler and Michele Ramo 8 p.m. Saturday, June 7; $25, $30, reserved.
■ Michigan Association of Artists Exhibit, and Park West Gallery presentation: The Works of Anatole Krasnyansky.

Unifying the arts community

"This is an investment in the community where everyone can come together regardless of race, gender, ethnic background and religious beliefs," said Robert Block, city administrator for Southfield.

Many local art centers provide performance spaces, said Block, but few offer as many classrooms and rehearsal spaces for a community that reflects the American melting pot as much as any other city.

"The arts community has been fragmented," said Block. "Some groups meet at high schools, halls or any place they can. We now have a place where they all can meet. This unifies the arts."

During the much-anticipated three-day celebration, the center will feature a packed schedule of arts activities including performances of dance, music, poetry readings and a fine art exhibit. The intent is to showcase a bustling arts center that provides classroom arts instruction, rehearsal spaces and high-quality auditoriums for community groups and professional performances.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony begins Saturday's events, highlighted by an evening concert of the legendary singing groups The Coasters, The Platters and The Drifters.

To date, Southfield has provided about $4 million to buy and renovate the former B'nai David Synagogue. Another $3 million is expected to be spent on renovations throughout the 55,000-square-foot facility.

This fall, the city will seek a $1 million Kresge grant and must raise at least another $1 million to match it, said Marlowe Belanger, vice president of the city's cultural arts division.

Most of the additional money will pay for further renovations to one of the two auditoriums, a converted temple with bench seating. The tentative plan includes building second-floor dressing rooms above the stage.

"We're only at the first of three phases," she said. "We're opening the doors for the community to come visit the facility. But the appeal is regional. It's open to art groups from Detroit to Rochester."

A formal survey conducted in the early 1980s indicated a need to provide a place for local arts groups. The city recognized that need. But the debate about the value of spending tax money for the arts often paralleled the broader national debate on the issue, which often slipped into political grandstanding. Or reflected the view that art was a luxury, not a necessity, and that artists should fend for themselves.

"For the last 20 years, many people didn't think we should be spending our time on the arts center," said Albert Scaglione, a board member of the federation of the arts, a council of 53 arts groups throughout metro Detroit.

"Many of us realized Southfield is at a crossroads," said Scaglione, who also owns Park West Gallery on Northwestern Highway. "It's critical to have stability in our cultural activities and do it in a way that's not only for the upper clsses, but for all people."

Cultivating understanding

At a time of reduced public funding for the arts, Southfield is boldly staking a claim as a city with a progressive cultural vision and gutsy civic leadership.

"Southfield has taken a leader-

Creative challenges ahead for Centre to remain self-sufficient

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

Not since the Macomb Center for the Performing Arts opened in 1982 has a major arts center been unveiled in metro Detroit. In many ways, the challenges ahead for the Southfield Centre for the Arts could parallel those faced by the Macomb Center.

Fifteen years ago, the 144,000-square-foot center on the campus of Macomb Community College was built for $9 million. Considering the center's outstanding acoustics, the facility would probably cost twice as much today.

In the early 1980s, the center was financed by a county tax. Until recently, it was largely supported by the college. It wasn't until three years ago that the Macomb Center was in the black and on its way to becoming financially self-sufficient, said Lynne Hoover, marketing director.

"It's taken a while to get an identity," she said. "For a while, people thought we only had small college productions."

On the contrary, with 340 activities in the first three-quarters of its fiscal year, the Macomb Center is one the busiest venues in the country, presenting Broadway musicals and a variety of music series, including jazz, blues, country and opera. They also rent their 1,250-seat auditorium and a "black box" space to local theater and dance companies.

The breakthrough, said Hoover, came about five years ago when the center began to promote big-name performers. A sophisticated database of interested county residents and a glitzy brochure were instrumental to their success, she said.

"The key is to define what the community wants," said Larry Carrico, Macomb Center production manager. "We've defined our community as seniors, those interested in country, children's theater and Oldies acts. Plus, we're affordable. We don't have $45 tickets."

Marketing is hardly a concern at the Plymouth Community Arts Council. Since moving into the renovated former Jehovah's Witness church at Sheldon and Junction, they've presented art classes, youth choirs, recitals and exhibited work of local fine artists.

Before moving into their new space, the Joanne Winkleman Hulce Center for the Arts, the Plymouth arts group gathered at a small downtown storefront. "We've been fiscally conservative," said Stella Green, vice president of the arts council. "We have a pay-as-you-go philosophy."

Vice president of the Plymouth Community Arts Council

The $360,000 renovation will be paid through a Michigan Council for the Arts Cultural Affairs grant, a state equity grant, membership fees and donations from local corporations.

In the Farmington area, where 24 arts groups have formed the Farmington Arts Council, there's been talk about turning the former Mercy Center at 11 Mile and Middlebelt into an area-wide arts center.

"I don't think it's in the cards," said Dan Potter, head of the Farmington Hills Parks and Recreation. The department provides recreational programing services in the Farmington area.

"When the city purchased that facility, it was intended for a recreational and cultural meeting place for seniors," he said.

A formal survey of Farmington Hills resident conducted in preparation for a parks and recreation tax request found that a majority favored an art center.

ship role to establish a model for other communities to centralize an arts organization that provides for a group facility," said Lucius Theus, president of the federation for the arts.

"We already had many arts activities in Southfield, but once we had a place to help focus our efforts, the synergy of all the groups came together," said Theus, a private-sector business consultant and retired Air Force major general.

"As a city, we're going to accomplish our goal faster than if we'd have left it up to these groups to find a way for themselves," he said. The goal, according to Theus, goes well beyond encouraging artistic expression. Ultimately, he said, the center is a tangible means to build cross-cultural understanding.

In the mid 1960s, Theus served on a committee studying race relations in the armed forces. The committee proposed an ethnic understanding program to minimize racial friction. It succeeded, according to Theus, in reducing the frequency and intensity of racially motivated incidents. A lively arts center with diverse ethnic arts groups mingling with each other will cultivate wider tolerance, said Theus.

Like an evolving piece of art and the city itself, the Southfield Centre is a "work in progress." While this week the focus is on accomplishing a 20-year dream, the long-term success depends on whether the 80 arts groups who gave commitments to use the facility will indeed make the center their home.

"When we first acquired the building, plugs and bare wires were hanging from the ceiling. There was more work to be done than we anticipated," said Block. "We told the arts groups that we'd provide the facility, but the operational funds would have to come from them."

Yet there is no formal process whereby arts groups can reserve and rent the facility. For instance, rental fees, said Belanger, are negotiated based on what the groups can afford.

Ten days prior to the grand opening, city officials joked about wearing hard hats to the opening. But that shouldn't be necessary. Most of the painting had been completed. Carpenters were putting the finishing touches on the walls and laying carpet in the bold-color-scheme hallways.

Meanwhile, in her office not far from the cluttered general-purpose auditorium, Belanger wondered whether the specially ordered silk draperies would arrive on time. She didn't seem bothered.

"I've been at this for 18 years," she said. "It seems like such a long time. Then again, it seems like such a short time."

Either way, the Southfield Centre for the Arts has been a long time coming.

He found a $185,000 condo in the trash.

Patricia Shea, vice president of Rock Homes is used to having people learn about Shire of Hamlet Village Condominiums from relatives, friends or from people who drive by and stop in.

She also gets great response to her advertisements in our New Homes section. But in her 16 years in the business, she's never had someone discover one of her developments in the trash.

But there it was, crumpled up in the waste basket at the YMCA.

With a feature story about Rock Homes.

Someone had enjoyed their hometown news and then put it in the right place at the right time to be discovered by a gentleman headed for the steam room and looking for something to read while there.

He found and bought just what he and his wife had spent months looking for—a condo at Shire of Hamlet Village.

Is there a message hidden here? Could be.

Perhaps it's that you never know where you'll find what you've been searching for.

Or maybe it's not that cosmic. Maybe it's that you will save yourself a lot of looking when you have your hometown newspaper delivered right to your doorstep.

BY ELEANOR & RAY HEALD
SPECIAL WRITERS

A visit to the San Diego Wild Animal Park in Escondido, Calif., 35 miles north of downtown San Diego, is incomparable!

A 2,200 acre exotic animal and botanical reserve dedicated to the preservation and protection of endangered species was, until now, principally viewed by monorail. An incredible 50-minute five-mile ride still transports visitors to see African and Asian animals exhibited in expansive natural enclosures. But now, guests visting the Park have an opportunity to set out on foot with field guide in hand to experience the greatest safari adventure outside Africa.

Covering 30 acres and constructed at a cost of more than $7 million, the "Heart of Africa" features diverse habitats and wildlife of the exotic African continent in a unique way. It is the largest and most diverse safari experience in the western hemisphere. Expeditioners take a journey by foot through dense forest, flourishing wetlands, sprawling savannas and open plains to discover Africa's biodiversity, while encountering more than 260 animals, representing 20 species of birds and 11 species of mammals.

Without apparent barriers, you come close to the truly fascinating creatures meandering the land. Visitors have the unparalleled opportunity to hand-feed Baringo giraffe. There are also okapi, the only known living relative of the giraffe from Zaire, African warthogs and South African Cheetah, to name only a few.

Streams twisting in and out of the ever-changing typography eventually connect with two thundering waterfalls that empty into a thriving lagoon. Across a floating foot bridge, the waterhole area reveals five islands with exhibits of flamingo, shoebill storks, kibuyu colobus monkeys (the most arboreal of African primates) and Allen's swamp monkeys, one of the few primate species that swim. Because these monkeys live in forested swamp areas of the eastern Congo in western Zaire, their color camouflages them. Their webbed feet help propel them through the water. At the lush waterfalls, antics of the swamp and colobus monkeys can be viewed from a higher elevation.

A research camp has been setup on the island and features simulated living quarters (tent, kitchen and shower), a cargo container converted for use by the researcher, a fire ring with seating for special lectures and other African wildlife brought to the station for closer observation.

Two special animals, an aardvark and an Abyssinian ground hornbill are permanently housed on the island, while another 10 creatures, including a pygmy falcon, a lilac-breasted roller, leopard tortoise, a spring haas and fennec foxes are brought to the research station each day by a field researcher. The researcher exposes visitors to items typically used in the field and encourages adventurers to participate in a number of field-type activities. The researcher also shares important information about actual field projects ongoing around the world.

Authentic plants from Central and South Africa have been used to create the very diverse habitats. Included are eight different species of acacias, proteas, aloes, corn lilies and many more exotic and unique plants.

The circuitous safari path is 3/4 mile long. It takes an average of two hours to enjoy it completely. For the "Heart of Africa" adventure, no passports or shots are required. Trekkers are, however, encouraged to pack binoculars or field glasses and a camera with a good supply of color film.

The San Diego Wild Animal Park is operated by the non-profit Zoological Society of San Diego, which also operates the San Diego Zoo and the Center for Reproduction of Endangered Species.

Gundry: Undrafted shining star

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

Really, it's a shame it's coming to an end.

What a road Ed Gundry has traveled. And through his entire journey, there have been two significant consistencies:

•His success;

•The lack of recognition he has received for it.

The Plymouth Salem graduate (1992) always had the ability to play NCAA Division I baseball. It was just a matter of where.

He started his collegiate travels at Eastern Michigan, but "conflicting personalities" with then-coach Roger Coryell prompted Gundry to leave after a few games his freshman season.

He was planning to switch to Michigan State, until talking to University of Detroit Mercy baseball coach Bob Miller.

Gundry transferred to UDM. "I haven't regretted it since," he said. "I've enjoyed my entire time there."

Even while playing for UDM, Gundry's travels continued. He started in left field as a freshman, moved to first base as a sophomore, played first and third as a junior and this year, as a senior, he played third.

And his performance? "I'm sorry to say I'm losing him," said Miller. "He's a great talent, one of the hardest workers I've ever seen. And he's one of the best hitters I've ever seen in my 35 years of coaching."

Gundry certainly proved that. Throughout his Titan career (he never missed a game), his batting average went in just one direction — up. He hit .326 as a freshman, .335 as a sophomore, .362 as a junior and, this past season, .388.

It wasn't until this just-completed season that Gundry received recognition worthy of his accomplishments. He was named to the all-Midwestern Collegiate Conference's first team.

He was a second-team selection last year, despite hitting .362 with 13 doubles, six home runs and 39 runs batted in in 40 games.

Apparently, knocking in a run a game wasn't good enough. This season, Gundry outdid himself: He hit .388 and tied the UDM single-season record for homers with 18, and he drove in a team-high 50 runs — in 49 games.

All of which helped guide the

Titan triumphs

Not a lot was expected from University of Detroit Mercy's baseball team this season, but the Titans proved the predictors wrong by winning the Midwestern Collegiate Conference championship.

UDM finished 27-24, losing twice to Troy State (Troy, Ala.) in an NCAA Regional play-on series.

Among the local players to excel were Dean Rovinelli, a senior first baseman from Plymouth Canton HS. Rovinelli played in all 49 games this season, batting .287 with 10 doubles, two triples, six home runs and 34 runs batted in. He was third on the team in doubles, homers and RBI.

Juan Sanchez, a sophomore catcher from Redford Catholic Central, played in 46 games, batting .233 with 11 RBI. Two other CC graduates, both freshmen, had solid seasons: Chris Karney batted .254 with two homers and 15 RBI, and Mike Daguanno hit .243 with three homers and 31 RBI.

Force on top

The Canton Force, an under-13 girls premier soccer team, captured its division title at the Canton Invitational Tournament over Memorial Day weekend. The Force defeated the Livonia Meteors 2-1 in the title game.

Team members are Sarah Amos, Cindy Bennett, Lindsay Birchmeier, Monica Blossom, Meghan Bruner, Jennifer Curran, Jessica Dean, Katie Good, Jennifer Kassem, Rachel Lindman, Lauren Marzolf, Sarah Plymale, Natalie Thomas, Erica Trainor, Allison Vernile and Kim Wood.

Recreation offerings

•Sand volleyball leagues are now forming. Sponsored by Canton Parks and Recreation Services, all play will be co-ed; games will be on the volleyball courts in Heritage Park.

There are no residency requirements. Cost is $48 per team (which includes T-shirts to all players and an award to the top team), with an eight-player limit per team. The intermediate league will play on Tuesday evenings, the advanced league on Wednesday evenings.

Registration deadline is June 23. Call (313) 397-5110 for details.

•Junior tennis camps will be offered by Canton Parks and Recreation Services throughout the summer. The camps will be divided into two age groups: Little Swingers (4-6 year olds) and Juniors (7-15 year olds).

Cost for Little Swingers is $30 for Canton residents, $35 for non-residents; cost for Juniors is $70 for residents, $75 for non-residents. Cost includes a T-shirt to all campers.

The first session is June 23-26; the second, from July 7-10; the third, from July 21-24; and the fourth, from Aug. 4-7. All will be at Griffin Park.

Registration will be at Canton Parks and Recreation Services, 46000 Summit Parkway. Call (313) 397-5110 for details.

•A junior golf program for boys and girls, 8-17 years old, will begin June 23 at Fellows Creek in Canton. Participants receive six nine-hole rounds of golf, a golf clinic and a season-ending nine-hole tournament for $45.

Participants may golf unaccompanied by an adult on Mondays, or with an adult on weekdays and weekends for a discounted fee.

There are no residency requirements. Registration deadline is June 20. For further information, call (313) 397-5110.

•The Liberty Fest Sand Volleyball Tournament, sponsored by the Canton Parks and Recreation Services, will begin at 10 a.m. Sunday, June 22 at the Heritage Park sand volleyball court, located behind softball field No. 2.

Cost for the co-ed tournament is $30 per team; there are no residency requirements. Price includes T-shirts for all participants and an award to the winning team.

Addition

A pair of players were inadvertantly ommitted from the all-Western Lakes Activities Association baseball team listing.

Plymouth Salem's Alec Ras and Dave Barker should both have been included on the honorable mention listing.

Anyone interested in submitting items to Sports Roundup may send them to sports editor C.J. Risak, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, MI, 48150, or may FAX them to (313) 591-7279.

Powerful potential

BY RICHARD L. SHOOK
STAFF WRITER

He is 6-foot-10. He is left-handed. And he can throw a baseball through a rainy spring game without getting it damp.

In all of baseball there is only one like Westland's Ryan Anderson: 6-foot-10 left-hander Randy Johnson of the Seattle Mariners.

Which is why all of baseball is hot after the Dearborn Divine Child prep star. They see Anderson as a dominating southpaw capable of leading a team into the post-season.

But being one of a kind, or, more accurately, half of two of a kind, means drafting Ryan Anderson and signing Ryan Anderson could be two different things.

Gus and Connie Anderson, the mother and father of the prep prodigy, are fully versed in the economics of supply and demand in a free market economy.

Not for a youngster almost certain to be one of the first four players picked in the June 3 major league draft and who could easily be No. 1.

The Tigers are also considering reliever Matt Anderson of Rice University, prep outfielder Darnell McDonald of Cherry Creek, Colo., and outfielder J.D. Drew of Florida State.

Veteran Tiger watchers believe Matt Anderson has the inside track, in view of Detroit's desperate need for relief pitching plus the fact the 99-mph thrower could be ready sooner.

"I don't know what's going to happen," said Gus Anderson, retired from selling insurance for Metropolitan Life. "I really don't. That's the downside of being a parent, when your son has been promoted like Ryan has."

"You look at who's the best player," Detroit Tigers' General Manager Randy Smith said. "You look at who's going to make the most impact. I tend to lean toward pitchers. Because if you don't need them, somebody else does.

"Our philosophy is going to be to get the best player out there we can. It's very difficult to draft for need. Your needs change by the time the player gets to the major leagues."

Talent isn't the only criteria, though.

"There are four things we're taking into consideration," Smith said. "Ability, character, estimated time of arrival to the major leagues, and, fourth, signability."

Ahh, yes, money. On the one side you have major league teams which don't want to pay mega-bucks for something with a low success rate. On the other you have youngsters who feel their unique abilities have been chronically under-valued.

"I don't feel it does you a great deal of good to draft somebody you have no chance of signing," Smith said. "I don't care how much of a signing bonus you give out, the real money is to be made at the major league level."

But the $2 million bonus which was a record last summer is gone like last summer's flowers. The market changed when four players were set free from their drafted teams on a technicality and drew bonuses up to $10 million.

"You hear the negative things," Anderson said. "'We're not going to do this, to do that. We're not going to pay this, to pay that.'

"Two million dollars? What kind of sense is that?

"Steal my son? That's an affront to me, to my wife and to my son. But I haven't had an offer yet. I haven't heard anybody talk about money."

It's as complicated as dad playing one of son's video games. And just as baffling, until you get versed in the ground rules.

The economics of the situation have become very real to the Anderson family, ever since the major league scout came up to dad during the Team One national baseball showcase in Cincinnati, Ohio, last summer and said, 'Congratulations, your son just became a millionaire.'

"Our family has become very versed in this over the course of the last year," said Connie Anderson, art teacher in the Farmington Hills school district for 31 years. "We've handled things, educated ourselves far beyond the average family.

"My husband is pretty much on top of things. We really know what we're doing as far as an amateur parent situation."

But new ground rules are being formed. There will have to be gentle treading on both sides.

Anderson knows his son "wants to go with the Tigers. He wants to be a Michigander. They all know that. He wants to stay local."

He also has heard the whispers that it's not going to happen. He'd like to be surprised — but he doesn't expect to be.

"And I'm not necessarily sold on the Tigers," he said. "I don't know that the Tigers want to pay Ryan what he's worth.

"If they want to pay him under $2 million, like it (the four declared free agents) never hap-

Strong finish eyed: Plymouth Salem's Katie Murinas,, the only Observerland player to compete in the Class A golf tournament, had a solid first day Friday, shooting an 87 at East Lansing's Forest Akers to finish fifth individually — qualifying her for the second day of competition Saturday (the top 10 advanced). "She played well," said Salem coach Rick Wilson. "I'm very pleased for her." A total of 85 golfers were in the field.

Collegiate league joins Adray

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Perhaps it's a good omen.

The last time a collegiate team played under the same name at Ford Field – more than a decade ago – the Livonia Collegiate Baseball League flourished.

Livonia Adray, formerly known as Little Caesars, is a member of the new Adray Metro Baseball Association, a merger of the LCBL and the Adray Metro Baseball League.

The eight-team league includes three teams from the LCBL and five from the Adray Metro Baseball League.

Games will be played at three sites, including Ford Field. The other sites are MicMac Park in Windsor and Wyandotte's Memorial Park.

This is the first full week of action.

Four of the five teams from the Adray Metro Baseball League have no age restrictions. Some of the players are in their late 20s and 30s and have professional baseball experience.

The fifth team from the Adray Metro Baseball League is the Lake Area Rams, a collegiate team coached by Rick Berryman, who is also Redford Union's skipper.

The Rams will join Livonia Adray, Livonia DCI and Hines Park in the Collegiate Division. Collegiate teams' players cannot turn 20 during the season.

The other division, called the Adray Metro Baseball Division, will consist of four unlimited age teams: Troy Jet Box, Windsor Stars, Windsor Selects and Downriver Adray.

The new league gives the three teams remaining from the LCBL a new lease on life. Teams dropping out in recent years left the league's future undecided before the merger.

Lyle Trudell of the Livonia Parks and Recreation Department is glad those troubles are past tense. The new league also has dropped some of the residency requirements for each team.

"Past troubles I think were not so much reality as they were created by individuals just talking, trying to find problems," Trudell said. "Most of those indivuduals are gone now."

Each team plays a 28-game round-robin schedule and each game counts in the final standings. The winner of the Collegiate Division will be eligible for a berth to the All-American Amateur Baseball Association national championship in Johnstown, Pa., according to Trudell.

There will be no league playoffs, Trudell said.

Ford Field will be the site of double-headers on Wednesday and Fridays and four games on Sundays.

The Rams' first weekend of play is a busy one for Berryman, whose high school team was to play in a Class A district 24 hours earlier.

Berryman said it's a dream, not an inconvenience, to have two seasons overlap.

"To me I've died and gone to Heaven," Berryman said.

The road trips to Windsor will be nothing new for the Rams, who made the trip several times last year. It's hard to go the entire season without visiting the casino.

They better remember to have enough change leftover to cross the bridge.

"My wife June said 'I thought we were just stopping for a minute.' I lied," Berryman recalled. "I love those Candadian games, but I donated to the Canadian economy about 100 bucks."

John Moraitis, the long-time Little Caesars coach, has the same title with Livonia Adray.

Mike George, the former Madonna University coach, coaches DCI. Hines Park again will be coached by Dave Carroll.

Moraitis hopes the new teams bring the league recognition.

"I'm not donig hand springs but I like baseball and I'm competitive and like to be around good ballplayers," Moraitis said. "There are more teams to play. Everyone has to play the same amount of times. I have a a decent team. We'll be competitive. I got about seven or eight pitchers."

Berryman played as a collegian for a team sponsored by Redford Township in the Detroit Free Press League, which played some of its games at Ford Field.

He hopes some of that excitement from his youth returns.

"It was big time baseball back then," Berryman said. "My recollections are the hill would be lined with people in chairs. My hope is that you're going to see some of the best local college players in the area playing baseball. My team is a hodge podge from all over. From Diviison I, II and III these are good college ballplayers."

Titans to the MCC championship and a shot at gaining a berth in the NCAA regionals opposite the University of Alabama.

The Salem grad holds the UDM career record for hits (240) and at-bats (681); his career batting average is .352. He also tied the school's career mark for doubles (50), is second in RBI (161), tied for third in runs (145) and is fourth in homers (32).

And yet, despite all this, Gundry has never been drafted by a pro team. "He's the hardest working kid, and you never know he's around," said Miller. "Eddie has a short, quick stroke when he swings and he uses the whole ball park.

"He can hit the ball with power to the opposite field."

Gundry's fielding at third was good, if not great: "The more he played there, the better he got," Miller said.

So why is he playing for the Birmingham Lynch and Sons team this summer, while starting his off-field career in computer technology with Chrysler?

Ed Gundry
Top hitter

"I don't know," admitted Miller.

"I talked to a couple of teams," Gundry said, "and they showed some interest. If I get a call, I get a call. I'm not getting psyched up for it though."

His age — he turned 23 in January — is working against him, Gundry knows. So he's planning for his non-baseball career.

"My future's starting to take shape," he said. "I'm getting married in a year, we'll be looking for a house — I'll start doing all that grown-up stuff and give up being a kid."

Sounds like the pros' loss. Gundry's record is impressive, but it isn't relegated to his on-field performance.

He proved that this season, as one of UDM's four co-captains.

The Titans were good, it's true — but young in a lot of spots. Of the 11 every-day players who saw the most action, three were freshmen and two were sophomores.

"Yeah, we were the young and the old," said Gundry. "I tried to talk to (the younger players), tried to keep them up. I remember when I was a freshman; you hit the ball right at people two or three times in a row and you start getting down.

"I'd just tell them to forget it, to keep plugging away — that's baseball."

His efforts helped UDM peak at just the right time. The Titans started a pivotal road trip by losing to Northern Illinois May 3. That dropped their overall record to 20-21.

After that, however, they won seven of their next eight, including a 6-3 win over Wright State in the MCC championship game.

"A lot of the guys had never won anything so big," said Gundry, who had been instrumental in Salem's trek to the Class A state championship in '91. "It was pretty neat watching them run all over the field, hugging each other."

UDM's season ended with 7-4 and 5-4 losses to Troy State (Troy, Ala.) in an NCAA Regional play-in series, a sad conclusion to an otherwise superb 27-24 campaign.

"We were overachievers this year," summarized Miller. "I told them that we beat all the good teams we aren't supposed to beat, because you worked so hard.

"It was a beautiful, beautiful group because of the leadership of Gundry and (Mike) Pesci. They both deserve to be drafted."

It probably won't happen, but Gundry's is the kind of story deserving that type of finish. And as his numbers have always indicated, give him a chance and he'll be a success.

Pesci's final college stop is a winner

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

As a high school athlete, Mike Pesci was known more for his exploits on the football field than the baseball diamond, but that's like ancient history now.

Pesci, who starred in both sports at Farmington Harrison, chose to play baseball in college and made a name for himself as an outstanding hitter at the University of Detroit-Mercy.

He did so well this year the Midwestern Collegiate Conference made him its Player of the Year, raising Pesci's prospects for being selected in the Major League draft this week.

After his first season at UDM last year, Pesci was chosen by the Arizona Diamondbacks, but he decided to stay in college and use his fifth year of eligibility.

"Last year kinda caught me off guard," Pesci said. "You're drafted on Thursday, and they want you to leave on Saturday.

"I was a little overwhelmed by it all and how they try to lowball you. This year I've done a little more planning if it does happen."

Mike Pesci
league MVP

The 6-foot-2, 220-pound right fielder also had some unfinished business as a college player — both as an individual player and a team member.

"I knew I was a lot better than I showed my first year at UDM," he said, "and I knew we were good enough as a team to win the league. I knew we had the right chemistry.

"I thought I could do a lot more for the team. Personally, I had goals to do a lot better in every area of the game — cut down on strikeouts, increase average and walks, just a lot of little things."

As a result, Pesci did a lot of the big things well, too, while helping the Titans win the MCC tournament championship.

He led the team with a .409 batting average and 14 doubles. His 16 home runs and 46 RBI were second only to former Plymouth Salem star Ed Gundry's school-record 18 and 50.

Both had 136 total bases, which was 40 more than the next player. Pesci also had a .974 field percentage, making only two errors on 75 chances.

Being named Player of the Year "is a reflection on the team," Pesci said. "Without Eddie Gundry hitting behind me, I wouldn't have seen a lot of the pitches I saw.

"He missed getting Co-Player of the Year by one vote; he deserved it as much as I did. Those kinda things (post-season honors) come as they come. The better the team does the more recognition there is for everyone.

"We accomplished everything but one goal — getting to the NCAA tournament. The seniors wanted to finish off our careers with a bang, and I think we did."

In two seasons with the Titans, Pesci hit .361 with 22 doubles, 21 homers and 67 RBI. He scored 53 of 86 runs this year.

Pesci, who briefly attended Oakland Community College and made stops at Eastern Michigan, Yavapai College in Arizona and Henry Ford Community College, said he couldn't be happier about his two years at UDM.

"Coach (Bob) Miller is a good coach, but he gets a lot of players who are considered rejects," he said.

"For us to go to Michigan, Michigan State or Eastern and show them we can play baseball down here, too, that was great. A lot of times you get taken for granted. I had fun playing for coach Miller."

The pro scouts have been taking Pesci seriously, however. He most likely will be drafted Monday or Tuesday; the only question is in what round?

Pesci, who could be compared to former Detroit Tiger Kirk Gibson because of his team-first, play-to-win attitude, was taken in the 30th round a year ago and has a wait-and-see outlook this year.

"I'm trying to keep it in perspective; I'm not getting myself all worked up," Pesci said. "I know I won't be a top-round pick or anything. I'm confident I can compete wherever I go, but if it doesn't happen I'm not going to lose any sleep over it.

"A lot of players would trade their sister for a chance to get drafted. If I get drafted, it will be an honor to play baseball again; if I don't, it won't affect my lifelong goals."

Pesci signed papers, allowing Arizona to select him again if it wants. The Reds gave him an eye test, and the Pirates asked for medical records regarding supposed knee surgery. Pesci said he had a cyst removed from the knee, "and it was made out to be more than it was."

If he isn't drafted, Pesci said he won't try to catch on as a free agent or play independent ball. But he will continue to play Class A ball this summer with Birmingham Lynch.

"If I'm going to go, I'm going full out to make the Major Leagues," he said. "I'm not just going to kick around in the minor leagues, so I can tell stories someday.

"If I'm going to play baseball, I'm better off staying here, making money and getting treated better than I would anywhere playing in the minor leagues."

People might have forgotten Pesci was an all-state linebacker on Harrison's 1991 Class BB championship team, but football is now just a sport he played long ago.

"It is until I see my brothers (Joe and Dave) out there playing," he said. "I get the itch back in my shoulder to get out there and hit somebody.

"Baseball runs you down enough. If I had played football four or five years in college, I can't imagine where I'd be today. But it will always be a big part of what I did."

And so will baseball.

pened, they're like an ostrich with its head in the sand. That showed a little bit of the true value of a bonus baby.

Prep star John Patterson was one of the four set free because their drafting teams failed to make them a bona fide offer within 15 days of the draft. He wound up getting more than $6 million from the Arizona Diamondbacks.

Another was Matt White, whom Ryan roomed and pitched with on the U.S. Junior Olympic team. He was set free from San Francisco and wound up signing with Tampa Bay for more than $10 million.

"He got it," Anderson said, "because they bid it up. So that's what people will pay if they're really in the hunt for talent."

"You have to look at those four guys last year as a special circumstance," Smith said. "Certainly that has to be considered, but you have to deal with the majority of signings. I think you negotiate from a broader base. You consider, it's a factor, but you have to look at the majority of signings."

Of the Andersons, does Ryan's ceiling exceed Matt's? Decisions like those are what scouts, personnel directors and general managers make or break their reputations on. If they're wrong, they get second-guessed the rest of their lives.

"Ryan's muscle structure hasn't even caught up with his bone structure," his father said. "And when that happens, what is going to happen with his velocity?

"It's only going to get better. And that's what they bid on — potential. You get pretty high potential with Ryan Anderson. There is no ceiling."

He's left-handed, like Avery, but has a mid-90s fastball superior to the Taylor southpaw's. Avery, however, could hit, which added to his National League appeal.

Pitchers with the leverage, financial and physical, of being 6-foot-10 are rare. There are no 6-foot-6 or taller pitchers in the Hall of Fame.

So Gus and Connie Anderson rightly see something unique in Ryan. And like any parents they want only what's best for their son.

"I think our family is just so down to earth," Connie said, "that's secondary as far as 'here's all this money, what are we going to do with it?' His happiness is in the forefront."

"I don't want Ryan to be hurt by my statements," his father said. "But I want to be honest in my feelings.

"My feelings aren't necessarily going to Detroit (as to) where he goes, but for Ryan to make the decision. The end result is it's going to be his decision, and his only.

"Because it's going to be his life. We're going to be involved with him, helping him make that decision.

"June 3 is only one step to the majors. The next step is signing the contract. And in between that is negotiating. Who knows what's going to happen?"

If Anderson doesn't go to the Tigers, it's likely either Philadelphia, Anaheim, San Francisco or Toronto, which draft next, will select him.

There is a fallback position — a partial scholarship to play baseball at the University of Michigan under former major league left-hander Goeff Zahn.

Zahn couldn't offer a full ride because the odds on Anderson even reaching the school were slim. The family wasn't insulted because it bought into the MET college tuition plan.

It strains credibility to believe Anderson would turn down more than $2 million to go to college.

"It appears to us, the way things are going," Anderson said, "he won't be going to college. But you never know about the draft. Funny things happen."

Another part of the equation is rumors. Ryan Anderson has done things many adolescents do as they grow up.

Those things become family stories, a chuckle, one or two decades down the line. But when millions are at stake, the humor pales.

"I don't want to be talking about rumors," Gus Anderson said. The trouble with rumors, though, is they take on a life of their own. Embellishment and enlargement are part of the package.

It's also a fact of draft left that rumors get started and stories get told because certain teams (and/or players) hope to manipulate the system to their advantage.

A part of life is to profit from your mistakes. Don't make them again and try to help those who follow to avoid them.

"You watch this guy play," Smith said, "and he shows you tremendous makeup on the field.

"He has had some incidents off the field. We've tried to get into that as much as we can. We've talked to the family.

"The kid made a couple of mistakes. We wish they wouldn't have happened, they wish they wouldn't have happened. But we don't think it was anything that would make us delete him from our list.

"And as far as the conversations I've had with him, he's a nice kid. He handles himself well. He's very respectful."

It may come down to signing, though. If Detroit doesn't feel it can reach an agreement with the Andersons or their representatives, Alan and Randy Hendricks, then it will cross the lefthander off its list.

"Of the four guys, we've dealt with all their agents in the past," Smith said. "Scott (Boras, Drew's agent) is a tough negotiator. But that's not something to run away from. We're going to take the guy we feel has the highest ceiling."

In all likelihood, Drew has priced himself off the Tigers' list with his agent's public statements about wanting $10 million.

Most would consider it an upset should Detroit go with McDonald, who has a scholarship to be a running back at Texas. Still, he has an older brother doing well in the Yankees' organization and he's indicated he'll play baseball if they'll play ball with the money.

"There's logical offers, and illogical offers," his father said. "We want a logical offer."

Warriors win Relays

Rounding out the field was Dundee (54), Beverly Hills-Detroit Country Day (52), Greenhills (51), Flint Southwestern Academy (37), Ann Arbor Gabriel Richard (30), Whitmore Lake (12), Bloomfield Hills Roeper (9) and Plymouth Christian Academy (6).

The 800-meter relay foursome of Bill Garlick, Albert Cook, Dustin Campbell and Luke Horton combined for a time of 1:36.2.

Campbell and Ryan Ollinger won the long jump, while the Campbell and Cook both cleared 6 feet to win the high jump.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARINGS

The Wayne County Commission will hold public hearings to:

1. Establish a Wayne County Brownfield Redevelopment Authority for a zone whose borders are coterminous with the boundaries of all communities within Wayne County. The County Commissioners may remove land from a zone after a public hearing. The Brownfield Redevelopment Authority will only operate in those zones where a community passes a Resolution requesting inclusion of specific properties in the county Brownfield Zone;
2. An amendment to Enrolled Ordinance No. 96-100 to extend the prohibition on authorized dumping to public and private property; and
3. An amendment to the 1996-97 Appropriation Ordinance which authorizes the transfer of $8,830,008 from the Youth Services Fund to the Building Authority for construction of a new juvenile detention facility.

The hearings will be held:

THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1997
Commission Chambers, 10:00 a.m.
Wayne County Building
600 Randolph, Detroit, Michigan

Copies of the proposed ordinance and plans may be reviewed at the Commission Clerk's Office, 406 Wayne County Building, 600 Randolph, Detroit 48226. (313) 224-0903.

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

It's hard for us to believe that 14,000 years ago there was a mile-high thick layer of ice in southeastern Michigan.

Near the edge of the glacial wall was a climate much like the tundra is today. As the glacier receded, many changes occurred in the plant and animal life of Michigan.

Two cold hardy animals that lived in southeastern Michigan in the wake of the melting glacier were the Jefferson mammoth and the American mastodon. No woolly mammoths have been found in Michigan, sorry.

Both animals had very elephant-like features, are distantly related to our modern elephants, but are very different from today's elephants.

According to J. Alan Holman's book, "Ancient Life of the Great Lakes Basin," remains of 260 different mammoths and mastodons have been found in Michigan.

Of those, 211 were American mastodons. Mammoths were primarily grass eaters, while the mastodon preferred twigs and nuts. The flat grooved teeth and the side to side movement of its jaw reflects the mammoth's taste for grass.

■ If you visit Cranbrook Institute of Science's display on elephants you will get a chance to learn more about giant mammoths and mastodons that roamed Redford 12,000 years ago.

Mastodons, on the other hand, had knobs on their teeth, something like those on our molars. Their jaw moved up and down to crush nuts and twigs.

Teeth of mastodons grew in thin layers, like the growth rings of a tree. This growth reflected times of abundant food and times of little food. By examining the layers and patterns of growth, scientists can determine how old an animal was and during which season it died.

Both animals stood from 10-11 feet tall at the shoulder. Thick pillar-like legs supported their weight. Like elephants of today, these huge animals had a craving for salt. Southeastern Michigan had many good salt deposits that were beneficial to these animals.

It has been noticed that all the mammoth/mastodon finds have been in the southern half of the Lower Peninsula.

Paleontologists theorize that the glacier did not recede far enough north for these animals to colonize the northern half of the peninsula before the large animal extinction occurred 10,000 years ago.

That's when the mammoths, mastodons, woodland muskox, giant beaver, Scott's moose, short-faced bear and flat-headed peccary died out from Michigan. Scientists are still debating about what caused these large animals to die.

TEN PIN ALLEY

AL HARRISON

The professional bowlers will be represented by both genders as the men will be contending in the Greater Detroit Open at Taylor Lanes on Eureka Road in Taylor and the ladies will have a regional tournament at Skore Lanes on Ecorse Road in Taylor, the L.P.B.T. Midwest Regional Taylor Open. The action starts today.

If you hurry, there may be some open spots to bowl in the adult pro-am at noon or 2:30 p.m.

On Tuesday, two more squads of adult pro-ams start at 6:30 and 8:30 p.m.

On Wednesday, June 4, the pros begin their qualifying rounds which continue Thursday when the field is cut to 24 players for eight games of match play, followed by more match play on Friday. The TV finals are 3 p.m. Saturday, June 7.

The public can purchase tickets for qualifying, match play and the TV finals which will be televised nationally on ABC-TV with Chris Schenkel and Bo Burton announcing.

As for the ladies pro tour, the 9 pin "no-tap" pro-am takes place Friday, June 6, with squad times at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m.

It's open to men and women amateurs, with a limited number of junior entries available.

The entry fees are: adults/$20 or $15/re-entry and juniors/$10. One out of every six entries will cash.

The ladies schedule of events: Friday, June 6 – 4-6 p.m. practice, followed by the pro-ams. Saturday, June 7 – round 1 (six games qualifying) 9:30 a.m. and round 2 (six games qualifying) at 2:30 p.m., cut to 24 players for match play. Sunday, June 8 – 12 games of match play to be followed by the five finalists in stepladder competition for the top prize money.

The Detroit area is always well-represented in these events since we have so many of the top female pro bowlers, including Aleta Sill, Marianne DeRupo, Cheryl Daniels, Lisa Bishop, Jodi Woessner and others from this area who are likely to compete.

Showy: Horse fans will have a chance to see riders like Capt. Derek McConnell, above, when the Detroit Motor City Horse Show comes to town on June 14. McConnell will host a pair of Livonia Ladywood High School students who will be traving to Dublin in July to compete in horse shows.

Equestrian delights on tap for fans

When the Detroit Motor City Horse Show comes Saturday, June 14 to the Bloomfield Hunt Club, Irish eyes will be smiling on 29-year-old captain Derek McConnell.

The riding officer in the Irish Army Equitation School, McConnell will don the green jacket and represent his country in a pair of international Grand Prix events.

He also feels the weight of representing 44 million Irish Americans.

"I've been receiving more and more opportunities of going to the states to ride and teach," said McConnell, who has been riding since the age of six. "I think riding is a fantastic public relations tool for the military and it's vital part of any business. It's also promoting the American horse. It gets people to join and it helps the morale. It gets the patriotism going. And I think it's the same with any other country."

This Motor City event is made up of 12 to 15 fences at 4 feet, 9 inches to 5-3 in height, which is run against the clock.

Hoping to finish in the ribbons (prize money is as high as $3,000 for each event), McConnell will be donating any earnings to the Irish Pallottine Fathers, a group of missionary priests from Wyandotte.

– Derek McConnell.

"This is a big show jumping event with thousands of people in attendance and some of the top riders in America, including Margie Goldstein (of Pennsylvania)," said McConnell, via phone from his home in Rathangan. "Any prize money I may win will go to charity. I want to put up a good performance throughout the show even though I will only be meeting my horse a few days before the start."

In July, McConnell is scheduled to host a pair of Livonia Ladywood students, Annie Bolognino and Stephanie Marcus, to prepare them for the upcoming high school equestrian season.

The two students will participate in a show in the Dublin area on Irish horses.

McConnell, a native of Naas of County Kildare, runs his own yard and trains young horses for sale as jumpers and race horses.

He is currently in charge of a school which trains underprivileged children from Dublin to become apprentice jockeys.

The school is sponsored by the Irish army. Students receive their training from military horses at the Curragh in County Kildare.

Capt. McConnell first arrived in the U.S. in September of 1996 at the invitation of the U.S. Armed Forces Equestrian Association. The relationship has grown since then. He has made three separate teaching trips to Florida and most recently was the featured speaker at the International Stallion Exhibition and Trade Show, a statewide event held in Lansing for the equestrian industry.

He will also coach the USFEA team and accompany a group which will compete in the 1999 CISM Military Games in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

"I hope to develop as many contacts as I can in the states and help the American military reach their highest riding level," said McConnell, who recently hosted two U.S. officers at his home stable for intensive instruction.

Capt. McConnell, who competes in his native Heineken League and ranks in the top 10, has his eyes set on a series of World Cup meets (the equivalent of car racing's Formula I) and the 2000 Olympics in Sydney, Australia. He also has experience competing throughout Europe.

"My long-term goal is the Olympics, I'd love to compete in that," McConnell said. "But you need a large yard of horses and it's an enormous expense to compete."

And to help in his charity efforts, a raffle is being held. The first prize a $2,000 trip to Ireland. Second prize is a set of Galway Crystal Irish coffee mugs;, while third prize is a Belleek Parian China clock.

The tickets are a donation of $75 (only 225 have been printed). The drawing will be on June 14 at the Bloomfield Hunt Club, 405 E. Long Lake Road.

Information regarding tickets or the ringside tent can be obtained through the Celtic Shamrock, 453 N. Main, Milford; or call (810) 684-5994.

ON THE RUN

MARYBETH DILLON

One of the greatest things about running is the chance it gives you to get to know interesting, wonderful people whose paths you'd otherwise never cross. Many Detroit-area runners have had the good fortune of meeting Julie Hamilton, of Detroit's Downtown Runners and Walkers, and her family. This past January, Julie lost her father – affectionately known throughout his hometown of Richmond as "Farmer Bill" – to cancer.

"His hobby was people," said Hamilton, a clinical social worker specializing in sports psychology in private practice in Royal Oak. "At the funeral, we were aghast at how many people showed up with tears in their eyes. He made so many connections, but on a small scale; he wasn't into the big flamboyant things; cocktail parties or hanging out at the bar. He'd stop in at the coffee shop or the local Coney Island and know everyone there.

"We've found out he was good at connecting with young business people. He'd go out and stop at new places just getting started. He'd give them a few words of advice and build up their confidence. People really took that to heart. He has so many adopted sons and daughters across Macomb County."

Hamilton was the general manager of Mary Jane Shoes on Woodward in Detroit and opened stores for the company around the country before starting his own business with wife Phyllis and saving a historical site known as the Octagon House in 1974 in Washington Township.

To continue his work, the family has established the William K. Hamilton Foundation. It will sponsor local community organizations such as youth fund-raising drives and inner city food programs.

"Hopefully, the foundation will not just give out money, but form more opportunities for people to connect and work together," said Julie, who with her dad called out split times and encouraged runners at last October's Free Press marathon.

To launch their dream, the Hamilton family is sponsoring "Bill's Run, Richmond, Run!" an 8-kilometer and 1-mile fun run/walk on Saturday, June 28, in conjunction with the Richmond Area Chamber of Commerce Fireworks Festival. Richmond is off I-94 between Detroit and Port Huron.

There'll be a carnival, volleyball, kids' games, a horse-drawn trolley, wood carvings and crafts, and food in addition to fireworks and the runs.

"We'll shut down Main Street for the morning and take the runners through Richmond's old-fashioned downtown," said Julie, volunteer race director who'll be ably assisted by the Downtown Runners and Walkers. "There are some subtle hills, but the course is mostly flat.

The 8K begins at 9 a.m., with the mile following at 10 a.m. Age group awards will go three deep. There'll also be a "Farthest Traveled Award."

Pre-registration is $14, or $10 without a T-shirt. For kids 12 and under without a shirt, the fee is $8.

After June 18, the cost is $18 with a shirt and $14 without. Race day registration and packet pickup will be 7--9 a.m.

For more information, call Julie at (248) 288-9649 or the chamber of commerce at (810) 727-3900.

Items for On the Run are welcome. Fax them to M.B. Dillon at (313) 459-4224 or Brad Emons at (313) 591-7279.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Volunteers needed

Do you have a few hours a week to spend with some new friends? Botsford Continuing Health Center is seeking a few good people willing to share their time as volunteers to visit residents on a one-to-one basis, participate with residents in group activities or perform light office and administrative duties.

Volunteers who meet a minimum 100-hour service requirement and continue to make a commitment of four hours per week are eligible for benefits that include prescriptions and meals.

An award-winning facility, BCHC offers extended care, hospice care and short-term respite care for families who need relief from daily caregiving activities, as well as a variety of support groups. It is a Medicare/Medicaid-certified facility.

BCHC is located off Folsom Road, west of Orchard Lake Road, at 21450 Archwood Circle in Farmington Hills. For more information about volunteer opportunities, call Kim Petersen at (248) 426-6951.

Gulf War veterans

The Department of Veterans Affairs has published a new regulation extending through the year 2001 the period in which undiagnosed illnesses in Gulf War veterans may appear and be eligible for disability compensation.

Secretary of Veterans Affairs Jesse Brown said, "Some Gulf War veterans' claims had been denied because their disabilities due to undiagnosed symptoms did not appear until after a two-year presumptive period. This rule broadens VA's ability to give disabled Gulf War veterans the benefit of the doubt for a more realistic period of time as scientific research moves closer to answers about the causes of their health problems."

The regulation, published as an interim rule in the April 29 Federal Register with a request for public comments, is effective immediately. VA may amend the rule based on input received during the public comment period, which ends June 30.

The Detroit VAMC has seen more than 900 Persian Gulf veterans in a special program headed by Dr. Boaz Milner, M.D. Spouses and children of Gulf War veterans have been referred to affiliates for assessment and registration in a government-sponsored program designed to learn more about the effects of Gulf War service on them.

"Our approach from day one was to standardize the assessment – lab, X-rays, and subspecialty consultations as clinically indicated, thus combining phases one and two to expedite the provision of treatment and primary care to all interested Gulf War veterans," said Milner. "That includes neurology, rheumatology, dermatology, psychology, psychiatry and subspecialty disciplines from the very beginning. The most important thing has been the favorable response of our patients to our intensive efforts to help them."

Veterans who believe they may now qualify for compensation but who have not submitted a previous claim and those wishing to reopen a previous claim should call the VA Regional Office at 1-800-827-1000.

General health information unrelated to the compensation process is available to concerned Gulf War veterans at 1-800-749-8387. A special protocol medical examination is available to Gulf War veterans through their local VA medical center. Any such veteran whose health has changed since an initial examination is encouraged to receive a followup examination under the Persian Gulf Registry program.

Service members who remain on active duty but who previously served in the Gulf War theater may call 1-800-796-9699.

Grant received

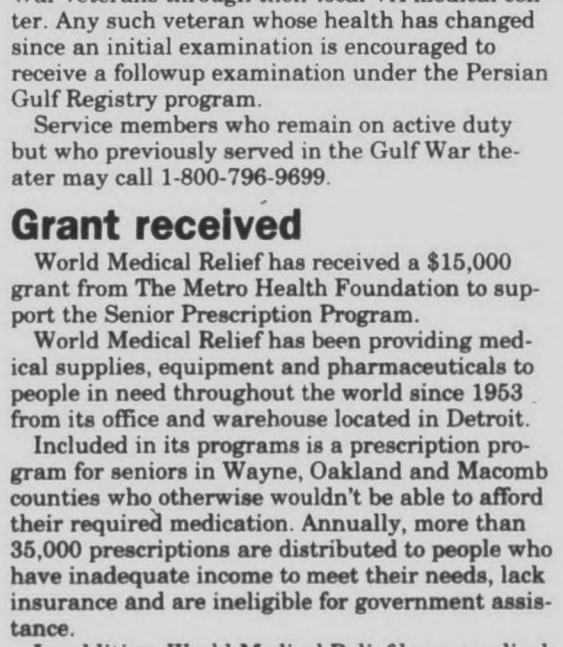
World Medical Relief has received a $15,000 grant from The Metro Health Foundation to support the Senior Prescription Program.

World Medical Relief has been providing medical supplies, equipment and pharmaceuticals to people in need throughout the world since 1953 from its office and warehouse located in Detroit.

Included in its programs is a prescription program for seniors in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties who otherwise wouldn't be able to afford their required medication. Annually, more than 35,000 prescriptions are distributed to people who have inadequate income to meet their needs, lack insurance and are ineligible for government assistance.

In addition, World Medical Relief has a medical equipment loan program and a medical supply program which provide equipment such as wheelchairs, hospital beds and walkers as well as basic medical supplies for in-home care and rehabilitation for indigent patients. In 1996, more than 10,000 individuals were helped.

Items for Medical Briefs are welcome from all hospitals, physicians, companies and residents active in the Observer-area medical community. Items should be typed or legibly written and sent to: Medical Briefs, c/o The Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft Road, Livonia 48150 or faxed to (313) 591-7279.



Sleep disorders have hefty price tag

HELEN FURCRAN/STAFF ARTIST

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

We hear the big stories about how sleep deprivation caused the Exxon Valdez oil spill disaster and other major accidents, but there are lot of other people who suffer from sleep disorders on a daily basis and they live close to home.

For instance, a 58-year-old Livonia woman, who asked to be referred to as B.G., was reprimanded by her supervisor for falling asleep at her desk. Even though she was diagnosed with sleep apnea at the Sleep Disorder Center at Garden City Hospital, the supervisor didn't recognize B.G.'s problem as an illness, but rather as a lack of endurance or a personal problem.

And when Elizabeth Garneau of Novi spent 13 years with excruciating headaches and countless doctors' remedies she was stagnant professionally. These women's stories are microcosms of the effects of sleep deprivation, stories that we hear about, like train wrecks and exhausted shift doctors making bad diagnoses where lives are ruined or ended and countless dollars are spent or lost.

A national commission on sleep disorders research conducted a two-year study and concluded that sleep- related accidents accounted for $46 billion annually, according to information provided by the American Sleep Disorders Association. Likewise, B.G.'s and Garneau's sleep disorders cost them financially and emotionally.

B.G. found herself dozing off at work and while she stopped at red lights. She forced herself to stay awake if she drove for long distances. She can't sit and watch television, because "I'm out like a light."

B.G. had these and other sleep disorder symptoms for four years. "My biggest problem has been at work," she said. "I can be typing and looking at a computer screen and I will go into a little doze for a minute or two or three. The last time my supervisor saw it she chose to write me up, which could cause me to have three days off without pay. She's calling it sleeping on the job. She didn't find me in a corner with my head down asleep. I'm sitting up with my hands on the keyboard."

Suddenly awake

A noise or a body twitch usually jars her awake. "It's a disease just like any other disease," B.G. said. "I'm a very energetic person and in the past few years I'm dragging."

Her treatment has included wearing an apparatus on her face while she sleeps that pumps air into her body. Meanwhile, Garneau, 39, can only guess how living with sleep apnea affected her life.

For the last 15 years, she usually woke up with migraine headaches. Drugs didn't help and a host of other doctor-prescribed treatments, like steroid injections in the back of her head, failed. Finally she went to the Sleep Disorder Center.

"It seemed silly to me that all that time doctors were treating me and it was something as simple as discovering that it was sleep apnea," she said, adding that the first test showed she stopped breathing 140 times during the night. "Financially, I managed to maintain a job anyway," she said of her employer, Ford Motor Company. But Garneau took countless sick days due to headaches.

"The effects of sleep apnea drastically altered my life," she said. "If I woke up with migraine on Monday I would cancel any plans for the weekend, because I could depend on still having it then." After her treatment, Garneau said, her routine changed dramatically: "I can do anything. My job has escalated to incredible proportions. I could take my career leaps and bounds. I haven't had a headache or lack of sleep alter what I want to do."

Referring to a recent promotion with her new employer, Mayflower Vehicle Systems at Johnson Controls in Plymouth, Garneau said: "I could have done this well years ago. Because of being exhausted all the time it held me from even trying. I couldn't count on how I was going to feel to make the plans for the future."

■ Sleep- related accidents accounted for $46 billion annually, according to information provided by the American Sleep Disorders Association.

The emotional cost of sleep apnea included feeling dead tired all the time and trying to endure the migraine pain during daily activities. "I can imagine all the people with sleep apnea who don't know they have it," she said. "Mine happen to come out through headaches. But the fatigue sets anywhere else in their body."

Both Garneau and B.G. found answers at the Sleep Disorder Center at Garden City Hospital, which opened in June 1994. Last year, doctors saw 501 new patients. Both women also had sleep apnea, which is characterized by a cessation of breathing caused by an airway closure, a failure of the brain to send impulses to the diaphragm or a combination of both.

Common disorder

Usually when people with sleep apnea go into a deep sleep, the airway closes down and the body automatically throws them back into a lighter sleep. It's the most common of about 88 identified sleep disorders that can be treated, according to Karen Parsell, Sleep Disorder Center at Garden City Hospital manager.

"People who have this have a progression of problems," Parsell said. "They have high blood pressure, many go into cardiac arrest and have a heart attack. The body compensates for no air. As the airway closes down, the heart slows down. It is going into a slow death. Unless you have a very, very strong heart it is going to affect it. Many people die of cardiac arrest and never have their problem diagnosed."

Many patients at the Sleep Disorder Center exhausted every other medical treatment, Parsell said. "Not only does it cost them in so many different ways, but mostly in their quality of life and how happy they are when they get up," she said. "Imagine going two years with grabbing little sleep. Even though they're sleeping 12 hours a night they are in a state that they are not sleeping at all. Their bodies are working harder. Sleep is nourishment. We bring these people in and in one day we can figure out what their problem is. The second day we can treat their problem and they say they feel better."

She tells an array of success stories. There was a man who scheduled to be tested, but before he came in he had a heart attack. Doctors recommended a pacemaker but, before the surgery, Sleep Disorder Center doctors discovered he had sleep apnea. The next year, he had lost 45 pounds.

"He told me his quality of life had improved by 200 percent," Parsell added.

The right diagnosis is a matter of life and death for a lot of people. The National Commission on Sleep Disorders found that habitual short sleepers are at risk of increased morbidity and mortality.

"According to several studies, individuals who report sleeping six hours or less a night experienced poorer health than those sleeping seven to eight hours a night," according to the commission. Also, a study by the National Transportation Safety Board found that fatigue was the most common cause of fatal-to-the-driver truck accidents.

Sleep deprivation has been named the cause of countless accidents on the rails and buses. At sea, the most notorious was the Exxon Valdez oil spill. Although many believe the captain's alcohol impairment caused the accident, in fact, it was the third mate, who had slept only six hours the night before after two days of loading cargo, who was in charge of the ship at the time of the accident.

Adhesive could make stitches obsolete

Remember all those warnings about gluing your fingers together? If a University of Michigan Medical Center doctor has his way, emergency rooms all over the U.S. will be using something similar in place of stitches.

Dr. James Quinn, M.D., a U-M emergency medicine expert, has completed an extensive study of a skin adhesive that takes the place of sutures in closing wounds. The study was published in the May 21 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

The glue, called octylcyanoacrylate tissue adhesive, is awaiting final FDA approval. Quinn found in clinical studies that the glue is less painful to use, quicker to apply than sutures and produces excellent cosmetic results.

The adhesive is similar to Crazy Glue and some other skin adhesives used in Canada and Europe, but according to Quinn, it's stronger, more flexible and less toxic. It works by simply squeezing the wound together and applying the glue on top, essentially forming a bridge. It can be used practically anywhere on the body, except the hands, feet and around mucous membranes such as the lips. The glue does not have to be removed; it simply wears away as skin cells are sloughed off.

The study looked at 130 Canadian patients, half of whom were treated with the new skin adhesive while the other half received standard sutures. Quinn says the glue is great for treating children and others who are afraid of needles since it's a virtually pain-free procedure.

"It's not uncommon to have to sedate children in order to repair relatively small wounds; now we won't have to." The glue also saved valuable time in the emergency room. The average time to close a wound with the tissue adhesive was three and a half minutes, while it took doctors 12.5 minutes on the average to stitch up a cut.

■ The glue is less painful to use, quicker to apply than sutures and produces excellent cosmetic results.

Finally, a long-term check of both study groups found no appreciable cosmetic difference between wounds closed by the new adhesive and those repaired by conventional stitching.

Another major benefit, Quinn and colleagues from the University of Ottawa have discovered, is that infection can be significantly reduced by using the new skin adhesive. In a separate study presented May 19 in Washington, D.C., at the Society of Academic Emergency Medicine, Quinn found that sutured wounds were three times more likely to become infected compared with wounds closed by the new skin adhesive.

The glue is currently applied only on lacerations, but future uses could include burns and abrasions. "This is really the tip of the iceberg in terms of how the adhesive may be used," Quinn said.

The skin adhesive is being manufactured by Closure Medical Corp. of Raleigh, N.C., and distributed under the brand name Dermabrand by Ethicon, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson.

Travel details at your fingertips via Internet

EMORY DANIELS

O&E ONLINE

My summer vacation plans keep changing as it is so I won't be searching on the Internet for things to do and places to go.

If your vacation plans aren't firmed up yet, there are at least three Web sites you might be interested in visiting: the Hostelling International-American Youth Hostels site; Preview Travel; or the Go Camping America Directory.

Planning a camping trip will be easier if you visit the Go Camping America Directory at www.gocampingamerica.com. RVers and campers now have more than 3,100 listings full of helpful information.

Organized by state, the directory contains information on individual campgrounds such as ratings from consumer directories, descriptions of the campgrounds, details about the number and type of sites offered, amenities, services and recreational facilities.

Coming soon will be maps so consumers can view lists of campgrounds by region. The listed campgrounds are members of the National Association of RV Parks & Campgrounds (ARVC) which is the host for the Go Camping America Web site.

All in one travel site

Preview Travel at http://www.previewtravel.com could be your all-in-one site for planning summer vacations.

Whether you're looking for a back road adventure, you're a family of four waiting to hit the beach, or a more casual traveler attending a class reunion, Preview Travel will help you research, plan and book your own trips.

"People want their summer vacation to be a fun, relaxing escape from everyday life, and that's where Preview Travel comes in," said Barrie Seidenberg, vice president of online services at Preview Travel. "And unlike traditional travel agencies, we're open 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

Whatever your destination, Preview Travel can help you find the best airfares available and book your car rental and hotel reservations.

And, if travelers know what they like but don't know where to go to find it, Preview Travel has its Find-A-Trip feature ready to do the job.

Find-A-Trip helps travelers discover escapes based on selected criteria. Tell Find-A-Trip what you want from your vacation – cities, beaches, shopping, family activities, etc. – and different trips are offered for your selection.

Preview Travel also operates the primary ticketing service on America Online (keyword: previewtravel), its own Web sites and co-branded travel sites. Preview Travel is a privately held company whose investors include America Online, Landmark Communications, and US WEST Interactive Services, among others.

■ Find-A-Trip helps travelers discover escapes based on selected criteria. Tell Find-A-Trip what you want from your vacation – cities, beaches, shopping, family activities, etc. – and different trips are offered for your selection.

Hostel Web site

Hostelling International-American Youth Hostels has its own site at http://www.hiayh.org with information on more than 150 hostels in the U.S.

At the site, visitors will find a link to the International Youth Hostel Federation which connects with nearly 5,000 hostels in more than 70 countries. The IYHF site, in turn, provides links to other associations and their hostels.

At www.hiayh.org hostel locations, overnight prices, reservation information, and special hostel features and services are revealed. Onliners also will find information on where to go and what to do in the area surrounding each hostel.

General information is given on hostel history, special programs, and a hostel fact sheet. If you want to join, download a membership application, and print it out to be mailed or faxed back to the HI-AYH national office.

One section of the Web site highlights 35 local/regional offices across the country which operate travel centers, travel workshops, special activities, and trips. Links are provided to those hostels that have their own Web sites.

Hostels are inexpensive accommodations for travelers of all ages. Hostels provide separate facilities for males and females, fully equipped self-service kitchens, dining areas and common rooms for relaxing and socializing. Many hostels have private family/couple rooms which can be reserved in advance.

Several hostels are historic buildings that have been renovated and readapted for use as a hostel, including light houses, a lifesaving station on Nantucket, and a landmark building in New York City.

Travel Jewels

• A scant three years ago, Stan Gotlieb was a tourist in Mexico. Since then, he has become something else. He has become, in his words, "a gringo commentator" who has documented his observations on the current political, economic and cultural state of Mexico. Read his writings and follow other links of interest by visiting Letters From Mexico at http://www.dreamagic.com/stan/letters.html.

• Southern Living Online at http://pathfinder.com/sl offers pages on Southern travel, gardens, homes and foods. You can find reviews of the South's best spas, an exploration of the Florida Gulf Islands, tourism resources, and a southern events calendar.

• What about Belize? Visit Belize by Naturalight at http://www.belizenet.com to learn about this country (formerly British Honduras) on the east coast of the Caribbean basin where more than 60 percent of the land is still covered by tropical forest. Visitors to the Web site can take a virtual tour of the island and learn about the island's rich and diverse history.

• Or consider the Fiji Islands. The Fiji Islands Bula Page at http://www.fijifvb.gov.fj/ is the official site of the government of Fiji. The site has information on accommodations, diving, cruises, tour operators, car rentals, events calendar, maps, exchange rate information, weather forecasts and news briefs from the Islands.

BUSINESS PEOPLE

This column highlights promotions, transfers, hirings and other key personnel moves within the suburban business community. Send a brief biographical summary, including the towns of residence and employment and a black-and-white photo, if desired, to: Business People, Observer Business Page, Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia, 48150. Our fax number is (313) 591-7279.

FICF title earned

Park Jarrett III, who is based in Livonia, has earned the title Fraternal Insurance Counsellor Fellow (FICF) by completing the Fraternal Field Managers' Association fraternal sales training program.

Jarrett studied estate planning, business insurance, and financial planning and passed a comprehensive examination on these subjects.

First woman director

Rebecca Christian of Livonia, senior vice president of marketing and communications at Southfield-based Franklin Bank, was officially elected the bank's first woman director at its annual meeting.

Christian, 43, is the first director elected to the board since 1984. She joined Franklin in 1985 and now manages the bank's marketing, advertising, sales, investor relations, public relations, employee services and service quality departments.

"This is truly the high point of my career and I'm very honored," said Christian, who now resides in Livonia with her husband, Robert, of 25 years.

Radio VP honor

Elaine R. Baker, vice president and general manager of Oldies 104.3 WOMC, was honored by The Michigan Business & Professional Association at the Women & Leadership in the Workplace Conference held in Livonia.

Baker has been vice president and general manager since 1981, leading the station to its current position of ratings and revenue leadership. She is well respected for her many years of hard work and dedication to her craft, family and community.

"I have a staff that works very hard to make me look good," said Baker.

Insurance kudos

Mike O'Malley has been awarded the Gold Card Agent status with Farmers Insurance.

A Gold Card Agent must have a superior customer service record and a superior sales record. There are only three Gold Card Agents in Michigar..

O'Malley has been an agent for Farmers Insurance for more than 15 years, and is located in downtown Plymouth.

MARKETPLACE

Marketplace features a glimpse of suburban business news and notes, including corporate name changes, new products, office openings, new affiliations, new positions, mergers, acquisitions and new ways of doing business. Items for Marketplace should be submitted to Observer Newspapers, 36251 Schoolcraft, Livonia 48150. The fax number is (313) 591-7279.

Videoconference

MRI/Sales Consultants of Laurel Park has added a videoconference service to its offerings. Now, ConferView, the nation's largest, privately-owned videoconferencing system, is available to the public for conducting face-to-face meetings with individuals or groups separated by long distances.

"ConferView will allow Detroit-area businesses to expand the geographical scope of their markets because they won't have to travel to conduct meetings," said Chris Arnold, owner/president of the Livonia-based venture.

For more information, call (313) 542-9099.

Goodwill

Goodwill Industries of great Detroit was among 173 supplier companies from 26 countries presented with the 1996 GM Supplier of the Year award at ceremonies held last week.

Goodwill recently opened their first superstore in Redford and offers a variety of job training and placement services which are structured around each individual's abilities and interests.

NEW HOMES

Westfield offers landscaping at base price

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Savannah Model: This house at Westfield Estates includes a great room, kitchen/nook and a room on the first floor that can be used as a formal dining room or a den. Three bedrooms are upstairs.

Danny Veri, a builder who sold all 34 lots within seven months in Canton's Camden Park a couple of years ago, is enjoying lightning-like success at his current project, Westfield Estates in the same township.

Nearly two dozen of the 79 lots in the platted sub off Haggerty between Cherry Hill and Palmer roads sold within a month after the model was opened.

"We realistically market to get a project completed in a year," Veri said. "It benefits everybody – customers, trades, us."

Residents don't have to endure years of construction with noise and debris, subcontractors can anticipate a steady work load, and the builder doesn't have to worry about high carrying costs.

So what's the draw at Westfield Estates?

"Two unique features to us is we fully landscape each home at base price ... and if you originate a mortgage through our lender (Jamestown), we give $2,000 credit," said Bill Dempsey , on-site sales rep.

"I think we're the most competitive builder in the township," Veri said of his prices. "I think our standard features go above and beyond our competitors – landscaping, cast iron kitchen sinks instead of stainless steel. All ceilings are textured."

"Plymouth-Canton schools is a nice feature in this price range," Dempsey said. "It's drawing a lot of attention."

"You get an easy location for Ann Arbor, Detroit, wherever highways will take you," Veri said of easy access to I-275 at either Ford Road or Michigan Avenue.

And because Veri knows that the handful of lots that back up to the freeway on the property may be difficult sells, he offers a fireplace and air conditioning at base price on those constructions. That's at least a $5,000 value.

Quick occupancy – Veri says he can build a new house in three to four months – also impresses would-be purchasers.

Base prices at Westfield Estates range from $148,900 for a bi-level of 1,910 square feet with two bedrooms and one bath to $177,400 for a Cape Cod of 1,850 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Veri's eight plans include a variety of choices – ranch, colonial and quad. A two-car garage, dishwasher and carpeting are included at base price in all plans.

"A lot are first-time new buyers with young kids," Veri said. "We have a couple of soon-to-be newlyweds. I would say a large majority of customers are 40 and under."

"Their first impressions are the prices," Dempsey said. "They tell us looking around it's very hard to find anything in Canton under $200,000.

"The next thing is they're impressed to find we're landscaping lots. They like the fact we will allow them to make some modifications, changes. Most will add square footage, move walls, increase the size of a shower," Dempsey said.

The model, a 1,785-square-foot colonial, includes a great room; kitchen/nook with island, pantry and pass-through wall to the great room; and a separate room that can be used as a formal dining room or den.

The half-bath on the main living area is strategically placed off the laundry and garage so kids don't have to tear through the whole house to get there from outside.

The master has a shower, walk-in closet and sit-down dressing area. Two other bedrooms and a full bath also are upstairs.

Westfield Estates is serviced by city water and sewers. The sub will have sidewalks.

The property tax rate is about $33 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $170,000 house there would pay just over $2,800 the first year.

Scott and Vickie Ragland will be moving into a four-bedroom colonial with children Bradford and Kayla.

"Our primary consideration in our search was finding a home in a good school district," Scott said. "Construction in Westfield more closely matched our price range."

The Raglands did their homework, checking out Veri's work during various stages of construction in other projects before buying. "It always impressed us with the quality we saw in homes," Scott said.

Bill and Jan Thomas bought a four-bedroom colonial for themselves and son Austin.

"You get a lot for your money, and the quality of building is worth it," Jan said. "It has a large laundry room and open kitchen, family room together. It had storage in the garage.

"No matter who we've spoken with – people on site, people who have built with him (Veri) before, mortgage lenders – have nothing but good things to say about the builder," Jan Thomas said.

The sales model at Westfield Estates, (313) 398-5366, is open 1-6 p.m. daily except Wednesday, when its 1-7 p.m. The office is closed Thursdays.

OVER 50 YEARS OF BEING SOUTHEASTERN MICHIGAN'S PREMIER DEVELOPER AND BUILDER

Louis Gorenc and Donna Haase are trendsetters.

They have built a three-bedroom, two-bath ranch of 2,000 square feet off John Hix Road in Westland with concrete blocks from the ground level to the eaves all the way around the structure

The blocks – eight inches wide, four inches high and 16 inches long – are split face with the smooth side inside and the rough, brick-like appearance out.

The concrete walls inside are furred with 2-by-4 inch studs for added insulation.

This construction method does away with inside supporting walls, usually constructed of wood. The house has a more open look. Hallways and corridors are more conducive to wood framing.

Masons placed metal rods for extra reinforcement around every door and window and every four feet along the walls from the footings to the plate to which the roof is attached.

Gorenc said he learned about this residential building method while living in Arizona.

"There's no drafts, no noise, no bug infestation," he said. "The house is almost fireproof."

Gorenc estimated that concrete block all the way around costs 10 percent more than traditional stick construction. That's why cost-conscious builders don't do it, he speculated.

While masons laid the block, carpenters the roof and professionals the drywall, Gorenc and Haase tended to much of the electrical and plumbing work inside.

"We wanted a sturdy house," Gorenc said. "This house is built like a commercial building."

"It's well insulated and will last a lot longer," Haase said.

The house is available for sale at an asking price of $235,000.

You can paint over paneling to brighten room

By Popular Mechanics
For AP Special Features

Q: Several years ago, I paneled three rooms with a dark shade, low-priced paneling. Now, I would like to paint the paneling a lighter color to brighten the rooms. Will this require a special paint? What treatment, if any, should I give the paneling prior to painting?

A: Prior to painting, the walls should be cleaned thoroughly. If these are kitchen or bathroom walls they may have become grease- or scum-coated. Wash them down with a detergent solution on a nearly dry cloth to remove the coating without delaminating the paneling. If the walls are dry, make sure they are dust-free to avoid lumps in the paint job. They should then be covered with an oil-base paint primer – one that will not allow the stain on the panels to bleed through. Some stains contain a dye that can be dissolved by paint or primer and dark stains like yours can show through the primer coat. Before priming, try out a small, obscure area to see if the stain bleeds through. If it doesn't, then prime all the walls using either brush or roller. Let the primer coat dry completely before applying the finish coat because even slightly damp primer cannot seal properly. Once the walls are sealed with primer, put on the finish coat of your choice.

If the stain does bleed through the primer, you will have to use a stain-suppressing primer. There are several brands of these. One such primer is called Under Cover, manufactured by Parks Corp. (800) 225-8543. It costs about $17 per gallon.

Deck with dining area

Additional living space can enhance both the value and the comfort of your home. This featured picnic deck with raised dining area will add to your warm-weather enjoyment. The attractive raised dining area has eight sides and a 10-foot diameter. You will have a choice of five different sizes for the lower deck. The choices are 12'x12', 12'x16', 12'x20', 14'x16', and 14'x20'. Two complete sets of the plans are included: one for you or your builder and one for the building department. Plans include clearly labeled, detailed drawings along with full framing instructions. Illustrations are drawn three dimensionally with full elevations and cross sectional diagrams. Step-by-step comprehensive instructions are included to aid you in construction.

The right touches tie a home together

STEVEN SIVAK

One sign of a successful project is when all of the parts come together and make sense as a whole. In a recent phone conversation with a potential client, I tried to explain, among other things, that while there are many nice faucets on the market, just one or two could be a good match for her project. This issue came up because I was trying to explain my plan "B" contract whereby the client is responsible for picking out all of the finish items, which include plumbing/ electrical fixtures and cabinetry. (Which, by the way, saves a typical client about 5 percent of the cost of the home)

My point was that while "X" might be a nice Georgian faucet, it would make no sense in a Victorian house and that one must be careful to avoid selecting such a faucet because one merely "likes "X". Good architects can make sense of the whole and can usually "tie it all together."

In order to avoid making such a "blunder," one must know not only what style the house is but also what the details are that are used in the house. If the house uses reveals as a standard large-scale or exterior detail, there may be the opportunity to use the same detail at a smaller scale, for example at the base-board-to-wall detail or as a drawer-pull detail.

Even the colors that are used in a house may not be random – for example, the early Post-modernist architect Michael Graves had a reason and an explanation for every color on his projects (and these were complexly colored projects). Some colors related to the sky and some to some imaginary distant landscape, but these same colors would relate to the exterior palette and the building materials that were being used.

Sometimes I have this habit of introducing a certain material and/ or color and using it in certain areas and intentionally reusing it in other areas. An example of this in the house that I have been writing about every month is the black cast epoxy countertop material. This material also happens to be the interior window sill material. Floors are maple and so are all of the cabinets – even the bathroom cabinets.

Tying it all together can also incorporate the use of horizontal and vertical elements that actually do tie the project together. Elements in one part of the house can be related to other parts in distant corners through this age-old technique. These "lines" can be reveals (subtractive) details or applied trim (additive) – either one works well to unify a project. A consistent use of geometry can also be used to tie a project together.

Geometry can help tie a project together by repeating certain elements over and over again; the artful part is not to bore the viewer with too many repetitions. An arc can be found to have a major function or scale but can also reappear again at a smaller scale or even in the light fixtures in the room for which the arc applies.

If you are designing a project yourself, keep your eyes open for opportunities to make the project consistent with itself. Compare all of your choices with each other and ask your friends if they think that the choices are harmonious. Changes are easy now before the fixtures are installed or bought.

Book touts uses for WD-40

(NAPS) – You probably know WD-40 as a handy household lubricant, and you probably have a can in the kitchen, the workshop and the car – but did you know that little miracle in the blue-and-yellow can will remove dirt, grime and soap scum in the kitchen and bathroom, get the dead bugs and road tar off your car's grill, and even remove scratches from furniture?

That's what WD-40 users claim. Over the years, fans of WD-40 have sent the manufacturer literally thousands of testimonial letters claiming that WD-40 can be used for everything from removing stickers and adhesives from glass to keeping cut grass from sticking to lawnmower blades. Now there's even a book about it: The WD-40 Book by Jim & Tim, The Duct Tape Guys.

The book pairs testimonial uses sent in by WD-40 users from across the globe with Jim & Tim's rather unique applications for the product. It also includes several "bonus" sections, including Jim & Tim's "retelling" of the history of WD-40 and an appendix of hundreds of uses sent in by WD-40 enthusiasts. The appendix features ideas submitted by consumers of how they use WD-40 in the house, garden, garage, at play and even at work, where WD-40 has a strong industrial following.

So why have the Duct Tape Guys written a book on WD-40?

"Well, we always figured duct tape was the only tool you ever needed in your toolbox," says Tim. "But then one day our toolbox rusted shut. We had to use WD-40 to get it open."

"Now we have a new credo," says Jim, Tim's brother-in-law and fellow Duct Tape Guy. "If it's not stuck and it's supposed to be, duct tape it. If it's stuck and it's not supposed to be, WD-40 it."

The familiar lubricant, penetrant, rust preventative, moisture displacer, and cleaner is found in more than 83 percent of households across the country, so chances are you have at least one can. Some of the other uses for WD-40 provided by customers over the years, and listed in The WD-40 Book include:

- Spray on concrete driveways to remove unsightly oil spots.
- Removes super strong glue from fingers and other unwanted surfaces.
- Waterproofs, shines and softens leather shoes.
- Removes cat paw marks from furniture and the hood of your car.
- Lubricates playground equipment – swings, teeter-totters, slides, etc.
- Shoppers: Stuck with a wobbly, sticky-wheeled shopping cart? Spray wheels with WD-40 to reduce wobbling and friction – less friction means faster shopping!
- Prevents cracks in rubber garden hoses.
- Works as a spot remover on stubborn stains.
- Cleans tile and protects grout.
- Removes crayon and indelible markers from a variety of surfaces.
- Keeps mud from sticking to bike or ATV.

Best buy in Birmingham. Walk to Seaholm High School. Desirable brick ranch with finished basement. This lovely home features 3 bedrooms, 2 full baths (main floor) with an open floor plan. Short distance to schools, town and park.

In 1987 a spectacular family room was added, (approx. 14½'x22'). Boasts beamed cathedral ceiling with floor to ceiling Anderson windows and French doors opening to deck. Serene setting with a very private backyard and mature trees.

This home is extremely well built with plaster walls and hardwood floors, move-in condition. Fabulous updated kitchen and nook, hickory kitchen. Very open with plenty of cupboards and counter space. Large pantry. School system is Birmingham Pierce Elementary, Derby Middle, and Seaholm High School. Two car detached garage, nice 60x160 lot, exterior recently painted. Immediate possession. Come today and treat yourself to the best buy in Birmingham.

For more information, call John Yogovich or Larry Horn at Century 21 MJL at (248) 855-8506 or (248) 855-8509.

The American Dream, owning your own home. Their's a lot to be said for a tree lined street, kids playine on the sidewalks and the elementary school (Kettering) only two blocks away. This pride of ownership neighborhood is the delight of the community (Birch Run Subdivision). This 1400 square foot brick and aluminum ranch offers a maintenance free exterior and a pretty perennial garden, The rear yard is fenced with a patio. (The yard is 50 by 154).

The interior is perfect for active lifestyles and entertaining with a generously sized living room and family room. The formal living (15x12) has a large window and provides ample space for formal gatherings. The kitchen (10x10) overlooks the dining area (13x8) which offers an abundance of cupboards and counters. All kitchen appliances remain.

The (25x14) family room with a natural fireplace and built in bookcases is perfect for a cozy evening, TV or for the children to play. The doorwall leads to the rear patio.

This home is complete with three bedrooms, one bath and a basement. Hardwood floors are under most carpets, and wet plaster walls. The style of construction that is considered (custom) with today's housing market. Westlands population is 82,000 and growing. The downtown central parkway is alive with shopping and restaurants. Summertime enjoy the community pool at Bailey Park.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"DON'T HIRE A COMMITTEE"

When people begin looking for the right home, they often find themselves working with a number of real estate sales associates. This is usually the result of going to open houses and calling REALTORS® in response to ads.

It may seem at first glance that it is to your advantage to have numerous salespeople helping you find a home. I refer to this approach as the committee method. Actually, it is better to work exclusively with only one REALTOR®. Here are some facts to consider:

KNOWING YOUR TASTES

In order to find the home best suited to your needs, your REALTOR® will need to evaluate potential homes as you would. This is only possible if one REALTOR® has spent enough time with you to understand your tastes. After seeing your reactions to a variety of homes, a picture of your ideal home begins to take shape in the mind of your REALTOR®. This process is not as successful if you spend a little time with a number of different sales associates.

YOUR MARKET KNOWLEDGE

If you have an exclusive arrangement with one REALTOR®, he or she knows all the homes you have seen. This person also is aware of other available homes and the reasons why you decided not to see them. This permits the search for the right home to continue in an orderly fashion while wasting a minimum of your personal time. Each new home that comes on the market is evaluated in terms of your previous responses to other homes.

YOUR PERSONALITY

Searching for the right home can be a tiresome task. It can become even more aggravating if you don't feel comfortable with your REALTOR®. This is another reason why it is to your advantage to work with one agent who is compatible with your own personality. Because you may spend considerable time with this person until the final closing, choose someone you can relate to so that your house hunting experience may be as pleasant as possible.

SUGGESTION: If you hire a committee, no one is responsible for finding the home you want. Designate one REALTOR® to conduct the search for your next home.

College students welcome as summer temporaries

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

Summer's just around the corner and if you're a college student or new graduate looking to earn some money, you might consider working on temporary assignments. Staffing companies say they're eager to recruit students.

Staffing firms in other parts of the country are equally enthusiastic. Bernadette Gilson, vice president of Temporary Staffing inc. (TSI), a Washington, D.C. based staffing firm, says, "We've typically been able to keep college students busy all summer long," says Gibson. "Particularly now, with unemployment so low, college students will be a very valuable commodity."

As to the type of assignments students and new grads are qualified for, Horton says, "We can definitely use them for general office and administrative assistant assignments. Today's college students are a lot more technologically advanced than students used to be and we're anxious to tap their computer skills." As to the computer skills in greatest demand, Horton says for word processing, Microsoft Word and WordPerfect for Windows are the most popular. For spreadsheets, she says, "Lotus is still being used but Excel is in greater demand." Gilson agrees and notes that for desktop publishing, "PowerPoint and Pagemaker are most requested." She also says those able to use the Internet are increasingly in demand.

According to Sharon Meister, manager of client services for the Falls Church, Virginia office of Advantage Staffing Services, those adept with the Internet may also qualify for temporary assignments involving Web design and support. Meister says her office also uses college students and new graduates for technical writing g, copywriting, and graphic design assignments, as long as they have the needed technical skills and prior experience doing similar work. That experience, notes Meister, can come from as internship or work on a school newspaper as well as a previous job.

If computer skills aren't your strength, don't despair. Horton says there are also temporary assignments for proofreaders, for telephone sales and for telemarketing that don't require computer skills. Firms that specialize in legal placement also say that during the summer, they use college graduates for temporary paralegal assignments in law firms, and undergraduates as clerks and receptionists. Actually, Horton says receptionists positions in a wide variety of industries are accessible to college students. "Someone who comes in well-groomed, with good communication skills, the ability to interact with different personalities and to do multiple tasks, can qualify for these jobs," she says.

Besides immediate earning power, students can upgrade their skills while working as temporaries. Temporary employees are frequently exposed to new programs while on assignment at companies. Many staffing firms also make computer-based tutorials in different software packages available to their temporary employees. Horton says her company has tutorials in such popular programs as Word for Windows, Excel and Lotus. "We encourage our temporaries to use the tutorials during their free time," she says. "And people add to their skill set, they can qualify for more opportunities and higher hourly rates."

Horton says firsthand exposure to the world of work is another valuable benefit of temporary assignments. "Students get a taste of the work world and the culture of various industries by working in temporary jobs," she says. Horton, who was a corporate human resources manager before joining the temporary industry, says that exposure can pay big dividends when students are looking to land their first full time jobs. "When they graduate, they're going to need something on their resumes that shows experience working in a professional environment," she says. Temporary assignments can provide that."

They can also provide valuable contacts for a future job search. "You don't know who you're going to connect with while temping," says Horton. "The executive you temp for might be a great contact to call when you see a full time job from that same company advertised."

For new graduates, ready to commit to full time jobs, assignments can even eliminate the need for a job search altogether. It's not uncommon for top performing temporaries to get job offers from the organizations where they are on assignment. Gilson says the potential for converting temporary positions into full time jobs is very high today. Horton concurs. "A lot of companies use temporary assignments to source candidates for full time positions," she says.

Even if an assignment isn't in a person's preferred career field, it can lead to their ideal job. "I recall a journalism grad who couldn't find a job in her field," says Gilson. "She worked on an assignment for someone who was really impressed with her and who asked what kind of job she was looking for. It turned out he was able to refer her to a colleague who had a job for a writer."

The Business Travel Report - Singapore Solutions

By Jane Lasky
Chronicle Features

As Singapore's status as one of Asia's top business centers grows, there are important rules for a working traveler to adhere to. That may take practice.

Conducting business in Singapore can become complicated. Indeed, many etiquette dos are American don'ts in this active city-state, so be careful how you tread in the business arena.

That said, here are some tips on how to proceed if you want to make a deal in Singapore:

•Be patient. Business negotiations proceed at a relatively slow pace. When working out the details of a complicated deal, expect to make several trips to Singapore before all the intricacies can be ironed out.

•Put all kidding aside. If you make a joke, your Singapore an counterpart will probably not get it. And if he or she does, that person is likely to think twice about whatever you have to say, categorizing you as a prankster even if you aren't one.

•Avoid jargon and idioms, Although English is the language of record for business negotiations, steer clear of American English as it is hardly recognizable to the typical Singaporean. Instead, stick as closely to the Queen's English as you can.

•Watch your mouth. Do not include religion, bureaucracy, politics or sex in idle conversation. Don't talk about personal success either, as that is considered tantamount to impolite boasting. Instead, safe subjects to talk about include tourism, travel, plans for the future, organizational successes and food.

•Keep you calm. Whatever happens, always remember: you cannot lose your temper if you want to get ahead. Go ahead, feel what you have to feel, just keep it to yourself or share it with colleagues from your side of the Pacific. If something seems terrible wrong, act like you can stay in control no matter what.

•Keep your promises. When you set a deadline, be practical about the time to which you commit. Decide what you can and can't do in that period of time and that way you won't have to ask for extensions, a request that simply wouldn't fly with your super-efficient Singaporean contact.

•Practice diplomacy. A big step toward cementing a successful business relationship in Singapore is creating a personal rapport with the company's executives. So, be polite, don't be crass, leave your temper back in the U.S. and mind your manners. In short, don't be an Ugly American.

•Maintain modesty. Even if you have done a perfect job, be sure to play that down when a singaporean sings your praises. He or she will be more in awe if you don't act too proud of your accomplishments or too sure of yourself no matter how difficult the task you have conquered.

•Never criticize and don't complain. Under no circumstances should you correct anyone in the presence of your Singaporean colleagues. If a blatant mistake has been made, discretely approach the person in private and tactfully try to set the situation straight. If you don't, you'll cause your colleagues to lose face--a lose-lose situation for all concerned.

AT WORK

By Lindsey Novak, Tribune Media

There's been a surge of letters recently having to do with the "sweatshop" conditions in the workplace - readers complaining about too much work for too little money and, even more discouraging for some, the lack of benefits.

One reader writes that his company gives them only two sick days per year, insurance that covers only 50 percent of expenses, only five paid holidays and a one-week vacation each year.

Another reader complains that her company gives only two weeks of vacation until employees have worked more than 10 years, while a third says that her employer took away all employee benefits, leaving workers with no health or dental insurance, no sick days and no vacation days.

"What's happening in America?" asks Joan. "Why can't companies give a month off as the British do?" In fact, another reader who recently returned from a business trip to England said his colleagues there were shocked when he told them his company allowed only a two-week vacation each year.

According to Ella Krucoff, a spokesperson for the European Commission Delegation in Washington, D.C., "There's a social consciousness in the European Union that has resulted in statutory benefits for workers that go far beyond anything in U.S. legislation or practice." If it seems like the Europeans care more about their workers' welfare, we only need to look at their legislation to see that it's true.

According to Paul Cornish, assistant information officer of British Information Services (which explains developments in British government policies), nearly 77 percent of the British workforce receives 16 to 30 vacation days annually, eight paid public holidays and an average of 12 sick says (and even more sick days if you work for the government). These minimum benefits are required by law.

The reader who just returned from England writes, "I'm a professional. I have to get the same amount of work done regardless of my time off, so my employer would lose nothing by giving me an additional two weeks of vacation each year. I'd be more satisfied, which would probably increase my productivity. It would also make me less likely to leave my current employer for greener pastures."

From the letters I receive, it does seem as though workers are burning out at a much faster rate these days. Many of them relate having to work 12- to 16-hour days. They have no time for relaxation, their tempers are short, more and more bosses seem abusive, and work problems seem magnified.

It's ironic that the downsizing of corporations in America increases their bottom lines while burning out their workforces. The question is, how long will it take before the bottom drops out? How bad will conditions in the workplace have to be before legislation is put in place to cure the cause rather than deal with the consequences? It isn't likely that corporate America will suddenly develop the social consciousness that Europe has known, but we can do more than just dream.

Countless letters to me end with, "Thank you for letting me vent." "Thank you for listening." "I just needed someone to complain to." Well, keep those letters coming, and perhaps send copies to your state and federal representatives, because maybe, one day, your elected officials will take note of what's happening to people in the workplace and do something about it.

"I found everything I was looking for at U of M Health Centers. Professional support, personal gratification, an international reputation. And best of all, it's right in my neighborhood."
Tamara Johnson, Medical Assistant

The University of Michigan Ambulatory Care Services represents the best of the medical world: a highly skilled staff, a supportive environment, and a medical philosophy that balances technology with personalized attention. And right now, we're looking for the best the medical field has to offer: talented LPN's, Medical Assistants and Medical Office Clerks who want to work in an atmosphere that encourages their continual professional and personal growth. There are opportunities in a community near you, including: Ann Arbor, Canton, Chelsea, Monroe, Northville, Plymouth and Ypsilanti.

LPN's- You'll be responsible for providing and coordinating patient care including performing a variety of tests and procedures to assist in the diagnosis/ treatment of patients and providing office support when necessary. Duties will include administering medications and IV's, drawing blood, and preparing specimens. Other duties will entail patient monitoring and instructions, obtaining health status and medical history, and maintaining patient files and records.

Medical Assistants-
Responsibilities involve providing clinical assistance with procedures, ensuring patient flow and completing medical information and administering treatment and tests. Duties will include obtaining patient information, venipuncture, injections, EKG's, basic office laboratory tests, scheduling patient appointments and medical record handling.

A high school diploma and graduation from an accredited medical assistant program or equivalent is required. Previous experience in a medical office or clinical setting is preferred.

Medical Office Clerks-
Primary responsibilities involve providing clerical support in an ambulatory setting. Duties entail facilitating patient office visits, registering patients, scheduling and coordinating appointments, maintaining accurate patient files, providing general billing information for patients, and performing data entry for insurance and billing.

Candidates must possess a high school diploma or equivalent. Previous clerical experience, including 1 year in a clinic or medical office setting is preferred. Familiarity with medical terminology, knowledge of on-line billing and office computer systems, and experience in an HMO setting are preferred.

We offer an outstanding compensation package that includes excellent benefits. Qualified candidates can send resume, indicating position of interest, to:

1997 Jaguar XK8 Coupe: Wow!!!

CAReport

By Anne Fracassa
Avanti NewsFeatures

The XK8 Coupe is Jaguar's first new sports car in 21 years. Well worth the wait, I'd say.

Let's start with the outside. It's so unique, so different, that a middle-aged fellow zipping his Jaguar XJ6 down I-696 the other day slowed down to take a gander.

The XK8 Coupe is classic Jaguar styling, but with more sporty lines and curves that sets it apart from anything on the road today. The front of the car, with its classic Jaguar stance and oval grille opening, makes a definite statement: Get outta my way. Fast.

And fast it is. This is the first V8 designed by Jaguar. It's also exclusive to the XK8. The 4.0-liter V8 is an all-aluminum DOHC 4-valve-per-cylinder that outputs 290 horsepower. More than enough, in fact. And fuel economy is so great that it doesn't qualify for the gas-guzzler tax.

This thing moves when you ask it to. Yet, it's so quiet, you almost have to check the instrumentation to make sure the engine has turned over. Top speed on the speedometer suggests you could take it to the max: 170 mph. Not real practical in Michigan, however, with our top highway speed of 70 mph.

But I took a chance. Took it up to 85 for a few seconds. The XK8 took it in stride and it felt more like I was traveling at 35. So smooth is the ride that you'd not take much notice at the higher speeds. In short, this one has to be a favorite with the state troopers.

The XK8 replaces the XJS, which retired at the end of last year. It was Jaguar's best-selling sports car ever with 115,413 built. Its reign was also Jaguar's longest with 21 years of production.

Lot's of classic Jaguar design is here, including the round analog gauges and the J-gate transmission shifter. The shifter, by the way, is also in wood. The steering wheel is constructed of a fine — and tasteful — mix of leather and wood. The feel is certainly unique.

The XK8 has a smart 5-speed automatic transmission, newly designed front and rear suspension systems and a variable assist/variable-ratio power steering system. Let's just say ride comfort is superb and the steering and handling are effortless.

As with most automakers, safety hasn't taken a back seat here. There are dual airbags and seat belt pretensioners that hold you to the seat during impact. High-strength steel is incorporated throughout the car, lending itself to a rigid body structure, front and rear crumple zones and stiff door frames and windshield frame.

There are active safety features as well, including 4-wheel disc brakes, anti-lock brakes, automatic stability control, optional traction control, independent suspension and rack and pinion steering.

Test driven was the coupe, but the XK8 is also available as a convertible. Jaguar projects sales of the XK8 will total about 12,000 this year worldwide, with 6,700 slated for import to the U.S. The convertible is expected to account for about 80 percent of those sales.

The convertible top features a one-button operation with automatic power latching and it can be raised of lowered while the car is traveling under 10 miles per hour.

As can be expected, the standard equipment list is quite extensive. About the only options you can choose from are chrome wheels, heated front seats, headlamp power wash, Harman Kardon 240-watt sound system with compact disc autochanger and traction control.

The only thing missing from this Jaguar is the chrome leaper hood ornament. Sorry, it's not an option. It's also the only Jaguar without it. But it does stare at you from the center of the steering wheel and on the key.
