Sincock seeks top cop

Acting City Manager Paul Sincock has had preliminary discussions with a highly recommended Michigan police chief to become Plymouth's next top cop.

■ 'All the people we've talked to are employed, so it's very premature to jump to conclusions.'

Paul Sincock
—Acting City Manager

Sincock isn't saying with whom he's discussed the soon-to-be vacant police chief's position, but does admit he's talked to four police officials, with one being a top candidate. However, Sincock is quick to point out no contract has been offered or signed.

"I've contacted him and all we've done is talk. I'm not sure we have a mutual intent at this point," said Sincock. "All the people we've talked to are employed, so it's very premature to jump to conclusions."

Sincock said he would like to have a candidate to present to the city commission at its Oct. 16 regular meeting, or at least by this time Acting Police Chief Dave Kinderdine's retire-

Michael Bee gives new school job an A+

BY TONY BRUSCATO
STAFF WRITER
tbruscato@oe.homecomm.net

Michael Bee, the newly-named principal for Plymouth High School, said he'd been eyeing the top spot at the school for the past five years. However, when the $50 million in bond money approved by voters in 1997 was hung up in court and construction was delayed by nearly two years, he almost forgot about the position until this past summer. It was then his dream became reality.

"After interviewing here, I saw that same passion and intensity that I operate under, and it seemed like a really good fit," said Bee. "I see a real commitment to provide quality education for kids.

"A lot of people say they make decisions in the best interest of kids, but you don't always see that, especially from the top on down," he added. "It's different here."

Bee has an unusual opportunity. He has nearly two years to plan for the opening of Plymouth High School, which is currently under construction at Plymouth-Canton Educational Park.

"My biggest priority right now is trying to assimilate into the school culture," said Bee. "I walk around and meet staff, as well as talk with assistant principals, department heads and teachers. Part of what we will do is being put into place because we're working with consultants."

Although Bee is the new principal, he said it will be the students who will run Plymouth High School.

"I try to have a personal relationship with the kids. They know I run a very tight ship and I want things done one

Higher student count means more cash for district

BY TONY BRUSCATO

An increase in enrollment this year will mean an additional $826,000 to the Plymouth-Canton school district.

Plymouth-Canton Schools, the seventh-largest school district in the state, reports an increase of 127 students, compared to last year's official student count.

For each student in the district, the state gives Plymouth-Canton a foundation grant of $6,505.

The final numbers show most of the district's growth is in the middle schools, where there are 92 more students than last year.

The largest of the middle schools is Discovery, which houses 810 students. Central Middle School is at 795, with East Middle School at 793.

The biggest increase in middle school students is at East, where there are 71

Seniors named semifinalists for Merit Scholarship

Eleven seniors from the Plymouth-Canton Community Schools have been named as semifinalists in the 2001 National Merit Scholarship program.

Named as semifinalists were Michael Kleemann, Yibo Ling, Elizabeth Martin, Anna Moniodis, Allan Poon, Cynthia Rich and Jason Wilson from Salem High School and Stephanie Chang, Betsy Radtke, Jennifer Wagner and Kimberly Weaver from Canton High School.

Mark Bolger, the Salem High School basketball player who died last January, also qualified as a semifinalist.

All semifinalists entered the 2001 Merit Program by taking the 1999 Preliminary SAT/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT).

The test served as an initial screen of more than 1.2 million Merit program entrants, all juniors, who were enrolled in some 20,000 high schools nationwide. The highest scorers in each state were designated semifinalists, representing less than one percent of the state's high school graduating class.

A semifinalist must fulfill a number of additional requirements to become a finalist and be considered in the extremely rigorous competition for Merit Scholarship awards. The requirements for finalist standing include meeting very high academic standards in college preparatory course work, submitting SAT1: Reasoning Test scores that confirm the PSAT/NMSQT performance, and being fully endorsed and recommended by the school principal.

Also, the semifinalist and an official of the school must complete a detailed scholarship application to provide important information about the student's personal interests and activities, academic and other achievements, volunteer and paid work, educational plans and goals, and contributions to the school and community.

About 14,500 semifinalists are expected to advance to the finalist standing and compete for Merit Scholarship Awards.

way," said Bee. "However, I want kids to become involved in running the school. It's their school ... and it doesn't become my school until I have to step in and make it my school."

Bee believes that giving students responsibility will result in fewer problems.

"Wherever I've worked in the past, when students take charge we've done away with a lot of little problems," said Bee. "I really try to make kids a part of the process."

Bee, a Canton Township resident with 26 years of education experience, comes to Plymouth-Canton Schools via the Crestwood school district where he was high school principal of 1,100 students. Plymouth-Canton administrators are predicting The Park will have nearly 5,000 students by the time Plymouth High School opens in August 2002.

"The bigger schools are appealing to me because of the opportunities they offer," said Bee. "Larger schools tend to be more cutting-edge, and it's exciting to be involved in that."

While nothing is etched in stone, it appears that today's seventh graders will become the first freshman class at Plymouth High.

"A gut feeling of what we've talked about thus far, it looks like seventh graders will be the first class assigned to the new high school," said Bee. "There will most likely be a random selection of seventh graders to determine which students will go to Plymouth, Salem and Canton high schools.

"Concerning athletics, the first year we will only have freshman teams. The second year freshman and junior varsity. And the third year we'll ad varsity teams," said Bee. "We know students have concerns about losing affiliation with their present schools, so we're trying to avoid that.

"I hope to get with those seventh graders between now and when school opens to help pick out the mascot and colors," added Bee. "I want them to have ownership of the school."

HOW TO CARE FOR A PAINFUL BUNION
A bunion is an enlarged bone on the side of the big toe that is angled outward. Depending on the severity of the bunion, the big toe may be angled mildly or sharply toward the other toes. Bunions often develop along with other foot problems, including hammer toes, corns and clauses. Bunion can become very painful, and are treated conservatively with wider shoes, orthotics and medications. If unresponsive to conservative care, surgery can be performed to remove the painful bump and realign the toe.

Holocaust survivor carves out new life, opportunities

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER
sbuck@oe.homecomm.net

Years haven't dimmed David Kahan's memory of the degradation of humanity he witnessed as a survivor of the concentration camp in Auschwitz, Poland.

As a realtor and developer in the metropolitan Detroit area, Kahan, more than others, attests to this country as the land of opportunity. Kahan owns Plymouth Industrial Center on Eckles in Plymouth Township.

"Only in America," said Kahan, a Hungarian native of Jewish descent. The Hungarian government was an ally to Germany.

"I was a penniless refugee," Kahan said. "I don't mind talking about it. I want to ensure that it never happens again."

Kahan, a 71-year-old Bloomfield Hills resident, owns Premier Realty in Troy, and has property in Livonia, Auburn Hills, Warren, Sterling Heights, Detroit, and Madison Heights. In real estate since 1959, Kahan has worked in development for 20 years.

A different life

"In Europe, most people were registered by religion so it wasn't hard to identify us." Kahan said. "It's different in America. This is a big melting pot. I was the only one from my family who left alive."

Early one morning a policeman came to Kahan's home instructing his family to each pack a small suitcase with personal belongings and go downtown to the largest school. "We waited for transportation," Kahan said. "They told us they would take us to labor camps. They put us in railroad cattle cars."

Nazis branded Kahan, as they did other Jews, with a yellow star on his clothes. Homosexuals were forced to wear another symbol, he said.

When the family arrived in Auschwitz, they were told they would get food and the whole family would stay together. "In the line they separated the strong, healthy ones for slave labor," Kahan said. "The others they took to the gas chamber."

Kahan lost his mother, 48, father, 52, a sister, 13, and a brother, 11. At age 15 Kahan survived because he was strong. "I was a slave laborer. I was strong in my young years. I knew enough to survive. I was the only one who came out alive."

The people who were there before Kahan pointed out the gas chambers, the rising smoke, and the fate of his family. "You could actually smell the stench in the air from the bodies being burned in the crematorium," Kahan said. "All of our belongings were taken from us. I was left with a pair of shoes and striped clothing. We were kept in crowded, wooden barracks which are still in existence today."

Germans took ladies' hair to fill mattresses, stole jewelry and pulled out gold teeth and fillings, he said.

It was a daily battle for survival: Chicory coffee for breakfast, potato soup for lunch, and bread with a bit of margarine, sometimes with a small piece of sausage for dinner.

Kahan was sent with others to Muhldorf 20 miles way from Munich to work on an underground airplane factory for 11 months. German civilians supervised their work. "They wanted to protect it from American bombs," Kahan said. "The German civilians in charge kept saying, "if you want these people to work, you ought to feed them," he said. "The German government's idea was to use people until they died and then bring in others."

His group dwindled to 500-600 from the original 3,000 people when they were rescued by the American army.

He recalled the Jupt brothers, civilians, would sneak in small pieces of bread to them whenever possible. "They kept telling us, the Americans are coming closer and closer. Just hold on."

Rescued

The day Kahan was liberated, he was being transported in a cattle car. "We were in a railroad station in a small village called Seshaupt. When we looked out at dawn the guards were gone. We could hear cannon fire. At about 10 o'clock, American tanks came through. We were so starved, the American soldiers gave us cans of Spam and other food. Many died because their systems were so weak."

Kahan acquired typhus and was taken to a displaced persons camp at a small hospital.

Kahan came to America in 1949 when America gave the go-ahead to allow more immigrants into the United States. He spent a year in Minneapolis before coming to Detroit.

Kahan taught himself English by talking to people and listening to the radio. "I knew in order to get ahead, I had to learn the language."

Kahan devotes his free time telling the story of the Holocaust to school children.

"I know that this is so horrible that sometimes when I speak in schools the kids look at me and wonder how another human being could do such a thing," Kahan said. "It was one of the worst chapters of human history."

Many have retold the story of the Holocaust.

Kahan called the movie, "Schindler's List," accurate but criticized the actors and actresses because they looked too healthy and too good. "If they could have shown the people — mistreated and dying," Kahan said. "If they could have showed the misery."

Kahan and wife, Theresa, a Scottish immigrant, have three sons, Douglas, Jeffrey, and Michael.

Proposed development is first of kind

BY SUE BUCK
STAFF WRITER
sbuck@oe.homecomm.net

Vacant land at the Plymouth Industrial Center would be the first to be cleaned up under the Plymouth Township Brownfield Redevelopment Authority guidelines – if planning commissioners allow a developer to split 29 acres from the original 78-acre site.

The 29 acres would be developed to create Plymouth Commerce Park on the north side of Plymouth Road, west of Eckles in Plymouth Township. More than $25.5 million would be spent to develop and clean the land.

Only a portion of the 29 acres is contaminated, however results from tests taken two weeks ago to define the contaminated area are not yet available.

Business owners like David Kahan, owner of Plymouth Commerce Park Inc., can get tax breaks to invest in contaminated areas of Plymouth Township. The result is a tax savings for business owners, an increase of jobs in the township, revival of abandoned sites and a cleaner environment.

"It's not a corporate welfare giveaway, it's smart tax policy," said Plymouth Township Trustee Chuck Curmi.

Kahan sought to create Plymouth Commerce Park for some time but discovered polychlorinated biphenyls (PCBs) on the land. After teaming up with Plymouth Township Brownfield Redevelopment Authority, he found a way to follow through with his plans and receive a tax benefit. He accepted their help because "there's not much more vacant land available" in Plymouth Township.

The proposed project consists of up to 15 industrial buildings. Each will have 40,000 to 50,000 square feet of usable space.

From the early 1900s until about the mid-1900s Evans Products operated a power house building on the property. PCBs were used in the power house. Kahan acquired the property in 1990.

Dennis Walker, general manager of Plymouth Industrial Center, was hired by Evans Products in 1965. He was building manager for the company sites across the United States.

"People leave old buildings to go to pristine new areas, throw up new buildings and leave all these as abandoned eyesores," Walker said.

Long-term leases at Plymouth Commerce Park will bring a larger job base to Plymouth Township, Walker said. "That was what this whole Brownfield Act was designed for, to utilize contaminated properties and try to save people from this musical chairs thing where they move from area to area."

The land split issue will be addressed at the 7 p.m. Oct. 18 planning commission meeting. A public hearing on the brownfield project is scheduled for the 7:30 p.m. Oct. 24 board meeting.

Couple marks 50th anniversary

Then and now: Carl and Arlene Stamper celebrate a long, happy life together.

Carl Stamper sits at his kitchen table, thinks for just a second about life with his wife, Arlene, and said "It's gone by real fast for us."

The Stampers, Carl, 72, and Arlene, 68, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Aug. 31.

"It was true love ... we knew right away we liked each other," said Arlene. "We've had a good life."

"It's been give and take," said Carl. "Sometimes 50-50, and sometimes 60-40. It's not always been a bed of roses, but we've always gotten along and worked things out. The good part is just being with each other."

Both grew up in Kentucky with strict parents, and when they met, dating wasn't allowed.

"We would see each other at different places, like church functions or town festivals," said Arlene, who was the youngest of eight children. "But, I wasn't allowed to go out on dates. If Carl wanted to see me, he had to come to my house. If we went out, I would meet Carl at the event and then go home with my dad."

The Stampers had a long-distance courtship. Carl moved to Plymouth in 1947 and worked three years for Allen Industries before the two married. Fifteen months later, the newlyweds moved to California as Carl went into the Marines.

Afterwards, it was back to Plymouth where Carl worked for Allen Industries, before moving on to the accounting department at General Motors. He retired from GM at age 55 with 28 years in the workforce. Carl officially retired 11 years later after working for Plymouth-Canton Schools, where Arlene also worked.

"When you have a good life, it goes fast," said Arlene. "The good Lord will work it out, and He does."

The Stampers are proud of the fact they've lived in their Plymouth home for 38 years and have attended Plymouth Church of Christ for 40 years.

The couple has heard it before, "You certainly don't look old enough to be married that long."

"A lot of it is the way you live," said Arlene, who noted they don't drink or smoke. "It's the clean life, how you take care of your body."

It may well be the fact they're keeping up with their twin 16-year-old grandsons. Their daughter-in-law died from cancer when the boys were 7, and the Stampers have helped their son care for them since.

"When you get your grandchildren, they're just like your own kids," said Arlene, who, along with Carl, raised their own sons, Mark and Tim.

As for the 50 years, the Stampers say it comes down to communication and cooperation.

"When you get married young, you learn to like each other more and grow together," said Arlene. "People nowadays live together, and if it doesn't work out, they just go their different ways. It shouldn't be that way ... it's just not right."

"When you have a good life, it goes fast."

Staff, students 'discover' school unity

BY PAUL HURSCHMANN
STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER
phurschmann@oe.homecomm.net

Editor's Note: Staff Photographer Paul Hurschmann will be will be visiting Discovery Middle School throughout the 2000-2001 school year to bring "A Year in the Life of Discovery" to you. Through words and pictures, Hurschmann will share his unique view of life in Canton's first middle school with readers of the Plymouth Observer with periodic updates.

New friends, new classes and a new building. Those are common fare for the incoming sixth-graders at every middle school each year.

This year it was the same for seventh- and eighth-graders, faculty and staff as well, as Canton's first middle school opened its doors to the 2000-2001 academic year.

Teachers and staff, under the leadership of principal Roche LaVictor and assistant principal Clint Smiley, remained fairly intact as they closed the doors on a 20-year lease at Westland's Lowell Middle School in June and took up new residence at Discovery Middle School on Hanford Road in Canton the final week of August.

"We cut it fairly close, in terms of completing the construction of the new building," LaVictor explained as he conducted a tour of the new building recently. "And there will be work crews here finishing up some of the final touches throughout much of the year. But we've been able to take care of the students and not disrupt the classrooms, for the most part."

There were some unexpected leaks in the new roof – a metal structure that needs to "settle into place" – that caused some minor problems after recent heavy rains, but without causing any damage or loss to the classrooms or their contents. And their have been some glitches with the new clocks and the new phone system.

"All of the minor problems we've had were to be expected," said LaVictor. "But the kids have been just wonderful. They have truly taken to the new building, made it their own. They seem to be on their best behavior and are really keeping the place looking great."

Of course, this may not last all year.

"I'm just waiting for the shoe to drop," he joked. "I'm not sure how long the honeymoon is going to last. But, knock wood, I'm certainly not complaining."

And neither are the students.

"Isn't this building great?" asked one unnamed student, as she passed between classes. "I'll bet kids at Pioneer would be so jealous."

A recent welcome dance was a rousing success, with more than 500 students attending.

"I would have called this a success if we had 400 kids," said LaVictor, following the event. "We had more than 500," he continued, as he held up his hand with all five fingers extended.

ment becomes effective Oct. 28.

"I'm hoping to present someone at the next meeting," said Sincock. "Ideally that would be nice, but practically I'm not sure it will work out."

In a Sept. 13 memo to city commissioners, Sincock outlined options in hiring a new police chief, and recruiting was at the top of his list. Other alternatives included hiring a consulting firm, Bartel and Bartel, which gave the city a cost range of $5,500 to $20,000; advertising in police publications to conduct a nationwide search; or do nothing until a new city manager is hired.

Sincock, in his memo, said "The Police Department cannot wait until a new City Manager is on board to begin any process. There are numerous issues that need immediate attention."

Sincock tells the Observer the police department "needs an instrument of change, someone who can change the direction of the department and implement community policing, the command structure and other programs."

Sincock also states in his memo "This leaves us with the path of determining who may be available and doing some good old-fashioned recruiting of potential candidates ... I have renewed some contacts within the Michigan Association of Chiefs of Police and have started checking on some promising possibilities."

When Sincock finds a candidate to take the job, under terms of a recently passed hiring ordinance, he'll need to present his choice to the city commission before signing a contract.

"Under the new city ordinance, we would need approval from the city commission before we can offer a conditional offer of employment," said Sincock. "Commissioners would have a second chance to approve the candidate when it confirms the appointment."

Despite the memo, several commissioners were surprised to hear that Sincock was recruiting candidates for police chief. And, there were differing reactions.

"I'm not really comfortable with that," said Commissioner Sean FitzGerald. "I think it should be the new city manager's choice to appoint an individual. I would be hesitant to make a long-term commitment to someone brought forth by the acting city manager."

Commissioner Bill Graham said he wasn't aware of the fast track recruiting, but isn't against Sincock finding the best possible candidate.

"Good managers are self-starters and get things going," said Graham. "We need to take advantage of a good opportunity if one is presented."

Mayor Dave McDonald supports Sincock's initiative, noting it's the city manager's appointment to make.

"I would probably support any recommendation that he would make," said McDonald. "Paul is the acting city manager, and a long-time (22 year) employee, and has as much to lose or gain by his decision as anyone else."

The next Plymouth police chief will be the third since Bob Scoggins retired from the position at the beginning of this year.

School officials free to speak about vouchers, judge rules

BY MIKE MALOTT
HOMETOWN NEWS SERVICE
mmalott@homecomm.net

Public school officials are free to speak their minds about the voucher proposal appearing on the statewide election ballot this fall, Ingham County Circuit Judge Michael Harrison ruled Thursday, Oct. 5.

At the same time, he refused to issue an injunction against Secretary of State Candice Miller which would have blocked her from enforcing a section of campaign finance law intended to keep government officials from using taxpayer dollars to influence the outcome of an election.

But who won the case depends largely on who is talking. Plaintiff's attorney Tom Baird said the judge's statement was "very favorable" to school boards, superintendents and the teacher unions.

Unsure of impact

Liz Boyd, spokesperson for the defendant Secretary of State, said she is unsure how much impact the judge's ruling will have.

It was intended, she explained, to give school officials guidance by laying out the judge's interpretation of the law. She admitted she was "disappointed" with his conclusions, which differed from Miller's interpretation of the law in several key areas.

Tim Knowlton, attorney for Kids First! Yes! which had sought to join the suit on the side of the Secretary of State, assessed the judge's statement as "overall more positive than negative."

The case grew out of a string of complaints against school districts filed by Kids First! Yes! with the Secretary of State's office. Kids First! Yes! is the organization that circulated petitions to place the voucher question on the November ballot, now known as Proposal 1.

The organization alleged that 17 school districts had violated a 1996 law prohibiting governments from using public resources to campaign for or against ballot questions. The Secretary of State concluded that 12 districts had indeed crossed the line and sent out letters warning that penalties might be applied in the future if the violations did not stop.

One of the districts, Huron Valley Schools, filed suit last week along with three teacher unions – the Huron Valley Education Association, the Michigan Education Association and the Utica Education Association – in Ingham County against the Secretary of State. The lawsuit sought an injunction to block Miller from enforcing that section of campaign finance law for the duration of the election season.

The judge disagreed with Miller in three areas. For one, a public official in a policymaking role can express views, even if it involves some use of public resources.

■ The lawsuit sought an injunction to block Miller from enforcing that section of campaign finance law for the duration of the election season.

"If a member of the media were to call the superintendent and ask a position on a matter ... the superintendent would be in a position to express views in a public building using the (school) telephone," the judge said.

Secondly, he disagreed with Miller that, when a school district distributes information about a ballot proposal, it has to be balanced.

Balanced?

"There may be nothing against which to balance," Harrison concluded. "It does not require anybody to have to propound both sides of an issue. It merely says (the information must be) factual."

Knowlton, attorney for Kids First, stressed that the judge said this information has to be factual and cannot include conjecture or speculation. But Baird pointedly disagreed with Knowlton's assessment of the judge's ruling.

The judge further ruled that districts can distribute opinions in materials published by the district periodically. A regular newsletter could contain debates and commentary, but a district could not publish a one-time brochure carrying such opinion, the judge said.

Harrison also said unions could indeed use internal school mail systems to communicate about ballot proposals with their members.

Boyd said the Secretary of State will review the judge's ruling and consult with the state Attorney General to decide its next course of action.

It could include continued enforcement of the campaign finance law, or it could include an appeal to a higher court, Boyd said.

Seminar shows how to sell to Uncle Sam

A half-day seminar teaching small business owners and managers how to become suppliers of goods and services to the United States government is scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 19, at Schoolcraft College.

The U. S. government, the single largest buyer of goods and services in the country, purchases billions of dollars worth each year, creating many opportunities for prime providers or subcontracting, including large and small purchases and even credit-card buying.

"How to Become A Government Contractor" is scheduled from 9 a.m. until 12:30 p.m.

The session will cover how technological advances have streamlined the dynamics of doing business with the government, including the philosophy of government purchasing; updated requirements for government contractors; helpful resources in dealing with the government; and the services and training programs available at Schoolcraft College's Business Development Center.

■ The U.S. government is the biggest buyer of goods and services in the country.

The seminar fee is $25 per person. To register, call the Business Development Center at (734) 462-4438. Schoolcraft College is located at 18600 Haggerty Road, between Six and Seven Mile Roads just west of I-275.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING ON A PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO THE CHARTER TOWNSHIP OF PLYMOUTH MASTER PLAN, AS AMENDED

PLYMOUTH CHARTER TOWNSHIP PLANNING COMMISSION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Planning Commission of the Charter Township of Plymouth, Wayne County, Michigan will hold a Public Hearing on Wednesday, October 18, 2000 at 7:00 p.m. in the Meeting Room at Township Hall, 42350 Ann Arbor Road, Plymouth Township, Michigan 48170. The purpose of the Public Hearing is to provide the public with the opportunity to make comments or recommendations regarding a proposed Master Plan Amendment prior to adoption. The proposed amendment is as follows:

Section VI., Sequencing Standards on page 13 of the April 10, 1997 Amendment to the Master Plan for Ann Arbor Road Sheldon to South Main Street Area, first paragraph, presently reads as follows:

> Avoiding land use conflicts during the extended time period which may be required to achieve the Master Plan for the Sheldon to South Main Street Area will require careful consideration and application of standards. Patience will be required for the assembly of parcels. Development may need to be delayed to avoid introducing incompatible uses or until proposed incompatibilities of across the street or "leap-frog" relationships, vehicular traffic and circulation, development impacts, visual impacts, and other effects can be eliminated or effectively mitigated. Standards must be applied strictly to achieve these ends.

Section VI., Sequencing Standards on page 13 of the April 10, 1997 Amendment to the Master Plan for Ann Arbor Road Sheldon to South Main Street Area, first paragraph, is proposed to be amended by revising the last sentence to read as follows:

> Standards should be applied strictly to achieve these ends, and in support of the over-riding goal of this plan which is to preserve the quality of life in the residential neighborhood and ensure its long-term viability.

F. Public Sector Intervention Plan

> Maintain an awareness of and sensitivity to the potential need for public intervention to complete the most difficult segments of the plan. Environmental problems, holdout parcels, or other unknown complications may be solved through creation of a Downtown Development Authority, Brownfield Authority, Tax Increment Finance Authority, special assessments, or other public/quasi-public intervention.

Section VII., Implementation, F., Public Sector Intervention Plan on page 18 of the April 10, 1997 Amendment to the Master Plan for Ann Arbor Road Sheldon to South Main Street Area, is proposed to be amended by renaming the section and revising it to read as follows:

F. Public Sector Role

> Any acquisition of residential properties for commercial expansion should only be done with the agreement of the residential owner. Therefore, the Township governing bodies will in no way assist a commercial developer in acquiring residential property from a holdout parcel or otherwise unwilling seller. This plan is not intended to be the basis for use of eminent domain, a Downtown Development Authority, Brownfield Authority, Tax Increment Finance Authority, special assessment, or other public/quasi-public intervention to remove single family residential dwellings which are considered to be holdout parcels or otherwise unwilling sellers.

NOTICE IS FURTHER GIVEN that the proposed amendment to the Master Plan may be examined at the Community Development Department during regular business hours, 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., until the date of the Public Hearing. The address of the Community Development Department is 46555 Port Street, Plymouth Township, Michigan 48170. Written comments concerning the amendment will be received prior to the meeting and may be mailed to this address. Questions should be directed to the Community Development Department at 734-453-8131, ext. 37.

Detroit businessman battles incumbent for sheriff's post

BY RICHARD PEARL
STAFF WRITER
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

Republican candidate Timothy R. Beck, a Detroit resident and businessman, is vying with four-term Democratic incumbent Robert A. Ficano for Wayne County sheriff in the Nov. 7 general election.

Ficano of Livonia is a formidable foe: In August's primary election, he won his party's nomination by overwhelming six other candidates, with nearly 111,000 more votes than his nearest opponent.

Ficano's Internet Crime Task Force has garnered national attention as a pioneering "cyber-police" unit that uses computers to crack down on sexual predators, prostitutes, drug traffickers, date-rape drug manufacturers and distributors and gamblers using computers in their illegal activities.

Ficano has said from the outset that "I'm proud of my record and will campaign on my vision and leadership."

But Beck, whose company specializes in selling and servicing employee benefit programs, is campaigning in Detroit and Downriver on other issues – among them police profiling, rehabilitation and gun ownership.

Accepting his longshot status, Beck, a 1974 honors graduate of the University of Detroit, says getting his message out will provide major satisfaction: "I'm going to get some views out there that over the long run can make a more just and common-sense world."

Specifically, he promises to:

- "Demand that ethnic and other police profiling cease immediately."
- Reallocate departmental resources "and declare war on ... auto theft, vandalism, home invasion, illegal trash dumping" and deadbeat dads.
- Give non-violent county prisoners the opportunity to clean up trash on vacant lots and dump sites in Detroit.
- Put small-time drug users and dealers in rehabilitation instead of jail.

Beck said he is also "fully committed to the Second Amendment right of the people" to keep and bear arms.

Tim Beck

Robert Ficano

Citing "allegations of corruption that now go back many years" against the county executive's office, he vowed to "use the resources of the sheriff's office to investigate and put to rest" the charges.

Beck says racial profiling is "a huge issue in the black, Hispanic and Arabic communities in Wayne County" which "should be an issue for all Americans."

Beck is married and the father of one.

League forums feature candidates, proposals

Two public forums regarding the upcoming Nov. 7 general election – one featuring candidates, the other the issues – will be presented by the League of Women Voters of Livonia at the Livonia city hall auditorium in October.

The first program, 7-8:30 p.m. on Monday, Oct. 9, will feature the two candidates for the 9th District seat on the Wayne County Commission – incumbent Republican Kathleen Husk of Redford Township and her Democratic challenger, Phil Cavanagh of Dearborn Heights.

The candidates are to make opening and closing statements and take questions from the audience. The 9th District covers Livonia east of Middlebelt and all of Redford and the Heights.

The second forum, 7-8:45 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 19, will feature speakers arguing for and against ballot proposals for school vouchers, home rule and the culture tax.

Speaking for vouchers will be Brian Broderick of the Michigan Catholic Conference. Opposing will be Wendy Wagenheim of the American Civil Liberties Union and the group All Kids First!

Speaking in behalf of Proposal A, the Culture Tax, will be Marilyn Wheaton, director of the recently created Cultural Affairs Department, while Theo Broughton, co-founder of Hood Research, will oppose.

Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey will speak for the Home Rule proposal while Tricia G. Kinley, public policy director for the Greater Detroit Chamber of Commerce, will oppose.

The annual road construction season is nearing its end, but before you cheer too loudly, know this: The Wayne County roads department is trying to squeeze in a few more jobs.

"We've got a handful of new road work (projects) we plan to get done before the winter sets in," said John Roach, department spokesman, this week.

Of interest to western Wayne County residents are these three resurfacing projects:

- Five Mile Road from Middlebelt to Inkster in Livonia (lane restrictions only, Nov. 30 targeted completion date);
- Six Mile Road from Merriman to Middlebelt in Livonia, with addition of right-turn lanes at Middlebelt intersection (lane restrictions only, Nov. 30 targeted); and
- Farmington Road from Interstate 96 to Five Mile Road, Livonia (lane restrictions only, Nov. 30).

Two area projects are scheduled for completion this fall:

- The Northville Road bridge over the Rouge River in Plymouth Township should be reopened by mid-October; and
- The newest leg of Morton Taylor Road, between Ford and Warren in Canton Township, is being paved and should open in early to mid-November.

Degrees, experience not required to land Ameritech's service jobs

By Richard Pearl
Staff Writer
rpearl@oe.homecomm.net

■ When Westland resident Dave Clark called Ameritech, he was told he needed an associate's degree to be a technician. That was incorrect.

Michigan's largest telephone company emphasized this week it is not requiring college degrees of those applying for most of the 400 service technician and support positions it has open.

"We are attempting to fill all of the positions aggressively" and will give technical aptitude tests to any candidates with telecommunications or related technical experience, said Cindie Bucks, Ameritech's general manager for customer provisions and maintenance.

Ameritech hopes to fill those 400 slots by year's end and then add another 800 employees next year as it tries to resolve a backlog of service problems in metropolitan Detroit.

Bucks also explained that wages for the 400 jobs range from about $8 per hour to more than $14, depending on experience and aptitude. The range covers one to four years' experience.

'In between'

"A lot of folks fall somewhere in between," Bucks said. "If they have no experience, they start at the beginning, but with any experience, they will start higher.

"They don't need to have an associate's degree" from a community college. "If they don't (have experience but do show aptitude), then we will train them.

"Anyone hearing otherwise, I want to know about it," Bucks said from her Detroit Ameritech office. "We have some new people on the employee hot lines."

Dave Pacholczyk, an Ameritech spokesman in Chicago, said the company has even been waiving tests "for months to get the number of technicians we need in the field.

"If someone comes to us from another phone company or has other training or education, that will give them a bypass of the tests," he said.

Bucks emphasized the openness of the hiring process after a Westland man claiming experience in wiring homes was offered a customer service position at $8 per hour when he called the Ameritech job hotline after reading about it in the Observer.

"I was flat told they want an associate's degree" for the technician's job, said Dave Clark, a former truck driver who started his own handyman business a few years ago when he tired of driving.

"I've installed phone lines, cable lines, alarms, even done a few in-home network systems. I can just about do anything," said Clark, who said he has even built a couple of houses "as an investment."

He grew up on a farm near Traverse City, learning to do most anything, he said. "I play with this stuff (wiring, electronics) all the time."

A Westland resident since 1962, Clark graduated from Wayne Memorial High School, where he learned to operate the school system's mainframe computer – one of the first in the area, he said.

Clark said also he's been building computers since the 8088 microprocessor chips and has taken some courses in computer studies from Wayne County Community College.

But when he called Ameritech, he said, he was told, "The only thing I could offer you is a job answering phones in the customer service area" that would pay $7.94 an hour.

'Decent salary'

"I make a halfway decent living at the things that I do, but I'm looking for a job with benefits and a decent salary with a chance to become a network tech and work inside," Clark said.

Clark e-mailed the Observer about the situation, and a reporter contacted Bucks.

She checked and found his call had apparently been handled by a Grand Rapids-based answering service subcontracted by Ameritech. The clerk at that end may have misunderstood the job codes, Bucks said.

She emphasized that the only job requiring an associate's degree is that of a T-1 high-capacity cable line installer.

The upshot? Clark was contacted by her office and an appointment and job interview was set for him on Monday at Ameritech.

The Ameritech employment hot-line is (800) 463-6119.

Foster gets appointment to CWW

Helen Foster, who is not seeking re-election this year as Sumpter Township supervisor, will become the new assistant director of the Conference of Western Wayne in December.

Director Marsha Bianconi of the Livonia-based CWW made the announcement at the Sept. 8 meeting of the group's 18 western Wayne County communities.

Foster succeeds Naheed Huq, who resigned this summer to join the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments (SEMCOG).

1st-half goal outburst gives Madonna a win

Well, they did one thing right, anyway. They managed to keep Salvatore Piraine off the scoreboard.

But the Golden Eagles of Cornerstone University didn't do much of anything else against Madonna University in a men's soccer match played Wednesday at Livonia Ladywood HS.

Patrick Griffin, a Redford Catholic Central graduate from Plymouth, riddled Cornerstone for two goals and two assists as the Fighting Crusaders leveled the Eagles 6-1 in a Wolverine-Hoosier Athletic Conference match.

Madonna improved to 7-5-1 overall, 5-2-1 in the WHAC. Cornerstone is 5-4-2 overall, 4-2-2 in the conference.

The Crusaders scored four unanswered goals in the opening half, outshooting the Eagles 15-6. The first was scored by Matt Buzewski (from Livonia Churchill), his third of the season, following a cross from Brian Seidel that found Buzewski cutting toward the net. It came at the 7:42 mark.

Griffin got his first goal less than four minutes later, set up by Buzewski. Griffin got it with 11:26 elapsed.

John Hirshey made it 3-0 at the 38:17 mark with his first goal of the season, assisted by Griffin and Gary Bell. The fourth goal came from Matt Rozek, also his first of the season, with Seidel earning his second assist with 1:54 left in the half.

A third Crusader got on the scoreboard for the first time this season just 3:14 into the second half when John Sterling (Canton/Westland John Glenn) finished a play started by Hirshey and Griffin.

Griffin's second goal of the match, and fourth of the season, completed Madonna's scoring with 9:38 gone in the second half. Seidel picked up his third assist of the match on the goal; Sam Marcozzi also assisted.

N'ville's Langston crushes Canton's hopes, 41-21

BY ED WRIGHT
STAFF WRITER

Moments after Northville's lightning-quick tailback Brandon Langston had bolted through the Plymouth Canton defense for 176 yards and two long touchdowns Friday night on the Chiefs' muddy, rain-soaked home turf, Mustang coach Darrell Schumacher analyzed his star's performance this way:

"You should see Brandon run on a dry field."

Members of the Chiefs' defensive unit would probably politely decline such an offer after the Langston-led Mustangs high-stepped their way to a 41-21 victory in a game that was pivotal in both teams' bids for post-season playoff berths.

With the win, Northville improved to 5-2 overall (3-2 in the Western Lakes Activities Association's Western Division) and pulled to within one victory of qualifying for the playoffs.

Canton dropped to 4-3 overall (2-3 in the Western Division) and now must sweep its final two games against Farmington and Plymouth Salem to assure itself of a state playoff berth for just the second time in school history.

While Langston was giving the Chiefs' defense fits, turnovers plagued Canton's offensive unit. Of the three Canton passes the Mustangs picked off, one was returned for a TD while the other two set up two short touchdown drives.

"We got ourselves into third-and-long situations where we had to pass the ball, and that's not where we're at our best," said Canton coach Tim Baechler, reflecting on the back-breaking turnovers. "We tried to force some plays when we probably should have just eaten the ball, but we'll learn from it and go on.

"We're in a situation now that we didn't want to be in — having to win our last two games to qualify for the playoffs. We beat Farmington the first time we played them, but that was a long time ago (the second game of the season). They've had time to make adjustments.

"And beating Salem is never easy, so we have our work cut out for us."

Schumacher gave his assistant coaches a large dose of credit for the 20-point triumph.

"Those guys watched film of Canton for hours and hours to try and figure out a way to stop their offense," he said. "Canton has the kind of offense that just churns out yards on you.

"Our defensive coaches came up with a plan to try and stop them and it worked most of the time tonight."

Thanks to a 64-yard wide-receiver-reverse-pass from Arron Redden to Darrell Adkins, Northville drove the ball to the Canton 16 on its opening possession. However, Chief linebacker Todd Shirkman snuffed the visitors' scoring opportunity when he intercepted Andrew Herpich's pass at the 12.

Three plays later, however, Redden intercepted an Oliver Wolcott pass and returned it 10 yards to the Chiefs' 12.

On third-and-12, Herpich made a great play-action fake to Langston before rolling right and hitting a wide open Adkins with a 15-yard TD strike.

Mustangs repel Chiefs

BY C.J. RISAK
SPORTS EDITOR
cjrisak@oe.homecomm.net

You gotta understand — this fight's still in the early rounds.

There's a long way to go for those aiming at the ultimate regular-season prize: the Western Lakes Activities Association championship.

The WLAA girls basketball season is at the mid-point, and what's been decided thus far are the teams that will contend for the conference title: Plymouth Canton, Plymouth Salem, Northville and Farmington Harrison. Northville and Harrison remain unbeaten against WLAA opponents, while both Canton and Salem have lost once in league play.

Northville took a positive step up the ladder of contention by beating the Chiefs 36-31 Thursday at Northville. The win improved the somewhat surprising Mustangs' record to 5-1 overall, 5-0 in the conference. Canton slipped to 7-4 overall, 4-1 in the WLAA.

This was the first game Northville played against one of the contending teams; Canton defeated Salem earlier, so the Chiefs are 1-1 with only Harrison remaining on its schedule. Those two clash at 7 p.m. Thursday at Canton.

Harrison hasn't played any of the other contenders. Salem's only played Canton.

So if you're looking for a positive emerging from Thursday's loss at Northville, that's about it. Because the Chiefs could have won this game.

"First of all, Northville played great," said Canton coach Bob Blohm. "They packed their zone (defense) in and, well, they just deserved to win.

"We got some perimeter shots but we didn't hit them. We got some chances but we didn't make them. We had chances but we didn't finish them."

The Chiefs, playing without starting guard Amanda Lentz (out with a sprained ankle), did a lot of things right. But in the end, they didn't do quite enough — especially on the offensive end.

They couldn't put points on the board.

Poor free-throw shooting hurt them, to be sure. Canton was 5-of-11 from the line and just 2-of-3 in the second half. Northville, by comparison, was 14-of-17 from the stripe.

The Mustangs utilized the strategy most teams use against the Chiefs — a zone defense — and it worked, mainly because Canton missed its open (and uncontested) perimeter shots.

That meant the Chiefs were left to passing from one side of the court to the other in an effort to find a lane to

Deer season still in controversy

OUTDOOR INSIGHTS

BILL PARKER

The young button buck crept silently through the forest, stopping occasionally to nibble at a leaf or sprout of grass. With most of the leaves still clinging to the trees, the young buck barely made a noise as he maintained a path that would take him directly beneath my stand.

Opening day of the Y2K archery deer season was a little warmer than most hunters would have preferred. But that didn't keep the nearly 350,000 licensed hunters from heading out to their favorite hot spot.

Michigan Department of Natural Resources biologists estimate the fall 2000 deer population at approximately five percent less than last year. But the herd still stands in the vicinity of 1.6-1.9 million animals, depending on who you talk to. There are fewer deer, biologists say, in the Lower Peninsula this year and slightly higher numbers in the U.P.

"The changes in deer regulations over the past few years have successfully reduced the deer population in the Lower Peninsula," said Becky Humphries, DNR wildlife chief. "Our goal is to maintain a quality herd that is in balance with its habitat to yield healthy fawns, does and bucks."

Deer management issues, particularly the unlimited antlerless permits that were doled out the past couple seasons, have been hot topics in recent months. While some hunters feel the DNR isn't doing a proper job managing our white-tailed deer herd we still have more deer, more deer hunters and enjoy more success than nearly anywhere else in the country.

According to DNR big game specialist John Urbain, "Michigan is the number two state in the nation for deer with 1.9 million. We're number two in gun deer hunters, first in archery deer hunters, first in buck harvest in 1998 and '99, first in total harvest in '98 and '99, and unfortunately, first in car/deer accidents, too."

In response to hunter complaints about the unlimited antlerless permits, the DNR went back to a Deer Management Unit quota system to distribute the permits, which are limited to three per hunter this fall. Those permits, coupled with the firearms, archery or combo licenses, allow a hunter to tag up to five deer this year.

As I watched the young button buck pass beneath my stand I thought about how lucky we are. It wasn't that long ago that hunters were limited to just one deer per season. I can vividly remember going up to deer camp as a youngster and coming home with two or three deer, that were split between seven or eight hunters. That's not the case in most of today's deer camps.

The DNR is shooting for a spring herd of some 1.5 million animals. As that goal becomes closer and closer to becoming a reality the days of two bucks and three does a season will undoubtedly come to an end. Enjoy the season and the opportunities we have today. They may be gone tomorrow.

The little button buck meandered under my stand and headed off toward a nearby swamp. An hour later, three does wandered through paralleled to my stand, but about 50-yards away. Two more passed through 20 minutes after that, but they, too, were out of range.

I didn't get a shot that day and I didn't tag a deer, but it was a great start to what should stack up to be another great hunting season.

Report your success

If you, a friend or relative tags a deer this fall we want to hear from you. Drop a line to Observer & Eccentric, Outdoors Dept., 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009. Be sure to include the hunter's name, hometown, phone number (in case we need to contact you for further information) what type of deer (10-point buck, doe) where it was taken, when it was taken, and how it was taken (with a bow in a tree blind overlooking a corn field...with a Remington 30.06 from a ground blind on the side of an oak ridge, etc.) Then watch future editions for the Observer & Eccentric for your success report.

Tree stand alert

API Outdoors is recalling 54,000 treestands and treeseats after discovering that the seats can collapse, causing the hunter to fall to the ground.

To date, API has not received any reports of accidents related to the seats. The treestands included in the recall are the Alum-I-Lok brand with model number AL50, Alum-I-Lok Original with model number AL100, Alum-I-Lok Magnum model number AL100M, Pro-Lock with model number AL050P and Pro-Lock Magnum with model number AL100MR. A yellow and black label with the product name and model number is located on the treestand platform.

The Bobcat treeseat with model number AL910 is also being recalled. The seats on the treestands and treeseats are covered with camouflage fabric.

Hunting supply stores and catalogs nationwide sold the products from January 1999 through August 2000. Prices for the treestands ranged between $60 and $90, and prices for the treeseats were between $30 and $40.

The company said customers should stop using the recalled products immediately, and contact API Outdoors at 888-530-6098 or visit its Web site at www.apioutdoors.com for a free repair.

(Bill Parker writes a weekly outdoor column for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers. Hunters and anglers are urged to report their success. Questions and comments are also encouraged. Send information to: Outdoors, Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, 805 E. Maple, Birmingham, MI 48009.)

drive to the basket. When they did take it into the interior, Northville center Mary Tanski, a 6-foot-10 senior, made them wish they hadn't.

Tanski blocked five Canton shots, including two on back-to-back Canton possessions in the game's final three minutes.

At that point, the outcome was still very much in doubt. Two free throws by Anne Morrell had pulled the Chiefs to within two of Northville (31-29) with 1:52 left to play.

But the Chiefs faltered after that. While the Mustangs were converting 5-of-6 free throws in the final 50 seconds, Canton was turning the ball over three times.

Tanski led all scorers, scoring 15 of Northville's points. Morrell and Janine Guastella topped Canton with 12 and 11 points, respectively.

"It was an outstanding game," said Mustangs' coach Pete Wright. "Mary's a great player inside, and they put four or five (different) players on her."

For the past couple of seasons, Northville was noted for its formidable inside strength. The Mustangs aren't as big as they were, but they've proven to be just as good.

"We're small and quick, and we like to get the ball up the floor," said Wright. "We still have a solid post player in Mary, but she's a different kind of post player."

The Chiefs appeared to be on the verge of taking command of the game in the second quarter. After a listless first quarter (by both teams) in which Northville finished on top by a 6-4 margin, the Chiefs came alive. It took a while, however; the Mustangs scored the first four points of the second period.

But they didn't score again until the final seconds of the half. Canton's defense forced nine straight Northville possessions to end with a turnover, allowing the Chiefs to go on an 11-0 run. Canton led 15-12 at the half.

"They're pressure is so good," said Wright. "And their whole team plays pressure defense."

But Canton didn't have a go-to player like Tanski, who scored seven of her team's first nine points in the third quarter. She finished with nine in the period, which ended with the team's tied at 25-all.

"Mary played very well," said Blohm of Tanski. "She had a solid game. I thought we were inconsistent with (our post defense). And we didn't get consistent pressure on the perimeter."

What the Chiefs didn't get was scoring, in particular from the perimeter. But there's still time to develop that; there's still six WLAA games remaining.

And as Blohm noted, "This league is going to be a dogfight."

Salem 49, John Glenn 29: The score says it was a blowout. The score lies.

It was a deceptively difficult victory for the Rocks and was only a 20-point game because Salem outscored the Rockets, 16-1, in the fourth quarter.

John Glenn (4-7, 1-4) stunned Salem (8-3, 4-1) by taking a 15-14 lead at the half.

"They made a few, we didn't make many," coach Fred Thomann of the Rocks said. "They played extremely well. We didn't take the lead for good until the three-minute mark of the third period. They had a great effort."

"It was fun," Coach John Albrecht of the Rockets said. "We played hard. We never quit playing.

"They had a rough shooting night for three quarters. We got really tired after that."

Salem outscored John Glenn 19-13 in the third period to take control.

"They really played hard," Thomann said. "It took us a while to match their intensity. Once we did, we got it going. We had a great second half."

"They are a a very, very good team. Patient, too," Albrecht said. "We stayed patient, too. That's why we stayed in the game."

Dawn Allen scored 15 points and had 10 rebounds for the Rocks, who made 9-of-13 free throws. Kelly Jaskot scored 12 points and had five assists and Jenna VanWagoner scored 10.

Guard Bianca Woods led the Rockets, who made just 2-of-8 free throws, with 14 points.

Ladywood 49, Marian 32: A 17-6 third-quarter surge carried Livonia Ladywood past Birmingham Marian Friday at Ladywood.

The win boosted the Blazers' record to 9-3 overall, 5-1 in the Catholic League's Central Division. Marian is 7-5 overall, 3-3 in the division.

Liz Obrecht did most of the damage for Ladywood, riddling the Mustangs for 23 points; she also grabbed 10 rebounds. Next best for the Blazers was Michelle Harakas with six points.

Katie Solner's nine points was tops for Marian.

"We did a pretty good job defensively on them," said Ladywood coach Andrea Gorski. "We kept their post players in check, held them to eight points."

Obrecht had seven of Ladywood's 17 points in the third quarter, a run that enabled the Blazers to increase their 20-16 halftime lead to 37-22 after three periods.

PCA 39, Roeper 38 (OT): Laura Clark did just about everything for Plymouth Christian Academy Friday night at Bloomfield Hills Roeper, including converting two free throws with 15 seconds left in overtime that gave the Eagles a three-point lead.

Those free throws — Clark had six of them in the fourth quarter and OT — ended up being the game-winning points.

For the game, the senior guard scored a game-high 22 points, grabbed 12 rebounds, had eight steals and dished out four assists.

Amy Brandt added nine points and 12 boards for PCA. Roeper was led by Lauren Olane with 10 points and Kristin Morris with nine.

The Roughriders opened up a 24-15 lead after three quarters, but couldn't sustain it. Clark and Brandt did all the scoring for the Eagles, who outpointed Roeper 15-6 in the period. Clark accounted for 10 of those points, Brandt had five.

In the extra session, Clark added five more points to her total.

PCA took over sole possession of second place in the Michigan Independent Athletic Conference with the win; the Eagles are 4-1 in league play, 8-3 overall. Roeper fell to 6-4 overall, 3-2 in the MIAC.

Huron Valley 46, Bethesda 33: Junior forward Rachel Zahn popped in a game-high 20 points and sophomore forward Lauren Merian added 10 friday as Westland Huron Valley Lutheran turned back Sterling Heights Bethesda Christian in a Michigan Independent Athletic Conference-Red Division game.

cluded Friday, with Salem defeating North Farmington 208-213 at St. John's.

The three victories boosted Salem's record to 9-2 and into a tie for first place in the WLAA at 9-2. The Rocks also clinched the Lakes Division title with a 5-1 mark.

"The key thing is, we're going in (to the conference tournament) with nine points," said Salem coach Rick Wilson, "which, going into this week, was the most we could expect."

The WLAA Tournament is Tuesday at Salem Hills in Northville. Plymouth Canton is the host team.

The method used to determine a conference champion is a team gets a point for every dual match it wins plus points determined on finish at the conference tournament (12 for first place, 11 for second, 10 for third, etc.).

Going into the tournament, Salem and Northville tied for first with nine points apiece. But don't think that makes either the favorite to win the tournament. Almost any conference team could make a run at first place.

Example: Livonia Churchill started its WLAA dual-meet campaign with four-straight losses. The Chargers followed that by beating everyone else, including Walled Lake Central and Northville.

And Westland John Glenn, which takes a 4-7 meet mark into the tournament, recorded wins over both Canton and Salem.

Still, Wilson likes his team's chances. "We're playing well right now," he said. "The last couple of scores we've had have been real solid.

"If we can maintain that, it could be good enough at conference and maybe at the regional. I'm definitely encouraged. The guys have surprised me a bit."

Wednesday's match against Stevenson is a perfect example. Salem managed to edge the Spartans at Fox Creek, their home course, 190-191.

The match came down to the final twosome. Salem's Brian Gullen didn't know it at the time, but when he birdied the final hole for a nine-hole total of 39, it provided the Rocks with the winning margin.

Since the sixth golfers on each side — Ryan Williams for Salem, Chris Thomas or Zac McKenzie for Stevenson— each shot 42s, the next tiebreaking procedure would have been a sudden-death playoff. Gullen's birdie helped avoid that.

Salem's Bobby Jones and Stevenson's Scott Wolfe tied for medalist honors with 36 each. The Rocks other scorers were Jay Smith at 37 and Jon Gordon, Mike Thackaberry and Gullen at 39.

Stevenson's other counting scores were Matt Courtright, 37; Matt Bartnick and Dru Girard, 38 apiece; McKenzie and Thomas, 42 each.

The Rocks made certain their position in first place wouldn't be taken from them by losing to North on Friday. Despite difficult playing conditions, they managed to bunch all six of their golfers in a four-stroke window.

Smith, Williams and Jones led Salem, each with a 41. Gullen shot 42, Gordon had a 43 and Thackaberry had a 44. North was led by Aaron Newman with a medalist-earning 40. Mike Patterson shot a 41, Tony Rica had a 42, Randy Yo shot 43 and Brian Bober had a 47.

"We still have a chance at the overall," said Wilson. Seems to me they have a pretty good chance.

Canton wins a pair

Plymouth Canton concluded its WLAA dual-meet season by winning a pair in a tri-meet Wednesday at San Marino in Farmington. Canton scored 196, one stroke better than Farmington (197) and three better than Farmington Harrison (199).

"We were really fortunate to win that match," said Canton coach Tom Alles. "Farmington's a really good team. To beat them there is just great."

Ryan McKendry led the Chiefs with a one-over par 37. Derek Vermeulen and Mike Baracy were next best with 39s, Andrew Wagner shot a 40 and Chris Pell had a 41. Scott Oliver was next with a 43.

"This is the lowest scoring average I've ever had in my seven years of coaching," said Alles.

Farmington's Keith Hay and Harrison's Matt Lee tied for medalist honors with even-par 36s. Next best for Farmington was Brad Berenie, 38; Mike Schuyler, 39; and Drew Mortens and Brian Proven with 42s.

Harrison's next best scores went to Dave Koch, 39; Junichi Miura and John Kluka with 41s; and Joey Graves, 42.

The WLAA Tournament, which Canton hosts at Salem Hills in Northville, is scheduled to begin with a shotgun start at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

CC sets record

Usually, Redford Catholic Central never plays well at Plumbrook Golf Course.

That changed Wednesday when the Shamrocks set a course record in beating host De La Salle, 143-155.

"It was our last league match and the kids just went out and made it happen," said CC coach Bill Hayes as his team improved to 15-0 overall and 10-0 in the Central Division. "That was our motto. The kids just played real well."

T.J. Lester and Matt Davey tied for medalist honors with 36, while Andy Mitchell shot 36 and Zach Davis had a 37. The Pilots were led by Anthony Buse and Rick Fox, both shooting 38.

Cougars rout Crestwood

Garden City finished its dual meet season in style on Wednesday as the Cougars thumped Dearborn Heights Crestwood, 155-175, at Westland Municipal.

"It was our lowest round of the year and a great way to finish having lost by two on Tuesday (to Allen Park)," said GC coach Ron Pummill as his team finished the Mega White season at 5-3. "I was happy with the way we played."

house scored. Jon George assisted.

Joe Suchara (Livonia Stevenson), Will Power Jr. (Plymouth Canton) and David Krowisz divided time in goal for Madonna, with Suchara and Power making one save apiece.

Anderson Almeida played the first 58 minutes in goal for Cornerstone, surrendering all six goals. Steve Bostater finished the match for the Eagles.

Madonna outshot Cornerstone 29-11.

The Crusaders, who played at Concordia College yesterday, begin a string of four-straight WHAC matches at home when they host Tri-State University at 4 p.m. Wednesday at Ladywood.

U-M stops Broncos in 2 OT

Tom Gritter's shot from 15 yards out on the right side eluded Western Michigan keeper Brendan Smith, giving University of Michigan a 3-2 victory over the Broncos in double-overtime Wednesday in Kalamazoo.

WMU, which fell to 3-7-1 overall with the non-league loss, got on the board first with an unassisted goal from Mike Bravo at the 7:22 mark.

The Wolverines tied it seven minutes later when Mike White (from Livonia Stevenson) punched in a rebound off a free kick. It was the first goal of White's collegiate career.

The Broncos again took the lead at the 71:45 mark when Scott Duhl (Plymouth Salem) knocked home another rebound, this one off a Reese Richardson shot. But U-M knotted it again, getting the equalizer from Kevin Robinson off a free kick with just 1:17 left in regulation.

Pat Murphy and Brad King combined for seven [illegible] the Wolverines [illegible] Smith had 10 stops for WMU.

Tim Kelleher's extra-point kick made it 7-0 with 6:05 remaining in the first quarter.

The Mustangs increased that to 14-0 just over two minutes into the second quarter when Langston broke an off-tackle play 52 for a TD.

Jerry Gaines swung the momentum back to Canton seconds later when he gathered in Kelleher's kickoff at his own 16, followed a wall of blockers up the middle before breaking outside and outrunning the Northville special team unit for an 84-yard kickoff return touchdown. Wolcott split the uprights on the extra point to make it 14-7.

The Chiefs were bitten again by an interception at the 5:24 mark of the second quarter when Bob Baker stepped in front of a Wolcott pass and returned it to the Chief 13.

Four plays later, Mustang fullback Ryan Anolick scored from 11 yards out on a misdirection play to put Northville up 21-7 at the half.

The Chiefs opened the second half like a team on a mission, cutting the deficit to 21-14 on Dane Kobus' 37-yard TD run less than two minutes after the halftime intermission.

The Mustangs answered Canton's scoring drive in grand fashion: with a 19-play, 65-yard, clock-devouring drive that was climaxed by Herpich's 2-yard TD run on a fourth-and-goal play with 11:56 left in the game, making it 28-14. Langston carried the ball 12 times in the drive.

The Chiefs responded with an impressive drive of their own. Ignited by strong blocking up front and hard running by Kobus, Gaines and Chad Fuller, Canton pieced together a 12-play, 68-yard scoring drive that was capped when Fuller bulldozed 2 yards into the end zone with 7:10 left to cut the deficit to 28-21.

The pendulum-like game swung back to Northville seconds later when Langston broke a tackle in his own backfield and sprinted 74 yards to paydirt to increase his team's lead to 35-21.

Mustang linebacker Mike Peters closed out the scoring with 4:38 left when he returned Wolcott's third interception of the game 25 yards for a touchdown.

Northville outgained Canton 293-194 in total yards. Anolick complimented Langston's big night by rushing for 29 yards on eight carries.

Kobus played well in defeat, grinding out 118 yards on 14 carries. Gaines had 11 attempts for 45 yards.

"I thought our defense did a decent job tonight," Baechler said. "We had (Langston) tackled in the backfield on their last long touchdown run, but he broke it and was gone.

"We watched four of their game films and they ran some formations tonight we never saw in those films."

NATURE NOTES

TIM NOWICKI

Know sumac and avoid the poison variety

Sumac is flaming in marshes and meadows. Staghorn sumac is scarlet red along the edges of abandoned meadows, while poison sumac is a hot copper color in the lowland marshes.

According to Cecil Billington's book Shrubs of Michigan, there are eight species in the sumac family here in Michigan. Staghorn sumac is the species you are most likely to encounter while hiking. Its name is derived from the fuzzy pubescence that covers the youngest part of the stems. Botanists thought it looked like the velvet on the antlers of deer. In Europe a male deer is called a stag, so they named it staghorn sumac.

Sumacs typically have a large compound leaf. A compound leaf has a long central shaft flanked by paired leaflets its entire length, with a terminal leaflet at the end. Some leaves are 2 feet long with as many as 31 leaflets.

Staghorn sumac grows well in sunny, open areas with little or no shade. Once larger trees invade the area where staghorn sumac is growing, resulting shade ultimately causes the death of the sumac.

Berries of the staghorn sumac have been used for years to make a flavored drink. The elongated flower head is soaked in water and then the solution is filtered to remove tiny hairs from the fruits. After filtering, sugar is added to taste. It has its own unique flavor. Not bad!

Wood of staghorn sumac is soft, but has a golden color to it. Beneath the white sapwood just under the bark is a pattern of dark rings alternating with golden rings of spring growth. I've used young trees to make fine walking sticks. They are strong, yet lightweight.

In the marshes, poison sumac is one of the first shrubs to change color, causing it to stand out against the remaining green plants. Fortunately poison sumac grows in wet, saturated soil where people do not frequently hike. Chances of encountering it are rare. But now is the time to map out its locations for future reference.

Unlike the staghorn sumac which produces clustered red berries that are used to make a drink, poison sumac produces loose clusters of white berries. These berries have the poisonous oil on them as do the stems and leaves. Poison sumac, when bruised, exudes a resin that often causes a rash when touched. Resin from an Asian relative is a source of lacquer.

Poison ivy is a close relative of poison sumac. It does not have a large compound leaf like poison sumac; it has three leaflets, generally with large notches along the edge. Like poison sumac it too produces white berries, and as its name indicates, produces a resin that causes a rash in most people.

Poison ivy can turn red in fall, but many leaves turn yellow before they fall off the branch. Michigan only has poison ivy. Poison oak is found in the southern states.

In southeastern Michigan poison ivy grows as a ground cover, a small shrub and as a climbing vine. North of a line from Saginaw Bay to Muskegon, poison ivy is typically a vine. Leaf structure is basically the same for all three forms. Remember too that the rash causing oil is in the stems and vine of leafless plants, so rubbing against a vine in winter can cause an irritation.

Don't worry about the poisonous members of the cashew family, just enjoy their brilliant colors produced this time of year.

Livonia resident Tim Nowicki is a naturalist with Independence Oaks Park north of Clarkston in Oakland County.

A shotgun, a good dog and a walk in the woods

OUTDOORS COLUMNIST

JEFF COUNTS

She finally did it perfectly and I missed. She upheld her end of the bargain by perfectly pointing two woodcock and flushing them toward me.

It was a moment when you ask yourself – "What am I doing out here?"

Most guys are at work, watching football, painting the house or watching their kid's soccer game. Instead I'm getting smacked in the face by brush, and thorns are ripping holes in my pants as I walk the brushy landscape of the eastern Upper Peninsula. By the day's end, I'm sitting bone tired in a cabin wondering why I missed yet another bird.

Bird dog: Jeff Counts' dog Maggie is a constant and invaluable companion when Counts goes grouse hunting in the UP.

The answer to my own self-inflicted question always comes back the same and in question form: "Where else are you going to be and what else are you going to be doing?"

Visions of sitting on a couch watching "I Love Lucy" reruns float over me. No, I don't want to be there.

Watching the Lions? Again, reruns of 35 years of losses.

Nobel prize work? Nope, I'm not going to find a cure for cancer.

■ A friend says 'it takes a lot of volume' to fill up a life.' I suspect he's right, and grouse hunting helps me fill mine with rich memories.

But what I can do in the fall is go out into nature and participate in the ritual of the hunt. As the word indicates, it's a search for game, not killing. If we wanted just to kill, there are jobs in slaughter houses.

I suspect other hunters have similar feelings. Although I don't bow hunt for deer, I've often listened to the almost spiritual tones in which deer hunters talk about the wonderful days spent in a stand looking for their prey.

When I see and hear a ruffed grouse flush while walking though a Michigan woods, my heart never fails to be stirred. There's the excitement of the game, but there's also the flushing of memories out of my own brain cells.

They are of hunts with my sons and friends and of my long-dead grandfather who by all accounts raised and trained good quail dogs in his day in Arkansas during the 1920s and '30s. They're of every lovely walk I've taken with my dog, Maggie, during the fall when the leaves are turning and the sunlight has that lighter fall feel to it. They're of the cold, sometimes snowy, days when you've been lost for a while and you finally find the road leading to your truck.

A friend says "it takes a lot of volume" to fill up a life. I suspect he's right and grouse hunting helps me fill mine with rich memories.

That's why I pack up the Jeep in late September or early October and head to the Upper Peninsula for grouse and woodcock season. Grouse are basically a wild chicken – and no, they don't taste like one. They have a stronger taste. Woodcock also have a wilder taste, but they're much smaller than a grouse. A couple of them would barely make dinner.

The sport of grouse and woodcock hunting is one in which dog work is important. It often takes years to develop a good bird dog.

One hunting friend bought drinks for everyone in a crowded Upper Peninsula bar to celebrate when his dog pointed a bird and he shot it. He'd been working with the dog for years.

One savvy old hunter puts it down to exposure. The more dogs are exposed to game birds, the better they will become. It's a lot of work and a lot of walking for both the hunter and dog.

The dogs used mostly are English setters, German shorthaired pointers and springer spaniels. Some point the birds, others flush them.

A dog's brain is its nose. They sniff the ground and the air for the scent of a game bird. It's fairly easy to determine if there are birds around by the actions of the dog. When grouse are around, they get what's called birdy. It simply means active.

Then there's the shooting. Grouse are usually hunted with a .20 gauge shotgun using bird shot. The goal is to knock them out of the air, not to blow them to pieces.

The shooting can be practiced at skeet shooting ranges, but the practice never quite simulates real hunting conditions. You know when the clay pigeon is coming, but not the game bird.

There's also knowledge of the birds and where they are. That means nature study. Hunters need to know the habitat and habits of their prey.

The dog work, gun skills and knowledge are what makes a hunt successful. When they come together it's like a ballet in the autumn woods.

Friedman rolls a 300 game, needs 3 more to catch dad

AL HARRISON

Matt Friedman of West Bloomfield was bowling in the beginning of his league season in the B'nai B'rith Pisgah League at Country Lanes in Farmington, when he came through with his first 300 game. He had hardly finished when he ran to the phone to call his dad, Mort, and ask what his highest game was. "300 was my high game" said Mort, and Matt replied, "I just tied you." Congratulations to Matt on his perfect game, and as he is a practicing attorney, I asked his dad if he gets much practice for his bowling. "Not at all" said Mort, "he never practices, and this was only the second game he bowled this season." Maybe good bowling is hereditary, for he still has a way to go to catch up to his dad's total of four perfect games.

■ Congratulations to Matt on his perfect game, and as he is a practicing attorney, I asked his dad if he gets much practice for his bowling. 'Not at all' said Mort, 'he never practices, and this was only the second game he bowled this season.'

After last week's column about the Evergreen Children's Services Bowl-a-Thon coming to Cloverlanes in Livonia at 1 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 18, it was brought to my attention that I had printed the wrong phone number in the article. The number I had used [illegible] caller only gets a very annoying screech in their ear for a response. The correct number, for all of you readers who would like to participate in the "Strike Out Child Abuse" event is (313) 862-1000, Ext. 103 for Holly Parrish. I remind all readers that 100 percent of all funds raised go directly to the benefit of these children who have been subject to abusive situations. Please participate if you can, and be eligible for many great prises as well.

The Old Timers Bowling Association will host its 70th annual tournament and party on Saturday, Nov. 25, with two squads at 9:30 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. The association has been raising money to establish a "Youth Scholarship Fund," and this year there will be scholarship money to be awarded for the first time. Two scholarship awards in the amount of $800 each will be given out to the two male youth bowlers who will be chosen. A questionnaire is being distributed to all bowling centers in the Greater Detroit area asking the youth program directors and coaches to submit three names of deserving YABA bowlers who are either high school seniors or already in college or trade schools while still bowling in YABA leagues. The completed forms are to be sent to the Old Timers Tournament, c/o John Chmelko, secretary at 25530 Van Dyke, Center Line, MI 48105 to be in no later than Nov. 10. Now that the youth scholarship fund is established, awards will be given out to deserving youth bowlers every year. Every past competitor in the "Old Timers" will be receiving an entry form in the mail, and if you have not bowled in it before, you can find entry blanks at most bowling centers around the metropolitan Detroit area. For any more information, call John Chmelko at (810) 756-3240.

Cloverlanes (Livonia)

All-Star Bowlerettes: Petsey Wray, 300.

Special mention: Ivy Bunno (age 90), 175.

Learn more about Proposal A at Oct. 11 forum

Over the last few weeks as I've gone to community theater rehearsals and interviewed musicians and artists on the phone, one of the questions I've encountered time and again is how much do I know about Proposal A, the culture tax on the Nov. 7 ballot.

They want to know who wins or loses or does everybody win?

Forum

The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, in conjunction with Oakland Community College, hopes to present both sides of the issue at a forum 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 11, in the Smith Theatre at Oakland Community College in Farmington Hills.

Panelists Lyn Bankes, a Wayne County Commissioner; John Chamberlin, political science professor at the University of Michigan; Nancy Coumoundouros, cultural arts coordinator for the cities of Farmington Hills and Farmington; Mike Flannagan, supervisor of Regional Education Service Agency, Wayne RESA; Paul Hillegonds, Detroit Renaissance president; Nicholas Hood, III, Detroit City Council Member; John McCullough, an Oakland County Commissioner; and Marlys Vickers, supervisor of marketing/research for the Oakland County Economic Development & Planning Division will discuss the proposal that will change public funding of cultural institutions and community arts organizations if passed.

What: The Observer & Eccentric Newspapers, in conjunction with Oakland Community College, [illegible] forum on Proposal A, the culture tax
When: 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 11
Where: Oakland Community College, Orchard Lake Road and I-696, Farmington Hills. [illegible] call [illegible] at (248) 901-2566

Proponents versus critics

The fear on the local level is that politicking will lead to the building of more soccer fields and the programming of fewer cultural and arts events. Ultimately voters must decide for themselves.

Proposal A isn't a perfect bill, but those who support the proposed tax to generate money to help support nonprofit regional cultural institutions and local arts and recreational programs say "it's a darned good bill."

If passed, approximately $44 million in annual tax revenue would be generated. Two-thirds of the money would be allocated to 17 cultural institutions including the Detroit Institute of Arts, Henry Ford Museum & Greenfield Village, Holocaust Memorial Center, WTVS Channel 56, Detroit Symphony Orchestra, and Detroit Zoo, among others.

One-third would go back to the municipalities, townships and villages to fund local cultural and recreation programs.

Allocation of funds

A nine-member Metropolitan Arts and Culture Council will determine and oversee the allocation of funds to the major cultural institutions. Composition of the board will include three members appointed by the Oakland County Executive, three appointed by the Mayor of Detroit, and three representatives from Wayne County (one each from downriver, western and eastern Wayne).

The remaining one-third of the funds generated would be distributed by locally elected officials. At an informational forum on Wednesday, Sept. 27, at Greenfield Village in Dearborn, Proposal A supporters urged people to get first in line, and talk to their local leaders about how the money should be spent. It will be up to local elected officials to determine a mechanism for distributing the money that is to stay in their communities.

And that's where local arts supporters are a little fuzzy on exactly how that would work. Robert Bennett supports the tax but wants to know who distributes the money and how will they select the recipients? Bennett, the current president of the Livonia Symphony Society, plans to attend the

Where Time Stands Still

Artist captures the slower pace of Livonia's early years

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN

A flock of Canadian geese are beginning their day grazing on the lawn of Newburg Methodist Church at Greemead Historical Park in Livonia. It's a quiet Tuesday morning with the light breaking through the golden leaves behind the white clapboard place of worship built in 1848.

Robert Perrish takes one last look around, savoring every minute in this place where time stands still, before entering the Friends Meeting House where 24 of his oil paintings capture the seasons in the historic village and down on the farm.

Greenmead is the reason Perrish turned to painting after 18 years of winning national awards as a duck carver. Painting after painting reveals the beauty and serenity of the historic park in Greenmead: Impressions of a Legacy, the exhibit continuing through Friday, Oct. 13.

A collection of different farm instruments lie like sculptures in a snow-covered field in Chariots in Winter Fields. The golden light of daybreak illuminates the porch of the Hill House on a lazy summer morning. Winter at Hill House (18 by 48 inches) is a horizontal work that gives the eye freedom to wander in a panoramic way. Smaller works such as the 9 by 12 inch Cadmium Garden provided Perrish with relief from the major works.

Greenmead: Impressions of a Legacy
What: Robert Perrish exhibits 24 oil paintings featuring the Hill House, community gardens and Kingsley House at Greenmead Historical Park as well as the Wilson Barn and Newburgh Lake
When: Through Friday, Oct. 13. Viewing hours are 1-4 p.m. Sunday-Friday, Oct. 8-13
Where: Friends Meeting House at Greenmead Historical Park, 20501 Newburgh, south of Eight Mile Road, Livonia. For information call (248) 477-7375

Perrish captures two time periods represented in the park – the east end of the village recreates the intersection at Newburg and Ann Arbor Trail from 1915 to 1925. The west end focuses on the mid-19th century life style of the Livonia township with the Hill House farm complex and gardens. Both are a refreshing change of pace from his full-time job as a commercial artist for Michcon.

"It has the kind of subject matter I like as far as the outdoors and wide open space," said Perrish, who's taken art classes at the Center for Creative Studies, Birmingham Bloomfield Art Center and with wildlife artist Robert Bateman. "A lot of the old houses have great design to them. There's no downtown Livonia with a Main Street. This is my favorite part of the city. If this ever went away it would be a sad day. It would be like any other city [illegible]."

Even in works like Carl the Gardener Talks about Hawks, Perrish manages to reflect the solitude and abundance found in the community garden in Carl's sunglasses. Queen of the Garden, an oil featuring a makeshift female scarecrow in the community gardens, adds a touch of whimsy to the exhibit. Other works illustrate architecture and landscape outside Greenmead, including Georges Livonia Garden at the corner of Seven Mile and Merriman, and the Wilson Barn. In Breakfast of Champions, Perrish takes artistic liberty to incorporate his great uncle and himself along with cows in the painting of the Greenmead farm complex.

Marian Renaud is just happy to watch an artist creating an entire body of work on the historical site. As program supervisor for Greenmead Historical Park, Renaud followed Perrish's progress as he photographed and made quick sketches of the buildings and landscapes before going home to paint. But it wasn't until Perrish attended a meeting and told Renaud and the Livonia Historical Commissioners how much he appreciated Greenmead that the concept for a one-man show came about.

"It's a favorite site for a lot of artists," said Renaud. "Bob's work is beautiful and it's a total body of work with which he's been able to capture Greenmead. He's taken some different views of the landscape and some of the details. He's looked at it in a different way. I like the light in his paintings. He tried to work in the morning or evening to get dramatic lighting in the painting. It's a new and fresh way to look at the landscape."

Greeting cards and prints of three of Perrish's paintings are on sale in the gift shop at Greenmead.

MUSIC

PSO opener takes audience on a sound odyssey

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

The haunting music the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra was rehearsing Monday night sounded familiar. Minutes before, conductor Nan Washburn informed the musicians the composer "is famous for writing music for the Godzilla movies in the 1950s."

What: The Plymouth Symphony Orchestra opens its 2000-2001 season with Gala 55 – Opening Night Orchestral Showcase featuring the music of Berlioz, Ginastera and Ifukube
When: 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 14
Where: Plymouth Salem High School Auditorium, 46181 Joy Road, Canton
Tickets: $15, $12 seniors/college students, children K-12th grade free. For tickets, season subscriptions or information, call (734) 451-2112, [illegible]

Washburn's programing is one of the reasons the orchestra is enjoying a rebirth as it begins its 55th season. Now entering her second season as conductor/music director of the Plymouth Symphony, Washburn is revitalizing the orchestra, and in turn the concerts, by presenting a variety of music which ranges from classics to contemporary compositions written as late as 1999.

She and the orchestra will lead the audience on the first of the new season's musical odyssey Saturday, Oct. 14 in the Plymouth Salem High School Auditorium.

Sound Odyssey: Nan Washburn rehearses the Plymouth Symphony Orchestra for its gala opener.

Music selection

"I'm excited," said Washburn shortly before rehearsal was to begin. "There's lots of [illegible] fun and serious music making but not boring. We're opening with a showcase for the orchestra, kind of exotic music. It's a festive opening night, an early Halloween concert that features Symphonie Fantastique (1830), a well known Berlioz, with Ifukube and Ginastera works which are sure to become their new favorites."

Washburn's been right so far about selecting music the audience will grow to love. The proof, she says, is that ticket sales are up 46 percent.

"The first year you always have to guess a little," said Washburn. "It's getting to know the audience and musicians. The second year you're building on success. You're seeing they like the variety of programming.

"We really hope people come and check us out. We're celebrating our new phase. Every program has an element they won't find with other orchestras, and pre-concert lectures with composers talking about their music. I'm really excited about the season. We have lots of work to do and we're up for it."

Obstacles to overcome

Washburn stands a little taller than she did last season thanks to a new podium that's built higher than the one on which Russ Reed previously conducted. It's one of the obstacles she had to overcome in her forum as he searches for the answers. How will the half mill assessment, which will cost the owner of a $150,000 home $37.50 a year, be spent?

One-fifth of the money Livonia is estimated to receive ($646,933) would fund the Livonia Symphony Orchestra's operating budget for a year.

"Although I haven't seen how the proposal will appear on the ballot, I share the concerns (of other members of the arts community) regarding the wording of the proposal," said Robert Bennett, formerly mayor of Livonia.

"There seems to be an emphasis on recreation. In Livonia we've done so much for recreation but always struggled for the arts dollar. As president of the Livonia Symphony Society I spend a lot of time looking for dollars. This would be a source of money and take us out of the fund-raising business."

Farmington City Manager Frank Lauhoff is also concerned about Proposal A because he hasn't "seen anything written about how money will be expended and come back to the communities."

Farmington would receive approximately $54,699 if the proposal is passed.

How money will be spent

"Every community places different values on the arts," said Lauhoff. "The issue seems very timely. There aren't any moneys, say, for an arts facility. We've been working on a master plan in Farmington and Farmington Hills for the arts which could possibly include a facility. Our communities have said the arts are very important. But we've not heard a word about the biggest concern – how the money will be spent."

Nancy Coumoundouros has worked with Lauhoff on the master plan and thinks Proposal A is a very important issue because of its support for arts and culture, and the benefits to Farmington Hills which would receive an estimated $556,119.

"If passed, it would provide funding to implement our master plan, something which Farmington and Farmington Hills have been working on for years," said Coumoundouros. "But the word is not getting out about if the funds will be used correctly. There's a lack of guidelines as to how community money will be spent. The art community will have to be extremely vigilant about how the money will be spent and come up with a plan so it can be a joint venture."

Plymouth Community Arts Council executive director Jennifer Tobin didn't want to comment on Proposal A at first but eventually did say she doesn't want to see it defeated.

Getting their share

Like Bennett and Coumoundouros, Tobin thinks "local arts organizations will have to fight tooth and nail" for their share of the money.

"I would like to say we want a balance and need a plan to do it fair and square for everybody," said Tobin.

Distributing the $375,000 Canton Township receives won't be a problem the arts community will have to worry about, according to Supervisor Tom Yack. A long-time supporter of the arts, Yack co-founded Canton Project Arts, the township's official cultural organization, with Elaine Kirchgatter, Canton Township's Treasurer, in 1993. He also serves on the board of the Arts League of Michigan.

"It's left up to each individual community to come up with how it's distributed," said Yack. "That rests with whatever legislative body exists. In Canton, there's no lack of ways to spend the money – historical preservation, Canton Project Arts and the new performing arts center."

Canton's new $5.5 million performing arts center, scheduled for groundbreaking in early 2002, is one of the reasons Yack originally became involved with the proposal three years ago when it was being drafted. Yack, Livonia Mayor Jack Kirksey and other members of the Conference of Western Wayne met with Paul Hillegonds to air their concerns about the culture tax as it was then proposed.

"It was a larger millage then and the money would go to the larger cultural institutions," said Yack. "We thought part of the money should come back to the community.

"Nobody likes to talk tax increases but in the end everybody has a vote. We're the minor leagues for the DIA and the DSO. It starts here. If we don't develop the arts in the suburbs and give people opportunities to perform professionally they won't be going downtown to take in a Mozart concert or see theater."

first year as conductor. New venues last year brought production concerns as will this season's addition of full orchestra concerts at the new Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, and chamber programs at First United Methodist Church in Plymouth and the Kerrytown Concert House in Ann Arbor.

"You're getting used to a new hall each time," said Washburn. "It's a challenge but we're building on audiences already used to those venues. We're looking at audiences of 600 and larger and hope to grow and maybe even top a 1,000."

The second concert of the season, Our American Heritage coincides with Veterans Day weekend and features concertmaster Juliana Athayde performing Daniel Kingman's Fiddler in All of Us. Washburn originally commissioned the piece when she was conducting the Camellia Symphony in California. She and Kingman will talk about the composition in a pre-concert lecture Nov. 11.

"Juliana brought down the house with her wonderful music at the family concert on Sept. 24," said Washburn, who is still flying back and forth between Calif. 4-7 days a month to conduct the West Hollywood Orchestra. "The second concert shows a different side of her with Irish fiddle music."

■ The third set of concerts Saturday, Jan. 27 and Feb. 3, will feature a chamber ensemble composed of orchestra principals performing together throughout the program instead of in separate groups.

The variety of musical styles is what Juliana Athayde is especially looking forward to this season – that and performing as a soloist on the second concert. A junior majoring in violin performance at the University of Michigan School of Music, Athayde studies with Paul Kantor.

"I'm excited about the season especially the Kingman," said Athayde. "Berlioz is a great piece and it's always nice to do The Nutcracker (Dec. 9-10) to get all the families together. But I think it's intense when you might think these pieces don't go together but put on a different spin it's a good way to expose people who like one style of music over another."

The third set of concerts Saturday, Jan. 27 and Feb. 3 will feature a chamber ensemble composed of orchestra principals performing together throughout the program instead of in separate groups.

"People really loved the mini orchestra last season," said Washburn. "This season we're featuring our principal bass Andrew Anderson in a theater piece. And for our fourth concert we're bringing in middle school string students and soloist Lynne Aspnes in Taileferre's Concertino for Harp and Orchestra (1928). Also on the program is Carter Pan's Slalom (1999) all about downhill racing. It's a mix of old and new. But I'm most excited about bringing in the string students. I remember playing with an orchestra as a 13-year-old. It was so exciting for me and it's good for adults to remember the enthusiasm of that. Ultimately we want work to build other parts of the community like the schools."

Subscription concerts

Violinist Kiyo Morse is just as excited about the first four season subscription concerts as the fifth which features The Encantadas, a 1983 work based on Melville's travels to the Galapagos Islands. Narrator Michael Steinberg will talk about the work during a pre-concert lecture March 24.

"I'm excited about all of the programs," said Morse, headmaster of Stepping Stones School in Farmington Hills and a former Plymouth Symphony Society board member. "There's always something solid for classical people, something for a niche. It's not programming to compete with the DSO but something in it for everyone."

Personnel manager and orchestra member William Hulsker agrees with Morse and Athayde, the concerts are sure to please just about every musical taste. Special concerts, not part of the subscription season, like The Nutcracker and annual pops concert April 6 are the icing on the cake.

"I like the programming," said Hulsker. "It's very exciting. It's exposure to new stuff, not extremes, not experimental music but something the musicians can sink their teeth into. It's exciting to come to rehearsals to know you're making progress."

New children's book full of warmth, humor

Carlotta's Kittens and the Club of Mysteries
By Phyllis Reynolds Naylor
Atheneum Books for Young Readers, 2000, $16

■ Reading 'Carlotta 's Kittens and the Club of Mysteries' will surely help children grow more sensitive to the needs of the four-footed animals that share our planet.

ESTHER LITTMANN

Phyllis Reynolds Naylor is the author of more than 100 books for children and young adults. The winner of numerous awards, including the Newbery Medal for Shiloh, the Edgar Allan Poe Award for Night Cry, and Best of the Best Books for Young Adults for The Keeper, Naylor admits that she's not happy unless she can find time to write each day.

"It's as though pressure builds up inside me," she explains in a printed interview with the publisher, and writing even a little helps to release it."

Naylor's latest book is Carlotta's Kittens and the Club of Mysteries.

Third in a series

It's the third in a series that begins with The Great Escape and The Healing of Texas Jake. Geared to ages 7-10, these books follow the adventures of a group of cats that have only one life to live but enough courage and curiosity to risk losing it more than nine times.

When the feline members of the Club of Mysteries hold their weekly meeting at Murphy's garage, they're faced with a big agenda: how to protect Carlotta and her five newborn kittens from the dangers of the outside world.

And dangers there are aplenty! Besides cars on the road and crows in the sky, there is Bertram the Bad, a vicious dog who lives down the street.

And Steak Knife, the feral cat who vows to add a kitten's appendage to his already impressive "tail collection."

But the cats know that human beings sometimes pose the biggest threat of all! Displeased or inconvenienced by a pet, they send it off to a mysterious place called "the pound."

Naylor tenderly describes the kittens' baby softness and Carlotta's maternal love for her infants. Led by Texas Jake, "Lord of the Loft, Commander in Chief, King of the Alley, and Cat Supreme," the male club members provide food and lessons in survival. After all, kittens must someday leave their mother's care and fend for themselves.

Their furry protectors also vow to find the youngsters a good home. That promise, they soon learn, is not so easy to keep.

Suspenseful

Phyllis Reynolds Naylor has written yet another charming and suspenseful book. Full of warmth and humor, it nevertheless offers glimpses into the hard realities facing homeless cats and dogs.

Reading Carlotta's Kitttens and the Club of Mysteries will surely help children grow more sensitive to the needs of the four-footed animals that share our planet. And by extension, the 122-page book will teach young readers that human children — no less than kittens and puppies — must learn their lessons well, so that eventually, they too can become capable and independent adults.

Lecture focuses on 'Jefferson's children'

Shannon Lanier, a seventh generation grandson of President Thomas Jefferson and his enslaved mistress, Sally Hemings, will give a lecture and slide presentation based on his recently published book, "Jefferson's Children: The Story of One American Family."

The presentation, free with museum admission, will be on 1-2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 21 in the General Motors Theater of the Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History.

Afterward, Lanier and co-author/photographer Jane Feldman will sign copies of their book, which can be purchased at the Museum Store.

Jefferson's Children is a collection of family members' recounts based on oral history; commentaries by some of the descendants of Thomas Jefferson and his wife, Martha Wayles Jefferson; historians' overviews of research; and family pictures. The book was inspired during the first-ever joint family reunion of white and black descendants of the third U.S. president.

The historic family reunion, held at Jefferson's Monticello estate, was preceded by the announcement that DNA evidence had proven the probability that Thomas Jefferson had fathered at least one child by Sally Hemings. Dr. Eugene Foster conducted the study using DNA samples from descendants of one of Sally Hemings' sons, Eston. This study, in conjunction with historical information, offers convincing corroboration of oral accounts handed down through each successive generation from Sally Hemings.

Lanier, 21, is a student at Kent State University in Kent, Ohio where he is majoring in electronic media production. He traces his lineage through Madison Hemings. As an older adult, Madison dictated an oral testimony about the relationship of his mother, Sally, with Thomas Jefferson. In that account, given to an historian, Madison names the other children, including Eston, from the union between Sally Hemings, and Jefferson.

Jane Feldman is a professional photographer. Her work has gained international attention in the advertising and non-profit fields. For more information about the lecture and book signing at the Museum, call (313) 494-5800, extension 0. The Charles H. Wright Museum of African American History, open Tuesday-Sunday, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., is at 315 East Warren Avenue in the heart of Detroit's Cultural Center.

Admission to the Museum is $5 for adults and $3 for children 17 and under.

Iceland Symphony warms audience with U.S. premiere

BY LINDA ANN CHOMIN
STAFF WRITER
lchomin@oe.homecomm.net

Rico Saccani is looking forward to returning to Ann Arbor as conductor of the Iceland Symphony Orchestra instead of as a student at the University of Michigan School of Music.

Rico Saccani

Don't get him wrong, Saccani enjoyed the time he spent there earning two master's degrees and a doctorate of music in the early 1980s, but his position as music director of the Iceland Symphony Orchestra offers a number of opportunities for growth. Founded in 1950, the Iceland Symphony is probably the youngest national orchestra in Europe.

"Most of all (the challenge) was to increase the size of the orchestra to its present levels (95 players), increase recording and international tours and attract the best guest conductors and soloists possible to motivate and stimulate the musicians to constantly mature and improve which they have," Saccani e-mailed the Observer Newspapers from Iceland.

What: The Iceland Symphony Orchestra performs as part of the University Musical Society series
When: 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 12
Where: Hill Auditorium, 825 North University, Ann Arbor.
Tickets: $14-$46, and available by calling (734) 764-2538 or (800) 221-1229

The audience will have an opportunity to decide for themselves when the Iceland Symphony Orchestra plays Hill Auditorium Thursday, Oct. 12, as part of the University Musical Society series. Joining the orchestra will be 26-year-old soloist Judith Ingolfsson who won first prize in the recent International Violin Competition in Indiana. She will perform the Khachaturian Violin Concerto.

Sibelius on the program

Also on the program is Sibelius' First Symphony and the U.S. premiere of Atli Heimir Sveinsson's Icerapp 2000. The concert celebrates the 1,000th anniversary of Icelandic explorer Leif Erickson's landing on North America (the actual landing date was Oct. 9, 1000).

"IceRapp is a five-minute set of 44 variations on an eight measure multi-metered rhythmic motif derived from old Iceland folk song rhythms highlighting the various sections and soloists of the orchestra as well as quoting Stravinsky, Beethoven and Gershwin," wrote Saccani who is also music director/artistic adviser of the Budapest Philharmonic."

On a lighter note, Saccani wants the audience to know more about the country from which the orchestra comes. Cultural events and festivals occur throughout the year in Iceland. The orchestra, based in Reykjavik, gives about 60 concerts each season including subscription programs. It also has performed in the Faroe Islands, Greenland, Germany, Austria, France, Finland, Sweden, Denmark and the U. S. but not because Iceland's climate wasn't accommodating.

"Everyone seems to have to misconception that Iceland = Siberia," wrote Saccani, who grew up in Tucson, Ariz. "In the coldest parts of their winter it is never or rarely below freezing. Ann Arbor (the Midwest in general not to mention Buffalo and other wind-chill capitals) are much colder and frigid. The long almost 24-hour nights in December can be difficult for two weeks but they are compensated in the summer when the sun is always out and people can play golf and swim 24 hours a day."

PHOTOGRAPHY CLASS

Serious amateur photographers and professionals who want to learn more about studio lighting and working with models won't want to miss a four-week class beginning Saturday, Oct. 14 at the Plymouth Community Arts Council, 774 N. Sheldon at Junction.

Observer photographer Paul Hurschmann will conduct the two-hour sessions emphasizing a variety of studio lighting techniques.

"We're going to have a lot of fun and learn a lot about lighting in an intense four-week course," said Hurschmann. "This is not a class for beginners, but anyone with a working knowledge of their camera who wants to know about location and studio lighting will benefit from this course.

"We'll have models each week for the students to get real experience and allow them to actually shoot some photos that they'll be able to add to their portfolios."

The class will meet Saturday mornings 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuition is $45 for members/$50 for non-members. Call (734) 416-4ART for more information and to register.

If you're looking for special holiday gift for a clothes lover, Minkha Hand Knit Sweaters in Huntington Woods might be the store you're looking for.

Minkha sells custom-ordered Alpaca apparel for men, women and children. Each piece is hand knit and produced by a group of women who live in the Bolivian Andes called the Minkha Knitting Collective.

The group was formed in 1989 by volunteers from Save the Children, Canada. A source of income for the Bolivian women and their families, production of the fine textiles is a craft passed down by the knitters' Inca ancestors. Alpaca comes from a native Andean camel, and to obtain an extra long fiber, the camel's fleece is allowed to grow for two years before shearing.

Vest, scarves, hats, coats and sweaters in a variety of styles can be ordered at Minkha Hand Knit Sweaters. Samples are available to preview. Delivery time is a minimum of two to three months, so holiday orders need to be placed as soon as possible.

Minkha Hand Knit Sweaters is located at 13339 Vernon in Huntington Woods. For more information, call (248) 544-0651.

Spas, the services they provide and the idea of "treating oneself" seems to be getting more popular – and mainstream – every day.

It's no surprise, then, there's a new spa open for business in Oakland County.

Recognizing that the Birmingham area might embrace a new luxury spa, certified massage therapist and aesthetician Phyllis LaPrairie opened Trillium in July. The full-service beauty spa is located near the Townsend Hotel in downtown Birmingham. Among the services offered at Trillium are massage, facials, manicures, pedicures, makeup application and body wraps. Customers may also tailor services to meet their individual needs.

Trillium, at 101 Townsend Street in Birmingham, can be reached at (248) 594-1661.

In other spa news, the Elizabeth Arden Red Door Salon recently remodeled.

The salon and spa is located at Saks Fifth Avenue, the Somerset Collection in Troy. For details, call (248) 643-9024.

Quaint Oscoda's a great place to enjoy fall colors

SPECIAL WRITERS

The state of Michigan is nature's showcase any time of year, but in the fall, Michigan's beauty just plain shows off. To get the full effect of Michigan's spectacular fall color, a road trip is essential. And, directions for the optimal fall road trip are simple: Go north.

If you want something more specific, we've found a couple of treasures tucked near the end of East River Road in Oscoda, just before you splash into beautiful Lake Huron.

Oscoda is a quaint town about 15 miles north of Tawas on US-23, surrounded by the natural beauty of the Au Sable River and Lake Huron. Drive time from the Detroit area to Oscoda is about three-and a-half hours.

The treasures we found, are two specialty shops owned and operated by sisters Debora Hamlin and Sandra Kowalski.

"The main business at The Enchanted Blooms Garden Shop, is designing and planting perennial gardens," said owner Debora Hamlin. "When customers ask about the plants outside the shops, we let them know they are available for sale in pots out back."

Rubber stamping supplies, candles, floral stationary, antique wind chimes and "Welcome" garden stones are just a few of the other gift items sold at Hamlin's shop. The sisters also customize window boxes for summer cottages and take orders for personalized gift baskets which start at $25. According to Hamlin, one of the best-selling items in the shop, especially appealing to male customers, is the decorative glycerin soap available in an array of colors and scents, like Rain Forest and First Love.

Planning your trip

- Oscoda Area Convention and Visitors Bureau – 4440 North U.S.-23, Oscoda, 1-(800)-235-4625, or www.oscoda.com
- River Queen of Oscoda Inc. – 4280 Bass Lake Road, Hale, call (517) 739-7351 of (517) 728-3775, or www.oscoda.net/arq
- Oscoda Canoe Rentals – 678 River Road, Oscoda, (517) 739-9040, or www.oscodacanoe.com
- The Gailes at Lakewood Shores Resort – 7751 Cedar Lake Road, Oscoda, call (517) 739-2073 or (800) 882-2493, or lakewoodresort@voyager. net

Be sure to visit

- Enchanted Blooms Garden Shop – 111 River Road, Oscoda. Open 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. Closed Monday.
- Garden View Coffee Mill – 120 E. River Road in Oscoda. Open 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. Closed Monday.

Cozy cafe

Just across River Road, which dead ends one block away, where waves soothingly lap the shores of Lake Huron, is the Garden View Coffee Mill. The first thing you notice here are the oh-so-good aromas of fresh-baked goodies and gourmet coffees, like sour cream coffee cake and strawberry-rhubarb pie.

This cozy cafe seats about 25 people. Its cherry atmosphere allows even strangers to chat like old-time friends.

"We went for the nostalgia look of the 1940s," explained Kowalski. The sisters studied numerous magazines for decorating tips. Kowalski's husband, Karl, and stepson, Jason, refinished old, mismatched wooden chairs and painted them bright red, adding color to the shop. Fresh-cut flowers adorn the vintage fruit-and-floral cotton tablecloths. Kowalski plans to expand the coffee mill to carry a line of gourmet foods and specialty cooking utensils.

One of the nicest compliments for the sisters is when local customers bring visiting family and friends to see what the locals call their "special place."

Oscoda is also home to a variety of wildlife from Great Blue Herons, and Red Foxes. You may spot a Snowy Owl, or even a Bald Eagle in this unspoiled Northern getaway. Watching wildlife in their natural habitat is a year-round activity in the Oscoda area, primarily because of the vast forests, and AuSable River.

In fact, locals say the best way to experience an Oscoda fall is in a canoe on the AuSable. If you're not a canoe enthusiast, the River Queen of Oscoda can do the paddling for you. This paddle wheel riverboat, six miles west of Oscoda, offers two-hour trips that wind leisurely down the river while you relax and take in nature's bounty.

River Road Scenic Byway, just off U. S.-23 in Oscoda, mixes color, wildlife and delightful surprise encounters with the AuSable. Several spots along River Road offer access to foot trails and lookout points.

Speaking of lookout points off River Road Byway, that's where the ThreeOlBags were when our photographer Sharon Hegwood, came running back to the trail, where Sandy Campbell and Linda Sparkman (the other two bags) were.

"You missed it! You missed it!" She had our attention, and continued excitedly, "I was sitting on the wall, and, it was so pretty. The sand dune went this way," she said as she visually indicated the downward slope of the dune with her hand. "And the tree line came in from both sides. And, there was this open expanse where I could see the water, then, all of a sudden, there he came!"

She had spotted a Bald Eagle as it flew majestically over the AuSable. "It took my breath away!" she said.

Treasured moments like this one make it easy to forget the rest of the world, and your problems, as the quiet, leisurely pace of Michigan's north country eases its way into your heart.

According to The Encyclopedia Britannica, Oscoda is the birthplace of the legendary Paul Bunyan. There's a huge statue of this lumberjack and Babe, his famous blue ox in town. There's also a Lumberman's Monument about 14 miles west of Oscoda on River Road Scenic Byway, honoring contributions of the lumbering industry to Michigan's prosperity. The monument is a few feet from a majestic overlook you won't want to miss.

The area is also home to The Gailes, an award-winning golf course, some of Michigan's best fishing, antique shops, cross-country skiing and snowmobile trails.

Stay overnight

With so much to see and do in the area, you might want to spend a few days here. If so, you'll find plenty of overnight accommodations, and restaurants along US-23. The well-maintained highway follows the shore of Lake Huron as it passes through Oscoda. Cabins, cottages and motels dot the shoreline, offering unbeatable views. Room rates start around $60. Restaurants, like the AuSable Inn on State Street, serve everything from pizza to filet mignon. Prices average $10 for dinner.

The ThreeOlEags are Linda Sparkman, Sharon Hegwood and Sandra Campbell of Garden City. They write about travel for the Observer & Eccentric Newspapers.

Enjoy squash in the splendor of autumn

Of all the groups in the vast veggie kingdom, none can rival pumpkins and squashes for diversity of size, shape and color.

Squashes are some of the most varied and versatile of all culinary vegetables. They range in size from a couple inches to five feet, and their shapes can range from perfectly smooth and sphere-like to torpedo-shaped, bumpy, curved and twisted.

Pumpkins and squashes have come to be a visual and decorative as well as a culinary fall celebration. When the air starts taking on a fall chill, I know I am not far from my fall favorites including: maple-baked acorn squash, squash risotto and pumpkin bread.

Squashes can be prepared in a multitude of dishes that can range from savory soups and sauces to sweet chutney, breads, cookies and pies. They are certainly capable of upholding their own as the main attraction on the dinner plate, as a sideshow or even a simple garnish.

They also come packed with loads of vitamins A and C and are a tasty source of complex carbohydrates and fiber. The winter squashes are also an excellent source of niacin, iron and beta-carotene.

Old vegetables

Squashes are among some of the oldest-known vegetables. In fact, the oldest variety recorded is one of the most popular varieties today – butternut – first cultivated by the Aztec and Mayan civilizations in Mexico and Central America around 3400 BC.

■ Squashes are among some of the oldest-known vegetables... first cultivated by the Aztec and Mayan civilizations in Mexico and Central America around 3400 BC.

In other parts of South America, the chayote has also descended from antiquity dating back as far as 2000 BC or longer. Squash is a native vegetable to the Americas. Edible gourds were introduced to Europe and then Britain around the 16th century, presumably brought back from trips of discovery from the New World. Pumpkins and squashes were thought to have medicinal powers. In the 1800s the seeds were used in the form of a tea as a diuretic and to treat tape worm.

Here are the varieties:

Summer squash

These include zucchini, crooknecks, a member of round cultivators and of course the cute little pattypans or scallop squashes, as some call them. All these squashes should be picked for cooking when they are immature. If you allow pattypans to grow to maturity, they become ornamentals, especially the white and dark green varieties.

Autumn squashes

Autumn squashes are eaten when mature but not stored for more than two months. The most notable are acorn squash, which may be dark green, creamy white or golden yellow.

Spaghetti squash is different from its near cousins in that its flesh comes away in strands when cooked. It is egg shaped and cultivates in realms of color from creamy white, yellow to green-striped.

Last is the marrow, which is popular in the United Kingdom and is noted for its delicate flavor.

Winter squash

Winter squash have excellent storing qualities (sometimes up to a year). Within this category are several distinct groups, including butternut,

THE OTHER 'LIGHT' M

PRODUCERS SUCCEED IN REDUCING FAT, RETAINING TASTE

BY PEGGY MARTINELLI-EVERTS
SPECIAL WRITER

Pork is one food that has had a bad reputation for years. It was thought of as a high fat food that had to be cooked until well done for fear of trichinosis.

However, in recent years pork producers have had tremendous success with reducing the fat content while retaining the flavor of pork.

Calling it "the other white meat" to show that pork is as lean as poultry, is actually true. Many cuts of pork are leaner than some cuts of chicken. (See sidebar).

In addition, the age-old fear of contracting trichinosis from rare pork is simply unfounded. This means that you do not have to cook pork until it is gray and tasteless.

The 170° F to 185° F temperature range recommended in many cookbooks produces overcooked meat. To assure that pork is juicy, tender and flavorful, cook pork to an internal temperature of 160° F; and it is all right if the center is slightly pink.

Besides being lean and wholesome, today's pork is an excellent source of protein, iron, zinc and several B vitamins including thiamin and niacin.

Cooking tips

For centuries people have gone to great lengths to make pork moist and palatable. In Hawaii they cook pork in underground pits, wrapped in banana leaves, to steam the meat and lock in the juices.

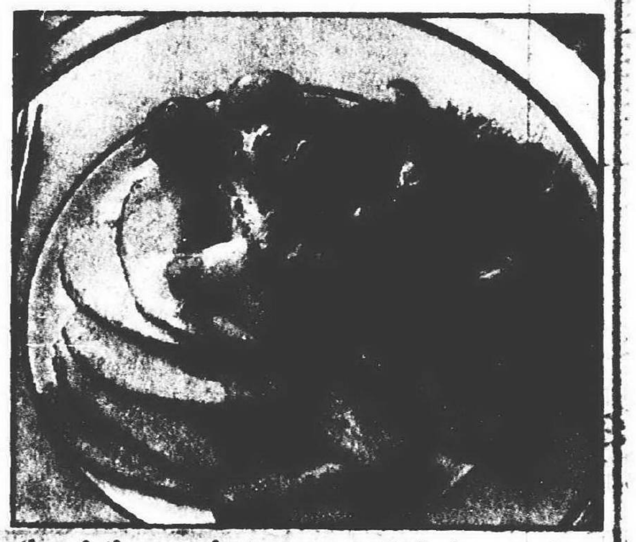
In Latin America they serve a dish called carnitas. Fresh pork is baked for hours, [illegible] in pork fat (lard) until the outside is crispy and the inside is tender.

Today we don't have to go to such extremes to enjoy delicious pork.

Most pork is sent to market between six and nine months, producing a leaner, more tender meat. In addition, pork manufacturers are taking the idea of the self-basting turkey and applying it to pork. Now you can buy self-basting and pre-marinated pork loins and tenderloins that require little preparation, making it easy to prepare pork that's fool proof.

To roast pork, low, constant temperatures are best. Pork should not be seared like beef at a high temperature before cooking because searing removes the moisture from pork and makes the meat less tender.

[illegible]



Use dry-heat methods (broil, roast, grill, smoke) for tender cuts like loin chops, roasts and tenderloins. Use moist-heat methods (sauté, braise, stir-fry, pan fry) for economical cuts from the shoulder and leg like strips, cubes and cutlets.

Herbs that complement the flavor of pork include sage, sweet marjoram, rosemary, thyme and chives.

Look for pork that is pale pink with a small amount of marbling and white (not yellow) fat. The darker pink the flesh, the older the animal.

Steve MacWilliams of Clarkston makes a wonderful pork loin on the grill. His family particularly enjoys the healthy and tasty meal when the weather turns cold. Even in the winter he'll shovel a path to his Weber and grill away. (We've included Steve's recipe, called Scarborough Fair Pork Roast, inside today's Taste section.)

With pork, the tried-but-true saying that everything but the pig's squeal can be used is accurate indeed. Though pigs are bred primarily for their meat and fat, the trimmings and lesser cuts are used for sausage, the bristles for brushes, the hair for furniture and the skin for leather.

Pork rinds, a favorite snack of former President George Bush, are also made from fried pig skins. Popular in the South, it's an acquired taste and very high in fat.

Pork that is used to make ham, bacon, sausage, hot dogs and luncheon meats, delivers more fat and salt than the fresh product. These processed foods can be made from finely ground pork and other ingredients like sodium nitrate, seasonings and spices. Some products also contain cereal extenders, nonfat dried milk, corn syrup or soy protein. Even though these products may seem to be inexpensive, the cost per ounce of protein usually is no bargain.

In addition, you get all the other additives and fillers, which makes these products not nearly as nutrient dense as fresh meat. Choose these foods less frequently as part of a good diet.

Safety first

Safe storage of pork is the same as with any other potentially hazardous food. Check the date on the label in the store to be sure it is still fresh.

Put it into the refrigerator or freezer when you get it home. As always, wash your hands after handling raw meat. Once cooked, hold the pork hot and refrigerate the leftovers promptly.

Fresh pork that will be used within six hours of purchase may be left in its store packaging and stored in the refrigerator. Otherwise, remove the packaging and store loosely wrapped with waxed paper in the coldest part of the refrigerator for up to two days.

Wrapped airtight, pork can be frozen for three to six months, with the larger cuts having longer storage capabilities than ground meat or chops.

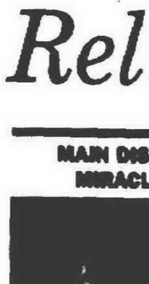
Relish these Cornish hens with ratatouille

MAIN DISH MIRACLE



MURIEL WAGNER

Cornish hens are a fancy name for small chickens, but they do add pizzazz to a family meal or company dinner.

Ratatouille is a cooked vegetable relish that uses this season's vegetable bounty. It can be prepared ahead or even frozen so that you can be a relaxed hostess.

I like to serve this entree with quick-cooking barley with chopped green onions, flat-leaf parsley and sliced water chestnuts. Remember to choose eggplants with a fresh green cap and no bruises.

This dish is what I call a "Nutrition Do-Good" recipe. You do good nutrition by serving vegetables in a way that even "non-vegetarian" eaters will enjoy.

ROCK CORNISH HENS WITH RATATOUILLE

3 Rock Cornish hens, defrosted
Fresh ground pepper
1 tablespoon olive oil
6 tablespoons Parmesan cheese

Ratatouille:

1 medium eggplant (about 1 pound)
1 medium zucchini, sliced
1 small summer squash, sliced
1 green bell pepper
1 red bell pepper
1 medium onion
8 plum tomatoes
2 tablespoons fresh basil leaves (or 2 teaspoons dried)
1 tablespoon fresh oregano (or 1 teaspoon dried)
3 sprigs fresh parsley
2 tablespoons drained capers
1 tablespoon olive oil
Fresh ground pepper to taste

For the ratatouille, wash and pat dry all vegetables. Cut eggplant and squash into 1-inch cubes, leaving peel on. Cut peppers into 1-inch squares. Stem, quarter and seed tomatoes. Slice onion thin. Chop fresh herbs. Add remaining ingredients.

Heat oil in a non-stick skillet. Mix all ingredients in cooking pot to distribute seasonings. Cover and cook over low heat until vegetables are softened (about 30 minutes). Drain well before adding to hens.

For hens, remove giblets and skin from hens and cut in half lengthwise. [illegible] and pat dry. Sprinkle with pepper. Heat oil in a nonstick skillet. [illegible] oil over medium-high heat. Remove from pan and drain.

Spread half of ratatouille on the bottom of a shallow [illegible]. Arrange [illegible] ratatouille [illegible]

Bake, covered, at 400° F for 30-35 minutes or until an instant-read thermometer reads 170° F when inserted in the thigh. Sprinkle with cheese and brown under broiler. Serve with a favorite pasta or a quick-cooking barley sprinkled with chopped parsley. Serves six.

hubbards, kabourchas, sweet potatoes, buttons and others. Their colors are enormously diverse including red, pink, orange, yellow, white, gray, blue, dark green to mostly black.

Winter squashes can be smooth, warty, round, ribbed, pear and torpedo shaped. Sizes range from petit two pounders to extra large 50 pounders. Winter squashes have dense, dry flesh that is ideally suited for culinary uses. They also have strong distinct flavors that can stand up to a knife and fork on its own.

Pumpkins

A rounded shape and yellow-to-orange color characterize pumpkins. Many start off in hues of green and shade into orange toward the end of the growing season. As with most horticulture categories, pumpkins come in a wide variety of shapes and sizes ranging from a few ounces to 1,000 pounds.

Ornamentals and gourds

These include the inedible, which are small and essentially pear shaped. Some are smooth, some wart-like. They also range in color: cream, yellow green and orange are most commonly found in combinations of colors. Some members of certain sects of gourds in this classification can be eaten but usually are not wonderfully tasting.

When buying squash, look for a dry, uniformly hard surface free of soft spots and bruises.

Despite the tough exterior (which preserves them during lengthy storage), winter squash needs careful handling. Winter squash stores well for at least one month (and up to a year) in a cool, dark place.

Cut squash should be refrigerated and cooked within one week; cooked squash can be frozen for up to two months.

Winter squashes also lend themselves to creamed vegetable soups, and, like pumpkin, the pureed version can be combined with cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves to make squash pie.

Most recipes using these varieties call for cutting the squash in half. Position the squash on a cutting board, stem end facing you. Place the blade of a heavy chef's knife horizontally along the length of the squash. With a hammer or mallet, repeatedly hit the back of the blade near the handle to drive it into the squash until it breaks in half.

Place the larger varieties (Hubbard and Turk's Turban) on newspaper and use a sharp cleaver to split the hard rind open. Once you have a slit cut, bang on a hard surface and pull apart. Pieces are easier to peel.

With a spoon, scoop out the seeds and strings and discard, or set aside if you plan to roast the seeds.

To cook winter squash, place unpeeled pieces cut sides down on a shallow baking dish and bake in a 350° F oven for 30 minutes or longer. When tender, remove from the oven and allow the pieces to cool.

Spoon out the soft flesh and mash with a fork or process in a blender or food processor. Peeled pieces can be cut into cubes and boiled until tender. Use with any recipe calling for cooked mashed or pureed squash.

Small acorn squash and spaghetti squash can be pierced in several places with a long-tined fork or metal skewer and baked whole. Piercing prevents the shell from bursting during cooking. Place the squash on a baking dish and bake for 1 1/2 to 2 hours at 325° F.

Take yourself on a culinary fall adventure past the pumpkin patch and try some of the vast variety of fall or winter squash on your cool evening menus!

Parsley, sage, rosemary and thyme flavor roast

These recipes offer up pork flavored with herbs named in the Simon & Garfunkel's song "Scarborough Fair," then ways to use the leftovers for a second recipe.

See related story on Taste front.

SCARBOROUGH FAIR PORK ROAST

Recipe courtesy of Steve MacWilliams of Clarkston.

1 pork loin about 7 to 8 pounds

Rub ingredients:

1 tablespoon parsley
1 tablespoon sage
1 tablespoon rosemary
1 tablespoon thyme
1 tablespoon dehydrated garlic
1 teaspoon kosher (or coarse) salt
1 teaspoon black pepper

Mixing the rub: Mix the rub ingredients thoroughly. Then with clean hands, crush the spices by working them between thumb and forefingers.

Cutting the meat: First remove any excess fat. Then, carefully make two slices lengthwise through the meat that go 3/4ths of the way through the roast. (This is done so that you can open the meat up, season it and close it back for roasting.)

Assembling and grilling: Open each section of the roast, one at a time, and spread rub mixture inside. Then tie the roast shut, in four or five places, with cotton string. Season the outside of the roast with the rub.

Fold a piece of heavy-duty aluminum foil so that it is at least doubled in thickness and fits the shape of your roast. Heat your grill (or oven) to a medium temperature of about 350-375° F and place the roast, on the aluminum foil on the grill. Cover and cook for about 30 to 40 minutes, until a meat thermometer reads 155° F when inserted in the center of the roast. If you are cooking this in your oven, place it in a shallow roasting pan, uncovered.

Remove from grill and let sit for another 10 minutes. The roast should continue to cook and reach 160° F before serving.

EGGPLANT AND PORK LASAGNA

1 medium-size eggplant
6 ounces cooked pork (preferably from the loin or tenderloin)
1 green pepper, chopped
4 cups chopped and drained tomatoes (Romas work best)
1 medium onion, chopped
1 tablespoon Italian seasoning
1 tablespoon basil
3 ounce package goat cheese
4 ounces Parmesan cheese

Heat oven to 325° F. Slice eggplant lengthwise, in pieces about 1/4-inch thick.

Spray a cookie sheet with cooking oil and put eggplant slices on sheet.

Spray eggplant slices with the oil and bake for about 1/2 hour, making sure to watch so that they dry out but don't burn.

Meanwhile, spray a sauté pan with cooking oil and sauté onions and green pepper until onions are translucent. Add tomatoes, Italian seasoning and basil. Cook over medium-high heat, stirring often, until most of the liquid is evaporated and the mixture is quite thick.

To assemble, increase oven temperature to 375° F. Put a layer of eggplant slices on the bottom of a 10-by-13-inch casserole dish. Next add a layer of tomato mixture, then crumble goat cheese on top and finish with a layer of Parmesan cheese. Repeat until all ingredients are used up. Bake for about 30 minutes, until top is crispy but not burnt. Let sit for 10 minutes before serving. Serves eight.

Pork: That other white meat can be fixed in various ways

October is National Pork month. With brisker temperatures October also is a good time to cook and serve roasts or chops, which may be "comfort foods" for your family.

Here are three recipes for pork from the Smithfield Packing Co. featuring Smithfield Lean Generation Pork.

BONELESS CENTER LOIN CHOPS WITH BALSAMIC VINEGAR

1 1/2 inch boneless center loin pork chops (Smithfield sells "America's Cut")
1 1/2 teaspoons lemon pepper
1/2 teaspoon vegetable oil
2 tablespoons chicken broth
3 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
2 teaspoons butter

Pat chops dry. Coat with lemon pepper. Heat oil in heavy skillet over medium-high heat. Add chops; brown on first side about 10 minutes; turn and cook about 10 minutes more. Remove chops from pan and keep warm. Add broth and vinegar to skillet; cook, stirring until syrupy (about 1-2 minutes). Stir in butter; blend well. Spoon sauce over chops. Serve immediately. Servings: 2.

MAPLE-MUSTARD GLAZED PORK ROAST

2-pound boneless loin pork roast
2/3 maple syrup
3 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons soy sauce
Salt and pepper to taste

Stir together maple syrup, mustard, vinegar, soy sauce, salt and pepper. Spread evenly over pork roast and place in shallow pan. Roast pork in a 350° F oven until internal temperature, measured with a meat thermometer, reaches 150° F or about 50 minutes to 1 1/4 hours. Remove roast from oven and let rest 10 minutes before slicing to serve. Servings: 6.

SESAME PORK APPETIZERS

1 1/2 pounds pork tenderloin
1/2 cup dry sherry
1/3 cup soy sauce
1/2 cup honey
1/2 cup sesame seeds
Spinach leaves
Dipping sauce:
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon dry sherry
1 clove garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon, grated ginger
1 green onion, finely chopped

In a glass dish large enough to hold the tenderloin, combine the sherry and soy sauce. Add the pork. Let marinate, 1-2 hours, turning several times. Remove the tenderloin. Roll the pork in the honey, then in sesame seeds. Place the tenderloin in a roast pan, roast at 350° F for 20 minutes, or until meat thermometer registers 155° F. Let stand five minutes, then slice thin diagonally.

Combine dipping sauce ingredients. Place in a bowl in the center of a serving platter. Surround the bowl with spinach leaves. Arrange pork slices on top. Servings: 6.

Cider house rules

BY NICOLE STAFFORD
STAFF WRITER
nstafford@oe.homecomm.net

The thought of tart apple cider and greasy, warm, cinnamon-laced doughnuts may beckon an early morning rise and Sunday sojourn to the local cider mill.

But autumn's sweet nectar has other calls.

It's just that most Michiganders are so intent on abiding tradition – call it the cider-doughnut paradigm. So they forget it's an ingredient for cooking, says Scott Ryan, executive chef at Paint Creek Cider Mill restaurant in Goodison near Rochester Hills.

"When most people think of cider, they think of cider and doughnuts. It's tradition, so they don't ever think of playing with it."

Ryan can hardly think of anything else; for him, using cider in Paint Creek's cuisine, is a job responsibility. "That's the challenge here at the restaurant. People come here and expect to see cider right off the top."

■ Fresh apple cider only lasts about one week before bacteria enters into play.

Cooking with cider may be a requirement for Ryan, but it's not an onus. Cider's taste characteristics – crisp, sweet, sharp and tart – make for a well-balanced cooking ingredient. "It's not overwhelming, but you can taste the apple," Ryan says, tending a sauce pan of Cider Whiskey Sauce. "I like the sweet-tart flavor, and the more you reduce it the more tart it gets."

And, reduction, the basis for Ryan's whiskey dessert sauce and Peppered Cider Glaze, is a simple, one-pan process. Bring the cider to a boil, then simmer until the desired consistency is reached.

Ryan cooks about two cups of cider to make one cup of cider glaze. On the other hand, a gallon of cider cooked down to one cup yields a stiff, caramel-like substance.

True, cider-by-the-gallon is typically bought for ready consumption, but it's rare to see an empty jug in the refrigerator before a week's time.

Fresh apple cider only lasts about one week before bacteria enters into play. "So why not make a reduction, rather than drink some and waste the rest?" Ryan says, adding there are countless ways to incorporate such a reduction.

His suggestions: put a shot in hot tea, infuse a cheesecake with apple by including a few spoonfuls in your batter; or add a cup to beef stock for a more complex soup base.

Can't use up all your cider reduction, either? Freeze it for future use. It won't crystallize for two to three months, says Ryan.

When purchasing cider, seek out the freshest you can find. Fresh cider has "a crisp, clean apple flavor" and a punch that apple juice lacks, says Ryan. And, if you're a real cider connoisseur, sample it from different mills. Like with wine, a variety of factors influence cider, from pasteurization to the particular batch of apples in the pot.

Apple cider can create sweet sauces, glaze

CIDER WHISKEY SAUCE

- 2 cups Apple cider
- 2 cups brown sugar
- 2 tablespoons whiskey
- 2 cups heavy cream

Combine in sauce pan and bring to a boil. Simmer until reduced, about minutes. Serve over bread pudding or ice cream.

PEPPERED CIDER GLAZE

- 2 cups Apple Cider
- 1 teaspoon Ground Black Pepper

Bring cider to a boil then simmer until reduced, about 15-20 minutes. Add pepper and stir. Serve over grilled or smoked pork chops. Or, try as glaze for pheasant.

HOME BREW HARD CIDER

- 5 Gallons Apple Cider (Fresh)
- 3 lbs. Brown Sugar
- 3 lbs. Honey
- 2 Packages Champagne Yeast

Strain 3 gallons of cider into a 5-gallon carboy. Strain 1/2 gallon into a pot and add sugar and honey. Heat enough to allow the sugar and honey to dissolve thoroughly. Pour mixture into the carboy and fill to the neck with remaining cool cider. Add yeast packages and affix airlock to carboy. Fermentation will take three weeks at 65 degrees F. After fermentation stops, bottle and prime with corn sugar.

MEDICAL BRIEFS

Breast care awareness

While there has been a marked improvement in mammography rates in the United States and a significant annual decline in breast cancer death, there are still many women who do not take advantage of the early detection methods available to them. St. Mary Mercy Hospital in Livonia offers a community breast health clinic on Wednesday, Oct. 18 from 3:30-8 p.m. in the Marian Women's Center. The clinic includes a complete breast exam by a physician, with instruction on self-breast examination. Additionally, if indicated, mammography services are available on site.

Pre-registration is required. Please call the Marian Women's Center at (734) 655-1100 or (800) 494-1615 for out-of-area callers to schedule an appointment. The Marian Women's Center is near the south entrance off Levan. For directions or additional information, please visit the hospital Web site: www. stmarymercy. org

Breast health expo

Saint Joseph Mercy Health System will present the eighth annual Southeast Michigan Breast Health Expo 6-9 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 11, at the Marriott at Eagle Crest, 1275 S. Huron St., just south of I-94 in Ypsilanti.

Nancy Brinker, founder of the Susan G. Komen breast Cancer Foundation and Race for the Cure, will be the main speaker. Nancy lost her sister, Susan, to breast cancer in 1980.

Attendees will have the opportunity to talk with leading health-care experts over a variety of specialties. SJMHS has one of the largest cancer care centers in Michigan and is one of only 50 hospitals designated and funded by the National Cancer Institute to participate in the latest cancer treatment and prevention trials.

In addition to expert advice and health information, attendees will also receive a unique gift to help them with breast exams. There is no cost for the Expo but attendance is limited. Register by calling the Saint Joseph Mercy HealthLine at (800) 231-2211.

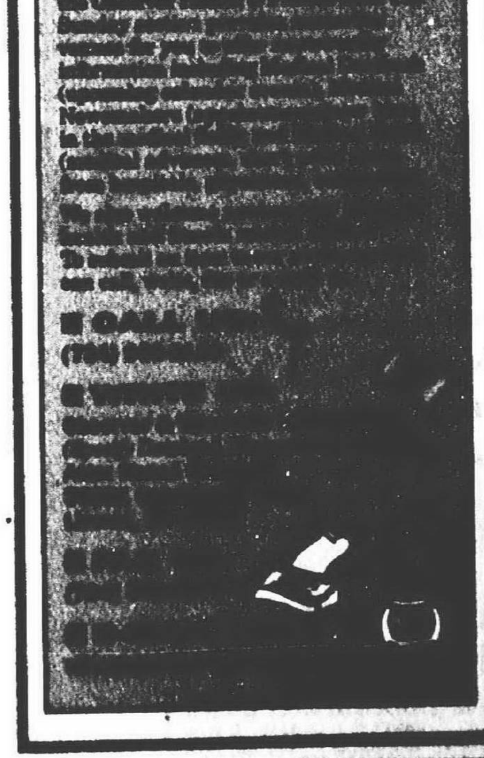
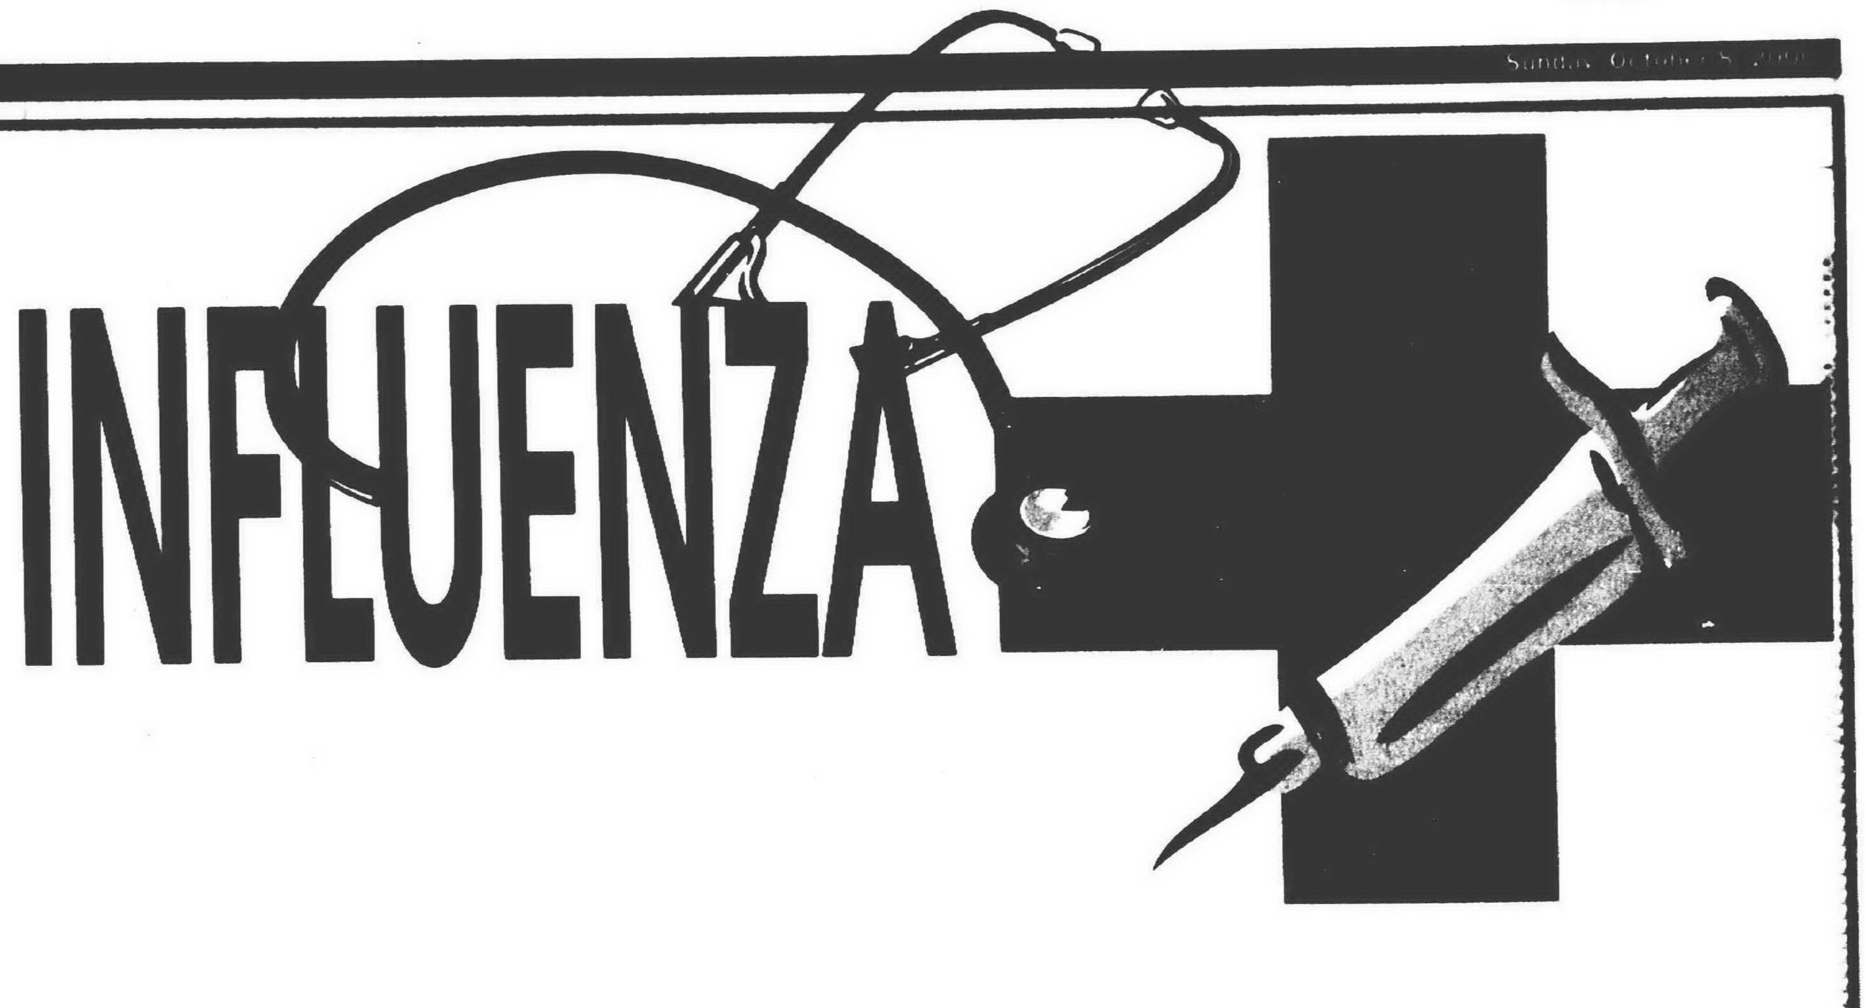
The seminar will be at 7:30 p.m. Friday, Oct. 13, at Kresge Hall, Madonna University, 3660 Schoolcraft, Livonia. Walk-in registration begins at 7 p.m.

Registered nurses can earn 1.8 continuing education contact hours for attending. The cost is free to registered F.A.E. members; $10 for F.A.E. members seeking CEUs; $15 for non-F.A.E. members; free for students. Pre-registration is preferred if seeking CEUs. Call (734) 420-3124.

Food Anaphylaxis is not a support group. F.A.E. is a non-profit organization serving professionals and families dealing with food-induced anaphylaxis.





How are the virus strains for influenza shots selected?

Influenza vaccine contains three different inactivated (killed) influenza virus strains. Since influenza viruses are continuously changing, the vaccine virus strains must be updated each year.

The World Health Organization (WHO) makes recommendations for the composition of the influenza vaccines for the upcoming influenza seasons for the Northern and Southern Hemispheres. Each January through March, the U.S. Public Health Service, by way of the Vaccine and Related Biological Products Advisory Committee of the Food and Drug Administration, begins the selection of influenza virus strains that will be included in the United States influenza vaccine for the upcoming fall.

Each year, two influenza type A virus strains and one type B virus strain are chosen for [illegible]

Public health officials announced that influenza vaccine supplies will be adequate this year; however a substantial amount of the vaccine will reach providers later than usual.

According the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the degree of delay for individual providers will vary, depending on manufacturer, distributor and when the vaccine was ordered.

The Food and Drug Administration estimates that 66 million doses will be available from manufacturers through normal production plus nine million doses to be guaranteed by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for a total of 75 million doses.

During last year's flu season in the United States, an estimated 74 million doses were distributed to providers from the 80-85 million doses produced.

"There is not a reason to panic," said Kay Renny, manager of community programs for Visiting Nurse Association of Southeast Michigan, which is gearing up for its ninth annual Flu-Busters Immunization Program. "There is adequate vaccine, and those most at risk should get their shots first."

The VNA's Flu-Busters Immunization program will sponsor public clinics after Nov. 1 at Kroger stores and both CVS and F & M drugstores. However, it will offer immunizations in senior centers and senior housing during the last two weeks of October. For a listing of sites, call 1 (800) 296-8660 or visit www.VNA.org and click on "Flu."

Manufacturers

In the United States, there are four private sector manufacturers licensed to distribute the influenza vaccine. The CDC cited two reasons for the delay in receiving influenza vaccine: First, some manufacturers reported difficulty in growing one of the three influenza virus components – influenza A/Panama – used to make this year's vaccine. Secondly, two of the manufacturers experienced manufacturing problems.

In a recent press release, the CDC stated: "Although the vaccine supply this year should be sufficient to meet the usual demand, the situation remains fluid and some questions about supply and demand will remain unanswered until much later into the flu season."

Dr. Nabil Khalidi, associate professor in the University of Michigan's College of Pharmacy, said the situation is changing day after day but improving overall. The University of Michigan Health System will receive its shipment in November.

"It's likely we'll get everything but not in one shipment," he said.

Vaccination priority

In previous flu seasons, only about half of the 70-76 million persons the CDC estimates are at high risk for complication from flu received the vaccine. The CDC defines the high-risk population as persons aged 65 and older, persons less than 65 with high-risk medical conditions, and pregnant women. Health-care workers also should be among the first to be vaccinated to prevent the potential spread to vulnerable persons.

Oakwood Healthcare System, which ordered their vaccine in January, is offering flu and pneumonia shots for seniors at targeted sites, including senior apartment complexes, churches and F & M stores. At this point, the hospital wants to concentrate on seniors and health-care workers, said Lisa Rutledge of the hospital's Community Health Department.

"People under 65 who think they are high risk should talk with their primary care provider. I don't want to get rid of all of our vaccine for healthy walk-ins," she said.

At other hospitals, public vaccinations clinics will be scheduled later in the year as the availability of vaccine is assured. Garden City Hospital will schedule flu shots beginning Nov. 13, and St. Mary Mercy Hospital in Livonia will start their program early in November.

People who receive flu shots in November should have adequate immunity when the flu hits the United States, typically in December. "From the time you get the shot, it takes about two weeks for full immunity," said Dr. David Katz, infectious disease specialist at the Saint Joseph Mercy Health System.

Infectious disease specialist explains influenza

By David Katz, MD
Staff Writer

Influenza epidemics occur almost yearly during the winter months and are responsible for approximately 20,000 deaths per year just in the United States.

However, what most people call "flu" are actually minor viral illnesses of the intestinal or upper respiratory tract, not influenza.

True influenza is an acute illness involving the lower respiratory tract. It is caused by one of two species of influenza virus, influenza A or influenza B. Influenza A is generally the more virulent organism, causing a more serious illness. Typically, the infection is transmitted by secretions (sneezing, coughing, etc) that contain the virus.

Unlike many other viral infections, illness from the influenza viruses does not cause permanent immunity. A person is at risk of acquiring the disease each year. This is particularly true for influenza A, which has the unique capability of changing the structure of its outer coating, so that our immune system does not recognize it and cannot defend against it from year to year. A similar situation exists with influenza B but does not occur so frequently or so completely as with influenza A.

The following are some frequently asked questions about influenza:

What are influenza's symptoms?

Typically – especially with Influenza A – the illness comes on very abruptly. Patients can identify the exact moment when they suddenly felt as if they had been run over by a truck.

Initial symptoms include a sudden sense of profound weakness, chills, lightheadedness and muscle aches. Over the next several days, a high fever develops along with pain deep in the throat and a harsh, painful hacking cough. These symptoms persist for three to five days. In healthy people, the illness is generally self-limited with complete recovery occurring in 10-21 days.

What is not typical of influenza are gastrointestinal complaints, or symptoms such as nasal congestion, [illegible] etc.

If there is any question as to the diagnosis, a culture from the back of the nose and throat will generally grow the virus in one to two days, identifying the cause of the patient's illness.

Are there complications?

Secondary complications can occur, such as bacterial pneumonia, probably the primary cause of death during an influenza outbreak. The good news is that antibiotics can be used to treat bacterial pneumonia. However, the bad news is that the pneumonia is usually severe because of the weakened condition of the patient from the influenza itself.

A complication in children is Reye's Syndrome, a disease that affects the brain and liver. It is associated with aspirin ingestion; thus, children should not be treated with aspirin for their influenza.

Are flu shots really effective?

The most important aspect of managing influenza is prevention, and immunization is the key. Since the influenza virus can change its outer structure every year, thus defeating an individual's immune system, it is necessary to receive a flu shot every year made from the strain expected to cause illness that year.

Some people claim that flu shots are not effective. This is absolutely false.

Many studies have demonstrated an effective rate of 85-95 percent. Others believe the immunization causes a mild case of influenza and are hesitant to receive the shot. Again, this is absolutely false.

The immunization is made up of particles derived from the virus. It is not a whole live virus; thus, there is no possible way to acquire influenza from the immunization.

On rare occasions some patients will have a mild reaction to the foreign material, but this is indeed mild with some aching, slight fever and generally not feeling well for perhaps 24 hours. The only contra-indication is in those patients who are allergic to eggs, as the virus is grown in eggs as part of the manufacturing process.

Who should get a flu shot?

Although flu shots are indicated for all people of any age, immunization is strongly recommended for people over the age of 50; residents in long-term care facilities; individuals with serious long-term health problems such as heart, lung or kidney disease; people with weakened immune systems; women in the third trimester of pregnancy; and medical personnel.

Because immunity from the vaccination is not permanent, the best time to receive the immunization is in October so that immunity will last through the flu season, which generally extends until about March. A final point to remember is that the flu shot will only protect against illness caused by influenza A and B. It will not prevent common colds, bronchitis, sinus infections, etc.

U-M team finds evidence of chemistry abnormalities in bipolar disorder

People with bipolar disorder have an average of 30 percent more of an important class of signal-sending brain cells, according to new evidence being published by University of Michigan researchers.

The finding, in the American Journal of Psychiatry, solidifies the idea that the disorder has unavoidable biological and genetic roots. It may explain why it runs in families.

The discovery is the first neurochemical difference to be found between asymptomatic bipolar and non-bipolar people. It could help the understanding and treatment of a disease that affects as much as 1.5 percent of the population. In the past, bipolar disorder has been known as "manic depression."

"To put it simply, these patients' brains are wired differently, in a way that we might expect to predispose them to bouts of mania and depression," said Dr. Jon-Kar Zubieta, assistant professor of psychiatry and radiology at the U-M Health System.

Symptoms

Bipolar disorder is marked by wild, cyclical mood swings, which typically begin in a person's late teens or twenties and strike men and women with equal frequency. Its milder, type II form causes depression alternating with hyperactivity.The more severe type I disorder produces frenzied, even psychotic episodes that may send the patient to the hospital, followed by deep, crippling depressions.

Current treatment uses a mix of mood-stabilizing, anti-psychotic and antidepressant drugs; however, patients and physicians often struggle to strike the right combination.

Zubieta and his colleagues made the discovery in 16 patents with type I bipolar disorder using a brain imaging technique called positron emission tomography, or PET. The scans let them see the density of cells that release the brain chemicals dopamine, serotonin and norepinephrine.

These monoamines, as the chemicals are called, send signals between brain cells, or neurons. They're involved in mood regulation, stress responses, pleasure, reward, and cognitive functions like concentration, attention, and executive functions. Scientists have hypothesized their role in bipolar disorder for decades, but have never proven it.

Difference in cells

The new U-M result points to a clear difference in the density of monoamine-releasing cells in the brains of bipolar people even when they are not having symptoms. Zeroing the PET scanner in on areas of the brain where monoamine-releasing cells are concentrated, the team looked for the faint signal of a weakly radioactive tracer, DTBZ, which they had injected into the bloodstream of the 16 participants and 16 people without bipolar disorder.

By looking at the intensity of the DTBZ signal in all the subjects' brains, the U-M team found that bipolar patients averaged 31 percent more binding sites in the region known as the thalamus, and 28 percent more in the ventral brain stem. In the thalamus, bipolar women actually had levels nearing those of healthy comparison subjects, but bipolar men had a 42 percent higher binding rate, suggesting that there may be specific biological causes for the clinical differences in the course of the illness in men and women.

Functional tests

Adding in the results of functional tests, they found that the more monoamine cells patients had, the lower their scores on tests of executive function and verbal learning. This finding confirms earlier results from U-M research and suggests that the altered brain chemistry due to the excess monoamine cells may directly impact the patients' cognitive and social function.

The study was carefully designed to produce consistent results. It compared brain scans and neuropsychological test results from bipolar I patients who were using medications to control their symptoms and healthy subjects matched the bipolar subjects by age, sex, ethnicity, handedness and other factors. Careful physical and psychiatric exams ruled out differences caused by other variables.

Research

Now, Zubieta and his colleagues hope their initial finding will lead to further research on brain chemistry and bipolar disorder. Specifically, more study is needed to examine which kinds of monoamine cells are involved. Zubieta especially suspects those that produce serotonin and norepinephrine. Those findings would help define specific subtypes of bipolor disorder and aid development of medications and drug combinations that target a specific patient's personal brain chemistry to alleviate symptoms.

Genetic research, too, will be needed to find out why bipolar brains grow more than the usual allotment of such cells. Bipolar disorder I has a strong but still unknown tie to DNA; studies of identical twins show that if one twin has it, the other has an 80 percent change of having it.

A combination of both genetic research and neuroimaging studies would help define both the genetic components of this illness and their relationship with the expression of specific brain chemical markers in specific patients.

The U-M is launching a new trial that will enroll patients who have just been diagnosed with bipolar disorder, and those with a family history of the disease that puts them at higher risk.

"The reality is that we still have only sketches of what is going on in these brains, what the basic changes are, and how they are related to the course of illness," said Zubieta. "We need to look further."

CHRONIC FATIGUE SYNDROME

You may have heard of chronic fatigue syndrome. Over the last 2 years it has received attention because an epidemic of the condition occurred in 1998 in Australia.

However, the characteristics of chronic fatigue syndrome have been with us for years. What the medical community realizes now is that the conditions, fibromyalgia and myofascial syndrome, often merge with what we now identify as chronic fatigue syndrome.

In each of these medical problems the person experiences pain throughout the body, and present almost all the time. However, one can feel reasonably well and undertake work and recreation without undue fatigue for periods lasting for hours to several days.

In all three conditions, tender points, disrupted and unrefreshing sleep, sore throat, headaches and deeper transient numbness in the arms or legs may occur.

In fibromyalgia, tender points dominate, in myofascial pain, the primary symptom is aching muscle groups, and in chronic fatigue syndrome, profound tiredness is the most distressing feature.

Neither laboratory tests nor x-rays can distinguish these three conditions. It is the individuals experience that causes physicians to make one diagnosis over another. However, all three are treated in the same manner, a minimum of medication and a continual effort on the individuals part to increase exercise capability. To date, warming up the muscles, particularly in the morning before the stress of the day begins, seems the best approach.

Don't trust Internet polls regarding Presidential race status

PC MIKE

MIKE WENDLAND

In the wake of the first Presidential debate last week, all the big Internet sites have been running online polls, asking the public who won the 90-minute-long talk-a-thon.

Don't believe any of the supposed results.

Both the Gore and Bush camps are well wired and have been pounding online chat rooms and Web polls since the debate began Tuesday night, trying to stack the bulletin board forums and influence the polls.

Real pollsters, people who carefully and scientifically compose and conduct public opinion polls, took the unusual step last week of exposing online polls for the shams for which they are.

Some let people vote more than once and can easily be manipulated. Others pose leading questions, guaranteeing certain results. But the biggest flaw is that all of them survey only the online population, which is hardly representative of the country.

Thus, because online polls aren't random, they aren't "conducted" at all. The person voting has to actively seek the poll out to respond. The only thing online polls reflect is the motivation of people

Broadband in your car

The biggest drawback to wireless Internet computing in cars is the agonizingly slow connection speeds to the Net.

With current technology, the maximum wireless speed is 9,600 bits per second, way slower than most dial-up computer modems. But that's about to change.

By the end of next year, in-vehicle Internet speeds are expected to speed up to 64,000 bits per second, about that of an ISDN line. Within three years, wireless speeds should reach broadband rates. Once that kind of connectivity is in place, in-vehicle computing is expected to boom.

Experts predict consumers will be able to download movies to screens in the car and global positioning, live traffic and constant Internet connections will be routine for drivers. The biggest use for the connected car will be entertainment, with Net-delivered music and information.

Some six thousand auto execs will meet in Detroit Oct. 16-18 to talk about the connected car at a conference and exhibition. You'd expect CEOs from Ford and General Motors to be there... and they will... but, as proof of how much technology is driving the auto industry these days, so will CEO's from Sun Microsystems, Hewlett-Packard, Sega Enterprises and AT&T.

Net illiteracy

Here's the quote of the Week: "The Internet will soon be so pervasive that not having access to the technology or not knowing how to use it will be the equivalent of not knowing how to read or write." It comes from Michael Fleisher, CEO of the Gartner Group.

The online marketing firm released a study that says as many as 50 million U.S. adults are in danger of becoming functionally 'illiterate" in coming years because they lack knowledge of or access to the Internet.

The report estimates that 75 percent of U.S. households would be linked to the Internet by 2005, up from 50 percent today

Digital signatures legal

The only problem with digital signatures – legal as of the first of the month on documents transmitted over the Internet – is that a lot of people don't have a clue what they are.

A survey from Office.com showed that small- and medium-sized companies were confused as to just what a digital signature really is. Good reason, too.

The new Digital Signatures Bill doesn't set a standard, it only makes secure signatures legal. So, it could be a thumb print scanned into a machine, a retina scan, a "smart card" or even voice identification technology.

As it is being used today, it more typically involves cryptography, or a scrambled, coded series of numbers that is set by a software "key" on your computer and then "unlocked" by similar software on the recipients machine. See how complicated it is to explain?

That's why digital signatures are so confusing. What's needed is a standardized means of securing the signatures. Why? Because surveys show that 83 percent of the public is leery of doing business online because of security concerns.

What if I get the flu?

Finally, in the management of active disease, there are non-specific and specific measures that can be taken. Non-specific measures include rest to reduce the incidence of complications, adequate fluids to prevent dehydration and medications to keep the fever down and reduce the general aches and pains that the patient experiences.

If a person is not immunized and an epidemic appears in the community, two new medications – Zanamivir and Oseltamivir – have recently become available that show great promise in prevention if taken before infection occurs. They may also reduce the duration and severity of the illness.

These medications can only be obtained by prescription and require a physician first confirming the diagnosis.

Is it time to move your office?

WILLIAM DOYLE III

Many business owners are finding that their facilities no longer fit their organization's needs. Growth is the most frequent reason in today's market for this change, but there are other reasons as well.

In addition to the obvious costs of moving, there are hidden costs, such as diminished employee productivity before and during the move, customer notification and inconvenience, disruption to services such as phones and computer networks, new stationery, business cards, new signs.

To avoid these, there are three options: acquire existing space, build new space, or make better use of the space you have now .

The first two solutions depend on your current location. Can you acquire space or land to build on? Can you afford land? Can you expand quickly? If the potential space is not contiguous to your existing facility, can you operate "split"?

Many companies have tried to "shoehorn" functions into existing spaces, placing new hires in conference rooms, only to find that these spaces are sorely missed. Many organizations have looked instead to solutions that give individuals less space and actually improve productivity. Initiatives include more-efficient furniture, shared workstations and telecommuting. Often, these solutions come with a one-time cost, rather than continuing costs.

Each solution must be defined and costs estimated. Gather a team of people from inside and outside the organization to advise you. These usually include architectural, planning, real estate, legal, tax and financial specialists.

You may find that staying put is undesirable. In these cases, relocation will be the answer.

CPA William Doyle III is a partner specializing in real estate at Plante & Moran. He is managing partner of Plante & Moran's Auburn Hills office.

Homes set in quiet residential area

If you're looking for a small, secluded, quiet residential community, Clarita Commons may fit the bill.

Just 16 detached-site condominiums will be built off Clarita Street west of Middlebelt just south of Seven Mile in Livonia.

Value for price and all the amenities which make Livonia a great place to live are the big attractions.

"There's less expensive homes, more expensive homes but nowhere are you going to get more for your money," said Mary Magnusson, sales manager.

"We feel we offer the most standard features, the most home at the most cost effective price per square foot," said Mark Carroll, president of MC Construction.

"Livonia has fabulous city services, fabulous schools," he added. "We have shopping. It's just a great location. We're close to I-96 if you're commuting east or west, I-275 if north or south.

"This is a small sub with a real sense of privacy," Carroll said.

Four floor plans are offered.

Price ranges from $269,900 for a 2,200-square-foot colonial with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths to $294,900 for a story-and-a-half (Cape Cod) of 2,600 square feet with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

"Openness of the plans is probably the number one feature," Magnusson said. "For 2,600 square feet, I sense you feel it's larger than that."

"The colonial is real functional for a family with kids, the Cape functional for a family with older kids, (secondary) bedrooms upstairs with everything else on the first floor," Carroll said.

Prospective buyers enjoy all the features included at base price, Magnusson said.

Those include two-car garage with service door, basement, fireplace, first-floor laundry and separate tub and shower in the master suite.

They also include range and dishwasher in the kitchen, bay windows in the kitchen and master, wood or ceramic flooring in the foyer and half bath, carpeting throughout and a peninsula counter with breakfast bar or island in the kitchen.

Brick and vinyl siding are primary exterior materials.

"There's a lot of detail on the exterior – upgraded shingles and quoin corner are standard," Carroll said.

Birchwood: This colonial of 2,200 square feet at Clarita Commons contains four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths.

"When they look at the brochure, they like everything we include," Magnusson said of visitors.

The Birchwood, a colonial, features a two-story foyer, living room, dining room and family room with cathedral ceiling. The half bath is situated near the garage pedestrian entrance, laundry and kitchen/ nook.

The master with cathedral ceiling includes a double-sink vanity and walk-in closet. A second full bath services the other three upstairs bedrooms.

Base price is $289,900.

The Heatherwood, a Cape Cod, also showcases a two-story foyer and bridge upstairs overlooking the foyer and the great room with sloped ceiling.

A library with cathedral ceiling, master with sloped ceiling, walk-in closet and single-sink vanity and a large kitchen/ nook also are on the first floor.

Base price is $294,900.

Options include air conditioning ($3,000), jet tub ($1,800) and skylights ($1,000 apiece).

Clarita Commons is serviced by city water, sewers and sidewalks. It's with the Livonia Public Schools boundaries.

The property tax rate is now $32.17 per $1,000 of state taxable value, half of sales price for new construction. That means the owners of a $300,000 home there would pay about $4,825 the first year.

The annual association fee to maintain a 10-foot-wide berm along Clarita and two cul-de-sac islands is projected at $200.

Homeowners are responsible for maintaining their own yards.

Some lots at base price are available. Four with premiums ranging from $15,000 to $17,500 include a daylight basement.

The sales office/ models at Clarita Commons, (248) 426-8200, are open noon to 5 p.m., closed Thursdays.

(NUI) – Building a new home is supposed to be one of life's most exciting events.

But people are often disenchanted by having to make technical decisions about things they don't understand.

One wrong move could potentially affect the quality and safety of your home and put your family's safety at risk in an unsafe environment.

So how can you be sure you make the right building decisions?

While there are many critical decisions to make when building a home, choosing the right contractor is also very important. By asking the right questions during the selection process and making sure the right methods and materials are used, you can prevent problems before they arise.

The APA (Engineered Wood Association), a nonprofit trade association representing mills that make about 75 percent of the structural wood panels made in North America, has developed guidelines to help you find quality wood materials and build a safe home.

In selecting the right builder or remodeler, ask:

- Is the contractor licensed, bonded and insured?
- Will the contractor specify the quality, brand and grade of materials in writing?
- Does the contractor project a professional image?
- Is the contractor recommended by the local Better Business Bureau?
- Is the contractor a Code Plus builder or remodeler? Code Plus is a brand from APA that says your floors, walls and roofs are built to high quality standards which are a step above building code requirements.

Code Plus floors, walls, and roofs are stronger, safer and provide a greater measure of security against high wind and seismic activity.

For more information on the program or for names of Code Plus builders and remodelers in your area, call (800) 838-9972 or visit www. codeplushome. com

Getting organized: A manufacturer has introduced a new way to organize you closets – and your life. The organizer uses infinitely adjustable shelves.

Closet-organization system adapts to just about any closet

In closets across America, bowing rods and sloping stacks of folded clothing create an organizational nightmare.

Consider the morning routine of getting dressed. It's something we do without a second thought. Perhaps in the back of our minds we consider the disarray of clothing, shoes and accessories, but taking action to organize the closet is something put off for another time.

The frustration often stems from how the closet is set up rather than its overflowing contents. Ninety-two percent of U.S. households utilize a standard closet system consisting of a rod, brackets and a single shelf.

Recently, Westerlund Products introduced a new system that can minimize the expense and hassle of installing traditional closet organization systems.

Despite more emphasis today on organization and taking control of clutter in our lives, closet systems have been limited to custom (expensive), laminate (bulky and difficult to install) and wire (easily bent and not overly attractive).

Until now, not a single new option has been introduced since the inception of closet organization some twenty years ago.

HomeScape Systems is a closet-storage and –organization system that allows consumers to create custom closet solutions without the usual hassles: no measuring or cutting, installs in minutes with just a Phillips screwdriver and adapts to your space.

Two innovations make this possible: a patented shelf design that expands or contracts to fit any closet space. And, its components, including rods, shelving and drawers, are made of recyclable thermoformed plastics.

Together, this creates a solution that is re-configurable whenever organizational needs may change.

With more than 600 million closets in the U.S., and 5 million added each year, according to the National Housewares Manufacturing Association, this system is ready to help frustrated closet owners get organized.

Well-built windows help save

You can choose from a myriad of window shapes and styles.

Used alone, or in combinations with standard-shaped windows and doors, decorative windows offer benefits beyond just beauty.

One way windows can help conserve energy is through their construction.

With the knowledge that double-pane window construction can double the R-value (the higher the R-value, the more efficient the window) the window and door industry began designing many decorative windows using triple-pane construction.

Another major advancement in window design is the "warm-edge" spacer system designed specifically for triple-pane window construction.

Triple-pane windows also can boost the advantages the window's individual components already provide. Triple glazing doubles the Low-E surface, it uses current standard window dimensions, it provides the added advantage of two hermetically sealed air spaces, and offers the capability of filling both cavities with gas.

Federal government awards 20 brownfield grants

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has awarded 20 brownfields grants totaling $5.6 million to communities and organizations in the upper Midwest.

Brownfields are abandoned or under-used properties where real or perceived contamination is an obstacle to redevelopment. There are thousands of these sites across the United States, ranging from abandoned gas stations to former railroad yards to neglected central city areas.

The grants were awarded in three categories, all overseen by EPA's Brownfields program: site assessment grants ($200,000), clean-up revolving loan fund grants ($500,000), and job training pilot grants ($200,000). Local work under the grants may begin this month, with the start of the Federal fiscal year.

■ The Oakland County grant included an additional $50,000 earmarked for greenspace preservation or enhancement projects.

Site assessment grants are typically used by communities and grantee organizations to pay for environmental and engineering studies, to confirm the existence or determine the true extent of contamination at a site. Oakland County received one of the 12 grants. Others were awarded to: a coalition of five south-Chicago suburbs, Ill.; Gary, Ind.; Allegan, Mich.; Frankfort, Mich.; Lansing, Mich.; Red Lake Band of Chippewa Indians, Beltrami County, Minn.; Akron, Ohio; Elyria, Ohio; Mansfield, Ohio; Oshkosh, Wis.; and Wausau, Wis.

The Oakland County grant included an additional $50,000 earmarked for greenspace preservation or enhancement projects.

Clean-up revolving loan fund grants are used by local governments and other stakeholders to set up a fund from which to issue low-interest or no-interest loans for cleanup of Brownfields sites.

Job training pilot grants are used by local governments, Tribes, and vocational skills organizations to train residents, impacted by Brownfields, for employment in environmental work.

Brief descriptions of all 20 new Brownfields grant projects are at: www. epa. gov/ brownfields

Nationally, 102 grants totaling more than $35 million were awarded this spring. Since 1993, EPA has awarded more than $157 million in Brownfields grants to more than 350 cities, counties, Tribes, states, non-profit organizations and educational institutions, leveraging more than $2 billion in investments and creating thousands of new jobs.

2,000-square-foot home lets you sit, think

The open country style of the Desert Wine (00-020) is refreshing to view. A covered wraparound porch provides an open area to sit and enjoy those beautiful sunsets or sunrises.

To extend this openness inside, numerous windows have been used across the face of the Desert Wine.

Inside the entry of this 2,036-square-foot home flows an open space wrapped around the kitchen. The entire open room consists of a vaulted living room, nook and a family room. A gas fireplace faces the formal living room. French doors open onto the covered porch off the vaulted nook.

The U-shaped kitchen has many amenities to make cooking a pleasant task.

The dishwasher has been raised for convenience in loading and unloading. A large Lazy Susan has been conveniently tucked into a corner adjacent to the cook top. A walk-in pantry adds to the features of this imaginative kitchen.

To separate the kitchen from a full bathroom on the left and a large sewing/ hobby/ utility room on the right, a pocket door has been used. A built-in ironing board plus an enormous counter makes this area ideal for the seamstress or hobbyist.

At the end of this hall area is the two-car garage with its extra workspace. An elongated 732-square-foot attic is over the garage and kitchen, with stairs located between the utility room and the living room.

Two bedrooms with a full bathroom form a V in the right front corner of this refreshing home. Each bedroom has a set of large windows that bathe the rooms in light. These rooms are directly off the family room, as is the bathroom.

In the right rear of the Desert Wine is the exquisite master suite. It is large and has a huge window looking out on the backyard. The most unique part of the master suite is the spaciously open bathroom. An oversized tub and shower have been provided, as well as a long, built-in vanity with his-and-her sinks.

The Desert Wine has decks, patios and a covered porch for plenty of outside enjoyment. If more living space is needed, an unfinished 1,989-square-foot basement is available.

For a study plan, including scaled floor plans, elevations, sections and an artist rendering, send $24.95 to Landmark Designs, 33127 Saginaw Road E., Cottage Grove, OR 97424.

Buyers broker useful

"Your agent may not always tell you the absolute, unvarnished truth, especially if it isn't in the seller's interest," says Richard Roll, president of American Homeowners Association.

Here are some of the biggest omissions:

■ "You can use other agents" Don't sign an exclusive contract until you're sure about the quality of service you're going to get.

■ "You are the only buyer biting on this house" If you are the only buyer involved, you'll be the last to know.

■ "This house has been empty a long time" A buyer's broker is free to disclose any home's defects or drawbacks, including stigmatized properties. Do your own research when you suspect a home has a sordid past.

■ "My fee is negotiable" Broker's fees are NOT set in stone. Brokers' fees typically run 6 percent of the final sale price. But nothing says you can't bargain for less, to bring your costs down.

■ "The seller can kick in closing costs"

Did you know that you can ask the seller to help pay for closing costs?

■ "I am talking to the seller"

Unless you using a buyer broker, your agent could disclose anything you say to the seller.

Electronic air filters can help fight mold, mildew

Microorganisms such as molds, bacteria, yeasts, dust mites and viruses grow and spread in homes, offices or businesses through recycled air often causing Sick Building Syndrome. These problems can be greatly reduced with the use of ultra violet rays.

The UV-Aire air purifying system by Field Controls repeatedly exposes microorganisms, bacteria, and contaminants to an ultra violet lamp through a structure's heating and air conditioning system, improving indoor air quality.

"The UV-Aire Ultraviolet Air Purifying System is a perfect complement to any home or office, especially those with modern construction that prevents frequent air changes," says Patrick Holleran, president of Field Controls. "UV rays attack airborne contaminants, neutralizing or killing them with repeated exposure."

The UV-Aire uses ultraviolet energy from a high-intensity UV-C lamp to sterilize and reduce indoor contamination. When properly positioned in the ductwork, the UV-Aire can also kill germs that breed in drain pans and air conditioning coils.

Contractors can install the UV-Aire into any home or office with a forced air system. Mounted inside the ductwork with an external control switch, the UV-Aire works 24 hours a day to sterilize contaminants as they pass by the lamp. The UV-Aire requires little maintenance and costs just pennies a day to operate.

It is available from heating and air conditioning contractors. The manufacturer recommends installation by a licensed contractor to ensure proper operation and maximum effectiveness.

For a report on ultraviolet radiation and how it affects indoor air quality, call the Field Automated Fax Literature service at (800) 385-9460 and request form 4283 "Field Report on UV Air Purification," or visit the company Web site at www. fieldcontrols. com for more information.

Let's Talk About Real Estate

"Sunday Open House"

Even though the Sunday open house is an old tradition in selling a home, it still can be a valuable tool. Its detractors will say that it is very hit and miss and seldom produces a buyer. There are, however, some merits that should not be overlooked:

The Impulse Buyer

Some people buy a home purely on impulse. It sounds impossible when you think about the average price of a home today. Nevertheless, someone out for a Sunday drive or visiting friends in the area may stumble upon an open house and buy it on the spot. you can never overestimate the power of emotion when selling a home.

The Curious

Although most curiosity seekers are a waste of time, some tell a friend about the house and eventually become the source of the property's next buyer. Nothing can beat seeing the house in its entirety in person. From time-to-time, neighbors who come to an open house merely to be nosey end up buying the home themselves.

Other Realtors

One of the big benefits of an open house is exposure of the property to other Realtors who are either alone or with their buyers for the day. Because the house is being held open, no appointment is required. This makes it easy for Realtors to see the house for themselves without any advance notice. Those actively showing other homes can also drop by on their way to see other properties.

ADVICE: Consider letting your Realtor hold an open house.

It's time for chimney checkups

With the potential for power outages this winter as a result of stormy weather – many families could place an unusually high-demand on their fireplace or wood stove for home heating.

Because of this added reliance on back-up heat sources, the Chimney Safety Institute of America (CSIA) offers the following winter heating preparedness tips:

Schedule an annual inspection of your home's chimney and venting system by a certified chimney sweep – early in the fall to avoid delays in service. All fireplaces and stoves rely on a home's chimney and venting system to carry fire and hot gases away from living spaces.

Have service performed on wood stoves (gas and pellet stoves, too) – as well as fireplace inserts – to guarantee their proper function. A malfunctioning stove or fireplace insert can create an unexpected fire hazard.

Make sure that chimney and venting systems are free of obstructions and clear of creosote build-up. An annual chimney inspection will provide the necessary information needed to make this assessment.

Ensure that chimney and venting systems are in good repair. Check mortar between bricks both inside and outside, as well as the mortar crown at the top of the chimney. Water seeping into cracked mortar can cause unexpected damage that could result in the fire finding its way into a home's attic or living spaces.

Have a rain cap installed on the top of the chimney to keep water, birds, squirrels and debris out of the chimney. Uninvited critters and tree leaves or pine needles can cause obstructions that can increase the chance of carbon monoxide poisonings.

For more information on winter heating preparedness, or for a list of CSIA Certified Chimney Sweeps, visit www. csia. org or call (800) 536-0118.

Make your home kid-safe for winter

Think you're finished preparing for winter?

You may have your firewood stacked and your windows weather sealed, but now that the colder weather has forced many of us indoors, it's just as important to take some time to make sure your home is kid-safe.

"During the winter months, kids are often under foot and snowstorms can mean they're home unexpectedly during the day," says Janet Kreizman of the Household and Institutional Products Information Council (HIPIC).

"That's why it's important to periodically take a look around to make sure the house is safe for them. If you visit friends and relatives, it's a good idea to call ahead and ask them to do the same. Prevention is the key word."

HIPIC offers a few simple steps to help increase family safety during the winter months.

■ Clean up. Disinfectants give additional protection by killing germs that can make us sick. Be sure to select the right product for the job, follow directions and never leave cleaning products unattended while cleaning, particularly if there are children in the home.

■ Store cleaning products safely. Keep these items locked in cabinets if possible. Always keep them out of children's reach. Kreizman recommends that you take the time to get down to a child's level to understand what they can see and reach.

■ Don't make homemade cleaning solutions. These mixtures can be harmful to children and may not be properly labeled or stored in child-resistant containers.

■ Avoid confusion. Keep all household products in their original, properly labeled containers. Labels can provide critical information for poison control centers in case of an unintentional poisoning.

■ Properly dispose of unwanted household products. The best way is to give them to someone who can use them. Otherwise, products that go down the drain during use can be disposed of that way. Most other products can be disposed of safely in the trash. If unsure about proper disposal, contact the product manufacturer.

■ Be prepared. List local emergency numbers near every telephone in the home. For a free brochure on poison prevention, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Safe Kids/HIPIC, 1301 Pennsylvania Ave., N.W., Suite 1000, Washington, D.C. 20004.

Think 'detail' when accenting exterior

(NAPSA) – It's simple and inexpensive to add value and personality to any home with exterior decor touches such as shutters and window headers. Getting started is easy.

Exterior accents come in a wide variety of styles, shapes and colors to create a stunning new look for any home. To maximize the positive elements of a home's design, experts at Builder's Edge, a manufacturer of exterior decor products, suggest the following:

■ A home's exterior is a work of art, so look at it as a painter would look at a canvas. Decide what elements of the exterior you wish to highlight. Then, gather ideas and compile a list of exterior accent options.

■ Think detail. Focus on appealing or unique features. Elements such as doors and bay windows look more appealing when highlighted with color. If a home is a neutral color, choose bold colors for accents.

■ Warm colors like beige and off white attract attention, while cool colors like blues and grays tend to blend and do not attract attention. Choose warm colors for accents to be emphasized and cool colors for elements to de-emphasize.

■ Choose shutter and window header colors that harmonize with the home's fixed colors (roof, masonry, metal flashings, etc.) and landscape.

■ Lighter colors can make a home appear larger, while darker colors make it appear smaller.

To receive a free idea book and for more information on how to achieve results for your home's exterior, call Builder's Edge at (800) 350-1706.

Keeping quality employees in today's workforce takes a creative balance

BY HUGH GALLAGHER
STAFF WRITER
hgallagher@oe.homecomm.net

When the economy is good and workers have a choice of employers, companies find themselves competing to maintain a workforce.

"I think in the current job market it's hard to attract quality employees and your own quality employees are not tied to one employer," said Richard Loebel, an attorney with Jaffe, Rait, Heuer and Weiss, a general practice Detroit law firm.

A. Jay, how is a blind ad, in itself, unethical?

One reason for a blind ad, as you suggest, is to identify a replacement for an employee before the person actually leaves. But from the employee's standpoint, the result is the same. That's fine in some cases. But it can also be disruptive and time-consuming, particularly for smaller organizations. Isn't it more efficient for both candidates and employers when recruiters or managers make judgements about it before everyone invests a lot of time?

Finally, many of us are in the business of selling information. That's the product. Why doesn't an author just give away her books? Why don't realtors simply pass out the phone numbers of sellers to prospective buyers? Anybody who initiates a relationship with a broker of information should ees to make them feel valuable. You have to find appropriate forms of stroking. They have to feel good about what they're doing and valued by their superiors and coworkers. That's the hardest thing to do."

Compensation can be direct or indirect. Often a company will try to find ways to reward employees without seriously affecting the bottom line.

"We consult with clients about what they can do with fringe benefits," Loebel said.

These benefits might include giving employees more freedom or "empowerment." But it might also include creative approaches to medical care or retirement plans like 401k's.

Loebel said his law firm is usually called in to help a company when it is having trouble recruiting or retaining employees.

"We don't hear from employers until they have a problem. Lawyers are like doctors, you may have an annual checkup but usually you go to a doctor when you're sick," Loebel said.

In recent years, employers have created "cafeteria" plans. Employees are offered a list of benefits from which to choose. These benefits might include medical care options, physical fitness programs, investment opportunities, day care or vacation plans.

Loebel said many employers now require their employees to pay part of their health insurance premiums but they offer plans that provide for the premium to be paid with pre-tax dollars. He said many companies are also offering flexible spending plans that allow employees to pay for such non-covered needs as day care or elderly care with pre-tax dollars.

Loebel said these programs are relatively easy for an employer to develop and maintain.

Things are a little different in a union environment. An employer can't make decisions unilaterally.

"The question is how do you retain good relations with the union so you both feel you get to a win-win situation rather than a strike or a walkout which can be very expensive, in real costs and psychically," Loebel said.

Loebel said benefit ideas come from both sides of the negotiating table.

"Most companies worry if I put this on the table then I'll be giving something up," he said.

Most times, Loebel said, the union and company will find a middle course.

Recent innovations in benefit offerings include memberships in fitness clubs or on-site exercise rooms, free meals in company cafeterias and on-site day-care centers, though Loebel said this usually too expensive for most companies.

In addition to advising many companies, Loebel often writes on compensation issues for professional journals.

Dollar for dollar, it's probably the best sports car in the world

BY J. ERIC ECKARD
AUTOWIRE.NET

What else can you say about the Chevrolet Corvette? Dollar for dollar, it's probably the best sports car in the world.

It's no Ferrari 550 Maranello, but it's only a second or so slower than this Italian speed demon. The Corvette is no Acura NSX in the slalom, but it handles almost as well as the best-handling production car in the world. It's no Porsche Carrera, but it can brake almost as well as this German wundercar.

And we're talking about minimal differences in all these tests. An inexperienced driver might not even tell the difference in everyday driving. But then, you look at the price tag. Acura NSX: $84,000; Porsche Carrera: $90,000; Ferrari Maranello: $225,000; Corvette: $52,000 for the loaded test convertible version I drove recently. And the hardtop model starts at only $40 grand!

An inexperienced driver can surely see the differences there. I have to admit that going into this test drive, I was a little biased. This was a convertible. You know, a ragtop version of the 2000 Corvette. But I think I put my positive predispositions for convertibles aside and just looked at the Corvette.

First and foremost, this is a performance car. The 5.7-liter LS1 345-horsepower V8 can power the 'Vette from 0-60 mph in less than 5 seconds. And believe me, that is very fast! And it's always part of the "best sports car in the world" tests, and it always scores high on the list. Every time. That's why I say, dollar for dollar, it has to be the best, because the Corvette is always competing against cars that are much more expensive.

How many of us would take a Dodge Viper on a cross-country trip? I know I wouldn't. But I would not think twice about driving a Corvette from Wilmington to Los Angeles — especially if it was a ragtop version.

The top goes up and down fairly easily. There is an additional step not found on most manual top convertibles though. After you release the two catches above the windshield, you lift the back of the top, and open the rear cover in front of the trunk. The top then hides away underneath the hard tonneau cover that locks back into place. Plus, this only affects trunk space by a couple of cubic feet, and even with the top down, you still have more than 11 cubic feet of cargo capacity.

But the performance is really what most people want to know about when they read Corvette reviews. Chevy has a pretty advanced stability control system with its optional active handling suspension found on the 'Vette. It works in conjunction with the standard anti-lock brakes and traction control systems to apply any of the four brakes in an effort to help keep the driver out of any bad control situations.

You also can select a variety of rides with optional real-time damping suspension – either performance, touring or sport modes allow you to select how you want your ride to feel on any given trip. So, when you add it all up, the performance, the power, the comfort and the technology, the Corvette has to be the best sports car in the world anywhere for its price.

Corvette - Still America's Favorite Sports Car.

CELEBRITY COACH'S CORNER

"A properly executed blitz disrupts the offense and can lead to a loss of yardage or a turnover."

JUNIOR SEAU
San Diego Chargers

What Junior says...

"The goal of a blitz is to attack the offense by penetrating the line of scrimmage. Most blitzes are well designed schemes designed to attack a weakness in the offense. My experience with the blitz started on a hunch rather than a plan. As an undersized high school linebacker I was positioned in the middle of the field. I read the ball after the snap and pursued the ball-carrier down the line and made the tackle. On a passing down, I decided to shift toward the weak side of the line. As the ball was snapped I immediately shot around the end and sacked the unsuspecting quarterback. Although my coach hadn't called the play, he liked the results, and I began to blitz on nearly every down. A scholarship to USC and eventually a spot with the San Diego Chargers followed."

Junior's best tips...

Executing a Blitz:

1. Blitzing is risky, therefore, the first step is to conceal the blitz.
2. Start close to the line of scrimmage and time your blitz at or directly before the snap of the ball.
3. Target the most likely location by studying the offense and creating a hole in the offensive line to blitz through.
4. Keep your eye on the ball and be aggressive.

Junior Seau has gone to the Pro-Bowl 9 times. He graduated from USC with a degree in public administration. Seau has been awarded the NFL Linebacker of the Year and the NFL Man of the Year during his 11 year career.
