Commissioner talks merger

■ The city and township have already merged fire departments, talks continue on merging public services and City Commissioner Joe Koch says why not start talking about a complete merger of city and township administration.

■ CITY AND TOWNSHIP

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

It's time to look at merging the city and township police departments, and possibly both governments, a Plymouth city commissioner is proposing.

City Commissioner Joe Koch said that with both the city and township governments exploring a merger of their departments of public services – the two fire departments have already merged – it's time to start looking at a complete merger of the city and township governments.

"What's left is administration. Why not merge the whole thing together?" Koch suggested last week. He's also raised the matter before the city commission, but no action has been taken.

In recent months, some city and township officials have said privately what Koch is saying publicly – that a merger of both governments should begin to be considered.

"In light of their search for a new police chief as well as their proposed millage for additional police officers, and considering that they're looking at joint services with the department of municipal services, it makes sense that we take a look at whether or not it's feasible at this time to merge dispatch and or the police departments to get a better level of services for the city and township and possibly reach some economies of scale," Koch said.

To get a joint police effort moving, he said, "it's going to take pressure from not only the city res-

Water main woes delay road work

BY KEVIN BROWN

By the first or second week of August, work should be finally finished on Ann Arbor Trail between Kellogg Park and the railroad tracks.

Because if it isn't, contractor Iafrate Construction Co. will have to pay fines "in the thousands of dollars," said city Municipal Services Director Paul Sincock, for violating a performance clause in the contract with the city.

While some drivers and adjacent business owners have lamented the time it's taking to finish the work, "delays are not related to the contractor," Sincock explained.

The deadline for finishing work on Ann Arbor Trail was extended by the city administration from Aug. 1 to Aug. 15. That was after the excavated water system, much of it more than 70 years old, more or less fell apart as the roadway was torn up.

Sincock said it was fair to extend the deadline for the contractor to complete the work, as the system was unusually old.

Iafrate is also doing work on other city roads this year, the first year in a 10-year road improvement program approved by city voters in November. The most notable stretch of roadway being torn up this summer, next to Ann Arbor Trail, is Farmer from Sheldon Road to the Plymouth Cultural Center.

Sincock said that Ann Arbor Trail isn't the only place road crews have come upon unexpected problems. "You anticipate that when dealing with an infrastructure as old as the city's," he said.

■ 'There's a significant amount of work that needs to be done. Some structures need to be rebuilt, manholes need to be rebuilt, there's substantial backfilling needed.'

Paul Sincock

But the problems on Ann Arbor Trail stand out. "There's a significant amount of work that needs to be done. Some structures need to be rebuilt, manholes need to be rebuilt, there's substantial backfilling needed," he said.

To save taxpayers money, city officials have also had to go through a bidding process to get the best deal on new water mains, and that's taken some time.

By today, work was to begin to replace 4-inch water lines along the roadway with new 12-inch lines. "We discovered all residents and businesses were hooked up with lead service lines, we're replacing them with copper," Sincock said.

Wind.

Forget the wild boar ribs warming in the galley or the diesel engines awaiting below decks "just in case."

The sailboaters in this weekend's 73rd running of the venerable Port Huron-to-Mackinac race on Lake Huron say when it comes to winning, the wind is where it's at.

Being without it - "becalmed" - is the worst possible scenario for the 284 skippers and 2,000 crew members who today are on the second leg of the four-day race that is the world's largest freshwater regatta.

Officially known as the Bacardi Bayview Mackinac Race and run by the Bayview Yacht Club of Detroit, the race began Saturday and is to finish with a big party on Mackinac Island Tuesday - although the lack of wind postponed the party twice last year.

When the wind is up, the ribs can wait. True sailboaters use their diesels only as a last resort - and they have no fondness for powerboaters, either.

Sailboaters "don't even like talking to them," said one. Besides kicking up huge, annoying wakes, powerboaters aren't sailors in the purest sense of the word, say sailboaters.

Population prompts preschool

■ PLYMOUTH-CANTON

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND

With Canton's mid-decade census information indicating a preschool population of 4,699, the Plymouth-Canton school district is going into the preschool business in 1998.

"That number of kids living in the school district is significant. The growth is certainly here," said Superintendent Chuck Little at the July 8 school board meeting. He said the district could expect an incoming kindergarten class of 1,200.

There were no figures available for preschool children living in Plymouth. Historically, however, the school district has drawn two-thirds of its students from Canton and one-third from Plymouth.

The district's tentative plans for a preschool call for a four-day, 2 1/2-hour program for 4- and 5-year-olds. The program would not be state-funded; it would cost parents $13 a day. "This is not a free program," said Little.

Portables eyed as temporary courthouse

The 35th District Court, destroyed by fire July 2, will likely have a temporary home across the street from the former courthouse on Plymouth Road.

Temporary classroom-like structures joined together to make one larger structure are the most likely solution being considered by court officials, said Court Administrator Kerry Erdman.

Until the decision is made on a long-term temporary home for the court, it will be moving from place to place, Erdman said.

Last week, the court operated out of the 17th District Court building in Redford. "Judge (John) MacDonald is handling a full criminal docket and Magistrate Eric Colthurst is handling informal hearings and small claims," Erdman said. Other court operations continued on the first floor at Unisys on Plymouth Road, east of the burned courthouse.

The court's criminal docket next week will be handled by Judge Ron Lowe at 34th District Court in Romulus.

Talks on merging public services will continue

By Kevin Brown
Staff Writer

Talks on merging Plymouth city and township municipal services operations have been slow in recent weeks, but are expected to continue, officials say.

"At least at the level of the committee meetings, it appears to be a feasible thing," said City Manager Steve Walters.

City and township officials met twice in late May. More meetings will be scheduled after Township Finance Director Rosemary Harvey – she's representing the township in the talks – can wrap up some work on the township budget.

Representing the city in the talks are Walters and Municipal Services Director Paul Sincock.

"We're trying to determine what the cost of the joint operation would be," Harvey said.

Both sides will also seek to determine what services to provide. "The city provides services that the township doesn't, the township will have to determine which services it wants to participate in," she said.

"The city has a much larger operation, for instance they have the leaf vacuum that we don't, they do some snowplowing of their roads and the township doesn't have responsibility for its roads, the county does," Harvey said.

Both sides are also reviewing their budgets on the cost to provide various services.

Information shared at the two previous meetings included union contracts, employee lists and services performed, Sincock said.

Time spent on each operation was also discussed, along with discussions of the city's sewer cleaning operations, Walters added.

"We're trying to determine 'Are there advantages to doing this, are there savings?' " Walters said.

Both sides will also have to determine rules for which operations get priority for pulling crews out of other tasks.

Contracts to haul garbage in both the city and township will also be reviewed, Walters said, adding one contract for a 35,000 population greater Plymouth could produce savings.

Officials on both sides say there will be no layoffs of municipal services employees in either municipality, if a joint department is created.

idents but from the township residents," he said.

"I would like to see some consideration given to the merger of the city and township. We have so many joint issues. It doesn't make a lot of sense to continue merging the departments piece by piece. At some future point what we're going to see happen is becoming one community instead of a community that's divided.

"If that means me not being a city commissioner anymore, I'm willing to forego that in terms of what's best for the community as a whole," he said.

Koch suggested assembling a group of non-government volunteers representing both the city and township including business owners and residents, to explore such a merger.

"You could look at the year 2000 as a goal to achieve this," he said. "I don't know if it's feasible or not, there needs to be a study done. If it's feasible, do it – we're (city) under dollar pressure to add police as well," Koch said.

Koch makes the suggestion to merge police and begin considering a joint city-township government merger as the township government is starting a search for a new police chief.

Consultant firm the Parr Group has already interviewed township trustees, department heads, police and fire staff and others to determine what the community wants in a new police chief.

The consultant firm is now placing ads in police trade publications to seek interested candidates, said township trustee Kay Arnold.

Arnold said because the township is carrying on with seeking a new police chief, that doesn't head off a possible city-township police merger.

She said the consultant also interviewed city representatives to determine what the community wants in a police chief, suggesting township officials are already looking toward an eventual city-township police merger.

On a full merger of city and township governments, Arnold said, "I would love to see that in the future.

"We should be combining our tax dollars instead of duplicating services," she said.

Plymouth Mayor Ron Loiselle said, "The city should look at and revisit the possibility of joining or consolidating government possibly through a blue-ribbon committee."

Loiselle said the city and township have been moving down the road toward an eventual merger, through continued efforts to merge various departments.

"We've been looking at it incrementally. Obviously, fire was the first part, we had success with the cable (TV) contracts, we've explored joint dispatch and lockup," he said.

"The township looking at hiring a new police chief offers a unique possibility to start talks on joining police, especially when our chief (Bob Scoggins) is talking about retiring in three to five years," Loiselle added.

"We're doing it incrementally rather than in one fell swoop," he said, adding a complete city-township government merger could happen within 10 years.

Wetland becomes a tryout pond for kayaks

BY KEVIN BROWN
STAFF WRITER

Venture Outdoors not only sells kayaks, it has a pond where you can try them out.

Upon moving six weeks ago from downtown Plymouth to a larger store at the new Sheldon Place Mall, owner Dan Argonis noticed there was a wetland pond nearby.

He asked for use of the 50-by-90 yard pond to be included in the lease, for kayak demonstrations. Now, a weekend kayaking class is available for those getting into the growing sport.

Because the new location is twice as big as the former shop on Penniman - about 3,200 square feet - "We've been able to add another kayaking line," Argonis said.

The 18-foot ceilings also allow staff to stand kayaks on end, when moving them around.

"It's the number one growing summer sport that's non-motorized, especially in Michigan," he said.

"It's just like paddling a canoe, they don't need a lot of special training," Argonis said. "We spend some time orienting them about how a kayak gets its initial stability."

Kayakers propel the craft through the water by manipulating a two-ended paddle. While holding it in the middle, the kayaker alternates paddle strokes in the water, first on one side of the craft then the other. "They only need 12 inches of water to float the boat," Argonis said.

There are three types of kayaks; white water, flat water and sea kayaks. Because of the area terrain, Venture Outdoors specializes in the latter two varieties. The kayaks weigh about 35 pounds each, making them very portable.

Kayaking differs from canoeing in that a person in the boat is only lower to the water. This increases the pushing effect made by the paddles, and that makes rowing a kayak more efficient than canoe rowing, Argonis explained.

Model prices range from $429 to $2,000. Top of the line models feature deck rigging, hatches and rudders and lots of room for storage. Venture Outdoors' suppliers are Necky of British Columbia and U.S. firm Walden Paddlers.

Fee for the two and a half-hour kayaking class is $30. It covers the basics of flat water kayaking. Class size is no more than five, and classes are scheduled by appointment on Fridays or Saturdays.

To minimize disturbance of the wetlands pond, just some dead trees on the shore were removed to create an entrance. Rather than build a dock, wood chips were laid down, also to keep the setting natural.

The pond, which is home to ducks and loons, is about four feet deep.

For information on classes, call (313) 453-1987.

School district interviews four architects this week

BY RENEE M. SKOGLUND
STAFF WRITER

The district refuses to let the bond lawsuit detour its plans to interview four architectural firms this week for the proposed new high school, elementary school and remodeling projects.

"The case is moving slowly in the courts. We have lost time in planning that could be painful in the future," said Superintendent Chuck Little July 8.

The district's architect selection committee reviewed written proposals from 13 firms. The following firms will be interviewed: Coquillard, Dundon, Peterson & Argenta of Southfield; Roy G. French Associates Inc. of Rochester, in association with Perkins & Will of Chicago, Ill.; Fanning/Howell Associates Inc. of Celina, Ohio; and Wakely Associates Inc. of Warren.

The board will choose one firm for each project.

The committee's selection criteria includes the firms' abilities to work closely with the projects' stakeholders, which include the board of education, administration, staff, parents and community citizens. Board members were adamant that the chosen firms be directed by the stakeholders' opinions.

"I'm not going anywhere without the faculty on either of these buildings, and we need the community," said Little.

Recently elected board member Roland Thomas said: "Involving community in the high school is very important. We need to step back and ask what is the instructional design of the Park going to be. I don't see the architectural firm leading that effort."

"If we need 55 classrooms, we'll not accept 22 classrooms," said board president Mark Horvath.

Board vice president Sue Davis asked Plymouth-Canton Education Association president Chuck Portelli, a member of the architect selection committee, if teachers would be willing to participate in creating an education vision for the new schools. "As far as I know," said Portelli.

Additional selection criteria include experience with the size and type of proposed projects and construction accountability.

Board treasurer Carrie Blamer asked John Birchler, director of business and operations, why it wasn't possible to select one firm for both the high school and elementary school projects.

Birchler replied: "The high school is a large project. The committee felt the company should be focused on that project. We are working on an aggressive schedule here. We felt we must be able to meet that fast track."

On Thursday, Little said the district had lost $400,000 in interest from the holdup of the $79.7 million bond sales. "It's a tragedy. I hope this thing moves along quickly."

Little also said Canton's mid-decade census report, which indicated a preschool population figure of 4,699, coupled with the new housing construction projects in Plymouth Township, emphasized the need to proceed on the bond issue as soon as possible.

"I don't know if our current building projects will meet our needs. The urgency of getting this project started on a human side is great, on a financial side is great," Little said.

In addition to interviewing architectural firms this week, the district awarded a $195,000 three-year contract in June to Charles Bisel of FOCUS/Facility Consulting Services of West Bloomfield to act as construction supervisor.

Members of the architect selection committee include: Pat Patton, Plymouth Canton High School principal; Peggy Brooks, Miller Elementary School principal; Dan Menghini, director of maintenance and operations; Dave Sutherland, Plymouth Canton High School teacher; Kary Amin, citizen and bond steering committee member; Dan Coogan, parent and school community council member; and Chuck Portelli, president of the Plymouth-Canton Education Association.

Judy Evola, community relations director, said the other architect firms that submitted proposals haven't been eliminated, "based on the fact that these are such large projects."

Regional vice president appointed to new bank

Peoples State Bank announced that Michael D. Weaver has been appointed Regional President for the bank's newly established Plymouth region.

Weaver, who brings more than 16 years of banking experience, primarily in the Plymouth area, arrived at Peoples State Bank from First of America Bank, where most recently he served as vice president and regional group manager.

lenges to a sail boater's skills.

"Sometimes, you see only two or three knots" of boat speed because of light wind "and you wonder why you're even out there," said Curt Nixon of Livonia, one of 10 Observerland sailboat skippers entered in this year's "Mac".

But Nixon, a 20-year racing veteran who was "sailing before I could walk," has also seen storms at sea like those that hit Detroit July 2. He's even seen "snow and sleet off Alpena at the end of June."

Skipper of a 40-foot cutter named Freedom that finished second in its class two years ago and has crossed the Atlantic Ocean four times, Nixon hopes to sail it around the world two years from now.

Another Livonian, Gerald Frabutt, says of the wind, "The more you're able to judge wind conditions, the better able you are to compete.

"There are so many different wind conditions, you want to try to be where the velocity is greater."

Frabutt, who is trying to win Victory No. 3 with Boat No. 3, knows whereof he speaks. The 20-year racing veteran, who's been in 17 Macs, won his class in 1994 with a J-105 "because I was able to skirt the edges of storm patterns and pick up a little wind." In 1990, he won his class and was second overall with a J-29.

Frabutt's new boat, a 30-foot Capo, uses lighter winds and narrower tacking angles, thus covering greater distances in less time.

The skipper also tries "staying focused at night." Frabutt, 52, who sleeps little on main racing days, says "other boats seem to lose their focus" in the dark, but he makes some of his biggest gains then.

Another skipper who's tasted victory is Darrell Cope of Plymouth, sailing his 13th Mac on the same 34-foot racer-cruiser with which he won the overall championship in 1991.

"We got going real fast downwind," he recalls. "We made a great spinnaker run to Cove Island.

"We were surfing with the big boys, doing close to 12 knots" in beating 259 other boats for the big prize.

"We're out to win it bigtime, we want it again - but there will be fun to be had on the Limerick," said its captain, whose father Arthur is among his crew of nine.

What Charles Antal of Canton likes about sailing is "being able to master all of the elements."

He says his crew of 12 - his wife and friends - aboard his 38-foot Catalina sailboat, the Querencia, has "to be enthusiastic and they have be able to work intensely for short periods followed by long periods of rest until something else has to be done."

A sailor since age 20, the 47-year-old Antal says sailing "challenges all aspects of a person, their physical and mental abilities."

Trying to cut time is "where the intensity and enthusiasm comes in - you're constantly trimming the sails, making adjustments," he says.

While some have humorously likened sailboat racing to standing in a cold shower tearing up $100 bills, Antal says, "True sailors know there's a lot more to it.

"I get a great deal of gratification from it," he said.

Antal has cruised the Atlantic coastline and would like to cross it someday.

Timothy Skillman of Plymouth is marking two anniversaries. His 46-foot sloop Aerie is 25 years old and his parents, Newton and Sally of Bay City, are celebrating 50 years of marriage. Newton joins Tim and his two brothers and sister as "the core crew of 10 people," says Tim.

The Aerie weighed 31,500 pounds, sleeps nine and has two bathrooms complete with showers. "For my boat, heavy air (strong winds) would be nicely appreciated," he said.

The boat, which docks in Bay City, was new to the crew last year. This year, however, Newton has "gone through all of the systems on the boat to make sure everything is perfect."

Dave Williams of Livonia, whose boat is a 33-foot Tartan-10 racer which competes without handicap, has been doing the Mackinac since 1966 and has lots of memories.

Among them are the 1950s-era sailing photos taken by the late Detroit Free Press photographer Tony Spina, which Williams and his friend, Joe Bauser, donated to the Port Huron Yacht Club. Bauser, former editor of the Detroit Yacht Club's Main Sheet, died this month of cancer at age 80.

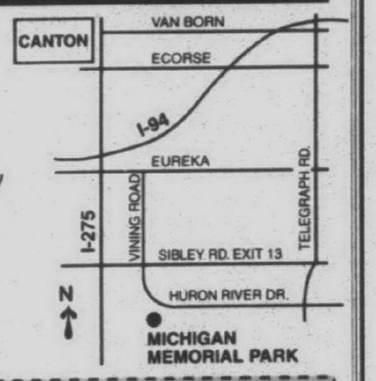

Another cherished memory is a brief conversation Williams had years ago with George Van, veteran Detroit News boating editor who had covered 49 Macs.

At Van's 50th breakfast on Mackinac Island, Williams asked him for comments on the race.

"Damned silly way to travel," the newsman said.

Oil spilled into Newburgh Lake not toxic - GM

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER

Preliminary test results indicate oil which spilled into Newburgh Lake from the General Motors Delphi Chassis plant contained dangerous PCBs.

Furthermore, Michigan environmental officials believe the July 9 spill by General Motors may be one of many by the automaker, leading to speculation GM may be partly responsible for the toxic damage to the lake...which forced its closing and clean-up.

"The preliminary fingerprinting analysis of the oil shows some PCBs present," said Ellen Lindquist, the chief deputy director of the Wayne County Department of Environment. "The sample taken is consistent with the oil that is used at the plant. General Motors has admitted to the spill, however, they do dispute the findings of PCBs."

General Motors spokeswoman, Marsha McGee, says the automaker does admit about 1,000 gallons of oil was accidentally dumped into the storm sewer July 9. However, she says the content was not toxic and was a one-time occurrence.

"I don't doubt they found PCBs in our oil, considering there were already PCBs in the lake," said McGee. "Our tests show there were no PCBs in the oil."

Lindquist says state officials are awaiting further tests to be positive of results, and notes this could become a battle of experts.

Newburgh Lake: Workers conduct tests on water at the western Wayne County lake.

"If the tests continue to show traces of PCBs, I'm sure it will come down to questions of how the samples were taken," said Lindquist.

Lindquist tells the Observer state officials indicate the latest test showing PCBs in the spilled GM oil lends itself to speculation this may not be the first spill from the automaker. Lindquist says environmentalists now believe GM may be partially responsible for the PCB problems which shut down Newburgh Lake and forced its clean-up with federal funds.

Lindquist says workers at the sight noticed a sheen on the lake in April, but couldn't determine if it was organic material or a spill. With the latest incident, authorities are looking more at a possible spill, and at General Motors.

If General Motors is found to have previously dumped PCB-laden oil into Newburgh Lake, that would be "an extremely big revelation" according to Lindquist.

"If it is proven at all to be true, we would have a significant discussion with the Delphi plant because we are using Environmental Protection Agency grant money to clean up Newburgh Lake," said Lindquist.

If GM is found liable, the automaker would be responsible for part of the $10-million being spent to clean-up and improve the lake.

"There are still a lot of things to be proven before it is determined if the Delphi plant is responsible for any PCB contamination in Newburgh Lake," said Lindquist.

"General Motors has been very responsible in owning up to the spill, meeting immediately with environmental officials," noted Lindquist. "They reported the spill July 11, and were very concerned and cooperative."

McGee says General Motors officials have been talking with environmental officials on a daily basis concerning the latest spill.

On Wednesday, July 16, General Motors acknowledged publicly it was responsible for the spill.

"The plant was closed at the time of the spill for summer shutdown," said McGee. "It was during the maintenance and cleaning procedures that the accident occurred."

The oil, in most cases, would have remained in the plant's detention basin and recycled through the facility's own filtration system. However, because of the huge amount of rain, the overflow from the detention pond spilled into the storm sewer and into Newburgh Lake.

General Motors says it will reimburse Wayne County for any costs of the clean-up for the latest spill.

"If we are responsible, the clean-up won't be at taxpayers expense," explained McGee.

Inland Waters of Detroit was hired to clean the spill, with crews working 24-hours a day since July 9. County officials say the clean-up cost through Sunday, July 13, totaled $30,000 for just vacuuming the oil from the lake. Costs are expected to rise dramatically when the final bill for tests, disposal, and on-site crews is figured. Clean-up efforts continued through at least Friday.

Lindquist says at least one good thing came from this month's heavy storms which created so much damage throughout the county.

"The storms pushed a lot of logs and debris against the dam, and luckily the oil didn't get past it," said Lindquist. "We don't believe any of the oil spilled into the Rouge River."

There were delays also related to the discovery of a fiber optic line along Ann Arbor Trail that the company which owns it said it was unaware it was there, Sincock said.

After road work began in May on Ann Arbor Trail, the road was left open to one-way westbound traffic only. "It's unfortunate the bureaucratic part of it took so long," said Coffee Studio owner Scott Lurain. "Besides, there's a lot of people that use that road."

"I can understand, I live right there," Sincock said. "We're trying to get this done quickly as we can."

While CSX Railroad had originally planned to lower the railroad grade on Ann Arbor Trail to make crossing the tracks smoother for drivers, Sincock said the work is being put off to mid-August.

According to Verna Anible, director of instruction, the program would need at least 20 students to pay for itself. The $13 a day would cover salary and benefits for a teacher and an aide, plus nutritional snacks. Less than $1,000 would come from the general fund for basic supplies.

"The state will not finance anything before kindergarten," she said.

The district is projecting a need for two classrooms to accommodate 44 children. The program would be located in the northern portion of the district, which has less enrollment. It is not likely the two classrooms will be in the same building. If that was the case, "we'd be using them for regular classrooms," said Anible.

Enrollment in the program would be based on a combination of early registration and a lottery. Selection would be balanced by socioeconomic, gender and age criteria. "It needs to be a heterogeneous group of kids," said Anible.

When asked about general eligibility, Anible said: "Any 5-year-old whose parents don't feel they are ready for kindergarten would be eligible for this program."

Although the program is not a "begindergarten," Anible perceives little difference other than shorter class time. "I'm not sure there would be any difference. All programs differ from one another and from the same program the previous year. Teachers make adjustments based on the needs of the children. This preschool program and an old begindergarten program would be quite similar."

A begindergarten program ran in the district from 1984 to 1988.

Anible stressed that preschool would not be appropriate for all "early fives," those children whose fifth birthday falls before Dec. 1. "We do not want this to be a program that would delay entrance into school by those students with special education needs."

Last May, a Canton couple began a petition drive to have the district start a begindergarten program. Their child had special education needs and a late November birthday.

The child no longer was eligible for the one-year Michigan Department of Education School Readiness Program for 4-year-olds, which requires a child to be 4 by Dec. 1 but not 5 by Dec. 1. And, once in kindergarten, the child would no longer receive special education support through the Infant and Preschool Special Education Program.

The couple had rejected the district's recommendation at the time that their child be placed in kindergarten with speech and language support offered within the school. Currently, they are working with the district through an Individual Education Planning Committee (IEPC) process.

Anible did not comment directly on the suitability of the proposed preschool program for the Canton family's child. She did say there are currently four options available to parents who don't think their child is ready for kindergarten:

- Regular kindergarten if the child is 5 with whatever level of support the child needs;
- Private preschool program;
- Infant and Preschool Special Education Program (IPSEP);
- Keeping the child at home.

In reference to early fives with special education needs, Little said the proposed preschool program was "the best we can deliver."

Board trustee Elizabeth Givens said the program should be presented to parents as a choice. "You do not have to send your child to school. You can stay home with them."

Board treasurer Carrie Blamer said: "The need is there. We are educators. And if we don't start looking at our customers and looking at families coming into our district, we will be lost."

going to continue here in Unisys for the next 60 days," Erdman said.

To find temporary housing for the court – before long-term temporary housing is identified – Erdman asked the state court administrator's office to send out a fax to all area courts asking if there were any open dates or weeks a courtroom would be available.

Erdman said, "We got many responses, from virtually every district court. Everybody offered at least a day – Livonia has offered a week, Westland, Romulus several weeks, Dearborn."

"We do have plans in the works for permanent interim facilities utilizing the large parking lot at Unisys," he said. Modular units that can be linked together would be placed there, if the plan is approved, by around Sept. 15, he said.

Retired 35th District Judge James Garber is heading a committee to determine a permanent home for the court. The committee includes Erdman, Canton Finance Director Tony Minghine, Plymouth City Manager Steve Walters and former Plymouth Mayor Jim Jabara. Judges Lowe and MacDonald and architect David Schaff are serving as advisers.

"The biggest problem is finding a suitable location to carry us through the next 18 months," Erdman said, until a permanent courthouse is built. "We don't have it 100 percent firmed up (modulars) but it's looking real good. We're also looking at the former Highland Appliance building."

He said the cost to renovate that building to accommodate the court could be prohibitive.

With the court now operating out of Unisys and temporary sites, the transfer of information and recording of payments is difficult. "It's getting done, but it's taking a lot of work. The staff has been tremendous, they've been very upbeat," he said.

People with business with the court are encouraged to mail in any payments, or use a drop box at the parking lot of the old court house.

The court is accepting bids on demolition of the former courthouse. "They're going to excavate, leaving the first floor slab and basement," Erdman said. During the last week this month, engineers will perform stress tests on the existing foundation see if it's still good, he added.

Most of the files destroyed in the fire are being restored, Erdman said.

Benchmarking MEAP

Teachers develop test to measure progress

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER

The Michigan Educational Assessment Program tests, those taken by elementary students to determine how they rank in several subjects, have lately become more than just a learning tool for educators.

In recent years, MEAP test scores have become very meaningful to parents who have used the results to determine everything from the best schools to the best place to live.

Wayne County officials are hoping to do away with the competitiveness of the test scores by developing a test of their own, written by teachers.

"We are not using the MEAP scores the way they were meant to be, to gauge where a child should be in certain subjects at different grade levels," said Mike Flanagan, superintendent of the Wayne County Regional Educational Service Agency. "By developing the Benchmark Project, we will be able to get a snapshot of where a student is before the MEAP tests are given."

'Our goal is to come up with tests to give students in years they don't take the MEAP tests so we can determine if we are teaching toward the MEAP objectives.'

Helen Stanks
Wayne County RESA

RESA has recruited a group of 72 teachers from throughout Wayne County to develop tests which will help teachers and school administrators determine where they need to make changes in curriculum and instructional methods.

"Our goal is to come up with tests to give students in years they don't take the MEAP tests so we can determine if we are teaching toward the MEAP objectives," notes Helen Stanks, director of educational services for RESA. "That way we can decide what needs to be done to the curriculum. It will also make the MEAP tests less competitive."

Currently, Michigan elementary students take the MEAP tests in fourth and seventh grades for reading and math, with writing and science in fifth and eighth grades. State officials are also developing a social studies MEAP test to give to fifth and eighth graders.

The Benchmark Project is unique in that tests are being written by teachers to help them develop their curriculum.

"We need to make the Benchmark tests as close as we can to the MEAP format so as not to confuse the students," said Pattee Rupert, a fourth-grade teacher at Plymouth-Canton's Field Elementary. "I have felt for years we've had to give up necessary curriculum hours to take time out to teach for the MEAP tests. The new tests will eliminate the need for that."

Teachers and administrators are finding the Benchmark Project a way to better educational standards in Wayne County.

"This is one of the most innovative and exciting things we have ever done," said Flanagan. "When we first shared this concept with local superintendents back in April, they immediately responded this type of test would be very useful to them."

"We're due to have the pilot tests ready for use at some schools in the fall," commented Flanagan. "We hope to have the Benchmark Project ready for use by all 34 Wayne County school districts next spring."

Dentistry in the 90s
by Herbert M. Gardner, D.D.S. & Martha P. Zinderman, R.N., D.D.S.

GRINDING TO A HALT

The first indication that many people have that they are grinding their teeth at night comes from bedmates who report the sound of gnashing teeth. However, because only 20 percent of people with this problem (called bruxism) actually make noise in their sleep, their dentists are usually the first ones to spot the signs of teeth grinding. They include worn-down teeth, damaged dental work, and even tooth fractures. Symptoms of bruxism that patients themselves may notice include waking up with aching jaws, muscle pain, or dull headaches. The culprit of all this grinding and its serious effects is usually tension. Until a change in lifestyle or a stress-management technique can be put in place to stop the cause of bruxism, the dentist can prescribe a plastic mouth guard to be worn at night over the upper or lower teeth to protect teeth from chronic grinding.

Are you a candidate for a night guard? At LIVONIA VILLAGE DENTAL ASSOCIATES, we provide quality, comprehensive dental care for the entire family. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting the problems after they occur. We're located at 19171 Merriman Road, where we're always happy to discuss improving your smile, and thus, your total feeling of self-esteem. We're currently accepting new patients - call 478-2110 to schedule an appointment. Smiles are our business.

Musicians to perform free concerts

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER

Some of the area's finest musicians from Schoolcraft College's Chamber Music and Piano Concert Performance program will perform three free concerts in August.

Schoolcraft's program is unique among summer institutes for young pianists as students learn and perform concertos with a professional chamber orchestra composed of musicians from the Detroit Symphony Orchestra and other distinguished music groups.

Many of the student performers recently returned from a three-week trip to St. Petersburg, Russia, where they studied at the St. Petersburg Piano Institute and performed in czarist concert halls.

The Wednesday, Aug. 4, concert will feature Sanjay Mody, a talented 11-year-old from Birmingham. Mody will perform the Mozart Concerto in G Major as well as solo piano works by Scarlatti, Beethoven and Chopin accompanied by the Ambassador String Quartet.

The free performances at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 5 and Friday, Aug. 6, will feature excerpts from works by Mozart, Bach and Beethoven, performed by students and accompanied by the Ambassador String Quartet.

All concerts will be held in room 530 of the Forum Building at Schoolcraft College in Livonia beginning at 7 pm.

Library Network has new home

The library cooperative which services most municipal libraries in the Detroit area is moving its headquarters.

The Library Network, Michigan's largest library cooperative serving more than 2.5-million people in six counties, has bought a building in Southgate to become the organization's permanent home. The 26,000 square-foot, two-story office structure is located at 13331 Reeck Road. The six-year-old building, on 3.5-acres of land, was purchased at a cost of $1,525,000.

"While we would have preferred a new home to be more centrally located in our service area, it's the perfect building because we won't have to do much work to convert it to our needs," said Harry Courtright, director of the Library Network.

The network has leased office space from Wayne County the past 20-years at 33030 Van Born in Wayne. However, county officials will now use that structure for its own purposes.

The Library Network provides such services as computers, Internet connections and interlibrary loans for municipal, school and college libraries.

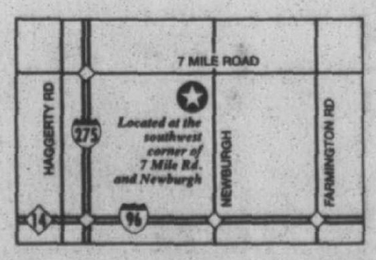

The cooperative serves libraries in Wayne, Oakland, Macomb, Livingston, Washtenaw and St. Clair counties.

Resort government

A corporation of summer resort owners is a "public body" subject to the Freedom of Information Act, Attorney General Frank Kelley has ruled.

In an opinion requested by Sen. Mike Rogers, R-Brighton, Kelley looked at a group formed under the Summer Resort Owners Corporation Act of 1929.

Under that statute, he said, the group is "a body politic and corporate" that "shall have all the general powers and privileges and be subject to all of the liabilities of a municipal corporation and become the local governing body."

After the group has been incorporated, he said, an election may be called to determine whether the entire territory should incorporate. "As a consequence of this section, it is possible that at least some property owners may be involuntarily compelled to submit to the corporation's jurisdiction."

Even though the corporation has no powers over taxes, streets and zoning, Kelley said, "The Michigan Supreme Court has characterized as 'quasi-governmental' the grant of. . . 'certain police powers over the lands owned by said corporation and within its jurisdiction' . . ."

That makes the resort property corporation a public body under FOIA and OMA, he said.

On the other hand, unincorporated groups of property owners aren't public bodies and therefore aren't subject to the sunshine laws.

Phone break

Michigan schools would get a phone bill break on their Internet and two-way interactive connections under a legislative bill awaiting Gov. John Engler's signature.

Senate Bill 637 would amend the Michigan Telecommunications Act to require that service providers that received federal "universal service" support to provide those intrastate services at discounts.

Its value to schools is uncalculated, according to the Senate Fiscal Agency. But the Federal Communications Commission has provided for discounts of 20 to 90 percent with "disadvantaged" schools receiving even higher discounts. There would be no cost to the state.

Current the FCC requires telecommunications providers (phone companies) to offer discounts to schools on interstate services. The Michigan bill would require he discounts apply to intrastate (within Michigan) services.

The bill would apply to both public and private elementary and secondary schools.

Here's Internet

Rep. Greg Kaza, R-Rochester Hills, is sponsoring six bills to expand the amount of public documents available on Internet. His bills would require availability on Internet of:

- All state legislative bills and amendments.
- House and Senate journals, the official records of votes on bills.
- "Status" records. These tell the legislative history of a bill, when it was introduced, what committee it went to, what committee action was taken, and what floor action was taken.
- All staff analyses (such as the Senate Fiscal Agency's) of a bill.
- All postings of legislative committee hearings.
- The Questor database.

Bill numbers were unavailable as of the close of the legislative session.

Lottery payoffs

Lottery winners would find it easier to collect more of their winnings immediately under a bill sponsored by Sen. Robert Geake, R-Northville.

"Large lottery prizes are paid in annual installments over a 20-year period," said Geake. But that's too long a wait for the elderly and people who want to start a business, buy a home or pay extraordinary medical expenses.

"My legislation will amend the lottery act to clearly state that voluntary assignment of lottery prize payments, pursuant to court order, is allowed."

No bill number had been assigned as of the end of the legislative session.

New frozen desserts are refreshingly cool

We were holding court at the kitchen table after an unexpected, but welcome last minute dinner with my brother and sister-in-law on a hot, muggy July Monday. Not wanting to make an issue out of what to bring for dessert, I grabbed two new products my co-workers and just I sampled – "Savino Italian Sorbet," and "Stroh's Homemade Ice Cream featuring Sanders" ingredients.

Before making a case for why readers should buy these products, I thought I'd send up another trial balloon, and let my husband and in-laws try them.

Savino Italian Sorbet

Chunks of orange and pineapple, shredded coconut and banana. Something this good can't be low in fat argued my brother-in-law the attorney as he sampled Tropical Banana.

STAFF PHOTO BY BRYAN MITCHELL

Summer licks: Chef Lou DeCillis, maker of Savino Italian Sorbet, recently introduced four new flavors.

Before passing judgment, we read the label – 106 calories per half cup serving, 0 fat. The verdict – "if I was on a diet, and counting calories and fat, I'd eat this," said my brother-in-law who regularly works out, and doesn't worry too much about fat and calories.

My sister-in-law liked it too, but David, my husband, wasn't interested. He sampled a spoonful, said "it's OK if you like that sort of thing," and ate his ice cream.

Introduced by Chef Lou DeCillis of West Bloomfield based Savino Sorbet, Tropical Banana is one of four new Savino Italian Sorbet flavors. The others – "Very Berry" – chunky strawberry with a blueberry ripple, "Orange" with mandarin orange pieces, and "Peacharino" – peach and tangerine swirled together, are just as good, contain 0 fat, and 106 calories per half cup serving.

A native of Brooklyn, New York, DeCillis graduated from the Culinary Institute of America in 1970.

"I have been a frozen dessert hound dog since I was a kid," said DeCillis. "After I graduated I made ice cream, and had a catering business. At the time there was no company specializing in homemade ice cream or sorbet. I had friends out here, got a U-Haul trailer one way, and loaded my stuff."

In 1978 he opened a dessert parlor in Livonia at Seven Mile and Middlebelt, and began building his business. "In the '70s when I told people my sorbet contained no fat or cholesterol they would look at me and say 'so what, who cares.' I read a lot of inspirational materials. You gotta hang in there long enough."

His wholesale business grew, and he closed the store in Livonia in 1989. Lou DeCillis' time has come. People care about fat content, and cholesterol, but they also want desserts that taste good. Savino Italian Sorbets are smooth, fruity and creamy. They're made with all natural ingredients, and soothingly delicious on a hot day. Dieters, calorie and fat counters will whisper a silent "thank-you Lou" when they taste these sorbets, but those who can afford to indulge will also enjoy them because they taste so good.

Fans include President Bill and Hillary Clinton. Savino Lemon Italian Sorbet gets the president's vote, while Hillary prefers Michigan Cherry.

The Savino Italian Sorbet product line also includes Red Raspberry. Look for Savino Italian Sorbet at your favorite store. Savino Italian Sorbet, is sold in pints, in new resealable, recyclable containers, and retails for $2.69. Check out the Savino web site – www.sorbet.com

NATIONAL HOT DOG AND SAUSAGE COUNCIL

Frankly speaking: Everyone relishes hot dogs in the summer. A platter of hot dogs with various toppings, including ketchup, mustard, corn relish, coleslaw and bacon is a surefire hit.

It's summer - Hot Diggity Dog!

BY RUTH MOSSOK JOHNSTON
SPECIAL WRITER

How do you explain our fascination with the simple hot dog? Our love for franks, appears to relate back to childhood.

According to a poll done by the National Hot Dog & Sausage Council "kids are the household members who enjoy hot dogs most." Regardless of who's eating them, Americans consume about seven billion hot dogs between Memorial Day and Labor Day – now that's a load of dogs!

Everyone seems to have at least one childhood hot dog story to share.

Linda Lagerstrom of Bingham Farms, enthusiastically shares her tale of Mom's Little Red Hot Dogs – "Mom served Little Red Hot Dogs with Macaroni and Cheese for dinner for me and my brother when Dad was out golfing. We loved it. It was comfort food, certainly not for guests, but definitely a real family food."

These bite-sized dogs immersed in ketchup and brown sugar were a real favorite at Linda's childhood home in Marshall Michigan. "Today, when I'm down in the dumps, I still make little red hot dogs – but as an adult, I've added barbecue sauce and onions!" Linda's husband Michael is the one making the Mac & Cheese – "He's a wizard at that," says his pro-comfort food wife.

Judy Ostro of West Bloomfield relates her husband's old favorite – Cowboy Dinner. These bite-sized kiddy dogs were added to baked beans. Judy's mother-in-law Rose, made Cowboy Dinner on Saturday nights, when it was hot dog night at the senior Ostros. Judy admits to still making them occasionally, minus the crumpled bacon that one can add for a special treat.

"We don't eat this too often, watching fat intake at this point in life." Being a creative person and an art teacher, Judy also made "Hot Dog People" when her daughter was young, and wouldn't eat anything other than simple beefy dogs.

"I used lettuce for hair, cheese slices for clothes and the actual sliced dog as the body – condiments made a great face and sometimes cheese for eyes. I've always been artistic in the kitchen, you know, presentation is important!"

Hot dogs may be dietary staples for kids, but they are also a favorite at the ballpark – they even got their name there. In 1901, at the Polo Grounds in New York, a concessionaire was losing money selling ice cream and pop (they called it then, and still do – soda), so he sent his salesman to buy up all the dachshund sausages (what they were called at the time). When the vendors went through the stands with their portable hot water tanks to keep the sausages hot, they yelled "Get your dachshund sausages while they're red hot!" Hearing the vendors shouting their slogan, sports cartoonist Tad Dorgan drew a cartoon of a barking dachshund sausage nestled in a roll – unsure of how to spell dachshund, he wrote "Hot Dog!" Not only coming up with an idea and making his deadline, Dorgan created an icon.

If all the hot dogs consumed in major league ballparks were laid end to end, they would stretch from Yankee Stadium in New York City to Dodger's Stadium in Los Angeles – that translates to 26 million hot dogs!

While ballpark franks are universal from stadium to stadium, many cities are famous for their preparation of hot dogs; Coney Islands (chili, mustard and onions) are special to Detroit.

New York City vendors offer steamed onions, sauerkraut, and pale yellow mustard with their steamed dogs. Chicago Dogs are served with dark green relish, chopped raw onion, tomato slices, yellow mustard, topped with a dash of celery salt, and served on a poppy seed bun. Don't forget batter-dipped corn dogs, which are served at county fairs. Texas and Iowa both take credit for inventing corn dogs!

Many Easterners prefer beef franks, Westerners prefer poultry dogs (chicken or turkey), and Midwesterners eat more pork and beef hot dogs than any other region of the U.S. Vegetarians have even made their mark in the hot dog department with links made from either tofu or vegetable product. Our traditional favorite hot dogs now come in low-fat, lower fat, and no fat.

Toppings for hot dogs are almost endless; cheese, grilled or raw onions, sauerkraut, coleslaw, relish, pickle slices, chopped or sliced tomatoes, sliced jalapenos, chopped vegetables, bacon, salsa, ketchup, fancy mustards, and chutney. Despite all these choices mustard still comes in first.

Outdoor grilling is the favored method of cooking hot dogs for 41 percent of American adults. Boiling is the number two hot dog cooking method nationwide, except in the South, where boiling rivals the barbecue grill.

According to the National Hot Dog and Sausage Council twenty billion hot dogs are sold yearly. July is National Hot Dog Month – can you dig it?

Germans tout perfect wine and food matches

BY ELEANOR & RAY HEALD
SPECIAL WRITERS

Why aren't German wines more popular? Probably because American wine consumers don't understand them. About 10 years ago, Germany's wine producers decided they'd stray from their tradition and attract more wine drinkers with drier wines. They labeled them Trocken (dry) and Halbtrocken (half-dry). They were dry, but also tart and rather lean in the mouth. American wine drinkers, in general, didn't like them.

The good news is that several German estate-wine producers are touting tradition, sticking with their well-balanced wines, riesling in particular, and showcasing them as best wine matches with a broad array of foods.

"Pradikat wines are making a comeback as matches with food," said Derek Vinnicombe, a major exporter of German estate wines. His portfolio of wine producers make micro quantities of wine. The largest may make only 1,000 cases of one wine while the smallest only 200 to 300 cases. Continuing good news – these wines are available in our market.

Gunter Theis, director of Weingut Schloss Schonborn in the Rheingau, discussed current vintages – "1993 and 1995 are quite similar in that we had very ripe grapes in both years. However, 1994 has more refreshing acidity upfront."

The biggest market for Schonborn wines is Asia. It's not difficult to tell why when tasting the 1994 Schloss Schonborn Erbacher Marcobrunn Riesling Kabinett $13 with Japanese or Chinese food. Dungeness Crab Hong Kong style is a great match. For crab cakes, though, we like the Schonborn 1996 Riesling Kabinett $11 because of its youthful fruit.

"For pork dishes, I like a spatlese quality level," Theis added. "Americans think spatleses are sweet wines. But if you talk about residual sugar offering sweetness, you have to discuss acidity at the same time. In a year like 1990, there's so much balance in riesling spatleses that they are perfectly matched to a pork dish."

Stefan Bollig of Weingut Bollig-Lehnert in the Mosel region pointed out that in the last 10 years, "there has been an incredible string of quality vintages." While he says 1990 is tops in this decade, he also likes 1994. But among his offerings, the 1995 Trittenheimer Apotheke Riesling Kabinett $9.50 sports delicious apple aromas and flavors and ends refreshingly clean. The higher, yet seemingly more balanced acidity, of the 1995 Bollig-Lehnert Piesporter Goldtropfchen Riesling Kabinett $10 gives it a bigger aftertaste portending a broad range of food matches such as scallops, cream of asparagus soup or vegetable risotto.

"We've been sleeping in the market until

■ Wowee Maui! Hawaii has a winery. Tedeschi Vineyards on Maui has made wine for over 20 years. For the first time, it's available in Michigan. There's pineapple wine, both sparkling and still and wines made from the Carnelian grape variety. All are lower in alcohol and light on the palate. Hawaiian Pinéapple Sparkling Wine (makes a dynamite Mimosa with fresh orange juice), Maui Brut and 1990 Rose Ranch Cuvée are each $16. Maui Blanc, a fruit-infused pineapple wine and Maui Splash, pineapple and passion fruit are $9.75. Maui Blush $10 and Plantation Red $15.50 showcase the versatility of Carnelian to produce both a pink and dry, well-balanced red with a kick of spice. Ulupalakua Red $10 is a sweet red wine.

■ Reasonably-priced Italian whites for lighter food styles: 1996 Ceretto Arneis Blange $15 for simply roasted chicken or smoked trout; 1996 Anselmi San Vincenzo Soave Classico Superiore $10, crisp and dry; and 1994 Anselmi Capitel Croce Soave Classico $15, match with shellfish or lobster.

Ice Cream and Sanders Hot Fudge. As far as they're concerned, the recent blending of extra premium Stroh's Ice Cream, and top-quality Sanders products, is a match made in dessert heaven.

Stroh's and Sanders teamed-up to create eight new ice cream flavors – Bumpy Cake 'N' Cream (butter cream flavor with devils food cake and fudge icing), Hot Fudge Sundae (vanilla ice cream with Sanders milk chocolate hot fudge), Butterscotch Caramel Sundae (vanilla ice cream with Sanders Butterscotch caramel), Old Fashioned Vanilla, Cookies 'N' Cream, Double Fudge Brownie, Pralines 'N' Cream and Old Fashiooned Butter Pecan.

The brothers sampled Pralines 'N' Cream, which has a ribbon of caramel running through it. It was a little sweet for their taste, but they liked the concept.

To boost my case for this new product I picked up another flavor – Hot Fudge Sundae and submitted it for judging. This one got their vote, and was judged outstanding.

If you're an ice cream and Sanders fan you'll want to scoop these up. They're sold in half gallon containers for $4.99. Look for the familiar Stroh's Ice Cream and Sanders brand labels.

While it's true many people are concerned about calories and fat, steak houses and martini's are making a comeback. Go figure.

"The indulgence segment of the market is increasing," said Gary Giller of Bloomfield Hills president of Stroh's Ice Cream Co., which still makes its home in Motown. "People want to reward themselves," and low-fat really doesn't taste the same. Therefore, we viewed this as the right time and the perfect opportunity."

Giller's favorite flavor is Bumpy Cake 'N Cream. "I have the pounds to prove it," he said. "It's loaded with good stuff, thick fudge, devils food cake, real butter cream icing. It's different.

"The pairing of Stroh's Homemade Ice Cream and Sanders is a great fit. Between the two of us we have 200 years in the dessert industry."

Decide for yourself. Look for Savino Italian Sorbet and Stroh's Homemade Ice Cream Featuring Sanders Hot Fudge at your favorite grocery store. Both products won our favor, and my coworkers liked them too.

You'll just have to taste Stroh's Ice Cream with Sanders for yourself to see how good it is. It will remind you of those great hot fudge sundaes they served at Sanders downtown, or special Sundays and birthdays spent with relatives. In fact, here's a scoop.

"People always tell us about how when they were little they would go to Hudson's for a special event and then to Sanders for a hot fudge cream puff," said Giller. "We're working on a new flavor – Hot Fudge Cream Puff."

recently," admitted Alice Fitz (a native of Massachusetts) and married to the owner of estate Fitz-Ritter in the Pfalz region.

This is true, the story has not been adequately stressed that the estate is exceedingly environmentally friendly and organically farmed.

Here, one finds chardonnay planted on lime and sandy loam soils. The Pfalz has the greatest amount of sunshine of any of the 11 German wine regions making ripening of chardonnay possible. However, this estate is best known for its gewurztraminer.

Try the 1995 Durkheimer Nonnengarten Gewurztraminer Spatlese $9.50. "I serve it as an aperitif with paté or as a first course with fish or chicken in a cream sauce," Fitz said. "It's also great with fresh greens and a honey-Dijon mustard vinaigrette."

Friedrich Baumann, owner of the wine estate bearing his name, has a 300-year family winemaking tradition. He likes the 1995 kabinett level wines from his estate with ham, chicken or turkey. "For fish, 1994 is better," he said. "I like riesling spatlese wines served alone or with cheese. I have a rule, the sweeter the wine, the stronger the cheese."

Dorothee Anheuser of Weingut Paul Anheuser in the Nahe region, likes the 1995 Anheuser Kreuz Kahlenberg Riesling Spatlese $11.50 with an apple tart. "When you make the tart, use the wine to replace some or all of the lemon juice called for in the recipe," she counseled.

Enjoy the flavorful rewards of your garden

You tilled, you planted, you fertilized, you watered, you weeded, you waited. Now it's time to reap the harvest of your summer garden – whether it's a plot in your backyard or a herb garden in your window box.

These are the days of plenty, as green beans, corn, tomato, sweet pepper, zucchini, and eggplant reach their peak.

Now is the time to plan an entire meal around vegetables. Start with a colorful and quick Spanish stew. Boil a pound of trimmed and halved beans for four minutes, until partly cooked. Grill, peel and cut two red peppers into strips. Saute chopped garlic briefly in a tablespoon of olive oil; add the green beans and salt and pepper to taste and saute two minutes longer. Stir in pepper strips and two tablespoons of chicken broth, cover and cook three minutes, or until the beans are tender. Add two tablespoons of chopped parsley and serve.

When you cook corn Cajun-style, you'll have no trouble making it disappear. Saute a chopped onion and 1/2 of a chopped green bell pepper in two tablespoons of vegetable oil for five minutes. Cut the kernels off six ears of corn and add to the pan with a chopped tomato, a teaspoon of sugar, and salt, ground black pepper and cayenne pepper to taste. Cover and cook 20 minutes, or until the corn is tender. Remove the lid, stir and cook two to three minutes more.

Since the tomato is technically a fruit, why not try it in a traditional fruit-based recipe like marmalade? Start by skinning, seeding and chopping 15 Roma tomatoes. Then peel and cut three lemons into segments, removing the white pith and seeds and saving the zest. Layer an oven-proof dish, alternating tomatoes with lemon segments, zest and a teaspoon of fresh, finely-grated ginger. Drizzle the entire dish with a teaspoon of lemon juice and sprinkle evenly with two cups of sugar. Cover and bake at 350 degrees F. until the mixture has thickened to a marmalade consistency, about four hours. Stir in two tablespoons of fresh, chopped basil and serve as a savory accompaniment to grilled fish.

What to do when the garden explodes

Ratatouille, a well-known specialty of the Provence region of France, is one of the most popular and versatile dishes using large amounts of summer's bountiful produce.

RATATOUILLE

1 small eggplant, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
Salt, to taste
2 Tablespoons olive oil
2 large red peppers, cut into 3/4-inch pieces
4 small zucchini, sliced
1 onion, coarsely chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 pound tomatoes, chopped or 1 can (28 oz.) whole tomatoes, drained and chopped
1/3 cup chopped fresh basil

Sprinkle the eggplant with salt and place it in a colander to drain for 30 minutes. Pat dry with paper towels.

Heat a tablespoon of the oil in a nonstick skillet. Add the eggplant, stir and cook six to seven minutes, or until soft and brown.

If more cooking liquid is necessary, add two tablespoons chicken broth.

Push the cooked eggplant to the side of pan before adding red peppers, zucchini, onion, and garlic to the center of the pan.

Cook the vegetables, stirring, three to five minutes or until tender.

Add the tomatoes to the pan, mix in with the other vegetables and cook on low heat between 15 to 20 minutes, or until all of the vegetables are very tender, stirring occasionally.

Stir in the basil and serve.

Toss-up a steak salad

AP – For a fast family meal, make a main dish salad. It's easy when one of the prepackaged salad mixes now available in the supermarket is teamed with a quick-cooking beef cut.

Caesar is among the favorite salad choices these days, but instead of serving it as a side salad, make it the main dish by adding stir-fried strips of beef top sirloin steak.

Great-tasting Steak Caesar Salad is ready in 15 minutes because all you do is stir-fry strips of beef with flavorful, convenient garlic oil.

Then toss the beef with the greens and dressing from the Caesar salad mix. Sprinkle with the croutons and some Parmesan cheese to garnish.

Add warm, soft bread sticks and sorbet with berries to round out the menu.

STEAK CAESAR SALAD

Total preparation and cooking time: 15 minutes

1-pound boneless beef top sirloin steak, cut 1-inch thick
2 teaspoons garlic-flavored olive oil
1/2 teaspoon cracked black pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
10- to 11-ounce prepackaged Caesar Salad Mix
Shredded Parmesan (optional)

QUICK DISH

Great-tasting Steak Caesar Salad is ready in 15 minutes because all you do is stir-fry strips of beef with flavorful, convenient garlic oil.

Cut beef steak lengthwise in half and then crosswise into 1/4-inch thick strips.

In medium bowl, combine beef, oil and pepper. Toss to coat.

Heat a large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat until hot. Add beef, one-half at a time, and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes or until outside surface is no longer pink.

Do not overcook. Remove from skillet; season with salt.

In large bowl, combine beef with lettuce and dressing from mix; toss to coat.

Arrange salad on large platter, sprinkle with croutons and, if desired, Parmesan cheese. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Don't miss your soaps: 4 AA penlite batteries keep these portable mini televisions working. Available from Service Merchandise stores, from $99.97.

Power out?
Handy new products can save the day

The storm that tore through Southeast Michigan July 2 left an estimated half million homes without power, including mine.

Compared to people in other areas – especially those in Hamtramck, Highland Park, the Grosse Pointes and Clarkston, where lives and homes were lost – my neighbors and I got off easy. We only lost power for two days. We could have lost much more.

SHOPPING CENTERED

DONNA MULCAHY

Still, power outages are inconvenient. What, besides a generator and perhaps a fully-charged laptop computer, can make them less of a nuisance? I went shopping for answers and here's what I found.

• To light your home, you could use candles or oil lamps. But a safer option, especially if you have young children in the house, is a battery powered lamp, like the plastic Coleman Table Lamp. It gives off enough light to read by and I found it at Kmart for $8.99.

• A battery-powered AM/FM radio is one of the most important things you can have during a storm, for weather and other information. Radios that can pick up television audio signals are even better and start at about $20.

• Hand-held, battery-powered televisions are also nice. Sony and Casio color TVs cost about $110 to $130 and run on three or four AA batteries. They're available at department and electronics stores.

• According to Detroit Edison, food can be kept at a safe temperature in a refrigerator for about 12 hours and in a freezer for two to three days, when the power is off and the doors are kept closed. What happens if that time is up and your power is still out?

You could buy an "iceless cooler." They look like a cross between a regular ice chest and a mini-refrigerator. They are made to be powered by a car's cigarette lighter when the car is running. With special, separately-sold adapters, they also can be powered by a 12-volt battery or regular household electric current.

They cannot freeze items, but they can keep previously chilled items cold. They also have a food warming mode.

The Igloo Koolmate 32, for example, cools to 40 degrees below the outside temperature, and in the warming mode, it can heat to about 155 degrees Fahrenheit. It can keep pre-frozen foods solid if the outside temperature remains below 72 degrees.

Iceless coolers sell for about $80 to $100, and Coleman makes them, too. They can be found at Kmart, Service Merchandise and Target. I found the converter for household electricity, which would be useless during a power outage, at Target and Service Merchandise for about $34.

I could not find the 12-volt battery converter that is made by those manufacturers, but I did find a similar 12-volt converter that would probably work at Radio Shack for about $6. Radio Shack also sells 12-volt batteries.

A much cheaper way of preserving food is to put it in a regular cooler and keep it iced down. Instead of regular ice, you could use dry ice, but be sure to wear gloves when handling it. According to Detroit Edison, 15 to 20 pounds of dry ice can preserve food for about 24 hours.

One source of dry ice is Holiday Market at 1203 S. Main Street in Royal Oak (313) 541-1414. A seven- to 10-pound block there costs $5.98.

• Being without power doesn't mean you have to have a bad hair day. Conair and Braun both make cordless curling irons. They cost about $20 and are powered by butane cartridges, which cost $4 to $5 for a package of two. They're available at Kmart, Service Merchandise and other stores.

• Finally, if you're worried that you might lose data if you're working on your computer when a power outage strikes, you could buy an un-interruptable power source (UPS) system.

Depending on the type you get, a UPS can power a computer system for five or more minutes, which is usually long enough to close files and turn off a computer safely. They cost $130 or more and can be ordered through Radio Shack and computer stores.

Shops for women offer TLC

Women's health boutiques take on insurance companies for the right to sell medical aids.

BY DONNA MULCAHY
SPECIAL WRITER

When Harriet Dunsky bought the Bobette Lingerie Shop in Waterford 13 years ago and decided to focus on products to help women with breast cancer, she wasn't sure what to expect.

"I didn't know if we were going to cry or laugh with our customers," she said.

To be on the safe side, she put boxes of tissue in each of her fitting rooms. She had to restock those boxes quite frequently in the beginning. But now, so few of her customers cry in the fitting room that she finds herself dusting off the tissue boxes every week instead of replenishing them.

She says that change is due to breast cancer awareness programs and improved cancer treatments, which help survivors feel better about themselves and their bodies.

Still, no one is denying that breast cancer is traumatic.

"It takes a special kind of person to be in this line of work," said Barbra Milinko, of the Women's Health Boutique in Lathrup Village. Besides good business skills, the job requires compassion and sensitivity.

The best part about their jobs is helping women who have undergone breast cancer s surgery feel like themselves again, agreed Dunsky, Milinko, Koss and Annette Newman, who owns Annette's Unique Boutique in Troy.

The worst part, they all said, is dealing with the health insurance industry.

Breast prostheses, pocketed bras and other such products for breast cancer survivors can be expensive, and are often covered by health insurance. The problem is most HMOs and PPOs designate which stores their clients can go to for such products.

Those insurance contracts usually go to big medical supply stores because they are more well-known, Dunsky said. "A lot of times, we're not even given a chance to show whether or not we can match or beat their prices," she said.

While medical supply stores may be able to handle a breast cancer survivor's physical needs by fitting her with the correct prosthesis, "they are not set up to deal with the emotional needs of women," Milinko said.

For example, at those stores, a man may be the one who does the fittings, privacy may be at a minimum, and the environment may be cold and sterile.

Milinko's boutique, on the other hand, is specifically designed to make women, and especially women who have had breast cancer surgery, feel comfortable. The decor is very feminine, with pink and white striped wallpaper and floral borders on the walls. Padded fabric hangers display clothing and potpourri delicately scents the air.

Prosthesis fittings are done by women who are trained, certified fitters. Also, the fitting rooms are located in the back of the store and are connected to the stock room via doors, to provide the utmost in convenience and privacy during fittings.

Some independent boutique owners, including Dunsky and Newman, are banding together in an effort that they hope will eventually win over the insurance industry.

Dunsky and Newman both belong to the Women's Healthcare Education Network. The group is comprised of women throughout the country who own independent boutiques that specialize in products and services for women with special needs.

The group is working to become accredited by the Accreditation Commission for Home Care Inc. The commission accredits home care facilities in different areas, but this is the first year that it is offering accreditation in mastectomy fittings, Dunsky said.

If Women's Healthcare Education Network becomes accredited, then all of its member boutiques will be accredited too, said Dunsky, who is the network's travel committee chairwoman.

Dunsky said that she hopes that one day insurance companies will let policy holders go to any accredited shop for a post-mastectomy prosthesis, rather than only one or two designated stores.

Boutique owners would like that, to prevent them from being squeezed out of the market. But more importantly than that, Newman said, it would empower women, by giving them the freedom to receive the type of care that they want.

Milinko said her franchise founder is looking into whether it should pursue accreditation, which can be costly.

Somerset Collection hires new marketer

BY SUSAN DEMAGGIO
EDITOR

The Somerset Collection has a new marketing director, Linda McIntosh, formerly of the Taubman Co.

Before joining Forbes/Cohen Properties last week, McIntosh served as marketing director at both Fairlane Town Center, Dearborn, and Briarwood Mall in Ann Arbor, both Taubman centers.

She has also owned her own media-buying company, handled public relations for Ethan Allen, and worked as an account executive at Campbell-Ewald, serving 15 different accounts.

A single mom, McIntosh, 40, resides in Livonia with her son, 13, and daughter, 15.

"I'm thrilled to join the Somerset staff – it's amazing retail with awesome merchants," she said. "Right now my top priority is getting to know these merchants and their customers."

McIntosh was selected after a nation-wide search to replace Sally Victor, who left the job to direct marketing and communications at Air Touch Cellular.

McIntosh will supervise a marketing staff of four, including events manager Liz Barrett; customer service manager JoAnn Powell; marketing events assistant Julie Kuskin; and fashion director Amanda Turner.

She is a Detroit native who graduated from Michigan State University with a degree in advertising and marketing. A novice tennis player, she said most of her free-time belongs to her children who play traveling hockey and figure skate.

McIntosh said the Somerset Collection is more than a shopping center and as such must be marketed differently than most.

"This place is a destination for tourists and a place of entertainment for thousands of people outside the 10-mile radius of the mall. To stay on top, maintain this position, our priority must be to remove any obstacles that hinder mall employees from performing their task of exceeding customer expectations. Being satisfied after a trip to Somerset is not enough. We must continually, consistently stand out."

Thanks to all the readers who have expressed their appreciation for this column. Yes, it is a lot of fun!

What we've found:

■ Three readers called in sources for blueprints for wooden Adirondack chairs. Andrew of Livonia said he bought some through the Lee Valley Tools catalog for $7.50. To order or receive a catalog call 1-800-871-8158. "They also have patterns for porch swings and tables," he reports.

An anonymous caller suggested U-Build at 1-800-828-2453. "The blueprints are $6.50, and they have them for foot rests and end tables, too."

Lou offered blueprints he no longer needs.

■ Dolores said she has the long-sought, out-of-print "Encyclopedia of Cooking" in all 19 sections.

■ Three readers offered up their stamp embroidery patterns, plus Joyce of Livonia said the Mary Maxim craft/needlepoint catalog out of Port Huron has many such patterns and products. To order one, call 1-800-962-9504.

Rivers praises move to block toxic waste

U.S. Rep. Lynn Rivers, D-13th District, applauded a decision by a federal appeals court that blocks an Environmental Protection Agency decision to allow the importation of toxic chemicals, including polychlorinated biphenyls for disposal in the United States.

The U.S. Court of Appeals, Ninth Circuit, ruled Monday the EPA's decision violated the Toxic Substances Control Act, which forbids the manufacture and importation of PCBs.

The U.S. banned the manufacture and use of PCBs in the 1970s after they found to cause cancer, reproductive disorders and birth defects. In March 1996 the EPA reversed a 16-year ban on the importation of PCBs so that stockpiles from other nations could be imported into and stored in the United States.

Last year the EPA decided to allow PCBs to be brought into the U.S. for disposal. Rivers joined with U.S. Rep. Ken Bentsen, a Democrat from Texas, and succeeded in passing legislation in the House of Representatives to block that EPA decision.

That legislation did not pass the Senate.

Rivers introduced a House Bill this year, legislation which would require that the EPA reestablish its ban on the importation of PCBs.

Last week, Rivers praised the court ruling.

"The court's decision vindicates my position that lifting the ban on importation of PCBs is not in the best interest of the country," Rivers said. "The court has acted correctly to uphold the law and ensure that the environment and public health of our communities are not put at risk due to other countries' toxic waste."

Picking highway flowers might net you a fine

The Michigan Department of Transportation is asking motorists: Please don't pick the daisies.

As motorists drive Michigan highways, they are often taken by the beauty of the roadsides. The beautiful wildflowers are not there by mistake or happenstance.

These flowers have been planted and carefully cultivated on more than 250 acres of Michigan highways in partnership with local and statewide gardening organizations. The acres of beautiful wildflowers beautify the highways and reduce roadside maintenance costs and reduce spraying to maintain visibility along the roadsides.

State Transportation District Jim DeSana said MDOT was pleased with the results of partnerships and efforts to beautify the roadsides while reducing costs. "But motorists need to recognize those flowers are for everyone's enjoyment," DeSana said. "Stopping to dig them up is unsafe and illegal."

State and federal laws reserve the shoulders of interstate highways for emergency stopping only. Motorists stopping to pick or dig up wildflowers create unsafe highway conditions for other motorists and themselves.

The fine for illegally stopping in an emergency lane is $100 and/or 90 days in jail. The plants and plantings were funded through the Intermodal Surface Transportation and Efficiency Act of 1991.

Kids can munch lunch for free at local sites

Even though school is out, children who need a balanced midday meal can still get it through the Wayne County Health Department's summer food program.

Children 18 years and younger considered mentally or physically challenged by a state or local educational agency are eligible for free lunches five days a week at 30 locations across Wayne County. Nearly 1,700 children can get lunches in Canton Township and Westland, and seven other Downriver and western Wayne County communities, including Dearborn, Ecorse, Inkster, Romulus, Taylor, Wayne and Wyandotte.

"Children are given well-balanced meals that are low in fat, saturated fat and cholesterol while containing moderate amounts of salt and sugar," said Patricia Soares, Wayne County public health director. "No child eligible for the program will be turned away."

Wayne County's summer food program is a federal-sponsored program aimed at reducing malnutrition and hunger in school-aged children. Children do not have to register in advance. Staffers note that food must be eaten at the site and is not allowed to be carried out.

The food is served through Aug. 22 at the following locations in Observer communities:

In Canton, food is served from 12:20-1:50 p.m. at Canton Commons, 1568 Stacey. In Westland, lunch is distributed at noon-1 p.m. at the Daisy Girl Scout/Head Start, 34801 Marquette. Lunch is also served at 11:40 a.m.-1:40 p.m., Jefferson Elementary School, 32150 Dorsey; and at 11:50 a.m.-1:50 p.m. at Lincoln Elementary, 33800 Grand Traverse.

Art fairs track artist's progress

Every July, the Ann Arbor Art Fairs with 1,000 artists assembled in the same place at the same time, provides a comprehensive look at techniques, mediums and trends in contemporary art. Last week's arts extravaganza was no exception.

Artists are creating more pastel drawings, ceramic tiles and etchings, which are increasing in popularity with art lovers. For the last few years, abstracts have steadily declined while figurative works have emerged.

Mary Buchbinder of Livonia first visited the Ann Arbor Art Fairs 25 years ago while attending school in Ann Arbor. Buchbinder, a nurse, arrived 8:30 a.m. Wednesday and started her regular route at the bell tower.

Biting commentary: George Landino of West Bloomfield will bring his whimsical folk art to Art on the Green in Franklin and Art in the Park in Birmingham.

"It's grown over the years," said Buchbinder. "I love the variety. I've bought paintings, vases, mantle clocks, clothes, jewelry. I've been to a lot of fairs, but Ann Arbor's my favorite because it's the 'creme de creme.'"

While Ann Arbor is the biggest fair, there are still more to come. Many local artists who participated in the Ann Arbor Art Fairs will be also exhibit their newest works around town through September.

On a roll

Tom Hale has been painting up a storm in preparation for the State Street Area Fair in Ann Arbor, and the Concours d' Elegance at Meadow Brook Hall in Rochester Aug. 2-3. Fifteen of the Farmington Hills artist's paintings will be on exhibit at the Somerset Collection through Aug. 1 as a preview of the classic car show and art auction taking place the first weekend in August. Hale will also display his paintings at Art & Apples in Rochester this September.

Purples and blues merge and mingle in a 1937 Lincoln Zephyr. A white calla lily provides a strong reflection in the body of the car luring the viewer to seek out its curvaceous lines. Hale began incorporating flowers into his classic car paintings about four years ago. His newest body of work deals boldly with the floral subject.

"Why flowers and cars," said Hale. "I paint this in a surreal way. Over the years, I've noticed all of the reflec-

Painter brushes contemporary art scene

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

How does Electra Stamelos of Livonia think her paintings fit into the contemporary art scene? What does she hope their long-term affect will be?

"It's hard for me to judge," said Stamelos. "About five years ago I visited New York and didn't like what I saw happening on the contemporary scene. If beauty is wrong, I didn't fit in. There are certain basics to be adhered to. What I saw denied or threw them in your face."

From sailboats at rest in a harbor to sugar cane fields, Stamelos' paintings reveal a love of color. Many were inspired by travels to the southwest and the six months a year she lives in Florida. A blue heron in his natural habitat is no ordinary representational landscape. Stamelos throws in a coral band of color to nearly span the width of the paper at the skyline. A still life featuring day lilies is inset with three spheres, each baring different views of the orange colored beauties.

It is fitting that her work be featured in an exhibition sponsored by the Livonia Arts Commission as Stamelos was the first Livonia Arts Commissioner appointed by former Livonia Mayor Edward H. McNamara. "Directions Revisited – Past Influences" continues in the Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery through July 30.

Stamelos, an instructor at the Birmingham Bloomfield Art Association since 1980, has works in the collections of the Jesse Bessard Museum in Alpena, National Watercolor Society, Los Angeles; Kresge Foundation, Troy; Dennos Art Museum, Traverse City; Grand Rapids Museum of Art; Flint Institute of Art, and the city of Livonia. Her effect on the art world is apparent by her listing in "Who's Who in American Art" and "American Artists of Renown," to name a few.

Stamelos has a history of creating art grounded in the basics. Early training at the National Art School in Washington, D.C., Wayne State University, Society of Arts and Crafts (now Center for Creative Studies), and Eastern Michigan University instilled a respect for drawing skills, painting techniques, color theory, and composition. After earning a master of fine arts degree from Eastern Michigan University, Stamelos passed these basics on to students at the University of Michigan-Dearborn and University of Michigan in Ann Arbor.

Her work though, is not all landscapes and still lifes. She painted an abstract collage of images as a sign of the times on New York's 42nd Street. Picasso-like forms figure in a large scale painting that is as much an exercise in Cubism as a statement against Picasso's penchant for misusing and abusing women.

Stamelos works on larger compositions than she has in the past. Her interest is definitely contemporary with elements of abstraction, some obvious, others hidden.

Directions Revisited – Past Influences

What: A one-woman show by Electra Stamelos featuring nearly 40 paintings.
Where: Livonia Civic Center Library Fine Arts Gallery, 32777 Five Mile Road east of Farmington.
When: Through Wednesday, July 30. Hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and until 5 p.m. Friday-Saturday.

Paintings from 1978 to the recent painting "Purple Cabbage" show past influences and revisit subject matter. The intricate portrait of the cabbage is after a similar painting in the collection of the city of Livonia.

"Color inspires me," said Stamelos, president of the Watercolor U.S.A. Honor Society and a former president of the Michigan Watercolor Society. "I like to go to galleries and museums. I look at what other artists have done and start to think and finally come up with something I'd like to do."

Stamelos describes her work as strong floral subject matter which comes from a deep understanding of negative and positive space and shows how true realism incorporates aspects of abstraction and unites color, value and form to create very individualistic paintings.

"Everything's a development. One idea begets another. I don't deliberately paint for people, but try to bring what beauty there is. And they're not boring, you keep seeing new things. But no matter how intricate they become, you're still telling stories about time, color, space."

Stamelos was one of the first artists to exhibit at Habatat Galleries in Dearborn. When Tom and Linda Boone, and Ferdinand Hampson moved the gallery to Southfield, the debut exhibition featured Stamelos and Herb Babcock, nationally known glass artist and chair of the crafts department at Center for Creative Studies. Boone now owns Indigo in Boca Raton, Florida where Stamelos' paintings are on exhibit.

Born in New Jersey, Stamelos knew from a young age that she wanted to become an artist. Frequent trips to New York in her early teen confirmed a future in art.

"My father used to send me on a train to New York," said Stamelos. "I'd visit the museums and galleries, and think wow, that's what I want to do."

Now it is Stamelos' turn to affect the next generation of artists. She recently juried the Illinois State fair and shortly will be judging the Wayne County Council for the Arts, a collaborative exhibition, "Wayne County-The Artists Among Us," sponsored by the WCCA, the Grosse Pointe Arts Council and Ambleside Gallery, Grosse Pointe, Sept. 12 to Oct. 4.

Cinematographer paints with light

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER

Charles Aimone sees light like a camera and his paintings show it.

As a cinematographer and artist, Aimone synthesizes art history and film to paint landscape, architecture, everyday objects, and figures in his Plymouth studio.

"In cinematography, you're painting with light," said Aimone, who teaches at Center for Creative Studies. "In painting, you're working with color to interpret light. Lots of cinematographers study art trying to make a color scheme."

Aimone frequently refers to art in the context of history. His paintings do the same. An exhibition of his paintings, from a body of work created for a film in progress, continues on display at the Atrium Gallery in Northville through Aug. 15.

Paintings by Charles Aimone

Where: Atrium Gallery, 109 N. Center, Northville. Call (248) 349-4131.
When: Through Friday, Aug. 15. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday to Saturday, until 8 p.m. Friday, and noon to 4 p.m. Sunday.

"The Town" was created as a backdrop for "Flying High," a celluloid comedy in the spirit of Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin. Puppets performed in front of the 6-by-6-foot village scene. The lower portion of the canvas scans the roofs of a German village. The upper portion changes direction to show the front of an Italian structure.

"People are buying them because they make them feel good," said Aimone. "The film is a comedy and that comes through in the paintings. I took a Cezanne type of approach working with planes of color, to give you a feeling of sweeping back into the painting. The camera panned up the paintings, like you're moving through different planes. The planes give movement almost as if you were moving about a checkerboard. So you're eyes will do the same thing. There's a sense of playfulness about it. It has some aspects of a maze. You can wander around in this city. It gives people looking at it a while, a chance to play with this in their imagination."

Before beginning the painting, Aimone looked at a combination of aerial shots of Europe, then at how other artists handled the subject before formulating a composition. The palette is similar to Cezanne as well. Blue, green, violet, and brown intermingle on the canvas in this sleepy little town.

"You have to put a lot of research in a painting, to have an insight as to why you're doing what you're doing," said Aimone. "You learn as a cinematographer to look at the light. Artists who become important are aware of the direction of light. Cinematography has you constantly evaluating light, where it falls, the shadows."

Subject matter varies as does painting technique in Aimone's exhibition. "The Piano" is very impressionistic, almost Matisse like. An acrylic of a toy boat, modeled after an antique, softly washes over the paper. Another work experiments with evening light in a portrait capturing the Atrium Gallery's exterior. "Town Bridge" begun as a mathematical exercise, captures the mystery of Venice's canals and bridges.

Aimone tries "to see a lot of art." The Northville resident has been to all of the major museums in the United States, Venice, Florence, Madrid, Budapest, Moscow, Paris, and London.

"I've studied van Gogh and Gauguin, how they put the paint on and scraped it down,' said Aimone. "Taking paint away was as important as putting it on. Rembrandt used his rags as much as his brushes."

Aimone began painting more than 30 years ago. He studied art with Clifton McChesny at Michigan State University, pursued graduate studies at the University of Michigan with Guy Palazzola, and post-graduate studies at the University of Saskatchewan with Otto Rogers.

He has taught in the film department at Center for Creative Studies in Detroit for 15 years. A previous series of paintings dealt with the stone age cave paintings of Lascaux, France. The works were backdrops for the film "Changing of the Gods."

"I've studied van Gogh and Gauguin, how they put the paint on and scraped it down,' said Aimone. "Taking paint away was as important as putting it on. Rembrandt used his rags as much as his brushes."

Pat Jania decided to show this body of work after a visit to Aimone's 1,500 square foot studio in Old Village because the works contain Impressionist and contemporary characteristics.

"There's certainly an Impressionist quality to his work," said Jania. "He uses an unusual technique. He has layers of color and even though you're looking at different subject matter, you can identify it as his work."

Aimone's paintings are also on exhibit at the Artful Exchange in Ann Arbor where a tall, blue dog takes on the style of Miro.

tions in my paintings were organic and free flowing. It seemed a natural. The sensuous qualities of flowers are the same as cars."

Whimsical wood

People were standing in line to buy George Landino's folk art at the Summer Art Fair in Ann Arbor. Landino, who recently retired after teaching art for 40 years at Birmingham Groves High School, was his usual witty self. That same whimsy comes through in the West Bloomfield artist's wood sculptures, boxes, bookmarks, and pins. Landino will bring his work to Art on the Green in Franklin on Sept. 1 and Art in the Park in Birmingham in early September.

Look for larger sculptures from Landino as they have proved popular with customers. Two hours into the Ann Arbor show, all of these had already sold.

"I recently applied to a show in Chicago and I'm calling them contemporary folk art with humor," said Landino as he wrote up sales in Ann Arbor. "So far, I haven't needed a sign 'Please do touch."

Plymouth artists

Tom LeGault is experimenting with new designs in his latest paintings. The Plymouth artist sold a truck full of work after his first hour at a fair in Muskegon in early July. He did almost as well at Art in the Park in Plymouth July 12-13 despite temperatures in the 90s. LeGault will sell contemporary works featuring lighthouses, sail boats, northern Michigan lake scenes, and abstract florals 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 24 at the 23rd annual Art on the Lake at Coolidge and Long Lake Road in Troy. Admission is free. For more information, call (248) 641-9070.

Williamston sculptor Mark Chatterley, brought his primal figures, animals, birds, and abstracts to the Ann Arbor Street Art Fair. Chatterley, who grew up in Plymouth, has exhibited in the Ann Arbor fairs for the last eight years. Chatterley's large scale sculptures with the bubble glazes won't be in any local shows in the near future because he's exhibiting at art fairs in New Orleans, Louisville and North Carolina through the rest of the summer. One of his sculptures is currently on loan to the Plymouth Community Arts Council Building where it is exhibited in the lobby.

Pretty pastels

Pastel drawings continue to make a comeback in ever increasing numbers at the Ann Arbor Art Fairs. Patricia Bombach brought her oil and pastel portraits to the Summer Art Fair where the booth was packed with fairgoers.

Bombach, originally of Livonia and now living in Northville, is entering the Canton Project Arts Fine Arts Exhibition Oct. 18-24 at Summit on the Park. After working 30 years as an artist, Bombach would like to make her hometown communities aware of the precious memories she creates. Presently, she only shows in the Ann Arbor Art Fairs.

"I want to be a little more known locally, that's why I'm entering the Canton show," said Bombach, whose work has been featured in Metropolitan Woman magazine.

ANGELS TAKE FLIGHT

Michael's Angel Attic has moved to 33033 W. Seven Mile in Livonia. The popular store features angels of every kind from limited edition collectibles to note cards, garden accessories, soaps, posters, and works by local artists. If it's in the shape of an angel or has the image of an angel on it, you'll find it at Michael's Angel Attic.

"I'm really excited about the move, and now we really do have an attic," said owner Lisa Reed, who opened the store in memory of her three-year-old son Michael who died from a virus.

Plymouth artist Debbie Malek worked her painting magic on the exterior and interior of the new shop. Malek's painted furniture and other items are also on display. Other local artists featured are Betty Jo Woodworth (soft sculpture bunny, bear and giraffe angels), Donna Pilot (whimsical angel dolls and bears) and Mary Stafford (angel pins) of Livonia, Kathy Chemotti (birdhouses, garden stakes), Northville and Shelly Pluchino, Flat Rock.

Hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Call (248) 442-7080.

MUMMY ART

Batik silk scarves with an Egyptian theme by Chrystyna Nykorak, a Farmington resident and director of membership for the Livonia Chamber of Commerce, will be available at the Detroit Institute of Arts in conjunction with the museum's new Egyptian exhibition.

"Splendors of Ancient Egypt," one of the largest Egyptian art exhibitions to visit the United States in decades, will fill 18 galleries with mummy cases, statues, jewelry, wall relief, and ceramics from July 16 through Jan. 4.

An outpost Museum Shop in the North Court will offer everything from jewelry reproductions, T-shirts, baseball caps, tote bags, and tiles from Rick Pruckler and the Whistling Frog Tile Co. in Ferndale.

Nykorak, a Ukrainian artist whose scarves have been sold at Nordstrum at Somerset, was commissioned to create dozens of silk scarves batiked with Egyptian symbols such as Bastet the Cat, and the jackal-headed god Anubis for the DIA Museum Shops at the Museum and the Somerset Collection in Troy.

The Detroit Institute of Arts is at 5200 Woodward Avenue, Detroit. Hours are 11 a.m. to 4

Undertaker takes poetic view

The Undertaking: Life Studies from the Dismal Trade
By Thomas Lynch
(Norton, $23)

VICTORIA DIAZ

In those darkest of hours, when survivors need the services of an undertaker in Milford, Mich., the chances are excellent that they will be calling on Thomas Lynch. The people of Milford have been doing so for years now and, in earlier times, they called on his father, Edward.

Growing up in a large Irish-American family there at mid-century, Lynch's everyday existence was tinged with the rituals of death early on. As an adult, he eventually made his mark as a critically acclaimed poet ("Skating With Heather Grace"), but he has never given up the day-and-night job he (along with brothers and sisters) "inherited" from his father.

Perhaps, if he had, these graceful, moving observations on matters of life and death would never have been written. As readers of fine and glorious words, let us perish the thought.

Lynch begins "The Undertaking with a friendly piece called "The Undertaking," in which he tells us something of the funeral business in general, and his own work in particular, right down to the profit he hopes to make during "a good year" (5 percent of approximately a million dollars). Also, right down to how it is to embalm one "Milo Horsnby" in the wee hours of a cold February morning, what he hears as he heads out to pick up the body at the hospital morgue, what he drives to get there and what Milo's remains look like on arrival.

None of what he does is done for the dead, he stresses throughout. The reason is simple: "the dead don't care." What he works for are the living – those who, like Milo's surviving widow, "still can cry and care and pray and pay my bill."

In another "life study," we suddenly find ourselves eyeball witnesses to a startling event: the preparation of the elder Lynch's body for burial – by his own sons. It is sterling testimony to Thomas Lynch's way with words that he can not only move us profoundly via this peculiar tableau, but even provoke a smile or two, and bring us to willingly consider matters that we often sidestep.

"There's this 'just a shell' theory of how we ought to relate to dead bodies," he writes, and, if you have ever even thought of offering this "consolation" to the newly bereaved, you will surely think again after reading this gentle but arresting piece.

Through his unique life experiences with death up-close-and-personal, Lynch touches on subjects as diverse as abortion (her is not pro-choice); a fantastical graveyard/ golf course; survivors who neglect to claim loved ones' cremated ashes; life in Milford; hypochondriacal Irish friend Matthew Sweeney; what goes on at a funeral directors' conference; the aftermath of a particularly gory suicide scene (after helping with the cleanup, Lynch painted the walls of the sad room); Jack Kevorkian; language ("of all God's gifts, the best") ...

He also shares with readers, in a piece simply titled "Crapper," a thorough-enough history of the flush toilet, which seems not the slightest bit out-of-place in a book focusing on matters of life and death.

If, by some sad chance, you can read only one piece in this literary counterpane, make it Lynch's finale. Titled "Tract," and not quite five pages in length, it reveals with a kind of eloquent brevity the writer's lyrical soul and the value he has come to place on life itself.

"Tract" take the form of an open letter to his children, in which the funeral director looks toward a time when he himself will die.

"I'd rather it be February," he begins, "... the hope of springtime, gardens, romance dulled to a stump by the winter in Michigan ... with the cold behind and the cold before you and the darkness stubborn at the edges of the day."

Though posing as prose, this is surely a poem if ever there was one, with Lynch's Irish heritage unmistakable at every turn.

Russian artist born again in America

BY FRANK PROVENZANO
STAFF WRITER

After a mere mention of Communist politicians and Soviet-style social realism to artist Felix Braslavsky of Farmington, his placid Russian immigrant's face grows tense. His soft eyes become transfixed, and a spark of indignation flashes.

"Throughout his life he had pressure from the government," explained his wife, Veronika, who also worked as an artist in the former Soviet Union.

In response to most questions, Braslavsky can barely wait for Veronika's broken-English translation. "He says, in Russia, he couldn't do what he wanted to do."

The Posner Gallery in Birmingham, among others, has been convinced about the appeal of the artwork from a free-spirited Braslavsky.

"We loved his use of color and his versatility," said Karen Posner, who runs the gallery along with her mother, Madeline. "Some pieces are pretty serious, and others are whimsical. All of his work has a lot of energy."

Since the melting of the Cold War and dissolution of the Soviet Union, Braslavsky has been freed from the imposition of pleasing the state's aesthetic. Today, he speaks openly, criticizing those who ran the Soviet empire and the current anti-Semitic sentiment ignited by those looking to ascribe blame for the country's plight.

What: Group exhibit featuring the work of Felix Braslavsky
When: Through Wednesday, July 23
Where: Posner Gallery, 523 N. Old Woodward, Birmingham; (248) 647-2552

"In Russia, most people don't look at art," said Veronika. "They're too busy looking for food."

No longer having to keep his own art away from the scrutiny of state censors, Braslavsky feels a sense of urgency that translates into 10-12 hour days in front of an easel.

Now in his late 50s, an age when most thriving artists have achieved acclaimed, Braslavsky is starting over. But he's hardly complaining.

In his modest Farmington apartment, Braslavsky is creating a diverse range of works of oil, pastel, acrylic and charcoal, from visions of vibrant hues to stark mono colorings an invented oil bar medium. Some work reflects the graphic qualities he developed working as a poster and brochure artist for the Soviet state. Other pieces are infused with the influence of western artists such as Picasso, Matisse and Pollock.

While Braslavsky hasn't quite mastered the basics of English, there's no mistaking that in attitude and ambition, he has a strikingly western outlook. And as of July 4, he now has U.S. citizenship to go along with a peculiarly modern frame of mind. "It's like we're born again here," said Veronika.

For the last five years, Braslavsky and Veronika have settled in Farmington with the help of friends, relatives and the supportive Jewish community. Initially, the couple survived on Veronika's seamstress work. But as Braslavsky's work gained recognition locally, she decided to spend full time promoting his work.

Two years ago, Veronika contacted the Michigan Opera Theatre to suggest that Braslavsky design posters for the company. In Russia, he created placards for children's theater, modern ballet and puppet theatre companies.

By the time MOT opened in the renovated Detroit Opera House last year, Braslavsky was hard at work on poster designs for "Rigoletto," "Flying Dutchman," and most recently, the upcoming "Aida," which opens the 1997-98 season.

While commercial art has been Braslavsky's livelihood, he's doggedly committed to his fine art. With interest growing in the local and New York gallery scene, he's hoping for a one-person show in the near future.

Today, while he works in his Farmington studio filled with his paintings and collection of books, Braslavsky either has the radio tuned to a classical music station, or listens to jazz. "America is a place of world culture," he said.

No translation is needed. For Braslavsky, the birthplace of Jefferson is now a place he calls home.

New UP guidebook rich with good stories

Hunts' Guide to Michigan's Upper Peninsula
By Mary and Don Hunt
(Midwestern Guide, $15.95)

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER

The Hunts have done it again.

This superb, large format book is the definitive guide to the UP. It provides the usual tour guide material and then goes many miles further, literally, to take readers to roads less travelled, sights less seen and even bars less frequented.

The Hunts have produced several other outstanding guidebooks, notable for their lack of chamber of commerce cheerleading. The Hunts tell it like it is. They communicate easily and directly and know how to pass along a good story.

This is more than a tour book. It's also a history book, a bit of current events, an ecology book and a story book. As the Hunts move west to east from Isle Royale to Drummond Island, they savor the beautiful landscapes and the hard scrabble towns, the high tech universities and the rugged hiking trails.

The Upper Peninsula may soon be metropolitan Michigan's last safety valve against the pressures of urban living as the northern Lower Peninsula falls prey to the developers who are killing everything that once made it attractive. The UP is still about deer and moose and trout streams. It is still very small towns, raging rivers, dramatic waterfalls and Superior's rocky, stunning shoreline. Unfortunately, even here, the modern world is beginning to intrude with the advent of casino gambling.

The guide has black and white photos and extensive, helpful and detailed maps. The Hunts divide the "Superior peninsula" into 14 areas after giving a brief overview. As most guide books do, the Hunts list where to stay and where to eat. Unlike most guide books, the Hunts steer away from the large chain operations in favor of places with lake views and local food. The Hunts also make clear, honest evaluations without the usual overstatements.

The book also walks you through the various towns, stopping at the interesting shops and restaurants along the way and talking with the local business people and cracker barrel philosophers.

Take these nuggets:

■ Michigan Technological University in Houghton has the A.E. Seaman Mineral Museum of which the Hunts say: "Rockhounds and visual artistic types will be dazzled by the sumptuous patterns and colors of this very large, artfully displayed mineral collection."

■ Calumet which now has 800 residents once was the center for a population of 40,000 and had trolleys, movie theaters and a grand opera house that is still used for theater and dance performances.

■ Isle Royale is the largest Lake Superior island and the most remote island in any of the Great Lakes. The boat ride from Houghton or Copper Harbor it 6 1/2 or 4 1/2 hours.

■ The Porcupine Mountains is described in detail with hiking trails and suggested methods for exploring what the Hunts describe as "one of the Midwest's few great remaining wilderness tracts."

■ The tiny town of Rockland is described as a beautiful village and the Hunts tell you some of its history and how to find out more: "Stop by Henry's on U.S. 45 in downtown Rockland. There Sally Gagnon, who is Henry's wife as well as daytime bartender, co-owner, cook, local historian and promoter extraordinare will fill you in on Rockland's history, alluding to how Ontonogan stole everything, including the famous boulder and the county seat."

That's typical of what you'll find in this delightful, pick-it-up-anytime, turn-anywhere book. You'll learn all about pasties, the Finnish settlements, the Soo Locks, Iron River, Iron Mountain and Ironwood, the metropolis of Marquette (the "Queen City of the North"), Picture Rocks and much, much more. The Hunts take side trips, odd excursions and hikes in the woods with some interesting people.

This is a travel guide for people who enjoy reading as much as they enjoy being well informed. The Hunts are guides you can trust.

TRAVEL

Nautical adventure awaits on car ferry

BY MARY QUINLEY
SPECIAL WRITER

Lake Michigan is playing host to a centennial birthday bash and you're invited.

It's a simple affair. Just make a reservation on the S. S. Badger, the only steam-power auto/passenger ship on the Great Lakes, and you're automatically included in the celebration.

The ship sails out of the west Michigan port of Ludington for a four-hour cruise across to Wisconsin.

Ruth Monstur, a Redford resident since 1944, sailed on the Badger a few years ago and got a taste of Great Lakes cruising.

"I remember that the ship was very pleasant. We enjoyed it very much," she said.

Monstur belongs to a "PRIME TIMERS Saints over 60," a group of adult seniors from Brightmoor Tabernacle, a church in Southfield.

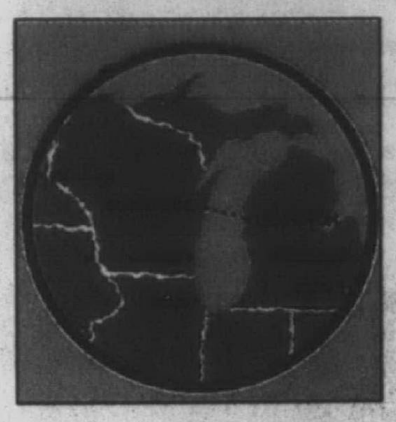

The cruise on the Badger across Lake Michigan brought back memories of a similar experience with her family,

"Almost 40 years ago, when our two boys were small, we took a ship to Duluth (Minnesota). We stayed overnight on the ship. It was very exciting."

The tradition of a ferry service across the lake began 100 years ago. In February, 1897. the Pere Marquette, the first steel car ferry on Lake Michigan, sailed from Ludington on her maiden voyage to Manitowoc (pronounced MAN-i-tu walk), Wis.

The 19th century "titan of size and power," carried 22 freight cars, railroad officials, and a brass band to celebrate the new type of vessel. The 20th century version, the S.S. Badger, accommodates more than 600 passengers and 180 automobiles.

Once aboard the ship, consider a leisurely stroll outside on the deck. One whiff of the gentle breezes from the clear, teal-colored lake furnishes an instant cure for the harried passenger.

In the one-room maritime museum, youngsters sit cross-legged on the floor, engrossed in a tale of two bear cubs who tried to swim across Lake Michigan. Sometimes, moms and dads join the story telling scene.

Other passengers head for the movies, play Badger Bingo or join the lively karaoke gang during the journey. The Badger Boutique draws souvenir-seekers to a modest shop.

"I played bingo," said Monstur, a great grandmother. However, "for the most part we sat, relaxed, and enjoyed" the ride.

Ruth Ratz, the social coordinator for Brightmoor Tabernacle, organized the PRIME TIMERS four-day trip which included the Wisconsin Dells, a brief stop in Chicago, and dinner in the Amish community of Shipshewana, Ind.

"We did a circle trip and stopped in Ludington our first night," said the Farmington Hills resident.

The next morning the group of 38 seniors boarded the cruise ship.

"I love the water and I love boats. It was neat that we could move around. I was quite happy leaning over the rail. It was a comfortable trip." An added bonus, Ratz said:

"It was no problem getting the (tour) bus on the ship."

If you're hungry while sailing, choose either the Upper Deck Cafe, a cafeteria-style dining area, or the Badger Galley on the main deck which serves sandwiches, salads and snacks.

Mini cruises without your vehicle, sunset two-hour cruises, and discounts on a red-eye departure from Manitowoc provide travelers with several sailing options. For an extra charge, guests are invited to spend the night on the ship at the Badger Boatel in an authentic car ferry stateroom.

And the two ports which serve the Badger supply great excuses for before-or-after-sailing getaways.

On the Michigan coast, the town of Ludington lures travelers to savor the long stretches of smooth, sandy beaches. Swimming, boating and fishing are popular sports.

On the western edge of the lake is the port of Manitowoc, home to the largest maritime museum in the Midwest, the Wisconsin Maritime Museum. Of particular interest to kids of all ages is a tour of the S.S. Cobia, a World War II submarine docked just outside of the museum.

Even if your family decides not to check out the shoreline attractions, plan to participate in the centennial maritime tradition, and sail across Lake Michigan.

Mary Quinley is a free lance writer who specializes in travel stories. She lives in Livonia.

Weekend getaways

(NAPS) – The trend in vacations is to take more one, two, or three-day mini-vacations instead of week-long vacations, travel experts say. They're easier to plan, and require less packing Here are tips from experts at Kampgrounds of America on preparing for your next weekend getaway.

1) Decide where you want to go. It doesn't have to be far, but it should involve a change of scenery – the beach, mountains, or a nearby point of interest or attraction.

2) Plan your route to get there. Look for scenic, rather than the fastest, routes. Trips that offer roadside curiosity shops, mom and pop cafes and places to view geologic formations or natural wonders may be the most fun and memorable.

3) Relax. A getaway is an escape from daily routines, not an exercise in minute-to-minute timetables. Better to pick out an activity or two and take the rest as it comes, than to pack too much into your schedule and exhaust yourself trying to do it all.

4) Camping is a great way to escape the confines of the work-a-day world.

Fantastic finish

Adam Peters of Plymouth came within a stroke of catching Livonia's Stephen Polanski, but couldn't quite pull it off.

Peters turned in an impressive 71 at Tuesday's Junior Championship, the Power-Bilt Michigan PGA Junior Golf Tour stop at Eagle Crest Golf Course in Ypsilanti, which was good for second place in the 16-and-over boys division. Polanski shot a 70.

Several other local competitors turned in excellent rounds as well. In the 16-and-over boys, Brad Volas (Canton) tied for 11th with a 79; Erik Krueger (Canton) shot 83; Nick Watts (Plymouth) shot 84; Jeff Lulek (Canton) had an 86; Josh Davis (Canton) fired an 88; Mark Runchey (Plymouth) carded a 91; Joe Hawthorne (Plymouth) scored a 96; and Steven Watts (Plymouth) had a 106.

In the 14-15 boys division, Zach Davis (Canton) had a 96 and Andrew Lulek (Canton) scored a 120. And in the 13-and-under boys division, Greg Baracy (Canton) finished tied for seventh with an 89.

On Monday at the Ford Junior Classic at Travis Pointe Country Club in Ann Arbor, Jeff Lear (Plymouth) tied for ninth in the 16-and-over boys division; Brendan Wheeler (Canton) was 12th in the 14-15 boys division; and Baracy (Canton) tied for 11th in the 13-and-under boys division.

Pruett a premier player

Andrea Pruett, who will begin her junior year at Plymouth Salem in September, was one of the select few high school girls basketball players invited to attend one of the Reebok/WBCA Premier Basketball Camps this summer.

This is the sixth summer the WBCA (Women's Basketball Coaches Association) has conducted these camps for the nation's best up-and-coming female players. The camps offer a combination of evaluation, education and instruction, and are designed for the nation's top players.

Approximately 450 players nationwide are expected to attend one of the WBCA camps. Pruett was at the East/Mideast camp at Carson-Newman College in Jefferson City, Tenn., July 11-13.

Included in the camps are instruction sessions with former Olympic coach Billie Moore and ABL pro stars Debbie Black, Val Still and Edna Campbell; informational clinics on topics such as strength and conditioning and NCAA recruiting rules and requirements; and six games, played in front of college coaches.

First ace

Paula Prybylski made Friday's trip to Fellows Creek Golf Course in Canton worth her while.

The Canton resident scored a hole-in-one on the fifth hole of the south course, using a power wedge. Of course, it was the highlight of her day — indeed, of her golfing career, since it was her first ace ever.

Prybylski turned in a nine-hole round of 40.

Late homer lifts DCI

A pitcher's duel Friday night between Livonia Adray and Livonia DCI ended for all intents and purposes with one swing of the bat.

DCI's Pete Quinn, a Redford Thurston graduate who plays for Madonna University, hit a three-run home run with two outs in the top of the seventh inning for a 3-1 victory over Adray at Livonia's Ford Field.

The heartbreaking loss dropped Adray's record in the Adray Metro Baseball Association to 8-17 overall.

Adray pitcher Dave Rossow, who took a two-hitter and a shutout into the seventh inning, suffered the loss. DCI finished with four hits against him.

Mitch Jabczynski also went the distance to earn the win for DCI. He scattered eight hits, walked two and struck out 10.

Adray's only run came in the fourth. Kevin Uzarski singled and went to second on a passed ball. He took third on Chuck Yessaian's single and came home on Aaron Racey's single.

DCI was scoreless until the seventh when a walk and single set the plate for Quinn, who drilled the pitch over the fence.

JET BOX 3, RAMS 2: Troy Jet Box stopped the Michigan Lake Area Rams' seven game winning streak in the Adray Metro Baseball Association with a 3-2 victory Wednesday at Livonia's Ford Field.

The Rams, 14-8 overall, can clinch the Collegiate Division championship when they play a double-header against Livonia DCI that begins at 12:30 p.m. today at Ford Field.

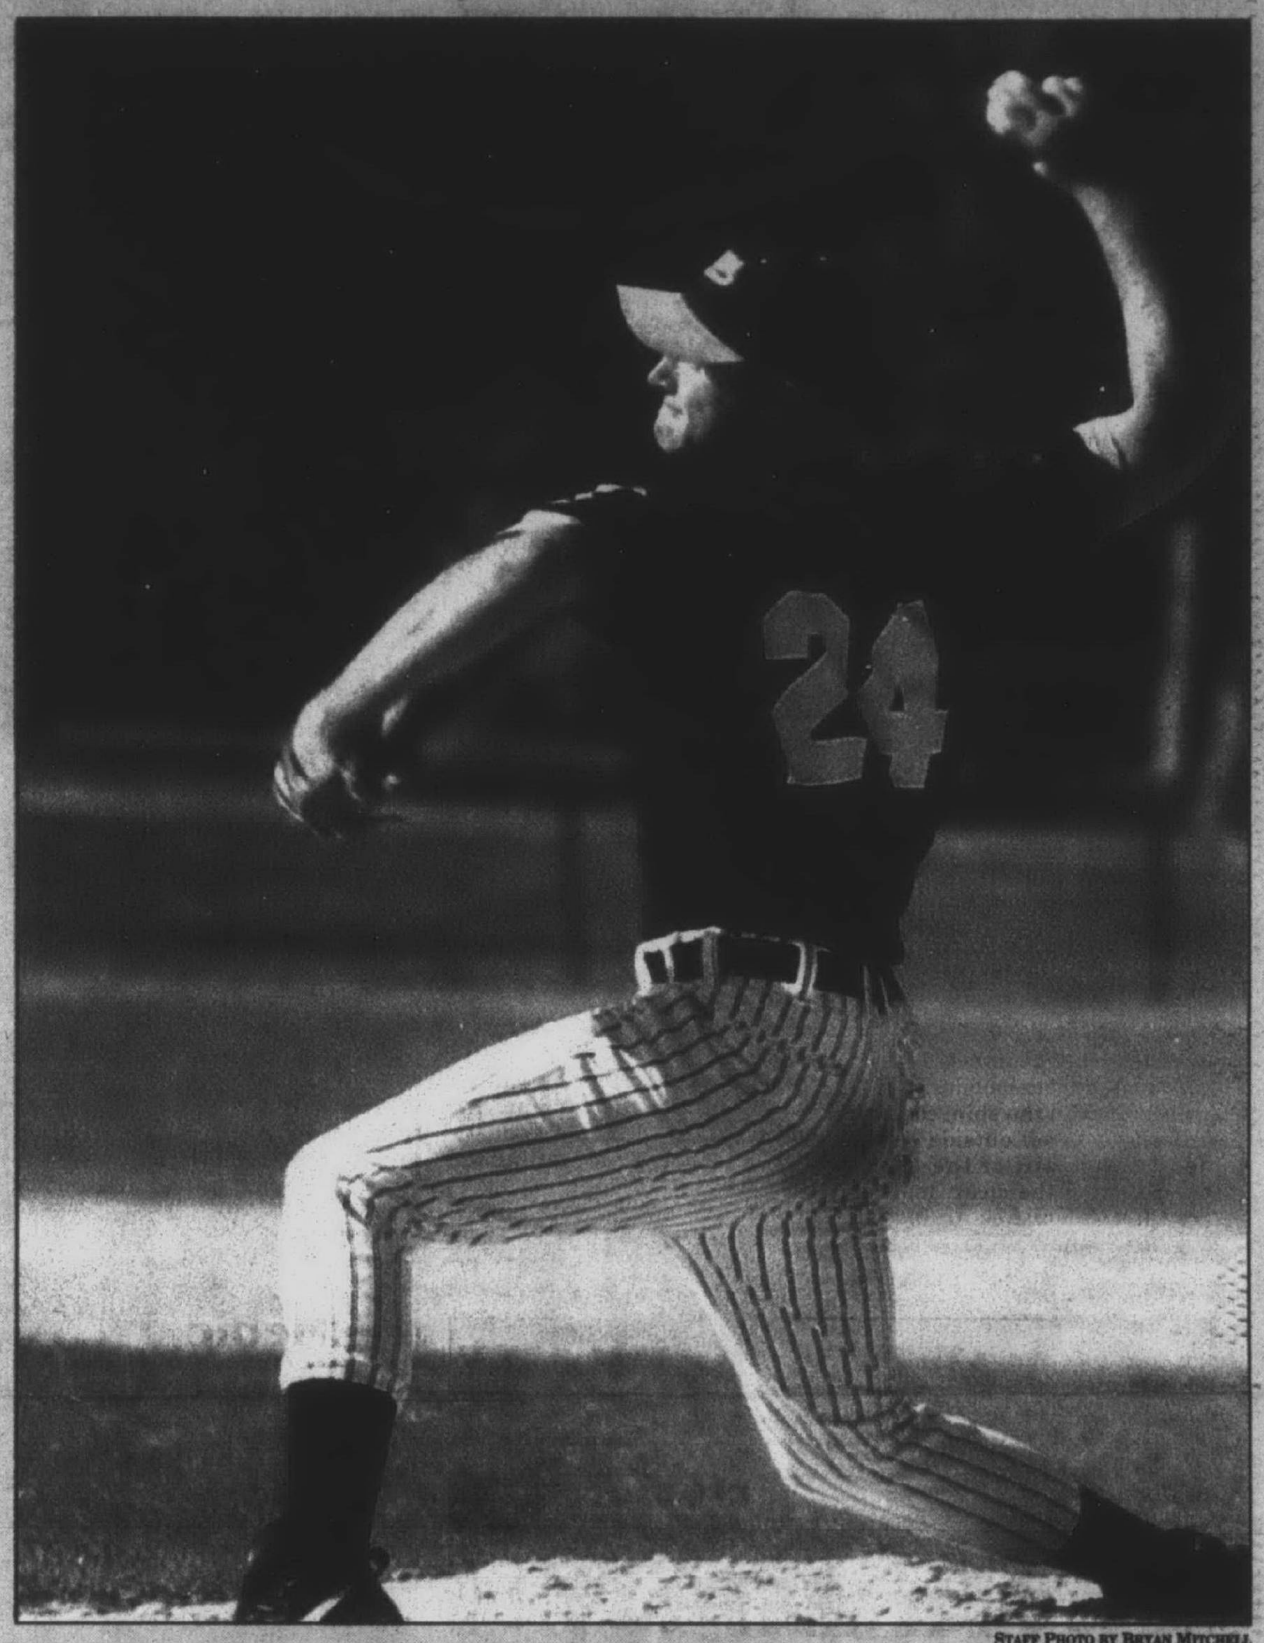

Rams' pitcher Brian Berryman made his first start since early in the season after returning from a pulled muscle in his neck. He allowed two hits, struck out one and walked one in two innings of work.

Jason Hoorn relieved and was tagged with the loss. He allowed only one earned run on four hits, one walk and two strikeouts.

Jet Box scored one run in the third, fifth and sixth innings.

The Rams scored once in the fourth on a single by Brian Issitt, stolen base, and single by Joe Seestadt.

Schoolcraft finally finds 2 new coaches

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR

The vacancies are filled — finally.

The question now is, what will the vacancy-fillers do to fill the vacancies they've inherited?

Schoolcraft College athletic director Ed Kavanaugh announced Thursday the hiring of Carlos Briggs as men's basketball coach and Bill Tolstedt as women's soccer coach.

"We understand it's late, they're going to be basically starting over," Kavanaugh said, referring to rosters depleted by the absense of recruiting. "We've had a lot of people call in in the last few weeks and say they were going to be going to school here.

"So they've got some numbers to call."

Both coaches will have to start calling fast. School starts in six weeks.

COACHING MOVES

In SC circles, both coaches have familiar names. Briggs was the school's biggest male basketball star, attaining NJCAA All-American status before graduating to NCAA Division I Baylor.

Tolstedt's daughter, Cindi, played soccer at SC through the 1993 season.

Kavanaugh, who has coached women's basketball at SC off and on for more than a decade, was there during Briggs' tenure. He felt the SC grad would be a proper choice to replace Greg Thomas, an interim coach who was not brought back.

"A big factor is, he's a great role model for the kids," Kavanaugh said of Briggs. "He came out of our program and went on to play Division I."

Briggs was unavailable for comment. He's been coaching high school basketball in Texas, where he also teaches, and was in the process of relocating back to Michigan.

Briggs graduated from Detroit Benedictine.

"He brings a lot of experience and enthusiasm to the job," Kavanaugh said. "We thought he was ready for it."

The same feeling existed for Tolstedt. Like Briggs, he's never coached at the collegiate level, but he figures he's ready to move on up.

"I'm looking forward to it," the optimistic Tolstedt said. "What interested me in coaching at this level is that, as girls get older and more mature, they're much easier to communicate with.

Late scoring barrage boosts Lakers to win

The Lakers staged a furious third-period comeback to overcome a four-goal deficit and beat the Huskies 11-10 Wednesday at Plymouth Ice Arena.

Jason Larys, who also had three assists in the game, scored two of the third-period goals, including the game-winner with 2:58 left. Scott Kale's goal with 4:22 to go had tied it at 10-all.

The Huskies led 9-6 after two periods, thanks in part to Jeremy Klosowski's three second-period goals. Klosowski (from Livonia) also had two assists. Corey Swider (Livonia), who collected five assists in the game, scored a goal with 13:01 to play in the game to push the Huskie lead to 10-6.

But after that, it was all Lakers. Mike Klinger (Southfield) also scored twice for the winners, Troy Taylor had a goal and four assists, and Eric Evans, Jay Vancik (West Bloomfield), Tom Taylor and Bill Tucker each score a goal and had an assist. Joe Vancik (West Bloomfield) also got a goal, and Jason Couture

Jet skier finds her success quite surprising

BY DAN O'MEARA
STAFF WRITER

When Donna Shannon says she's going to the lake, it's not just another day at the beach.

Her idea of fun in the sun involves roaring engines, competitive racing and gliding across the water on a 280-pound jet ski.

The Farmington resident took up the sport just four years ago, but it wasn't long before she was winning races.

Shannon is the reigning champion in the women's novice limited class in Region 6 of the International Jet Sports Boating Association.

She was introduced to the sport by fellow teachers in the Northville School District who race on Pontiac Lake.

"When they would run the course, I was in charge of making rough water, so they could practice," Shannon said, adding she was hooked when she began racing the following year.

"That started it all. It was awesome; the rush was incredible, the power of the engines."

When she started winning races, no one was more surprised than Shannon, who thought she lacked the skill but soon realized she was better than she thought.

"When I did so well in Pontiac, I made the commitment to put everything into it and to see how I could do," she said.

After winning the Region 6 title, which was based on 10 events and total points, Shannon qualified for the world championships, which are held each year on Lake Havasu in Arizona.

She finished 16th in her class — a ranking she was pleased to earn — but she was in fourth place at the time she collided with another skier.

"Some girl turned left too soon, and I got knocked off the ski," she said. "Otherwise, I probably could have done a little better.

"It was frustrating, but I didn't expect to do that well. I was so excited to be there. The experience was just amazing.

"People told me I was a good rider, but I didn't think I was good enough to compete on a national level."

Shannon won't repeat as the region champion or return to the world championships this year, however.

Problems with the ski, including a seized engine, caused her to miss two events, both of which were also world qualifiers.

She won the region with 260 points last year, and her closest competitor had 249.

"There's no way I can win it," she said. "You can't miss a race; it's too competitive. Our region offers 10 races, and you'd better make them all."

Nonetheless, the 46-year-old Shannon's success is all the more impressive since she usually races against women half her age.

"The age thing has been my private little goal, to show I can still compete with the younger girls," she said.

"It was kind of a joke last year. Nobody could figure out how old I was. At the last race, they elected somebody to come up and ask me."

Being a petite woman, Shannon, who teaches elementary physical education and is the mother of two teenage children, had to improve her strength to be a better skier.

"I never did anything competitive like this, so I started working on weights and doing aerobics," she said. "My endurance was weak, and I had to work on my upper body strength.

"It takes great balance and a strong back. (Skiers in her class are always in a standing position.) To be competitive, I had to put more speed on the ski and, to handle the speed, I had to get stronger."

When she began racing, Shannon discovered she had a competitive side to her nature, and the start of a race is where that competitiveness comes to the fore.

Donna Shannon
Jet skier extraordinaire

It can also be a harrowing and potentially dangerous experience. That's where the skill and strength is really needed.

"When you have 12 women coming off the line, it gets very tumultuous and it can be hard to see because of the spray," Shannon said. "You have to have a lot of strength in your arms to get through the first turn. After that it's just one-on-one."

Skiers must be in the water with their feet on the ground for the start. The skier grips the handles while a holder pulls back on the rear of the ski.

At the start, the momentum carries the skier onto the ski before reaching speeds of 50 miles per hour. A skier must have her feet on the ski by the first buoy (about 75 feet) or be disqualified.

Shannon attributes her success in part to her holder, Paul Durkee, and her ability to get a jump on the competition at the start.

"He has the strength that allows me to put more throttle on the ski," she said. "I'm able to shoot out of the hole, because I have the engine turning so fast already.

"While (the other skiers) are still trying to accelerate, I have the rpms up to mid range, so it really propels me; It really shoots me out of there."

The start, with the high concentration of water craft, can be the most dangerous. Two competitive skiers were killed worldwide last year, according to Shannon.

"If you fall off, hold your breath and stay under water," Shannon said, adding the possibility of a skier being hit in the head by another boat is the greatest danger. "The starts are the worst part."

But safety is a priority for the racers, and recklessness is unheard of among serious skiers.

"Most racers are very safe and very cautious," she said. "I've seen a rider give up position in a race to avoid a crash or to help.

"When you travel this many weeks with the same people, you're friends and you share a common consideration.

"We want to keep the privilege to ride, and we realize our behavior on the lakes affects our privileges."

There's more to the sport than just racing, Shannon said. She likes to arrive at the race site on Friday night and check out the course early Saturday.

Races take place on a quarter-mile slalom course. Skiers complete eight to 10 laps, and a race lasts about 10 minutes.

"The course marshall takes you through it once, and the next morning we sit and watch practice races," Shannon said.

"A lot of it is mental. You have to know the course and when to turn, because there's a lot of different colored buoys.

"There are a lot of strategies going on while you're racing that can make or break a race."

As a recreational activity, jet ski racing is Shannon's diversion from the daily grind.

"This is my stress relaxer," she said. "When I'm out there going 50 miles per hour, I don't think about much else."

Jendrusik wins 2; Mold split

Lori Jendrusik keeps showing again and again why she's considered one of the top softball pitchers in the area.

Jendrusik struck out 20 batters in 10 innings Thursday to lead the Livonia Lasers to 4-2 and 5-2 victories over the host Livonia Lancers in Girls Incredible Fast Pitch Softball League action.

Jendrusik fanned 12, walked two and gave up five hits in five innings in the opener.

Oh, and she's not bad with the bat, either. She had a two-run triple in the second and scored the Lasers' other run of the inning on a passed ball.

Jackie Ziem had an RBI double in the fourth for the Lasers' other run. The Lancers scored in the fourth and fifth.

In the second game, Jendrusik struck out eight, walked one and allowed two hits. She had an RBI single in the two-run fifth and Ziem got the other run in with a single.

The Lasers, now 13-4, scored three times in the opening inning without a hit. Four walks and two hit batters pushed the runs across.

Hornets 8-0, Mold 5-8: Jenny Fisher worked five innings of one-hit ball in the second game to earn the Motor City Mold a split of its doubleheader Thursday with the host Farmington Hills Hornets.

The Mold had just two hits in the opener, both by Liz Elsner, who drove in two runs and scored one. Marie Pochron walked twice and scored a run in the first game.

Losing pitcher Patty Snook went six innings and gave up eight hits. She walked one and struck out two.

Leslie Schrock tamed the Mold with one hit over six innings, walking five and striking out five. She also hit two batters, both in the third when the Mold added two walks and one of Elsner's hits to take a 4-0 lead.

The Hornets, now 10-4, scored two in the fifth and six in the sixth to earn the win. Meghan O'Rear went 3-for-3 with an RBI, Katina Vitanis went 3-for-4 and scored twice, Jenny Wingert was 2-for-4, Jamie Swartz had an RBI double and Lindsey Emmitt drove in a run.

Fisher struck out seven and didn't walk a batter in the nightcap to earn her shutout and improve the Mold to 8-5 in the league and 8-11 overall.

The Mold got seven hits. Melissa Brown was the only one with two, driving in a run. Becky Mize and Christy Even both had an RBI and scored a run, Amy Seale had a hit and two RBI while Fisher had two walks and scored twice.

Julie Price scored a run and had a hit, as did Erica Hancz.

Knights 16-11, Orioles 1-1: The Livonia Knights continued to keep pace with the best teams in the Girls Incredible Fast-Pitch Softball League with a 16-1, 11-1 double-header sweep Thursday over the Northville Orioles.

The Knights are 11-3 overall.

Adrienne Doyle earned the pitching victory in the first game, which lasted only three innings due to the mercy rule.

She allowed three hits, struck out seven and walked none.

Jenny Stralko had three hits and four RBI. Doyle had two hits and Kelly Stahley two hits and four RBI.

Christine Fones had a bases-clearing triple.

Tara Muchow pitched a one-hitter with six walks and six strikeouts to win the second game that lasted six innings.

Stralko was 2-for-2 with two RBI. Sarah Hennessey had two hits and two RBI and Danielle Bushey had a two-run double.

In a double-header split Tuesday against the Canton Mold, Doyle earned the pitching victory in the second game – a 4-3 outcome.

The Knights lost the first game, 4-1.

Doyle scattered nine hits, struck out three and walked one in seven innings.

Stralko and Stahley had two RBI each.

added two assists.

For the Huskies, Wes Blevins (Westland) and Kevin Swider (Livonia) each had two goals and two assists. Dominic Catanzarite (Livonia) had a goal and an assist, and James Yonemura (Garden City) got a goal.

Rick Marnon (Canton) and Thomas Taylor (Westland) were in goal for the Lakers. Jordan McCormack (Livonia) and Joe Sorentino were in the nets for the Huskies.

Wildcats 8, Wolverines 6: A goal by John Fontana (Livonia) goal early in the third period had put the Wolverines in front by a goal, but the Wildcats rallied to put three unanswered markers on the board and grab the win Thursday at Plymouth.

David Guidi's goal re-tied the game, at 6-6, for the Lakers. Jason Lawmaster, who totaled two goals and an assist, put them ahead with 4:40 to go, and Krikor Arman (West Bloomfield) added an insurance marker with 3:00 left.

Guidi also had two assists. Jason Durbin had three goals for the 'Cats, Mark Portelli contributed a goal, Greg George got three assists, and both Mike Lamb and Patrick Jesue had two assists.

Keith Pietila led the Wolves with two goals. Tom Balamucki and Jake Heikkinen each collected a goal and an assist, Abran Smith (Redford) got a goal, Jay Storm had three assists and Jim Pietila had two assists.

Brian Gray was in goal for the 'Cats. Art Baker played in the nets for the Wolves.

Falcons 8, Broncos 6: Matt Henderson (Livonia) netted two goals and four assists to pace the Falcons past the Broncos Thursday at Plymouth.

Matt Krupa had two goals and an assist, Jack McCoy (Farmington Hills) had a goal and four assists, Jesse Hubenschmidt (Redford) got a goal and three assists and Rick Rewiako tallied a goal and an assist for the Falcons. Dan Imperati also notched a goal.

The Broncos were led by James Wheaton (Plymouth), with three goals and two assists. Ben Blackwood added two goals and two assists, Brian Calka (Livonia) had four assists and Josh Wiegand scored a goal.

The Falcons built a 7-4 lead after two periods and held off a Bronco comeback attempt. Jason Hubenschmidt (Redford) was in goal for the Falcons. Casey Ostig (Troy) played goal for the Broncos.

"I know it sounds strange, but I like it because they challenge me and ask why I'm doing something."

Tolstedt has plenty of coaching experience, to be sure. He began 19 years ago in an instructional league, handling under-8 and under-10 year-olds. He started coaching boys' teams in the Northville area in 1981, then switched to girls in '87.

The team he started with progressed through the recreation league ranks into select play, finally reaching the Little Caesars premier division. Tolstedt has coached his Northville Sting age-group premier team since '90.

With the same basic roster, they have won three Little Caesars division championships as they rose through the age groups.

"We got players who were told or thought they couldn't play at that level, and they developed," said Tolstedt.

His optimism as he takes over the job for Nikki Johnson, who resigned at the conclusion of last season, will be tested to be sure.

"You aren't kidding, Tolstedt said. "As best as I can tell, little or no recruiting has been done. It's going to be a bit of a struggle.

"Eventually things will work out and next year things will be better."

But what about this year? Keeping full rosters has been a problem in both men's basketball and women's soccer.

Tolstedt can't even be sure who might be on the roster. "Not at all," was his answer when asked if he had any possible players lined up, "and I'm a little nervous about it.

"But we are alive. We're just struggling a bit."

One reason Kavanaugh brought Tolstedt in were his connections in the Little Caesars league. "We felt, with his contacts, he'd be able to recruit pretty well," the Ocelots' athletic director said.

With team workouts to start in less than two weeks, if Tolstedt just manages to put a team on the field, it will be a major accomplishment.

Anyone interested in obtaining information on playing men's basketball or women's soccer for Schoolcraft College may call the athletic office at (313) 462-4400, ext. 5249.

Women's soccer coach Bill Tolstedt invites those interested to call him at the same listing, ext. 5255, or at home at (248) 348-9409.

The Rams threatened in the seventh. Todd Miller started the threat with a single and scored on a double by Lance Siegwald to cut the deficit to 3-2. Greg Rogers was intentionally walked to put runners on first and second but the next batter grounded out to end the game.

"It was a thriller but nonetheless a loss," Rams coach Rick Berryman said.

Windsor Stars 8, Livonia Adray 0: Apparently, in Canada, dollars mean less and runs mean more.

Livonia Adray playing the Windsor Stars Wednesday at Mic Mac Park in Windsor, fell behind 8-0 after 5 1/2 innings, which is enough to end the game on a mercy rule.

In the United States, a 10-run lead through five innings is usually good enough for a mercy victory.

The Stars' winning pitcher Mark Murphy limited Adray to three hits.

Matt Seabring suffered the loss for Adray, allowing nine hits, three walks and striking out two.

The Stars broke the game open with seven runs after the first two batters were out in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Cutlass has everything but kitchen sink for under $20,000

CAReport

By Anne Fracassa
Avanti NewsFeatures

For a company that seemed on its last leg a mere five or six years ago, this 1997 Oldsmobile Cutlass is a breath of fresh air.

The Cutlass nameplate has been around a long, long time. But this new Cutlass is different. It's not a sports car, but it's got quite a bit of power. It's not a car that would automatically appeal to the older generation, either.

This new Cutlass is a mid-size family sedan that delivers handsomely on comfort, luxury, convenience and affordability.

Let's get that out of the way first. Test-driven was the Cutlass GLS sedan outfitted with the 3100 V6 engine and 4-speed automatic transmission. That's the top end of the Cutlass lineup. It has everything but the kitchen sink — including full leather seating and the price at the bottom of the sticker read an incredible $19,225.

Check out the equipment: dual airbags, anti-lock brakes, security system, intermittent wipers, rear window defogger, power door locks, 6-way adjustable driver's seat, AM/FM cassette stereo, power mirrors, air conditioning (with rear ducts), cruise control, lighted visor mirrors, floor mats, illuminated entry, keyless remote, power windows, tilt steering and tinted windows.

In other words, fully equipped. All for under $20,000. That's value.

This new Cutlass carries on the Oldsmobile tradition of quiet ride, solid transportation and value for your pocketbook.

The Cutlass sits on a 107-inch wheelbase and because of that, you've got a lot of interior room — more than Camry or Accord. Three can sit in the back without using a can opener and leg room is impressive back there as well.

The 3100 engine is no slacker. The V6 is strong and provides 160 horsepower. More than enough to get you away from a light fast or down into the freeway in a hurry. And it's quiet. The 4-speed electronic transmission performs flawlessly as well.

The split folding rear seat provides an added convenience feature, letting you carry large items without a problem. The leather bucket seats up front are comfortable — unless you sit down with shorts when it's been in the sun all day. I never saw Francesca, my 5-year-old, jump out of a seat so fast.

And speaking of kids, the Cutlass has a patented child comfort guide for the seat belts that effectively keeps the shoulder belt away from the child's face and neck. A simple addition, this little plastic piece is attached to an elastic cord and can be tucked away easily when not in use.

The Cutlass also has a new innovation in its keyless entry system designed to prevent theft. The system can be operated with up to four different transmitters — one for each member of the family, if necessary.

There is a different signal each time the transmitter is used, which mean a thief can't monitor, record or repeat the signal to get into your car. There's a special "military-grade algorithm" incorporated in the transmitter that provides "billions" of encryption codes. The battery on the key fob has a 5-year lifespan, as opposed to the 3-year battery life of most others.

Standard are daytime running lamps that automatically switch on the regular lights and interior lamps when it gets dark.

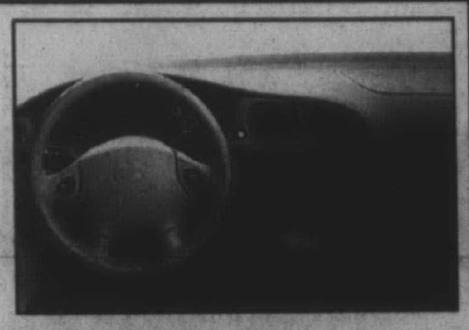

Handling and responsiveness are good. The Cutlass can zip around a corner like the best of 'em. Or avoid an accident. Steering response is solid, and you know you're in command.

Instrumentation is simple and controls are easy to use. The stereo controls are up high, in the center of the dash and the heating and cooling controls are just below that. There is a 12-volt power plug in the center console for the car phone. Most other controls are on stalks on either side of the steering wheel.

The Cutlass has a chime reminder. I really don't mind hearing a warning chime when the seat belt isn't fastened, the key is still in the ignition or even when the headlights are still on. I do mind the chime when the turn signal has been on too long. Very annoying.

There are other warning chimes on the Cutlass — all great ideas — to let you know when the oil pressure is low, coolant temperature is too high, fuel is almost gone, door is ajar, something's wrong with the brake system and the electrical voltage is low. All necessary for your safety on the road.

Here's something really cool — a pull-out cupholder (it actually holds a coffee cup securely) located left of the steering wheel. Great idea. Just unnerving to drink with your left hand when you're right-handed. Neat execution, though. There are cupholders for every passenger, too.

This new Cutlass carries on the Oldsmobile tradition of quiet ride, solid transportation and value for your pocketbook. Definitely among the best values on the road today.

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

During the past six years, 47 different species of butterflies have been identified at Heritage Park in Farmington Hills.

The diverse habitats of forest, wet meadow and abandoned fields allow such variety.

One species seen frequently, and sometimes in large numbers, is the Baltimore checkerspot. It's not a large butterfly, like a monarch, it's about 2 to 2 1/2 inches across when the wings are open.

But like the monarch, it has colors of orange, black and white. Unlike the monarch, the Baltimore is mostly black with a checkered pattern of orange and white spots on the wings.

They like wet habitats where the caterpillar feeds on turtlehead. I've frequently seen them sipping salts from woodchips on the trail that were wet from summer rain and rain puddles. Butterflies will seek out puddles where salts have concentrated due to evaporation.

Just the other day, I watched two Baltimores courting. One was directly behind the other butterfly, which was rapidly fluttering its wings. The fluttering butterfly in front was not trying to chase the other one away. On the contrary, it was probably trying to fill the air with a scent that is irresistible to the other butterfly.

At a meeting of the North American Butterfly Association last August in Tucson, Ariz., one of the speakers showed some remarkable videos of courtship in one of the medium-sized white butterflies and the gulf fritillary.

In the white, the male intentionally moved the leading edge of its wing over the female's antennae. On the wing are scales that provide a very specific scent to attract the female and convince her to mate. The fritillary flapped its two wings so the female's antennae were in between the two wings that slapped together. This behavior was again designed to engulf the female in a scent for sex.

As you may have guessed by now, butterflies and other insects use their antennae to smell. Some use them to feel confined areas in the dark, so those of us who used to call them feelers when we were young were not too far off the mark.

Watching the actions of these and other butterflies I saw on my walk reinforced the idea that butterflies, like birds, mammals and just about any other kind of animal I can think of, move or act in different ways.

If you take note of these differences, it will help you realize how varied and diverse the natural world is.

Bowling, like many other sports, has entered the age of computerization.

Automatic scoring is a perfect example, as most people are already familiar with it.

But now comes computerized coaching in the form a program called "A-Star."

This is a system which is now being used for several other sports, particularly golf.

It goes into the hard drive of a computer system and after watching a demonsttation put on by Sean King of I.M.A. Sports Training Systems Inc., it's clear bowlers could improve on their game at a faster pace by getting with an instructor who is using the system.

According to King, "one lesson with this system is equivalent to three, four or perhaps five instructional sessions without."

Tim Wieczorek of the Rack Attack Pro Shop at Thunderbird Lanes in Troy has put the program to work for his students and he said "it will help people become better bowlers quicker."

According to Jerry Harris of Rack Attack, "using the system provides instant feedback and increases the learning tempo. Bowlers will achieve more consistency."

The program has all kinds of features which allow the user to compare the delivery with an instant analysis provided by information fed in by the instructor.

The story board can be used to compare different bowlers. It will analyze such things as the swing, footwork, body position, release, track of the ball, speed and entry angle.

It features slow motion, stop action and breaks down the game into several components.

There are several screen options and layouts available for use during the session. The system requires a camcorder to be hooked up.

The "A-Star" system will make a lot of good bowlers better bowlers.

At this time, it's only in use at Rack Attack. For information, call Tim, Debbie or Jerry at (248) 362-2212. Any pro shop operator interested in the system can contact Sean King at 800-709-9620 or (248) 774-2590.

Family affair: For Harold Fair Sr. and his son, Harold Fair Jr., of Redford, auto racing runs in the family. Both race on the American Speed Association circuit.

Fair duo gets checkered flag

BY STEVE KOWALSKI
STAFF WRITER

Harold Fair Sr. didn't need any outside advertising back when he owned a Shell Gas Station on Clark and Vernor roads in southwest Detroit.

Half the time, it seemed, one of Fair's fleet sat in the parking lot ready to occupy a bay at night.

If the work was good enough for his investment, imagine how comfortable the customers felt with their car in the shop.

Fair has been driving race cars for 35 years, the last 17 on the American Speed Association. He ranks fifth on the all-time career money winner's list in the ASA, taking second in the overall point standings twice.

Fair, 50, sold his station a couple years ago, but his racing career is still going strong. Fair and his son, Harold Fair, Jr., lead the Fair Racing Team that around these parts is as popular as the Allisons.

A family affair

Racing has been in the family for more than 50 years.

Not only did Fair Sr.'s father race, so did his mother. Growing up, he was more of a momma's boy.

"Worst thing I ever saw was when my mother's car flipped – I actually cried," Fair Sr. said. "My dad flipping, that was no big deal."

Fair Sr.'s mother died in 1963 of hepatitis. His father, Hugh, 71, still lives in Las Vegas.

Fatherly advice is welcomed, but the way his sport has advanced, not needed.

"The tips he can offer wouldn't help us anymore," said Fair Sr., formerly of Livonia, now living in Taylor. "Things have changed that much."

Fair Jr., 28, and a 1987 Livonia Franklin graduate, is a Rookie of the Year candidate on the United States Auto Racing Hooters Cup Series, which races mostly in the south. He's lived in Redford Township the last five years.

The Fair Racing Team is sponsored by CAR QUEST and AC Delco but is looking for new sponsors.

Fair Jr. ranks 17th in the current point standings despite a setback a couple weeks back at race in Lakeland, Fla.

Cracking up

Fair Jr. hit the wall, avoided major injury, but totaled his car.

Insurance companies don't like insuring race cars so it's a cost the team must absorb with help from their sponsors.

Fair Sr. and Fair Jr. have spent the better part of the last two weeks building a new ride at Fair Enterprises in Romulus, a shop they own strictly for rebuilding race cars.

A new car without motor costs at least $10,000 and the motor is $25,000, Fair Jr. said.

"I'm looking to put something else (more sponsors) on my car – we don't have anything on Harold's car," Fair Sr. said. "That's what it all comes down to – money. The (crew) team is working real hard, but I can't afford to pay these guys (except for their travel expenses)."

A member of the Michigan Auto Racing Hall of Fame, Fair Sr. made his racing debut at the Mt. Clemens speedway in 1963.

Being part of the racing scene wasn't something Fair Jr. chose.

Crewing

He joined his father's pit crew at age 11 and by the age of 18 he was crew chief. His racing career began in 1992 and a year later captured the Toledo Late Model Championship.

Harold Fair Sr.

Harold Fair Jr.

"I spent my second birthday at MIS (Michigan International Speedway)," he recalls. "I've seen pictures, but I can't remember back that far."

The two are in the shop during the week, racing on the weekends.

"I came home a couple weeks ago from a race and my wife (Hilda) said, 'Oh, you remember where you live,' " Fair Sr. joked.

All of the Fair offspring have connections to auto racing. His son, Jonathan, 21, is the crew chief for Fair Jr. when home from Michigan Tech University.

His daughter, Toni Lynn, is married to Jeff Neal, an ASA racer in the south.

Fair Jr.'s wife, Trish, didn't know a thing about racing before they met as undergraduates at the University of Michigan. A school teacher in Detroit who teaches summer school in the South Redford school district, she helps promote the team in her spare time.

Fair Jr. earned a business degree from U-M and is working on a second degree in mechanical engineering.

Racing goal

His goal in the next three years is to make the Busch Grand National Tour, one step below the prestigious Winston Cup Series.

He's come a long way from his high school days when he "could get in a lot of trouble" as owner of a Ninja 900 motorcycle and 1979 Camaro Z28 with a 327 motor.

"The industry is going toward drivers like myself who have a knowledge of the engine," Fair Jr. said. "Some drivers you give them a good car and they're good. But give them a 'loose or tight' car and they're all over the road."

Sixteen of Fair Jr.'s races are on ESPN 2, while several of Fair Sr.'s races are shown on the TNN cable network or picked up by Fox and PASS.

Fair Sr. suffered a major injury in 1981 when another car's bumper went through his side panel and punctured his lung and ribs. A new rule was adopted after the accident to make for safer riding – they call it the Harold Fair Play rule.

Fair Sr. spent 22 days in the hospital, four in intensive car, but he still feels safer on an oval track than in rush-hour traffic.

"I feel safer on a race track than the street," he said. "You never know where they're coming from, all four corners, on the street. On the race track, they're all going one way."

OUTDOOR NOTES

For folks headed out of the heat of western Wayne County and into the cooler areas of the state, there are some special wildlife sights awaiting them this summer.

MOOSE SPOTTING: For folks who travel in the Lower Peninsula, seeing a road side sign with jumping deer on it comes as no surprise.

It means slow down, there's a deer crossing.

But these days in the Upper Peninsula, a traveler will be a bit surprised to see moose on similar signs.

There are moose in the Upper Peninsula, and the state Department of Natural Resources is asking the public for help in keeping track of their numbers.

Those who see a moose or sign of moose are being asked to call any DNR office in the Upper Peninsula to report the information or fill out a DNR Moose Report.

The report asks for the date and location of the moose observation, as well as habitat and the type of moose sign located.

"It's not often that someone will actually see a moose, but it is more likely that someone may discover tracks, antler rubs, or areas browsed by moose," said Jim Hammill, an Upper Peninsula wildlife biologist.

"This type of information is also important to us, since it indicates the presence of moose in that general area," he said.

The DNR and Michigan Technological University conducted an aerial survey last winter to count moose. The survey produced moose population figures contradictory to previous totals reached through other survey methods.

Last summer, biologists were estimating the moose population in the western Upper Peninsula to be around 450 animals, with another 150 in the eastern Upper Peninsula.

However, the 1996 winter survey revealed about 100 moose in the western Upper Peninsula.

"We believe that the disparities between the previous surveys and those conducted last winter are the result of a number of variables," said John Hendrickson, a DNR wildlife researcher.

"The surveys were done after heavy snow had already blanketed the region, and we believe the moose sought out heavy cover to avoid having to move in the deep snow, making them very difficult to spot from the air."

The DNR would like to keep track of the numbers and is asking the public to help until winter when there are snows on the ground and another count can be done.

BIRD WATCHING: This is the summer to keep an eye out for the Kirtland's warbler, a rare song bird that nests only in jack pine stands in northern Michigan.

According to the DNR, numbers are up. Biologists, volunteers and researchers counted 728 singing males during the official 1997 census in early June, compared to 692 counted in 1996.

The census was started in 1951, repeated in 1961 and has been done annually during the first two weeks of June since 1971. A record high of 765 singing males was established in 1995.

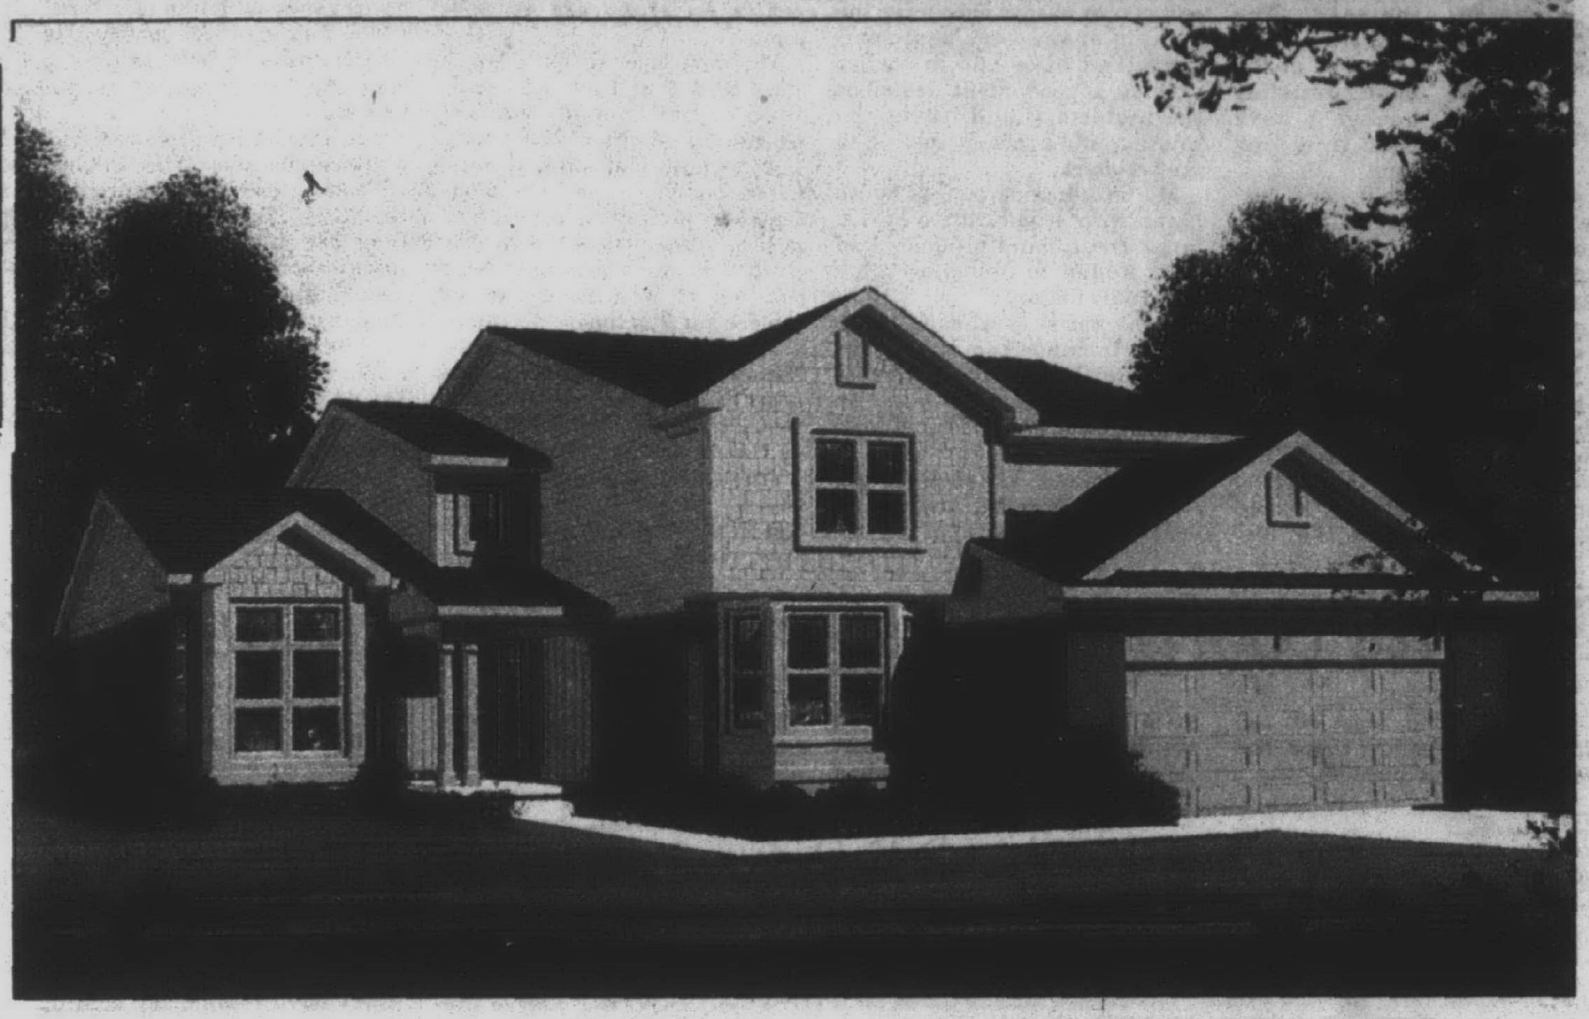

The number of singing males found in 10 northern Lower Peninsula counties were: Alcona, 50; Clare, five; Crawford, 119; Iosco, 23; Montmorency, two; Ogemaw, 187; Oscoda, 264; Otsego, 26; and Roscommon, 10.

The warbler is a small, blue-gray and yellow, sparrow-sized bird.

Colonial expected to sell well in Crestfield

TAMMIE GRAVES/STAFF ARTIST

Colonial option: This is one of five exterior elevations for a 2,600-square-foot colonial, the only floor plan available, at Crestfield Estates.

Crestfield Estates in Troy is unusual in that buyers have their choice of five different exterior appearances, but the floor plan for interior living space is the same.

The one-size-fits-all philosophy worked well in nearby Addison Heights, said Mark Carroll, president of MC Construction and partner with Michigan Home Builders of Troy in Crestfield Estates.

So maybe lightning in the form of quick sales can strike again.

"The partners, I think, just felt because it's Troy schools and not much land is left in Troy and, down the street, what was selling was colonials ... for 22 houses ... just build one," Carroll said.

The colonials will feature some 2,600-square-feet of living space with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

Three of the exterior elevations carry a base price of $269,900, the other two $275,900 and $276,900. Most of the lots have a premium of $2,500 or $5,000. Seven, including two specs and a model, are listed at base price.

Speaking of lots, all 22 on site are at least 80 feet wide and 135 feet deep. Vehicles will enter off Wattles just east of Livernois.

"Another nice thing for people with kids is the dead end and cul-de-sac," Carroll said of the single road in and out of the community. "The only people in here are the 22 people who will live here."

Other measures besides relatively little traffic will attract prospective buyers.

"Troy is good schools, good shopping, great location, accessible to expressways," said Millie Kamensky, sales manager. "I think it's a very good floor plan – first floor laundry, library. Those are things people want.

"They have eating space in the kitchen, plus a formal dining room," Kamensky added.

"The main selling features are Troy schools, lots are pretty good size," Carrol said. "We think they (houses) are affordable for the Troy market. At $269,000, I think we're in a pretty affordable price range for now."

Two spec houses are under construction, each of about 2,450 square feet.

The main floor will feature a two-story foyer, great room with fireplace, formal dining room, kitchen/nook and a room that can be used as either a study or living room.

The half-bath and first floor laundry are placed close to the entrance way to the house from the two-car garage.

"I have kids. They can take their shoes off and the mud room is right here," Carroll said. "This is good traffic pattern."

Four bedrooms and two baths are upstairs.

The master will showcase a vaulted ceiling, separate tub and shower, walk-in closet and two vanities.

"Bedrooms are all pretty decent size," Carroll said.

Carpeting, four recessed lights, a dishwasher and basement also are included at base price. The two specs carry a price of $254,900.

The family room will be extended by about 92 square feet in subsequent constructions.

Carroll expects to finish the spec houses by the end of August. Weather set back development last fall and this spring. "The biggest thing now is to get the landscape in and get it (site) cleaned up," he said.

Carroll projected that a move-up buyer already living in the Troy area attracted by a sound school system will buy in Crestfield Estates.

"Someone who wants a bigger home and some amenities that come with a new home – vaulted ceilings, exterior detailing, more energy efficient," Carroll said. "It's always nice for people to choose all their cabinets and colors.

"You're a skip and a jump from the freeway (I-75) and major employment centers," he said. "We're flexible. If people want to remove walls and change things, we're willing to do that."

Crestfield Estates is serviced by city water and sewers. There will be sidewalks.

The property tax rate currently is $36.57 per $1,000 of state equalized valuation, half of market value. That means the owners of a $275,000 house there would pay just over $5,000 the first year.

The sales office at Crestfield Estates, (248) 740-8800, is open

Beware of the hidden hazards lurking in every home

BY ELIZABETH LANE
SPECIAL WRITER

Do you know how hot the water from your bathtub faucet is? Do you know the proper way to use and store gasoline around the house?

If you don't know, you and your family may be living with two hidden hazards that could lead to painful burn injuries – or even death.

The first hazard is "Hot Water." According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, more than 4,000 children are scalded each year from tap water, half under five years of age. Death from scalds is the most common among children four years old and younger.

The second hazard that may be lurking in the home is "Flammable Vapor Ignition." According to the National Fire Incident Reporting System, fires, burn injuries and death caused by the ignition of gasoline vapors increase during the summer months.

To help families recognize these dangers, the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association (GAMA) has produced a 10-minute video titled, "Hidden Hazards in Your Home." It's narrated by William Shatner, host of Rescue 911 and star of the original Star Trek.

I've screened the video: It's informative, entertaining, and it's free. (I'll tell you how to get a copy in a moment.)

In the "Hot Water Safety" sequence, Shatner shows how to test the water temperature in your home and recommends setting water heaters to produce water no hotter than 120 degrees. He also encourages parents to always check the water before putting children in the tub and to never leave them alone. The video also includes a scenario where a child is scalded after her mother leaves her alone to answer the phone.

In the sequence on "Flammable Vapor Ignition," Shatner stresses the dangers of using and storing gasoline the wrong way. Holding an approved gasoline container, he emphasizes the fact that the vapors are dangerous and you can't see them. The danger is further illustrated with a scenario where a father uses gasoline indoors to clean a child's bike, dramatizing the incorrect use and its consequences.

Shatner has a personal sense of commitment to help prevent injuries, especially among children. "The importance of GAMA's campaign is that it may save one life, one child from a burn and having a lifetime injury," Shatner said. "If one child, one human being can be saved, then a campaign like this is worthwhile. Imagine saving thousands."

You can obtain a free copy of the video by calling: 1-800-GAMA-811.

Architect tries to solve client's problems

STEVEN SIVAK

A recent interview for a job took me to a beautiful section of Beverly Hills with mature trees and winding roads. The house was perhaps one of the most interesting houses I have been in a long time.

Once upon a time it was a fairly simple brick "colonial" but the house had been modified at least four times in its 35 years and was now much more complicated and spatially interesting than it used to be.

This was a client who not only had worked with architects in the past but also had sent their son to architecture school. They were familiar with the costs of architectural construction and the process in general. They also know what architecture can do if performed correctly and because of this, could be quite demanding – only time would tell in regards to this issue.

Well educated clients with good taste who are demanding will almost always encourage the making of the very best solutions. As I have said in earlier articles, a good client describes the problem(s) and leaves the solution and problem solving to the architect.

My introduction to this house began with a quick drive by – a large green band of space had been added to house at some time in its history.

I was not sure what to think and refrained from any judgment until later when I got to understand this space from the inside. But instead of going in to the house first, the tour began in the backyard, which was this moderately ornate, casual and beautifully planted area.

Large mature trees on one side, full screening from neighbors and a careful and rich palette of plants and shrubs were the major elements in this yard. Because of its screening from neighbors, this yard was really an elaborate outdoor room.

The next layer of space was a wood deck that I am personally tired of, but this one had the boards up on their side – with 1 /2" of material showing and these boards were very close together- perhaps with one-half inch of space between each 2x4. Built without pressure treated lumber it was ready to be replaced at this time.

The next layer of space was an enclosed porch with glass sliding doors utilizing the largest sliders that I have ever seen. The floor in this space had been redone with Mexican tiles during one of the house's renovations and water heating added so that it was now a three season porch.

The next layer of space were the dining and living rooms, which (just like the deck and porch) filled the entire width of the rear of the house. These were modest sized rooms with gorgeous views out to the rear yard.

The furniture was made up of classic modern pieces as well as contemporary modern pieces – nice stuff!

The project involves the complete renovation of the kitchen and other spaces at the front of the house. The size of the kitchen is a bit modest considering today's room sizes.

In addition, the kitchen is a bit choppy and inefficient because of it. The distance between the sink, refrigerator and stove should be as small as possible to reduce excess walking between these items.

So the kitchen needs to be bigger, and, in order to do this, the powder room needs to be either moved or shrunken way down. Moving the front hall closet would also make additional space in the kitchen and would open up the view in to the kitchen and out of the kitchen. We might also steal some space from the dining room in by removing a bank of storage that exist in that space.

From the inside, the green band blends in much more smoothly with the existing interior. It forms a hallway in some parts of the house and serves as a mudroom in others.

We could steal from the green band, which is on the side of the kitchen, but the client likes this space as a "decompression" space. This project is kind of like a game of chess, which has very few written rules and but lots of rules nonetheless.

At the close of the first meeting, we had discussed enough of the parameters so that I could understand what it was that the clients wanted. I told them my fees and the nature of my services – they already understood that, having worked with numerous architects in the past.

I then told them I would be sending them a contract, and they encouraged me to do so. I said good-bye, drove off and began trying to solve the problems that they had described and hoped that I could add to the beauty of the house they had worked on for the last 30 years.

Mobile cooling units marketed by Consumers help save the day

She had the man of her dreams. The wedding chapel had been picked out since she was a little girl. There was only one problem – the chapel was not air-conditioned and the wedding date was falling on a hot, humid Saturday in Michigan. What's a distraught bride to do?

To rescue the wedding from unpleasant weather and preserve precious memories, the bride's family brought in state-of-the art, portable spot air conditioning units called "MovinCool." Consumers Energy, Michigan's largest utility, now offers these unique mobile cooling devices through an agreement with U.S. Distributing, the exclusive MovinCool agent in Michigan.

"We are pleased that these innovative temporary cooling units helped to save the day for a bride's wedding," said Paul A. Elbert, Consumers Energy's executive vice president and chief operating officer for natural gas.

Two large hospitals in Michigan also brought in MovinCool units to provide emergency back-up for failed air-conditioning units. In one instance, the temporary units were used in post-surgical areas and laboratories to protect critical testing equipment.

"The applications of MovinCool are nearly endless. No air-conditioning system is perfect, and these units can quickly and economically solve problems. Rather than air-conditioning an entire factory, for instance, a company can save a lot of money by just cooling individual workers. Use of these portable units can increase employee morale and productivity, and help to protect computer systems from overheating," said William Beattie, president of U.S. Distributing, Inc., located in Birmingham.

Consumers Energy cooling experts can provide, at no charge, site analysis and installation of MovinCool units, which can be rented or purchased. For more information, contact Consumers Energy at 1-800-308-8885.

Impatiens are best for color

By Lee Reich
For AP Special Features

Sunlight – the more the better – is necessary for growing tomatoes, peaches, marigolds and roses, but plenty of beautiful gardens have been made in deep shade.

A tree such as flowering dogwood or a shrub such as rhododendron or azalea could splatter some color into a shaded nook for a brief period in spring. Then the torch could be carried on into summer with some herbaceous perennials that tolerate shade.

Fluffy white flowers of false Solomon's seal could brighten shade in late spring, and white-flowered stalks of black snakeroot could take over in midsummer, followed by fragrant plantain lilies also white – in late summer.

Too many white flowers? Break up the monotony with fire-engine red cardinal flower, Virginia bluebell (blue, of course), or epimedium (yellow or orange flower).

Alas, just like dogwood, rhododendron and azalea, each of these herbaceous perennials has its fleeting moment of glory, and leaves a flowerless gap in the garden as its blossoms fade.

An annual flower is what is needed for a non-stop show of cheery color. Tuberous begonias are a possibility where only spots of color are desired.

But for billowing mounds of color generously splashed on the ground right through the summer until the first frost of autumn, there is one plant that stands above all others: impatiens.

Impatiens blossoms cover a range of bright colors, including pink, red, orange, scarlet, even white.

To enjoy impatiens blossoms sufficiently early in the season, you have to start impatiens plants indoors.

Seed should have been sown two months before you set out plants, so mark your calendar to remind yourself for next year, then go out and buy started plants this year. Set plants a foot apart, pinching out the growing plant to make it more bushy. Some of the new hybrids are so compact that you can forego the pinching.

Throughout the summer, keep an eye out for drooping leaves, and water if necessary. In the shade, in a soil enriched with compost or peat moss, natural rainfall may be sufficient, but if you grow impatiens in the sun, the plants might need watering almost every day.

Those fleshy stems also root easily from softwood cuttings. If you root such cuttings in late summer, you can overwinter the plants indoors for planting out in the garden next year. Indoors, in a sunny window, the plants will bloom throughout the winter, if kept well-fed and watered.

If you plant impatiens outdoors in shade, it is a good idea to plant only one color or blocks of colors that harmonize – violet with pink, rather than with tangerine, for example.

Mortgage helps save energy, cash

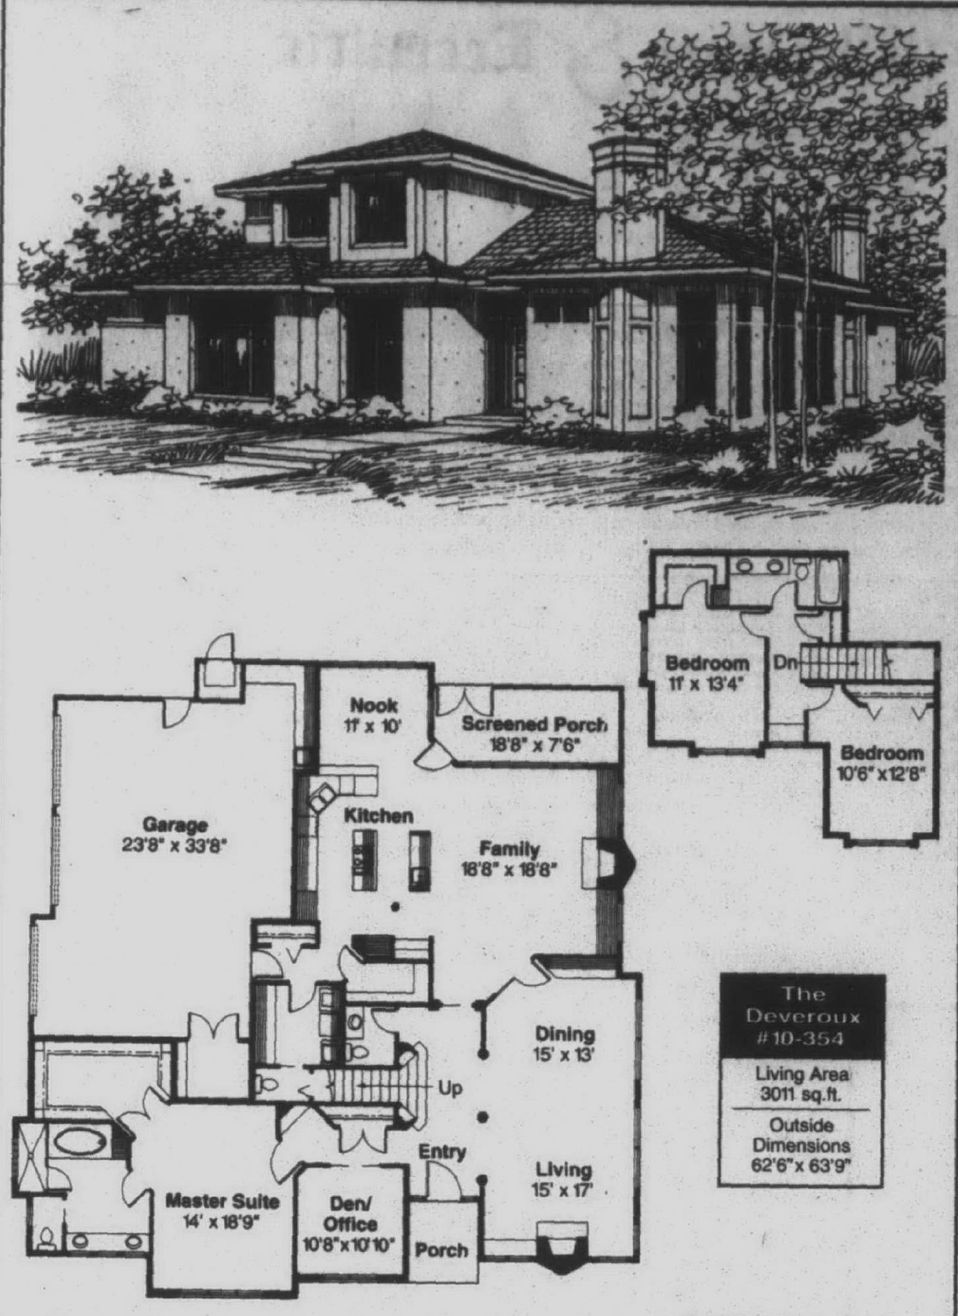

(NAPS) – The Energy Efficient Mortgage (EEM) loan programs allow homeowners to make energy efficient changes and add them to their mortgage.

To take advantage of an EEM, consumers must have their homes rated for energy efficiency by a state-certified Home Energy Rating System (HERS). It recommends the needed upgrades and estimates the cost of the upgrades, projected annual savings in utility costs and the useful life of the recommended improvements.

The cost of a HERS rating (about $200) as well as the cost for installing the upgrades can be included in a new or refinanced FHA, VA or conventional mortgage loan.

While the monthly payment may go up, the increase is offset by a reduction in monthly utility bills.

A free booklet titled "Energy Efficient Mortgage Home Owner Guide" details the program and may be received by calling Countrywide at (800) 903-8366.

3,000 square feet in 3-bedroom plan

Clean, crisp lines draw eyes to the Deveroux, a bright airy home with more than 3,000 square feet of living space, plus a three-car garage. Most of the rooms on the ground floor have lofty 10-foot ceilings.

Walking through the entry hall toward the huge family room, one is struck by a feeling of regal openness. Three widely spaced 12-inch columns define the boundary between the hallway and a naturally bright living room/dining room.

Windows fill most of the side wall, more windows flank the fireplace, and a built-in buffet nests in an alcove at the back.

A beautiful space, but family and friends will probably still want to spend most of their time relaxing in the comfortable family room/ kitchen. The fireplace here is flanked by shelves, cupboards and windows, while a screened porch spans the room's rear.

This kitchen has two work islands. One is outfitted with a built-in cooktop while the other comes equipped with a vegetable sink. Three or more chefs could combine culinary efforts here without getting in each other's way. Other kitchen features include: an eating bar, built-in desk and appliances, walk-in pantry, and a sunny eating nook. Utilities and a bathroom are mere steps away.

Luxuries in the master suite include: an ample walk-in closet, oversized shower with glass block exterior wall, spa tub, dual vanity and private toilet. The adjacent room could serve as a nursery, den, library or home office. Roomy closets and display shelves line the passageway from the entry.

Two bedrooms and a bathroom are upstairs in the Deveroux. The rear bedroom is slightly larger and has a walk-in closet.

For a review plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, section and artist's conception, send $15 to Associated Designs, 1100 Jacobs Dr., Eugene, Ore. 97402. Please specify the Deveroux 10-354 and include a return address when ordering. A catalog featuring over 170 home plans is available for $12. For more information call (800) 634-0123.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Keeping cool

Feeling a little cranky right now? As they suffer through another blistering, humid summer day, many a metro Detroiter is dreaming of a mid-February ice storm. There are better ways to beat the heat than staring wistfully at a melting ice cube.

Taking it easy may be the best advice, said Dr. Ronald Lagerveld, D.O., department chairman of Botsford General Hospital's Emergency Center. Lagerveld and his colleagues treat numerous cases of heat-related injuries every summer.

"First, although most of us hearty Michiganians love to take advantage of warm weather by enjoying the great outdoors, you may just want to 'chill' indoors when the heat index (the combination of the temperature and humidity) rises above 90," said Lagerveld. "Overexertion during summer's hottest days means you're courting trouble, particularly heatstroke."

Heatstroke is a severe and sometimes fatal condition that results when the body fails to regulate its temperature. Danger signs of heat stroke include:

- a lessening or lack of sweating;
- body temperature above 105 degrees;
- hot and dry skin; and
- headaches and/or disorientation.

Lagerveld suggests that if you're jogging, involved in other sports, or just doing strenuous work around the house, remember that you can lose crucial fluids your body needs to function properly. Don't forget to:

- drink plenty of liquids, but avoid alcohol;
- be particularly careful if you are taking medications such as antihistamines or diuretics; and
- avoid long exposure to the sun and/or high temperatures.

Although older adults and small children are particularly vulnerable, anyone at any age can fall victim to heatstroke. At the first sign of trouble, seek medical help as soon as possible.

Bringing up baby

From wails to sales, newborns at St. Mary, Providence and St. John hospitals are getting an early jump on their shopping lives with the creation of the "Born To Shop" program. Developed by Westland, Northland and Eastland Centers, "Born To Shop" is designed to help moms adjust to life with a new little one.

As part of the program, each new mom will receive a "Born To Shop" bag filled with various baby care items, including powder, ointment, shampoo, pamphlets, etc. Also included are certificates for baby's first photo with Santa Claus or the Easter Bunny, a free month's membership at Bally Total Fitness to help mom get back in shape, and coupon booklets to various stores at the three shopping centers.

The program is beginning this month and will continue for one year.

Comerica gift

Detroit-based Comerica Inc. has made a $500,000 commitment to the Barbara Ann Karmanos Cancer Institute.

The gift, one of the largest ever awarded by Comerica, is a conditional contribution to be paid over the next five years. The contribution is part of the institute's Cancer Care and Cure Campaign, a five-year, $100 million initiative to fund new programs and facilities.

"Comerica is proud to invest in a campaign that will undoubtedly produce a regional asset," said Comerica chairman and CEO Eugene A. Miller. "As an organization headquartered in Detroit, we're committed to helping Detroit reestablish itself as a leader in business, industry, and community initiatives."

Comerica's gift will support several important programs at the institute, including cancer care and quality of life for patients and their families.

The commitment reflects Comerica's desire to make cancer screening, treatment and health education information available to all members of the community – particularly the disadvantaged. Comerica Inc. is a bank holding company, headquartered in Detroit, that operates banking subsidiaries in Michigan, California, Texas and Florida. It is the 26th largest bank holding company in the U.S., with assets of $35 billion.

The Karmanos Cancer Institute is one of the nation's leading cancer research, treatment, education and outreach centers. It is affiliated with The Detroit Medical Center and Wayne State University, and supported by several area United Ways.

Isolation, anxiety, humiliation- Legacies of STUTTERING

HELEN FURCEAN / STAFF ARTIST

BY DIANE GALE ANDREASSI
SPECIAL WRITER

One of the most painful experiences Lauri Porzondek remembers about her stuttering was in a Florida restaurant when the waitress mimicked her. It was terribly humiliating, yet Porzondek understands why it happened.

"People don't know how to react and they don't know what is wrong with me," she said. "I don't tell them 'Wait, give me a couple of minutes.' You can look at someone and say they have a limp or a missing arm, but when you look at a person who stutters you don't know that until they open up. Most of the time people who stutter tend not to talk as much, have a low esteem, because they feel guilty and ashamed because of the way that they talk."

A common misconception is that people who stutter have a mental problem, which isn't true. However, research is under way to determine if there's a neurological disorder among the 1 percent of the population that stutters.

Many children pass through a stuttering phase and among those who continue to stutter past 12, half will continue into adulthood. It tends to run in families and is more common among boys, twins and people who are left-handed.

Surprisingly, a person can sing without flaw, like Mel Tillis, even though they stutter, because when you sing you use vocal and breathing mechanisms in a different way than when you speak. In fact, therapists teach people who stutter to use their vocal mechanisms in the same way they would when singing. Many people who stutter are drawn to professions that focus on public speaking, including Winston Churchill and James Earl Jones. The Bible refers to Moses as stuttering.

Feeling isolated

For the majority, however, a feeling of isolation is the biggest hurdle. "You feel there is no one else like you," Porzondek said. "There aren't support groups or doctors who you can go to and say 'Fix me.' There is no magic pill. People who stutter don't like to be called a stutterer, because that's not who we are."

In an effort to reach out to others, Porzondek helped launch a support group with Alex Johnson, director of speech pathology at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. It's a place where people who stutter can practice and maintain skills. Just sit and listen, get advice on how to cope with various situations and have fun with talking. And they don't have to hide their speech pattern.

"It can be a great relief," said Johnson, adding that people of all ages attend support groups. It's especially rewarding, he said, to see elderly people, who have never dealt with their stuttering problem before, attend meetings.

Most speech pathologists believe stuttering is primarily caused by a motor incoordination that occurs early in childhood. However, the environment can affect the severity.

"They've come to identify with themselves as a person who stutters and many people who stutter will avoid speaking," Johnson said.

Small daily chores become major obstacles. They don't want to talk on the telephone, speak in class, order through a fast-food microphone or talk in groups. They might drive a long way to make an appointment, because they won't use the phone. It becomes hard to approach situations that have been feared all someone's life.

"As they get older, it affects the way they sound, the way they interact with people and the way they perform at school and work," said Johnson, adding that helping an older person entails more than teaching them techniques on how to speak. "It's getting them over the fear that they've learned."

Most speech pathologists believe stuttering is primarily caused by a motor incoordination that occurs early in childhood. However, the environment can affect the severity. In young children, interaction with family members is important. A consistent, stable home environment with people who listen to each other is better for a person who stutters than a household that's chaotic or fast-paced.

Criticism or telling the person who stutters to slow down or speed up will hinder progress. Patience and encouragement are essential. Johnson stresses that the sooner someone who stutters gets help the better.

Specialists see children as young as 2. They study how the child is producing speech and the way parents and others respond. Parents should call the child's school district for information on therapy.

"There is not a method for 100 percent correction of stuttering," Johnson explained. "But most adults can have a significant improvement from therapy. Since speech is usually an automatic process, people who stutter are interjecting techniques that aren't automatic, which is tedious. Many people are very, very successful. Other people have success in some situations and it's still hard in other situations. Other people say 'I've tried this, but it's so difficult to speak this way. I need to work on learning to accept the fact that I stutter and not be afraid.' So rather than focusing on changing the way they speak, they work on changing their attitudes."

Porzondek improved her speech pattern and outlook after therapy with Johnson, attending a Beaumont Hospital support group and becoming active in the National Stuttering Project, a nationwide self-help organization designed to spread information about stuttering.

"We want to get the word out, because we know there are many people out there who don't know that even this organization exists," she said.

Helping others

Porzondek isn't Johnson's only success story. A few years ago, a law student with a severe stuttering problem sought therapy. He felt bad about the way he communicated and was angry at himself for not dealing with it earlier. He resented the hurtful way people reacted to him and felt he disappointed his parents.

The student went on to graduate from law school and became a senior staff person for a U.S. senator with a job that included a lot of public speaking. Another patient, Johnson said, who didn't make as much progress on his speaking, was in the seminary to become a Catholic priest. He was coming to therapy resentfully at the encouragement of others.

The man refused to talk about his stuttering and he tended to make other people uncomfortable. Therapy helped him face up to the fact that he stuttered.

Porzondek has been in therapy since she was 8. She began seeing Johnson four years ago and refers to herself as a person who stutters mild to moderately. Only recently, she felt she conquered her problem.

"As a kid, I don't remember much, because I think I blocked it out," Porzondek said. "Mostly as an adult there have been people laughing. If you would have called me four years ago, I would not have talked to you. Over the past four years I've kind of grown up and have the attitude now that if the other person doesn't like it, too bad. But that took me many years to get there."

For more information about therapy or the support group, call (313) 876-4603. Meetings are at Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit. There is no charge and no need to make reservations. The number for the National Stuttering Project is 1-800-364-1677.

Cancer treatment program gets nod

The Commission on Cancer of the American College of Surgeons has granted four-year approval to the cancer program at Oakwood Hospital & Medical Center-Dearborn Cancer Center of Excellence. This achievement followed 36 years of staff dedication to providing high quality care to patients with cancer. OHMC-D has maintained an approved program since 1961.

Established by the American College of Surgeons in 1932, the Approval Program encourages participants to equip and staff themselves so that they are able to provide the best in the diagnosis and treatment of cancer. Recognizing that cancer is a complex group of diseases, the program promotes consultation among surgeons, medical oncologists, radiation oncologists, diagnostic radiologists, pathologists, and other cancer specialists. This multidisciplinary cooperation results in improved patient care.

Using annual cancer registry data from more than 1,000 U.S. cancer treatment organizations, approved hospitals are able to comparatively assess their patterns of care using survey data from the National Cancer Data Base. NCDB benchmark studies completed during 1995 included cancers of the breast, endometrium, larynx, ovary, pancreas, prostate, stomach and thyroid.

The NCDB also provides an annual yardstick of how many patients were diagnosed at each hospital using the most appropriate staging or classification system of disease severity. To further assist in comparative assessment of cancer treatment at the hospital, two studies of special populations have been performed that focused on Hispanic patients and elderly patients.

The American Cancer Society estimates that 1,382,400 cases of cancer will be diagnosed in the United States during 1997.

In addition, several Patient Care Evaluation studies were designed and completed that used supplementary medical information gathered for evaluating special issues of cancer management concern for cancers of the cervix, colon and prostate. Thus, the Patient Care Evaluation studies and the National Cancer Data Base have collectively provided a useful benchmark that individual approved cancer programs can use for continuous improvement of the quality of patient care.

The American Cancer Society estimates that 1,382,400 cases of cancer will be diagnosed in the United States during 1997. Slightly more than one-fifth, or 22 percent, or the country's hospitals have approved cancer programs, and more than 80 percent of patients who are newly diagnosed with cancer are treated in those hospitals.

Compromise: This shelter is designed to help employers accommodate the needs of smokers. It was created by Duo-Gard, a Canton-based manufacturer of shelters and insulated translucent window systems.

A solution

Duo-Gard, a Canton-based manufacturer of shelters and insulated translucent window systems for industry, has created a long-term solution that satisfies smoking and non-smoking employees for companies by creating a freestanding, fully enclosed, outdoor smoking shelter.

Duo-Gard equips the new shelters with heaters, lights, exhaust fans and benches. Made with translucent bronze, high-tech polycarbonate walls and strong aluminum framing, the modular, prefabricated shelters are a far cry from the tents and open-air bus stops previously used.

"Employers are realizing that indoor smoking rooms are costly and can increase liability for secondhand smoke. And simply shoving smokers out the door is not an effective, long-term solution. Clients say our shelters provide what's needed most: accommodation for all parties."

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"THE VALUE OF A YARD SIGN"

Homeowners sometimes question the value of a "for sale" sign when listing their home with a Realtor®. There are those who feel that they may be able to enjoy more privacy if a sign is not used. Actually, the opposite is true. The use of a Realtor's sign can help you maintain your privacy while allowing the Realtor® to answer buyer's questions. More importantly, the yard sign is a very effective selling tool for the following reasons:

REFERRALS

The sign attracts the attention of people who live or work in your area. They, in turn, may know fellow workers, friends or acquaintances who are interested in buying a home in your location. You never know where a lead for the buyer may originate. Sometimes, a neighbor may know of someone who has expressed an interest in buying in your neighborhood.

PRE-QUALIFIED BUYER

If a potential buyer makes an inquiry about a certain home because of the "for sale" sign, he or she may be an excellent prospect. It is obvious that the calling party was impressed with both the outward appearance of the house and the immediate neighborhood. Because location is the most crucial factor in real estate, a sign call guarantees that the location of the house is a plus rather than a minus in the mind of the inquiring party.

Because all buyers have differing tastes, it is sometimes difficult to find a home that appeals to the buyer from an emotional point of view. Because the sign motivated a potential buyer to call, it is obvious that the caller has been emotionally attracted by the property and its surroundings. This is another reason why an inquiry from a sign is usually more productive than other sources of prospective buyers.

ADVICE: A yard sign is certainly not the only tool provided by your agent. Multiple listing membership, newspaper advertising, referral organizations, and motivated salespeople, who are paid on a straight commission basis, are also very effective. Yet, the "for sale" sign plays an essential role in any marketing strategy. Be sure to allow your Realtor® to use a sign when your house goes on the market.

JOBS/CAREERS

Is it time to leave your job?

By Sheryl Silver, Career Source

With thoughts of the recent Fourth of July celebration still in mind, it seems an appropriate time to ask, "Is it time to declare your independence from a job you can no longer tolerate?"

Most people would agree there are few professional circumstances - perhaps other than unemployment - that are more demoralizing than spending eight or more hours a day in a job you can't stand. If you find yourself in such a situation, now may be the time to look for greener pastures. Besides the fact that jobs are plentiful and qualified candidates scarce in several fields (e.g. sales, information technology), there are some real advantages to changing jobs when you're employed.

It's true that the stigma once attached to being unemployed while job hunting has diminished dramatically in recent years as employers have grown to recognize that talented individuals can frequently find themselves unemployed as a result of mergers, acquisitions or reorganizations. Nonetheless, many job hunters find there are definite psychological benefits that come with job hunting while employed.

First of all, employed individuals typically feel more relaxed about their situations and so tend to interview more confidently than unemployed job hunters. They also tend to negotiate compensation more effectively; the comfort and confidence that comes with a regular paycheck often provides the staying power needed to hold out for a better offer. In contrast, many job hunters I worked during my years as an outplacement compensation, particularly an increase in compensation, when they're unemployed and feeling financially pressured or desperate.

Similarly, when people aren't focused on "survival" issues-e.g. paying the mortgage, putting food on the table, etc.-it's far easier for them to address qualitative issues like improved job satisfaction, and take the time needed to explore a wider variety of opportunities and make a better choice than might be true for unemployed job hunters.

When you're truly miserable in your current job, there's still another reason not to delay launching a job search. The longer you stay where you are, the greater the likelihood your discontent will surface and undermine your current situation. It may show up in your attitude. It may show up in the quality of your work. However it manifests itself, the risk of staying too long is that you may end up in the undesirable situation of being involuntarily terminated - i.e. fired. And ask anyone who's been through that experience, it's a lot harder psychologically to find a new job, and particularly a better job than your last one, when you're unemployed and still getting past the shock and anger that typically accompany being terminated. It's also usually harder to come across as confidently at an interview after you've been on the receiving end of a pink slip. Even if you were looking to leave your job, there's something different about having the choice taken out of your hands. For many people, the experience is devastating and makes the prospect of putting their best foot forward at interviews next to impossible.

So, do yourself a favor. It you've been dreading Mondays and looking forward only to your weekends, the handwriting is on the wall. The time to change - or at least to set in motion the process of change - has arrived. It may take several weeks or even a few months to identify and land the right job. Your attitude, however, will probably improve from search effort in motion; sensing there's a light at the end of the tunnel generally makes even the most unpleasant job more tolerable.

And by the way, if you're unhappy in your job but convinced there's nothing better for you, an attitude adjustment may be in order before launching a job search. Two books that may help in this regard are Laurence Boldt's How to Find the Work you Love and Marsha Sinetar's Do What You Love and the Money Will Follow. If your problem isn't believing you can achieve the goals you set but rather, picking a career goal that makes sense for you, then Barbara Sher's book, I Could Do Anything If I Only Knew What It Was, may be more helpful.

Whatever you decide to do, recognize the choice is in your hands. After all, among the freedoms that come with living in this democracy is the freedom to choose how we spend our time and how we use our talents to earn a living.

Sheryl Silver may be contacted by writing to her at Career Source, P.O. Box 65754, Washington, D.C. 200035-5744.

Where you work can determine what you laugh at

By David Graulich, Tribune Media

A lot of companies have become extremely serious about humor.

Humor has been discovered as a management technique. According to the experts, humor in the workplace can "enhance interpersonal communications" and "relieve occupational stress." Many managers are earnestly attempting to interject humor into the daily routines of their companies.

Of course, humor is a notoriously tricky business. I've found that what is considered funny in the workplace depends, to a large degree, on where you work. Different industries have different senses of humor, and a joke that's considered funny in one business would be a fiasco in another.

For example, high-tech companies have a fascination with childhood. High-tech humor has the sensibility of a precocious 8-year-old, involving such things as Silly Putty, Pez dispensers and intramural squirt-gun contests. There are plenty of practical jokes, but they tend to be of a gee-whiz nature, such as taking apart the boss's office and rebuilding it on the bottom of a fish tank.

Wall Street firms have a much different sense of what's funny. They foster a macho, locker-room humor, featuring bawdy insults and off-color zingers. "Disaster" jokes, which swamp fax machines and e-mail within hours of a calamity, are highly appreciated among the financial crowd. Even the practical jokes have an aggressive nature, such as giving a bald co-worker a deluxe hair dryer.

The automobile business is obsessed with golf and golf jokes. Maybe it's because the industry is based in Detroit, where employees dream about sun-drenched links during bleak Midwestern winters. Car people tell lots of gentle jokes that start, "A rabbi, a priest and a minister are playing golf on a windy afternoon..."

Management consultants are a rather humorless bunch, but they have perfected the knack of telling jokes about their profession. These jokes are typically one-liners, such as, "A consultant borrows your watch in order to tell you what time it is." Lawyers, in contrast, don't like to tell lawyer jokes, but they have lots of quips about judges and clients.

In the newspaper business, the humor revolves around telling anecdotes about other reporters who have achieved mythical status, like Paul Bunyan or Casey Jones. The stories frequently occur in a politician's office, a hotel room or in a foreign country having a revolution. The anecdote generally begins with the legendary reporter's consumption of copious amounts of an alcoholic beverage.

Does the industry you work in have a distinctive type of humor? Let me know and I'll devote a future column to your descriptions. Write c/o Tribune Media Services, 435 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 1400, Chicago, Ill. 60611, or e-mail Dial92Get@aol.com or CompuServe 73053,3024.

Ex-Worker Can't Bill for The Use of Her Voice

By Lindsey Novak
Tribune Media

Q: I worked for eight years as an administrative manager. As part of my responsibilities, I was in charge of the telephone and voice mail systems for which I wrote and recorded the company's voice mail greeting. My job was eliminated when the company downsized, but no one has changed the voice mail greeting. Can I bill for the use of my voice?

A: No. Recording the voice mail greeting or finding someone else to record it was part of your job. The recording is the company's property, as is all the other work you performed as manger.

You are probably hurt and angry about being let go after all those years, but focusing on negative activities, such as charging for work for which you were already paid, is not going to help you. Instead, think positively and be flattered that management liked your voice enough to keep using it.

If you are having trouble finding another job in that field, you might consider a new career in commercial voice-overs. Often, when people lose jobs, they fall into new fields in which they are happier and better suited.

EMPLOYEE FIRED FOR REFUSING TO DO OVERTIME DUE TO RELIGION

Q: One month ago, I requested taking two weekends off for religious reasons. My request was denied, but vacation was approved for two other employees. Then I was asked to work a 12-hour shift. I did so for a while, but I told my boss that my religious month was coming up and I would not be able to continue working 12-hour days. First he denied my request; then he told me he would try to work somethi.lg out. Next thing I knew I was fired. I believe I was treated unfairly. What are my options?

A: It sounds like you may have been fired for trying to follow your religious beliefs. Call the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to see about filing a charge against your employer. Also, explain your religion to the EEOC investigator to see what hours can and cannot be required of you on the job. You may also want to consult an attorney about filing a lawsuit against the company.

WORKER'S SALARY MAY BE TOO HIGH FOR THE JOB

Q: I worked at a company for several years and made in the upper-50s. The company has since been sold and I've been interviewing for several months. Everything goes well in the interviews until I tell them my salary. Every job I've interviewed for has paid from the upper-20s to mid-30s. Friends have told me I will have to take a salary cut, but I hate to because it took me years to get where I was. What should I do?

A: If you want to find a job similar to the one you left, include in your cover letter the salary range you are seeking. If you stop getting calls for interviews, you may have been paid too high a salary for your position. Only you can decide the lowest salary you are willing to accept, but your acceptable limit may change the longer you are unemployed.

Having problems on the job? Write to Lindsey Novak in care of Tribute Media Services, Inc., 435 N. Michigan Ave., Suite 1500, Chicago, Ill. 60611. She can also be contacted at AtWorkbyLN@AOL.com

On The Forefront of Telecommuting

By Alice Bredin,
Tribune Media

Last week I attended a telecommuting trade show to find out what's new in the world of home-based corporate workers. The Telecommuting Advisory Council's annual trade show is a great place to get in touch with the new products and programs that are on the forefront of home-based work.

My overall impression was that a lot of people are currently telecommuting and many, many more will be in the not-too-distant future. If you have never taken an interest in telecommuting before, it may be time to start.

First the statistics: Last year, 3 million more people telecommuted from home for their corporate employer - bringing the total number of telecommuters to 11 million, according to the 1997 American Internet User Survey, conducted by FIND/SVP.

Although it's a huge number, 11 million is nothing if you look at the projections for telecommuting. Jack Nilles, the man who coined the term "telecommuting" and now makes a business of studying its development, projects that the United States will have roughly 24 million telecommuters by the year 2000.

His projection is based on a forecasting model used by the Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Department of Transportation, and he attributes telecommuting's growth to a high demand for skilled workers. This demand will encourage employers to offer telecommuting, and the Internet will make working at home possible for a greater number of people.

When I got to the show I went first to the exhibit floor to see the vendor booths. A few years back when I attended the show I learned about a "Big Brother" product that attached to the computers of home-based workers and measured productivity by keystroke and time spent on particular files. I also heard about a builder who was constructing free-standing buildings in the backyards of work-at-homers that enabled people to work near home while also being out of the fray of the home.

This year's offerings had more broad appeal, were more technologically oriented and came from larger companies. There were the usual offerings of personal organizing devices and lots of vendors selling ISDN lines, which allow you to transfer all kinds of information rapidly and simultaneously over one line.

The difference is that products appear much easier to use than before.

The Pilot, the ubiquitous personal organizer that enables you to synchronize your computer and personal organizer with one press of a button, was on display. Bell Atlantic had a display on ISDN in which they promoted its ease of use. For the first time since I began listening to pitches on ISDN, it actually appeared relatively easy to install and use.

A company called Data Race was promoting its system for road warriors that enables home-based workers and people on the road to send and receive e-mail, faxes and phone calls, plus use a company intranet and a LAN simultaneously over a single phone line. Pretty handy if you work at home occasionally and only have on phone line.

Stac, Inc. had a booth touting a collection of back-up software, software for dialing into remote systems and solutions for sharing CD-ROMs over a network.

The seminars at the conference also reflected a maturation of the concept. More sessions than I remember in the past focused on how to use telecommuting to retain employees and improve work conditions.

For example, one seminar was entitled "Using Telework to Exploit the Talents of Generation Xeres, Baby Boomers and Fifty Plus" and another "Virtual Teaming for Production, Performance, Morale and Job Satisfaction." In the past, the curriculum was more focused on how to get programs off the ground.

One entire panel focused on telecommuting and its impact on quality of life. This panel presented case studies and first-hand accounts of how telecommuting has improved family life, community life, employee retention and morale - demonstrating that everyone benefits from telecommuting in some way.
